Information Believed Sought In Connection With Agitation To Open Breweries

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(A.P.)—The latest of the capital's recurrent reports of impending steps to legalize beer yesterday brought a statement from a White House source that statistics on workers and wages in the brewing industry had been collected but not at the best of President Hoover.

While this first positive information on the beer business had come from Walter H. Newson, one of Hoover's associates, the mystery was deepened by Newson's refusal to say when the data was gathered.

A report that the information might have been requested by the president's emergency committee on organization, headed by Walter H. Clegg, was denied at the White House.

Newson said he had requested the figures from the census bureau, but added such figures are not available at the moment.

This information was requested for the president, Newson was asked for anyone connected with the White House.

The figures showed that in 1914 the brewing industry employed 75,000 persons and paid $100,000,000 in wages; in 1929, 72,000 persons and $60,000,000; and in 1928, nine years after prohibition, 64,000 persons received $12,000,000 in the near beer industry. The values of the products were $42,000,000 in 1914, $43,000,000 in 1929, and $41,000,000 in 1928.

R. J. McMahon, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, told the American Legion's employment conference here that work that legalization of beer would permit immediately employ about 125,000 men.

Several senators and representatives and prominent business men have proposed the return of beer manufacture, claiming economic benefits through increased employment and federal revenues.

Boniske Declares State Better Off Than Other Points

Two weeks in New York and other points above the Mason and Dixon line convinced H. V. Boniske, local business man, that Florida in general and Sanford in particular, are on a par if not above the more stable sections of the nation.

In an interview today Mr. Boniske explained that his trip was planned for business purposes only, but that on his return he visited friends in Philadelphia and saw places of interest, including the Capitol in Washington.

"The country in general is in a far worse condition than Florida, and I was never more glad to get back among friends," he said, after giving an account of how he witnessed numbers of brown lines in the larger cities where hundreds of men were seen sleeping in the parks at night.

Referring to the chances of the Sanford colony grant, Mr. Boniske, who is also a truck farmer, said that the unemployment situation will not to a large extent affect the consumption of celery because the class of people, he explained, who eat it will continue to do so. "Every café I entered served celery soup together with other celery dishes," he concluded.

Another Chip OFF THE OLD BLOCK

We've just heaved another for solid chip off the old block that stands between the farmer and you. We mean the expense of bringing food from the man who grows it to the woman who cooks it.

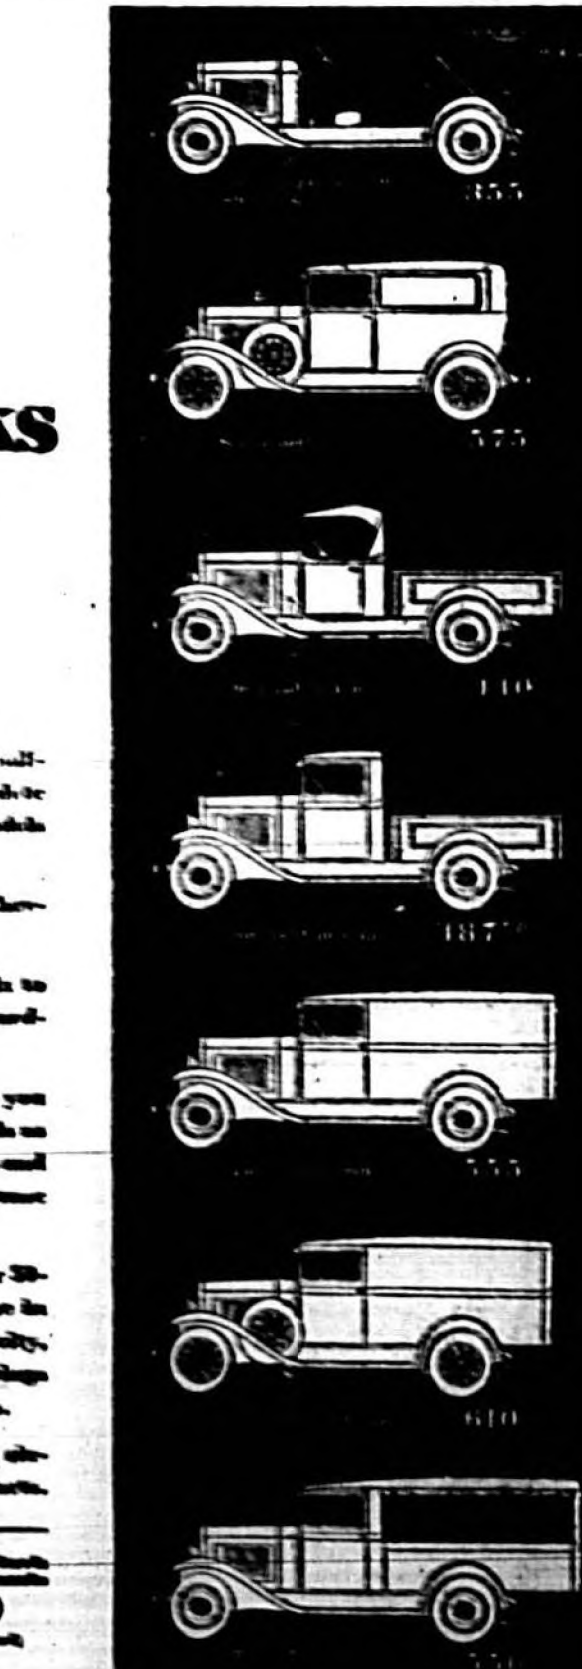

Last year, after buying food in the best producing sections, it cost us $35.51 a ton to get it to you—an expense which, of course, went into the price you paid.

But this year, by dint of hard work, we've succeeded in chipping the old expense block down to $32.65—a saving to customers of almost $3 an every ton of food we sell.

This is a saving to American housewives of about $300,000 every week of the year.

By keeping the difference between what the farmer receives for food and what you pay for it as small as possible, we can sell food of the highest quality at very low prices.

A Novel Experiment

Among that vast multitude of Florida citizens who have announced their candidacies for gubernatorial honors, is Thomas C. Hammond of Tampa, three times president of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards...

Mr. Hammond's platform, which we have before us, has for its keynote an excellent slogan, "Forward Florida," it is called. In these days of hard times, unemployment and pains in the neck, nothing could be more inductive to revivification than the sound of marching feet moving forward.

In accomplishing this worthy purpose, Mr. Hammond proposes to use the board system. He proposes to appoint a board of the best informed men on taxation in the state to study the tax situation and to make such recommendations as may be of some help in solving the tax problem.

He further proposes to appoint a board of five other men, best informed on real estate matters to study the real estate situation and to make such recommendations as might help some of us in lifting our mortgages.

He proposes to appoint a board of five of the best informed men in the state on the tourist business to study the wants of tourists and help make Florida the playground of the world.

Let's see, now, that makes eight boards of five members each, in addition to all the boards, commissions, bureaus and whatnots which we already have.

"Careful, son, of the cursed twelfth! Either one is a dangerous pet; Natural history preves it true— Women and elephants never forget."

These two amusing stanzas culled from the "Ballade of Unfortunate Manimals" in "Death and Taxes" give an idea of the lily and sparkle of Dorothy Parker's latest slim book of verse.

In the new volume, my favorite is the poem on the last birthday of Simon de L'Enclos, in which this woman, whose beauty defied the laws of time...

But in Coleman's Book Shop the other day, I renewed my acquaintance with Dorothy Parker's "Sunset Gun" and "Enough Hope" and to my mind "Death and Taxes" does a full measure up to the first two. There is nothing in the new volume that can touch "Godmother," the opening stanza in "Sunset Gun"...

Not long ago, a group of United States senators visited the great Okefenokee Swamp that stretches its four hundred thousand acres of wild un reclaimed land over Southern Georgia. The result of this senatorial outing is that the United States government is planning to take the swamp under federal protection as a game preserve for which it is so ideally suited.

The idea is a fine one but from a glance at the history of Okefenokee, it looks as if the old swamp would have gone right on being a haunt for wild animals which defied civilization whether the United States gave it protection or not. Okefenokee is no clinging vine, and the name given it by the Indians which means "trembling earth" helps to explain why it has been able to withstand the advances of man.

PALATKA NEWS

That the bond problem, now harassing many Florida counties and municipalities, will work out in its own salvation has already been demonstrated at Sanford and elsewhere in the late Vario and a mm nites, made to meet immediate obligations, have resorted to refinancing proceedings that have enabled them to "spread" their indebtedness over a greater number of years. In doing this, they have escaped the danger of repudiation and also the blighting effects of special tax levies.

That "bondholders are reasonable," as pointed out in an advertisement recently placed in this newspaper by the Palatka Taxpayers' and Consumers' League was convincingly proven in a news item of yesterday. The dispatch stated that the Western Municipal Association as organized had been formed for the express purpose of taking care of the bond situation as it applies to the smaller communities of this state.

Holdings of municipal and county bond are no more entitled to special consideration at this period of depression than are the holders of any other form of paper. We happen to know personally of a hotel in a nearby town, a palatial structure which not only has defaulted the interest on its bonds, but which has levied a special assessment against the stockholders for the purpose of meeting current taxes. There are hundreds,

In such a period of financial chaos a new class of bondholders is prepared to exercise the same patience and leniency as if being displayed by the owners of other types of securities. They realize this even better than do their distressed debtors. They are aware that any oppressive steps that would impede the progress of cities or counties would endanger not only the interest on their investment but the investment itself.

This is the one thing they are intelligently going against. For they realize that it is much better to extend time to solvent communities than to attempt to collect debts owed by the bankrupt.

Sowing And Reaping

As Ye ADVERTISE, so shall ye REAP— This business axiom is more true today than in any time of prosperity. Despite cries of lament from many sources, some business concerns are increasing their revenue while others stand by and wonder how. The answer can usually be found in the one and magic word, ADVERTISING.

A Rochester, New York coffee shop has increased its business 25 percent in the past 12 months and its owner says: "It was our newspaper advertising that did it. We have confined all our advertising to the newspapers and we have come to the conclusion that we simply cannot get along without using them. We are devoting 5 percent of our sales to newspaper advertising and consider it the best investment we can make."
