Clarification

SANFORD — The vote at the Sanford City Commission meeting Monday evening pertaining to the Waterfront Master Plan, was beyond that reported in a story carried in Tuesday's Sanford Herald.

In addition to approving the spending of up to $3,000 to continue using the services of Bruce Andersen in developing the waterfront plans, the commission also approved, in concept, an agreement to be made with the University of Florida Studio Project.

The project would eventually develop additional suggested plans for the lakefront area development, as well as models and three-dimensional projections. The project would cost the city $15,000, which had already been earmarked in the city budget for Lakefront Development work.

Andersen would also be developing plans for the utilization of the waterfront area. It was proposed that the money for his work be taken from the City Manager's Contingency Fund.

While the commission did not directly approve the hiring of either Andersen or the U of F Study Team, it did vote favorably to have contracts drawn up on both matters. City Manager Bill Shumons said the contracts are expected to be ready for the commission's formal approval possibly during the first commission meeting in April, if not sooner.

Lake Mary's resolution on airport noise is ready to fly

By NICK PFELPAUP
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — During both Feb. 3 and Feb. 17 Lake Mary City Commission meetings, extensive public hearings have been held regarding citizen complaints about aircraft noise from planes flying over the city's residential areas.

This Thursday night, the commission plans to take its first official action.

A resolution has been prepared for consideration. If approved, it is to be forwarded to the official records of Seminole County, all cities within the county, and all state and federal bodies which affect airport operations or funding for such operations.

In addition to the distribution, four other major points are stressed in the wording of the resolution as presently prepared. They are as follows:

• The City of Lake Mary opposes Central Florida Regional Airport's plans to increase the number of commercial air operations at the airport without significant changes to the approach corridors that will affect the citizens of Lake Mary, the safety of its residents and its quality of life.

• The City of Lake Mary strongly encourages the establishment of an independent intergovernmental body whose primary function will be the investigation and mitigation of noise impacts and that such body will, by charter, be empowered to act on its findings and recommendations.

• The City of Lake Mary continues to support the airport's land use and on-site economic development plans insofar that such development does not encourage commercial air traffic uses.

• The City Commission encourages the prompt enactment of noise abatement procedures as recommended in the Central Florida Regional Airport's Federal Aviation Regulations (FAR-150) Study.

The wording of the resolution says the city desires to work with the Central Florida Regional Airport to alleviate these impacts without in any way hampering the development of the land and industrial sites which have a positive impact on the economic climate of the county.

During previous public hearings however, there were several citizens who spoke directly that any improvements at the airport would not be acceptable to them.

In addition to the Lake Mary area, commissioners and citizens alike have objected to the airplane noise over schools, suggesting that the noise affects the quality of education and increases the safety risk to students.

The resolution has been prepared by Commissioner Gary Brender and City Manager John Litton. In consideration of the airport's plans to increase the number of commercial air operations.

The matter is listed on the agenda for the commission meeting scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Local religious leaders favor prayer in school

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A sampling of opinions from local religious leaders show they favor bills which would allow voluntary prayer at certain public school events.

Students could lead prayers at some school events under a bill approved by a Senate panel despite witnesses' concerns about separation of church and state.

"The principle of separation keeps the state out of our churches. It does not keep the church out of the state," said Sen. Fred Dudley, R-Cape Coral.

Father Richard Trout of All Souls Catholic Church and Rev. Bruce Scott of First Presbyterian Church, both of Sanford think the bills are a step in the right direction. The leaders of a number of other churches could not be reached for comment about this morning.

Hamwi says 'prove it' or release him

FORT LAUDERDALE — A Colorado developer waived his right to a conviction on lesser charges in the 1983 deaths of his ex-wife and child, saying he wants jurors to either convict him of first-degree murder or set him free.

"If you can't prove it, he goes home," defense attorney David Bogenschutz said Tuesday in closing arguments at the trial of Paul Hamwi.

Hamwi is accused of hiring hit men to kill his ex-wife, Susan, as a way of ending costly support payments. Their 18-month-old daughter died of dehydration before their bodies were discovered Nov. 8, 1983.

Mrs. Hamwi's murder was considered solved with the conviction of schizophrenic neighbor John Purvis, but he was freed from prison last year after a man came forward to say he was one of the hired killers.

Hamwi, 48, of Aspen, Colo., has maintained his innocence. "I didn't do this," Hamwi told Broward Circuit Court Judge Howard Zeidwig during a hearing outside the jury's presence. "Either they find me guilty or not guilty of this horrible crime."

Career criminal denied early release date

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's parole commission has put away a career criminal for a long time, and U.S. Sen. Connie Mack thinks it's about time.

"It's time to punish criminals instead of turning them out," Mack said Tuesday after the commission denied an early release date to Curtis Head less than six months after he had been sentenced to life in prison. "I am appalled Curtis Head was even considered for early release."

Mack is helping a citizens' group push for signatures to get a referendum on the November ballot to ensure all prisoners serve at least 85 percent of their sentences. He is also pushing legislation to help states pay for sending violent prisoners to new federally-supported regional prisons.

Head, who has spent less than a year out of prison since 1988, was sentenced Sept. 30, 1993, under Florida's home-invasion law after burglarizing a Jacksonville home and beating the owner.

Because of Florida's overcrowded prisons, all inmates are automatically given a review date for their sentence. In Head's case it came less than six months after he was returned to prison.

Bill requires bicyclists to wear helmets

TALLAHASSEE — Bicycle riders age 16 and under would be required to wear helmets or face a $25 fine under legislation approved by a Senate committee.

"If you can get 50 percent of the people to wear helmets, there will be major reductions in head and brain injuries," said Sen. Don Sullivan, an orthopedic surgeon who sponsored the bill.

The legislation approved Tuesday by the Senate Transportation Committee also would require children age 4 and under carried on the back of bicycles to wear helmets as well as sit in an approved child carrier.

Sullivan, R-St. Petersburg, said he sponsored the measure to try to reduce the number of serious head injuries suffered by riders who don't wear helmets.

Across Florida, at least 20 children who were not wearing helmets were killed in bicycle accidents in 1992.

If passed, the bill (CS-SB 470) would take effect Jan. 1, 1995. The $25 fine would not take effect until the following year.

Anyone who could not afford to pay the fine would be given community service. The fines also could be waived if parents produced proof they had purchased a helmet.

Sullivan said it may take parents a while to get used to making their children wear helmets but eventually it would become second nature.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Lobbyists, HMOs join forces

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Talk of vetoes and legislative overrides surfaced as the debate intensified over a proposal to let HMO patients go to any doctor who charges no more than the HMO will pay.

In the halls of the Capitol, the idea is known as "any willing provider."

Business lobbyists and the HMO industry called a news conference Tuesday to denounce the concept and brought with them a statement by Gov. Lawton Chiles.

"The 'any willing provider' bill would seriously damage health care reform by denying choice to lower cost plans," Chiles said. "I will not accept — and neither will the people of Florida — any plan that puts special interests above the public interest."

One willing provider bill (SB 1532) was approved last week by the Senate Health Care Committee and is now awaiting action in the Commerce Committee.

Sen. William "Doc" Myers said Tuesday he was confident the legislation, which he sponsored, would win final approval.

"We'll pass it," Myers said. "He'll veto it."

But Myers, R-Hobe Sound, also predicted there were enough votes in both the House and the Senate to override a veto. Overrides need a two-thirds margin to pass.

Myers defended the willing provider provision, saying it was important to create a level playing field for doctors and to make health maintenance organizations more responsive to their patients.

Willing provider provisions have been added to at least two health-care bills approved by the House Health Care Committee.

A related proposal, approved last week by the House Insurance Committee, would give HMO patients the right to go immediately to optometrists, ophthalmologists and dermatologists without first getting referrals from their primary doctors. That bill (CS-HB 2465) is awaiting action in the Finance and Taxation Committee.

During Tuesday's news conference, Gerald O'Neil, president of the Florida Association of Health Maintenance Organizations, contended the willing provider provisions would destroy managed care.

And managed care is the key to the future of health-care reform, said Jon Shebel, president of Associated Industries of Florida.

"If we don't end up with managed care, then we're basically going to do nothing," he said.

Jim Brainerd, with the Florida Chamber of Commerce, said his organization opposes the willing provider proposal.

Police could suspend licenses of young drivers who drink

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Drivers under age 21 who registered a blood-alcohol level of .02 percent or higher could have their licenses suspended under proposals moving ahead in the Legislature.

Police could immediately take away the licenses of those who failed a blood-alcohol test or refused to take a sobriety test. Authorities also could confiscate licenses if they suspected young drivers had been drinking.

"We can't and shouldn't coddle our youth as we have been," said Susan Eisenberg, a member of Mothers Against Drunk Driving whose 17-year-old son was killed by a 16-year-old driver. "I think we're losing too many lives that way."

Proposals in the House and Senate would set the illegal blood-alcohol level for drivers under age 21 at .02 percent, compared with .08 percent for adults.

The Senate Criminal Justice Committee approved the bill 6-1 Tuesday after hearing law enforcement officials and advocates for tougher drunk driving laws say the threat would reduce accidents involving young drivers who have been drinking.

It would only take two drinks in an hour to exceed the .02 limit, supporters said.

"This is intended to be a deterrent," said Sen. Ginny Brown-Walke, R-Spring Hill, one of the bill's sponsors. "We're not trying to stop them from consuming alcohol, just from driving on our roads."

Drivers whose licenses were suspended would receive a temporary driving permit good for seven days, and they could apply for a hardship driving permit to drive to school, work and other necessary travel.

The penalty for a first offense for failing the blood-alcohol test would be a six-month suspension; a second offense could mean a one-year suspension. Drivers who refuse to take the sobriety test could face a one-year suspension on a first offense and 18 months for a second violation.

The license suspension is an administrative penalty and separate from any criminal charges that would result from an arrest for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Some committee members said they were concerned the new standard would snare young drivers who may not be impaired. They said they were concerned the charges would remain on driving records that could hurt educational and career opportunities.

Authorities say they believe search will turn up more bodies

By MICHELLE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ESTILLFORK, Ala. — A migrant worker who traveled the East Coast doing odd jobs endeared himself to elderly residents in this rural, mountainous community so he could freely bury bodies behind his cabin atop Garrett Mountain, authorities believe.

Authorities expected to find more bodies around the remote rural home of Frank T. Potts, where the skeleton of a missing Florida man already has been discovered, said Jackson County Sheriff Mike Wells.

"We don't know if where the dogs indicated are partial remains or full skeletons, but we do believe there are multiple bodies," Wells said.

Potts, 50, was being held today without bond in his hometown of Bartow, Fla., on a charge of sexual battery on an 11-year-old girl.

Since his arrest in December, police have linked him to a string of unsolved homicides in New York, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Kentucky, Georgia and Florida, but he has yet to be charged with any of the murders.

"We first started receiving reports about bodies being buried up there around the same time he bought the property in 1976 or 1977," Jackson County Sheriff Mike Wells said.

"We searched the place two or three times, looking in holes and searching for clues, but it's very tough terrain," he said. "We never found anything."

Wells wouldn't comment on how the site was identified, only that the information did not come from Potts.

Dogs trained to detect buried bodies were dispatched from Louisiana and Mississippi Friday to the rural town, about 25 miles northwest of Scottsboro, to search the grounds surrounding Potts' cabin. They indicated smell on 10 to 12 spots, all within a 120-yard span, Wells said.

The badly decomposed body was found in a four-foot grave about 300 to 400 yards behind the cabin, Wells said.

Wells said investigators had not determined the sex or identity of the body. His chief investigator, Chuck Phillips, had said earlier in the day it was that of a 19-year-old Florida man missing since 1989.

Potts' 40-acre tract is located at the Tennessee-Alabama line near a reserve where hunters lease cabins during gaming seasons.

Potts' cabin can only be reached by four-wheel drive vehicles because the makeshift, primitive road is narrow, rocky and steep.

Wells said he decided to stop digging until two FBI agents from Quantico, Va., and a Florida inspector could be contacted. The group was expected to survey the property today. Digging was to resume Thursday, Wells said.

Wells said he was unsure when Potts last visited the cabin, but it may have been as long as two years.

That's when Jackson County authorities issued a felony fugitive warrant charging him with kidnapping a wildlife officer who he disarmed after the officer confronted him for firing an automatic machine gun near his property, Wells said.

Jackson County Chief Deputy Dennis Miller said Potts skillfully won the hearts of his neighbors in this community of about 300 people, most of whom are elderly.

"He would chop wood for them, and things like that," Miller said.

New CIA regulations

Woolsey orders new steps to tighten monitoring

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The head of the CIA is ordering all agency employees to report their personal finances each year to make it more difficult for in-house spies to cover up payoffs the way Aldrich Ames is accused of doing.

In his first interview since the arrest of Ames a month ago for allegedly spying for Russia, CIA Director R. James Woolsey discussed a series of moves designed to cope with fallout from the case and improve the CIA's chances of stopping other potential spies.

Woolsey, speaking with several reporters in his CIA headquarters office Tuesday, said discreet monitoring of workers' finances was the key to his approach.

"The major lesson ... about espionage, at least when Americans become spies, in recent years, is the same lesson that 'Deep Throat' taught Woodward and Bernstein: Follow the money," Woolsey said, referring to the anonymous source that helped the two Washington Post reporters unravel the Watergate scandal.

"What we are going to embark on is a systematic effort to do a better job of understanding where employees' finances came from and what they are being used for," he said.

Ames, a 31-year CIA veteran, is accused of having earned more than $2 million from the Soviet Union and later Russia by selling vital U.S. national security secrets. The government says Ames and his wife, Rosario, bought a $540,000 home for cash in 1989 and spent lavishly for years without raising suspicions.

Woolsey declined to discuss specifics of the Ames case or the potential damage his alleged spying has caused. He said to do so might jeopardize the government's case against the Ameses. They have not been indicted by a grand jury.

Woolsey spelled out other actions he is taking or planning as part of a broad effort to limit damage from Ames' alleged spying and to tighten internal security. Among them:

—Promotions of an unspecified number of CIA senior officials — whom Woolsey would describe only as "people who are in a position such that their behavior needs to be scrutinized carefully" — will be frozen until the CIA's inspector general completes an investigation of events leading up to the Ameses' arrest.

Woolsey has come under growing pressure from Congress to fire, or at least discipline, senior officials who could be considered responsible for allowing Ames to get away with alleged spying for more than eight years.

—The results of past lie detector tests conducted on certain unspecified employees — presumably those holding the more sensitive CIA posts — will be reviewed in light of the fact that polygraphs did not detect Ames' alleged treachery.

—The agency will work with Congress on new legislation that would require a limited number of CIA employees to sign a waiver giving the CIA the right to secretly search their bank and other personal financial records when suspicions are raised.

Woolsey said this legislation is necessary because the new requirement for annual personal financial statements will not, by itself, provide enough protection.

"Obviously, a spy may well lie on his financial statements," he said. But the statement would serve as a foundation for CIA investigators to build a more complete picture of employees' personal finances by checking it against other records that currently can be searched only with the consent of the employee, or, in certain extreme cases, with the prior approval of a special court.

The CIA director acknowledged that some in Congress believe he has not acted quickly or forcefully enough to correct the problems exposed by the Ames case.

"I have been concerned that my penchant for care and precision has been misinterpreted by some people," he said. "They should not misinterpret it."

His decision to invite reporters into his office for a rare interview was, by itself, a sign that Woolsey believes the agency's and his public image have been tarnished and that he must take the offensive to halt the damage.

Woolsey discounted, but did not directly deny, recent news reports that fear of widespread damage from Ames' alleged spying has forced the agency to curtail operations.

"The CIA is still very much in business around the world," he said.

Most pregnant HIV-infected women are black

By JACKIE HALLIFAX

TALLAHASSEE — Black women in Florida who give birth are nearly 11 times more likely than white women to be infected with the AIDS virus, the state's social services agency reported Tuesday.

"There's no doubt that HIV has hit Florida's black community a lot harder than it has the white community," said state health officer Dr. Charles Mahan.

Seven of every 10 new mothers who test positive for the virus that causes AIDS are black, even though only 20 percent of those tested were black, the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services said.

Florida ranks second behind

New York in the number of children with AIDS, reporting 815 pediatric cases. Overall, the state has 35,831 AIDS cases. Some 20,000 people have died of the disease.

Researchers estimate 30 percent of babies born to HIV-infected women are infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Most of the babies who do develop AIDS die before their fifth birthday.

In the last six-month survey period, 75,773 women were tested for HIV after giving birth.

The reasons so many of the pregnant women with HIV are black was because of poverty, drug use and unsafe sex, the report said.

women need to take a more realistic look at what they're doing to put themselves at risk of infection," Mahan said.

Overall, there's a 22 percent increase in HIV infection rates of all Florida pregnant women.

Between October 1988 and the following March, there were 4.5 infected mothers for every 1,000 births.

That rate had climbed to 5.5

per 1,000 births in the last survey period, from October, 1992 through March 1993. That means one in every 182 live births in Florida is to a woman infected with HIV.

"We predicted that more than 300 babies would be born in Florida with HIV infection in 1993 and it appears there will be at least that many again this year," Mahan said.

Langin was arrested. Officers found an additional small quantity of cocaine in his pants pocket and found the money which had been used in the transaction in his shirt pocket.

He was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and with the sale and delivery of cocaine.

Block was also arrested and charged with conspiracy. They were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $5,000 bond each.

Salesmen arrested for selling cocaine

SANFORD — A pair of car salesmen in Sanford tried to supplement their income with unpleasant results.

Closing manager Eric George Langin, 30, of 796 Humphrey Cir., Deltona, and salesman Michael David Block, 27, of 4178 Chickasaw Dr., Apt. 108, were arrested Tuesday evening after selling cocaine to a confidential informant for the Sanford Police Department.

According to Inv. Dennis Whitmire, the informant arranged to buy an "eight ball" (about a quarter ounce) of powdered cocaine from Block at Bob Dance Dodge, the dealership where he is employed. He told the informant that he would get the drugs from "Eric," another employee at the dealership.

Whitmire said that the management at the dealership is not suspected of being involved in the incident.

"We do not suspect Bob Dance Dodge is at all involved in narcotics trafficking in any way," Whitmire said.

He said the informant met Block in the outdoor display lot and was told that "Eric" would meet them there with the drugs.

When Langin met the informant, Whitmire said, he sold him the cocaine, wrapped in a $1 bill, which has a street value of $120 to $150, for $250. Whitmire could not explain the mark-up in price.

Productive new citizens

Except for Native Americans, our country has been populated through immigration. Almost all of us have forefathers who came to this country from other continents.

It has proven beneficial. People moving to the United States have often brought with them specialized skills and knowledge which have helped us grow in all aspects of life.

The problem however, is the increasing number of illegal immigrants, especially in Florida.

Recent statistics from Tallahassee say state and local governments spent $884 million in 1993 alone, for illegal aliens. It is estimated that we have 345,000 persons presently living in our state who are considered as illegal.

This does not include persons who came to the USA via Florida, and are still in the legal waiting period to obtain citizenship.

Earlier this month, Sanford's Civic Center was the setting for approximately 200 persons who officially joined our ranks and were approved for citizenship. They studied our nation, some of its history, and pledged allegiance to the flag which serves as a symbol of our democracy.

Yet, in almost every community, there are many whose visas have expired. Others came by way of boats from the West Indies, and have managed to escape immigration authorities.

Certainly persons fleeing from foreign oppression are deserving of our welcoming hand. Unfortunately, many are seeking only the contents of our wallets.

Tallahassee officials have estimated Florida spent $2.5 billion dollars last year for all immigrants, including those who have or will soon become citizens. The money has been used for Medicaid for the poor, prisons for criminals, education for the children of immigrants, and welfare payments to low income families.

A great majority of this money will have to continue supporting people who seek a new life in Florida and the USA. The concern is for the $884 million which Governor Lawton Chiles says is being spent on illegal aliens.

He has now taken steps to file suit against the Federal Government in an attempt to recover some of these tax dollars which have been spent. His legal aides say the governor will file the suit within the next few weeks in a Miami Federal Court.

We do not recommend holding one's breath until this is resolved. We doubt if it will ever actually go into a legal battle, at least in the next three to five years, if not longer.

What we would suggest however, is the absolute refusal to spend money on any immigrant which is not actively pursuing citizenship. The money should be used to enhance the immigration department and locate illegal aliens for immediate exportation.

It sounds cruel, yet we have no other choice. If people want to join our nation, they should be helped as much as possible. They should also be willing to reciprocate by becoming honest citizens. They should attempt to earn a living and help shoulder the tax load which is supposed to be used for the benefit of Americans.

We commend the Governor for taking this action to reduce the drain on taxpayers' dollars.

By calling attention to the problem, we hope it will result in some new plan which may resolve the situation.

We don't need more illegal immigrants. We need productive new American citizens.

Like a tax on salt

Again we must thank Larry Furlong for the best way to fix the storm water drainage problem. I believe a tax on utilities is like a tax on salt, and should be eliminated, not increased. Now is a good time for county commissioners to reflect on the original source of Mr. Rabun's "rainy day fund."

I remember well how Mr. Rabun managed to sway commissioners into forming the largest property tax increase I can recall in 22 years. This was done in 1991 by simply avoiding a millage roll-back after a massive increase in the assessed value of Seminole County properties. The tail wagged the dog on that one. I am glad to see the dog wagging its tail on the drainage issue.

Voting for Robb, not against North

TYSONS CORNER, Va. — If the right campaign emerges, Charles Robb of Virginia is likely to be re-elected to the Senate. The right campaign would be based on what Robb has done and can do. The wrong campaign would be based on what Oliver North has done and might do. ("Liar, liar, pants on fire.") A rousing Robb event here last week leaves the issue in doubt.

Robb will announce his candidacy on Monday, March 14. North, after a vigorous contest with former Reagan budget official Jim Miller, is likely to end up with the GOP nomination in June.

Robb, by my lights, is as good as they come in the Senate. More than anyone, he helped pull the Democratic Party back from irresponsible leftism. He is probably the best person around to keep pulling it that way. It still needs plenty of pulling.

It was Robb, recall, who as an early chairman of the Democratic Leadership Council, shaped it as a hard-hitting, anti-big spending, pro-defense force for moderation, providing an ideological base for the "New Democrat" concept. It was Robb who provided a critical Democratic vote that allowed Desert Storm to proceed, and Robb who voted to prevent the railroading of Clarence Thomas, each time bucking his party. It was Robb, who as a successful governor, appointed record numbers of qualified blacks and women, and yet spoke out early against quotas and dependency.

He got into trouble only on some personal matters that I sense as grist for Trivial Pursuit. Rest assured: North's campaign will portray it as steamy scandal.

Robb is a fine senator for the new Virginia, a state both progressive and conservative. He is the toughest kind of Democrat for North to face. North wants to be seen as the heroic Marine who fought communism in Vietnam and Central America. Yet it was Robb, a Marine major and Vietnam combat hero, who personally investigated the Central American situation and voted for military aid to oppose communism in Nicaragua, against the grain of his party.

The wrong campaign would be based on what Oliver North has done and might do.

The danger to Robb is that activist Democrats and intense liberal media coverage will make the race into a referendum on North's conduct during Iran-Contra. Did he lie? Frequently? Did he break a Boland Amendment? Was he a loose and stupid cannon? Was he on the right side? (My answers: Yes, Yes, Maybe, Surely, Yes.)

But with the Clintons under painful scrutiny, with Congress regarded as a professional prevaricating class, just how potent is the case that North was a very bad boy?

Remember that North is a premier performer who made his patriotic case to the public during Iran-Contra and became a folk hero.

The Robb event here gave evidence of two ways in which the campaign may go. The featured guests were the best: Lady Bird Johnson (Robb's mother-in-law), Mrs. Thurgood Marshall, widow of the first black Supreme Court justice; and, as principal speaker, the eloquent Professor Barbara Jordan.

Jordan praised Robb, but scoured North, although not by name.

Some sisterly advice for Hillary

BOSTON — Okay, so you should have been a brain surgeon. Up in the morning, out on the job. The White House limo drops you at the hospital. You open up a few craniums and you're home for dinner.

This is the kind of health care involvement nobody would criticize. It's the kind of two-career family everybody would understand. Unless you do an accidental frontal lobotomy on a major world leader, you're home free.

If you don't want to go to the Easter Egg Roll, you can just get beeped. You don't even have to worry about what you wear. A nice scrub suit will do.

But here you are, lawyer, public policy junkie, health care honcho, full-time volunteer, first lady, stuck in the center of the Whitewater controversy. The headlines are calling Hillary to the Pillory. There's a cartoon around that names you Tonya Harding Clinton.

The pundits are talking ominously — again — about the dangers of having someone in power who can't be fired, just divorced. And you have to listen to Alfonse D'Amato — Alfonse D'Amato? — questioning your ethics.

If you haven't entirely lost your sense of humor, there must be a good belly laugh in the stories about the tarnishing of the halo around your head. Just when was that hallowed halo time?

Was it back in 1992, when you answered the first questions about Whitewater by saying that you could have stayed home and baked cookies? The whole world came down on your head. It's telling you, brain surgery was the ticket, not cookie baking.

Was it during the Republican National Convention when you were the Feminist from Hell? Or during the "Billary" humorfest? Or when you were snidely dubbed Saint Hillary for talking about a politics of meaning?

It must have been when you went to Capitol Hill last fall and the senators fell into a state of shock that you "were effortlessly answering complex questions in great detail." Why, one even suggested you were smart enough to go on "Jeopardy."

There's even more black humor in words of the feminists-come-lately. Not a few opponents and commentators insist that they are merely treating you as an equal — showing respect for your power, intelligence and status as one of America's 100 Best Lawyers and a certifiable New Woman. Why, by accusing you of sleazy, greedy behavior and cover-ups, they are actually taking you seriously!

And if this were not enough, too many women have put too much stock in your one basket. There is a chorus of friends and enemies who seem to agree that the advancement of women — nay, the entire women's movement — is riding on your success.

Well, let me offer a few unsolicited words of advice.

Take a good long look at what's on your plate. In the past year, your father died, your mother-in-law died and one of your best friends committed suicide. You've got a widowed mother, a teen-age daughter, a job and a role and a husband with the weight of the world on his shoulders.

On top of that you have a can overdeveloped sense of responsibility and a gritty, sometimes grim, determination to prove that you can handle it all. Even when the "all" goes off the charts.

What should you do? First of all, stand up like a big girl and answer the questions about Whitewater all by yourself. When that's done and it will be, cut loose from the day-to-day interneeine warfare of the White House. Step back from the wrangles over appointments and the power struggles. Don't get trapped in his or her loyalty tests.

Treat health care reform as what it is — a tough job, but your job. Go to it in the morning. Get an office out of the White House if you have to. Work hard. Do your best. Go home at night.

When you get there, kick back, put on the slippers and the sweats. If you don't have to go downstairs to some state dinner, get something out of the refrigerator, check Chelsea's homework, invite a friend over, put a video on. Let go.

Remember that there are two things you don't have to be. (1) You don't have to be a co-president. (2) You don't have to be everything to everyone. Even to every woman.

At the moment, you're heading somewhere between burnout and flameout. And no, you don't have to be a brain surgeon to see that.

The pundits are talking ominously — again — about the dangers of having someone in power who can't be fired, just divorced.

Ireland gets the green from Sen. Moynihan

WASHINGTON — President Clinton will honor the Irish this St. Patrick's Day by accepting a traditional bowl of shamrocks from Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds. It's a small price for Ireland to pay for the pot of gold they were delivered last August, a $500 million tax deferral for U.S. foreign subsidiaries, thanks to the labors of Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Moynihan was newly minted as chairman of the Senate's most powerful committee — Finance — when he took to the airwaves last summer in defense of the Clinton budget package. "We have to govern," Moynihan said. "We are not governing ourselves." Now some U.S. officials are wondering whose interests Moynihan was defending in the contentious final moments of the budget battle.

The rub for taxpayers is twofold: Moynihan's amendment to the tax bill not only keeps alive incentives for U.S. companies to set up shop in Ireland. It also deprives the federal treasury of $500 million in tax revenue called for in Clinton's original 1994 budget.

The story begins last St. Patrick's Day, when Reynolds used the annual shamrock ceremony as an occasion to lobby Clinton about an obscure provision in his newly submitted budget. The provision called for widening the tax net to rein in "runaway corporations" that avoid U.S. corporate taxes by migrating their plants offshore, taking advantage of tax-deferral laws. Clinton turned a deaf ear to Reynolds' entreaties, leaving the Irish officials scrambling for someone to take their side. They found that someone in Moynihan, who has become Ireland's favorite son in the Senate.

"When (the Irish diplomats) got to Moynihan, they struck gold," a senior State Department official told us. "The impression you had was that you had a senator who forgot who he was working for." This official believes Moynihan's actions came after a private meeting with the Irish ambassador. "Moynihan was moved enough by (economic conditions in Ireland) that he made his changes in the legislation," the official said.

Yet Moynihan doesn't need a look beyond his own district to find distressed economic conditions. While unemployment in Ireland is hovering around 16 percent, New York City is holding steady at 10 percent, far above the national average. Nearly half of all inner-city youth in the city are without jobs. Moynihan's office declined to comment.

When Lawrence O'Donnell, Finance Committee chief of staff, traveled to Ireland last September after the budget vote, he openly "boasted" about "fixing (the tax provision) for little Ireland," according to the State Department official, who was also in Ireland at the time. O'Donnell brushed off the official's charges as ethnic slurs and jurisdictional infighting.

"There is clearly an ethnic exploitation that someone in the State Department has decided to jump into," said O'Donnell, who, like Moynihan, is of Irish descent. "The State Department doesn't like it when ambassadorial meetings are set up without reference to them. I'm sorry, but (Moynihan) a former ambassador to the U.N. doesn't need them."

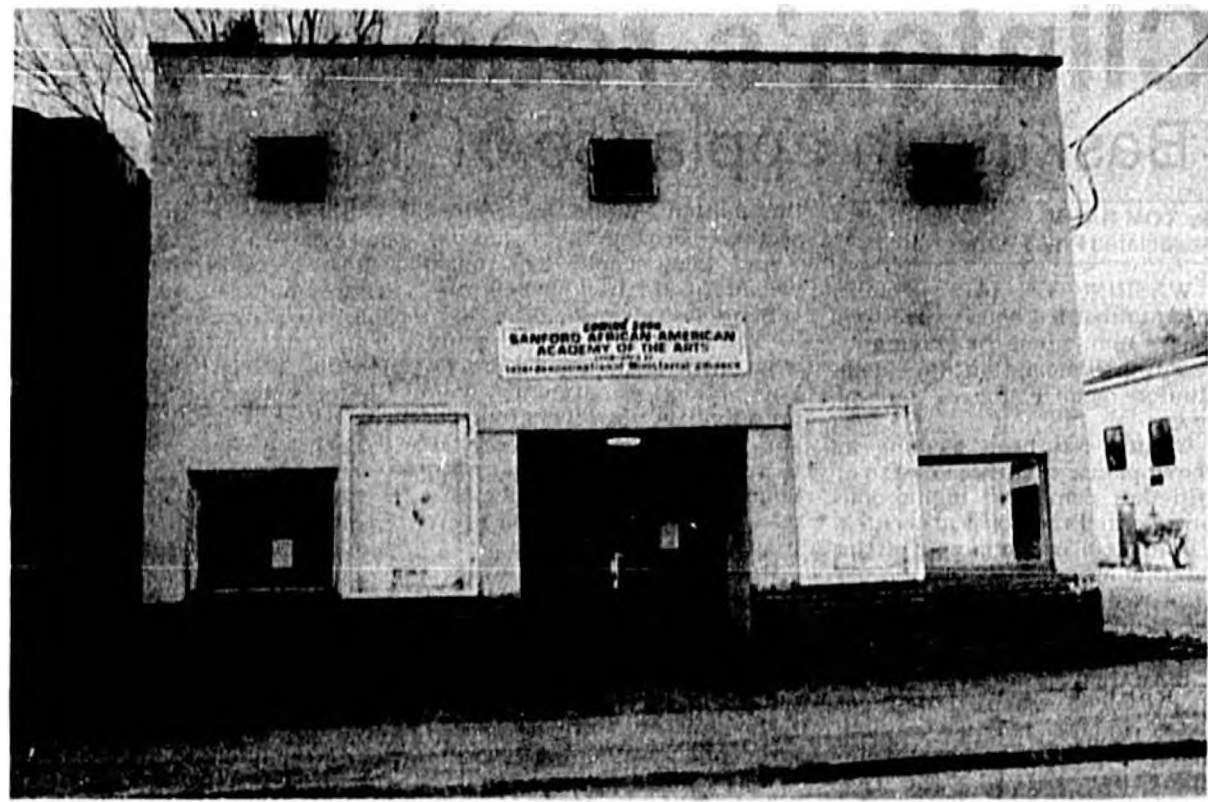

With more than 400 U.S. subsidiary companies operating in Ireland, employing 48 thousand workers — nearly 20 percent of that country's industrial work force — the new tax was a chief concern of Irish politicians looking to preserve those jobs.

It's a small price for Ireland to pay for the pot of gold they were delivered last August.

to establish healthy, Christian values. The organization was named the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Seminole County.

The Sanford African-American Academy of Arts, located at West 13th Street and Shepherd Avenue, formerly the old Star Theatre, is the fruit born of the alliance's efforts.

With a second goal of engaging the community in education and cultural activities, the alliance will reopen the Star Theatre this weekend.

Under the leadership of the president the Rev. B.J. Player, the IMA was asked to consider the renovation of the old Star Theatre. At the time it had been under condemnation. Pastor Amos Jones said he knew the building was owned by the Westside Improvement Association Inc. It was agreed upon by the Alliance that the community of Goldsboro should not lose such a historical building.

The officers and board of the Westside Improvement Association Inc., Ruthia Hester, Ernestine Green, Clarissa Moore, Frances Jackson Oliver and Marva Y. Hawkins, deeded to the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Seminole County the building that had one time been a source of community service to Sanford.

Immediately work began to secure the property and its future. Under the supervision of Pastor Player and Elder Quentin Faison, renovations began. Bob Boyd of SunBank Sanford offered financial counsel along with Joanne Turnbull, who served as consultant for the Alliance.

Player said the blessings were beginning to come and the IMA received a donation of yet another building by SunBank to further provide the alliance with adequate space, again with the assistance of Bob Boyd and Joanne Turnbull.

Needing a board of advisors, the alliance contacted persons who agreed to serve. They are Dr. Calvin Collins, Cal Conklin, Lorenza Polk, Beatrice Martin, Zera Reed, Geraldine Wright, Cynthia C. Brown, Helen Morris, Barbara Kirby and Marva Y. Hawkins.

The center was named by Player, who will see that the community will be exposed to the performing arts such as dance, ballet, music and drama classes, giving youth and adults the opportunity to express themselves, and to foster community creativity. Board members say this continued pride in community will aid the revitalization of 13th Street.

The ribbon cutting and opening ceremonies will begin at noon with Mayor Bettye Smith and other city dignitaries, officers and ministers of the churches of the community.

At 4 p.m. Saturday, a performance of the play "On Their Way to the Slabtown District Convention," will be presented by local city talent. There will be a donation of $5 per person. Tickets are available by calling 321-7226 or 322-6432.

Charter — Lake Mary City Commission agenda

427 and north of Slate Road 436.

"It's kind of a combination mop up and opportunity to hear anything we haven't heard before," said Fred Streetman, CRC chairman.

Following tonight's hearing, the CRC will hold a work session to consider placing any of the proposals on the November ballot. A date for the work session has not been set. If any changes are recommended by the panel, a second round of public hearings will be conducted.

Citizens may recommend their own changes to the charter tonight, but CRC members haven't been interested in pursuing them. Proposals for a county Bill of Rights, a spending cap, a county comptroller and a county environmental commission were rejected for further consideration.

Longwood investment counselor Ed Goddard wants to start a petition drive calling for an elected county comptroller separate from the county clerk, but has run into petition design snags, said elections supervisor Sandra Goard. Goddard didn't provide space for printed and signed names, as required by a county ordinance, Goard said.

When the petition is approved by her, Goard said Goddard will have until early June to collect 10,459 signatures from valid registered voters. At best, Goddard has three months to collect the signatures.

Goddard, who is also running for Congress from District 7, said he believes he can generate the names in 30 days.

"I've had an awful lot of phone calls from people interested in helping," said Goddard.

Goddard said the county is large enough to have a full-time professional auditor. That function is now performed by County Finance Director Bob Wilson, a senior deputy clerk under court clerk Maryanne Morse.

The topics scheduled for testimony tonight are:

- Non-partisan elections of county commissioners, the sheriff, supervisor of elections, property appraiser, tax collector, and clerk of courts. Currently, each position is elected through the party primary process.

- Partisan political affiliation says a lot about the candidate.

- Partisan elections of school board members, who are now elected outside the party process.

- Term limits for county commissioners, the sheriff, supervisor of elections, property appraiser, tax collector, and clerk of courts. There are now no limits to the number of terms office-holders in those position can serve.

- Whether the sheriff, supervisor of elections, property appraiser, tax collector or clerk of courts should be appointed by either the county manager or county commissioners. Each position is now elected.

- Whether some or all of the county commissioners be elected from within their districts. Commissioners are now elected by all voters within the county.

- Whether county commissioners may provide written comments in the county manager's performance review of senior county officials. There is no current formal commission involvement in the review of department heads, a charter-ordained responsibility of the county manager.

- Whether the position of the county attorney be changed to represent the county commission. The county attorney is now answerable to the county manager, although commissioners affirm the appointment of the position.

Prayer

ther Trout said, to be honest, its shocking I just never thought we'd come to the day when people would allow children in public schools to pray. We allow kids to wear the most bizarre T-shirts and the most hateful things but they can't pray to God, whether it be God the Father for Christians or the Jews or Muslims."

He noted there are many religions in the country, not just Christians but Jews, Muslims and there are also non-believers. Trout said in our pluralistic society accommodation should be made for all. A common morality which could be agreed upon might be taught in schools dealing with violence, or child abuse, he suggested. "This is a super step really," Father Trout said.

"I think as long as it (prayer) is voluntary and non-compulsory, I don't see any problem with it," Rev. Scott. "I believe we are becoming a little paranoid with church and state today, and that's the reason there's a lack of morals and virtues. It's not happening at home and it's not happening in school."

Moral principles such as the Ten Commandments, which Christians and Jews could agree on, might be introduced into public schools. "I think that's a positive thing we could do to help develop virtues and values in our school children," Scott added. Students today are getting a lot of negatives and few positives in developing values from society, he added.

The bill (SB 1432) was approved 9-1 Tuesday in the Senate Education Committee. A House committee approved a similar measure (HB 1679) earlier this month.

Voting no was Sen. William Turner, D-Hialeah, who argued the bill was unconstitutional and threatening to students who don't want prayer.

"If the majority of students are allowed to decide whether to use school property for prayer, students who belong to minority religions will be stigmatized and coerced to participate," Turner said.

"This bill is not intended for anyone to impose their religious beliefs on anyone else," said Sen. Charles Williams, D-Tallahassee, the sponsor.

The Senate and House proposals would allow only non-sectarian, voluntary prayer during non-compulsory assemblies, sporting events and commencement ceremonies, and only if a majority of students desired it.

Williams said the prayer measure goes hand-in-hand with another bill moving through the upper chamber that would establish "character development" programs in schools.

"Putting voluntary prayer, led by students, voted on by students, back in our schools just may be the missing link," he said.

The measures, still to be debated on the House and Senate floors, were crafted to comply with court rulings against required prayer in schools, Williams said.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled benedictions at graduations unconstitutional, even if non-sectarian. In 1989, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta ruled prayer at school sports events unconstitutional, Turner noted.

"Our schools are public and our prayers should be there," said David Caton, president of the American Family Association of Florida.

Other witnesses, including representatives of Jewish, Presbyterian and United Church of Christ groups, said the bill violated separation of church and state.

Grant

Monday night, the Sanford City Commission approved the filing of papers to obtain a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) in the amount of $365,396. Community Development Director Charles Rowe is handling the grant application.

Rowe said the application has now been submitted to the Citizens Advisory Board of Seminole County. The Board will be making decisions on the spending of Housing and Urban Development Funds received by the county.

"We expect notification by possibly October," Rowe said, "with the actual granting shortly after that."

"We've obtained these CDBG grants before," Rowe said this morning, "but generally for housing rehabilitation. This is the first time we are expanding it to work on a commercial area, and we believe it may be one of our most important projects."

During discussion of the matter Monday, Commissioner Bob Thomas commented, "Both the 13th Street and Sanford Avenue areas were thriving business districts for the African-American community 50 years ago," he said. "Then the businesses started moving out, and we are left with a lot of empty buildings."

Thomas said he was enthusiastic about the project. "I welcome this," he said. "But we will need to be sure our resources are used properly."

Mother Blanche Bell Weaver, of the Rescue Outreach Mission, 1701 W. 13th Street, is located within the area under consideration. "This would certainly be good for the whole area," she commented. "There has been so much crime, with more and more of the criminal element moving into this area that something has to be done."

She continued, "If we can get together and get this area shaped up, and these people see what we are doing, maybe we can embarrass them into changing their ways."

If the grant is approved, the money will be used in support of three projects. The Orange Avenue Park, at Orange Avenue and 7th Street, will receive $15,396, to be used in obtaining park playground equipment. That project is already underway through a cooperative effort of the city and COMA, the Concerned, Organized Men in Action. It has been proposed that the park be named the Bentley-Wilson Children's Park.

The largest share of the grant, $190,000, would be used in community revitalization. Residential rehabilitation is earmarked for $100,000, with the remainder in a beautification and upgrading effort on 13th Street, between Lake Avenue and Persimmon Avenue.

The third portion of the grant, $50,000, would be used in administration of the city's Community Development department, and is expected to allow the obtaining of a contract clerk employee.

When the revitalization project gets underway, it will make all commercial structures in that area eligible for loans from $1,000 to $2,000 for facade improvements. Five owner occupied homes which require rehabilitation would also be eligible for assistance, especially in emergency repairs, painting and roofing.

It would also include work on 3,300 feet of sidewalk on 13th

Street, the holding of business seminars and classes on such subjects as loan packaging, retail marketing and business operation.

In giving a written presentation to the commission requesting approval of the grant application, Rowe wrote extensively about the history of the area, known as the Town of Goldsboro. He commented, "In the early 1900's, Goldsboro was annexed into the City of Sanford. Had this annexation not taken place, Goldsboro would be able to claim the status of the oldest American incorporated black town."

Rowe stressed, "This community development project is not one of giving, but rather assisting."

When asked at the commission work session what would happen if the grant was approved this year but none was available for next year, Rowe responded that he hoped the project could move ahead this year to the point where any loss of it next year would not cause any problems.

Commissioner Thomas also suggested additional support. "If we can really get this moving," he said, "I don't see any reason why we couldn't ask some of the churches to get involved. They should be able to dig in and help make contributions here. After all, it serves to help everyone."

Mother Weaver said her church is already involved in doing anything possible to help improve the Goldsboro area, and there have been many beautification projects getting underway, spurred by individuals and small groups. "We all should do anything we can to help improve the area," she said.

Wrestling with limits on aid for additional children

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration's effort to revamp the welfare system is snagged on an emotionally charged question: Should mothers on welfare be denied an automatic increase in benefits when they have additional children?

Advocates for the poor say such "family caps" encourage abortion, violate a woman's fundamental right to decide when to have a baby and punish families who already cannot afford the most basic essentials — diapers, clothing, shampoo.

Proponents of the caps say working mothers don't get a raise when they give birth, so why should women on welfare? It is unfair, they argue, to ask taxpayers who must limit the size of their own families to subsidize a welfare mother's decision to get pregnant again.

"The welfare system should not insulate people from the consequences of their own decisions," said Will Marshall, president of the Progressive Policy Institute, the policy arm of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council.

Few other issues in the debate over welfare reform stir such passions. But this time, the fight pits moderate Democrats against the party's old-time liberals, while Democratic governors are among the growing number of state leaders pushing for permission to impose family caps.

And now, with the submission of President Clinton's welfare reform plan to Congress just weeks away, the administration remains torn over what to do about family caps.

The issue for Clinton's welfare reform task force is whether states should be allowed or required to limit increases in welfare benefits when children are conceived by parents already collecting Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

A family cap would save an estimated $535 million over five years, according to early estimates by the task force, which is scrambling to find the money to finance welfare reform.

And pressure on the White House is building from states that want to deny increased benefits for additional children. California, Wisconsin, Maryland and Arkansas are waiting for federal permission to experiment with family caps. Georgia got the OK last year.

But in New Jersey, the only state now denying benefits to women who give birth after 10 months on welfare, family caps are the subject of a legal challenge in federal court.

Officials say that case complicates the task force's decision on family caps. The group is torn between giving states the flexibility they demand and the fear that caps punish innocent children.

David Sclarra, senior attorney at Legal Services of New Jersey, says a mother of two who gave birth to triplets is among the women hurt by the new law, which fixes her monthly cash income at $424. Also suffering, he says, are the families of women who got pregnant because their birth control failed or because they were forced to have sex against their will.

New Jersey officials say the cap reduced births to women on welfare by 9 percent last August and September, the first two months in which newborn children were excluded from their mothers' welfare checks.

That translates into just 94 births per month in a state where there are about 123,000 families on AFDC, according to the Center for Law and Social Policy, a research and advocacy organization for the poor.

The group found that an average of 458 newborns were excluded from their families' welfare check during August and September. On an annual basis, its study estimates that as many as 5,496 infants will be punished to produce the desired results of an estimated 1,122 avoided births.

A mother with two children collects $424 in monthly welfare benefits in New Jersey. A woman with three children receives $64 more.

"The issue of AFDC mothers having children has always been a strong emotional issue regardless of what the facts say," says Mark Greenberg, a senior staff attorney for the social policy center. "The family cap offers a way for politicians to say they are in favor of responsibility without providing poor families any additional services or assistance."

But Gerald Whitburn, secretary of health and social services in Wisconsin, says it is irresponsible for women to give birth to children they cannot support. About 13,000 mothers on welfare in his state gave birth last year, out of 78,000 families on the rolls.

Wisconsin authorities believe a family cap will reduce the birth rate among those women by 8 percent and save $141 million.

Clinton's road show Basking in applause of 'real people'

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like other embattled chief executives before him, when the going gets tough in Washington, President Clinton gets going — out of town.

Clinton has been basking in the applause of a three-day road trip that combined high-profile presidential and political events.

And he'll spend much of the next month on the road: Florida this weekend, Dallas next weekend, then three or four days in California.

It's a tried and true formula for a president when things get nasty in the nation's capital: going out among what politicians like to call "the real people"; out where Washington infighting is just a distant hum.

It doesn't usually work, except temporarily, other presidents have found, since trouble continues to stalk them wherever they go.

As he went from Michigan to Massachusetts to New Hampshire to New York, Clinton kept getting peppered with questions from reporters on the subject. And a sign held by a protester in Keene, N.H., declared: "Whitewater does matter."

While Clinton may not have been quite successful in shifting national attention away from Whitewater, he at least seemed to be getting it off his own mind.

"This is America, this is where they are," Clinton enthused. "Who are they?"

"Real people," said Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos. "He's in a terrific mood. He loves being back here," Stephanopoulos added.

From opening a jobs summit in Detroit to a podium-thumping attack on Republicans at a Democratic fund-raiser in Boston, to a campaign-style tour of southern New Hampshire, to greeting U.S. troops back from Somalia at Fort Drum, N.Y., Clinton was playing his presidential card to the hilt.

"We will do everything we can to get attention back on things that matter," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

And what could look more presidential than welcoming U.S. troops?

"You have showed the world what Americans are made of. Your nation is grateful. Your president is terribly proud of you," Clinton told a group of U.S. troops just back from Somalia and their families in a packed gymnasium at the Army base in upstate New York.

Hundreds of men and women in uniform hooted and cheered the president in what had to be an exhilarating moment for a president who is still on shaky terms with the military.

No matter that Clinton's forget-Whitewater tour wasn't completely spontaneous.

Tickets to a town hall meeting in Nashua, N.H., were distributed mainly by local politicians and school officials.

And New Hampshire woman whose message brought a "bless you" from Clinton ("Whitewater is for canoeing and rafting. Shame on those who would detract and distract from the important work you're doing with universal health coverage and jobs") read those remarks from a 3x5 index card.

Clinton appeared to lose his temper at a Democratic fund-raiser in Boston as he lashed out at Republicans for waging "politics of personal destruction" and hanging the podium repeatedly.

But the event was carefully choreographed and had all the trappings of a mini-political convention, complete with a band, movies on a huge screen of Clinton moments and a concluding blizzard of red, white and blue balloons and confetti.

"I was not angry, but I'm determined," Clinton said later. Unfortunately for the president, the Whitewater affair seems to sprout new tentacles daily.

In addition to the central issue — the special counsel's probe of a failed Arkansas savings and loan and its ties to an investment by the Clintons in the Whitewater Development Corp. in the 1980s — the term

"Whitewater" now takes in far more ground.

It covers everything from bank failures and Clinton's questionable investments, to Arkansas regulatory practices in the 1980s, to Hillary Rodham Clinton's Rose Law Firm, to the suicide of White House lawyer Vincent Foster, to potential cover-ups.

The affair has all but hamstrung Clinton and his administration and put a severe brake on efforts to pass health care legislation this year.

That's why for now, at least, Clinton and his top aides were rejoining in the relatively clearcut life of the "campaign" trail, one he's likely to spend a lot of time on in the coming months.

"I began to feel like a real president," Clinton told an appreciative crowd at a rally on Boston Harbor.

Park police chief says case closed on suicide of Foster

By Associated Press

BOSTON — The police chief who investigated the death of White House deputy counsel Vincent Foster has turned his report over to the special counsel investigating Whitewater and said, from his standpoint, the case is closed.

The death of Foster, whose body was found last July in a park in northern Virginia, was "clearly a suicide," U.S. Park Police Chief Robert Langston told The Boston Globe on Tuesday.

"This case is closed," Langston said after handing over his report along with boxes of forensic evidence and interviews Tuesday to special counsel Robert B. Fiske Jr., who is reexamining Foster's death as part of the probe into President Clinton's investment in the Whitewater Development Corp.

Langston said his report should end rumors that Foster was murdered or that his body was tampered with after his death.

"We're anxious for them to put this to rest," Langston said. "It's been unfair for the politicians and the media to put the family through this. If Whitewater is the issue, then let Whitewater be the issue. But the suicide has never been the issue."

But one of Fiske's top aides told the New York Post that the question of Foster's death is still open.

"We have not come to any conclusions," Roderick Lankier, the attorney Fiske assigned to review Foster's death, said Tuesday. Whether or not it was suicide is "one of the things we are looking at."

Since his death, rumors have circulated that Foster, the Clintons' personal lawyer in the land deal, was driven to kill himself over the possibility of a federal investigation into Whitewater.

Greyhounds romp in battle of unbeaten

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — So much for a showdown.

An anticipated battle among two top-flight undefeated teams quickly turned into a one-sided affair Tuesday afternoon as the Lyman Greyhounds clubbed the Oviedo Lions, 14-4, in a Seminole Athletic Conference girls' softball contest at Lyman High School.

The Greyhounds jumped on the Lions for eight runs in the bottom of the first inning and two runs in the bottom of the second. Lyman pitcher Michelle Bishop took over after that as the home team went on to conclude the game by the 10-run rule after six innings.

In fact, the game could have easily been a shutout as all four Oviedo runs came on Greyhound miscues. Two runs came on a passed ball and wild throw by the catcher on the same play and the other two runs came on an over-throw at third base.

"The girls are playing so well right now," said Lyman head coach Christy Tibbitts. "I'm so excited, we're playing so much as a team, doing everything well. I was really upset with the mistakes that gave them the runs, but overall, I'm very pleased and so proud of them."

The Lion runs came in the second and third innings to cut the Lyman advantage to 10-4, but that was as close as the game would get.

Bishop was not overpowering in posting her fifth victory, but she was very effective, allowing only two singles and no earned runs.

Also contributing were Wendy Acey (1-for-1, one run scored, two RBI), Stacey Ritter (1-for-2, two runs scored, one RBI), Jaime Beland (1-for-3, one run scored) and Jodi Beland (one run scored).

Providing the offense for Oviedo were Karen Dreyfuss (one single, one run scored), Tonya Bellamy (one single) and Beth Pratt, Jamie Dugan and Ann Fessenden (one run scored each).

The victory improved Lyman's record to 6-0 overall and, more importantly, raised its Seminole Athletic Conference mark to 4-0, giving the Greyhounds a one-game lead over the Lions and Lake Brantley in the conference race with one game left in the first round.

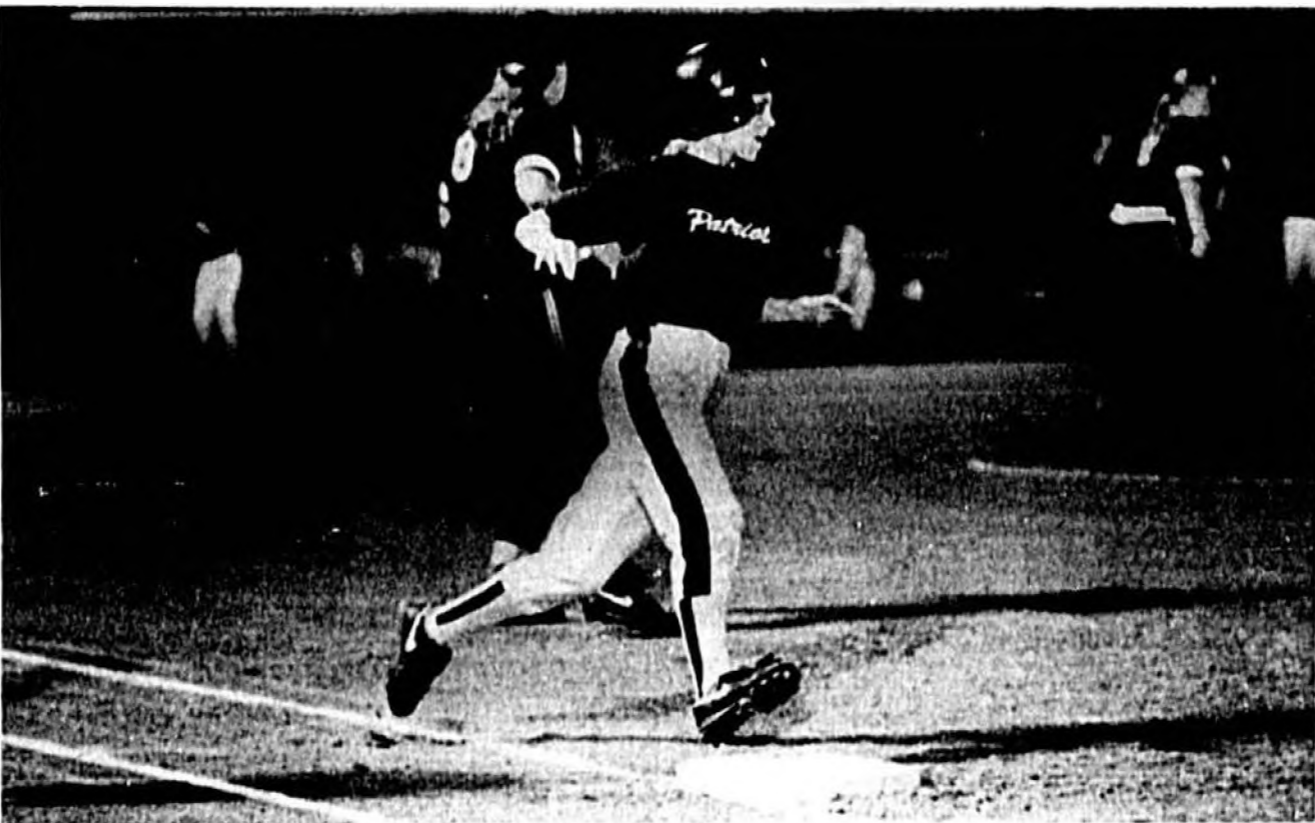

Lyman will conclude the first half of the conference schedule with a 4 p.m. game at Seminole High School on Thursday. The Greyhounds will also host a non-conference game

Wood's disqualification makes a winner of Cook

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Ormond Beach driver Jack Cook was awarded the win in the Late Model feature race last Saturday, March 12, at New Smyrna Speedway when apparent race leader Ricky Wood refused to pull his heads in a post-race technical inspection.

"We won the race because someone got caught," said Cook, a three-time Late Model track champion. "I guess that explains why we couldn't close on him (Wood)."

"I'm not going to say I hate to win like this because a win is a win. Our guys worked hard to give me a good car. I ran in contention all night, so we deserved the win."

Wood was not available for comment following his disqualification.

Tony Ponder inherited the second spot with Greg Froemming moving up to third, Morgan Hoover taking fourth, and George Murphy, who had to come back from a spin earlier in the race, finishing fifth.

"We had a car that was capable of winning tonight," said Ponder, the recently crowned NASCAR Sunbelt Southeast Late Model champion. "I tried too hard to get to the front with cold tires and I flat lost it. I really should have known better."

Froemming, who has raced sparingly since October, stated that he was satisfied with his third-place finish.

"I'm recovering from knee surgery, so I'm still trying to get more seat time," said Froemming. "I'm glad we finished the race. In January, I was leading a race here and a lapped car put me into the wall with two laps to go."

Other drivers weren't as fortunate. Gary Balough's streak of six consecutive wins ended when he had to withdraw from competition three laps into the race with a clutch problem. James

Powell, shaking down a new car, bounced off the back wall while running in third place and had to pull behind the pit wall.

"We came to test and I just drove right into the wall," said Powell. "We had a real good car but a stupid driver. I just plain messed up."

Wayne Heckle used his advantage of starting on the pole to win the Modified main event. Heckle, who outducced fellow pole sitter Dave Savicki for the No. 1 slot, led every circuit to pick up his third feature win of the season.

With two laps to the checkers, Joe Middleton, who was riding in third place, slipped out of the racing groove, allowing Joey Stutz and Wayne Parker to sneak by with an inside pass.

Savicki trailed Heckle to the checkers followed by Stutz, Parker, and Middleton.

Earlier in the program, Allen Rhodes fought off a late race challenge by Wood and Darrell Frye to take the checkers in the Limited Late Model main

Cook of the Week

Musician's meals accented with southern charm

Cook of the Week Mary Williams is the type lady, who, to this very day, is a perfect example of just how important and meaningful "family" was in the South. Although there are a few decades between now and the time when Williams was a young girl living at home, she still carries that lovely and refined southern charm with her today.

Williams is a native Floridian. Her family tree goes back as far as five generations of Floridians on her mother's side and six generations on her father's side. Needless to say, Williams has volumes of memories when it comes to life in the Old South. "I was in high school before I was allowed to spend the night at a friend's house," Williams said. "And even then my father had the phone number of where I was and, the friend had to live on the same street as we did or, at least as close."

As Williams shares and reminisces about how her life was during those years, one can't help realizing just how tough times were then, however, she also has a gentle way of expressing how great those special times really were.

Prior to moving to Sanford from Tallahassee about one and one-half years ago to be near her daughter, Mary Anne Cleveland, Williams, an accomplished musician, taught piano for 35 years. She is the mother of four children and the grandmother of seven. Williams is an active member of the First United Methodist Church, Sanford. She is a current member of the Ixora Garden Club and, a lifetime member of the Florida Garden Club. Williams is also a member of Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), a national organization.

There are many activities that Williams enjoys tremendously. Of course, like many people, she has her "favorites." When you see Williams' beautiful front and back yard, it's very obvious that gardening is one of her "favorites."

Collectibles, especially glassware, is another way Williams enjoys spending her time. "I'll go with my friends around to some of the antiques shops and sometimes I'll find a little something I like or, it's fun comparing your own items with that of the shop's," said Williams.

When it comes to cooking, Williams remembers those Depression years and how you had to learn to make a meal stretch. A real dessert treat that her mother made during those lean years is one that Williams still makes to this day. Hot Fudge Pudding Cake "is very inexpensive to make," Williams said. "What we all loved about it is that it made its own pudding and you would just kind of spoon it over the cake.

If you want a carrot casserole that is truly pleasing to the palate then a must would be Williams' own recipe for Glazed Carrots.

Celebrate a taste of St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick's Day is cause for celebration. Perhaps you serve corned beef and cabbage as many do on this day. Maybe a special potato and cabbage dish called Colcannon or just Irish potatoes in some form and some green foods. For the Irish in some of us and the fun in all of us, make something special!

Corned beef briskets are most plentiful during this time of the year. A flat piece microwaves more uniformly.

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

2½-3 lbs. corned beef round or brisket with seasoning packet
1½ cups water
3 medium carrots, peeled and cut into strips
2 large potatoes, cut into eighths
1 medium head cabbage, cut into sixths

Place corned beef, contents of seasoning packet, water and carrots in 3-quart casserole. Cover tightly. Microwave on 100 percent power 7-9 minutes or until water boils.

Reduce power to 50 percent. Microwave 30 minutes. Turn meat over. Add potatoes and top with cabbage. Re-cover. Microwave 30-45 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Let stand, covered, 10 minutes. To serve, carve corned beef diagonally across the grain in thin slices.

Frozen hash brown potatoes make preparation of this potato dish especially quick and easy. Contains many shades of green.

DELUXE POTATOES

1 package (24 oz.) frozen hash brown potatoes
2 Tbsp. chopped green onion
2 Tbsp. chopped green pepper
1 can (10½ oz.) condensed cream of potato soup
1 can (10½ oz.) condensed cream of celery soup
1 cup (8 oz.) sour cream
½ tsp. paprika
1 Tbsp. freshly snipped parsley

Combine hash browns, onion and green pepper in 1½-quart casserole. Cover with casserole lid. Microwave (100 percent) 9-10 minutes or until steaming hot, stirring once. Add soups and sour cream; mix well. Cover. Microwave on 100 percent power 10-12 minutes or until heated through, stirring once. Sprinkle with paprika and parsley flakes.

About 8 servings — 115 calories each.

This family-style meal-in-one dish includes the common foods of Ireland, potatoes and cabbage, with a small amount of meat and other vegetables for flavor and to stretch the budget.

CABBAGE PATCH STEW

2 Tbsp. butter
1 small onion, chopped
1 large stalk celery, diced
1 lbs. ground beef
4 ripe tomatoes, quartered
2 cans small whole potatoes*
3 large carrots, thinly sliced
½ head green cabbage, coarsely shredded
½ cup water
2 tsp. salt

½ tsp. pepper
2 tsp. instant beef bouillon
1 small bay leaf

In a 4-quart casserole, melt butter on 100 percent power 45-60 seconds. Add onion and celery and micro-cook (100 percent) 5 minutes. Add ground beef, continue microwaving 5-6 minutes. Break up meat with a fork and mix well. Microwave minute more. Add remaining ingredients; cover and micro-cook on 100 percent power 30-35 minutes or until carrots are tender. Stir at least 3 times getting cabbage mixed well into the stew.

Serves 6-8.
*Small new potatoes can be used instead of canned ones. Scrub and cut them in half. Cooking time will be about the same.

Make a kiwi frozen ice for the "green" dessert. It's a light, refreshing finale to a special meal.

KIWICE

¾ cup water
½ cup light corn syrup
¼ cup sugar
2 Tbsp. chopped green pepper
½ cup orange juice
Green food coloring
Combine water, corn syrup and sugar in 1-quart batter bowl. Microwave on 100 percent power, uncovered, 3-4 minutes or until mixture boils. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cool.

Place cut-up kiwi in food processor or blender container.

Process on medium setting until smooth. Stir into cooled syrup mixture. Stir in orange juice and food coloring until desired coloring.

Pour into ice cream freezer. Freeze following freezer directions. About 8 servings — 95 calories each.

Lighten up with airy springtime desserts

Spring is a time to rejoice, rejuvenate, lighten up and start thinking about shorts, T-shirts and fitting into last year's bathing suit. With longer summer days come brighter spirits and cravings for the flavors and textures of the season. Suddenly, recipes that are fruity, airy and lower in fat and calories than the heavier foods of winter are in vogue.

Dessert lovers who are watching their waists will heap praise on the following desserts.

'Whistle-blower's law' protects harassed employees in Florida

DEAR ABBY: My employer is being sued for sexual harassment. I, and at least a dozen other employees, must give a deposition very soon. We have discussed whether or not to tell what we have seen for fear of losing our jobs. Many of us would like to see the company atmosphere improve, but we are afraid to come forward.

The executives, from the top on down (including the head of personnel), have harassed some women and created a hostile environment here. The woman who is suing was terminated for refusing to have relations with some of the top male executives. I have recently heard there is a law in Florida called the "whistle-blower's law," which supposedly protects an employee who has reported an employer for sexual harassment. Can you tell me if there really is such a law?

FEARFUL IN FLORIDA
DEAR FEARFUL: I had never heard of the "whistle-blower's law," but my staff called the Florida Department of Labor and Employment Security Office in Tallahassee, and were told there is, indeed, such a law. However, I suggest that you talk with a lawyer before you blow any more whistles.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: Most fast-food places have a policy about pets brought into their establishment. It's OK if the pet is on a leash. My fiancé and I brought our pet iguana into an establishment in Chula Vista. He was on a leash and wasn't bothering anyone.

This place had a sign up that said, "No dogs allowed unless accompanied by a disabled person," but it didn't say anything about other pets on a leash, so we assumed it was OK.

When we walked in and ordered, nothing was said. It was like, "Let them order, take their money, and as soon as they sit, deliver the message about their iguana." We were told the other customers were feeling uneasy about our pet. We had seated ourselves far from the other customers, yet we were asked to sit outside.

I saw this guy on television walking the streets and beaches of Los Angeles with an iguana on his shoulder, and people came up to him to pet it. So how come in San Diego we were given the cold shoulder because of our unusual pet?

A.B. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR A.B.: Even though some reptiles make good pets, they seem to frighten most people. The management was obviously concerned about its other customers when it objected to your unusual pet.

It's ironic that with all the people who have been nipped by fluffy, adorable little creatures, they haven't learned that looks can be deceiving and snap judgments based on appearances are unfair.

Grower hopes to flood country with lucky plant

By MIKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

APOPKA — John Piergrass is jumping from a daydream to reality by growing as many four-leaf clovers as he wants and convincing people that the luck of the Irish can last well beyond St. Patrick's Day.

Piergrass and two partners are the only ones in the country growing and selling "Genuine 4 Leaf Clovers." They come from a new lab-grown strain that produces the perfect leaflets consistently.

The red, white and green plants are shipped out of an Apopka nursery in 3-inch pots, and Piergrass hopes to sell them as good-luck omens year-round.

Piergrass was an unemployed worker in the electronics industry when he caught himself daydreaming one day about growing four-leaf clovers.

Researching the subject as a possible new business, he discovered scientists at the University of Florida had succeeded in producing the new strain. He negotiated an agreement to produce the plants exclusively and hit his stride just in time for St. Patrick's Day.

Four-leaf clovers grow in nature but are rare, giving them the good-luck aura of the Irish.

"There's a lot of excitement out there from our customers," says Piergrass, who is putting in long days filling orders.

Piergrass, 31, has used a little of the luck to build his business since shortly before St. Patrick's Day 1993.

At that time, he was growing plants from seeds out of a rented greenhouse, had limited experience, no industry or market contacts — and no customers.

He had contacted some flower wholesalers and retail florists and was having little success with his idea of including stems of four-leaf clovers in flower arrangements.

Still, he was determined before this St. Patrick's Day rolled around, his four-leaf clovers would become popular throughout the year.

He appears to be on the way to reaching that goal, with the help of John and Bob Scott, who operate John's Inc., a nursery in Apopka.

The key to their success was generating the best specimen as tissue culture in the laboratory. The white-room lab conditions create identical plants in the test tube, with each producing four leaflets consistently.

John Scott's nursery oversees the growing process and then pots and ships the plants, individually or in groups, to meet orders generated through a special 800-number throughout the country.

"We ship them for birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, parties, special occasions of all types," says Piergrass.

The company has shipped about 30,000 of the 3-inch pots to distribution centers in Florida and the Southeast for Kmart department stores and Publix and Winn-Dixie supermarkets.

They are being sold for under $10 each by the stores, which use their own special packaging and promotion. Each plant includes a booklet with the St. Patrick's Day legend and historical tidbits about the four-leaf clover.

Each plant also has a tag saying that unauthorized propagation and sale of the "Genuine 4 Leaf Clover" is prohibited because the variety of "Trifolium repens" is protected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Editors' Note: The four-leaf clovers can be ordered from 1-800-Big-Luck.

CBS' poet laureate, Charles Kuralt, to retire on May 1

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Charles Kuralt, a CBS newsman who quit content-hopping to roam the byways of America for CBS' "On the Road" and stayed for 15 years in the writerly splendor of "Sunday Morning," is retiring — to travel and write.

"I can barely remember my life before CBS and I can hardly imagine what life might be like after CBS News," Kuralt, 59, said Monday.

He will retire May 1. His last "Sunday Morning" will air on Easter, April 3.

"I have done every satisfying thing under the sun in television news, and would like to explore some side roads in life while I am still in good health and good spirits," he said.

He said his first byroad will be a book — his sixth — about America. His memoir "A Life on the Road" was the bestselling nonfiction hardcover of 1990.

A graceful, bulky man whose somber, bassy voice is buried by countless Paul Mallis, Kuralt began his 37-year CBS career as a radio writer on the network's overnight news desk in 1957.

In 1959, when he was 25, he became the youngest man ever named a CBS News correspondent. The next year, he anchored the CBS News primetime series "Eyewitness," and a year later became the network's man in Latin America.

After a stint as CBS' chief West Coast correspondent, he returned to New York City in 1964. He then began the first of his backroad jaunts to small-town America, which became his hallmark "On the Road" reports.

Kuralt took his writer's craft and his crew in a well-worn motor home to every state, logging more than a million miles and celebrating places with names like Sisters, Bend and Hoodoo, in Oregon.

Then, on Jan. 28, 1979, he launched a little-heralded broadcast that began as, and remains, an unburied look at the arts and sciences, music, dance and literature, sports, Americana and the natural world.

"I never had an assignment in all those years," Kuralt said in an interview marking the show's 15th anniversary. "I don't have an immediate supervisor. I have a hell of a lot of bosses, but none of them know quite what I'm doing."

Kuralt has had a hand in CBS' special event coverage, and was co-host, with Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, of the network's series on the 50th anniversary of World War II.

Last month, Kuralt wrote and reported feature stories from CBS' coverage of the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

During his career, Kuralt has won 11 Emmys and three George Foster Peabody awards. In 1983 he was named broadcaster of the year by the International Radio and Television Society.

"No one has earned the right to retire more than Charles Kuralt," said Howard Stringer, president of CBS Broadcast Group. "He has been the poet laureate of CBS News for more than 30 years and he has carved out a unique niche in the history of this company.

"His departure is sad for CBS and for broadcast journalism. But he will stay in our hearts and our thoughts. This will always be his home."

So you'd like to grow herbs

Garden designs normally cause most people to think of elaborate landscaping, flowers or special floral ideas, but Seminole County Master Gardener Bette Cannavino says, try a garden designed for herbs.

"A Shakespearean garden featuring plants mentioned by the bard or a biblical garden featuring herbs mentioned in the Bible," were some of the suggestions Cannavino had in mind.

Herbs can make lovely flowers in a garden setting and can be useful as well. "First you need to decide what you are growing them for," she said. "Is it for medicinal purposes, for culinary, potpourri or seasoning vinegars?" A medicinal herb is echinacea. Most people know the usual culinary herbs for cooking. Potpourri herbs are "French or English lavender, rose geranium, patchouli, pineapple sage, hyssop, lemon grass, lemon balm, lemon verbena, chamomile (also good for teas), and lemon thyme."

Vinegars may be seasoned with color by adding "pineapple sage which has a red flower or Mexican tarragon; this has a yellow flower."

Midge Mycoff places vases containing fresh roses in her home.

Climate lends itself to different roses

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

Roses aren't only the flowers of choice to send your beloved. They are wonderful for landscaping and sharing their fragrance and beauty with nature. Midge Mycoff, vice president of the Greater Orlando Rose Society, shared some of her expertise on these lovely flowers.

"If you are going to grow roses in Florida, you must make a commitment," she said. "Newcomers to growing roses shouldn't be too enthusiastic and get too many to care for than they are capable of handling. If given ongoing attention, they'll reward you with a great deal of flowers."

Before even beginning this venture it is important to note that roses need six to eight hours of sunlight each day so your choice of location needs to be with this in mind. Start with about five to seven bushes, Mycoff recommended, along with spacing them at least two to three feet between each bush.

Preparing the soil was a must in her opinion.

"You must prepare the soil or the amendments to the soil," she said. "Roses don't like sand. They need portions of peat, potting soil or top soil, with bonemeal and fish emulsion. I take out the old soil and make the hole three times the size I'd need."

If choosing container grown plants, water regularly in a well drained soil, according to a Nelson's Florida Roses information flyer. The flyer also mentioned that plants with the Fortuniana (Rosa fortuniana) rootstock produced the greatest number of flowers, attained the largest size and developed less stem dieback than plants with other root systems. Mycoff agreed that Fortuniana was the rootstock of choice.

"You'll have a long life out of it," she said. "Others won't survive the extreme conditions because of soil and uneven watering." And speaking of water Mycoff said, "Roses need a lot of water. They are heavy

Roses at a glance

Your preferences can run from miniature roses that work as ground covers or can be grown in containers to hardy floribundas that grow 3 to 5 feet tall and serve as borders or barriers. It's estimated that there are more than 100 species and thousands of varieties of roses.

Once you've made the selection, use these tips to achieve perfect roses:

• Roses need at least six hours of sun each day, so pick a planting site with easterly exposure. The site should be slightly sloped for maximum water drainage, and it should be away from other shrubs and trees so the roses won't have to compete for moisture and nutrients.

• Rose bushes are sold either in containers or bare root. If you've chosen the latter, plant them right away. Before planting, soak the bare root in a bucket of water to keep it from drying out. Container roses don't need pre-soaking.

• A newly planted rose bush does best in well aerated soil. Add peat moss, if needed, and plant food that has a 10-10-10 nitrogen phosphorous potassium formulation. High phosphate content will ensure good blossom and root development for the transplants.

• Dig a planting hole 1 1/2 feet deep and 2 feet wide to allow space for good drainage and root spreading. Begin planting bare root roses by creating a firm mound at the bottom of your planting hole, and gently spread the roots over the mound, checking that enough stem will be above the surface. Then refill the hole with soil, firmly anchoring the plant. Water immediately and regularly through the growing season.

Day lilies choice for color, ease

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

Kathy Chenet spent a big part of her life around flowers, day lilies to be exact. Chenet and her husband operate Big Tree Daylily Garden, so her advice on growing these beautiful blooms are sought after by many. In fact, Orlando will host the National Convention for Day Lilies in May of this year. "Our group, the Sunbelt Chapter, is in charge," she said. "We are expecting 500 to 800 people to tour the four day lily gardens in the area."

Day lilies range from a few dollars and to a day lily collector, up to $200 can be spent. They are relatively easy plants to grow.

"Day lilies appreciate good soil," said Chenet. "A little acidic though. The sand in Florida you would want to amend with compost, pine needles or oak leaves." She added information by saying, "They love sun. They're not a competitive plant so they aren't a good plant to put around trees because the tree will rob it of nutrients."

The day lilies seemed to roll forever over the gardens near Big Tree Park. Chenet took her own advice by planting rows and beds of day lilies together instead of near trees or other plants. She proceeded to tell of aspects of the flower and identify parts.

"Day lilies are not true lilies as many may believe. A single plant has a fan. Each plant has one fan after a year, sometimes two or more. Most modern day lilies have two to three scapes per season."

Day lilies have the reputation of not having many problems with pests.

"They need well watered, preferably overhead watering and well fertilized conditions," she said. "With good care, they can grow

Continued from Page 2 such and are for homes in the historic district. The purpose of the grant is to help people restore the house. Fifteen hundred dollars is the top limit on funds," Meeks said the grants may also consist of a workday at the residence by members of the trust and the homeowners. A landscaping project may be just the kind of undertaking that involves these participants. "We have three grants we're doing this year," he said. "It's an ongoing thing. There were three application dates, Oct. 31st, Dec. 31st and Feb. 28th." Grants are awarded by application review. The grants are limited to the historic district only. The requirements for grants are that persons applying for them should show financial or physical need. Grants may be used for general upkeep, repairs, restoration, historic replacement, or yard improvement (e.g. painting, window repair, landscaping, etc.) "We have a grant committee. They meet and review the application and may drive by the house," said Meeks. Interviews with the homeowners are set up. A meeting is scheduled again to choose the top three. "Moneys come from the trust treasury. Membership dues are paid by members and money from the holiday tour of homes help pay for the grants. "We're not just writing checks," he said. "We set up merchants around town to handle things like paint, caulk, primer and pay them. The homeowner would get the materials from them and work from there. We work with a designated project coordinator who is a construction contractor to be sure we are getting the best prices." Martha Wells spoke of the work already completed and their plans for more renovations. "I have a videotape of the work we've done inside. We have all the colors picked out for the exterior. Right now my colors are before the Historic board for review. They want to keep the historic colors in the historic district."

Further information can be obtained by writing to P.O. Box 536, Sanford, FL 32772-0536.

Roses

Continued from Page 3 drinkers. They don't like their feet wet so have good irrigation. Three gallons of water every other day is best.

Fungicides and pesticides were another topic of conversation.

"Roses need to be sprayed with fungicides or insecticides every seven to ten days and in the summer every seven days," she said. "Change the sprays because they can build up a resistance to the same one each time and not do the job."

One of the most common diseases of roses was cited as black spot. She advised spraying the plant as well as the ground surrounding the bush.

"Pruning is important and you should keep the center of the rose cleaned out for proper air circulation," she said.

Mycoll pointed out that some roses are more suited for Florida's climate than others. "Queen Elizabeth, Don Juan, Double Delight, Perfume Delight, Gold Medal, Olympian, Altismo and Toro, otherwise known as Uncle Joe, are some that grow better in Florida," she said. "Old Garden roses also do well here."

beginner to plan it out, prepare a garden plan. Sit down and decide how big you want it. I recommend starting small. A 10x10 ft. area is good if you've never gardened before."

The Cooperative Extension Center, known by some as the Agriculture Center or AG center, keeps on hand a vegetable gardening guide. Thomas advised those dedicated to healthy growing, to pick up one.

"Next, after a plan is decided, have the soil tested," she said. "The Cooperative Extension Center can help with that too. If you leave soil samples in the morning, results can normally be obtained by the afternoon."

She said testing the soil before planting could save money on buying unnecessary additives, eliminate future growth problems, as well as advise the consumer, of changes to be made.

"Many people start a garden with lime," she said. "They think lime adjusts the Ph. Lime isn't something you always need so checking may save you. The Ph needs to be from 5.5-5.6."

The gardening season divides into spring and fall. Thomas felt tomatoes, peppers and radishes were good vegetables to start with.

"You should use stakes with tomatoes," she said. "If fruit rests on the ground, it will rot."

Another point is that taller plants should be sown in the center of the garden. Tomatoes could be put by a fence for support if necessary. She also felt that rows should run north and south so the vegetables receive more even sun, because they need morning and afternoon sunlight.

"Most important before using any pesticides, read the label," she said. "I can't stress enough, read the label. The label will tell what to treat, when to treat and how long to wait before eating the vegetable." Thomas continued by saying, "Don't use too many pesticides. Home mixtures are best. Two tablespoons of a soap, like Ivory Liquid, and two tablespoons of corn oil per gallon on plants is helpful." All insects can be treated with pesticides whether from store or home preparations, yet caterpillars should be simply plucked off.

A few preparations and then the real work begins.

"To prepare the garden, turn the soil over, add fertilizer or lime if necessary, let it sit for two weeks," she said. "If you're turning weeds over with the soil then they will die so you may need to pull them again. Waiting also gives the fertilizer a chance to activate so the plants can use it."

Transplants or seeds should always be taken from a healthy source.

Thomas mentioned a garden project beginning in Geneva. The city of Oviedo is also starting a community garden called "The Garden of Eden" which will have 29 plots that are eight by twenty feet. Four master gardeners from the Cooperative Extension center will be working with the effort.

Vegetable gardening may take a lot of work, and green thumb or not, the results could be a filling, tasty experience. So, Thomas advises, don't those gardening gloves.

one and a half to six and a half inches across, the average is five. Blooming 12 to 40 inches high is typical. There are singles and doubles. They may have different forms like ruffled, round, open or spidery. Their colors range from creamy white to purple black and everything in between." Chenet spoke of those hybrid growers and others that grow day lilies in pots or containers. "Hybrid growers cross pollinate and the price of some of those plants can cost around 10 dollars. At one time day lilies were the number two perennial behind the rose," she said. "I've heard that they are now number one."

Presently, many of the day lilies are not in season, so one can't appreciate their beauty. A drive to a day lily garden in April or May could prove more productive. Beauty may be in the eye of the beholder, yet Chenet says anyone beholding the magnificence of these flowers would agree, they are beautiful.

should be given to the location and care of a few of the herbs that are somewhat sensitive to soil moisture conditions," she said. Sage, rosemary, thyme and lavender are four herbs that require a well-drained, slightly moist soil, whereas parsley, chervil and mint grow best in soils retaining considerable moisture. Herbs grown in sandy soils will benefit from the addition of organic matter (compost) in the planting bed. Mulch should also be used around herbs in order to deter weed growth and conserve moisture, however, it is always important not to allow the mulching material to touch the stem of the plant. Ashes from fireplaces were advised to be used before planting because it deters many pests or snails. "I don't believe in amending the soil, with the exception of compost," she said. "It will only last a short period of time. Then it leaches out very quickly. Roots will just stay in that area and compact because they only want that nutrient." In the opinion of Cannavino "dappled shade" was a must for growing herbs. Cannavino discussed the easy maintenance of herbs. "Most herbs require a pest control. It might also be wise to arrange your herb garden away from other plantings which might require the use of pesticides." The growth of herbs in containers rather than in a garden bed was explored. "Most herbs can be successfully grown in containers and hanging baskets," she said. "A few can grow indoors, provided they receive sunlight. When planting your herbs in containers it is important that your pots have good drainage because soggy plants will die." Some of the herbs Cannavino has growing in her own back yard are French lavender, sage, schintee, chives, southern wood, rose geranium and rosemary. A book called "Southern Herb Growing" was highly recommended. The book was written by Madalene Hill and Gwen Barclay. Cannavino had her own copy and said she referred to it frequently for tips and recipes. Many herbs were mentioned that grow well in Florida. Basil, oregano, thyme, sage, rosemary, parsley, dill, chives, Mexican tarragon, and mint marigold do well here," she said. "French tarragon doesn't grow well in Florida." One specialty herb cited as a favorite of Cannavino's was lovage. "It tastes similar to parsley and celery." One herb named as growing good in shaded areas was scented geraniums. "For the beginner, I'd suggest just trying several herbs in a packet that you can buy at grocery stores," she said. "Everyone in the South has to have a pot of mint growing, to season their ice tea. Spearmint is actually easier to grow. Chocolate mint definitely needs shade in the summer and not full sun. It will take over a garden. I suggest a clay pot put into the ground for it." Cilantro was spoken of as a good seasoning for Mexican food. "The leaves are similar to parsley. It is readily available in the grocery store, already potted for less than two dollars." According to Cannavino, some herbs like basil, grow very well from a seed with "just a little scratch to the ground." She mentioned the different types of basil. There is globe, green ruffle, purple basil, large leaf basil and cinnamon basil. Cannavino, with her immense knowledge, shared clippings of actual plants and several recipes. With the many types of herbs and their easy growth in Florida, she said someone without a green thumb could have success and feel a sense of accomplishment in an herb garden.
