Longwood home invaded

LONGWOOD — Five men were arrested Sunday, in what Sheriff's deputies considered a home invasion and robbery case. Deputies were called to assist Longwood police in connection with a robbery at 135 Pineda St., Longwood.

According to deputies, five men, four said to be armed with various types of weapons, entered the home and tied up 16 persons who were at the residence. They reportedly removed an undetermined amount of money, jewelry and personnel effects, and fled.

Deputies stopped the get-away vehicle at Florence Avenue in Longwood a short time later.

Arrested were Quan Hung Truong, 30, with no local address, Binh Van Hguyen, 28, of Hartford, Conn., Viet Van Ho, 18, of Orlando, and Tran Van Le, of Shrimp Boat, La. The fifth person was not immediately identified.

All five were charged with armed robbery and false imprisonment, and were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Air fare wars heat up

NEW YORK — America West Airlines announced it will cut fares on some routes by about 30 percent for travelers who fly between Dec. 7 and Feb. 4.

American, United, Northwest and USAir said they would match the discounts in most markets where they compete with America West. Delta Air Lines said it was monitoring the fares and would remain competitive.

Sanford woman fights for life after dispute, stabbing

By VICKI DeBORNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Daniel Jerome Livingston, angered by his girlfriend's arrival home at 4 a.m. Monday, argued with her for about seven hours before ending the dispute with a kitchen knife, Seminole County Sheriff's Department public information officer, George Proechel, said. Livingston is jailed on attempted murder charges, Proechel said.

His girlfriend, Marilyn Freeman, with whom he shared a home at 2451 Church St., Sanford, is fighting for her life at Florida Hospital-South in Orlando.

Right now, he's in the jail and charged with attempted murder. He will be charged with murder if she dies.

-George Proechel

If she does not survive the attack, Proechel said, Livingston will be charged with murder. "Right now, he's in the jail and charged with attempted murder," Proechel said. "He will be charged with murder if she dies."

Livingston, 41, is being held without bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

According to Proechel, Livingston believed that Freeman was seeing someone else and that the argument "had been brewing" for quite some time.

He did not know if there had been previous incidents which required law enforcement intervention.

Yesterday afternoon, armed with a large kitchen knife, Livingston stabbed Freeman "several times" in the face, in the chest, in the stomach and in both arms, Proechel said.

Vacant industrial site wins tenants

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — A residential care facility for teens will take over the vacant former site of Cardinal Industries in Sanford.

A Teen Challenge community will be developed off S. Sanford Avenue, winning approval Monday night from the Sanford City Commission.

The property, which consists of approximately five acres, was originally developed as a modular office complex by Cardinal Industries. Teen Challenge of Florida, Inc., plans to use the site as a residential care facility that will house up to 100 persons and employ approximately 10 live-in staff members.

Several requests against the proposal were voiced last night, in addition to the commissioners receiving a number of communications against the proposal.

Steven Kracht of Kemco, located near the property at 3708 S. Sanford Ave., outlined some of their concerns in a letter. They included a worry about security for their business, traffic problems, and the fact that adding a residential area might deter other businesses.

Brian Ellis, representing Keyes Realtors also objected. "They plan to develop the industrial park bordering the property on the west," he said. Ellis supported a letter written to the commission by Frank Stanton Smith.

Smith had recommended, "We would appreciate your voting for the integrity of the master plan and not allow into the area an institution which can not only be a retardant to

Many community events planned for Thanksgiving

By KELLEY MITCHELL
Herald Staff Writer

There is no celebration like it in the world. It is not a celebration of any great man's birthday, of any great battle nor church ritual. Thanksgiving is a day of thankful remembrance that God has not failed in providing another harvest for man's needs, according to Dr. Bob Parker, pastor of First Baptist Church Markham Woods.

Families and friends will gather together on Thursday to celebrate the beginning of the holiday season and to give thanks for their many blessings past, present and future.

The first Thanksgiving Proclamation, signed by George Washington in 1789, read: "...that we all unite in rendering unto Him (God) our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country, and for all the great and various favors which He has been pleased to confer upon us."

The communities of Sanford and Lake Mary, as a whole, are invited to take part in a number of worship services and community activities prior to and the day of the holiday.

Loitering concern of residents, businesses

Pool hall to remain open as cops patrol

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Loitering problems appear to be reduced near at least two businesses on Sanford Avenue. Business owners and citizens however, are still concerned about the problem.

The Sanford City Commission took no action last night on a request from William K. Stokes to close Sonny's Pool Hall, at 5th and Sanford Ave. He had submitted a written complaint that the pool hall had "...brought an unsavory element to our neighborhood."

Allen Mitchell, responding for the Mitchell family, owners of the Stokes Fish Market, a neighboring business, suggested a better remedy would be better enforcement of the law.

The commission did not believe action was necessary at this time because of a report submitted by Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett. He had reported that Mitchell had or will follow a list of suggestions such as restricting access through his back door, posting no trespassing signs, and cooperating with police in requesting loiterers to leave the premises.

During last night's meeting, Harriett commented, "We have done another check on the area, and I would say that as of today, the problems still seem to be improving, at least around those two businesses."

City Manager Bill Simmons explained the difficulties in dealing with loiterers. "The intent of the city's anti loitering law is to eliminate drug users and crime," he said. "but a person just standing near a building may not fall into that category, and to arrest someone like that would be a violation of their human rights."

Sandra Gaines, a business owner in the area, told the commissioners that even with a reduction of problems at the two businesses, loitering was still a major problem, not just near those two stores, but in the entire area.

Commissioner Bob Thomas recommended the city explain the problem to the members of the state legislature, and ask if they can come up with any suggestions."

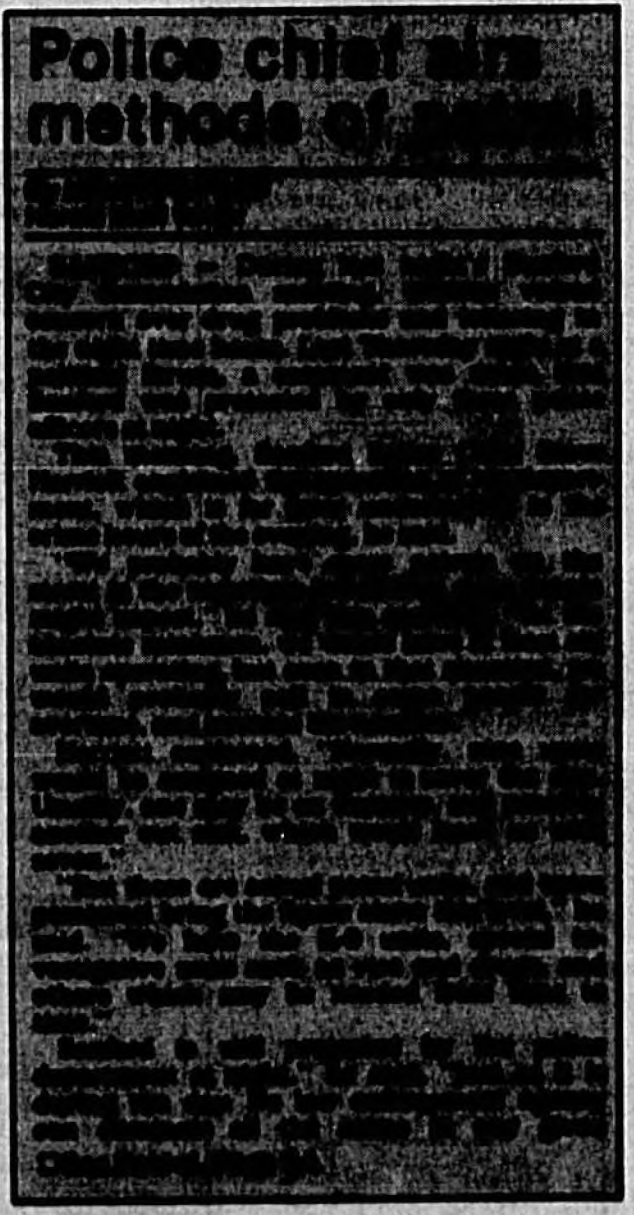

Following the brief discussion, Mayor Bettye Smith suggested that no action be taken for the time being, pending a continuing check of the area by the police. The members of the commission agreed to the move.

During public participation later in last night's meeting, Sanford resident Ida Hopkins addressed the commission. "I want to know what can be done to help get rid of these people in the Georgetown area," she asked. "I see them around 8th and Pine, selling their drugs, and people driving up to make their buys. They bring traffic, noise and loitering into the area."

She continued, "You can see them out there all the time. People driving up to buy their drugs, and women walking the streets. When the police come," she said, "they run, but as soon as the police are gone, they're back out there again."

Harriett responded, "I'm almost finished working on getting the community based law enforcement officers into operation. We are working on it, and will get this going as soon as possible."

"Once we get officers assigned to specific areas on a full time basis," he added, "I believe we can do a great deal toward getting this problem resolved."

Gay sailor's mom proud Florida woman stands behind son on Navy ban

VENO BEACH — When a federal judge this month issued a landmark decision making Navy Petty Officer Keith Meinhold the first openly gay member of the military to be returned to active duty, Maggie Green said she was "as happy and as proud as you could be for a son."

When Meinhold first told his mother that he planned to go to federal court to fight being discharged because he's gay, she worried about reprisals against her son. "At first I was like any mother," Green said in an interview. "The worst thing I worried about was the repercussions that might come against him."

Residents around here remember

Meinhold as a shy, lanky kid who grew up near Stuart, dropped out of high school in the 11th grade and joined the Navy.

Today, Meinhold is at the center of the national debate on gays and lesbians in the military, coming in the wake of President-elect Bill Clinton's promise to lift the ban against them.

Meinhold worries his quest may be viewed as just an attack on the Navy, the worst may be yet to come.

"I'm doing it for other people who've suffered in the past and for people who are suffering today," Meinhold said.

Meinhold's mother says his orientation is not what matters.

"To me, it comes down to conduct"

Green told The Miami Herald for a Monday story. "If Keith had bad conduct, he deserves to be put out of the service. But don't do it just because of his orientation. Discrimination is discrimination, and it is just not right."

Meinhold left Florida's Treasure Coast nearly 14 years ago, but he returns every year, usually at Christmas, and keeps in touch both with his mother, who is an interior designer, and his father, Volker Meinhold, an auto agency owner who declined to be interviewed about his son. His parents were divorced just as Meinhold was entering his teens. Meinhold, a native of New Jersey, moved to Stuart with his family when he was 6.

Girl dies on school bus

CORAL GABLES — A middle school student was killed Monday after her head struck a concrete pole as she leaned out a bus window to talk to a friend, authorities said.

Chaya B. Thrasybule, 13, died at Miami Children's Hospital after being treated in the emergency room for more than an hour for massive head injuries, said hospital spokesman Omar Montoya.

The school bus was apparently pulling away from the curb at G.W. Carver Middle School when the teen-ager's head "got wedged between the pole and the bus itself," said Miami police officer Rob Matthews.

The 4:30 p.m. accident occurred after she apparently ran to the back of the bus to talk to a friend standing outside, Montoya said.

The driver, whose name was withheld, had not been interviewed yet because she was still in shock, said Matthews.

The police report, added Matthews, would be sent to the state attorney's office to determine whether any charges would be pursued against the driver.

Broken pump sends sewage oozing

MIAMI — A broken pump sent four million gallons of raw sewage oozing into the Miami River over the weekend, prompting health officials to warn people away from fishing and swimming in some areas.

Some tests of Biscayne Bay water completed Monday indicated there was still sufficient cause to avoid swimming and fishing in the south portion of the bay and near the mouth of the river.

Heavy rains have played havoc with the sewage system this week, causing sewer cells to overflow with water and overflow.

"The sewage pump facility is under repair, and the problems caused by rainfall this past week," said Bob Reedy, assistant director of operations for the Miami-Dade Water and Sewer Department. "With this additional contribution, the facility has to handle a lot more water."

Water Pollution Control Administrator for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, said workers will be monitoring sewer levels in Biscayne Bay this week.

"We've mentioned the recommendation that people refrain from water recreational areas at the beaches and at Biscayne Bay," Livingston said Monday, noting that that state would be responsible for cleanup efforts.

Determined to fix the waste and movement of the tide, it could take a few days to get the well to reach the Rehabilitation Center, and a few days for contractors, and workers to get the well fixed.

Organizer expects to plead guilty

MIAMI — A federal prosecutor who suspended investigation out of concern for protection of Cuban protesting anti-communist groups will plead guilty to the obstruction, federal prosecutors said.

"The government is continuing," Assistant U.S. Attorney Guy Lewis said Monday. "We know that other persons are involved, and if we find further evidence, we will seek further prosecution."

The case involved an arrangement operated by Plaintiff in 1980 for sale to Cuba of Cuban and Yugoslavian. The seizure of the proceeds resulted in international attention and led to a federal indictment against Matthew J. Beach in February 1980.

Lewis said he would be pleading guilty to the obstruction of justice. He was charged with obstructing justice by influencing a grand jury to return a verdict.

Teddy Bear Day at zoo

By Vicki Buchanan
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The crowd was bear-ly noticed outside the zoo on Sunday for the annual Teddy Bear Day at the Central Florida Zoo. It was an appreciative and respectful crowd.

According to zoo officials more than 100 bears, many of them well-loved that they were being hugged, ears and noses touched, and brought their attention to the event.

The humans, as well as the bears, ranged in age from the very young to the young at heart.

HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital sent a team of volunteers from their doctor and nursing corps to check over the bears and issue health certificates.

Minor surgery was done on those who needed seams stitched up or broken eyes cleaned.

In addition, there were some opportunities to learn about bears, both the large ones found in nature and the Ursus Domesticus more commonly found under the covers in a warm bed.

Young bear owners had the chance to have their faces painted with bear features and to create hand puppets out of paper lunch bags.

"It was a great day," said Andrea Farmer, marketing coordinator for the zoo.

According to Farmer, bears and people alike complimented the zoo on the events of the day and were glad that Teddy Bear Day will continue to be an annual event.

Mystery ship Search on for vessel that sailed through hurricane

By Associated Press

MIAMI — A mysterious ship that sailed through Hurricane Andrew's eye last week is being sought by federal investigators. They said Monday.

The ship — which could have valuable information about the hurricane — was tracked steaming south-to-north along the coast until winds knocked out the radar system.

"If the ship had totally disappeared by wind from the eye of the hurricane," said Sam Houston of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration,

"they would be going north out of the eye, and we're sure it happened. It's the a detective investigation."

The ship, which was 400 to 500 feet long, was spotted by a freighter and Houston. It was spotted off Key Largo about 10:30 p.m. and at about 2:15 a.m. on Aug. 24, the vessel was in the center of the eye just off Homestead.

The almost undetectable trace ended north of Andrew at 4:30 a.m. when the storm blew out Miami radar. The ship's track was discovered only by radar from NOAA's Hurricane Research Division reviewed radar images of the storm.

Identical twins used in study of arthritis

GAINESVILLE (AP) — A University of Florida researcher is studying identical twins, hoping to find out what causes rheumatoid arthritis.

The project is specific: one twin must have arthritis, the other must be arthritis-free, said Dr. Ralph Williams Jr. of UF's College of Medicine.

"The idea is that if one of them has the disease and the other doesn't and this difference persists for a long time, maybe we could find a clue to exactly what causes the disease," he said.

The study includes 10 sets of twins ranging in age from seven to 60. Others wanting to volunteer may make arrangements in the United States.

Because the twins' genetic makeup is exactly the same, except for the mutation, the basic components of their blood should be exactly the same.

To ensure the volunteer subjects are really identical, scientists perform DNA tests, said Williams, who is chief of clinical immunology, rheumatology and allergy. DNA fingerprinting is considered the ultimate assessment of an individual's hereditary make-up.

The researchers will analyze blood samples in an effort to isolate the difference in their immune systems that may have caused the rheumatoid arthritis.

Volunteers visit their hometown physician to have blood samples taken, then send the samples to Williams.

The samples from both twins are studied in an attempt to identify differences between the white blood cells and DNA of the affected twin and the unaffected twin. These differences are what Williams hopes may offer clues to the cause of arthritis.

AAA lifts travel warning on I-295

By NE FLORES Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE — The Florida National Guard, state Highway Patrol and other state and local authorities will continue a heavy patrol of Interstate 295 throughout the Thanksgiving holiday weekend, authorities said.

Besides patrols led by some 150 National Guardsmen using helicopters, Humvees and infrared night-vision equipment, authorities have installed additional lighting and fencing on and around overpasses for the beltway around Jacksonville.

On Monday, however, the American Automobile Association lifted its travel warning and police reported 20 arrests and no recent flare-ups in the nine-month series of shootings and rock-throwing incidents that have plagued the busy interstate.

"AAA's decision to lift the alert was made after a review of highway security measures," said Tom Crosby, a spokesman for the national travel club. "The planned presence of additional patrols through Thanksgiving weekend, the construction of barriers on highway overpasses and a 15-day period of calm since the last reported incident" resulted in the decision to end the travel warning it issued Nov. 4.

Crosby joined city officials at a news conference Monday by Jacksonville Sheriff Jim McMillan.

"We feel confident that the arrests of these individuals at this time has significantly reduced the probability of reoccurrence," McMillan said.

Police over the last two weeks had charged six youths in sniper shootings or rock-throwing, and McMillan announced Monday 14 more arrests in the last few days of people on charges "indirectly related" to the incidents. He said most of those arrested are connected to a Jacksonville area gang called English Estates Posee.

The youngest of those arrested was 14, the oldest 26. Most are in their late teens.

The charges included armed robbery, kidnapping, car theft and burglaries, he said.

"It's a good day for Jacksonville," Mayor

Ed Austin said. "We've taken some hits nationally, but we don't complain about it."

He said he couldn't estimate how much the I-295 sniper fears have cost the city. The Chamber of Commerce, Austin and other city leaders last week wrote AAA urging that it lift the travel alert.

More than 30 sniper and rock-throwing incidents since mid-February had led to the warning. A man was killed in a crash after his car was hit by concrete, and among several injured was a woman shot in the head.

The 20-mile beltway normally carries 80,000 vehicles a day and is heavily used by northerners entering Florida. AAA had routed travelers on Interstate 95 directly through often-congested downtown Jacksonville.

There had been earlier speculation that the incidents were part of a youth gang initiation, but McMillan said no motives had yet been determined.

"We haven't got the motive of why," he said. "Maybe it was in some way loose gang activity."

Safe-sex song yanked

By Associated Press

PORT ST. LUCIE — A locally-produced rock song that encourages safe sex was pulled from 15 record stores after a Jensen Beach woman who found it obscene complained to retailers, the songwriter said.

Karen Hayslip, who heard part of the song, called "Wrap The Raecal," at the Jensen Beach Pineapple Festival, said she was as much offended by a flier promoting it as by the song itself. She wrote to Treasure Coast stores listed on the flier to tell them so.

The song was pulled because of the letter, singer-songwriter Armand Della-Volpe of the group The Symptoms told the Palm Beach Post for today's edition. He said he learned about the move last week from his distributor, who was told to remove it from his racks because of controversy set off by Hayslip's letter.

Della-Volpe said he wrote the song because he was concerned about safe sex and thought a lighthearted song would be educational. Except for Hayslip's letter, the response has been favorable, he said.

About 500 copies of the song have been distributed.

Hayslip said Monday she didn't know her letter had had such an impact. She said she was mainly concerned that the promotional flier was being handed out by a child and distributed during a family event.

Proceeds from sales of "Wrap The Raecal" are intended for the Treasure Coast Community AIDS Network, and the organization is supporting The Symptoms.

No mud should sully campaigns

It's been approximately a week since Sanford political candidates gathered for a face-off forum at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. Campaigns have been calm since then and we hope they will continue to be.

The people of Sanford should make their selections based on what the candidate stands for, personal involvement in the community, and what is proposed for the future that can recognizably be accomplished.

Voters should select the best of the candidates, not the candidates who accuse their opponents of deeds that cannot be proven beyond a doubt.

Sanford City Commissioners and the Mayor serve four year terms. The next four years will be critical in the city's future, possibly even more so than the previous four years.

Candidate selection is a serious business. It should not be based on whether someone is a nice person, friendly, or well groomed. It must be centered on what that person might be able to do for the benefit of the people of the specific district, as well as the entire city.

Possibly of greatest importance, does a candidate have a plan for the future, or only suggestions that plans need to be worked out.

We applaud each of the candidates seeking election in the City of Sanford for progressive campaigning. Political pamphlets are being distributed, candidates are making themselves available for one-on-one discussions, and no mudslinging has been reported recently.

The campaigns for District 1 commissioner and mayor are moving ahead at a pace in keeping with the tradition of honest politics.

The Sanford city election will be held on Dec. 6. We urge it to be a positive election with the best candidates selected to lead the city for the next four years.

Economic awakening

As the nation's economy begins to stretch and wake up from the recessionary nap it's been in for the past three or four years, it's encouraging to know, fiscally speaking, Seminole County is already wide awake.

A University of Central Florida study released last week shows the county's unemployment rate continues to trickle downward at the fastest rate in Central Florida. That's good news for the more than 13,000 people here still out of work. Seminole County now has the lowest unemployment rate in the three-county Central Florida area. Boast about that.

During the past 12 months, there was more housing construction underway throughout most of the county than the year before. More business construction was underway, too. That may be better news. While housing construction still drives the local economy, new or expanded businesses results in more permanent jobs.

Even our leading employers are limbering up. Siemens Stromberg-Carlson in Lake Mary recently announced two new products. One telephone network system will improve electronic data and voice communications. The company pledges another system will reduce costs for the insurance industry. Innovation, these days, is vital not only for growth but for viability.

While it's reassuring to consider the improving fiscal shape of things here, let's be sure we're not only wide awake but our eyes are wide open to the work yet to be done to strengthen the county's economy.

An interim report released by the county's Economic Development Committee stated 70 percent of those jobs were dependent on the paycheck of people living here. On the surface of it, that's not so bad. At least they have jobs, right?

But the people who comprise most of that 70 percent aren't highly-paid doctors and lawyers or other skilled professionals. Most of those folks represent the lower-paid service-related industries. Odds are, these folks won't be buying one of those new homes built last year. They're probably happy to have an affordable apartment, if they have one.

To keep Seminole County's economic picture awake and healthy, our community leaders need to strengthen their resolve to attract the kind of permanent jobs producing paychecks large enough to keep the 70 percent of the workforce busy. That resolve may call for such incentives as fee waivers or even a relaxed tax burden. But those incentives should not be offered without a strong string attached: Produce jobs or pay us back.

If done thoughtfully, our fiscal future will remain healthy even when nap time comes again.

Bush should pardon Weinberger

George Bush wishes an untroubled transition from public to private life — to leave office, in his words, "with style." But there remains one thorny matter for the president to act upon before he moves on: He should offer a pardon to former Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

The honorable Mr. Weinberger was re-indicted by Iran-Contra special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh. The 75-year-old Reagan Cabinet official is accused not of orchestrating the arms-for-hostages deal six years ago, but of being an unwilling party to Walsh's grand inquisition.

Specifically, Weinberger is charged with concealing 1,700 pages of his personal records from congressional and criminal investigators (even though the papers had been turned over to the Library of Congress years earlier and were readily available to investigators and the general public alike). He now faces five felony counts, each of which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $250,000.

The timing of the latest Weinberger indictment, on the eve of Election Day, revealed its political calculation. Most dastardly was that, of the hundreds of pages of the former defense secretary's notes that prosecutors could have used in their highly publicized indictment, they deliberately chose the one that they thought would be most embarrassing to the president.

Very simply, Weinberger is the victim of a witch hunt. Earlier this year, Walsh's team tried to get Weinberger to implicate both Presidents Reagan and Bush in Iran-Contra in exchange for a misdemeanor plea. Weinberger said no dice. So Walsh promptly slapped him with five felony charges.

Walsh, desperately needs a conviction of someone, anyone, to justify the nearly six years and $40 million he has spent investigating Iran-Contra. He thought he had bagged Oliver North and John Poindexter, but both their convictions were overturned because the special prosecutor used their immunized congressional testimony against them in brazen violation of their Fifth Amendment rights.

So now, Weinberger finds himself in the dock. Walsh's designated fall guy for Iran-Contra. The absurdity of this is that among all the president's men who discussed the ill-conceived arms-for-hostages plan, no one was more adamantly opposed than Reagan's defense secretary. Even Walsh acknowledges that fact.

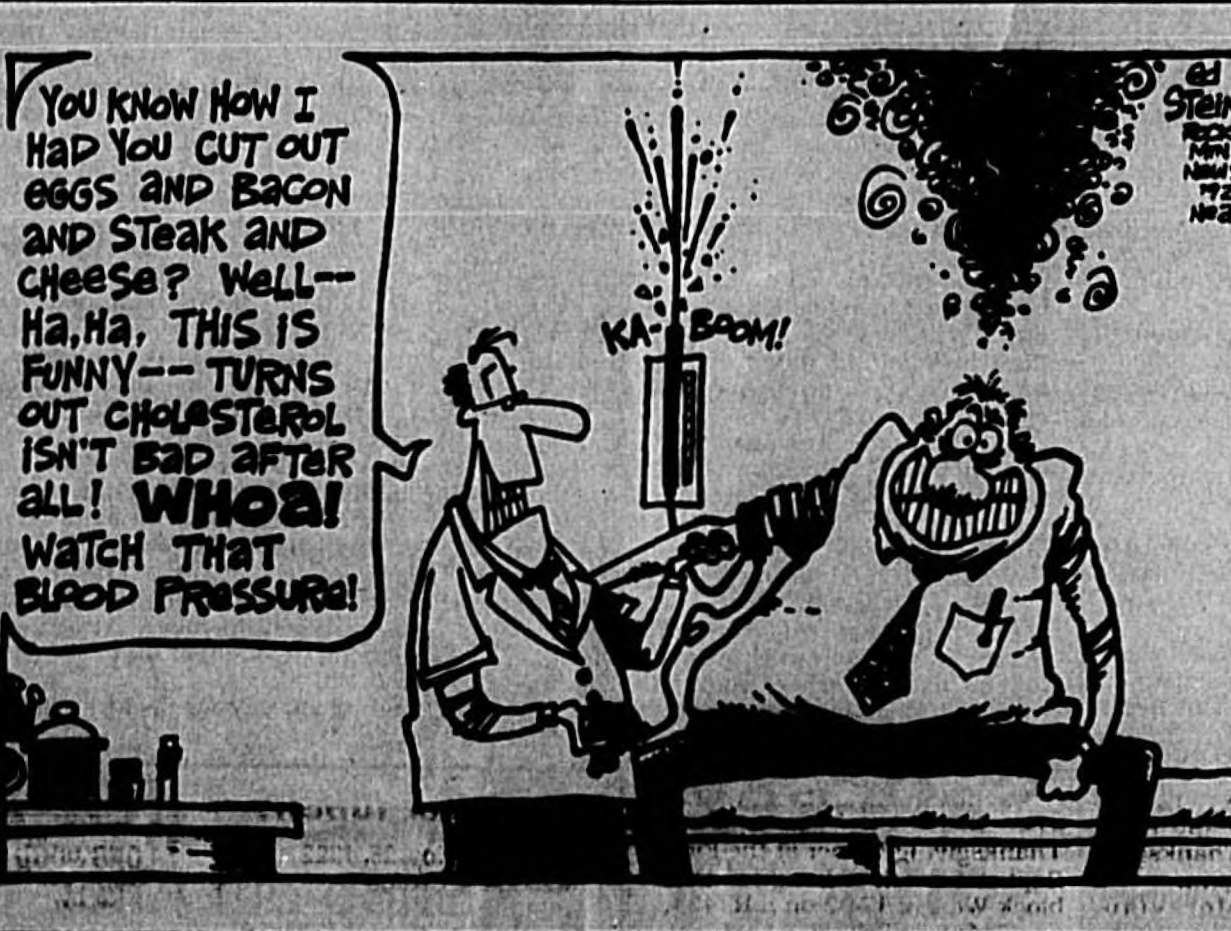

George Bush should put an end to Weinberger's political persecution. The man faithfully served his country. As a Cabinet official, he observed the highest ethical code. That his upstanding reputation has been publicly impugned by the special prosecutor is bad enough. That he should be made to stand trial is nothing less than a travesty.

Although Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and several other leading Republicans have urged the president to pardon Weinberger before his show trial begins Jan. 5, many of the squishy advisers surrounding Bush (the same smart camp that has been providing him sage counsel from the time of his disastrous budget deal with the Democrats to his recent disastrous re-election defeat) have warned the president against doing so.

There remains one thorny matter for the president to act upon before he moves on.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Thank you for not bothering me

As I swung out of the post office parking lot, the message "Fasten Your Seat Belt" glared down at me from a sign. It was unnecessary. Shackled as I was by a harness belt, straining over my down-filled coat so that I could hardly shift, it would have been hard to forget I had already fastened mine.

The U.S. Postal Service had obviously assumed I was one of those lazy spotters of society who did not fasten my seat belt, and taken up the moral cudgel to thump me to my senses. I wished I could stop and write them a sign of my own: "Stay Open On Veterans Day, Like the Rest of Us Non-Government Working Stiffs." But I didn't. There's enough righteous telling of each other what to do in this country as it is.

Everywhere you turn, there's another person or group taking it upon themselves to keep the rest of us in line. "Thank You For Not Smoking," "Attend the Church or Synagogue of Your Choice," "Say No to Drugs," "Vote."

"Vote." Now there's one I've heard enough times in the last few weeks to last a lifetime. Around election time, folks who normally believe it's a free country and we all have the right to determine our own activities, become arbiters of moral propriety. Hollywood stars, elected officials, The League of Women Voters, television networks and even schoolchildren dragged out of classes by zealous network affiliates and stuck awkwardly in front of cue cards preach to us: "Vote."

On Election Day, the 10th person to ask me if I'd voted tripped my trigger. I was sitting in front of a computer terminal, trying to hammer out a piece of work due an hour before. But I punched the "Save" button, swiveled in my chair and looked her right in her lowered brow and asked calmly but curiously, "Why did you ask me that?"

Her brow reverted to international sign language meaning "What did I do?" and her voice softened to the decibel level of a fourth-grader caught turning in someone else's work: "I, uh, well, uh, I just think everyone ought to vote."

"I agree," I told her. "But why did you ask me that?"

"Well, uh, because I think it's a great privilege."

"I couldn't agree more. But why did you ask me that?"

She turned away from me like a dog scolded for it knew not what.

But she was only doing what we have taught in this culture, that when we have generally decided that something is or is not in our best interests, we have the right to peck away at others until they see the light. And if a national not-for-profit organization is formed to combat a practice, and acquires a huge staff that has to be paid every Friday, wholesale badgering becomes not only sanctioned but a holy quest.

This issue was brought home to me more clearly recently when I interviewed a local smokers' rights group. I didn't get the feeling in any way that these people believed they had the right to puff away in others' faces, or that they thought smoking was a great thing to do. It was more as if they were just weary of being picked on for their habit, while the rest of us have plenty of our own. "What's next?" one of the men asked me. "A national crusade against everyone who doesn't watch his fat and cholesterol intake, anyone who doesn't exercise regularly or comes home and drinks a few beers after work? This has become a witch hunt."

There's another person or group taking it upon themselves to keep the rest of us in line.

Farmers want to kick chemicals

A major shift away from chemical dependence in U.S. farming is being stymied by the structure of government agricultural subsidies. Huge reductions in the use of chemical fertilizers, herbicides and insecticides to grow the food we eat confront a barrier of entrenched policy encouraging farmers to rely on those chemicals.

The situation is all the more frustrating because American farmers increasingly want to kick the chemical habit and are proving they can do it at a profit. Nine out of 10 Iowa farmers, in one recent survey, said they'd prefer to cut the amount of chemicals they currently apply to their crops and land. A band of innovators calling themselves the Practical Farmers of Iowa test ways to reduce chemical use. They employ planting and tillage techniques that allow them to get rid of weeds by mechanical hoeing instead of repeated sprayings of herbicides.

Last year their work yielded corn and soybeans at a savings of nearly $7 per acre over conventional herbicide-dependent methods. A Department of Agriculture study conducted a few years ago among 3,800 farmers found that those who minimized chemical inputs had net returns $84 million above those who didn't.

"Many of the people that are practicing sustainable agriculture have been able to reduce their herbicide inputs by 90 percent by going to alternative weed-control procedures," says George Bird, director of the USDA's Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education program. Sustainable agriculture is the term increasingly used to depict farming that reduces the use of chemicals, protects the soil and provides for crop yields into the indefinite future. "I think most of the agricultural community is now beginning to stop and think, 'Is what I am doing the right thing?'" in terms of heavy use of chemicals, Bird says. The question is vital. While U.S. farm use of chemicals peaked in 1983, the volume remains heavy. Currently about 90 million tons of chemical fertilizers and 430 million pounds of herbicides and insecticides are used in American agriculture each year.

Phosphorus fertilizer runoff from Pennsylvania farms is one of the principle causes of severe damage to marine life in the Chesapeake Bay. The Environmental Protection Agency has found traces of agricultural pesticides, including the possible carcinogen atrazine, in the groundwater in 26 states. Tests of Iowa water wells showed that 18 percent of them contained some level of contamination from nitrate fertilizers.

Sustainable agriculture could begin reversing this trend. Above all else, sustainable agriculture substitutes heavy doses of common sense for investments in artificial inputs. A couple of examples help tell the story. Repeated plantings of a single crop breeds for pests that attack that crop. To counter that, sustainable agriculture calls for frequent crop rotation. It also takes advantage of diversifying crops within fields to breed for natural predators to crop pests. Unlike organic farming, it seeks to minimize, not necessarily to eliminate, the use of chemicals.

The problem is our current farm support program could not be better built to discourage widespread adoption of sustainable agriculture. The entire program ties subsidy benefits to repeated plantings of single crops, what is termed monoculture farming. The farmer who shifts to crop rotation and diversification sacrifices the flow of benefits. And they are considerable. Last year the subsidy program paid out some $7.4 billion, nearly 25 percent of total U.S. farm receipts, on well over 200 million acres of farmland. This system has been pieced together over the last 40 years. It now puts farmers in the impossible bind of only being able to move away from chemical dependence at the immediate risk of cutting their income. It's a system ripe for reform.

This past summer an array of farm experts surveyed the obstacles to sustainable agriculture. They concluded that "there is wide agreement among agricultural observers, both within and outside government, and farmers themselves that the farm-commodity programs present barriers to the adoption of alternative agricultural techniques."

How to reform the system is a matter of debate. One plan would phase out the subsidies altogether. Another would redesign the program to foster sustainable agriculture and some steps have already been taken in this direction. A third would simply drop the link between benefits and monoculture farming.

A great deal is at stake, both for a stable U.S. farm economy and for making the transition away from chemically dependent agriculture. The overriding objective now should be to find the most responsible way to break down the barriers to allowing the full potential of sustainable agriculture to flourish.

I think most of the agricultural community is beginning to stop and think.

AMA says doctors should ask elderly patients about abuse

By MALCOLM WITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Doctors should routinely ask elderly patients if they are being abused or neglected, and most physicians will find some who are, the American Medical Association says.

Elder mistreatment occurs in men and women of all racial, ethnic and socioeconomic groups, affecting perhaps 2 million Americans older than 60 every year, the AMA said.

The organization issued guidelines Monday for diagnosing and treating elder abuse and neglect.

The document says elderly patients should be interviewed and given a thorough physical examination away from their caregivers or any suspected abusers. It recommends such questions as:

- Has anyone at home ever hurt you?
- Has anyone ever scolded or threatened you?
- Have you ever signed any documents that you didn't understand?
- Are you alone a lot?
- Are you afraid of anyone at home?

Doctors should ask how and when any mistreatment occurs, who does it and how the patient feels about it and copes with it, the AMA said. If a doctor suspects abuse from the interview or the physical exam, the suspicions should be reported to authorities, the guidelines say.

If the patient appears in immediate danger, the doctor should also consider putting him in a hospital or getting a court order for protection, the guidelines say.

The AMA also said doctors can play a critical role in identifying and preventing abuse in nursing homes and other institutions. Residents have the right to be free of physical restraints or mind-altering drugs given for discipline by convenience, the guidelines say.

The AMA document was endorsed by the American Geriatrics Society, the American Association of Retired Persons and the federal Administration on Aging.

The guidelines are part of an AMA campaign against family violence. Last June, the AMA released similar physician guidelines on domestic violence and child abuse.

This is where the officers will be assigned a specific area of Sanford, and operate only there, getting to know the people and their problems, and knowing more about what's going on."

Stabbing

The incident took place inside the couple's home.

Hospital officials could not say how many wounds Freeman had suffered.

"She is in our critical care unit and they are keeping a close eye on her condition," Renee Kopkowski, a spokesman for the hospital said.

Proechel said that after the stabbing, Freeman managed to stagger out of the house and crawl across the street to 2450 Church St. where she collapsed in the kitchen.

The residents at that home called 9-1-1 to summon help.

When sheriff's deputies arrived on the scene, Proechel said, Livingston was sitting on his front porch where he surrendered without incident.

Freeman, meanwhile, was taken by ambulance first to HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital and then, because of the severity of the injuries, transferred to the trauma unit at Florida Hospital South. Proechel said.

She was listed in critical and stable condition there this morning.

Steve Palmer, representing the owner of the property immediately south of the area said, "This is industrial property, an area for industrial business. The land proposed for Teen Challenge would effect ours as well as other business. I would oppose the change in zoning."

Speaking in favor of the plan was Jerry Nance, executive director of Teen Challenge. "We were founded in 1958," he said. "We have 137 centers in the U.S. and 165 others elsewhere around the world. Our goal is to evangelize people with problems. This is a Christian school and people come to us on their own."

He continued, "We are not a homeless ministry, nor do we offer food that would bring in vagrants."

Sharon Quick, a real estate agent from Orlando who is attempting to sell some of the nearby property told the commission, "I have taken at least two prospective clients out there, and they said they would be happy with the idea, and it would also bring teen workers close to their business."

During commission discussion, Commissioner A.A. McClanahan said, "This is the first time I have seen a request for less intense use to have this much opposition, but I fail to see how this would effect other areas."

He continued, "We have an empty industrial complex, and this is our opportunity to put something positive into it. I can't see the negative effect it would have."

Commissioner Bob Thomas moved to have the director of Planning and Development go forward with the change, and recommend adoption to the City Manager.

"I was reluctant to go along with this change," said Commissioner Whitey Eckstein, "but after listening to Mr. McClanahan, I've changed my mind. Rather than doing what might appear best for the city, this is doing what is best for the kids, and I would support it."

The motion to approve the rezoning and permitted use was passed unanimously by the Commission.

Nance did not immediately reveal when work might be started on the complex. He had earlier indicated that the facility would be moved to the Sanford area from its present location in Winter Haven, and provide a number of jobs for local residents when fully operative.

Big Oil doesn't mince words about Clinton administration

By M. JOSEPH HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Charles DiBona, who represents Big Oil in Washington, didn't mince words when assessing a Bill Clinton White House.

It "will mean more, and worse, trouble," the president of the American Petroleum Institute told oil company executives recently. "Once again we are confronted by a leadership that seeks to wean the nation away from oil."

While Clinton was endorsed during his campaign by more than 100 executives, mostly independent producers, his views on how America should meet its future energy needs are not expected to bring smiles to the boardrooms of the likes of Exxon, Mobil and Shell.

Clinton has made clear that he favors:

- Strong programs to promote energy conservation and development of new technology that cuts energy demand.
 - Continued restrictions on new domestic oil and gas drilling in areas where there are no current drilling activities, including off most of the U.S. coastline and in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska.
 - Emphasis on renewable energy sources such as solar and wind power, including additional research money and tax incentives to make these industries competitive.
 - A speedup in developing cars and trucks that run on fuels other than gasoline, breaking the oil industry's monopoly on transportation fuels.
- "I think it's clear we're going to get a reversal of priorities," says Joseph Romm, an energy expert at the Rocky Mountain Institute who recently co-authored a study on the need for stronger energy efficiency programs.
- Clinton's choice of Al Gore as vice president has raised special fears among oil company executives. Gore strongly favors directing the nation's energy mix away from fossil fuels as a way to combat global warming and has suggested a good way to do it is through a so-called carbon tax.

Burning coal and oil produces carbon dioxide, the major contributor to possible global warming, and Gore has been in the forefront in arguing that the United States should establish a clear timetable for cutting greenhouse emissions.

But it is not yet clear how broadly Gore's strong, often controversial views on energy policy will influence Clinton. One close associate is Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty, a Clinton friend since childhood and now a member of his transition board. McLarty, who heads Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co., is among a number of business executives Clinton goes to for advice.

A week before the election, Clinton met privately with more than 100 oilmen in Houston, hoping to reassure them he was not out to destroy their industry. "George Bush and them were going around painting Clinton with this 'Ozone Man' thing," recalls Larry Strahan, one of the industry executives at the Houston meeting, referring to a label Bush tacked onto Gore during the campaign.

But Strahan, president of Diversified Oil Fields Services Inc. and a strong Clinton supporter, said the audience of mostly independent oil and gas producers — as opposed to the big multinational oil giants — was quickly put at ease.

"All of a sudden you saw a very relaxed mood come over the crowd," he said.

At the occasion, which was not open to the public, Clinton assured the oil executives that he would not push for a carbon tax as a means of curbing the use of fossil fuels, according to executives who were present.

Clinton also said he opposed efforts to regulate oil field waste products as a toxic waste, as environmentalists have been urging. He praised natural gas as key to the country's energy future — words welcomed in an audience that included the chief executives of a number of major natural gas producers.

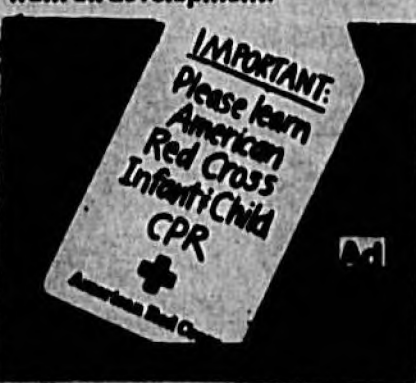

But there is little Clinton has said that would give comfort to the giant multinational oil conglomerates.

Clinton is expected to continue bans on offshore oil and gas drilling along most of the U.S. coastline outside of the Gulf of Mexico because of environmental concerns.

While President Bush has imposed similar bans, oil industry lobbyists have been pushing a second Bush administration might reverse itself, allowing drilling in at least some of the offshore lease areas that now are closed to development.

No issue has had higher priority for the major oil companies than trying to get approval to drill along the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in northern Alaska.

For four years, the Bush administration fought to open the refuge to oil developers but was thwarted by Congress. Clinton not only opposes drilling in the refuge, but has said he would like to see it declared a wilderness area, forever protecting it from oil development.

All-night rave parties pop up across country

By DANA KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Shortly after midnight in a warehouse on the West Side of Manhattan, teenagers wearing backpacks and stocking caps slowly filled a dark dance floor.

Swaying to a hypnotic, throbbing beat, they danced either in clusters or by themselves, eyes shut, hands moving like snakes in mid-air. It was early yet — most would stay until 8 or 9 a.m.

They may look as if they're dancing, but that word is rarely used at the impromptu parties that pop up every night in large cities across the country. They are "raving."

Set against a background of rap-influenced techno or house music, raving is a growing social movement that first surfaced in England about five years ago.

Alcohol is banned but the drug of choice is Ecstasy, an illegal psychedelic designer drug that ravers say blends in with the pulsating, 165 beats per minute music and creates a peaceful, harmonious atmosphere.

"The ravers have recycled the hippie mantra thing," said Scott "Scotty" Osmond, a rave promoter who travels to various cities and organizes raves. "We've kind of stylized it for the '90s. It's a very hippie oriented thing. It's got the whole vibe."

The biggest rave cities in the United States are New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The purest raves are the most spontaneous. Ravers learn about the events through fliers or special phone lines just hours before they occur.

In England in the summer of 1988, some raves drew up to 10,000 people. Most U.S. raves are smaller, especially in New York where space is at a premium.

"Storm" raves take place outside, under bridges or at race tracks, and draw even more people.

"Every week we'll travel to Baltimore, Rhode Island, D.C., Long Island, anywhere there's a rave," said Michelle DiBella, 19, of Montclair, N.J. "It's the best place to meet great people who are into the same thing you are; music and positive energy. It's like we're part of the Traveling Techno Rainbow Family."

DiBella stood near the dance floor at a recent rave with one of her best friends. She wore 5½-inch black glitter platform shoes, green bellbottoms, a black shirt, vest and beret and a nose ring. Her hair hung in a braid.

Gus Gonzales, 18, came to a recent Friday night rave with two friends from Brooklyn. They go to as many raves as possible. They come soon after the raves begin, at 11:30 p.m., and stay until morning.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Public notice is hereby given that the Seminole County Local Emergency Food and Shelter Board will be converting for the purpose of allocating $175,000 in Federal funds under the Phase 20 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act to qualifying non-profit organizations and public agencies operating in and/or providing emergency food and shelter services to residents of Seminole County, Florida. Interested private and public agencies are invited to apply for funds with applications due no later than Thursday, December 3, 1992. The funds will become available in February and continue through September 1993 for approved organizations.

These funds available under the Stewart McKinney Homeless Assistance Act are to be used for the purchase of food and/or shelter for needy individuals and families. The appropriation is intended to supplement and extend current available resources and not to substitute or reimburse any agency for ongoing programs and services.

Agencies chosen to receive funds must (1) be non-profit; (2) have an accounting system and conduct an annual audit; (3) practice nondiscrimination; (4) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs; and (5) if they are private voluntary organizations, they should have a voluntary board.

Public or private agencies interested in applying for these funds should request an application by contacting Jeane Daily, member of the Seminole County Local Emergency Food and Shelter Board, in care of the Heart of Florida United Way, P.O. Box 190486, Altamonte Springs, Florida 32715-0486, telephone 834-3191. All Applications must be received by Thursday, December 3, 1992, 5:00 p.m. at the above address.

IN BRIEF

AROUND THE STATE

FIU signs JUCO guard

MIAMI — Guard Marc Dozier of Gulf Coast Community College has signed with Florida International's basketball team, coach Bob Weltlich announced Monday.

The 6-3 195-pound Dozier averaged 8.4 points and 4.3 assists last season with Gulf Coast, helping the Commodores to a Final Four finish in the state tournament.

South Florida triumphs

TAMPA — Douzel Rush scored 19 points in 22 minutes as USF closed out its exhibition season with a 95-82 win over Slovenia.

Rush's inside play and junior college transfer David Delancy's four 3-pointers and 16 points along with a 23-9 edge in free throws helped the Bulls withstand Slovenia's last push.

Igor Matijevic led Slovenia with 13 points. Jesse Salters added 13 points and 10 rebounds for South Florida.

USF, 2-0 in exhibitions, opens its regular season Dec. 1 against Bethune-Cookman.

Tritons open with win

ST. PETERSBURG — Paul Kinsella scored 24 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Eckerd College to a 89-81 victory Monday over Franklin College of Indiana.

In their season-opening game, the Tritons were up 44-42 at the half, but let Franklin even it up at 56 with eight minutes remaining.

Freshman Kerwin Thompson came into the game and racked up eight points and four rebounds as Eckerd pulled ahead to a comfortable six-point margin to lead the rest of the way.

Freshman guard Shane Vogt sunk 13 points and center John Leslie added 12 points and five rebounds for Eckerd (1-0).

AROUND THE NATION

Lightning grounded

DETROIT — Sergei Fedorov, Ray Sheppard and Dino Ciccarelli each scored twice as the Detroit Red Wings hammered the Tampa Bay Lightning 10-5 Monday night for their fifth win in six games.

The Red Wings scored their most goals since beating San Jose 11-1 on Feb. 15, Tampa Bay, which lost its fifth straight, gave up its most goals ever.

Foyt hires Gordon

INDIANAPOLIS — A reluctant A.J. Foyt again hinted that the end of his racing career may be at hand. But in the past, he couldn't quite bring himself to rule out one more try at the Indianapolis 500.

The four-time Indy winner, still walking with a limp from serious injuries that have limited his racing schedule the past two years, named young Robby Gordon as his team driver for the 1993 IndyCar series, including Indianapolis.

Gordon, 23, whose main experience has been in off-road racing, ran the IMSA GTO Series in 1990-91, winning the 24 Hours of Daytona both years. He drove in the NASCAR Daytona 500 in 1991 and this year made his Indy car debut in the Detroit Grand Prix driving for the Chip Ganassi Racing Team.

Foyt has bought one of Ganassi's 1992 cars and plans to begin testing with Gordon possibly next month. The team will switch from Chevrolet to Ford-Cosworth for the 1993 season, and Gordon will take part in the annual Rookie Orientation Program at the Speedway in April.

It's the boys' turn

Oviedo, six other teams at jamboree tonight

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

OVIEDO — Rebuilding or reloading? Depending on who your favorite team is, that will be the question tonight at Oviedo High School hosts a boys' high school basketball jamboree tonight.

The host Lions appear to be more than well stocked as they prepare to start defense of their Class 4A state championship.

But most of the other schools in the county will be looking to replace graduated stars as they tune-up for the start of the regular season next week.

Seven teams, six from the Seminole Athletic Conference as well as DeLand, are entered in tonight's jamboree and each will play two eight minute quarters.

Seminole and DeLand will open the night's action at 6 p.m.

The rest of the schedule has the Tribe staying on the court to take on Lake Howell at 6:25 p.m.; the Bulldogs coming back to take on Lake Brantley at 6:50 p.m.; Lyman challenging Lake Howell at 7:15 p.m.; the Greyhounds taking on host Oviedo at 7:40 p.m.; the Patriots challenging Lake Mary at 8:05 p.m.; and the Rams and Lions squaring off at 8:30 p.m.

Despite the loss of Bernard Green and Simon Harper Jr., Oviedo should still be the class of the county and quite possibly the class of the state. Returning starters include 6-foot, 3-inch guard Leon Lowman, the Most Valuable Player at the state tournament, 6-foot, 4-inch guard Devon Green, 6-foot, 5-inch forward Randy Wright Jr. and 6-foot, 10-inch center Chris Braxton.

Other important returnees include, 6-foot,

6-inch Brad Lukens and guard Roger Green. Head coach Ed Bolton has also been impressed with 6-foot, 7-inch center Brian Hendrix, 6-foot, 4-inch Bryan Repple and point guard Todd Bellhorn all of whom played for last year's District Junior Varsity Championship team.

Seminole lost three starters, Shawn Washington, J.J. Wiggins and Robert Redding, to Seminole Community College. But new coach Bob Traina figures to have a good nucleus to build around in returnees Larry Lawrence, 6-foot-4, Wesley O'Neal, 6-foot-3, and football star Matt Parker as well as a lot of height over 6-foot-5 coming up from the JV and freshman teams.

Lyman coach Norm Ready also figures to have a competitive team despite losing Aaron Merrell (SCC) because of the presence of 6-foot, 7-inch Tim Ruedeschell and good athletes in Todd

Patriots pummel Darters

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Lysa Moorefield tossed in a game-high 13 points as the Lake Brantley girls basketball team crushed visiting Apopka 57-29 Tuesday night.

The Patriots put this game out of reach quickly, running out to a 12-4 lead after one period and increasing the advantage to 29-13 at the halftime intermission.

Moorefield was the only player for either team to score in double figures, but she got help from Kelly Treat, nine points, and Nora Lidke, Christen Rodgers and Shil Campbell with six points each.

Lake Brantley is now 1-3 on the season and will travel to Deltona next Tuesday, December 1. JV action gets underway at 6 p.m. with the varsity set for a 7:30 p.m. start.

Raiders to host deuce

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Seminole Community College's Health and Physical Education Center will be the site of a men's and women's junior college basketball doubleheader tonight.

The women of head coach Ileana Gallagher will welcome the Titans of Bravard Community College to the local joco at 5 p.m. while Bernard Merthie's men will host Pasco-Hernando Community College at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free to fans of all ages.

Both teams will be looking to end losing streaks when they take the floor tonight.

The Raider women, 2-4 on the season, suffered two bad losses in the Lady Raiders Classic last weekend and Gallagher has been working on getting more consistency from her team.

"This is the worst start I've had," said Gallagher. "I've been 2-4 before, but I'm not used to getting blown out. We've got to start getting better play from our front court players."

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Patriots offensive to Lyman

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Sometimes your best defense is a good offense.

Last Friday night at Lake Brantley's Tom Storey Field that was the case as the Patriots' offense refused to give Lyman's high-powered attack the ball as they pounded the Greyhounds 49-13.

"I thought we had played a tremendous defensive game, but when I went back to check the films, no one person really stood out," said Lake Brantley head coach

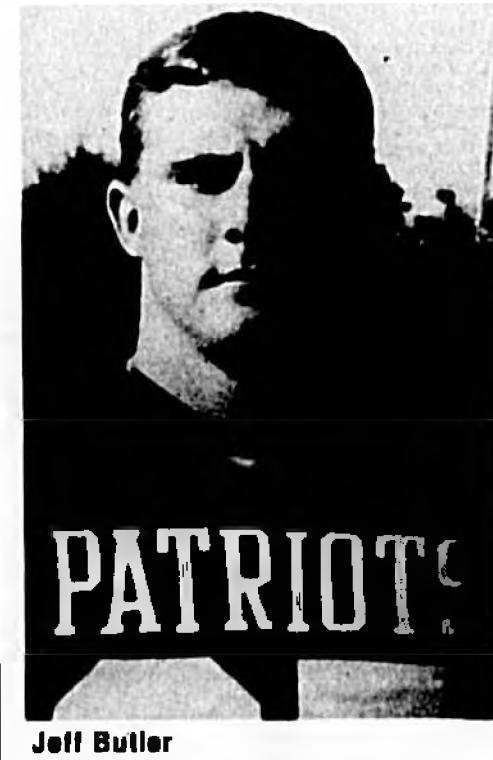

Fred Almon. "We played well defensively, but we only allowed Lyman to run 24 plays (including punts) while we ran 50."

"Brian Cross had six tackles and five assists and Daryl Bush had five tackles and six assists. That's nothing for them."

One of the reasons the Patriots offense was so dominant was junior fullback Jeff Butler, who carried the ball 18 times for 148 yards and two touchdowns. Butler himself had more carries, 18-13, and more yards, 148-138, than the whole Greyhounds squad.

For his efforts, Butler has been chosen this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

"Jeff (Butler) had one of his best game," said Almon. "The whole team played well. The game was a culmination of the kids maturing. Our offense was so young this year. We had 10 kids who had never played before. We got better every week and this was the icing."

Jeff Butler

Editors note: Lake Brantley's Jeff Butler is this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

Other players considered were:

• Lake Brantley's Jeff Shaw, who ran the ball three times for 25 yards and a touchdown and completed his only two pass attempts for touchdowns.

• Lake Brantley's Brian Cross and Daryl Bush, who combined for 11 tackles and 11 assists on Lyman's 19 offensive plays.

• Seminole's Jason Walraven, who kicked a 37 yard field goal to beat Lake Mary 3-0 and clinch the SAC title for the Tribe.

• Seminole's freshman defensive linemen Ron Moore, who harrassed the Lake Mary offense all night.

O'Neal's arrival has created new language for NBA

By BILL BARNARD
 AP Basketball Writer

ORLANDO — Shack Attack is spelled Shaq Attaq on a new line of basketballs inspired by the arrival of Shaquille O'Neal in the NBA.

With that as a starting point, consider other possibilities resulting from Shaq's phenomenal opening weeks:

—Shaq, with the speed and power and most of the size of a Maq truck, is cragging the baq of NBA defenses this season.

—"We laq the ability to stop him," a coach might say.

—And anyone in his way can expect to get amaqed to the floor.

The name Shaquille, taken from the Koran, means "little one," which hardly applies to the 7-foot-1, 300-pound Orlando center who is turning the NBA into his personal playground.

He's already among the league leaders with 25.6 points, 16.8 rebounds and 3.3 blocked shots in his first eight games, but numbers alone don't tell the story of his early impact.

"He's a nightmare for the other team," said teammate Nick Anderson, who has found the additional room on the court afforded by O'Neal to his liking with a 26.1 scoring average.

"I dream about being part of the team that can really grow together and do some great things," O'Neal said. "We may even be able to do some great things this year."

With O'Neal, Anderson, Dennis Scott — averaging 18.3 — and playmaker Scott Skiles, the Magic clearly are making strides in that direction.

Orlando, 21-61 last season, is in first place in the Atlantic Division with a 5-3 record despite Saturday night's 92-77 loss at New York.

That game represented O'Neal's first test against an elite center, and while the Magic lost 92-77, O'Neal more than held his own against Patrick Ewing, outscoring him 18-15 and outrebounding him 17-9.

"He's a great player," Ewing said. "He plays hard and is very strong. He knows how to find people when he needs help in the post. He's going to be a great pro."

O'Neal, who grew up in Newark, N.J., and remembers going to games at Madison Square Garden with his father, said he tried not to take the attitude that he has to

Hair Formula I is offering hair replacement program

Hair plays a significant role in human culture and it has since the dawn of time. Hair loss, too, has been an equally historic phenomenon. Losing hair isn't easy, it may even take some mental adjustments. If you are more comfortable covering your head, there are several options including a cap, scarf, hat or turban.

If you choose to replace your hair, there are three options. First a hair transplant, which is often expensive, painful and doesn't achieve the desired results; second, choose a fashionable wig; or third you can choose a prosthetic hair unit.

Happily, fakey-looking wigs are a thing of the past. Technology has advanced, you can look the way you like and you can actually enhance your self-image.

Hair Formula I is equipped and has the expertise to achieve the natural look as if hair were growing right out of your head. In fact, no one will ever know. Hair loss detracts from your image in today's competitive marketplace and social environment. Today's man knows that his appearance, personality and physical self are incomplete without a good looking head of hair, as we are living in a youthful, competitive, fast-moving world of action - a world that demands the best of us.

Modern techniques in hair replacement have now made it possible to "replace the hair you do not have" and allow you to work, play, swim, sleep, shower and live with complete confidence. Nothing can stop you now.

"We at Hair Formula I are grateful for the opportunity to serve you. We will endeavor to set the pace in economical family hair care, always keeping foremost in mind that you, the customer are the foundation of our profession.

We pledge to devote that time necessary to each and every one of you in fulfilling the service that you, the customer are paying us to do. We further pledge to maintain our professional tradition by keeping rhythm with new styles, techniques, methods and practices that may benefit you, the customer.

We here at Hair Formula I are gratified that you have chosen us as a family hair care facility and we welcome any changes that will enable us to improve our services to you. We will capitalize in maintaining our reputation beyond reproach. We care and we'll prove it."

Full-service doesn't really describe the range of beauty services available at Hair Formula I. From hair pieces to hair extensions, manicures, pedicures, facials to hair replacement and fusions, not to mention the standard fare of hair cuts, perms and colors for men, women and children.

Rita Sheehan has owned and operated Hair Formula I since September 1986. Being a shop owner, Rita has pretty much done it all "from head to toe," but what really gets her excited is to be able to cut or style a man's hair piece so that it looks and feels completely natural to the wearer. A piece that is styled on the wearers head, according to Rita, "makes all the difference in the world."

Hair Formula I carries a wide variety of wigs and hair pieces in every style and color imaginable and other pieces of hair to be woven and worked in existing hair to create a new and different look.

They also sell hair pieces for ethnic hairstyles; Zee braids, Super braids, Knot braids, Disco braids. They also have beads, bows and other decorations. Bring in your old wig or hair piece for a style. Hair Formula I will service all types.

Hair Formula I is located in Country Club Square, at the corner of 25th St. and Airport Blvd. The address is 1740 W. Airport Blvd. and the telephone number is 321-8114. Hair Formula I issues a challenge through a motto they hold... "Try us...you will like us."

Bobby and Judi Heath with Jasper, built their business from "scratch".

Unusual Gifts at an Unusual Store

The old saying "on a wing and a prayer" would absolutely describe how Bobby and Judi Heath started BJ's Resale five years ago. Both Bobby and Judi had full time jobs, but had always wanted to work for themselves. Bobby had always been interested in antiques, refinishing and collectibles. With much prodding he convinced Judi that they should try their hand at their own business. Even though they had made up their minds to start the business, the beginning was almost an accident. Bobby and Judi had planned an evening out at the movies, but could not decide on a movie they both wanted to see. So they went to an auction instead. They bought six dollars worth of merchandise. The next weekend they had a yard sale. They reinvested the profits from their yard sale at the auction the following weekend. Eventually, they had purchased enough inventory to open their first shop, on the corner of Park Avenue and 25th Street.

They stayed there for one year until they outgrew the space. They then moved to Sanford Avenue and outgrew that space in two years. BJ's Resale is currently, and, according to Judi, permanently located at 2694 South Park Drive, in Sanford.

The Heath's try to cater to every customer by trying to keep something in stock for every collector or antique buyer. There are primitive farm items, collectible colored glass and dishes, jewelry, books and furniture. The furniture is refinished and repaired by Bobby, who takes pride in saying that each piece is refinished by hand, not dipped.

The Heath's have tried to create a comfortable atmosphere, not a museum. They say they buy "cheap" so they can sell "cheap". And they buy items they know will appeal to their customers; they don't want them sitting in the shop taking up space.

If you have never been to BJ's Resale, there is no better time than the holiday season. You will find lots of unique Christmas gifts, especially for the "hard-to-buy-for" people on your list.

Bobby and Judi take pride in the fact that they have built a successful business from six dollars and a cardboard box full of somebody else's "junk". Stop by and see them Tuesday through Saturday, 9:00 to 5:00. Or give them a call at 322-7489. There's another old saying: one man's trash is another man's treasure. This is absolutely true for the Heath's, and it might be true for you.

Gallbladder removal comes in two forms

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain the surgery of cholecystectomy. DEAR READER: There are basically two forms of gallbladder removal: the standard operation and laparoscopic cholecystectomy.

During the first procedure, the surgeon makes an abdominal incision, just below the rib cage on the right. He then removes the gallbladder through the incision, sews everything else back into place and the patient leaves the hospital in about a week.

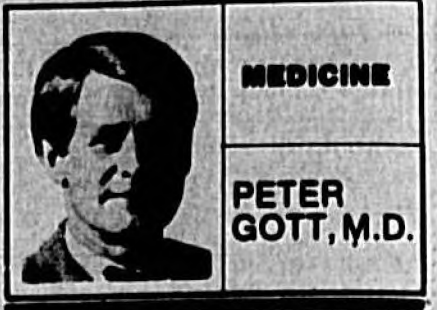

To a large degree, this operation has been superseded by the newer, faster and safer laparoscopic procedure. A metal tube is inserted through a small incision into the abdominal cavity. Working through the tube's optical system, the surgeon identifies the gallbladder and removes it. This takes less time; there is less bleeding; convalescence is shorter than with the standard operation.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 27-year-old recovering from anorexia. Due to the eating disorder, my liver was compromised. After over a year of treatment, my enzymes are normal and my doctor says my liver is healed. He said, however, that continued abstinence from alcohol and some medication would be recommended. Since alcohol has never been a problem, I question what he meant when he said my liver was healed. Will it always be "compromised"?

DEAR READER: I believe your doctor was merely being cautious. Malnutrition is a condition we ordinarily associate with devastating famines in Third World countries. However, anorexia, if it's severe enough, can cause malnutrition. This, in turn, often disrupts liver function.

During your recovery, the liver healed. Judging from the normal blood tests ("enzymes"), your liver is now back to normal. I don't know whether you could drink alcohol again. Because alcohol poisons liver cells, many gastroenterologists prohibit its use in people recovering from liver conditions, including hepatitis.

By Phillip Alder

When you are defending against a no-trump contract, it is traditional to lead fourth-highest from your longest and strongest. In the middle of the hand, you tend to do the same, but with one major proviso. You should only lead a low card when you have an honor in the suit and an interest in having that suit continued. (You may break this rule, of course, if you are trying to fool declarer and don't care what partner thinks. But this is a rare situation.)

In today's deal, West led the diamond five: eight, 10, king. South crossed to dummy with a spade to the queen (thus keeping one opponent in the dark as to the whereabouts of the king). Then declarer took a losing club finesse. West switched to the heart two. East grabbed the trick with the ace and immediately returned the diamond jack. Declarer gratefully won with the ace and claimed nine tricks: three spades, two diamonds and four clubs.

As you can see, if East had returned a heart at trick five, the defenders would have cashed five tricks before declarer could take nine.

"Sorry, partner," said East, "but I thought you had started with ace-fifth of diamonds." "I might have," replied West, "but you should have taken note of the size of my heart card. If I had wanted you to win the trick and go back to diamonds, I would have led a high heart, not the two. By leading my lowest, I was telling you that I wanted this suit continued, not diamonds returned."

This is an excellent principle that can be a lifesaver for defenders.

By Bernice Bode Ouel YOUR BIRTHDAY Nov. 25, 1992

In the year ahead, you could establish three important relationships that may be of great benefit to you in the commercial world. However, these same associates might not mix too well socially. Don't force them on your friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Exercise your initiative today instead of waiting for others before making your move. Your chances for personal achievement are excellent, provided you use your abilities. Sagittarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to get others to assist you today, you must first make your needs known. Don't be secretive or bashful about making others aware of what you want done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Hopes and expectations can be realized today if you are in a positive frame of mind. Don't let self-doubts, even small ones, get a toehold.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your chances for achieving your objectives today will be enhanced if your goals are defined clearly. Clarity will provide you with the motivation that fuzzy images can't generate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to seek activities today that are mentally challenging. Avoid involvements which are too routine or inhibit your independence and mobility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you're not overjoyed by change, but today you should be able to adapt yourself advantageously to unexpected developments, especially in business.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not discount your mate's ideas and opinions today pertaining to issues of mutual importance. He/she might perceive things from a clearer perspective than yours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You won't be content today if you fritter your time away unproductively. Busy yourself with endeavors that provide you with a sense of accomplishment and achievement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to devote some time today to activities or sports in which you enjoy participating. A break from mundane routines could refurbish your psyche and outlook.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good day to entertain friends at your place to whom you are obligated socially. Get on the phone and instigate an impromptu get-together.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can best gratify your restless urges today by dropping in on friends you've neglected a bit lately. Wherever you go, your presence will be appreciated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your financial prospects continue to look encouraging today, especially if you work on ideas you've been contemplating that can make or save you money.
