France Sending Planes, General To Assist Chad

NDJAMENA, Chad (UPI) — French warplanes were ordered for the first time to fly to Chad in a show of force to dissuade Libyan-backed rebels from new attacks in the African country.

Military officials in Paris said the Jaguar and Mirage jet fighters would arrive in Ndjamena, the capital, today or Saturday.

The French government of President Francois Mitterrand also announced Thursday it ordered a general to lead its expanded troop contingent supporting Chad's President Hissene Habre.

Habre's forces have been fighting since June 24 against Libyan-backed insurgents loyal to former president Goukount Weddeye, who Habre ousted in a military coup last summer.

The French jets will remain in Ndjamena briefly but probably will return as part of a "dissuasion" policy to head off renewed fighting and encourage peace talks, Defense Ministry officials said in Paris.

Rebels Overrun Town

United Press International

Leftist guerrillas occupied a town in eastern El Salvador as the army stepped up a sweep of rebel positions to the north. In Guatemala, the new army chief of staff disclosed the country has asked for a resumption of U.S. military aid.

A military source in San Salvador said guerrillas of the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front overran the town of Caracopera, 110 miles east of San Salvador, following heavy fighting Thursday morning with security forces stationed there. There were no details on casualties.

Earlier, military officials said the army has driven rebels operating north of San Salvador across the border into Honduras.

American arms aid to Guatemala was cut off in 1978 when President Carter accused the Romeo Lucas Garcia regime of human rights violations.

Terrorist Gang Hunted

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Irish police searched a remote mountain area today for terrorists who narrowly escaped a dawn raid that freed two people held hostage to silence a police informant.

Police, tipped off by a series of car hijackings, freed a Belfast man and his 13-year-old daughter Thursday, hours after the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army threatened to kill them unless the man's stepson withdrew evidence against 18 fellow terrorists.

The hunt took on added urgency because the gang still holds captive Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, 24, the wife of INLA defector Harry Kirkpatrick, who identified 18 fellow terrorists in return for freedom and a new life outside Northern Ireland.

Killer And Attorney Waive Extradition

ORLANDO (UPI) — A convicted killer and the lawyer who allegedly helped him escape will be taken back to Tennessee, where he faces life in prison and she will try to prove that she is "not a criminal."

Mary Pentecost Evans, 27, and William Timothy Kirk, 36, were captured in Daytona Beach by FBI agents after eluding a nationwide dragnet for 4½ months. They waived extradition Thursday and were expected to be escorted back to Tennessee before the weekend.

Law enforcement officers drove to Orlando Thursday to pick up the pair.

Robert Ritchie, Ms. Evans' attorney, said he wanted to expedite proceedings so Ms. Evans could face charges in Tennessee and be found innocent.

"She's not a criminal and, ultimately, they will find that," said Ritchie. He would not elaborate, and neither Ms. Evans nor the muscular Kirk would speak to reporters.

Both face identical charges of escape, four counts of kidnapping, and robbery. Kirk, who was serving 65 years for armed robbery when he escaped, was convicted in absentia of manslaughter for two prison killings and sentenced to life.

The couple disappeared March 31, when Ms. Evans, Kirk's court-appointed attorney in the prison killings, had him taken from Brushy Mountain prison to a psychologist's office in Oak Ridge for mental tests.

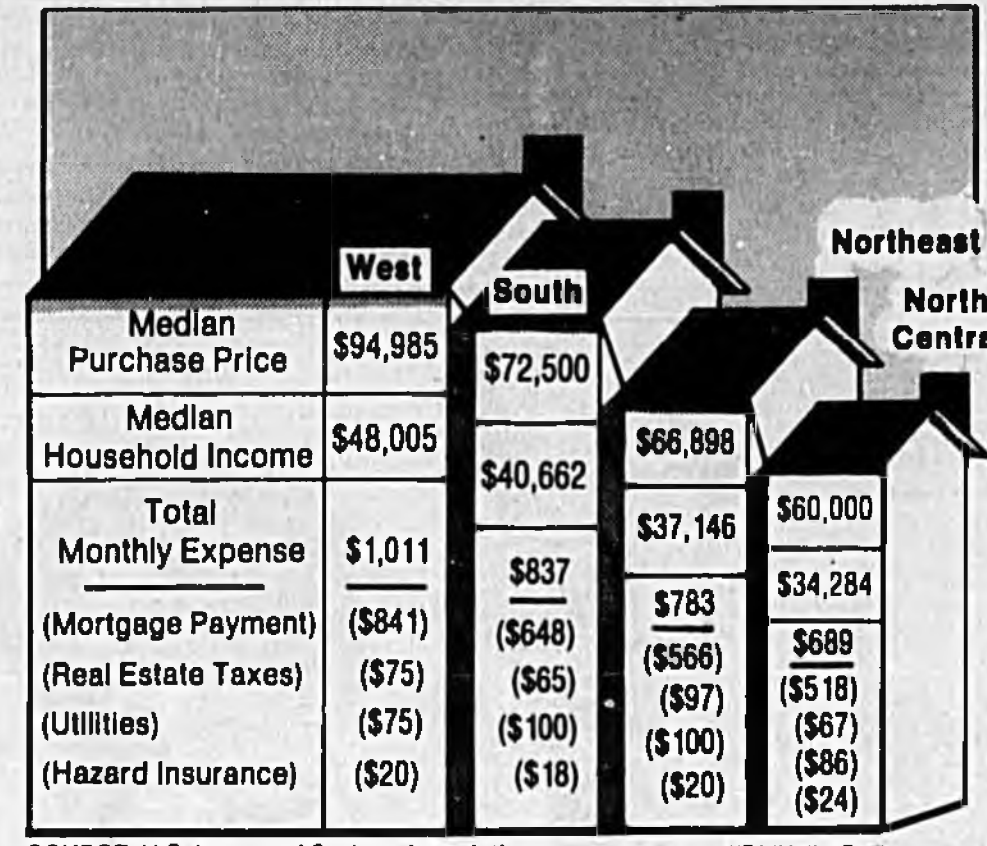

Police charge Ms. Evans pulled a gun on three prison guards and the doctor, while Kirk bound the four men with packaging tape.

"What I think happened is she fell in love with him," said Dr. Gary Salk, the Oak Ridge psychologist who examined Kirk.

Kirk, serving 65 years for armed robbery, led a gang of seven white inmates down a corridor at Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee on Feb. 8, 1982, methodically firing into the locked cells of black prisoners. Two were killed and two were wounded.

FBI agents said Kirk and Ms. Evans received money from undisclosed sources in Tennessee. They were attempting to pick up some of that money at a Western Union office Wednesday when they were taken by FBI agents.

While the number of housing units out West is on the rise, new homes there aren't cheap. Almost everything costs more for Western home owners. But they are better able to afford it with a median income for new home buyers higher than any other region.

South Leads Housing Gains

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As the North Central states' share of available housing dropped, the South showed the greatest housing increase from 1973 to 1980, the Census Bureau says.

A supplementary report to the bureau's housing census said the West, the nation's suburbs and its rural areas also showed housing increases.

The number of housing units nationwide increased during the seven-year period by 12 million, or 15.6 percent, the report said. Most of the increase came from new construction.

Central cities increased their housing stock by only 5.6 percent as their share of the national housing inventory dropped from 32 percent in 1973 to 29 percent in 1980.

The only statistical area to show a decrease in available housing was central cities in the North Central states, with a drop of 0.6 percent, or 36,000 units. The North Central area stretches from the Dakotas through Ohio and from Missouri through Minnesota.

The report measured new construction of houses, apartments and mobile homes. It also counts homes moved into and out of, units lost through damage or condemnation, changes to and from residential use of existing buildings and a few other categories of change.

The largest increase in available housing, 30.2 percent, was outside defined metropolitan areas of the South, ranging from Texas to Florida and north to the Middle Atlantic states.

Although mobile homes are not listed separately in the report, the South also had the highest rate of "units moved to site," which would include both modular and mobile housing.

From the Rockies west to the Pacific coast, the increase was 23.2 percent and in the South it was 21.2 percent, while the increase in the Northeast was only 7.8 percent and in the North Central states, 10.7 percent.

The number of suburban housing units — inside metropolitan areas but outside central cities — rose 20.9 percent. The number of units in rural and small town areas, defined as any place outside 243 metropolitan areas, was up 19.5 percent.

In addition, the report said, "While the West had only 19 percent of the total housing inventory in the nation in 1980, it had 25 percent of the new construction."

The total of housing units in 1980 was 89.3 million, up from 77.2 million in 1973.

Boy Embroiled In Diplomatic Struggle Returns Home

PARIS (UPI) — A tired Andrei Berezhkov arrived today with his mother and Soviet diplomat father on their way home to Moscow and again denied he wrote the letters that ignited a week-long diplomatic struggle between the superpowers.

The 16-year-old, smiling and waving to reporters at Paris' Charles De Gaulle airport, arrived with his parents from Washington and spoke briefly before security agents hustled him into a departure lounge to await his next flight.

Asked if he had written the letters to The New York

Times and President Reagan that turned a family dispute into a diplomatic standoff — saying he wanted to remain in the United States and hated the Soviet Union — he replied with a terse "no."

"I am now in the 10th grade and I am going to study to become an actor," he said. "A comedy actor."

Andrei's trip home ended an affair that started a week ago with his disappearance in the family car. Andrei was gone nearly 24 hours and his father told the State Department he was missing. Then he returned and the matter seemed to be ended, except for the letters.

U.S. officials insisted they wanted to talk to Andrei to see if he wished to stay. The Soviets refused to turn over the boy, denouncing the letters as forgeries.

Until his sudden emergence at a carefully orchestrated news conference Thursday, the youth had been kept in seclusion at the Soviet Embassy with FBI agents posted outside and immigration agents on the lookout nationwide with orders to stop him from leaving the country.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Commissioner Faces Removal From Office

ORLANDO (UPI) — Orlando City Commissioner Ernest Page faces felony theft charges and is expected to be suspended from office in the next few days, authorities said.

Page's lawyer, Edward Kirkland, said Page is charged with four counts of grand theft, one count of petty theft and one count of dealing in stolen property, age, 37, was booked into the Orange County jail Thursday night but posted a $2,500 bond and was freed about 9:30 p.m. He was unavailable for comment early today.

Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents and Orlando city police refused to provide additional details about the arrest early today.

Orlando Mayor Bill Frederick said Page's removal from the city council by Gov. Bob Graham is likely because Page has been charged with a felony. Florida law mandates that government officials charged with felonies be suspended until the charges are disposed of.

Hijacked Jet Returns

TAMPA (UPI) — A man sprayed a flammable liquid in the first-class section of a Delta Airlines jet, forcing the 80 people aboard to fly to Havana in the 10th hijacking to Cuba since May.

The hijacker was taken into custody by Cuban authorities after Flight 784, originally bound for Tampa from Miami, landed at Jose Marti Airport in Havana.

Andropov Says Nyet To 'Star Wars' Weapons

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Yuri Andropov told a group of U.S. senators that Moscow will ban anti-satellite weapons in space as long as the United States does the same.

Andropov's announcement in the meeting Thursday concerned "elimination of the existing anti-satellite systems and the prohibition of the development of new ones," the Soviet news agency Tass said.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., who led the group of nine lawmakers, said there could be problems with the proposal but it was "made in good spirit and should be seriously examined."

"Bear in mind that they already have a system that's being tested, that works, and we do not have one," Pell said at a news conference after the two-hour meeting.

He said the offer would have to be examined to see if it is genuine or if it is a "heads-I-win, tails-you-lose kind of offer."

The senators, in the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Supreme Soviet, were scheduled to meet with their counterparts again today, followed by a luncheon in their honor at the Kremlin.

Pell stressed the need to consider the offer against the existing state of anti-satellite technology, "a field in which the Soviets are now well ahead of the United States."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the department would "study carefully any serious Soviet proposal" to control space weaponry.

"There exist serious technical, substantive problems related to verification, among other issues," he said.

Romberg said the Soviet anti-satellite system, which could be used to destroy surveillance and communications satellites, is the only existing system and has been operating in space for more than a dozen years.

Andropov greeted the American lawmakers in the Kremlin. It was the first direct contact with U.S. officials since Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz came to Moscow for the funeral of Leonid Brezhnev last November.

Pell said Andropov, 69, spoke "vigorously, clearly and forcefully. He has what he really needs to do his job — his mind — and it is absolutely first rate."

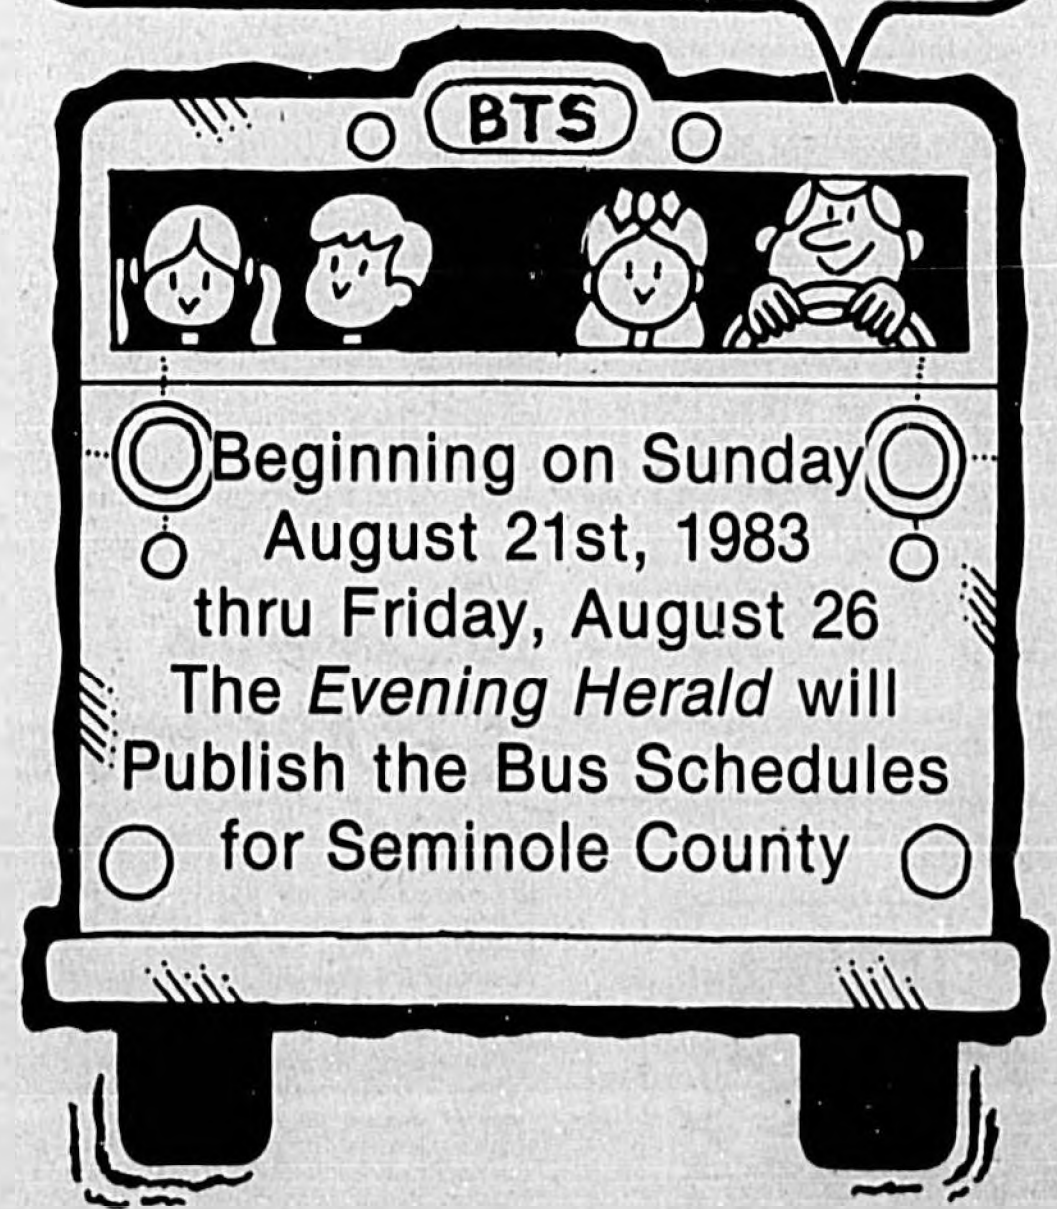

Tass quoted Andropov as saying once the existing systems are dismantled "the U.S.S.R. assumes the commitment not to be the first to put into outer space any type of anti-satellite weapon."

Moscow will impose a "moratorium on such launchings for the entire period during which other countries, including the United States, will refrain from stationing in outer space anti-satellite systems of any type," Andropov said.

Other members of the Senate delegation included Russell Long of Louisiana, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, Patrick Leahy of Vermont, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Donald Riegle of Michigan, Jim Sasser of Tennessee and Paul Sarbanes of Maryland.

Dollars Are Dollars

Pressed for months to "do something" about the "overvalued" dollar, the Reagan administration has settled upon what appears to be a kind of $2 approach. Inflate in Europe, deflate at home. As always, it's difficult to determine just what the government's policy is when there is none. Through the smoke screen, though, two signals emerge.

Clearly, the Federal Reserve has decided to move interest rates up a notch or two, and thus, it hopes, move the growth in the money supply down a notch or two. Fed Chairman Paul Volcker tactically blames it all on the deficits, but the fact is that the Fed has set interest rates higher largely at its own discretion. This comes at a time when recovery is providing relief — how much remains to be seen — from large deficits. Red ink is one factor in the interest-rate bubble — but only one.

Just as clearly, the Reagan Treasury Department, to its credit, is nervous. It should be. Higher interest rates, and a stronger dollar, will only tend to dampen growth. The price of gold is already off virtually 10 percent in a few months, signaling that the Fed, if anything, has been too tight. So the Treasury is selling off dollars in Europe and Japan, hoping to cheapen U.S. exports and keep the economy growing.

What both the Fed and the administration will find is that dollars are dollars. You can't simultaneously drive their value up at home through higher interest rates, and down abroad through transactions in the foreign exchange markets.

The minute the Fed moves up interest rates in New York, a bank in Bonn reads about it on the ticker tape, starts trading marks for dollars, and pressures the dollar right back up.

Even if such tinkering could effect a substantial rise or fall in the dollar, what is the point? You cannot alter the terms of trade by altering the unit of account. Japanese cars will not be made inferior to Chryslers simply by devaluing the dollar. Americans learned all too painfully during the last three years that driving up the value of the dollar can be as disastrous as driving it down.

A stable dollar should be a goal of economic policy. But exchange market operations is not the way to achieve it. We prefer the approach suggested by the French — convene a second Bretton Woods conference and establish a formal, international system of fixed rates with a common anchor.

Such a system is, after all, a system — the product of a conscious act of creation by monetary authorities all around the world. The dollar, as economist Alan Greenspan argues, can't go it alone — nor should it. Does anyone seriously want to stabilize the dollar in terms of the franc now, which itself is hopping all over the map? Of course not. And that is why a good deal of planning must occur before fixing the dollar to francs or marks or rubles even makes sense.

Furthermore, before the administration aspires to anything as sophisticated as regulating the value of the dollar, it might want to turn its attention back to regulating the spending habits of Congress. It's been quite a long time since the dreaded words "budget cut" were heard in Washington.

Were they sounded again, markets would take it as a signal that the federal government finally intends to rein in its spending habits. There could only be one reaction to such news — lower interest rates. And, thus, lower deficits, and less upward pressure on the dollar.

Despite its futility, however, the $2 policy can do a good deal of harm. When a severely tight Federal Reserve policy clashed with expansive fiscal policies in 1981 and 1982, tight money won — and two near-recoveries were aborted. Today's Fed tightening is a good deal less severe than the 1981-82 deflation, but it is still a tightening.

Nothing that happens today will do much to prevent a continuing decline in unemployment over, say, the next six months. Instead, the clouds now gathering would begin to shower sometime around the fall of 1984. Here's hoping the president keeps that in mind as he mulls over the $2 policy — and his own re-election.

BERRY'S WORLD

"One day last week, my husband went into his room of baseball statistics and just disappeared."

By Donna Estes

Lake Mary City Commissioner Ray Fox was very open with a deal he was offering colleagues recently.

Specifically opposing a property tax increase from the $4.15 per $1,000 assessed valuation levied last year to the $4.76 proposed for the 1983-84 fiscal year, Fox proposed a compromise with his fellow commissioners during a commission meeting.

Saying the budget could be balanced and the tax rate kept at $4.15 if the commission cut a proposed fire truck, a proposed police car and $20,000 from a $35,000 proposed contingency fund, Fox said he would vote for the purchase of a patrol car out of this year's budget in exchange. The police department had requested one car from this year's budget and another in the new year.

Two weeks ago, Commissioner Russ Megonegal made a motion to request bids for one new patrol car for immediate purchase. He also said the second car and the fire truck should be removed from the 1983-84 budget, Fox, believing he had a deal, seconded the motion.

Last week, however, during a budget session, Megonegal said he wanted to see both a second new car and the fire truck included in the budget for the new year.

After Fox had Megonegal repeat his intent, a glowing Fox gathered his books and papers and walked out of the meeting.

Now some are fearing that Fox, a retired Navy commander, may be thinking about resigning before his term is up Oct. 3. And Fox isn't talking.

Incidentally, Larry Dale, developer and volunteer firefighter, gave the commission a report, lauded by the commissioners for its excellence, justifying the need for the fire truck.

Fox's argument against the truck this year was not an indication of any lack of support on his part of the volunteers, but rather was in line with his conservative philosophy of keeping his eye on all city expenditures. He was concerned because some 55 percent of the fire department's $49,000 budget would be going for debt service. He contended it would be better to wait one more year to create a new debt for a fire truck because by that time another city debt would be paid off.

After Fox left the meeting, Megonegal proposed cuts in the requested budget of many items ranging from gasoline used by each department through the contingency fund cut that Fox had proposed, but he wasn't able to cut enough to stay at the $4.15 level.

And although Commissioner Charles Lytle gave his support to the Megonegal proposal, Commissioner Ken King wasn't sure the second police car should be in the budget. And Commissioner Burt Perinichief said he wouldn't make a commitment until after he hears the will of the people at budget public hearings slated for Sept. 15 and 29.

The Lake Mary Commission pushed aside a priority list of road improvements which might be accomplished by using the $30,000 the county has announced the city might receive in the new fiscal year from the new 4 cents per gallon tax the county is levying on gasoline.

Public Works Director Jim Ortoles recommended the following projects over a period of years: Third Street; Washington Avenue from Third to Fifth streets; Evansdale Road; Ridge Road; Fifth Street; First Street, south of Grandbend Avenue; Humphrey Road and Van Buren.

The listed roads could be accomplished over a four or five-year period, Ortoles said.

College Campus Unions?

By definition, a university is a community of scholars. And the role of the scholar is to seek truth and impart it to the rising generation. It is hard to think of anything more incompatible with the scholarly mission than a labor union.

However, advocates of unionization are working hard to unionize college and university campuses. They would mock academic freedom by imposing compulsory union fees on unwilling faculty colleagues.

Happily, many academics resist the effort by the union organizers to turn them into industrial employees. This spring, for example, the faculty of Oregon State University soundly defeated a proposal for a collective bargaining unit. By a vote of 878 to 482, the professors rejected the unionizing effort. It is to be hoped that other college and university faculties will display this same resistance.

At Oregon State University, two national organizations, the American Association of University Professors and the National Education Association, formed an alliance to fight for a unionized faculty. Not all AAUP leaders on the campus favored this effort, however. Some of the members favored continued reliance on the Faculty Senate in discussions with university authorities.

One reason that the unionizing effort failed is faculty members apparently realized that establishment of a collective bargaining unit implied possible use of the strike weapon at a future date.

For serious academics, who are mindful of their obligations to the university and its students, the calling of a strike would be completely unacceptable. A strike means denial of educational opportunity to students. Such a denial constitutes rejection of a scholar's mission.

The President of Oregon State University, Dr. Robert MacVicar, also warned that the lobbying by NEA would reflect elementary and secondary school concerns, not those of higher education. An economist noted the cost of union operations and warned that "when cooperation turns to conflict, our professional productivity and taxpayers' perception" of faculty will suffer.

The university community and the people of Oregon benefited from the leadership provided by University Professors for Academic Order, which furnished the leadership for the opposition to unionization. As it has over the years, UPAO defended the traditional principles of academic freedom and responsibility. The organization and its supporters on campuses around the country will know that education cannot proceed where militant union tactics are carried into the classroom and lecture hall.

GM Covered-Up Camshaft Problems

WASHINGTON — When the average American buys a new car — kicks the tires, slams the doors and tries out the padding in the seats — the chances are pretty good that the salesman never mentions the camshaft. It's an integral part of the engine and is pretty much taken for granted.

But General Motors failed to warn 15 million car buyers that using a certain type of engine oil would cause premature wear in the camshafts of their V-8 engines, in use since 1974. The result of using the wrong oil could be a $400 repair bill, according to Federal Trade Commission documents.

The problem with the GM camshaft usually crops up after 25,000 miles on Chevrolets, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and GMC trucks. Normally, a well-lubricated camshaft should last the life of the vehicle.

To keep the magnitude of the camshaft problem from the car-buying public, GM arranged with the FTC to use local arbitration boards and handle complaints on an individual basis. The FTC has not given final approval to this. Meanwhile, the true extent of the camshaft problem has been hidden from the public under a 1980 court order sealing hundreds of documents.

My associate Tony Capaccio has obtained evidence of GM's cover-up from internal FTC documents turned up by Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., interviews with industry insiders familiar with the case.

In the mid-1970s, according to these sources, GM learned that certain types of oil, classified for use in both gasoline and diesel vehicles, were causing camshaft failure because they lack sufficient anti-wear protection.

Cleveland FTC files showed that camshaft failure occurred "in 70 percent of the reported cases at 20,000 miles or later, with an average failure at 28,000." The FTC staff was aware of 3,345 camshaft failures.

According to the documents, GM claimed only a 1 percent failure for its camshafts. Even accepting the company's estimate, that would mean a minimum of 150,000 defective camshafts. With an estimated average of $400 for each repair bill, that means

GM car buyers have laid out $60 million for repairs that might have been avoided if the company had told its customers what it knew.

And it's a lead-pipe cinch that GM knew about the camshaft problem early on. Internal documents show that GM told its dealers about the oil problem between 1976 and 1978 — but waited till 1980 to tell its customers.

"It appears that significant consumer injury did occur due to GM's disclosure," stated one FTC analysis. "Consumer loss that did occur could have been easily avoided if GM had adequate oil-use instructions in its owners' manual once it learned, at least by 1975, of the problem.... Absent such disclosure, GM owners were unlikely to learn of the problem."

Footnote: A GM spokesman said: "We feel we took responsible measures to protect our customers from the problem.... We encouraged the oil companies to reformulate their oil." He also said the camshaft problem "had nothing to do with a defect inherent in the product."

Getting Around In Japan

TOKYO (NEA) — New York has one and it's an antique mess.

Washington and San Francisco have new systems that share one of New York's problems: They can't pay their way.

Tokyo also has a subway. And it is doing just fine.

The 11 lines and 198.3 kilometers of track serve a metropolitan population of 13 million. They are integrated with commuter rail lines. Stations are clean, trains are frequent, cars are comfortable (yes, there is a bit of heavy pushing and shoving during rush hours) and fares are reasonable — the graduated charge according to distance traveled starts at 100 yen, about 45 cents currently.

Admittedly, the operating Teito Rapid Transit Authority is not having any problem deciding how to dispose of a surplus. Fares do not cover operating costs, but they come close. Some assistance from public funds is necessary — on the order of $65 million annually — but that is not considered budget busting. Yet.

Tokyo's subways must be doing something right. Rather, it may be a case that something right was done — the timing of construction. That began in 1941 when the existing Ginza Line was taken over as the basis for a comprehensive metropolitan system.

Construction has gone on continually since, but the bulk of it occurred during the '60s and '70s. That means the system is relatively new and cost-efficient. Also, construction costs were much lower during those years.

Teito is today only too acutely aware of the changing times. Costs of current construction are escalating rapidly, approaching the exorbitant level.

Also, there are expensive times ahead as the older segments began to show deterioration and require renovation. Welcome to New York.

But for now, Tokyo's underground must be counted as a success story. Try it — non-rush hour. You'd like it.

Now for something completely different. The Japan National Railways story.

Japanese railroads are known abroad for the Bullet trains (Shinkansen), a remarkable safety record and on-time performance. All valid enough.

What isn't so well advertised is JNR's disastrous finances. The superstar Bullets make money at reasonable fares competitive with air travel.

But not enough to cover losses from the rural lines that lace the Japanese map. Deficit financing has been the story of JNR's operations throughout the post-war era and by now, the accumulated long-term debt is equivalent to those of some of the more hard-pressed developing nations.

ning almost led the Army to spend $7.5 million on mess halls it didn't need in Germany. Fortunately, General Accounting Office auditors found out about it and four of the seven planned mess halls have been canceled. Auditors blamed the mess hall mess on the Army's faulty method of computing the number of personnel who will eat GI rations when off-base options are available. The auditors said they have no idea how often the armed services build unnecessary mess halls; they only checked seven.

— A contractor with inside knowledge bilked the Army on a furnace maintenance job at Fort Jackson, S.C. Knowing that the furnaces had recently been replaced, the contractor bid just $1 for furnace replacement, which normally costs about $1,000. Then the contractor charged from seven to nine times the going rate for the other services in the contract and still wound up the low bidder. Army Auditing Agency said this kind of sharp practice costs the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

Terri Decker, J.S. Lynn Repeat Vows

Terri Lee Decker and James Sherman Lynn were married July 31, at 7:30 p.m., at the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, Forest City. Elder Robert McCumber performed the candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Decker, 110 Laguna Court, Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Lynn, Forest City.

Given in marriage by Michael Stephen Decker, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown fashioned along the Queen Anne silhouette. Reembroidered lace appliques embellished the fitted bodice and full, sheer sleeves. The skirt gracefully cascaded into a trailing cathedral train. A pearl and lace headpiece secured her cathedral length veil of imported illusion. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds interspersed with lavender roses.

Sheri Decker attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a lavender chiffon gown and carried a silk keepsake arrangement of lavender and white roses and daisies showered with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Laura Bucalo, Cindy Lynn and Teresa Rogers. They wore lavender chiffon gowns and carried silk lavender and white roses arranged on a white fan.

Buddy Crowther served the bridegroom as best man. Groomsmen were Jeff Lynn, Leslie Butterfield and Rickey Rogers.

Flower girls were Rebecca Everly and Christie Crowther. Scotty Bond was the Bible boy.

Following a reception at the Westmonte Civic Center, Altamonte Springs, the couple departed on a honeymoon cruise to the Bahamas.

Mrs. James Sherman Lynn

They are making their home in Deltona. The bridegroom is employed as an electronic technician. The bride is a student at Stetson University, Deland.

Jan C. Reed Bride Of David Steinhorn

Jan Cheryl Reed and David Steinhorn were married Aug. 6, at 7 p.m., at the First Baptist Church of Altamonte Springs. The Rev. Jerry Kennedy performed the candlelight and double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Reed, 137 W. Lauren Court, Fern Park. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Steinhorn of Mattland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown fashioned with a modified Queen Anne neckline, a fitted basque bodice and bishop sleeves enhanced with beaded pearls and Chantilly lace. Tiers of ruffled Chantilly lace and organza formed the bouffant skirt that terminated in a graceful chapel train. A lace and beaded headpiece held her lace-trimmed tiered veil of imported illusion. She carried a fan-shaped bouquet of white roses, white carnations and lily-of-the-valley.

Susie Johnson of Altamonte Springs, attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were: Cindy Talbert, Orlando; Lori Gildea, Casselberry; Cheri Thornton, Orlando; and Cindy Foggin, Sanford. Each wore a powder blue Chantilly lace gown, off-the-shoulder styled, with a full skirt, and each carried symbolic items including a lace-trimmed Bible, a lighted candle, a bouquet of heather and a wreath with entwined flowers.

Tom Logsdon Jr., Altamonte Springs, served the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Alan Young, Don Verner and Jeff Horn, all of Altamonte Springs, Michael Chester, Orlando.

Meggan Huggins of Altamonte Springs, was the flower girl, and Matthew Rogers, New Orleans, the ring bearer.

Following a reception in the church social hall, the newlyweds departed on a wedding trip to Daytona Beach. They are making their home in Orlando. The bride is employed as a dental assistant by Robert Reid, DDS. The bridegroom is employed by Acousti Engineering of Orlando.

Potpourri Of Easy-To-Do-August Garden Chores

August is a rough month for gardening in Florida. It's too late to plant many summer flowers and too early for winter varieties. And furthermore, it's just too darn hot to spend all day slaving in the yard. But don't despair, there are plenty of easy jobs left to do. Here's a potpourri of easy-to-do garden chores.

Roses grow quite large in Central Florida and a late August pruning is recommended. Remove healthy top growth as well as twigs and branches that are dead, diseased, injured, unsightly or thin and spindly.

Frank J. Jasa
County Extension Director
323-2500
Ext. 182

Shorten main canes and lateral branches removing small twigs and some of the oldest canes. Leave at least half the length of each main cane that is one to three years old. The first flowers can be expected eight to nine weeks after pruning.

If you're growing mums or poinsettias for winter color, this is the last month you should pinch these plants to increase blooms. Pinching back the stem tips will promote heavier flowering because of increased branching. But, if you wait too late, pinching will remove flower buds and thus reduce flowers this fall.

It's also about time to begin disbudding camellias to increase flower size. As soon as you can distinguish the rounded flower buds from the pointed vegetative bud, twist off all but one of the flower buds at each tip. Be careful not to injure the remaining bud which should develop into a larger flower. Sasanquas and japonicas which are prized for multi-blooms, need not be pinched.

Common ornamentals like oleander, hydrangeas and azaleas can be propagated by cuttings this time of year. For azaleas, take tip cuttings 3 to 5 inches long with several leaves left attached. Many rooting mediums can be used such as sand or a mixture of peat and perlite. Place the cuttings in the media and keep moist by covering with a plastic bag or use a mist system. A rooting hormone may hasten root growth. If you have any cold sensitive ornamentals, try rooting cuttings before winter and keep the young plants in a protected spot this winter. Then, if the ornamental freezes, you'll have replacements for the spring.

If you want to plant things this time of year, try bulbs of Louisiana Iris, gingers, crinum, daylilies, amaryllis and zephyr lilies. Of course, you can still plant woody ornamentals, but hurry up so that they'll be well established before the winter arrives.

If you intend to plant winter annuals like Baby's breath, calendulas or pansies, start ordering your seed and preparing the flower beds.

Keep watching for insects of lawns and ornamentals. Chinch bugs and mole crickets are very active on lawns and white flies, scales, aphids, and caterpillars are damaging ornamentals.

There's lots of other activities you can think of, but these will keep you busy for a while.

Husband Betting On Wife To Pay Bookie

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22nd wedding anniversary coming up, and he asked me what I wanted. I asked him how much he planned to spend, and he said about $500.

I told him I couldn't think of anything I wanted, but I owed my bookie about that much and if he cleaned up my bill, I'd consider it a nice present.

He agreed, and that's what he gave me.

My question: What do I tell people who ask me what my husband gave me for my anniversary?

LIKES THE HORSES

DEAR LIKES: Tell them he paid off your bookie. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: Denny and I lived together for a year, then we had a falling out and he left for a few weeks. Denny is 23 and I am 28. While we were apart, Denny took up with "Marcie," who is 22, then he came back to me saying he still loves me, but he also loves Marcie. She is pregnant by him, and he is going to marry her. They both moved in with me and we get along great. There is no jealousy between Marcie and me. Denny still loves me and wants me to have a baby by him. He wants to marry me, too, and if that's the only way to keep him, I am agreeable. I know this sounds weird, but we three are very happy together. (We even sleep together.)

Do you think our sharing arrangement will work? Do you think we are weird? Are there any states besides Utah that allow multiple marriages?

SHARING IN SYRACUSE

DEAR SHARING: There are no states — including Utah — that permit multiple marriages. Do I think your sharing arrangement will work? I don't know. Do I think you're weird? Yes.

DEAR ABBY: Which is correct: "The bride walked up the aisle" or "the bride walked down the aisle"?

MADE A BET

DEAR MADE: I'm inclined to believe that the bride walks down the aisle. After the ceremony, she walks (or runs) up the aisle.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for the young man in jail who chose to get his high school diploma:

Dear Abby

Hurrah for you! But don't settle for a high school diploma. Many prisons offer courses that can prepare you for work on the outside, so take advantage of them.

Don't be just another "ex-con" when you get out.

My husband is an instructor at the prison in Vacaville, Calif., so I know something about the programs offered there. Not only can inmates earn a high school diploma, they can also learn clerical skills, electronics, lens grinding, horticulture and auto mechanics. They can become dental technicians, nursing assistants, X-ray technicians and cooks, as well as expert craftsmen in wood, jewelry, leather, pottery and ceramics.

Don't let one mistake ruin your life. Learn from it. Study hard, and good luck.

JANET GOLDSTEIN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: I applaud your statement. "No one should be asked to submit to cosmetic surgery to please another."

This may seem rather odd coming from one who has been a successful plastic surgeon for nearly 30 years, but I am in complete agreement with you.

When someone comes to me for cosmetic surgery, in the initial interview I ask, "Why do you want cosmetic surgery? What do you expect it to do for you?"

If the response is, "To please my boyfriend, or my husband, or my mother or my friends," I say, "Sorry, that's not a good enough reason."

Only when the person wants the surgery to please herself (or himself) would I consider performing the operation.

Camp Meeting Bigger And Better Than Ever

Pastor Don Crabtree can have a satisfied feeling for a long time that this year's Camp Meeting held at Ft. Lane Park last week was bigger and better than ever.

Lou Childers

Saturday evening's activities were highlighted when the Geneva Church of God pastor laid down his preachin' microphone and picked up the one he uses for auctioneering. Over 100 young people ranging in age from about 2½ to 16 were on hand with the "camp bucks" they'd received during the week for attending the church's annual Bible Camp.

Josh Keith walked away with the prize everyone had their eyes on — An "almost" life-sized stuffed Dumbo the Elephant. Josh laid down over $200 in specially minted money for the trophy he took home, and he was the envy of every kid in Geneva who'd been attending during the week.

The only negative comment heard Saturday at the close of the week-long evangelistic effort was "it all ended too soon."

Eva Mae Kelley of Geneva is recovering from another heart attack in the Central Florida Regional Hospital. According to her husband, Annice, who retired this year as the custodian at Geneva Elementary School, Eva Mae is sure to call 365-6646 to

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 20, 1983
Your possibilities for improving your lot in life look encouraging this coming year, provided you don't become involved with questionable individuals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Even though you may feel your ideas are superior today, don't try to impose them upon companions or associates. Use suggestions, not commands. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to give your zodiac sign. Mail an additional $1 for your Leo Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
There's a chance some of your material desires may be denied you today. However, look on the bright side — there's always tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Uncertainties early in the day could cause you some frustrations. As the day wears on, conditions in general will start to brighten considerably.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Be on guard today if you have to deal with a person who caused you problems in the past. He or she may try something cute, but if you're watchful you'll avert it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Disappoint-

ments are possible today if your desires are too materialistic. You'll be better off if you strive to enrich your spirit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Smiles, not snarls, are needed today if you hope to win support in order to accomplish your objectives. Begin by saying "please."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
You have the knack today for both squeezing yourself into a corner and then ingeniously devising an escape route. Don't emphasize the former.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Letting others manage important matters today could end up giving you more responsibilities instead of lessening them. Handle your own affairs.

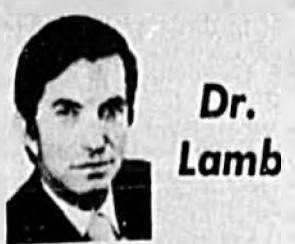

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Subdue tendencies to anticipate the worst when dealing with others today. This could create problems which should never arise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Try to maintain a cheerful attitude today, even if your coworkers are a bit more dour than usual. Nothing will be accomplished if everyone gets uptight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Don't take gambles today disproportionate to your potential gains. Betting dollars to win back dimes is foolish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Sharp negotiating may be required today to protect your interests and those of loved ones. Use your best judgment.

Big Weight Loss Not Recommended

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 34-year-old male and five months ago I weighed about 330 pounds. Certainly I had the beginnings of colitis and even jaundice since my skin was quite yellowish. Additionally my diabetes wasn't in check.

Now five months later due to diet and exercise — heavy exercise such as wood chopping — I now weigh 209 pounds, a loss of 121 pounds. I am in better physical shape than I have ever been.

Since I have been drinking about eight glasses of water a day I am now clean internally. Before my body had a bad smell because of the debris in my digestive system.

My diabetes is completely in check and my blood pressure is perfectly normal.

I will lose 54 pounds more and continue my exercise program for the rest of my life. What is your opinion of my weight loss?

DEAR READER — Great. I would not recommend that rapid weight loss for everybody. You were fortunate in being able to do enough physical exercise to make a real dent in those calories stored as fat. And because of your other comments, I must wonder if you did not also have some retained body water.

Your improvement in health is what is often seen when a person with diabetes and high blood pressure loses excess body fat.

Your improved body odor may be from an improved body chemistry from the correction of your diabetic state.

Now I am all for people losing excess body fat but you must not get fixated on pounds on the scales. What counts is the amount of fat under your skin. Depending on your body size, another 54 pounds may be too much and require your losing muscle as well as fat. Guide yourself on the basis of your fat deposits under your skin.

You will want to read Doing Something About Body Fat, The Health Letter 20-10, which I am sending you.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have lost some weight and my skin is getting soft and loose. I exercise regularly but that doesn't seem to help. I'm in my middle 60s and a female.

Are there any vitamins I can take that would help? I can't jog but do walk some. I just need something to keep my skin from being so loose.

DEAR READER — Think of your skin as a large plastic bag. When it is full of water it will be taut. If you empty part of the water it will wrinkle and there will be folds in it.

When you lose fat and decrease your body size your skin will stay the same size so it wrinkles. There are no vitamins that will help. The only exercises that will help are those that increase muscle size to fill up the skin again.

You may be lucky and have some tightening of the skin with time. Don't count on it. Young people usually have better luck with that. Unfortunately when the skin loses its elasticity, and you lose weight, about the only thing left is to remove some of the excess skin surgically. You may or may not think the problem is important enough to warrant such a procedure. The excess skin won't hurt your health.

WIN AT BRIDGE

So East took dummy's queen with his king, South false-carded with the nine, but that didn't do him any good. East was certain that his partner had led a singleton.

Now it was a simple matter for East to lead back his deuce of diamonds as a suit-preference signal to ask for an immediate club return. Then he could give his partner a second ruff and get to ruff a club for down two.

But greed took over. Why set a man two tricks when you can get him for three? He cashed his ace of clubs to get ready for a real crossruff. Of course, it never materialized. South overruffed the club return and his game had come back from never-never land.

South's play at trick one was minor greed. East's play at trick two was badly judged greed. South was marked with at least five spades and exactly three diamonds. Since it was very unlikely that he would also hold three clubs East should not have attempted to make the hand a wholesale catastrophe for South.

Today's hand might also be entitled "Greed is a terrible thing."

South took a greedy diamond finesse at trick one. True, 30 points is something, but when an attempt for an extra 30 points jeopardizes an almost sure game, it is not worth trying for.

Computers Limited Only By Users' Imagination

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Are you a computer illiterate? Does it seem like youngsters, who have taken computers to their hearts, speak in a foreign language about input and output, bits, bytes, floppy disks and bugs?

There's a relatively simple way of curing this computer malady that may be at a "terminal" stage.

It can be done in your spare time, but it's not easy and not a great deal of fun. It's hard work.

But Silom "Sil" Horwitz believes it's well worth the effort. He teaches leisure time classes at Seminole Community College on various stages of personal computers from an introductory course to advanced programming.

Horwitz says that his students often start out the classes, which run two hours each for eight weeks, only to drop out when they find that learning about computers involves more than just punching a few buttons.

However, he says computers are here to stay and already in many homes whether you realize it or not.

Horwitz points out that many watches contain tiny computers, there are microwave ovens with computer timers, computer controls on some thermostats and of course the computer games with which many young people have become obsessed.

Home computers have become so popular, in fact, that there are more in existence in the United States today than there are people, Horwitz says. This growth has occurred primarily in the last decade, he says, pointing out that computers at affordable prices have been available only since the mid-1970s.

The Tandy Corp., for example, had sales of less than 10,000 home computers in 1977. It is estimated that the company will build three million this year.

Horwitz says that any number of activities can be performed by the home computer...from turning lights off and on, to bookkeeping chores and the printing of neighborhood newsletters. And it's all so easy. Portable computers are available that weigh only two pounds, he says.

Calling computers mind-expanders, Horwitz says the general purpose computer "can do anything that its owner is smart enough to tell it to do." As more and more people purchase them for their homes, he says, the typewriter will become obsolete. "It is a universal office machine replacement."

What will computers be able to do tomorrow, or next year or a decade from now?

The possibilities are limited only by the user's imagination, according to Kay Delk, an SCC computer science instructor.

At present, the major use in most homes, however, is for entertainment. But that is changing. In many homes, Ms. Delk says computers are being used as educational machines with children learning programming as well as foreign languages and math.

They are also helping adults, who instead of going to a college campus, are buying tapes to study the courses they are interested in at home. "In a matter of a few years we will be finding computers in the home as we do television sets today," Ms. Delk says.

That's why both she and Horwitz contend that "everyone should know at least something about computers."

"We will probably find most people on a budget program for paying bills through the computer hooked into their bank, rather than making a trip to the bank," she says. "Probably all the lights in the house will be on computer. The computer will be keeping all sorts of information," she said.

"The prices of computers have been going down so drastically, most people will be able to afford them. It will not be uncommon for some homes to have several computers," Ms. Delk says.

She noted that an increasing number of business executives have computers in their homes keyed into their office's main computer.

"We already have students with computers at home who can tie into the computer at SCC and oftentimes students can access at the large universities," Ms. Delk says.

Computers are becoming so much a part of contemporary society that some universities now require degree-seeking students to take at least an introductory course in computers.

"And all teachers should take a computer literacy class," Ms. Delk says.

"I'm amazed at the number of professional people — physicians and attorneys — who know nothing about computers and have little interest in learning."

In the midst of the Computer Age, these folks will just have to continue turning their lights and lawn sprinklers on by hand and driving to the bank to conduct their financial affairs.

'George Washington' And 'Mother's Day'

He was the first president and now he's a miniseries, too. "George Washington" will be an eight-hour CBS production to be broadcast during the upcoming season.

Patty Duke Astin, Lloyd Bridges, Hal Holbrook, Richard Kiley, James Mason and Jaclyn Smith are already included in the cast. Barry Bostwick will play the man with the wooden teeth, George Washington. Mrs. Astin will portray his wife, Martha Custis. Bridges plays Caleb Quinn, who accompanied Washington on his trips into the wilderness.

Holbrook is John Adams; Kiley plays Washington's Virginia neighbor, George Mason; Mason is British Gen. Edward Braddock; and Miss Smith plays Sally Fairfax, with whom Washington falls in love with, although she is married to his closest friend.

Stephanie Powers, Melissa Gilbert and Maureen Stapleton are currently working on an NBC movie in Los Angeles.

The working title is "Mother's Day," and it's about the relationships of a mother, daughter and grandmother during a week-end together.

Looking For Laughs

By Andrew J. Edelstein
Jack Kerouac went on the road looking for kicks; Charles Kuralt goes on the road looking for offbeat pieces of Americana Now. Showtime is going on the road looking for laughs.
The pay-cable service has launched its campaign to find the funniest person in America. They're taking a mobile video production van across America on a 16-city jaunt looking for the country's funniest undiscovered comic.
The van is specially equipped with TV production facilities for anyone wanting to tape his routine. From all the material shot on the road, Showtime will develop a series of short programs to air between August and December.
The search will last through the end of this year. People who live in areas that aren't visited by the van can find out how to enter by writing to Showtime. All material will be judged by a celebrity panel to select a final winner.
The search, which began in New York in July, wraps up with visits to Dallas (Aug. 22), Los Angeles (Aug. 25), San Francisco (Aug. 27) and Seattle (Aug. 30).
They'll stop at whatever establishment the show's crew thinks might cough up a potential comic - a bowling alley, mall, or barber shop, perhaps.
The first roads traveled by the van were the potholed streets of Manhattan. The first stop: the Carnegie Delicatessen, one of New York's most famous kosher-style delis.

PP&M Back On PBS

By Peter Meade
They've still got it. Twenty years, some spent on separate roads, have not lessened the singing appeal of Peter, Paul & Mary. The trio, reunited four years ago, appears with John Williams on PBS' "Evening with Pops," to air Sunday, Aug. 21. (Air dates may vary, please check local listings.)
Backed by Williams conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, they sing such hand clapping, toe tapping favorites as "Leaving on a Jet Plane," "Puff the Magic Dragon," "Blowin' in the Wind" and "This Land is Your Land."

Wedding Dress From Berle; Deb Hoards Hollywood Relics

Bob Hope and Milton Berle teamed in a charity show. Both were in drag. "A lady who saw it loved my dress," Milton told me. "The dress was really terrific. I got it from the Salvation Navy.

Anyway, she said she's getting married and she's a size 18-1/2 and she wanted to wear my dress." They sent it as a wedding gift.
Here's a musical update: Connie Francis is doing well on Paris radio... Ray Charles' oldie, "Diane," is a biggie in Australia... Frankie Laine and Doris Day are being resurrected by disc jockeys in Brussels... Pat Boone's "Love Letters in the Sand" is getting play on Hawaiian radio. Don't ask me why. Maybe they just caught up to it...

Johnny Carson: "I want my epitaph to read, 'I'll be right back.' ... George Burns: "In my day performers wanted to play the Palace. Now they all want to play the White House."

Debbie Reynolds is into relics. This assessment is neither personal nor professional. It's financial. She told me: "As the big movie studios closed one by one, I bought up their lots of scripts, props, fashions, their whole inventory. I have it all carefully stashed in warehouses. I have more than a million dollars worth of artifacts put away. My plan someday is to put a museum in Hollywood."

If you're hung for a gift, you can get a good buy on Theodore Roosevelt's rifle. Michael Greenwald, a California-type, deals in these must-have items. He has a "fully documented custom-made rifle made exclusively for TR's 1910 African safari." President Teddy's toy is handmade by V. Charles Schilling in Suhl, Prussia, has a double-set trigger, Mauser action and it's engraved. You want it? I can get it for you wholesale at $750,000.

Dining At Buck's Popular For Out-Of-Towners As Is Their Catered Affair

Traveling a distance to have dinner at Buck's Restaurant in Sanford is a common occurrence at this seafood house. Diners often come from as far as Tampa, Leesburg, Titusville, Kissimmee and St. Cloud.

The restaurant has been the site of monthly family reunions for those living a distance apart.

The seafood buffet, an ample arrangement of several kinds of fish and accompaniments, comes with a salad bar for $8.95.

Buck's at the corner of 13th Street and Sanford Avenue, is open Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 5 p.m. Beer and wine may be ordered with dinner.

Barbecued ribs ("that melt in your mouth"), filet mignon and hamburgers for the kids may be ordered from the kitchen.

Seven different kinds of fish dishes, including shrimp two ways, garnish the groaning board. They are baked, fried, broiled or Creoled. The New England clam chowder, said to be the best, begins the feast which is accompanied with rice Pilaf, corn on the cob, green beans almondine, macaroni and cheese and tater tots.

Casual attire is suggested for diners, as is early arrival, since reservations are not accepted.

Seating for a limited 52 persons is arranged at tables or booths in one of the intimate dining rooms.

Dick and Vivian Buck also enjoy an extensive catering trade. Preparation for the festivities is performed in the kitchen of the restaurant, where the Buck's and their long-standing employees bread the fish, chop the vegetables and layer the lasagna.

Weddings, cocktail parties, barbecue feasts, sit down and buffet dinners are catered to the last detail. The catering calendar has bookings up to six months in advance in places scattered throughout two counties.

Banquets are customized to suit individual tastes and pocketbooks.
