Plane Crash Kills 2 Pre-Dawn Tragedy East Of Sanford

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

"It sounded like a bomb," Matt Simons said of the crash of a single-engine plane, which impacted "hard" about 50 feet from his home in woods east of Sanford off State Road 46 at about 6:30 a.m. today.

Two men, whose ages Simons estimated to be between 40 and 50, died in the crash.

Although officials early today had not released the identity of the men in the plane, who were apparently killed on impact, ownership of the plane was traced to J. Reynolds Quality Cars of Cocoa. Early today, May Reynolds of Merritt Island, who along with her husband owns that business, said her husband Jay Reynolds, 55, and a pilot she tentatively identified as Lloyd Polatier, of Brevard County, took off in the plane that crashed early today. They were en route to Alabama on a business trip.

Mrs. Reynolds said that her husband had recently bought the plane. "I have hardly spoken to him since he bought it. I was so afraid of it," she said.

Her identification of her husband and the pilot as the victims of the plane crash was tentative. Officials had not confirmed that identification early today, although the plane had been traced to Reynolds as the owner.

Simons, 21, was walking out the front door of his home at 1804 Clekk Road when he heard what sounded like an automobile wreck as the Piper Cherokee 6 ripped through trees and downed powerlines. Simons said his home was thrown into darkness when the power went out and he heard what sounded like a bomb hit in woods just north of his home.

"I didn't know what it was. I went in and got my gun and went out there," he said.

Simons' cousin, Marvin Simons, who was with Simons and his wife Cynthia inside Simons' home when the plane crashed, went into the woods with him.

There, Simons said, they found the crumpled fuselage of the white plane, with red and blue trim.

"I wanted to see if I could help the people, but the two men inside were too far gone," he said. The occupants of the plane were apparently already dead.

Bits and pieces of the six-seat plane marked a trail across the dirt Clekk Road, leading to the fuselage. Assistant Seminole County Fire Chief Bill Kinley said the plane is registered to J. Reynolds Quality Cars, Cocoa.

Although Mrs. Reynolds early today linked the plane to her husband, and confirmed he and a

Legislators Call It A Session

Reconvene Monday

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A parliamentary move by a political menage-a-trois killed Gov. Bob Martinez' lobbying to force the Legislature to kill the consumer service tax but the debate was far from over when the lawmakers called it a session Tuesday.

The Legislature is set to reconvene Monday to take up the struggle anew. House Republicans claim they have the votes to push repeal through the lower chamber, and the issue was by no means settled in the Senate, where Martinez followers hold great influence.

Some senators have touted a penny sales tax as a possible replacement for the service tax. Other senators prefer using the recess to salvage the service tax by exempting some of the services tax such as those on legal fees, real estate transactions and advertising.

Senate action that sent their provision back to committee for reworking was a move designed to buy time.

"There were a lot of different philosophies in the works and that was the only way to slow down the process," said Senate President John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach.

The bill was downed by senators who want a sales tax, those who want to revise the consumer tax and those who want it repealed but not replaced by a sales tax, Vogt said.

The Senate's maneuver however, has not dampened the spirits of House Speaker Jon Mills who declared a tentative victory upon adjournment

Rabbi Merrill Shapiro will blow the shofar 100 times beginning Thursday morning at 9.

By Jane Casselberry

Sundown today marks the beginning of Rosh Hashanah—the Jewish New Year — and 10 Days of Repentance that close with Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) on Oct. 3. This is the Jewish year 5748 counting from the week God created the world, but according to Rabbi Merrill Shapiro of Temple Beth Am, "God's days could be a billion years."

Rabbi Shapiro said for Jews the significance of these High Holy Days including Yom Kippur is a time for repentance, evaluation of what they have done in the past year and the resolution to make changes. The observance dates back to the books of Leviticus and Numbers in the Bible.

"It reminds us that it is our job to take care of the world and its ecology and that we are all created in the image of God and we should treat each other with

County Approves Budget

$142.5 Million Package
Commissioners OK 4-1

By Brad Church
Herald Staff Writer

A $142.5 million county budget for 1987-88 was approved by a 4-1 vote of the county board of commissioners Tuesday night after commissioners Barbara Christensen, who voted against the budget, and Bill Kirchhoff got into a heated argument about it.

The budget was advertised, as required by state law, as requiring a millage rate 8.64 percent above the "rolled-back" rate. The rolled-back rate is a rate that does not consider increases in property valuation and property development since the last budget. Seminole County had $336 million in new development over the last year.

Christensen, after a hearing at which three members of the audience spoke against the budget, announced that she would vote against the millage rate of $4.57 per $1,000 taxable valuation, which is about two cents lower than the current millage rate. She said the budget should have been kept at the rolled-back rate.

County Manager Ken Hooper said the only increase in taxes is for transportation, but Christensen argued, "I think the budget can be cut. I don't think this board should get a reputation as tax-and-spend Republicans."

Kirchhoff countered by blaming Christensen for pushing approval of developments which resulted in needed road improvements, which cost money.

"The Red Bug and Tuskawilla roads area is in your district and you have consistently been in favor of high density development there and that means more traffic and more road improvements," he charged. "You can't have it both ways — high density development and cutting the transportation budget."

"I voted for the four-cent gas tax and the two-cent gas tax. See COUNTY, page 12A

County OKs AAA Building

By Brad Church
Herald Staff Writer

An increase in the height of the proposed American Automobile Association headquarters building in Heathrow was approved by county commissioners Tuesday night.

The Heathrow Planned Unit Development also received approval to incorporate 4.35 more acres into the existing 40-acre tract on which the AAA headquarters will be built, and established an off-street parking standard of one space per 300 square feet of floor area for the development.

Bruce Anderson, an attorney representing Heathrow, told the commissioners AAA wants to build a world-class headquarters which he said will be the finest corporate headquarters in Florida and one of the finest in the nation. The building will be a total of seven stories—a five-story office building on top of two stories of vehicle parking.

With present plans, the company could develop a 650,000 square-foot building, but proposed as part of the approval for the taller building, a 500,000-foot limit. He said AAA "wants to go up, not out." The building may not be quite 97 feet high, he said, but the company wanted the approval for that height for possible future expansion on the site. He said the building will be located in the approximate center of the 40-acre site, and that 94 percent of the site would be open space.

The AAA headquarters, which is moving to Heathrow from Virginia, will bring about 900 new jobs to the county.

All the requests were approved on unanimous votes despite objections raised by neighborhood associations in the proposed high-rise building.

Bill Daley of Heathrow accused the county of approving a high-rise building without knowing what effect high-rise buildings will have on future taxes.

FLORIDA

IN BRIEF

Theme Of Mega-Money Lottery Bid On By 7 Advertising Firms

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida's first lottery game next year might be dubbed "Flamingo Bingo." Or it may be designed as a sunken treasure game built around Key West salvager Mel Fisher.

The Lottery Department is reviewing seven proposals for the design and promotion of Florida's wagering, which gets off the ground Jan. 15.

The contract, which could be as high as $20 million, will be the biggest advertising job in state government. Lottery Director Rebecca Paul will award it next month, acting from a list of finalists to be determined over the next few weeks.

Benito Advertising Inc. of Tampa is the only Florida bidder not affiliated with a larger, out-of-state firm, according to a report Tuesday by The Tampa Tribune.

AIDS Brothers In School Again

ARCADIA (UPI) — Three brothers carrying the AIDS virus, pulled from their original school three weeks ago when fire destroyed the family's home, were to enter a Sarasota County classroom today as officials seek evidence to charge the suspect in the arson.

The three Ray brothers — Richard, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8 — are to enroll at Gocio Elementary School in Sarasota, while their sister, Candy, 6, who does not carry AIDS antibodies, begins classes at Bay Haven School of Basics Plus.

The youths return to school more than three weeks after an arson fire destroyed the Arcadia home of Clifford and Louise Ray, prompting the family to leave town and vow never to return. They moved to Sarasota County.

Sanford Adjusts Employee Pay Period

Maryann L. Cross
Herald Staff Reporter

City workers may get a new pay period that ends Friday instead of Tuesday.

Currently the payroll time sheets are turned in on Tuesday by 10 a.m. for the weekly period ending Tuesday night and for the bi-weekly period ending Wednesday night.

City Manager Frank Falson recommended backing up the pay period to end Friday midnight in a commission workshop meeting Monday.

"It's an appropriate way to get over a difficult problem," Falson said.

The problem with the current payroll method is that division/department supervisors must guess if the employee who gets paid bi-weekly will be at work all day Tuesday and Wednesday, since the time sheets are turned in Tuesday morning.

The payroll is processed in Lakeland and printed in Sanford on Wednesday for distribution on Friday morning. Any changes in the hours paid because an employee went home sick Tuesday or was absent Wednesday results in an adjustment in the following pay period or voiding the check and issuing another. This effect is compounded if there is a holiday on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, as payroll time sheets must then be turned in on Monday by 10 p.m.

The new system would back up the pay period to end Friday midnight and time sheets would be turned in the following Monday morning. The time sheets would then reflect hours completed as opposed to the current estimated hours to be worked on Tuesday and Wednesday.

To put this in effect, the first pay day would short the weekly employee two days and the bi-weekly employee three days. In order to avoid this, the city would give each employee a regular check. The pay difference would be set up as a receivable account from each employee; two days for employees paid weekly and three days for employees paid bi-weekly. This amount would be deducted from the employee's final paycheck when the person retires or leaves.

"We wanted to do it this way so the employees won't be hurt financially by a short paycheck," Finance Director Henry Tamm said.

At the workshop session, Commissioner A.A. McClanahan suggested instead the city deduct four hours per week from the city employees' paychecks until the two or three day pay difference is caught up. McClanahan suggested handling the difference this way so the city could solve the pay difference problem within a few months.

But Falson said an adjustment each week would hurt those employees who live from paycheck to paycheck.

"Come October (when the fiscal 1987-88 budget takes effect) there will be no dramatic paycheck increase," Falson said. "We'll hear a lot of criticism (from the city employees) if we cut their paycheck each week until the pay difference is made up."

There are no across-the-board pay increases in the 1987-88 budget for city employees, department heads, city commissioners, or the city manager.

Falson said to avoid a morale problem, the city should make up the pay difference when the city employees receive their final paycheck. City commissioners agreed at the workshop session this was the best way to handle the problem.

Since changing the pay period is a just a policy adjustment, the only action needed to put the change in effect is approval at the city commission meeting of Sept. 28. At that time, if the commissioners vote in favor of the change, the new payroll period will take effect with the first bi-weekly payroll after Oct. 1.

6 Florida Counties Lead Job Growth

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — Six Florida counties are among the 46 top-growing counties in the nation where one-third of the nation's new jobs will be created by the 21st century, a research firm says.

According to a report by NPA Data Services Inc., Broward, Dade, Palm Beach, Orange, Hillsborough and Pinellas counties will have job increases of 100,000 or more by the year 2000.

Broward ranked 8th with 256,000 new jobs projected; Dade ranked 9th with 245,000; Palm Beach County ranked 15th with 184,000; Orange placed 23rd with 156,000; and Hillsborough and Pinellas tied for 27th with 133,000.

Most of those new jobs in Florida will be in service industries such as advertising, tourism, medicine and law.

William Fruth, president of the Palm Beach County Development Board, said he had expected his county to be ranked Florida's top-growth area because it has more undeveloped land area than Broward.

"We have been ranked No. 1 in the nation as far as percentage of new jobs," he said.

Los Angeles County leads the country in projected job growth, with an estimated 805,000 new jobs.

Total U.S. job growth is expected to be 25.1 million jobs between 1987 and 2000, with 9.4 million of the jobs concentrated in the top 46 counties.

Confirmation Most Reasonable

C. William Verity, President Reagan's nominee for commerce secretary, went to Capitol Hill the other day for the opening round in what are likely to be surprisingly acrimonious hearings on his confirmation. The fireworks notwithstanding, Verity is likely to win Senate approval in short order.

The controversy over Verity's nomination centers chiefly on his belief that the United States ought to expand its commercial ties to the Soviet Union. A handful of small, conservative organizations contend that Verity is insensitive to Soviet political and human-rights abuses, and that he fails to understand the importance of trade limitations in overall U.S. Strategy toward Moscow.

Verity's problems with the right stem from his long association with the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, an organization of American businessmen and Soviet trade officials that was created in 1973 with the blessings of the Nixon administration. It was the heyday of detente and linkage was a word that had yet to make its mark in the political lexicon.

Accusations were made that the trade council was subordinating U.S. interests in a mad dash to crack the supposedly lucrative Soviet market. None of the charges stuck, but the controversy rages on despite the passage in 1974 of an amendment to the Trade Act directly linking Moscow's human-rights record to favorable trade treatment. The Jackson-Vanik amendment, as it came to be known, has since become an integral part of U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union.

Regardless of how one views the Jackson-Vanik amendment, and Verity told the Senate Commerce Committee Thursday that he believes it is counterproductive to U.S. interests, it is the law. Until Congress feels compelled to change that law there is little Verity could do about it even if he so desired.

What the nominee's opponents fail to recognize is that a secretary of commerce does not act in a vacuum independent of the president or other officials of government. Indeed, Commerce more often than not serves as the handmaiden to State, Defense and Treasury in matters involving U.S. Security interests.

Unlike the other Cabinet-level agencies, Commerce has been buffeted by the alternately hot-and-cold winds that blow between the two superpowers. To believe that Verity could or even would turn U.S. Trade policy on its head in the brief time he has to run the Commerce Department is to believe in fairy tales.

He is an administrator of proven expertise and skill. As successor to the late Malcolm Baldrige, Verity will have some mighty big shoes to fill. His nomination is a good one, and he deserves the chance.

Glasnost At Fair

Glasnost, the Soviet Union's avowed policy of openness, won mixed reviews the other day at the sixth biennial Moscow Book Fair.

Although Soviet officials confiscated about 50 books from one U.S. publisher, they permitted Soviet and foreign publishers to display several previous banned works by such authors as Boris Pasternak and Anna Akhmatova.

Of course, many of the 3,000 publishers from 103 countries sought to avoid confrontation — and some said they selected the books for the fair before glasnost became official policy. Thus, the real test of Glasnost may come at the 1989 book fair.

Openness is relative, of course. Glasnost notwithstanding, Soviet citizens do not enjoy freedom of speech or expression as we know it in the United States. Nor is such a policy ever likely. Nevertheless, it is heartening to see the Soviet government at least take a small step in that direction.

Highs, Lows In House Debate Righting Wrong

By Robert Shepard
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House — for the most part — distinguished itself recently during consideration of a bill to make restitution to the Japanese-Americans who were sent to internment camps during World War II.

The sometimes emotional debate was marked by deeply felt expressions of how this country could best deal with what is widely felt to be a dark stain on U.S. history — a "grotesque aberration," as Speaker Jim Wright termed it.

Most members of the House agreed with the part of the bill that offers a formal apology to the 120,000 Japanese-Americans who were wrongly suspected of disloyalty and forced from their homes and sent to remote internment camps. Differences arose over the proposal to pay restitution — $20,000 — to each of the 60,000 internees still living.

Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., argued well but unsuccessfully against the payments, saying the sincerity of the apology would not be enhanced by money.

On the other side, Rep. Norm Mineta, D-Calif., brought the issue vividly to life by recalling the day he and his family had to leave their San Jose home and board a guarded train that took them to one of the camps.

Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., told of the day army trucks came to pick up a Japanese-American playmate and his family — a moment "burned indelibly" in Dellums' mind.

Unfortunately, the debate deteriorated when Reps. Charles Pashayan, R-Calif., and Lawrence Smith, D-Fla., joined in.

Pashayan, while supporting the bill, introduced an absurd note of partisanship when he suggested the Democratic Party should shoulder the blame for the decision to intern the Japanese-Americans.

President Roosevelt signed the executive orders that led to the forced evacuations, "an act of infamy for which he and his party must forever bear full responsibility," Pashayan said.

He closed with the thought that if Abraham Lincoln — a good Republican — were alive, he would vote for the bill.

Fortunately, Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., later pointed out that Republican officials — federal and state — supported Roosevelt's actions. And he noted that Lincoln, "in the throes of the Civil War," committed a similar constitutional breach by suspending habeas corpus and allowing unjustified imprisonments.

Smith also succumbed to rhetorical excess and historical inaccuracy when he alleged, "We put people behind bars for no reason, we scarred them, we cruelly tortured them."

Fortunately again, reasonableness returned to the fore when Lungren spoke, saying the House should be "engaged in self-examination rather than self-flagellation."

"This was not the Holocaust. This was not the Armenian genocide, and we do a disservice to those who came before us when we suggest that it was," Lungren said.

Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn., a confessed curmudgeon, also enhanced the debate with his comments on historical revisionism and 20-20 hindsight.

Frenzel readily acknowledged the policy of 1942 was wrong, but suggested the times, not the people, were at fault.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

School Strikes Hurt Kids

The school children of Chicago are suffering again this year because of teacher strikes. Unionized school teachers in Chicago have struck nine times in the last eighteen years, a sorry record of disregard for their educational duties.

It's impossible for reasonable citizens to sympathize with the Chicago school teachers. They already earn $30,000 a year in Chicago — far more than most Americans earn. They are demanding a 15 percent increase over two years.

Chicago school officials and the mayor of the city report that no money is available for higher pay, but that doesn't deter the teachers from keeping children from school.

In considering the teacher strikes, it's important to bear in mind that children are the victims. Ironically, teacher strikes usually occur in large cities where there is a sizable school population of children from poor households. These children greatly need access to the educational process. They need every day of schooling they can get in order to overcome an unhappy home environment.

Teacher strikes also create an economic and social burden for the parents of these children. Their parents generally have to leave home each day for a job. Money isn't available to hire someone to care for these children, who may live in neighborhoods where untended children get into trouble in various ways, including exposure to drug use.

A teacher strike is a hold-up of the community. The operation of schools is an essential service. If teachers strike, school officials should be empowered to find other staff members who are willing to work. Unfortunately, ten states have yielded to union power and enacted laws that legalize strikes by teachers and other public workers. Such laws, in effect, legalize blackmail of the community.

In Pennsylvania, for instance, Act 195 approved by the legislature in 1970 authorizes strikes by some public workers. In view of this legislative authorization, it's no exaggeration to say that teacher strikes are a social form of child abuse. Today, quality education should have the highest community priority.

Customs Was On Trail Of Iran Arms Deal

By Jack Anderson And Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — A year before the Iran/contra scandal rocked the Reagan administration, the U.S. Customs Service developed information on one of the early secret arms shipments to Iran by the White House. But Customs did not pursue the matter after it was assured by the CIA that the United States was not involved.

The near-exposure of the secret Iranian arms operation in the fall of 1985 was touched off by an occurrence as trivial as the taped door latch of Watergate: The plane that carried the weapons to Iran overflew Turkish territory on its way back to Israel — and peeved Turkish officials publicly identified the DC-8 and its secret route. But the press never picked up on the Turks' disclosure.

This bizarre might-have-been element in the Iran/contra scandal was gleaned from two confidential Customs documents we have seen.

The first document was written on Sept. 20, 1985, by the chief of the Customs Service's office of intelligence, George D. Heavely. It reported that two days earlier, "the

JEFFREY HART

Bork Will Win

Bork will win. That's right, and you first read it here. The whole political shoot-out is in fact a charade. It would be informative if you stood back and understood the difference between the language of politics and the real meaning of the language.

An extreme case is Senator Edward Kennedy, who greeted the Bork nomination as if President Reagan had nominated Heinrich Himmler. Bork, said Kennedy, would mean back-alley abortions, midnight kicks at your door, and censorship of the press.

But think, Senator Kennedy believes no such thing. On the hot potato of abortion, Bork's position is that this ought to be a legislative matter, and that the Constitution contains no reference to abortion. Senator Kennedy knows just as well as Judge Bork that, of the 50 states, in the year 1987, perhaps only two would outlaw abortion — Utah and Alabama. Even that would be only symbolic. A woman could take the Greyhound bus to the state next door.

About the midnight police raid? All that means is that Bork thinks the courts have gone too far in protecting criminals. Look, you can kill 35 women in broad daylight, and it still takes 12 years to put you in the chair. Harvard professor and criminal lawyer Allen Dershowitz says outright in his book that all of his clients of course are guilty. Prof. Dershowitz is an expert in legal technicalities, and his career may have climaxed when he kept Klaus Von Bulow out of prison. Bork's skepticism about this sort of thing is the police kicking down your door at midnight?

Even Senator Kennedy does not believe anything approaching that.

So what, then, is the real meaning of his language? The apparent meaning cannot possibly be the real meaning.

The real meaning is that Senator Kennedy is preserving his assorted constituencies, located on the left wing of the Democratic Party. Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP, Ralph Nader, the politicized homosexual network and the Sandinista supporters, welcome extremist assurance. The real meaning of Senator Kennedy's language is that he is willing to provide it. Those extremists are an important faction of the Democratic Party.

Senator Joseph Biden, who is running ineffectually for president, understands this. In his quest for the Democratic nomination, he instantly volunteered to lead the fight against Bork. This cynical ploy apparently got him nowhere. Gov. Michael Dukakis and Rep. Richard Gephardt seem to be the front-runners, and they are against Bork too.

Being against Bork, and caricaturing him, may help you at the Democratic convention next summer. But, come November, will it do you any good in Florida, Texas, California and New Jersey? Of course not. In the equation of American politics, there is no way that you can win the Democratic nomination and also win the presidency. The Democratic nomination, however, is worth lots of money, even if you lose 49 states.

Smoking Poses Dilemma

By Larry Doyle
UPI Science Writer
CHICAGO (UPI) — A woman walks into a doctor's office. She smokes and she wants birth control pills.

The doctor knows if the woman begins taking oral contraceptives and continues to smoke, her risk of a heart attack will be 39 times greater than non-smoking women not on the pill. The doctor also knows the woman will probably not quit smoking, even if encouraged.

And so, typically, the doctor advises against birth control pills and may refuse to prescribe them.

This approach is entirely wrongheaded, says Dr. Gary Goldbaum, health officer for the Thurston County Health Department in Olympia, Wash.

"The bottom line is that many women, if they are denied oral contraceptives, will simply risk pregnancy," Goldbaum says. "And pregnancy, while not a disease, carries a health risk far greater than those posed by the contraceptives."

Goldbaum, until recently with the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, has analyzed the dangers of smoking and oral contraceptives and concluded that, for all practical medical purposes, smoking is dangerous and the pill is not.

"It's hard to find any medical justification to continue smoking, but there may be all sorts of justifications to take oral contraceptives," he says. "Physicians often feel that prescribing is the only activity in their control, but it doesn't always lead to the best decision medically."

Previous research had shown that heavy smoking alone poses a sevenfold risk of a heart attack to women, that the oral contraceptives alone create a 4.5 times greater risk, and the two together combine for a 39-fold risk. Scientists believe the cigarettes and pills act separately and jointly to increase the likelihood of blood clot formation in women.

However, Goldbaum says, it is clear that smoking is the far greater culprit in the preventable heart attack in American women.

Goldbaum thus concluded that if health professionals truly wished to prevent heart attacks in women, they would be more aggressive in their efforts to get women to quit smoking.

Office of Intelligence received fragmentary information ... that a U.S.-registered DC-8 aircraft (with a crew of three) had landed for emergency repairs in Israel directly from Iran and was en route to an unknown destination."

The internal memo went on to say that even though Customs had the tail number of the DC-8, the Israeli defense ministry maintained a "blackout on information on the aircraft." As a result, the memo added, the U.S. ambassador to Bahrain could say little when the Iraqi ambassador there "made discreet inquiries about (this and other) flights and arms smuggling to Iran." The stated U.S. policy at the time was to discourage arms sales to Iraq's enemy in the Persian Gulf war.

Based on his sketchy information, the Customs intelligence chief came to this conclusion: "Israelis have been caught 'red-handed' supplying Iran with war materiel, even though they tried to hide the operation by using aircraft owned by a Nigerian airline, based in Brussels and registered in the United States." In fact, of course, the secret sale of arms to Iran was a White House operation with Israeli cooperation.

Customs had no way of knowing it, but its puzzling intelligence information involved the U.S.-approved Israeli shipment of 408 TOW anti-tank missiles to Iran on Sept. 14, 1985, as part of an arms-for-hostages deal. The same day, Rev. Benjamin Weir was released after 16 months' captivity in Lebanon.

Customs intelligence analysts were able to provide more details on the mystery flight in a memo to Commissioner William Von Raab written on Oct. 30, 1985. The U.S.-registered DC-8 had "departed Tabriz, Iran, with a crew of three" on Sept. 16, the memo noted, adding: "The plane disappeared over Turkish air space, then arrived at Tel Aviv Ben Gurion Airport for an 'emergency' landing (due to an 'equipment malfunction.'). The plane remained in Tel Aviv for about 48 hours."

The memo said the incident first broke when "Turkish authorities broadcast information concerning the DC-8, its origin and landing in Israel." The memo added that the information "probably was made public by the Turkish government as officials were displeased by the failure of the DC-8's owners to pay the oversight fees."

Noting that despite the Turks' disclosure, "U.S. press coverage was minimal," the Customs analyst suggested:

"The lack of press coverage may possibly be attributed to pressure by the State Department. Officials ... have advised the Federal Aviation Administration and Customs personnel to 'forget the whole incident.'" Then, in a remarkably prescient observation, the analyst added: "It appears the State Department may have been suppressing this information in order to keep a controversial incident from causing the U.S. and Israeli governments major embarrassment."

Finally, the memo stated, "a check with CIA officials on U.S. involvement was negative." Customs' dangerously suspicious intelligence analysts were lied to.

In fact, Commissioner Von Raab was never let in on the secret operation his intelligence people had almost figured out. On July 11, 1986, Dale van Atta told Von Raab the White House was smuggling arms to Iran. Von Raab replied that Van Atta's information was wrong.

County Beats Nation In SAT Score Averages

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County high school students have bettered the national average in their scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test in 1987, with the county mathematics score up two points from last year to 489 and the verbal up one to 438, according to a school district spokeswoman.

The College Entrance Examination Board reported Tuesday that national scores for the mathematics portion of the test were up one from last year at 478 and verbal scores were down one for the same period at 430. Seminole County students taking the test scored 13 points higher than the national math average and eight points higher than the national average on the verbal part of the test.

Seminole County Schools Spokeswoman Karen Coleman said students in this district obtained higher 1987 test score averages than the state. The state averages reported by Coleman show a mathematics score increase of one point above last year's 470 and a verbal score decrease of three points to 423.

Robert W. Hughes, superintendent of Seminole County Schools, said the scores made were a "source of pride" to the district's students, teachers, parents and administrators. "We expect our students to do better than other students throughout the nation," he said.

Nationwide, the math gain was attributed to a rise in girls' scores and a slight drop in boys', with both showing slight losses in verbal averages. But there was no overall score change from the 1986 scores' total of 906, even though 800,000 more students took the test in 1987 than last year.

Coleman said Seminole County had 247 more students take the test given during the 1986-87 school year than the year before. A total of 1,549 students from the district's six high schools took the test. That figure represents 59 percent of the high school students in the county eligible to take the test, she said.

Coleman said the average of eligible students in the state taking the test was 38 percent. The national average was 35 percent.

Each section of the aptitude exam is scored on a scale of 200 to 800. The averages were calculated from scores of tests taken by 1.08 million students in the high school class of 1987.

The SAT, part of the entrance requirement needed to apply to many colleges, was sponsored by the College Entrance Examination Board, a non-profit education organization that serves high school students and colleges. Otherwise, the test is optional for all high school students.

In math, America's boys scored 500, down from 501 last year; girls, 453, up from 451 the year before. In the verbal category, boys scored 435, down two from 1986, while girls, with a score of 425, were down one point.

"We can attribute the increase in this year's math score to women, since the average score for women on the math portion of the test rose two points, while the average math score for men fell one point," said Donald M. Stewart, president of the College Board.

The data in the national report also showed:

—Many ethnic groups, though scoring significantly lower than the averages, have made strong gains in scores since 1978 when average scores for all were 431 for verbal and 472 for math.

—Students from families with high incomes score better on average than students from less affluent families.

—Students whose parents graduated from college do better than those from families whose parents are not college graduates.

—Scores were higher from those who took a rigorous academic fare in high school.

Stewart said he was encouraged that SAT scores for 1987 remained stable even though 800,000 more students took the test than in 1986.

"Greater number of test-takers usually mean lower averages," he said. "The increasing number of students taking the SAT is an encouraging sign, since it means that a great many more students are actually considering going to college."

"In Seminole County," Coleman said, "we test a large percentage of our students and yet still continue to have scores that exceed state and national scores."

An Angry Thatcher: Iran Attacking The Innocent

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called the Iranian attack on a British-flagged tanker "absolutely outrageous" Tuesday and angrily defended the U.S. strike on an Iranian ship believed laying mines.

The Foreign Office summoned Iran's charge d'affaires and handed him a formal protest, demanding an explanation and apology for the attack on the tanker Gentle Breeze that killed one Filipino crewman and injured 30 others.

An Iranian gunboat firing rocket-propelled grenades attacked the Hong Kong-operated tanker and set it ablaze Monday about 20 miles west of Iran's Farsi Island in the northern Persian Gulf.

"It is absolutely outrageous that a merchant ship going about its peaceful business should be attacked in this way," Thatcher told reporters while touring the town of Wolverhampton in northern England.

"This is a disgraceful attack" on a defenseless ship, she said.

"It gives very, very important evidence to the position we've taken up for some time — that unless both sides accept a cease-fire, we must go immediately to an arms embargo on that side which does not accept it."

The prime minister bristled when asked whether the U.S. attack a few hours later on an Iranian cargo ship believed laying mines would lead to a dangerous escalation of the crisis in the Gulf.

"Look, let's get things straight," Thatcher shot back, visibly shaking with anger. "That ship was laying mines — again an attack on innocent merchantmen."

"If that ship was laying mines, the merchantmen are entitled to expect the navies of the world to protect them.

"Go for the people who are causing the trouble in the first place, the people who are attacking the innocent merchantmen," she said. "There's nothing wrong in defending the merchantmen. That is what we are there to do."

Three Iranians were killed in the rocket and machine-gun attack on an Iranian cargo ship by a U.S. Navy helicopter north of Bahrain. U.S. officials said the ship had been observed laying mines and that 10 mines were found aboard the stricken vessel.

Cambodians Capture U.S. Vet

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The official Cambodian news agency reported Tuesday the capture of an American Vietnam War veteran who it said entered the communist country illegally, apparently in search of missing U.S. servicemen.

The news agency SPK, in a dispatch monitored in Bangkok, said a border patrol captured Sterling Brian Bono, 35, of Las Animas, Colo., more than four months ago inside Cambodian territory.

"During a patrol on May 2, the competent authorities of the People's Republic of Kampuchea (Cambodia) arrested an American, Sterling Brian Bono, who had illegally entered Cambodian territory," SPK said.

The SPK report did not disclose any further information about Bono's whereabouts, whether he might be deported or have to stand trial on any charge.

In Colorado, Bruce Bono, the captive's brother, said Sterling Bono left Las Animas, a farming community in the southeastern part of the state, in late March to visit refugee camps along the border of Thailand and Cambodia.

"He had seen a folder with a composite of refugees on it and there was someone there he recognized from when he served in Vietnam," Bruce Bono said.

"He wanted to try to get in contact with them and try to bring them back and get them some help. He wasn't looking for MIAs," he said.

Bruce Bono said he last heard from his brother in May. He said his mother last month received a letter from a friend of Sterling Bono saying, "Brian had gone across the border and been captured and put in prison."

Olarn Chaimuenwong, a Thai national and a friend of Bono, told United Press International the two recently were in Aranyaprathet, the last Thai town before the border with Cambodia. Olarn also said Bono had informed him of his intention to cross the border in search of American servicemen still listed as missing in action.

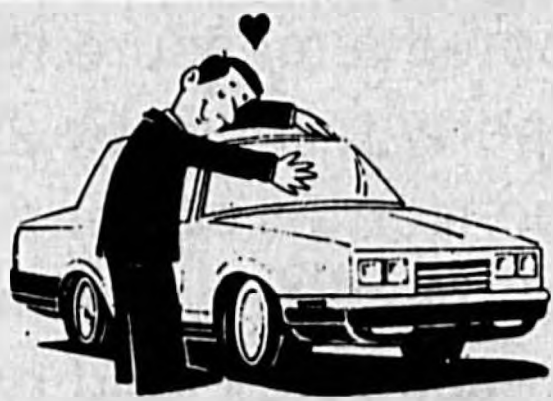

"He told me he would be rewarded if he could find any clue about the Americans missing in Cambodia and would share it with me," Olarn said. Olarn said Bono and he became friends in Vietnam where they both served as soldiers.

Reagan Claims No 2nd Thoughts, Frets About Attack On Iranians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is "not really" worried about retaliation for the fatal U.S. attack on an Iranian vessel, and his administration views the continued flaming rhetoric from Iran as "good reason" to hold its ground.

"The only one that is contributing to any explosive tendencies in the Persian Gulf is the . . . government of Iran," Reagan told reporters Tuesday when asked if his policies were contributing to increased tensions in the gulf.

"We did what is authorized by law any place in international waters," he added in defense of Monday night's U.S. helicopter strike on an Iranian vessel caught laying mines in the strategic waterway.

With vitriolic threats resounding from leaders in Iran and from the Iranian president speaking at the United Nations, Reagan was asked if he is worried about possible retaliation from the government linked to terrorist activity. "Not really," he said firmly after a measured pause.

Blaggi Convicted, Vows A Return

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rep. Mario Blaggi, stripped of a House subcommittee chairmanship and facing possible expulsion from Congress for taking illegal gifts and obstructing justice, vowed to return to Washington and fight a conviction for what he dismissed as "tipping."

"I will be in Congress; I will be in Washington tomorrow," Blaggi said Tuesday after a U.S. District Court jury in Brooklyn returned a split verdict in the case against him and former Brooklyn Democratic leader Meade Esposito.

The jury convicted Esposito of offering illegal gratuities to Blaggi — in this case Florida vacations — and found Blaggi guilty of receiving them. The congressman also was convicted of obstructing justice for trying to cover up the arrangement, and both men were convicted of interstate travel violations.

Bork-Backer Gives Good Review

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supporters of Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork are standing firm in their efforts to portray him as a mainstream jurist, with one key ally saying she believes he would uphold a woman's right to abortion.

"I would predict from his statements that he would respect the precedent" of the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade abortion decision, declared attorney Carla Hills in the second day of outside testimony in Bork's confirmation process.

Hills told the Senate Judiciary Committee she had not talked to Bork about how he would vote as a Supreme Court justice on a future abortion case but was "speculating" based on his five days of testimony to the committee last week.

Jaco Pastorius Dies

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — John Francis "Jaco" Pastorius, 35, whose rapid-fire bass guitar licks became the driving force behind the jazz fusion group Weather Report, died from injuries he received in a beating.

Police said they believed he had triggered his own injuries by trying to force his way into the Midnight after-hours club Sept. 12. He died Monday night.

Investigators said the club had barred him because of erratic behavior in recent years and he started kicking the door. Club manager Luc Havan beat Pastorius, injuring him critically.

Havan has been charged with aggravated battery in the case.

Pastorius spent his last few years living on the street, but in the late 1970s and early 1980s, his improvisational ability, rapid-fire fingering techniques and composing talent earned him reputation as the best jazz bass player in the world.

Police said several south Florida bars had banned Pastorius because of drunken, disruptive behavior.

Friends said early in his career he had scorned drugs and alcohol, but began drinking shortly after joining Weather Report. "What happened, I guess only Jaco knows," his brother Gregory said last week.

Journalists reported in the early 1980s that Pastorius, who also toured with Herbie Hancock, Joni Mitchell and Blood, Sweat and Tears, had become prone to mood swings and bizarre behavior.

He pleaded guilty in 1982 to resisting a Pompano Beach police officer with violence, and was the subject of stories in 1984 of drunkenness and street living in New York. He was divorced from his wife in 1985.

Gregory Pastorius said his brother had been diagnosed by a doctor as a manic depressive and that alcohol abuse made the disorder worse.

Several incidents followed. He reportedly slept in a park, was arrested for several times for drunken driving or driving without a license, breaking into an unoccupied park and driving a stolen car around the running track of a park.

Sept. 11, Pastorius jumped onto a theater stage during a performance by Carlos Santana and had to be removed. Later that night he received the beating that eventually killed him.

Inmate Wins Greater Library Access

LAKE BUTLER (UPI) — A circuit court judge has ordered Union Correctional Institution officials to allow an inmate greater access to the prison law library.

Circuit Judge Stephen Mickle told prison authorities to allow Michael Barfield into the library once he finishes his daily chores mopping floors and washing walls in a housing unit.

Barfield challenged a prison rule that required him to remain in the housing unit for an entire work shift even after completing his chores. He said he has been denied access to the library until 3 p.m. and by then, it is often full and he cannot get in.

Barfield, sentenced to 12 years for escaping while serving three years for vehicle theft, said he is a self-trained layman lawyer who handles legal appeals for other inmates.

He represented himself in proceedings before Mickle and questioned prison guards, educational staff and fellow inmates he called as witnesses during a Sept. 15 hearing.

"I think it's consistent with the evidence," Barfield said of Mickle's decision to issue a temporary injunction against UCI.

But Martha Olive Rowland, who represented correctional officer Alphonso Johnson, the primary defendant, said the ruling surprised her and she plans to appeal.

Johnson testified during the hearing he was merely enforcing a prison rule requiring inmates to stay on the job until their shift ends.

"It's a standard policy," he said.

Johnson said Barfield never presented evidence of pressing legal deadlines, but Mickle disagreed.

Barfield said he has seven cases pending and that by being kept at his work station until 3 p.m., each day, he was able to put in only about 12 hours a week in the law library.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. Escorts Tanker In Gulf; Copters Clear Mines From Path

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — A re-flagged Kuwaiti tanker sailed down the Persian Gulf today under American escort, and Sea Stallion mine-sweeping helicopters scoured its path for six mines threatening the convoy, shipping sources said.

The 47,000-ton Gas Prince set sail from Kuwait's Al Ahmadi port overnight with U.S. forces in the gulf on heightened alert a few hours after firing warning shots across the bow of a speeding Iranian hovercraft. The shots were fired as the hovercraft approached a stricken Iranian naval vessel that planted the mines.

The Gas Prince will have to pass through a 10-mile wide strip of central gulf waters northeast of Bahrain where the Iranian vessel Iran Ajr was operating before two American helicopter gunships hammered it in two strikes Monday.

The U.S. Navy warned international shipping Tuesday to remain clear of the area.

Contras Reject Cease-Fire Offer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguan Contra rebels have rejected a partial cease-fire declared by President Daniel Ortega, calling it a "tactical maneuver to gain time."

Contra leaders, responding to Ortega's unilateral announcement Tuesday of a postponement in military operations against the rebels, said in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, that they would obey a cease-fire in the 7-year-old war only if it came through direct negotiations with the Sandinista government.

Ortega announced the halt in hostilities in order to negotiate separate cease-fire agreements with individual Contra units within Nicaragua, the rebel leaders said.

PLO Peace Talk Proposal Claimed

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Pro-Palestinian activists claim that an official of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud party has proposed Middle East peace talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The activists said Tuesday the official, Moshe Amirav, told them the proposal was approved by Shamir and other Likud leaders.

Amirav, a leader of the Herut party, one of the groups in the Likud bloc, has acknowledged meeting with the pro-Palestinian activists. But he has not said whether Shamir or other party leaders were aware of his activities. The prime minister, who has steadfastly rejected any contact with the PLO, vehemently denied any knowledge of the talks.

Communists Employed - Ex-V.P.

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Vice President Salvador Laurel charged today that the Philippines is in "great peril" with hundreds of communists employed in the government of President Corason Aquino.

"This is not a case of someone crying wolf to call attention to himself," Laurel said in a statement after pro-Aquino Sen. Wigberto Tanada challenged him to name leftists in government.

"The truth is that the country is in great peril," said Laurel, who was stripped by Aquino of his job as foreign secretary Sept. 18 over differences in the handling of the 18-year-old communist insurgency.

Titanic Relics Displayed In Ceremony

PARIS (UPI) — Seventy-five years after the Titanic sank to the bottom of the Atlantic, the world got a first glimpse Tuesday of five small salvaged treasures: a wine bottle, a soup ladle, a copper bowl, cast iron grillwork and an eyeglass case with spectacles inside.

The display ceremony for reporters came a day after salvage expedition organizers said scientists discovered a hole in the ship and were trying to determine if an explosion played a role in the sinking that claimed 1,513 lives.

A researcher wearing rubber gloves dipped into a bucket of saltwater and pulled out the salvaged objects, which survived intact the April 1912 sinking of the luxury liner as well as the ensuing period under 7,000 pounds of pressure per square inch.

Photographers snapped pictures feverishly as researcher Jacques Montlucon lifted a tiny black leather eyeglass case with unbroken reading glasses still inside. Gold lettering on the case said it was made at a shop on the Rue de Rivoli in Paris.

"The leather is in good shape but it badly needs a cleaning," observed Montlucon, a researcher at the state-run utility Electricite de France's underwater research division. The facility is using saltwater containers to preserve the 800 Titanic artifacts, insured for $12 million, at its offices in Saint Denis, a Paris suburb, so they can later be put on display.

The light-green wine bottle showed no label, its cork long disappeared, its content only saltwater. The silver soup ladle was shiny and only slightly corroded in places.

The copper bowl had suffered heavy corrosion, a hole in its bottom and at one time apparently had been silver plated.

"It will be extremely difficult to preserve because it's a composite of materials," Montlucon said.

The decorative iron grillwork also was corroded and the researchers suggested it may have been a ventilator screen.

The artifacts were removed from the Titanic from July 10 to Sept. 9 during an expedition by a French-American team that used a high-tech mini-submarine, the Nautille, to dive to the Titanic wreck 350 miles off the coast of Newfoundland and 2 miles below the ocean surface.

Divers, who filmed the wreck and took 10,000 photographs, found a hole in the front of the ship, with the metal pushed outward not inward. Though the ship hit an iceberg before it sank, questions were raised about a possible explosion that may have had a part in the disaster.

A fire had been reported in the ship's coal supply before the sinking and could have led to an explosion, said John Joslyn, executive producer of Westgate International, a Los Angeles firm that helped organize the expedition and an Oct. 28 live television extravaganza to display the Titanic treasures. "Scientists are working feverishly on this. I think some of the myths and mysteries associated with the Titanic may be solved" as a result of the expedition, Joslyn said.

Joslyn said the random salvage turned up objects ranging from a large metal chandelier to cufflinks. A British newspaper purchased on the day the Titanic left Southampton, England, on its maiden voyage to New York was also recovered in good condition.

The expedition provoked charges from some of the survivors of the Titanic sinking that divers were raiding the underwater grave.

The salvagers admitted their global television show, to be filmed in Paris or Monte Carlo and hosted by American actor Telly Savalas, and a world tour would provide a profit after covering the costs of the $6 million expedition.

Health Care Payment Extension Gets Tentative OK

City retirees over 65 may get a two-month extension on health care payment supplements provided by the city.

During a commission workshop meeting Monday tentative approval was given to the motion to continue until Jan. 1, 1988, the city's policy of issuing checks to those retirees not covered by the city's employee insurance.

The motion to continue the payments must still be approved at the Sept. 28 meeting of the city commission.

The city began issuing the health care payment supplements of $73.91 in May to all retirees over age 65 who were not enrolled in the city's health plan. The program cost the city $18,918, with an additional $5,689 coming from fund balance reserves to pay for the program for the rest of the year.

Under the program, those retirees who were enrolled in the city's health plans would continue to receive health coverage at the city's cost. Retirees who were not enrolled in the city's health plan would receive an amount equal to the cost of the city's health premiums.

The payment supplements were supposed to stop on Oct. 1,

That is the date the city must begin paying to Florida Retirement Systems 0.24 percent of each employee's salary, in addition to the 13 percent the city is already paying.

State legislation passed in July requires all participants in the state retirement system to contribute 13 percent of each employee's salary to FRS. FRS then puts the money into a fund for retirement benefits for city employees.

The money paid to FRS will be sent to all of the city's retirees Jan. 1 for the purpose of defraying health insurance costs. At that time FRS will send each retiree a monthly payment of $1 for each year of service.

Kim Smith, Director of Administration, said the commissioners will decide in December what further action they will take concerning health care payment supplements for retirees. Smith said at that time the city should have more information concerning the guidelines of the FRS program.

The legislation that set up the FRS program also mandated that cities allow retirees to purchase the same health insurance as any active employee.

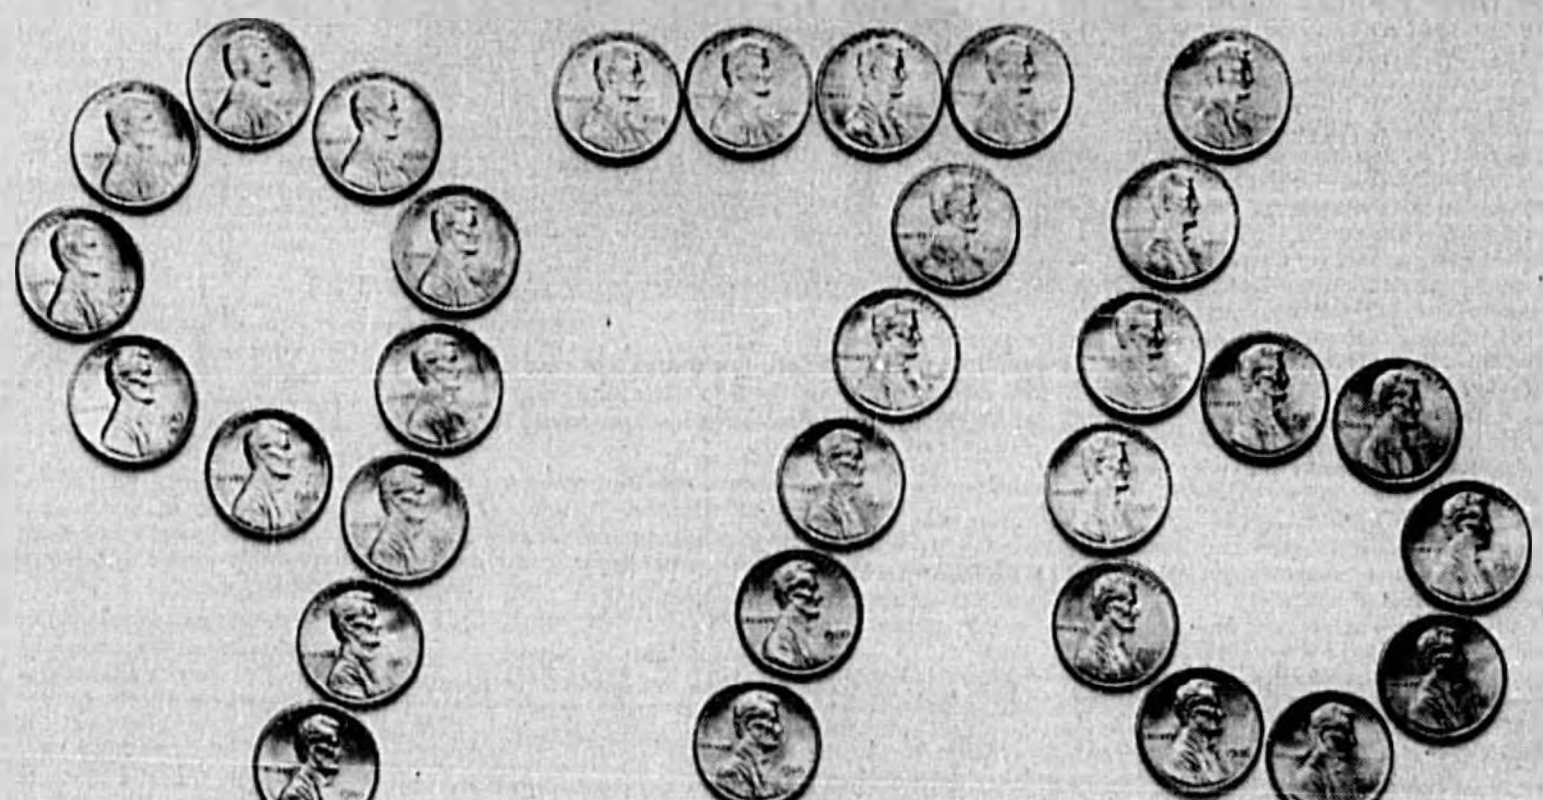

The city of Sanford has two insurance plans available. Cost for single coverage on the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Indemnity/PPO is $91.82 monthly. Cost for single coverage on Health Options (HMO) is $78.12 monthly.

City retirees were contacted regarding the two insurance programs and 22 opted for the BC/BS Indemnity/PPO plan; 12 requested the HMO plan; 18 declined coverage; and 9 were undecided, but still had the option to decide by Dec. 31 whether they wanted insurance.

Lewis Vs. Curry? Collision, Of Course

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

Earnie "Sackman" Lewis and John "Battering Ram" Curry, two seniors who figure to collide repeatedly Friday night when Lake Mary hosts Seminole...

Lewis, Seminole's 6-foot-2, 210-pound linebacker, collected seven solos and seven assists in a 29-20 victory over Orlando Edgewater Friday to take over the leadership for county tackles...

Lewis, a three-year starter who needs 115 tackles this year to reach 400 for his career, said the "Notes" were backluster during the first half, falling behind, 20-9.

Thus inspired, Seminole blanked the Eagles in the second half. Warren and defensive end Paul Newell turned back a fourth-and-1 at the goal line to preserve the scoreless 24 minutes and inspire the offense...

"That was big play at the goal line," Edgewater coach Sam Weir said. "I thought we had them, but they came through with the clutch play."

While Lewis and friends had to come from behind at Orlando, Lake Mary's Curry and company knocked off arch-rival Lake Brantley, 21-0, thanks to eight turnovers by the Patriots.

When coach Walt Morgan gave his more experienced swimmers a chance in a dual meet with Mount Dora Tuesday night, it wasn't like he was throwing a bunch of scabs into the pool...

"We put a lot of kids who don't swim much in the open events and they did a good job," Morgan said. "We had quite a few new kids who are improving every time they compete and they deserved a chance to show what they could do."

The Rams return to the pool Saturday in the first big invitational meet of the season, the Bishop Moore Invitational at Longwood's Sharidan Aquatic Center...

Of 90 yards pulled into a tie with Mary's Sheldon Richards for the county leadership with seven catches each...

Although Oviedo's Alan Greene trails the leaders by two catches, no one is making his receptions count more than the sure-fingered receiver...

Greene is tied for the scoring leadership with Seminole's Jerod Jones. Each had three TDs. Jones, a versatile junior, has one rushing, one receiving and one on an 80-yard punt return...

Lake Mary's Stacy Leddon, who averaged 45.6 yards on five kicks against Brantley, took over the punting lead with a 42.3 average. Leddon's best boot Friday was a 52-yarder...

In the other defensive categories, Ferris and Oviedo's Emory Sneed each have three sacks...

Football

Turnovers or not, Curry was his usual self. The 6-0, 190-pound fullback pounded out 136 yards on 17 carries and two touchdowns. Curry totaled 83 yards the first week against a tough Winter Park squad...

Lake Howell's Marquette Smith trails Curry by just 13 yards. The Silver Hawks' freshman phenom picked up 118 yards in 12 tries in a 16-8 setback to DeLand to run his total to 203...

Lewis, who said he and Curry are good friends off the field, is looking forward to Friday's confrontation. "I have a lot of respect for John," Lewis said.

"Every time I fill out a college football questionnaire and it asks me who is the toughest player I face, I put down John Curry."

Another player who will have a major impact Friday is Seminole quarterback Jeff Blake. The 6-2, 175-pound senior tossed four TD passes against Edgewater to give him a county-leading five for the season...

"Jeff is just looking to improve each week," offensive coordinator/father Emory Blake said. "He picked up the defense better this week because it was a 50 compared to Astronaut's 4-4."

More impressive than Blake's four scores was the fact they went to four different receivers. Dwight Brinson, Jerod Jones, Jerry Gormann and Terrance Eady each grabbed one.

Today, Lake Howell battles Oviedo at the UCF pool. Friday, Lake Brantley's powerful team goes to Jacksonville for the Bolles Invitational.

In individual events, Lake Mary got firsts from Jaime Bojanowski in the 50 free (23:21), Brad Bridgewater in the 100 backstroke (1:00.67)...

Lake Mary's winning 400 free relay team of Steve Kostowicz, Rosser, Simecek and Bojanowski finished with a time of 3:27.92.

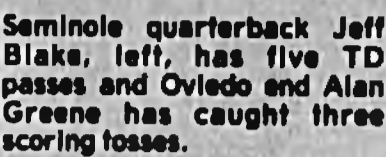

Lake Mary also won the 200 medley relay as the team of Kostowicz, Rosser, Simecek and Bojanowski combined for a time of 1:48.99.

Elisa Maher took first place in the 50 free with a time of 27.41 while the 200 medley relay team of Jessica Politto, Ellen Cook, Angie Odom and Patty Ames won with a time of 2:14.9.

"We have a lot of depth on the girls team which is good in dual meets, but we have to get our top girls to do their best in invitational meets," Morgan said.

Tennis Buffs No Longer Overrun Courts

Tennis was called the sport of the 70s. People who like sports and liked to be active picked up a ball and a racquet and literally overran the available tennis courts.

No one really knows exactly why tennis became so popular in the 70s. Some say the added coverage on television was responsible. Some say it was in conjunction with the emphasis on physical fitness which also started in the 70s. Others say that golf courses got so crowded that golfers had to find another activity. Who knows?

What we do know is that around 1969 or 1970, tennis literally exploded on the American scene. So many people started to get involved in the game that for a while tennis had the same problem as golf - not enough places to play.

I can remember scores of people coming by the college courts back in Tennessee, just waiting for a class to end or the team to finish practicing, so that they could get a court. Some waited for a long time. We even had to have sign-up boards to help sort out the mess.

Play was often limited to doubles and a one-hour time limit was imposed. We only had six courts at the time. And this was a university with over 10,000 students (the recommendations even then for colleges and universities was one court for every 500 students).

Classes were jam-packed with students. Intramural and recreational tennis was thriving. At the varsity matches there were often up to 500 people out to watch the match. I remember one match we had against the University of Alabama that drew over 1,200 fans. A college tennis match - can you believe that?

If it was hectic during the warm weather months, it was downright frantic during winter.

In some places up north, people would pay $50 per hour to rent a court. Most indoor facilities stayed open 24 hours a day. Rates were lower after midnight, so the courts were always full even at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning.

Some die-hard tennis buffs wanted to play so bad that they started playing their matches at daybreak on outdoor courts, even if they had to shovel snow off the courts.

All during the early 70s tennis grew and grew in popularity. Courts were being built everywhere. Equipment sales went up, up, up. Everybody, but everybody, played tennis. In fact, in 1975, tennis was the No. 1 participation sport in America.

The era of open tennis had hit the professional game and the pros were starting to make lots of money. Jimmy Connors, Chris Evert, Bjorn Borg, Billy Jean King and many others became household names. You could see top-notch tennis on TV and read about it every day. Tennis was King of Sports.

That was the 1970s. Tennis is no longer king. Tennis has fallen from America's No. 1 participation sport to about No. 5 or No. 6. Fishing, believe it or not, is America's No. 1 participation sport. Walking and jogging are second. Racketball and aerobics are up there. Soccer is moving up fast and tennis comes along next.

This is 1987 and most of the decline has happened within the past five or six years. Why?

Again, the opinions are many and varied. Some say that it's simply a matter of numbers. When people flock to new activities like weight training or aerobic dance, it leaves fewer to play tennis.

Some think that many people were in tennis mainly for the exercise and that it takes less time and often less money to jog or do an aerobic workout along with someone on TV. Or, some just walk around the neighborhood a few times.

Some say that the cost of good equipment has gotten so high that a lot of people are looking for cheaper activities. To join a private club is not cheap and many are rather exclusive and hard to get into anyway.

In my opinion, the main reason for the decline of the numbers playing the game lies in the fact that tennis is probably the most difficult game to play well. I stress play well. When one first gets involved in tennis, everything goes okay for awhile. Most people improve dramatically for about six months.

Then the trouble starts. All of a sudden the improvement stops and a long plateau is reached. Many beginners never go beyond this point. To get better from there takes hours of practice, maybe private lessons, etc. Many drop out and go to another activity at this time.

It simply isn't enjoyable to them unless they can get better; so they start playing racketball or some other sport in which they can make quicker progress. Most don't have the patience to improve. If they only knew that a few months of really hard work at the six-month period would help them make another jump up, I think they would stay in the game.

Anyway, for whatever reason tennis has declined. It has. It's sad to see courts sitting empty, and they are. It's sad to see people getting into other activities after only a few weeks or months of tennis, and they do.

The United States Tennis Association is aware of the problems and is trying to do something about it. Free clinics with big-name pros are being set up all over the United States. Lots of TV time and magazine space is promoting tennis and even massive programs to get kids free rackets.

Maybe, just maybe, it will all work and tennis will become the sport of the 90s.

Rogers, Warmack Pick Up Victories

David Rogers moved up from his 10th starting spot to win the 25-lap Late Model feature on Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway. Lee Faulk was second, closely followed by Mike Goldberg, Stan Eads and Joe Middleton.

In Street Stock action, quasi-unbeatable Sid Stiles, who has not been pressured by hardly anyone this season, had to hold off a very determined Joey Warmack until the two-to-go sign. At that point, Stiles dropped out and Warmack went on to win.

Dave McCabe took an easy win in the limited late model main. Track publicist John Darveau said he was then protested, but found legal. Finishing second was veteran Ernie Bass who came out on top of a tough four-way battle for the runner-up spot.

Driving the Pine Castle Auto Parts Opal, Milo Vidic won the four cylinder finale. The Roadrunner feature went to Ricky Marshall. Jeff Brown won the "A" Bomber main, with Mike Fritts taking his second win of the weekend in the "B" Bomber finale. Wray Shafer accomplished the same feat in the Florida Modified division.

Among the other winners were Connie Lovell in the Australian Pursuit, Art Chapman and Gary Salvatore in the Great American Sack Race and David Rogers' crew in the pit stop contest.

Chavers Hurls Tribe Past Rams; All-Purpose Stutz Hoists Oviedo

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer
Quarterback Tony Chavers completed a pair of fourth-down passes for touchdowns Tuesday night as Seminole High upended Lake Mary, 18-14, in freshman football action at Seminole.
"The offense came up with the big plays when they had to," Seminole coach Mike Ferrell said. "And the defense did an excellent job to hold Lake Mary to 14 points."
Seminole, 1-1, has an open date next Tuesday while Lake Mary, also 1-1, hosts unbeaten Oviedo.
Seminole took a 6-0 lead in the first quarter Tuesday when, on fourth down, Chavers completed a 25-yard touchdown pass to JoJo Murphy. The Tribe took a 12-0 lead in the second quarter when, again on fourth down, Chavers hooked up with Henry Williams on a 20-yard scoring pass.
Lake Mary got on the board one play after taking the Seminole kickoff when Chris Haney broke loose for a 65-yard touchdown run. The kick failed and Seminole had a 12-6 halftime lead.
The freshman "Noles ran the lead to 18-6 in the third quarter when Tim Hampton scored on a one-yard plunge. The defense then held Lake Mary scoreless until just under two minutes left in the game when Thomas Lawson scored on a two-yard run for the Rams. Lawson also ran in the conversion to cut Seminole's lead to 18-14.
Lake Mary then attempted on onside kick but Seminole recovered and ran out the clock for the victory.
"It was a very good overall performance for the team," Ferrell said. "The offensive line came together tonight and we had some outstanding plays on defense."
Aaron Cain recovered two fumbles in key situations to lead the defense which also stopped Lake Mary on downs twice inside the 10-yard line. Oscar Edwards, Bernard Brown, Chris Dowling, Ryan Mora and Ruben Blake also performed well for the defense.

Williams had 85 yards rushing to lead the offense while the line of Barry Burnett, Keith Switzer, Ken Huffman and Mitchell Wiggs paved the way.
Seminole's next game is Oct. 6 at Lake Brantley.
LIONS MAUL ST. CLOUD, 32-6
Chad Stutz ran for 70 yards, passed for 30 and scored a pair of touchdowns Tuesday night as Oviedo's freshman mauling St. Cloud, 32-6, at Oviedo High.
The Lions, 3-0, take on Lake Mary in a big freshman matchup next week.
Ricky Vaughn gave the Lions the early lead with a 21-yard run in the first quarter, but St. Cloud came back with a 78-run on its first play from scrimmage to tie it.
Oviedo took the lead for good late in the first quarter when Stutz ran in a seven-yard quarterback keeper. Stutz then threw to Chris Tabscott for the two-point conversion and a 14-6 Oviedo lead. Stutz scored on a one-yard run in the second quarter to give the Lions a 20-6 halftime advantage.
Oviedo tacked on two more scores in the second half. Dana Allen scored on a 30-yard run in the third period and, early in the fourth quarter, Todd Jefferson ran three consecutive times for 15 yards, including a one-yard touchdown plunge.
Allen led the Lions' rushing game with 87 yards on 10 carries while Tabscott had three receptions for 18 yards. Shannon Higgins led the defense with 10 tackles, the third game in a row he has had 10 or more tackles.

Dollar Opens Up

By United Press International
The dollar opened higher in light trading on major world money markets Wednesday. Gold was mixed.

The Tokyo foreign exchange market was closed Wednesday in observance of the autumnal equinox, a national holiday. The market will reopen on Thursday. In European trading, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.8255 German marks, up from Tuesday's close of 1.8171.

The dollar opened in Zurich at 1.5125 Swiss francs, up from 1.5055 and in Paris at 6.0845 French francs, up from 6.0568.

In Brussels, the dollar opened at 38.055 Belgian francs, up from 37.92. In Amsterdam at 2.055 Dutch guilders, up from 2.044 and in Milan at 1.317.50 lire, up from 1.311.75 on Tuesday night.

In London, the pound opened at 1.8365, down from 1.8435 on Tuesday. In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly lower in light trading following the government reports that indicated a high-than-expected inflation rate registered in August and lower-than-anticipated rate of orders for durable goods.

August Inflated 0.5 Percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sharp price rises for fuel and air fares sent the inflation rate up 0.5 percent in August, the biggest increase in seven months, the Labor Department said today. The jump in the Consumer Price Index was about twice as high as many analysts expected and works out to an annual rate of 5.8 percent. Through the first eight months of this year, the United States was on track to end 1987 with a 5.1 percent increase in prices.

The government said higher energy and shelter costs caused about two-thirds of the rise in August's 0.5 percent CPI increase.

Gasoline cost 3.1 percent more and fuel oil rose 1.4 percent in price. In the transportation category, air fares leaped 1.5 percent. August's increase was the biggest since prices shot up 0.7 percent in January. Then, as now, energy was the reason. Food and beverages cost only 0.1 percent more in August, after seasonal adjustment, than they did in July, the Labor Department said.

Apparel and upkeep costs were unchanged. Gasoline's 3.1 percent increase was partly offset by a 2.4 percent drop in auto finance charges.

...Session

Tuesday evening. "I think we have turned the debate," declared Mills. "You have stayed the course now for us to begin to accomplish what we started. In April, we will come out of here with a fair revenue source to fund the future of Florida." The Legislature approved the tax in April at the insistence of Martinez. The 5 percent sales tax on goods was extended to an array of consumer services to raise $1 billion each full year — money state leaders say is critical to Florida's future.

Now that public opinion is running heavily against the tax, Martinez, saying he made a mistake, wants it repealed. He refuses to consider any replacement levy unless the Legislature first grants him expansive controls over the drafting of state budgets.

Senators departed minutes after voting 24-16 to repeal the tax and not immediately replace the lost revenues.

However, the vote had the effect of sending the bill back to two Senate committees because it leaves the current state budget out of balance. So the Senate action is not final and the next step is up to the Appropriations and Finance and Tax committees.

"The public should not get the idea" that the Senate agreed to repeal the tax, without replacing the lost money, Vogt emphasized Tuesday night.

public relations consultant in Hollywood.

At Rowan's side were his third wife, Joanna, and his daughter Mary. His son, Tom, was en route to the Rowan home in Englewood, Fla., 40 miles from Fort Myers, when the comedian died of lymphatic cancer.

He said, when the county's first variance of the 35-foot building height requirement was approved he understood that a study would be done on how high-rise buildings would affect such things as fire protection. He asked if the commissioners knew whether a special fire truck that could reach the top floor of a 97-foot building could negotiate present streets, be housed in present facilities and whether firemen would need specialized training.

AAA has agreed to pay $300,000 for new fire equipment, but Daley asked whether this would cover the costs he mentioned, or if it would require additional tax money.

Commissioner Sandra Glenn said there has been no commitment by either the county or the regional planning council to a study specifically on high-rise building effects, but said the state Department of Transportation is completing a traffic study of Interstate 4 Highway 46 and State Road 498 which will include effects of development, including high-rise buildings. Also, the county has applied for a grant to do a study of the 1-4 corridor and future development, she said. County Manager Ken Hooper said county building codes require sprinkler systems in buildings such as the proposed AAA building and County Public Safety Director Gary Kaiser who approved the proposal, said sprinkler systems were more important for fire protection in tall buildings than ladder trucks.

Commissioner Bob Sturm told Daley that the Altamonte Springs Fire Department has a fire truck with a ladder that will extend to 110 feet and that the county fire department trains with the Altamonte Springs department in handling fire in high-rise buildings.

He said a new fire truck will probably cost between $270,000 and $345,000 and if it requires a new bay to be stored in, one might be built in Lake Mary, where other high-rises are expected to be built in the future.

Glenn also told Daley she researched why the original 35-foot height limit was placed on buildings and found that it was arbitrarily chosen because developers at that time thought that would be a reasonable limit. "There is nothing special about that 35-foot limit," she said.

AAA had previously received approval for a 65-foot building.

pilot were flying in it today. Seminole County Sheriff John Polk, at the scene said identification was found inside the plane, but the names of the victims were being withheld pending the notification of next of kin and arrival of Federal Aviation Authority investigators.

A FAA investigator was expected to be on the scene by about 10 a.m. this morning, and will spearhead the investigation into the crash, with support from the sheriff's department, Polk said. The bodies, Polk said, would not be removed from the plane until after the FAA representative arrived.

Seminole sheriff's pilot Barry Maughan said he had noted the position of the planes' instruments after impact to aid in the investigation. Maughan said he did not see anything that was obviously out of order with the plane when it crashed. But he added that it will be the FAA's job to determine what went wrong.

An official at the Sanford Airport said that the crash site is exactly 2 1/2 miles due east of one of that airport's runways. The Sanford Airport control tower was not open at the time of the crash, so no radio contact from the Piper was made with the tower.

Kinley said that the plane was headed west, apparently to the Sanford Airport. The victims, he said, "suffered severe trauma."

There was no record of a flight plan having been filed in Melbourne or Orlando for this plane.

A spokesman for Merritt Island Air Service, Merritt Island, in Brevard County near Cocoa, said today that the new plane was recently purchased from the air service and it had taken off from the service's field in the past, but there were no workers at the field early today. So it is not known if the crashed plane took off from there this morning.

Florida Game Warden Jesse Baker, who was on his way to work and was near the scene when he heard a radio dispatch to the crash site was the first law enforcement officer on the scene. Baker said that witnesses heard the crash, which followed an apparent loss of power by the plane's engine, but apparently no one was outside to see the crash, which occurred before sunrise. It was not raining at the time of the crash.

Kinley said that in addition to a fire engine, firefighters also brought a hazardous materials unit on the scene to deal with a fuel spill. Although a lot of fuel spilled from the plane as it crashed there was no fire and the foam from the hazardous materials unit was not needed. The gas dissipated, Kinley said. Firefighters were called to the scene at 6:38 a.m. and arrived at 6:47 a.m.

Teresa Whaley, 25, whose home is just off State Road 48, on Clekk Road less than half a mile north of the crash site, said she thought the crash was a thunder clap. Her two pre-school age children slept through the noise and Simons came to their home and asked her husband to come with him to help at the crash site, she said.

Electrical service was out in the area and had not been restored by 8:30 a.m. today.

respect," he said. Seminole County's only Jewish congregation, Beth Am is a Conservative temple. It will hold all of its High Holy Day services this week because of the estimated attendance of 800 persons at the Slovak Gardens community building on Howell Branch Road near State Road 436.

The opening service today will begin at 8 p.m.

The sound of the shofar (ram's horn) will be heard at the 9 a.m. service on Thursday as the ancient instrument is blown 100 times by Rabbi Shapiro with the help of a skilled member of the congregation, Jerry Goldsmith. According to Jewish tradition, the blast of the shofar causes God to open the Gates of Mercy and accept repentance and requests for forgiveness.

Longwood attorney Norman Levin will serve as cantor. A family service geared to young children will be conducted at 2 p.m. on Thursday and the evening service will begin at 8 o'clock. The Rosh Hashanah observance will conclude on Friday with a 9 a.m. service at which the shofar will also be blown. A final blast will be sounded at the end of the Yom Kippur service to conclude the 10-day observance.

The congregation's regular meeting place is the Fellowship Church on Red Bug Road near Casselberry, but because the ark and the torah will already be at Slovak Gardens, the regular 8:15 p.m. Friday service and the 10 a.m. Saturday service will also be held there.

with the idea that it would be used for Red Bug Road improvement, but there is no accountability in how that money was spent," Christensen retorted.

Commissioner Bob Sturm then got into the argument, telling Christensen, "If you had paid attention at the budget planning sessions, you would certainly have seen that accountability is there. The millage rate in this county is substantially below what it was 10 years ago and even two years ago."

Chairman Fred Streetman also took Christensen to task, saying, "This is the first time, in all the budget sessions we've had, that I've heard anyone say they didn't think this was a good budget."

He praised Office of Budget and Management Director Penny Fleming and her staff for their months of work on the budget, and department heads and constitutional officers for submitting what he said was "a lean, mean budget before we ever got to it."

However, Christensen said she had objected to the budget during work sessions, without any result.

Speaking against adoption of the budget at the public hearing,

Harry Smith, of Chula Vista, said he couldn't understand why, with all development in the county and the increased taxable valuation, he should be taxed for growth costs.

"It seems my taxes increase every year. It doesn't matter whether it's because the millage goes up, or whether my property is valued higher. It's still more money out of my pocket," he said.

Smith used an example of 1,300 acres of agricultural land which he said was only taxed a total of $139 for one year. Then, it was developed into single family homes and taxed at about $900 an acre.

Cook Of The Week

Musician And Fashion Authority Is A Natural In The Homemaking Arts

By Dorothy Greene
Herald Correspondent

Our Cook of the Week takes the cake! But it's really a pie. A rich and luscious chocolate pie that, according to Jane Briel of Lake Mary, gets top honors as her family's traditional all-occasion dessert. "It's our birthday pie," she says. "Every member of my family wants it for their birthday. They do not want a cake, and that includes my 8-year-old son, Jeremy. The pie is so smooth and rich, it's like velvet." The recipe, she explains, came from a restaurant in Orlando years and years ago, and after making it once, it became her most requested dessert and a permanent part of her recipe file.

"Both of my parents are wonderful cooks," says Mrs. Briel, "and the thing I feel very blessed about is that my father will be 95 years old and my mother is 78. Right now, they have a summer home in the mountains of North Carolina and they garden, truly garden, almost six months out of the year. My mother and father plant all the seeds, everything. Most of their vegetables come from seeds rather than individual plants. They have absolutely no help, and my mother cans almost every day. She cans spinach, green beans, wax beans, tomatoes — the most delicious tomatoes you've ever had — and corn. She actually takes the corn off the cob and cans that. She freezes some things, too. And speaking of age in my family," she continues, "I have an uncle in Orlando who just had his 93rd birthday!"

Because her parents do not grow peaches or apples on their property, Mrs. Briel goes on to say that they buy bushels of the fruit and her mother cans that, also. "She'll can jar after jar after jar of peaches," says our cook, "and she takes the apples, cooks them down and makes applesauce and cans that. Not only that, but she makes pies — three, four or five at a time — and puts them in the deep freeze. So both my mother and my father have taught me how to cook," she adds.

"My mother is also a tremendous seamstress," says Mrs. Briel. "To this day, she still makes almost all of her own clothes. When I was in seventh grade, my mother said, 'You will learn to sew and make your own clothes. It's very important that every girl knows how to sew.' So, besides my music and being a true friend with my mother, that was the greatest gift I think she has ever given me because I love to sew." To her credit, Mrs. Briel has some beautiful examples of her needlework, such as draperies and clothing for herself and her family, and has also enjoyed adding some beautifully embroidered patterns to the backs of plain chambray shirts.

Originally from Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Briel's family moved to Florida when she was about 10 years old. "My father was semi-retired from his own business as a food broker for Del Monte vegetables, Diamond walnuts and Ragú sauces," she says, "and he traveled all over the northern states. His dream was to build a home in Florida and retire here. My mother is a violinist and she started the string program in the Orange County elementary schools back in the early 1950s." Today, Mrs. Briel's parents, Alvera and Vaughan Martin, live in an older section of Winter Park near Rollins College and divide their time between there and their productive little acre in Celo, N.C., surrounded by mountains. Mrs. Briel also has two brothers. David Martin is the artistic director of the Fargo-Moorhead Civic Opera Company in Minnesota. "He's been with them for 15 years," she says. "He was an opera student at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, and received his master's degree in music from Indiana University. He's lived in North Dakota for years and years." Another brother, Craig, is a salesman for Office Express in Orlando. Hers is a talented and close-knit family, according to Mrs. Briel. Apart from her own expertise in the field of music, other members of her family are quite adept at playing the piano, the flute, the violin and cello.

All through Winter Park High School our cook played the flute in the school band and was also head majorette. And as a graduate of Florida State University, she used her degree in fashion merchandising to enter the executive training program at Jordan Marsh in Miami for a year before transferring to the Orlando store when it opened. Starting in the children's department as a temporary buyer, she eventually became assistant buyer of better sportswear. "I'm using my degree in a fun spot now," she laughs, "working part time at J.C. Penney's in Sanford in the women's fashions department. That keeps my retailing alive and I love it," she says.

She met her husband, Robert, while both were working at Jordan Marsh and they were married in 1964 after a courtship of about 18 months. Bob Briel later became an educator and has been teaching American history to eighth graders at Teague Middle School in Altamonte Springs since 1973. Their oldest son, Kevin, 22, works for Oylor Bros., a landscaping company in Orlando. Her second son, Shawn, 20, has been with Quincy's in Sanford for about two years and is their head night cook and is hoping to go into their management program. "Both boys have places of their own, but keep in touch all the time," says Mrs. Briel.

Mrs. Briel's youngest son, Jeremy, is 8 years old, "and is just a happy-go-lucky kid," she says. "He's a third grader at Lake Mary Elementary. He loves to be outdoors and is very, very close to his dad. They play tennis together and Jeremy loves to help his dad with the yard work." This past summer, the Briels and Jeremy spent their vacation visiting Washington, D.C., Williamsburg and Jamestown, Va., before going on to visit friends in Maryland. "We did this in our van," she says, "and we camped. It was a beautiful experience."

Our cook is an exuberant woman who devotes her time and energy to her family's needs while still pursuing some pleasurable activities of her own. At the age of 5, she was a piano student at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, "which is right under the rank of Julliard," she says. Every Saturday morning, she and her mother and brothers would take an hour-long bus ride to the music school for piano lessons, "and sometimes my mother would have a violin lesson," she adds. "We'd all wait for each other and then go to one of the big department stores for lunch before going back home. It was in the early days of television and I can remember that each one of us had to practice for a half hour in the morning and a half hour in the evening before the TV ever went on." She continued her lessons at Rollins College for another three years before moving on to a private instructor.

About 10 years ago she decided to share her love of music by teaching the piano to students at her home and feels that it has become an important part of her life. "This year I'm going to have 14 students," she says, "and I think the most challenging thing that is going to happen is that I'll be working with a blind boy. He's very eager and I think it's going to be a challenge for both of us. He's a very bright boy and can already find every note on the piano. He loves the music, he wants to play it, so we're going to give it a try." They will be working with the Braille system, which is new to Mrs. Briel, but she is looking forward to the experience with enthusiasm.

She also teaches at the preschool center in Sanford with kindergarten and pre-kindergarten children. "I would call it a creative music experience," she explains. "I teach the children rhythms. I teach them movements to go with the music that they hear. We have a little band — they have the triangles, the little cymbals, and we use potato chip cans for drums. I teach them how they can use a small baking powder can and put little stones or seeds in there for a shaker, and each one can have their own sound." Accompanied by Mrs. Briel's piano, the children enjoy the expression of music through the rhythms and beats of her playing.

Microwave Magic

Fresh Crop Of Juicy Apples Sure Sign Of Autumn

A sure sign of autumn is a fresh crop of juicy apples. Apples to munch on, warm apple pie, Waldorf salad, just to name a few ways to enjoy this low calorie (80 per medium) fall fruit. Some varieties microwave better than others simply because some apples can be cooked and hold their shape and not become mushy. Golden Delicious, Ida-Red, Greening and McIntosh are varieties that are good for cooking. Rome, Winesap and Red Delicious are varieties for eating out of hand, or for salads. You may have some special favorites that were "local" varieties from "back home" that make the best pies. Maybe this fall you'll be lucky and get some of them.

Apples will now be the most abundant and at the best price so start using them in your every day meal planning. And, remember that an apple a day ...

While watching the football game on TV, serve fresh fruits (grapes, apples), a cheese ball and favorite beverages. This cheese ball has an apple as an ingredient. The apple lends texture and color as well as flavor.

JOHNNY APPELSEED APPETIZER (Cheese Ball)

12 ounces cream cheese
1 apple, unpeeled (Red Delicious)
1/2 cup green onion, finely sliced
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon white pepper

Midge Mycoff

Home Economist
Seminole Community College

2 tablespoons apple juice
1 1/2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese
1/2 cup finely chopped walnuts
Microwave cream cheese in mixing bowl for 1 1/2 minutes on 85% power. Core apple and chop into small pieces. Add apple, onion, salt, pepper and apple juice to softened cream cheese. M/W on 50% power 2-3 minutes to blend flavors. Add Cheddar cheese and chill for ease in shaping. Form into ball and roll in chopped nuts. Serve with assorted crackers.

A meal that has some kind of pork doesn't seem complete without some apple dish (it must come from my German background). Applesauce is always good, and these glazed apples are so easy and attractive on the meat platter.

GLAZED APPLE SLICES

3-4 large apples
1 cup (scant) sugar
1 stick butter
2 teaspoons lemon juice

1 piece cinnamon stick or 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Wash and core apples. Cut into slices of uniform pieces. Place sugar, butter, lemon juice and cinnamon stick in 1 1/2 quart casserole and M/W on 100% power for 1 1/2 minutes. Add apples and stir to coat. Cover with plastic wrap and M/W on 100% power 6-7 minutes, stirring once. Reduce power and microcook on 50% power for 5-6 minutes or until fork tender.

It's the crust that gives this quick pie its special nut-like texture and flavor.

DELICIOUS APPLE PIE

Crust:
2 cups quick cooking oatmeal
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/2 cup butter
Combine oats, butter, sugar and press into 9-inch pie plate, covering bottom and sides. M/W on 100% power 2-3 minutes.

Pie Filling:
4-5 cups peeled, sliced apples
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 cup butter

Place apples in a 2-quart bowl and sprinkle with lemon juice. Cover with plastic wrap and M/W on 100% power 5-7 minutes. Melt butter on 100% power for 30-45 seconds, add sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg stirring to blend; M/W 1 minute and add to apples. Cool slightly and pour into cooled pie crust. Serve with whipped cream, or ice cream.

The smell of spice in the air is another sign of autumn. The mixture of apples and spices is a good one.

SPICY APPLE SAUCE CAKE (1 layer)

1 cup all-purpose flour
3/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon shortening
1/2 cup applesauce
2 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
1/4 cup chopped nuts or raisins (optional)

Place all ingredients in mixing bowl. Blend at low speed, then beat at medium speed 2 minutes. Spread batter in a lightly greased and floured 8x8 glass baking dish.

M/W on 50% power 6 minutes, increase power to 100% and M/W 2-5 minutes or until done.

Let stand directly on countertop 5-10 minutes.
* Rotate container if your microwave is not equipped with a carousel. Frost with caramel frosting or sprinkle with powdered sugar.

In addition to her music, Mrs. Briel also likes to bowl on Friday mornings and is also a member of PEO (Philanthropic Educational Organization) whose main goal is to help women and men meet their educational needs through scholarships. Mrs. Briel enjoys spending as much time as possible with young Jeremy and prefers to work her schedule around her family's activities so that she is always at home before and after his school day.

Mrs. Briel turns nostalgic when she recalls a very special family gathering about six years ago. "My whole side of the family spent Christmas in the mountains," she says, "and instead of giving Christmas presents to each other, even to our spouses, we took all of our money and put that money toward buying meals. Each group of us, about two or three people, would be the cooks for the day for a clan of 19. And the next day, somebody else would decide what meals they were going to have for breakfast, lunch and dinner, and they would go out and buy their things and they would be the cooks and the chefs for the day. And this is the way we lived for a whole week. The only gifts that were exchanged were Santa Claus gifts for my son, Jeremy, and my younger brother's son, Coby. It was a wonderful, wonderful Christmas."

With the same zest she puts into her music, her family life and her hobbies, Mrs. Briel calls upon her homespun methods to cook wholesome, flavorful meals in her bright kitchen. "When we were first married," she says, "we both worked long hours and when I came home I would try to fix things that were more or less simple. But my husband is basically a meat and potatoes man. He likes a nice pot roast with baked potatoes or mashed potatoes. I loved to bake, so I was always making cookies and pies and layer cakes with all the frosting. I was always trying new recipes, as far as baking goes."

"The one thing I do remember, as a teenager, with my mother trying to show me different things, she impressed on me how important it was to make a pie crust correctly. She used to laugh at me because we'd be in the kitchen and I'd be rolling the dough and rolling the dough and rolling it, and then it would fall apart and she would say, "Every time you wad the dough up, it makes the dough harder and that's not good." She'd laugh and say, "Jane, you're never going to learn how to make pie crust that anybody can eat." Today, it's one of her biggest assets, she claims. "I can make a pie crust that's just as flaky as can be. My mother just kept showing me that the trick was when you put in the Crisco you can mix it, but once the water goes in, just stir it enough till it's barely moist.

Her father also had a chance to teach her a thing or two in the kitchen. "He loved to fish," she says, "and we'd go up and down the St. John's River on weekends. He would catch shrimp and he taught me how to devein them and how to cook them in spices, and how very important it was not to cook the shrimp too long because then the shrimp would get tough. He loved cooking fish of all kinds.

At about the same time her mother taught the violin in Orange County schools years ago, her father began to do more of the cooking at home, says Mrs. Briel. "He was the kind of cook," she says, "who would just find whatever he wanted to do and he would start dumping. A little bit of this and a little bit of that, instead of actually measuring things. His Goulash a la Martin is like a Hungarian goulash, except he does put a few ingredients that are not normally in Hungarian goulashes. That particular meal, along with my chocolate pie recipe, are the two things I usually do for my husband's birthday and my oldest son's birthday because they love them so much."

The following recipes will make a wonderful addition to your menu file:

GOULASH A LA MARTIN
3-4 small onions, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon caraway seeds
1/2 teaspoon marjoram
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons paprika
2 pounds beef cut into 1-inch cubes
1 1/2 cups red wine (Zinfandel is best, but you can use burgundy)
Sauté onions in oil until tender and golden. Add caraway seed and marjoram, salt and pepper and mix well. Next, brown meat well on all sides in small amount of oil, then add to above mixture. Pour wine over all, cover tightly and simmer for 2 hours on low heat until meat is tender. You may add water or more wine to give enough gravy. This is excellent served over hot noodles. It also freezes well, so you may want to double the recipe. Serves 6.

POT ROAST

Use sirloin tip or rump roast
Preheat oven to 300°
Rinse meat, pat dry with paper towels. Roll in flour, seasonings and garlic powder until well coated on all sides. Put in roasting pan. May grease pan, but not necessary. Do not cover pan. Bake 5 minutes per pound of roast. Turn oven off. Let roast sit in closed oven for 1 1/2 to 2 hours before serving. The heat of the oven cooks your meat, but the oven door must not be opened or the necessary heat will escape. You may also put in your baking potatoes at the same time and they will cook along with the roast. This recipe makes a rare, tender roast.

CHICKEN AND RICE

2 1/2-3 pound whole chicken
2 cups cooked rice
1/4 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1/2-1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
Rub salt inside of chicken. Combine all ingredients and stuff chicken. Bake at 400° for 45 minutes to 1 hour. Serves 4 to 5.

STEAK SAN MARCO

1 1/2-2 pounds stew meat, cut into bite size pieces
1 large can Italian peeled tomatoes
1 envelope Lipton onion soup mix
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons cooking oil
1 teaspoon oregano
garlic salt and pepper to taste
Put all ingredients together in pan (you do not have to brown the meat first). Allow the mixture to just begin to boil, then reduce heat to simmer. Puncture tomatoes for juice. Simmer 1 to 2 hours until meat is tender. Serve over rice. Serves 4 to 6.

DANISH BROWNED POTATOES

1 tablespoon butter or shortening
1-2 tablespoons sugar
8-10 small potatoes, cooked and peeled
1/2 teaspoon salt
Melt butter in small frying pan. Add sugar. Cook and stir until mixture is browned. Add potatoes and stir constantly until potatoes are lightly browned. Sprinkle with salt, if desired.

CHOCOLATE PIE

1 cup margarine, softened
1 1/2 cups sugar
4 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened II use Nestle's

Choco Bake
2 teaspoons vanilla
4 eggs
1 pie crust, baked and cooled
Beat margarine until smooth. Add sugar and beat until fluffy. Mix in chocolate and vanilla. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Each egg should be beaten for 5 minutes. Pour into pie shell and chill in refrigerator for at least 2 hours. After chilling, whipped topping may be added.

CHOCOLATE STRIP CAKE
1 stick margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
4 eggs
1 can (16 ounces) Hershey's chocolate syrup
1 cup self-rising flour
Mix all ingredients at one time, blending well. Bake in a 13x9-inch pan, lightly greased, at 350° for 30-35 minutes.
Frost with:

Fudge-Like Frosting:
Bring to a boil:
1 stick margarine
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1 cup sugar
Boil 2 minutes being sure not to burn. Stir constantly and use a pan large enough so mixture doesn't boil over. After removing from heat and mixture is still, add 1/2 cup of chocolate chips. Stir until melted and smooth. Pour over cooled cake.

Food for Thought

by Bill Painter

For super chicken, coat skinned pieces with your favorite mustard, then roll in a mixture of fresh bread crumbs, toasted pine nuts, commel, minced garlic, sage and an egg white. Bake 55 minutes at 375°. Serve to compliments.

Microwave fresh vegetables — fast — for a super-crispy "steamed" platter, doing harder ones first.

Wrap prosciutto around a quartered fresh fig. "Glue" in place with a bit of softened cream cheese.

Pita bread holds a handy sandwich and marries well with most flavors. Split into thin rounds to make a club sandwich.

Unexpected company? Soak raisins in rum for a half hour, soften vanilla ice cream, and pour the rummy raisins over. Or create a hollow on top of ice cream, place raisins there and set aflame.

Mother May Not Know Best About Marriage

DEAR ABBY: As a 79-year-old male, I protest your advising that 22-year-old girl to marry Sammy against her mother's wishes. Who else is more interested in the girl's future happiness than her own mother? And who is better qualified to advise in this matter?

Sammy can find happiness with another mate, and the girl can find happiness with another man. She should consider the risks involved, and let her head rule her heart this time.

CHARLES J. BURCH
VERO BEACH, FLA.

Dear Abby

"hates" a man because he's poor, short and Jewish. It appears that Sammy is the one taking the risk. He'll have a mother-in-law who's bigoted, snobbish and ignorant.

DEAR ABBY: Are we losing our minds, or has "Eileen," our 39-year-old daughter, lost hers? Eileen never married, and has not lived at home for 21 years. She has just informed us that she is going to marry the divorced man she's been living with for the last seven years. He is a 57-year-old grandfather.

She wants to be married in the city where she has resided for the last 21 years because that's where all her friends are. (Inidentally, it's 1,500 miles from here.) We understand this, and have no objections to that whatsoever, but she has informed us that it is "customary" for the parents to pay for their daughter's wedding and reception - as long as it is her first. The estimated cost (she says) will be about $15,000.

Abby, we are retired and living comfortably on a pension, but we are not able to finance a $15,000 wedding. Please tell us what our obligations are in this case.

UNABLE TO OBLIGE
IN WEST TEXAS

DEAR UNABLE: Obligations? You have none. Your daughter's demands are not only unreasonable, they're outrageous.

DEAR ABBY: I am nearly 21 years old and I met my real father for the first time six months ago at the funeral of my grandmother. (She was his mother.) That day my father was very kind to me, and I was thrilled to meet the father that I had been missing for so many years. (He and my mother divorced when I was a baby.) I gave him my address and phone number and waited and waited to hear from him, but he never called or wrote.

I wrote him a letter telling him I wanted to see him again to establish a real father-daughter relationship with him. He wrote back saying it was impossible, and he did not want to see me again!

Abby, I know it is his new wife's doings. I really want a father in my life and this man is my blood father and it is not fair for him to reject me. I feel so hurt and alone, and I really need a close relationship with him. We live 2,000 miles apart, but that is no excuse.

Please help me figure out how I can get him to see me and treat me like his daughter. I have written him countless letters, begging him to call or write me, but I have had no response.

What should I do? Now that I have found him, I want him in my life.

REJECTED AND HURT

DEAR REJECTED: You cannot force your father to be a "real father" to you if he chooses not to. It's sad, unfortunate and unfair, but he has made his feelings for now crystal clear. Accept this painful decision and do not pursue him.

DEAR CHARLES: What risks? The man she loves with all her heart happens to be short, poor and Jewish. The girl says he's a good person from a dirt-poor family, and he's working two jobs to put himself through college.

I don't question the mother's interest in her daughter's future happiness, but she is far from qualified to advise her in the choice of a husband if she

A Cure Depends On Cause Of Swelling

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother, 74, has had terrible problems with her legs and feet swelling and giving her pain. At first the swelling would go down with medication, but now it does not. She's becoming immobilized. What can we do?

DEAR READER — The first goal is to find out why your mother has leg and foot swelling. This edema may be caused by chronic heart failure, kidney disease, liver ailments, a tumor or problems with the veins in her legs. Once the cause has been identified, specific treatment can then be employed.

Obviously, diuretics (kidney stimulants) will be useful, but some are more effective for one condition, others for another. Your mother needs a thorough medical examination by a specialist in internal medicine, a diagnostician. This type of doctor should be able to pinpoint the problem and suggest therapy.

is to take low-dose oral contraceptive pills. These synthetic substances work by "fooling" the body into thinking it's pregnant. Therefore, in some women on the Pill, migraine headaches are stopped before they begin. The selective use of beta-blocker medicine (drugs to release arterial spasm) also may be appropriate for you. Ask your doctor which approach might be considered.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

What's the best line of play? Declarer can afford to lose the heart king and two spade tricks. If the defenders also get a diamond ruff, then the contract is set. Certainly the right play at the outset is to win East's club queen with the ace and ruff the club jack in dummy. What next?

Suppose you take the heart finesse and it loses. West might now return a diamond. You would win and lead a spade back toward your king. If that lost to West's ace and East got a diamond ruff, then the spade queen would be the setting trick. Therefore cash the diamond ace before leading trumps. Then, instead of taking the heart finesse, simply play the ace and 10 of hearts. If West wins the king of hearts, there will be no danger. But with the actual deal there is a risk. East wins the king and still has a heart left. And he returns a spade. Now what?

It's time to recall the bidding and the play. East was the dealer and passed. He played the queen of clubs at trick one. When South trumped the club jack in dummy, West did not cover and so presumably East also holds the club king. Can he also hold the spade ace? Although possible, it's a very unlikely (most of us would open, the bidding with A, K and K-Q). So declarer should play East for the spade queen by playing low on the spade return. West can win the ace and give his partner a diamond ruff, but South will still have 10 tricks.

A September To Remember...In The Park

"September in the Park," a festival Sunday in Centennial Park, Sanford, ended a week of festivities celebrating the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. A large crowd turned out for the event which featured an afternoon of performing artists, painters, craftsmen, authors, food and fun. The "Royal Ballet" dancers are from Betty Vaccaro's World of Dance and Performing Arts. The young ballerinas were adjudicated and certified earlier this year by a representative of the Royal Academy of Dancing, London, England, who made a special trip to Sanford for the event. Sunday, in the park, the dancers performed the routine required by the Royal Academy of Dancing for certification.

Rotaract Club Installs Officers

Rotaract Club of Sanford recently installed officers are: from left, Colin Galloway, vice president; Billy Lee, president; Bill Turner, secretary-treasurer; and Robert Baker, sergeant at arms. Membership in Rotaract is open to young men, 18-28. Anyone interested may call 321-1955, or write Rotaract Club of Sanford, P.O. Box, 4375, Sanford, 32772.

Baltimore Students Favor Uniforms In Public School

By Iris Krasnow UPI Feature Writer WASHINGTON (UPI)

There were no rhinestone-studded jeans or pink Reeboks on some 1,600 kids returning to school on the Eastern seaboard. In a pioneering move designed to snuff out peer pressure and slash parents' clothing bills for overly-tired children, three public elementary schools in Baltimore and one in the District of Columbia implemented uniforms for their student bodies, stretching into parochial school terrain. Teenybeat idols like Michael Jackson and Madonna wouldn't think of wearing this untrendy stuff — suits for the boys and jumpers for the girls, done up in navy polyester serge and trimmed with solid-colored shoes. "No, no, no tennis shoes," says William Howard, principal of Cherry Hill 159, one of the participating Baltimore schools. Early reports show the children are adapting to the new styles even if MTV never will. "They love them," says James Patterson, principal of Pimlico Elementary School 223 in Baltimore. "So far, these uniforms have brought a sense of pride and purpose among our students. They feel a sense of identity with the school. And, this does away with that peer pressure to have the newest items."

As well. "I don't know about money for a vacation, but we now have enough for the gas and electric bills," says Janie Lee, whose daughter Cheryl is a fourth-grader at Pimlico. "I bought her two uniforms and that was only $60. Normally, I go out and buy six or seven outfits and that really costs. And it's great to see the kids focusing on the curriculum instead of clothes. "My daughter loves it because she doesn't have to worry about what she's going to wear in the morning. Believe me, children are already worried about how they dress and being with the in crowd by the first grade." Nine-year-old Cheryl attests to the competition: "All the girls used to have contests to see who had the prettiest shoes and the prettiest clothes," she says. Lee, who also has teenagers, thinks uniforms should be adopted by the public high schools as well. "I hear my kids talking and they have friends who just don't go to school on some days because they don't have the latest things to wear, and they don't want to be left out of the school clique." Perhaps the most jubilant of all since the school year began is seamstress Jacqueline Britton, who runs Jacqueline's Custom Fashions in west Baltimore. One of the parents recommended her for the job of manufacturing the uniforms, and the result is a booming cottage industry. "We've been able to hire four new sewing machine operators," says a weary sounding Britton. "I am in the uniform business now, and I plan to stay in it. This could really grow for us in Baltimore, plus we could start getting orders from out of town. I'm very happy about this arrangement." Jacqueline Powell wishes there were uniforms when her six children were brought up through the Baltimore school system. But she gets a vicarious thrill through her grandson, a student at Cherry Hill. "This really helps low income families, and at the same time it teaches children that school isn't about fashion, it's about education." Cherry Hill's principal says his students actually seem to be working more effectively. "The kids are just marvelous," says Howard. "They are more subdued, happily subdued." In Northeast Washington at Burville Elementary School, principal Walter Henry senses a similar shift in behavior: "I know these children very well, and I knew the ones that were potential behavior problems. So far, I haven't seen any problems with them. "I'm not saying uniforms are going to do away with discipline problems, but I think it's going to help," adds Henry. Burville's colors are blue and gray, and its outfits come from Top Uniform in College Park, Md. Today, it stands alone among other public elementary schools in the District, but Henry is picking up lots of interest from his peers around town. "I've heard from other school principals, and they would like to try it too."

Baltimore city public school system, says others in her area may also be following suit. "There are two more elementary schools that want to start uniforms next year."

Veal chops stuffed with cheese, walnuts.

Throw A Party The Easy Way And With Style

Why wait for an excuse to throw a party? Some of the very best party menus require little advance preparation. What makes them so memorable outside of the sheer spontaneity of it all is their reliance on simple foods, with lots of flavor, beautifully presented.

Whether you're in the mood for a barbecue or sit-down dinner under the stars, a well-stocked pantry and freezer supplemented by a quick stop at the supermarket make it possible to put together menus for both in under an hour.

Veal rib chops stuffed with a robust trio of Gorgonzola cheese, toasted walnuts and fresh chives make an impressive yet nearly effortless entree for a sophisticated barbecue. Purchase chops that are 1-inch thick, then use a sharp, thin-bladed knife to form the pockets. Veal is naturally lean, so grill or broil the chops to medium for best results.

While the coals heat, start the pasta for the salad and assemble the eye-catching first course. A purchased dressing streamlines the preparation of colorful marinated Mushrooms and Peppers Dijon, while crispy, crunchy iceberg lettuce out into rafts makes for a spectacular presentation. When selecting iceberg lettuce, look for a "springy-firm" head that gives slightly to gentle pressure.

Pronto Pasta 'n Olive Salad goes together as fast as its name suggests. Quickly cool the pasta under cold running water, drain well and toss with a medley of fresh-from-the-garden vegetables, ripe olives and an easy herb vinaigrette. Ripe olives add a rich color and subtle flavor to all kinds of salads, main dishes and snacks.

Serve Pesto-Olive Pita Pizzas at the table or out on the deck while the ragout reheats. Packaged pita bread is topped with prepared pesto sauce, sun-dried tomatoes, ripe olive sauces and freshly grated Parmesan cheese, then baked just long enough to crisp the crust.

Complementing the ragout is a melange of summer-fresh fruits tossed with bite-sized chunks of crisp California Iceberg Lettuce. Use the large outer leaves to shape the edible bowl.

For a sweet, stylish finale that works with both menus, scoop several flavors of sorbet into stemmed glasses and garnish with fresh mint.

PESTO-OLIVE PITTA PIZZAS

1/2 cup pesto sauce
4 (6 to 7-inch diameter) pita breads
1/2 cup sliced ripe olives

2 tablespoons sliced sundried tomatoes (packed in oil) or sliced pimiento
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 400°F. Divide pesto sauce evenly between pita breads, spreading to edges. Arrange olives and tomatoes on top. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake until edges of bread are crisp and browned, 8 to 10 minutes. Cut each pizza into 6 wedges to serve. 6 first course servings.

MUSHROOMS AND PEPPERS DIJON ON ICEBERG LETTUCE RAFTS

2 cups sliced mushrooms
3/4 cup each: red, green and yellow bell pepper strips
1/2 cup dijon-style vinaigrette

dressing*
1 head Iceberg Lettuce
1 1/2 teaspoons minced parsley

Combine mushrooms, peppers and dressing in bowl. Let stand 30 minutes, stirring occasionally, or cover and refrigerate overnight. Just before serving, cut iceberg lettuce into 6 slices or "rafts." Arrange on individual plates. Stir parsley into vegetable mixture and divide evenly between lettuce rafts. 6 servings.

* Prepared or homemade Italian vinaigrette dressing blended with 1 1/2 teaspoons dijon-style mustard may be substituted.

VEAL CHOPS STUFFED WITH GORGONZOLA AND WALNUTS

6 veal rib chops (8 ounces each), 1-inch thick
4 ounces Gorgonzola cheese*
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened

2 tablespoons chopped toasted walnuts
1 tablespoon snipped chives

Trim excess fat from veal rib chops. Cut 2 1/2-inch horizontal pocket through center of large muscle in each chop. Combine Gorgonzola cheese and butter. Add walnuts and chives; mix well. Divide mixture into six portions, stuffing one portion into each pocket. Close pockets with small skewers or wooden picks. Place chops on grid over medium coals, and grill 12 to 14 minutes, turning once. Or, broil 3 to 5 inches from heat, 5 to 6 minutes per side to desired doneness. 6 servings.

* Domestic or other imported blue cheese may be substituted.

FRONTO PASTA 'N OLIVE SALAD

4 cups cooked, drained and cooled pasta bow-ties
1 cup small broccoli florets
1 cup diced tomato
1 cup pitted ripe olives, halved
1/2 cup thinly sliced yellow summer squash

Tangy Dressing
Toss pasta, broccoli, tomato, olives and squash with 1/2 cup dressing. Mound on platter or spoon into bowl. Serve at room temperature or chilled. Pass remaining dressing. 6 to 8 servings.

Tangy Dressing: In jar, combine 1/2 cup vegetable oil, 6 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 1/4 cup sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon each thyme, rosemary, marjoram and pepper, and 1 medium garlic clove, minced. Shake well to combine.

ICEBERG LETTUCE FRUIT SALAD

1 head Iceberg Lettuce, cored, rinsed, drained and chilled
4 1/2 cups assorted fresh fruits, chilled

1 carton (8 ounces) plain low-fat yogurt
1 to 2 tablespoons honey
1 teaspoon fresh lime juice
3/4 teaspoon finely shredded lime peel

Remove outer leaves of Iceberg Lettuce to line large shallow salad bowl. Cut enough remaining lettuce into bite-size chunks to measure 1 1/2 cups. Gently toss lettuce and fruit; spoon into bowl. Combine remaining ingredients for dressing. Drizzle 1/2 cup over fruit mixture. Pass remaining dressing. 6 servings.

Part of the season's pleasure is enjoying the plethora of fresh vegetables that grace tables at picnics, barbecues and patio parties. Bright colors, variety galore in shapes and textures, versatile vegetables are a main attraction in eye appeal and succulent taste. When vegetables are paired with the microwave and jar process cheese spread — a delicious ready-to-heat-and-pour instant cheese sauce — exciting things happen.

Cooking vegetables in the microwave is an automatic plus. They retain more flavor, color and nutrients since little or no additional water is needed. These Gourmet Green Beans keep their "snap" appeal when cooked in the microwave with an easy combination of sliced mushrooms, crumbled bacon and chopped onion. Using an attractive microwave-safe casserole, the vegetables are quick-cooked till they're crisp-tender, then topped off with jar process cheese spread, hot from the microwave. Remember to use an oven mitt or towel to remove jar from the microwave.

Vine-ripened, plump tomatoes turn into picture pretty Zippy Veggie Cups with mild Mexican process cheese spread. This easy-on-the-cook recipe is perfect for summer's lighter eating and frequent entertaining. Scoop out tomato centers and fill with frozen mixed vegetables and bread crumbs, then microwave and top the tomatoes with this golden process cheese spread — mild, hot or jalapeno for extra zip.

GOURMET GREEN BEANS

YIELD: 6-8 servings.

Chinese Chef Links Cuisine Of East And West In Book

By John DeMers
UPI Food Editor

BERKELEY Calif. (UPI) East may be east and west may be west, but if you're Ken Hom you believe deeply that the twain can meet at the dinner table.

Hom, a celebrated Chinese chef born in Arizona and raised in Chicago, has spent the past few years laboring to bring his Oriental heritage, his French culinary training and his American curiosity into a single sharp focus.

Finally, with the publication of Ken Hom's East Meets West Cuisine, the world can get a look at what one of the nation's most respected culinary artists has been up to. "It's hard to talk about this food without talking about myself," said Hom, whose book takes the first serious look at a new way of cooking without traditional boundaries. "It's something that's probably happening to a lot of Asian-Americans who are just now becoming part of America."

To Hom, the contrast within his own family is a striking reflection of what his innovative cuisine is all about. His mother, he said, almost could be in China for the way she lives her life, surrounded by Chinese friends, Chinese language and Chinese food. Hom, on the other hand, divides his time between Berkeley and Paris, with plenty of room for trips to virtually anywhere his fancies take him.

Hom cooks and eats whatever type of food seems right for the moment, whether that be Chinese sizzling from his wok, French annotated with butter from his saute pan or nouvelle American pulled smoking and spicy from his grill.

The freedom to enjoy any of the world's foods separately inspired Hom over time to seek out through contemplation and experimentation those unnoticed strands that linked one food to another in far-flung corners of the globe.

"It's a style of living and maturing," Hom said. "I feel very eclectic. I don't eat Chinese food every day, even though I love it. I have a very American palate, and I have to satisfy those two desires within me."

The chef stresses repeatedly in his book, however, that mixing of cuisines cannot be entered into lightly. As he puts it, "east-meets-west is not as simple as tossing ginger or black beans into a beurre blanc."

Hom's vision of eating, not surprisingly, pulls together in striking ways the cuisines he most enjoys: Chinese, French, American, Japanese, Italian and Mexican.

GINGER FISH STEW

2 pounds firm white fish fillets, such as sea bass, rockfish or monkfish
Marinade
2 tsp salt
2 Tbsp finely chopped coriander
2 Tbsp finely chopped scallions
1 Tbsp fresh ginger juice
3 Tbsp olive oil
1 tsp Chinese sesame oil
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 quarts fish stock

It also uses many of the wondrous types of exotic produce now being grown in the United States or being imported with increasing regularity to American supermarkets.

"It's brave, but if you look at it carefully, it's extremely restrained," said Hom, whose BBC cooking series has made him even better known in Great Britain than in his native land. "They're innovations, but they're ultimately conservative innovations. They're not way-out food."

It also uses many of the wondrous types of exotic produce now being grown in the United States or being imported with increasing regularity to American supermarkets.

2 thick slices fresh ginger
3 cups peeled, seeded and chopped tomatoes
8 ounces snow peas, ends trimmed
2 ounces fresh kumquats, coarsely chopped
Cut the fish fillets into 1-by-2 inch pieces. In a medium-sized bowl, mix the marinade ingredients, add the fish and marinate for 30 minutes.

Bring the fish stock to a simmer in a medium-sized pot. Add the ginger slices and simmer in the stock for 15 minutes. Remove the slices with a slotted spoon and discard. Add the marinated fish pieces and simmer for 5 minutes. Add the tomatoes, snow peas and kumquats, simmering 5 minutes more. Serve with mayonnaise made with recipe below. Serves 6.

GARLIC-HOT PEPPER-SICHUAN PEPPERCORN MAYONNAISE

1/4 pound fresh hot chiles
2 medium egg yolks
1 Tbsp finely chopped garlic
1 tsp Chinese seasoned salt
Salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste
2 Tbsp fresh orange juice
1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup peanut oil

Roast the peppers over a gas or electric burner until the skin is charred on all sides. Place the peppers in a plastic bag and close tightly. Allow the peppers to steam from their own heat for 15 minutes.

Cut the peppers in half lengthwise. Peel the skin and remove the seeds. Finely chop the peppers and set aside.

Combine the peppers, egg yolks, garlic, Chinese seasoned salt, salt, pepper and orange juice in a mortar or food processor. Mix until the ingredients form a thick paste.

Add the olive oil and then the peanut oil in a slow steady stream, whisking until the oil is fully incorporated.

Restoring Prize Buildings, Homes Requires Flexibility

By Craig Webb
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Rogers gently traced the carved fretwork on the doorframe a few steps from Treasury Secretary James Baker's office.

"See that?" he asked. "That work had been painted so many times over the years that it disappeared. You couldn't even see it until we stripped the door frames. Lots of times we discover things we didn't know were there."

Rogers' excitement befits a man whose specialty is polishing neglected architectural gems. At 31, the Treasury Department's assistant secretary for management has brought new luster to parts of the White House as well as to Oliver North's former haunt, the Old Executive Office Building.

Now he's turned his attention to the Treasury Building, a 151-year-old Greek Revival masterpiece that's pictured on the back of $10 bills.

Buffing this gem is a big project, considering the building encompasses two square blocks, but Rogers believes the principles he applies to his task are the same ones private restorers should use on their own home.

His two golden rules are simple. Rule No. 1, he said, is to decide whether you want to restore or merely renovate.

Rule No. 2 is to be flexible about Rule No. 1.

Like many old homes, the Treasury Building has a murky past and a few surprises. For example, work crews tore down one wall a few years ago and discovered an intricately designed cast-iron vault.

The story is that Andrew Jackson picked the building's site by planting his cane in the middle of Pennsylvania Avenue because it would be easy to watch the nation's money minders.

Building Curator Judith Lanus said that story cannot be verified. What is known, she said, is that construction began in 1836 on designs by Robert Mills, the same architect who did the White House. Work continued until 1842, producing what now is one of the two long sides of the rectangular building.

The other sides were completed in 1861, 1864 and 1869, each time with different architects and in successively more grandiose style.

Treasury's showpiece is the Cash Room, a salon the size of a basketball court where people went to buy and redeem government securities. Billed at its opening as the most expensive room in America, the imposing area features marble walls and floors and a trio of 10-foot-high brass chandeliers.

Most homes today would be swallowed up inside the Cash Room,

High gloss acrylic latex paint is unmatched in beauty and practicality when it comes to servicing the do-it-yourselfer who wants to liven up a prize Victorian home or embark on a special painting project. This new breed of paint can add prestige to an older home and increase its market value.

but Rogers said the principle to working on such a room also applies to lesser areas, say the front parlor in a Victorian home.

"The difference you've got to make sure of is whether you are pursuing in your home a renovation or you are doing a historic restoration," Rogers said. "We're doing restoration, so we have very definite parameters of what we're allowed to do and what we can be true to."

"When you do a renovation of your home, you can change it all around, put in new carpet, new walls and such," he continued. "But when you do a restoration, you do the documentary sort of history on when the building was built, generally get photos of what it looked like, rooms of the same period and then try to get the craftsmen to do it."

In the Cash Room, that meant finding architect's designs for the pink-and-white marble floor and a bill of sale that enabled the department to go to the same quarry in Italy and buy new stone to recreate the original. It also meant scraping away layers of ceiling to discover the original colors.

But Rogers also had to temper his allegiance to the past with more practical considerations.

He replaced one window where a door had been, but another door that had been moved stayed in its spot because a bank vault blocked its original pathway.

He also used paint instead of gold-leafing the ceiling decorations.

"That's all I needed — having people yelling that Treasury was spending so much money gilding these things," he said.

Rogers estimated the restoration will cost $2 million over the next three years, with half the money from Treasury funds and the rest from private donations.

Another problem was a long counter that ran the length of the Cash Room. A true restoration would have required its being replaced.

"However, you have to make a practical consideration of how this fits into modern-day use," he said. "We plan to use this for meetings and receptions. If we put the counter back in, the restoration would be more complete but the room would become a museum piece."

Homeowners intent on restoring a room should track down photos whenever possible and even better, find old bills of sale, Rogers said. If those items are lost, consult books describing the style of the room's original decor.

Rogers and the building's manager, Charles Respass, also noted that they made several other modern-day concessions, but tried to hide them whenever possible. Cables for sound and video equipment were secreted beneath the new floor, while heating and air conditioning was installed behind old air vents.

Rogers uses Treasury Department craftsmen whenever possible, in part to give the agency a feeling of involvement in the building's transformation. But for more detailed items he contracted with specialists — just as private homeowners should balance their work load.

"There's plenty of work you can get general contractors to do, but if it's detailed type painting or gilding, then you're going to have to get some specialized craftsmen," he said.

Double-duty Landscaping: Good Looking, Good Eating

By Jane Butten
UPI Feature Writer
MIAMI (UPI) — Landscaping your home is just as important as how you furnish the interior, but if time is at a premium, your outdoor efforts can pay off inside, using a variety of unusual fruit trees and bushes.

They help fill the fruit bowl and the jam jar and do double duty as landscape ornamentals.

"There are some really striking tropical fruits," said Chris Rollins, director of the 20-acre Fruit and Spice Park in the Redlands area south of Miami.

Most of the park's 700 specimens are tropical, but among those attractive edibles, said Rollins, are many that can weather the northern winters quite nicely indoors.

"Many of the tropicals lend themselves to containerized growing up north. They make excellent patio plants. You can bring them in in the winter," he said.

One of the most spectacular fruit trees is the jaboticaba (pronounced JUH-bah-U-CAH-buhl), a large bush from Brazil that grows well in acidic soil.

It produces lacy white flowers, about five times a year, that spring directly from the bark and a dark purple fruit the size of a quarter, with a white pulp similar in taste to concord grapes.

"The flowers cloak the trunks and branches from the base to the tip. When it is in flower it looks like something made for the Rose Bowl parade," Rollins said.

Cherry hedges, another Brazilian import, are easy-to-grow perennials. They produce great quantities of small red or purple berries ribbed like pumpkins.

"It is a very pretty evergreen hedge. The fruit is good for jellies, too," said Rollins.

One of the best choices for containerized growing is an unusual African evergreen bush known as the miracle fruit. It produces bright red berries about an inch long with a sweet but unremarkable taste.

"The taste is not too exciting but the juices from the berries have a chemical that inhibits your tongue's ability to taste sour. You can eat one and then bite into a lemon and it will taste like lemon candy," Rollins said. "That's a real crowd pleaser."

The effect lasts two or three hours. The miracle bush is a good patio plant that can be grown as a houseplant in northern states.

The papaya also is a good landscape candidate. It looks like an ornamental palm tree, but produces a green, melon-like fruit with a citrus taste. Like the banana, it produces fruit relatively quickly.

"It really looks tropical. And if you want just a little shrub for your patio, you can sprout them with papayas from the grocery store," Rollins said. "There are a lot of things at the grocery store that you can scarf up and plant."

Rollins advised potential papaya planters to wash and dry the seeds, then barely cover them with soil.

The persimmon, both the U.S. and Japanese varieties, grow well across much of the country and also can be started from the fruit. The tree, a bit smaller than an apple tree, produces an orange fruit with a leafy cap around the stem. While the unripened fruit is fairly tart, a mature persimmon is "almost as sweet as

Working With Wood: Hardware Hall of Fame

By Jack Warner
ATLANTA (UPI) — I might not have become so deeply involved in woodworking if I didn't live within walking distance of a store called Highland Hardware in Atlanta.

When I began trading there for my routine hardware needs, it had just been taken over by a young couple named Chris and Sharon Bagby. They bought out a down-at-the-heels operation, spruced it up considerably and as a sideline began catering to woodworkers.

Every time I went there for a length of wire or a can of paint I spent more and more time looking at the tools. Lovely things they were, even those whose purpose was unclear to me.

Well, one thing led to another, and suddenly I went from just another customer to one they could depend upon for his fair share of the rent.

I have foregone writing about the store until now for fear of seeming overly commercial. There are, after all, other very good stores catering to woodworkers all over the country.

But I have watched this one grow, moving across the street into larger and handsomer quarters, building up a substantial mail order business, and now it has been officially inducted into something called the "Hardware Hall of Fame" by Mother Earth News' "American County" magazine. So I figure it's no longer a mere store; it's an institution — and, I hasten to add, one that has never given me anything but advice.

Their most viable customer is former President Jimmy Carter, a skilled cabinetmaker who never misses an opportunity to extol the store's virtues and took a seminar there in 1984.

honey," Rollins said.

Fig trees grow well across the southern United States, and up the Atlantic Coast to New Jersey. Since the fruit only forms on new growth, they should be pruned back to a stump annually once the plant is established, which takes two to three years. "It's one that's largely overlooked," Rollins said. "Even in areas where it's too cold for the tree, a lot of gardeners grow them by cutting them back to a stump and covering them with manure and straw. The heat from the manure will keep the tree from freezing."

Jerusalem artichokes, sometimes called sun-chokes, produce large clusters of daisy-like yellow flowers all over the bush. When the flowers die in the fall, the tubers can be eaten raw or cooked like potatoes.

Pomegranate bushes grow well in the Deep South, the Southwest and California. The red versions and the less common white and green varieties all are edible, but the bright red ones are the prettiest.

work for a local hardware chain after graduating from Georgia Tech, and developed an interest in woodworking there. They bought Highland Hardware nine years ago and from the beginning have aggressively pursued the idea that the more people they could turn on to woodworking, the more their business would flourish.

They nurtured the fledgling Woodworker's Guild of Georgia, giving it plenty of encouragement and a place to meet in its formative stages.

The store has always found the space to stock a good selection of native hardwoods. Every spring and fall it sponsors a series of weekend seminars led by giants in the woodworking field.

This fall's list is headed by the Irish woodturner Liam O'Neill, on Nov. 7-8, and by the Japanese master Toshio Odate, who will lead a hands-on shoji-making class the weekend of Nov. 13-15.

Highland has retained the same central staff it had when I first walked in the door in 1 teaches an extremely valuable series of basic skills workshops every year and bears the title of Product Engineer. A man of boundless enthusiasm and ingenuity, with a great depth of understanding of the basic tools and processes of woodworking, his primary job is to check out new tools before a decision is made on whether to stock them.

Zach's Saturday workshops begin this fall with woodworking fundamentals on Sept. 26; stationary tools and biscuit joinery, Oct. 3; sharpening, Oct. 17; Nov. 21, planes, and on Sunday, Nov. 22, hand tool joinery.

If You Want To Refinish The Floor You Need To Know Where To Begin

By Kathleen Silvasoy
United Press International

That lovely older home with all the character you could ever want also came with a badly scratched and worn hardwood floor. You've decided to hire a floor refinishing contractor but where do you begin?

Like any major purchase, some comparison shopping is in order. One good starting point is to ask friends, neighbors and relatives for recommendations. Consult with several contractors before you make your decision.

Following is a list of questions to ask each contractor, according to John Bryan, consumer products division manager with Norton Co:

—How much experience does the contractor have? A contractor is essentially a craftsman, said Bryan. "The more experience he has, the greater his skill in maximizing the beauty of hardwood flooring," he said.

—What kind of sandpaper will be used? A quality refinishing job depends on the contractor's knowledge of sanding and the quality of products used. "With a poor quality sandpaper, the abrasive grain can separate from the paper backing and become embedded in the wood, creating a 'pebble' look to the final finish," said Bryan.

—Who is going to do the job? Many contractors are small businesses. The owner often does the job himself or supervises several employees. Be sure to determine the competency of the individuals who will be doing the actual work.

—Does the contractor have liability insurance? Are the employees bonded? Liability insurance will protect you in case there is any damage to your home. Bonded employees ensure you will be protected against any theft while the job is being done.

—Is the contractor willing to show you previous work? A contractor who's proud of his work will be glad to provide you with references, and will encourage you to visit a commercial establishment or make arrangements for you to inspect a private home. Be wary of those who don't.

—Does he offer the colors you want? Some contractors offer only three or four standard stain colors, while others provide a wider selection. If the color you want is a more expensive "custom stain," weigh the higher price against long-term satisfaction. You'll be living with this color for years.

"Homeowners should know that the darker color the stain, the more expensive the refinishing job will be," said H. Jeffrey Hamar of Denver Hardwood Co. "More labor-intensive sanding is required to eliminate sanding swirls, which become more visible with darker stains."

Too Quiet? Listen, Your Furniture Is Talking

By Kate Tynsdall
United Press International

Furniture may seem to be just sitting there quietly, waiting to be sat on or lain in, but actually, it's saying something about you, your lifestyle and your dreams, sometimes with all the delicacy of a Hollywood gossip columnist.

Whether it is a leather Le Corbusier chair the size of Orson Welles, a horsehair-stuffed Victorian loveseat or a burnt orange corduroy pit group from Sears Roebuck & Co., furniture is tattling on its owner.

Furniture is a clue as to how its owners see themselves, perhaps even the direction they hope to send their lives, experts say.

Because personal environment is such an intimate space, people are more apt to reflect their true tastes — or their innermost desires — in their homes than in the clothes they wear.

"Your furniture is like your fingerprint," said Nancy High, communications director for the American Furniture Manufacturers Association in High Point, N.C.

"The people who like the chrome and leather look probably work out three hours a day, people who like the soft stuff are probably couch potatoes," she laughed.

"I think it's new, this idea that people are using furniture to express themselves," said Ernest Dichter, a psychologist and president of his own research firm, Dichter Institute International, in Peekskill, N.Y.

"People used to be afraid of furniture," he said. "It was to be respected, not enjoyed."

Boasting about your income may be tacky but your furniture can do it for you. Today's upwardly mobile yuppies are doing just that, said High, by furnishing their homes in the English Country Look — expensive wood furniture in lighter finishes, chairs and couches with big, rolled arms and cabbage rose prints.

"It's a flaunting of their wealth," she said.

Other furniture tells other tales.

Dichter believes matched groups of furniture say a lot, and most of it isn't complimentary. Furniture-by-the-room shouts nouveau-riche, or people who may fear their taste doesn't match their bank account, he said.

"They probably had an interior designer put it all together," he said. "These are people dominated by rituals and rules."

"Also, I'd feel sorry for people who have a lot of heavy but stylish furniture," Dichter said.

"They are slaves to style" — and sometimes victims of it. Perhaps a rough-tweed-and-vinyl type, adhering to a perception of what's acceptable, lives with sharp-edged triangular glass tables and sleek tuxedo sofas.

Conversely, people who have an odd or ugly piece of furniture simply because they love it, and don't give a hoot whether it coordinates with other pieces, probably have a confident self-image, he said.

Now You Can Put On The Dog ... Housewise, That Is

By Joan Hanauer
UPI Feature Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) —

One way of putting on the dog is by housing Phyeau in a French chateau, a Swiss chalet or an English manor.

Or give Khittikat her own Egyptian temple.

That may not match Elizabeth Taylor, who once rented a yacht on the Thames River so her pets could evade British quarantine restrictions, but it will nip at the spike heels of Tammy Faye Bakker, who chilled the faithful with an air-conditioned doghouse.

There's nothing new about luxury digs for dogs and cats. New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art has a dog kennel that may have belonged to Marie Antoinette, a dome-topped gilded beechwood and pine piece covered in modern turquoise blue silk velvet.

"The ancient Greeks, the Chinese, the Egyptians all had great respect for animals and designed for them," said Cannon Garber, founder of Animal Manors, a New York firm that offers architect- and artist-designed dog, cat and bird houses.

Until 1984, Garber designed and coordinated study programs around the world for the 33 colleges and universities of the Georgia higher education system.

But the idea of what eventually became Animal Manors kept tugging at her.

"If I were a dog, I'd say it had me by the tail," she said.

She moved to New York and sought out designers, architects and artists to work with her. The result: 25 styles of hand-made pet houses, which can be customized to suit any cat or dog. On a practical note, the roofs lift off for cleaning and many of the models include storage areas.

The most expensive is the Spanish Colonial, with prices ranging from $7,200 for a small version to $10,200 for the largest size. The 6-foot-long domicile has a stucco finish, two colonnades and a lighted cupola with stained glass window. The house area is small but would make a cozy den for a cat or chihuahua.

Second on the price list is the Manoir de Chien, a French chateau in French blue with mansard roof, real marble floor, a brocade cushion and seven coats of paint to give it almost a satiny finish. The large version costs $8,500. A simpler, smaller and See NOW, page 8 perhaps lovelier version goes for $2,850, but it has faux marble instead of the real thing.

Other pet residences include an English manor, a Swiss chalet with wood-shingled roof, stucco walls and real windowboxes, and an English cottage which in future may be available with thatched roof.

When it comes to cat houses, the most elegant is the Egyptian temple. One version is strictly for decoration. A 14-inch high objet d'art made with faux carnelian, travertine and lapis, with real gold leaf and crystal centerpiece. It sells for $2,100.

For the version that actually houses your cat, the price is $9,000, but if you want real gemstones the price can go as high as $60,000.

On the other end of the feline scale, there's the simple but classy Cat Manor for $196.

If your budget doesn't stretch to include luxury living space for your pet, it isn't a catastrophe, said Dr. Michael Garvey of New York's Animal Medical Center, one of the world's top veterinary institutions.

"People own animals for many different levels of reasons, some of which are probably a little bizarre," Garvey said. "People must be responsive to what the animal needs — food, water, shelter and attention."

"But most people feel the need to do more than that. They are part of a bilateral love relationship; the animal may be a child substitute; the animal and its owner may be part of a work relationship."

"None of it is wrong as long as the animal gets what it needs and the owner gets what he or she wants out of the relationship — even if that relationship looks funny to some of us on the outside."

Garvey said there is nothing wrong with providing a pet with posh quarters, but said many well-intentioned people pick the wrong house.

"A lot of people think the best thing is to make it really big so the animal has lots of room and then they fill it full of fancy things.

"The truth is a good doghouse should be very small, just big enough for the dog to stretch out or curl up in, because guess what heats a doghouse — the dog," he said. "The opening should be just big enough for the dog to squeeze through and if it is outside it should face south or east, not north or west where the howling winds come from."

"Dogs like a small space with a small opening where they feel safe and hidden from their enemies."

As for Tammy Faye's air-conditioned pooch palace, well, it's not as crazy as it sounds if you own one of the breeds with a pushed-in face — pug, Boston terrier, Lhasa apso or Shih Tzu.

Garvey said these short-nosed dogs have an "inefficient heat release mechanism." But he doesn't advise air-conditioning; the dog might chew the wiring.

said. "Much like the way one dresses or the car one drives, furniture projects an image that an individual would like to project, not just to observers but to the person. It confirms something a person feels about himself," said Robert B. Cialdini, a psychology professor at Arizona State University in Tempe.

"An upwardly mobile person might want to surround himself with furniture that is compatible with his preferred image," said Cialdini. "I would expect sturdier furniture would project authority."

To that end Bierdermier, a weighty, unadorned furniture style of the 19th century, once derided as furniture for the middle class, is enjoying a revival among yuppies eager to pay tribute to the virtues it embodies.

Nor is this image-building confined to the home. Lawyers tend to choose traditional furnishings for their offices, said Atlanta interior designer Charles D. Gandy, president-elect of the American Society of Interior Designers, because it gives an image of "stability, tradition and old money."

However, tradition and stability were the farthest things from the mind of one of Gandy's recent clients.

A recently divorced man in his 30s, he replaced the fussy Oriental furnishings his wife had chosen with slick, laquered furniture, dark colors and muted lighting.

The couple's once dust-ruffled bed was replaced with a platform bedframe strung with little lights under the platform's lip, and the den was furnished in what Gandy called "the men's club" look, a black granite table and black leather chairs.

Some people may use furniture to compensate for a lifestyle they perceive as too dull, too boring or too rigid, Dichter said.

Perhaps a man with a three-piece-suit-and-brief case job comes home to a personal landscape with a Bacchanalian flair — low divans and a step-down, marble-tiled bathtub for four with Jacuzzi.

But that is more the exception than the rule, Dichter said. "Most people are trying to match their psychological makeup with their furniture."

Dichter's main complaint about the furniture industry is that it doesn't provide enough choices for people to explore their psyche.

"What we need is furniture that lets adults and kids live out their wild fantasies," he said. "Why shouldn't we eat on the floor or lying down? We need more permissiveness, more playfulness, in our furniture."

As Fireplaces Become More Common On Florida Homes

Chimney Sweeps Clean Up Fire Danger

By John M. Leighty
UPI Feature Writer

Across America, people are keeping the home fires burning for warmth and pleasure, sometimes with disastrous results.

More than 100,000 chimney-related home fires occurred last year, the majority being "flash fires" inside the flue sparked by igniting creosote, a flammable residue that builds up from cooled smoke going up a chimney.

Here in Florida, although the months are few when the fireplace can be used, more and more homes are featuring them and they are becoming a popular option in home purchases.

With the use of solid fuel heating systems peaking during the energy crisis of the 1970s, wood stoves and fireplaces have become nearly as common in modern homes as they were in the log cabins of the pioneers.

However, the generation of Americans brought up with electric and gas heat usually do not understand the dangers of sending smoke up a chimney.

Fireplace boxes develop cracks; soot or creosote can build to dangerous levels in flues, the majority being "flash fires" inside the flue sparked by igniting creosote, a flammable residue that builds up from cooled smoke going up a chimney.

"In the old days, people heated with wood and knew what was needed to maintain the fireplace, they learned it from past generations," said Steve Monson, a certified "chimney sweep" who lives in Bolinas, Calif. "People today have missed all this previously handed-down fire safety education and must relearn it all over again."

Monson doesn't wear the top hat and tails — traditional duds donned by chimney sweeps in their heyday — partly because he wants his customers to understand the seriousness of heating with wood.

"With the proliferation of solid fuel appliances, people need a good education about what's going on," said Monson, who belongs to the 800-member National Chimney Sweep Guild. "Regular maintenance is extremely important for wood stoves and fireplaces. It can save lives."

Monson said he charges about $55 to clean a chimney, usually a 90- to 90-minute job, and then often spends another half hour talking maintenance and safety to the homeowner.

He recommends eliminating as much moisture as possible in the heating system because wetness cools smoke, causing creosote to form, and reacts with contaminants to form acids that eat away at tiles and masonry. To avoid excess moisture, burn a dry, hard wood such as oak and avoid soft, porous woods like fir.

Chimney caps, which cost between $70 and $120, should also be installed to keep rain out of the flue.

Also, stainless steel liners can be put inside brick chimneys and soot can be cleaned regularly from the vent just above the fireplace.

John Bittner, director of the National Chimney Sweep Guild based in Olney, Md., said the organization provides ethical guidelines, support and a certification program for chimney sweeps to protect the public from "fly-by-night" operations.

"About one house fire in five starts at the chimney," said Bittner. "They're often contained, but can break through because of loose tiles and searing heat."

Most people, he said, hire sweeps only to check and clean an open hearth or wood stove, when in fact every heating system — except electric — uses a chimney, be it propane, natural gas or coal.

"These systems need attention, inspection and possibly professional care," Bittner said.

Jim Hoebel of the Consumer Product Safety Commission said there were 622,000 home fires in the United States in 1985 and that 113,000 of them were associated with solid fuel systems.

"Approximately one residence fire in five is caused by a solid fuel heating system and most of those are related to the venting system," Hoebel said.

Monson said he services a rural area of about 6,000 homes in Northern California and during the winter months cleans eight to 10 chimneys a day. He carries his equipment — ladder, vacuum, brushes and ropes — in a pickup truck.

Before hiring a chimney sweep, Monson said consumers should make sure he or she belongs to the guild or is able to present references from past customers, have adequate on-the-job experience and be fully insured for liability. Inspections, he said, should be made free or for only a small fee.

He also suggested hiring a sweep or other professional to install wood stoves or fireplace inserts in order to comply with fire safety clearances and building codes. Improper installation can result in cancellation of your fire insurance policy, he said.

Monson said fireplaces are used mostly for atmosphere. For warmth as well as charm, he recommended a good, sturdy woodburning stove, which he said saves him $100 a month in winter fuel bills.

"You can leave it burning, damp it down and still have heat when you get up in the morning," he said.

Carpet Care: Taking The Pain Out Of Pet Stains

By United Press International

No one can deny the rich, luxurious look that carpetings give to any home. Nor can anyone deny that the wear and tear on them from family, pets and other house traffic can add up to a real stain.

However, some new carpet fabrics are available that incorporate the latest technology and offer greater protection against soil and staining.

DuPont's Stainmaster line is one example while Galaxy Carpet Mills Inc. is bringing out a series, the "Worry-Free Home Collection," of three Anso V Worry Free nylon carpet styles.

The Worry-Free Collection is available in three different textures and 36 solid colors.

Perhaps the greatest challenge is keeping your carpet free of stains and odors if you have pets.

said Frederic Rench, chairman of Racine Industries, Inc., a manufacturer of carpet cleaning systems.

The Humane Society of the United States estimates that nearly one-half of the 83.5 million U.S. households contains a pet, which breaks down to 57 million pet dogs and 33 million pet cats.

Accidents are unavoidable, even with the best-trained pets. Prompt action and an effective cleaning strategy will take care of most of them, Rench said.

—Unless water is specified by the carpet manufacturer, avoid using wet towels to remove or blot a stain. Water generally dilutes the stain and will penetrate the deeper layers of the carpet.

—Use an old spoon to scoop up a solid spill immediately. Absorb wet stains by placing pressure on dry, white towels or absorbent cloths, then use a towel dampened with a diluted vinegar solution to blot the area.

—Cover spills with an absorbent cleaning compound, working it through the carpet with a brush. Let the cleaner dry completely, then vacuum. If no cleaning compound is handy, use a layer of paper towels or cloths, weight them down on the stain and leave on overnight to absorb moisture.

If you can't get to a stain as soon as it occurs, Rench suggested the following:

—Mix one tablespoon of liquid dishwashing detergent with one-half cup of warm water. Moisten a white towel with the solution and alternately dab the stain and blot with a dry towel. If the spot's color picks up, continue the process, then layer paper towels over the stain, weight them and leave on overnight.

—For tougher stains, dab and blot with a solution of one-half cup water, one-half cup vinegar. Layer paper towel and leave on overnight.

—If neither method shows the spot color picking up, apply an all-purpose spot remover to a towel and work it into the stain. Never pour spot remover directly onto the stain. Cover the spot overnight with towels or a dry cleaning compound.

If the stain appears to be permanent, it may be necessary to contact a professional carpet cleaner.

The 'Rule Of Two' Reigns Supreme At Home

By Ken Franchling
UPI Feature Writer
BOSTON (UPI) — Homeowners who try to keep up with the routine chores and maintenance required soon discover the house is in control, not vice-versa.

The house operates under a Murphy's Law corollary that I call "The Rule of Two": There will always be twice as many projects to do around the house as you have time for.

This simple axiom shows up in many guises:

—It takes two years to clean out the basement once the boxes used for moving have been stashed down there.

—The exact same weeds that pop up in your vegetable garden grow twice as fast as the greenery in your lawn.

However, if you have chronic bare spots in your lawn that won't take to seeding no matter how hard you try, carefully transplant the plugs of grass from your garden. They'll fill in the space in no time.

—Planning a major project, like renovating a room or redoing the plumbing? Take your original estimate for how long it will take and multiply it by two.

Several years ago, my father and I decided to rip out the bathroom. My wife could no longer stand the garish, early 1950s floor-to-ceiling pink and purple motif the previous owners left behind. It was time to install fixtures, wallboard and a vanity of modern design and a tad more pleasing to the eye.

We figured the job would take three weekends. It took six.

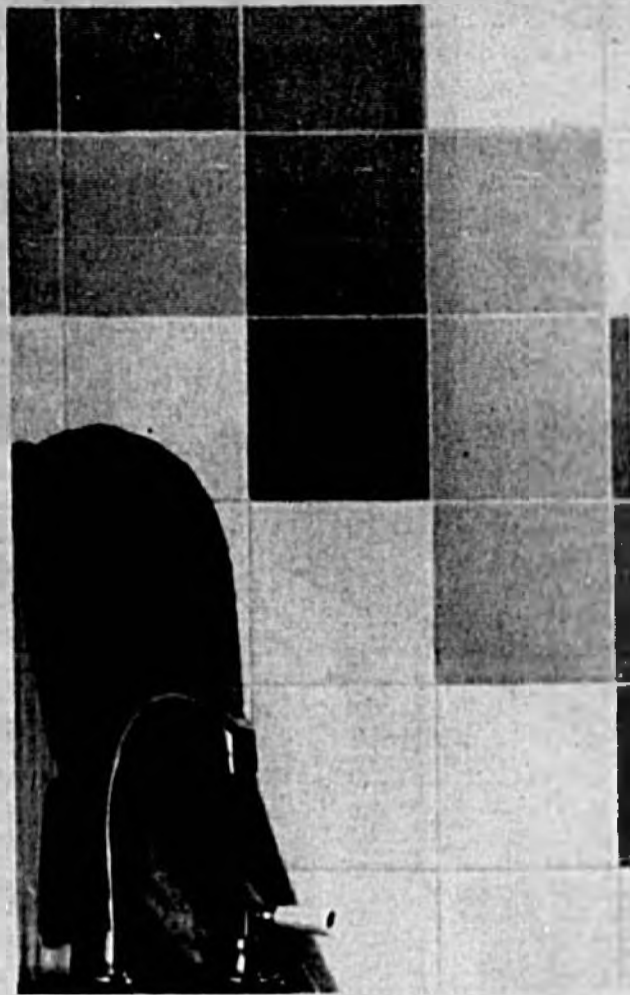

Adding to the time frame was the heavy, plaster lathe that stubbornly clung to the studs.

A colleague recalled the time he was struck by the Rule of Two, when he decided to build a bookcase for his son's room. He began his project during the World Series and finished it in time to watch the Super Bowl. In this case, the Rule of Two spanned two sporting events.

But sometimes, the Rule of Two can work to your advantage if you use it properly.

For example, if a window pane breaks and replacing involves some amateur reglazing, there is one way to ensure that you won't break the new pane of glass when installing it.

Buy two.

How You Can Avoid The Homebuying Trap

By United Press International

Shopping for a home can be like walking through a minefield unless you know how to spot defects, problems and construction errors and are able to determine whether the repairs will be worth the effort, an expert says.

"By knowing a few basic facts about home design and construction, any interested home buyer can be alerted to the most common defects likely in houses and how to detect them when shopping for a house," said A.M. Watkins, author of "How to Avoid the 10 Biggest Home-Buying Traps."

Watkins offered the following suggestions to prospective home buyers on how to tell the difference between a home that is in good condition and one that needs work:

—Energy efficiency: An inefficient home can cost you more in the long run because of high fuel bills. Look for insulation in the following areas: attic, water heater, forced air ducts, around the foundation, in exterior walls, between living spaces and garages, basements and crawlspaces.

To check insulation, remove electrical outlet covers and peer in with a flashlight. In cold weather, place the palm of your hand flat against the inside surface of exterior walls. They should feel about as warm as a wall in the middle of the house.

Look for caulking or weatherstripping around doors and windows.

—Older homes: You may think that a few minor repairs will make an older home as good as new but this may not be so. A $100,000 home that needs $12,000 worth of repairs turns into a $112,000 dwelling.

Old fashioned kitchens and bathrooms are the two most prevalent problems. Depending on your taste and the extent of renovation, Watkins said the average cost of redoing a kitchen can range from $5,000 to $7,000. For a modern bathroom, expect to spend from $2,500 to $5,000.

—Defective septic tanks and cesspools are becoming a serious problem in some parts of the country. Check the soil around the home. Porous soil that drains easily and absorbs overflow is a good sign, while hard, claylike soil indicates

125 Ways To Sell Your Home Successfully

By Kathleen Silvasy
United Press International

In a way, Valli Swerdlow's career began with a messy front yard.

Five years ago, she was going door-to-door in her Andover, Mass., neighborhood, north of Boston, collecting money for the annual street picnic. A "For Sale" sign was in front of one of the homes.

"The sign had been there for 1 1/2 years, listed by same agent," she said in a telephone interview. "I could tell immediately what I would do to make that house sell. The bushes weren't trimmed, the rake was left out, the house was a dull shade of gray."

"I rang the doorbell and told them, 'If you sit down with me over coffee, I'll give you some ideas of what you should do.' I came back in a week with a typed list. The work was done and the house sold 2 1/2 months later."

From that experience, a resale home enhancement specialist was born.

Swerdlow then began collecting tips on decorating and maintenance that can make a home easier to sell, and for the price one is seeking.

Her 24-page booklet, "Dress Your House for Success," includes more than 125 tips, along with a "Home Profile Form" checklist that enables owners to evaluate the condition of their home and determine what work is needed.

"I spent five years collecting tips and only recommend the ones that work," she said. "I got them from prospective buyers and sellers and by talking to relocation professionals."

Also drawing on her previous career — 15 years of commercial and residential interior design — Swerdlow now advises individuals and corporations that frequently transfer employees on how to turn "For Sale" into "Sold" with a minimum of hassle.

"I interviewed 50 corporations in the area to find out what they were looking for," she said, and discovered that too many times, spouses were being left out of the selling process.

"Over 90 percent of all transferees are men and the only time a wife is at corporate headquarters is when a move is involved," she said. "Fifty percent of all corporations want the employee to be on the job in two to four weeks. So who gets stuck with all the details? But corporations are beginning to address this problem by including spouses in corporate relocations."

"My main objective is getting to the spouse, showing them what to do and help them. It puts more power in the hands of women in decision-making in how to make their home market ready. I can guarantee that if they get this information they'll feel much more positive about the move."

Swerdlow, who has done presentations for such corporations as Colgate-Palmolive and Kodak, said the same rules apply in readying a home for market whether the move is a corporate transfer or an individual choice.

"Real estate agents do not sell homes, they market homes. Owners sell homes," she said. "If you had a car, you would clean it and polish it before you sold it. It's about the same principle."

Swerdlow acknowledged that each home is different, but some general rules apply, even if the owner has a limited amount of time and money to spend.

"I can find 20 to 30 things in a normal house that should be done, but the homeowner has to make the ultimate decision," she said.

"Most think if they paint the house one neutral color and take out all furniture they can sell it. That's the worst thing they can do."

Swerdlow said prospective buyers seem to use the same words over and over to describe the home they are looking for are: bright, private, spacious and maintenance free, and that sellers should try and have their homes reflect those qualities.

Outside, siding and landscaping have the greatest effect on a prospective buyer, while inside, the kitchen and the bathroom command the most attention, she said.

Walls and ceilings in neutral colors are crucial, she said, and homes with red and blue interiors are the hardest to sell.

"Using blue in a kitchen can be a disaster," Swerdlow said. "Blue is very cold and cool, and can put someone off. And beside blueberries, how many foods can you name as blue?"

For the exterior, it pays to put on a good front, she said.

"If you only have a limited amount of time, make sure the front of your home is in the best shape. Paint at least the front of your home," she said. "Put flowers out, especially during the peak selling season from May to August, and group them in odd numbers to get away from that 'perfect' feeling. The same goes for picture groupings on the wall."

Swerdlow cited a 1986 study by Weyerhaeuser, Inc., that indicated for every $1,500 spent on landscaping, the owner can anticipate a 100 percent payback at sell.

problems. Contact the local public health office and ask whether any problems have been reported in the area.

—Have a professional inspect the house for wood rot and termite damage. Termites can come up from the ground below the house — especially a cement-floor home with no basement. Wood rot can be confused with termite since it is similar in appearance, but can cause more damage.

—Examine the main electric switchbox to determine the current wiring can handle all household needs. The average switchbox should have a capacity of at least 240 volts and 100 amperes. Watkins said the cost of updating the wiring can range from $500 to $1,000.

—Floor plans: Make sure the house follows the rules of "good circulation," said Watkins, the ability to reach any room without traveling through another area. The heaviest traffic flow is in the kitchen, so be sure it's centrally located and has a separate entrance. The living room, Watkins said, should be in a "dead-end" location — you shouldn't have to pass through it to reach other rooms in the house.

The front door should funnel people directly into the living room, said Watkins and travel routes between the house and outdoor living areas should be short and direct. Direct access to a bathroom from any room also is important.

...Home

ing time.

Swerdlow believes that with a little advance planning and some work, selling a home does not have to be a stressinducing experience.

"You know the list of the most stress-related experiences one can have in life," she said. "Moving is right up there. It doesn't have to be that way if people take the time to do a few things before their homes go on the market."

Home Security Systems Gaining In Popularity

By Denny Hamilton
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Once reserved for the affluent, home security systems are increasingly finding their way into suburbia and industry officials predict they will one day be as common as the television set.

Chuck Lavin, executive director of the National Burglar and Fire Alarm Association in Washington, D.C., says the security industry is experiencing a steady growth of 9 percent per year.

"There is no doubt, this is definitely a growth industry, especially in the home security market," Lavin said. "Home security systems are no longer just a 'wish list' item."

"It's getting to the point where people who buy or build new homes get their furniture first, rugs second, and maybe a security system is on their top 10 list of priorities. It used to be a luxury in the bottom 10."

W.D. Harris, who owns Sonitrol Security of Knoxville, said he has seen the buying trend shift from mostly business owners to homeowners.

"Five years ago, residential systems made up about 8 to 10 percent of my business," Harris said. "Today, that figure is about 30 percent. More and more homeowners are calling and asking for prices and information about putting in systems."

The most common home system used to be door contacts — a two-piece device consisting of a magnet and a sealed switch that determines when a door is opened — and a siren, Harris said, but consumers are moving toward more elaborate alarms monitored by security company personnel.

"I think people are more secure in knowing that someone is, if effect, watching their home 24 hours a day," he said. "Also, prices have come down to where most people can afford a home can buy a security system. We can put a top-of-the-line security system in most homes for between $700 and $1,200."

Harris said new technological developments, such as infrared motion detectors — which pick up movement by detecting minute changes in heat within a given area — make alarm systems more affordable for the average homeowner.

"The passive infrared is the most-used device, in that its cost is low and its reliability is high, and it can cover a large area," Harris said. "Also, the physical size of (motion detectors) has decreased considerably, so they are more esthetically pleasing. They don't stick out.

"As the technology increases, the price goes down," he said. "As the price goes down, more people are able to afford a system that only a few years ago would have been out of their reach."

Alarm systems can be tailored — sophisticated or simple — to the customer's needs, which is a vast improvement over systems several years ago that only could be purchased as package deals, Harris said.

"We can protect the inside, parts of the inside, the outside, or a combination of the two — by far the most preferred," he said.

Anne Arnel of Security Marketing & Distributing, a Chicago-based trade publication for the security industry, said a survey conducted by the firm in 1985 showed a number of reasons why homeowners installed security systems.
