Schools: Fewer drugs?

Officials: Education, zero tolerance working

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — It would appear that drug use is down at most Seminole County high schools and district officials are hoping to keep it that way.

District security chief George Proechel said the schools and the district as a whole have put their collective foot down and there is no longer a tolerance for the possession or use of drugs.

"We're just not going to put up with this stuff any more," Proechel said. "The school administrations, the teachers and most of the students have no use for the kind of people who do drugs."

At Seminole High, there has only been one drug-related arrest so far this school year.

While numbers were not readily available for past years, Proechel believes that not only are the number of arrests down, but that also the number of incidents of drugs on campus.

"I think the students are getting the message that we just aren't going to put up with drugs in the schools," Proechel said.

Grethen Schapker, principal at Seminole, said she believes education and cooperation between students and staff has made the difference.

"We have made a concerted effort to put forth the message that this is not an acceptable behavior," Schapker said.

She noted that educational pro-

SANFORD — The Surgeon General has suggested that drugs be made legal. The train of thought is that by decriminalizing drugs, violent crimes related to drugs would decrease. Is this the solution to the abuse of the substances or is it opening another can of worms? Many people in the Sanford area were asked how they feel about legalizing drugs. They voiced concerns as well as opinions.

Sylvester Polk felt, "Some illegal substances should be decriminalized. We spend court time, legal time and police time arresting a guy smoking some

Sharing bits and pieces of info we're drowning in Morning! We're still drowning in bits and pieces of information to share with you. So today and for the next couple weeks let's take them one by one.

In our December yarn about Sanford's hospitals we credited George Roland of Deltona for providing photos of Dr. Davis Forster and Dr. J.T. Denton. That was correct. We also gave him credit for the picture of Plant System Hospital No. 1. That wasn't correct. The credit should have gone to Bill Dreggers, an old timer who's very active in the affairs of the Henry A. DeLand House in the Volusia County seat. We're grateful for his most willing assistance. And, folks, if you ever have a chance, visit the DeLand House at 137 West Michigan. You'll be in for a treat.

The December railroad exhibit at the First Street Gallery was well done, well attended and well enjoyed by all who took the time to see it. Thanks goes to the "Coastliners," an organization of retired railroad employees headed up by former ACL and SCL locomotive engineer Rudy Sloan. Some of the equipment there was almost unbelievable. We also have to thank Kay Bartholomew of the gallery for her assistance.

A reader wrote: "In several of your 'Way Back When' articles regarding former Sanford mayor and banker Forrest Lake, you've said if the child he and his wife were expecting was a boy and born in Cuba he could never become president of the United States." The writer asked, "Wouldn't the child still have been an American citizen?" The answer is yes. But the U.S. Constitution says that to become a U.S. president he or she must have been born on U.S. soil.

Not long ago we told you we received a missive from Bob Daehn, "a transplanted Yankee," saying a photo we ran of a "trolley" in old Sanford was not a "trolley" but a rail car. He was right. He also said "they" were not plural, meaning there was only one. He was wrong. Accompanying this column is a photo of two "rail" cars on First Street, one right behind the other. Makes us wonder if there were any more.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Convenience store law cutting crime

GAINESVILLE — The murder of a store clerk in 1984 and a rash a holdups led this North Florida city to adopt a tough city ordinance six years ago on convenience store safety.

Two clerks must be on duty between 8 p.m. and 4 a.m., and there are other restrictions on lighting and money control.

With its success at reducing holdups, it has been used as a model for Florida and Virginia laws and other regulations in 260 communities.

"We've reduced convenience store crime 80 percent over the last six years," said Police Chief Wayland Clifton.

Gainesville's ordinance was recently honored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

From a high of 61 convenience store robberies in 1986, Gainesville's rate of store holdups has dramatically dropped.

In 1987, the first year the law went into effect, robberies dropped 62.2 percent when only 23 holdups were reported.

The numbers have stayed down. Eighteen robberies were reported in 1988, 16 in 1989, seven in 1990, 12 in 1991 and 11 in 1992.

Child abuse deaths

Metropolitan Orlando had one of the highest death rates from child abuse and neglect, according to a study released Friday.

Deaths because of child abuse or neglect are more frequent in the country's South and West regions, while they are lowest in the Northeast, according to a study released Friday.

Among metropolitan areas with populations of 1 million or more, Phoenix, Orlando, Fla.; Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla.; and Miami had the highest death rates from child abuse and neglect, while Boston, Hartford, Conn.; and Rochester, N.Y., had the lowest, the study showed.

The study was to appear in the January issue of the American Medical Association's Archives of Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine, formerly the American Journal of Diseases in Children.

The study is significant because it shows how death rates because of child abuse or neglect vary widely nationally, said co-author Dr. Bernard Ewigman, an associate professor at the University of Missouri School of Medicine.

"If we can identify the factors that cause the rates to be three times as high in Florida cities compared to Northeast cities, then we might be able to do something to prevent these tragic deaths," Ewigman, director of research at the school's Department of Family and Community Medicine, said in a telephone interview.

Ewigman and his fellow researchers used mathematical models drawn from that study and examined death certificates, FBI crime reports and information from the National Center for Health Statistics for the years 1979 to 1988 to come up with their estimates.

They focused on children younger than 5 because they estimate 90 percent of child abuse deaths occur in that age group, when they say children are most vulnerable.

The South region range was 5.4 to 11.5 deaths per 100,000 children younger than 5, while the West range was 5.2 to 11.2 deaths. The range in the North Central region, comprising the Midwest states, was 4.6 to 9.8 deaths, while the Northeast region range was 4.3 to 8.2 deaths.

Among metropolitan areas, Phoenix had the highest range, from 8.5 to 16.5 deaths; followed by Orlando, 7.5 to 14.9; Tampa-St. Petersburg, 6.6 to 14.8; and Miami, 6.6 to 14.8. Lowest were Boston, 2.7 to 5.5; Hartford, 3.5 to 5.8; and Rochester, 3.2 to 6.8.

Broken wheel caused derailment

LAKELAND — Three pieces of a broken wheel were recovered by federal investigators near the scene of a circus train derailment that killed two performers.

Two sets of witnesses spotted trouble on the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey train before the wreck Thursday east of this Central Florida city.

The train made an emergency stop after an ambulance driver noticed something amiss five miles before the derailment and relayed a message to the train dispatcher, National Transportation Safety Board member Jim Hall said Friday.

The driver suggested checking for "a possible sticky brake," and crew members were not looking specifically for damaged wheels, Hall said.

Found dead at the scene were Ceslee Conkling, 28, a circus clown from Fort Worth, Texas, and Ted Sverteaky, 39, an elephant trainer from Bridgeport, Conn. Fourteen others were injured.

Meanwhile, the circus prepared to go on with its first show since the derailment Saturday night at the Orlando Arena following the cancellation of three performances.

Business, civic leader retiring — sort of

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — "I'm not actually retiring," says B.C. "Cal" Conklin, "I'm just reducing the number of hours I work." Even so, few men are as busy with business and volunteer work.

It was revealed at Monday night's Sanford City Commission meeting that Conklin was retiring as executive vice president of Conklin, Porter and Holmes-Engineers, Inc. The company has served the city for many years in engineering work.

Conklin however, is not considering it as retirement. "I will still be on the job and in my office almost every day of the week," he said, "but maybe not on such a full time basis."

"I'm taking a few months off, but I still plan to be here," he added.

Other than his profession,

Conklin has kept busily involved in the many interests he has had, and shared with his wife Phyllis, over their 38 years of married life.

During past years, Conklin has served as chairman for such groups as City of Sanford Historical Preservation Board, Greater Sanford Development Corporation, Code Enforcement Board, and the Chamber of Commerce Roads and Bridges Committee.

He is a past member of the City of Sanford Planning and Zoning Board and the Sanford Kiwanis Club.

He is very active in church work, being an elder and choir member at Markham Woods Presbyterian Church. He has also served as chairman for several major projects at the church.

He takes pride in his singing, and has been a soloist at church as well as a member of the Seminole Community College Community Chorus and Martin Luther King Celebration Choir.

His wife, Phyllis is at his side for most of the singing, and is similarly involved in church and other choir singing.

Conklin has been praised for his continuous work and efforts for such organizations as Meals-on-Wheels, Habitat for Humanity, Children's Home Society of Central Florida, Central Florida Zoo, Salvation Army, and United Way.

He also has been an active supporter of Rescue Outreach Mission, Good Samaritan Home, Sanford Christian Sharing Center, and Channel-24 WMFB-TV Twenty Four Hundred Club.

In addition to the Warren E. "Pete" Knowles award in 1992,

Bristol C. 'Cal' Conklin
Conklin received the Martin Luther King Brotherhood Award in 1989 and was named Rotary "Four-Way Test Businessman of the Year" in 1990.

STOP fights for prison reform

Petition drive begins

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Concerned citizens, law enforcement officers and others involved in the criminal justice system will be collecting signatures later this month calling for a constitutional amendment to stop the early release of criminals from prison.

At the Wednesday night meeting of the Seminole County STOP chapter, participants planned an intensive petition drive Jan. 22 and 29. STOP stands for Stop Turning Out Prisoners. The constitutional amendment the group proposes would require prisoners serve at least 85 percent of their sentences, not the 30-40 percent now served. The early release of prisoners is done due to prison overcrowding.

The signatures of 430,000 people are needed statewide to get the amendment on the ballot.

Seminole County Undersheriff Steve Harriett said the local group turned in 150 signatures at the STOP meeting.

The major push in the signature drive will focus on major shopping areas throughout the county.

"We've got some volunteers who are going to lend time and effort to man some booths and tables here and there to see if we can get upwards of 1,000 signatures from Seminole County," Harriett said. The STOP chapter will meet again Jan. 19 at 7 p.m. in the Old Lake Mary City Hall to refine details of the two-day petition drive.

"This just emphasizes that the public is very concerned about this prison crisis, that people are getting released from prison prematurely, which they are," Harriett said of the volunteer effort.

"There are representatives from all over Seminole County," Harriett said, describing the STOP members, "and these are just well-meaning, concerned citizens. Don't let me mislead you. There are a lot of representatives from law enforcement and representatives from the state attorney's office. On the other hand, there are also some hardworking, concerned citizens. I don't mean to be cliché by using that term, but there are some school teachers and people who work in other businesses. And I think that is significant that people are donating their time, whether to attend a night meeting or man a petition booth, to do their part to change this."

Sandy Robinson, school board and STOP member, speaks to the group.

"I think there's a lot to be said that it is not only a law enforcement or criminal justice effort," he continued, "but it's a community effort. That needs to be said."

The locations of the petitions points will be released after the Jan. 19 meeting.

Commemorating Dr. Martin Luther King

We have a power, power that can't be found in Molotov cocktails, but we do have a power. Power that cannot be found in bullets and guns, but we have a power. It is a power as old as the insights of Jesus of Nazareth and as modern as the techniques of Mahatma Gandhi.

Martin Luther King spent much of his life working not only for the civil rights of the oppressed but also for non-violent resolution of conflicts.

The Sanford Martin Luther King celebration committee has worked hard this year to help spread those ideals throughout the community.

The committee has staged a celebration promoting the idea that power is not in the guns that so many carry, but it is in the strength of a community that works together to resolve its conflicts and make advances.

The Sanford committee has tried to promote the concept of unity, not only among those in the African-American community, but among all people in the Sanford area.

People of all races, colors and creeds have been invited and encouraged to participate in the events associated with the celebration.

King stated always that he disdained violence; that he believed true power came from working together with all people to overcome the oppression of those who had little.

Sanford's Martin Luther King committee has embodied that belief.

They have worked tirelessly over the last seven years to educate the community and commemorate the life and work of Martin Luther King.

The emphasis of each celebration has been on bringing the community together to celebrate ideals of King's teachings. Unity, peace and the needs of the whole community have always been the focal point of the celebrations.

We applaud the efforts of the City of Sanford Martin Luther King committee and we hope that the people of Sanford and of Seminole County will all heed King's words: "Where evil men plot, good men must plan. When evil men burn and bomb, good men must build and bind. When evil men shout ugly words of hatred, good men must commit themselves to the glories of love. Where evil men would seek to perpetuate an unjust status quo, good men must seek to bring into being a real order of justice."

Disagreeing with consequences when kids have guns

There was an article written in your paper about parenting and the responsibility that goes with it. It stated that any child found with a gun by policemen would have to do 100 hours of community service on the first offense. Their parents would also be sentenced to do community service. It said, Your paper said that is a law that is soon to be in full effect. Well, I don't agree with it. If a child is found with a gun, it does not automatically mean they got it from their parents, or that their parents had anything to do with it. If I was ever found with a gun, I would want to take the consequences, not my parents!

For better education

Our children will need a good education today to compete in tomorrow's economy. This state needs closer cooperation between business and state government to provide our state's youth with the training they will need in tomorrow's high tech oriented economy. We don't need more prison beds and a panic-like increase in law enforcement spending. We need a better educated workforce that will work in worker-safe, environmentally sensitive, decent paying, high-tech jobs. Better educated people results in less poverty and less poverty usually results in less crime.

Spending enough money now in improving public education is the best investment we can make in working towards a better, brighter sunshine state tomorrow.

Are King's dreams being shattered?

If a report card could be given to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. relative to the issues of race relations and the progress of African Americans in this country, it would shatter his dreams.

Monday, Jan. 17, 1994 we will be observing the birthday of this great champion for human rights. Ending discriminatory practices that supported racial divisions and heightened racial animosity was at the top of Dr. King's American agenda. The physical signs that separated the races were removed decades ago. However, problems germinating racial tensions persist. They exist because prejudice is learned and as long as racial hatred is taught it will exist.

Today the great issues confronting African Americans are: the astronomical incidence of black-on-black crime having reached the 95 percent level; the disproportionate incarceration of young black males in relation to their percentage in the general population; the high incidence of single parenthood and lack of economic parity.

Is poverty the villain, does being poor always lead to crime? Does single parenthood automatically produce children with anti-social behavior? Is the high incidence of black-on-black crime attributable to proximity more than any other variable? All of us know individuals who have been poor and have not become criminals. We know individuals who have grown up in single parent families and have become productive citizens. The fact that most African Americans live in particular areas where most or all of their neighbors are African Americans produce a natural situation of interacting with the people they are in contact with, hence the proximity variable.

SEMINOLE OPINION

Generalizations never account for individual human behavior. It is time for Americans of all races, creeds and colors to resolve to teach children that each person is responsible for his or her own behavior. We need to be about changing adult practices to provide role models for children that teach positive behaviors based upon our actions.

The print, broadcast media as well as the music industry have a definite role they can play in revamping America's focus away from sex and violence to morality. Responsible behaviors should be glamorized and become the focal points.

Our report card to Dr. King must give a grade for economic deprivation: economics remain a real problem for many Americans. We not only have homeless individuals but homeless families and their numbers are growing.

The influence of God in the life of this country is unclear. We say that "In God We Trust" but we do not love one another the way God has admonished us to do. Actions always speak louder than words.

In spite of the problems we still have hope because a child may grow up in poverty, in a single family home or in a black neighborhood, but if the child is loved, valued, nurtured and taught self responsibility, he or she can become a productive citizen.

ELLEN GOODMAN

We didn't get here at knife point

BOSTON — It is the story that made strong men cross their legs and strong women giggle about strong men crossing their legs. It was the story that made strong headline writers give into their weakness for puns. And more to the point, it was the story that made my husband glance up from the newspaper and say, for the only time in our recorded history, "You could give this a good leaving alone."

Which is, Lord knows, what I intended to do. One case of male genital mutilation in 200-odd years of American history? You would have thought it was a massacre. After centuries of male fantasies about the castrating female, we finally have ...one...and she becomes the universal symbol of — "a shocking new round in the battle of the sexes."

On this point I agree with Paul Ebert who has prosecuted both husband and now wife: "A sleeping man had his penis amputated. It's not a media event. It's a criminal case."

In my book, Lorena and John Bobbitt themselves aren't symbolic of anything. She is a 24-year-old who married Mr. Very Wrong, and embezzled from her employer and friend. She left her house on the fateful night with a penis in her hand, but also with $100 and a Nintendo game stolen from a house guest.

John Bobbitt is, in the words of his own attorney, "not the most sensitive person" and "not the brightest guy in the world." The former Marine and bar-bouncer, who was acquitted of marital rape, had been charged earlier with battering Lorena. The man who couldn't define "foreplay" on the witness stand, may not have differentiated between rape and sex in the bedroom.

Nevertheless, at the courtroom in Manassas, Va., where Lorena is on trial for "malicious wounding," the vendors are back selling T-shirts that say, "Revenge — How Sweet It Is." The radio station is back giving away Slice soda and wieners. So are the people pronouncing that these two pathetic people are representative of the battle of the sexes.

Well, I don't know why we only call it a battle when women are caught fighting, or fighting back. If John had only abused Lorena we would have called it violence but not war. Only when the weapon got into her hands, did it become a subject for musing on the hostile state of gender relations.

This has happened before. Just a few years ago, with slasher movies filling Cineplexes with female blood, one film became the topic for worried gender-watchers: "Thelma and Louise."

Last year, the police blotter was full of abused and murdered wives — an almost unilateral massacre. But one issue seemed to elicit the most copy from our war correspondents. The battered woman's defense.

The Packwood 26, the burning bed, the fatal attraction are all framed as skirmishes. The Supreme Court ruled on sexual harassment by men against women, but it was the possibility of a woman harassing a man that sets the creative juices flowing in Michael Crichton's front-line novel, "Disclosure."

I know, I know. Female retaliation and female violence are still the unusual stories, the news. When a 5-foot-2-inch, 95-pound manicurist cuts the penis off a 200-pound former Marine it's news indeed. But when the urban legend arises simultaneously in a dozen cities about the man who wakes up with a red ribbon tied neatly around his penis and a note saying how easy it would be — well, that's battle-ground fantasy.

Maybe we talk about the war between the sexes now because men — the ones who do most of the labeling — see a dangerous enemy where there was once a victim. If women smile at men who squirm, maybe it's at that recognition of power.

A few years ago, in Olivia Smith's "First Wives Club" three women plotted retaliation against powerful and abusive ex-husbands. They are not exactly looking for revenge, one said, but for "something more sophisticated. ...Like justice."

I'm never keen on taking justice into your own hands. Abuse may mitigate a woman's guilt and make her act more understandable. It rarely makes her an innocent.

But even so, this freakish episode in a single sad marriage doesn't represent some generic new war between men and women. Too many front-line relationships with men simply turn into a power struggle. I don't agree.

In the age of inequality, peace between men and women was often the peace of an occupied country. It wasn't peaceful when women were harassed or when marital rape was legal.

The skirmishes in the 1950s were often the bitter sniping of people hiding behind separate roles. One of the reasons to level the field between sexes, to lead lives that were more alike, was so that we could get closer. Many — maybe most — of us have.

And for all the headlines, the grimaces, the smirks, we didn't get here at knife point.

One case of male genital mutilation in 200-odd years of American history? You would have thought it was a massacre.

Big Oil just can't seem to get break

It's not easy being an oil company. No look, I mean that. Every time these guys turn around, they've got another problem to deal with. When the Exxon Valdez spilled a load of gunk in Alaska's Prince William Sound, the price of petrol went up 15 cents a gallon and everybody said they were gouging. When Iraq invaded Kuwait, prices at the pump soared, and back came all the old gouging charges. Then it came out that they rang up a 77 percent increase in profits during that period, and there were those familiar gouging accusations again.

The price hikes were a purely natural phenomenon, of course. Indeed, the oil companies thought up 26 perfectly logical reasons why prices skyrocketed during the Gulf War, but would anybody listen? Nooo. Especially not those fear-mongers in the media, ignorant as they are of all things economic.

Now the latest quandary: Big Oil somehow has to find a way to deal with the testimony of one of their own that directly refutes the 26 reasons why prices soar in times of crisis. In case you missed it, what happened is that a Washington Post reporter interviewed Mr. Leonard Bower, director of policy analysis at the American Petroleum Institute, and asked him why gasoline prices are currently staying high when crude oil prices have been way down. Mr. Bower said this:

"Our analysis shows that it takes about three months for crude oil prices to get fully reflected at the pump."

Whoa, wait a minute. A high-level oil industry representative says it takes three months for crude prices to be reflected at the pump? This is heavy stuff, and here's why:

Sixty-eight seconds after Saddam Hussein sent his troops into Kuwait on Aug. 2, 1990, gasoline prices in the United States shot up. And they kept going up. One day I asked the manager at my local Shell station about this phenomenon and he said he was being notified by the home office of price increases several times a day by electronic mail. Not only that, but prices stayed up until mid-January 1991 — long after it was apparent to everyone the world supply of oil was not endangered.

In February 1991, Big Oil posted incredible fourth-quarter profits: Mobil, $651 million; Amoco, $538 million; Exxon, $1.55 billion.

Why had prices soared so quickly? People were saying it was because the oil companies wanted to reap rich rewards from gasoline in the inventory that had already been refined from cheaper fuel. But Big Oil quickly disabused us of that notion. There were many, many reasons for the price hikes, they said, and among them were these:

In the computer age, crude price increases are speedily reflected at the pump; the price of West Texas Intermediate Spot Market Crude, to which the price of all oil on the planet is apparently pegged, kept going up; there was a need to protect reserves; old crude had to be replaced with expensive new crude; gasoline prices were only now catching up with creeping crude prices; and there were a lot of impenetrable "market forces" at work here that nobody understood but oil company economists.

And complicating everything, one Big Oil executive explained to the Washington Post, was the fact that "we're the only industry in the world that when we raise prices six cents we put it on a 20-foot-high sign."

So the oil companies have another problem: The darn public can't perceive worth a hoot. You just can't win in Big Oil.

Every time these guys turn around, they've got another problem to deal with.

The commissioners are also expected to formally appoint Sandy Lomax as Parks and Recreation Director. She has been performing the duties of director for some time, but had not been officially named director of the department. Korman said.

In other business, the commissioners will conduct public hearings on ordinances dealing with adult entertainment and the city's comprehensive development plan.

The city commissioners are imposing a 180-day moratorium on the approval of conditional uses or issuance of licenses or permits for the operation of adult entertainment establishments.

During that period, the city attorney will be drafting an ordinance governing adult-type businesses. The legislation was prompted by the opening in quick succession of three salons offering body scrubs. Advertising for the establishments is primarily aimed at male clients.

Three resolutions outlining special assessments for the paving of South Oak Street, Reider Avenue and Second Place are also on the agenda.

Commissioner Iris Benson is scheduled to discuss the beautification of State Road 434 and street lighting in the Shadow Hill subdivision.

The commission will meet at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of city hall.

On the pre-Christmas tour of historic Sanford homes we wonder how many of you remember the Higgins House at Fifth and Oak as the residence of the Judge S.A.B. Wilkinson family? The judge was one of the early Gator football coaches at the University of Florida.

We also enjoyed Susan Wenner's report on the Valerno home at Eighth and Park. We seemed to recall that at one time the A.K. Shoemaker Sr. family lived in this house. Since we're a bit nosy we buzzed A.K. Shoemaker Jr., local building contractor and longtime chairman of Sanford's Airport Authority.

"Didn't you and your folks live there at one time?" we asked. "Yes, we did," said Kay. "for seven or eight years. We only rented since we didn't have the money to buy it." Ironic, isn't it? After World War II, the younger Kay got into developing residential subdivisions and we couldn't begin to estimate the number of single and multi-family homes he's built and sold in Sanford. Kay's built many a commercial and industrial building here, too. We remember his father well and what old timer could ever forget his dear mother, Janie Shoemaker.

Several local clowns sent me a card for my birthday in December when I hit 74. Just to make me feel old the card pointed out that being born in 1919 meant Woodrow Wilson was president, Thomas Marshall was vice president, Great Lakes Navy whippersnappers 17-0 in the Rose Bowl, Howard Wilcox won the Indy 500 at 88.1 miles per hour, Jack Dempsey whipped Jess Willard for the heavyweight title, Navy beat Army 6-0, the Cincinnati Reds beat the Chicago White Sox in the scandal-ridden World Series, you could mail a letter for two cents, buy a pound loaf of bread for 10 cents, milk was 18 cents a quart and also born that year was folk singer Pete Seeger and Alabama governor George Wallace. What a way to hurt a guy!

In another place we incorrectly said 1941. We incorrectly identified one youngster who was really Glynn Hodges. One of the unknowns was really Judy Ludwig and the young lady we said was Barbara Bradbury was really Barbara Bradley. It was difficult to make out all the handwritten names on the back of the photo. But, we tried our best.

Recently we learned that old friend Ashby Jones back in the 1930s played for Coach Spike Welshinger's Daytona Beach Mainland High Buccaneers and later for Coach Leonard L. McLucas' Seminole High Celery Feds.

in Sanford and everywhere else."

Mitchell is also involved in the fund-raising projects to restore and renovate the old Hopper Academy in Sanford and in trying to have the Orange Avenue Park renamed Wilson Children's Park.

"I want to make this a better place for our children to live and grow up," he said.

Kathryn Alexander, who presented Mitchell with the award said he was one of the most humble men she had ever met, but that he was dedicated to a variety of projects designed to make Sanford better for everyone.

"He is making a significant difference in all of our lives," she said.

Mitchell dedicated the award to his uncle Horace Mitchell, a former resident of Sanford who was a great admirer of Dr. King.

"One of the last conversations we ever had before he (his uncle) died was about Martin Luther King and his contributions and what we still had left to do," he said.

Mitchell, who said he has found over the years that it is better to love than to hate, serves with other organizations through the Elks and through his church, which are dedicated to improving the quality of life in Sanford.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Miss SHS events

SANFORD — Walt Disney World Ambassadors Susan Ralston and Anna Roberts, along with Jon Land, the Disney senior representative of community affairs, will take an active role in this year's Miss SHS contest.

The three will be feted at a reception, hosted by the school's PTSA group, on Thursday, Jan. 20 at 7 p.m. Land, a Sanford resident, will serve as a judge for the actual contest which will take place on Saturday, Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m. Roberts will serve as emcee for the event.

The public is invited to the contest which will take place in the school's auditorium.

Tickets for the contest, which includes the talent competition, are $2 each.

The contestants are all juniors and seniors, they all have a grade point average of at least 2.5 and they must be accomplished in school and in the community.

Project Graduation donation

SANFORD — The Seminole County Commission has approved Sheriff Don Eslinger's request to donate $2,000 to each of Seminole County's six senior high schools this year.

The money will be used to pay for Project Graduation celebrations, which are alcohol and drug-free events held each year in conjunction with the graduation events.

New semester holds excitement

So a new semester is on the horizon and there are a lot of things happening. Besides coming back to a short three-day week, many of us will be greeted with new classes. If they attended semester classes this past half of the school year then a different class awaits them when they return to school. New schedules were given out last Monday and if the student or any parent has any questions then they can contact the office during regular school hours.

A new semester means a new start and that also means second chances. If you missed out on being exempt from your exams, the whole thing starts over Wednesday. The slates are clean. Now remember the rules are that you must not have any unexcused absences, have only two or less excused absences, and go to all of your Contact classes (even if you don't want to), so you can qualify for the exemption policy. Make sure you've got this clear so that when test time rolls around again (and it'll be here sooner than you think) you won't have to hassle teachers or the front office.

To all involved in the performing arts, competitions are here once again. And those after school rehearsals count more now than ever. If you weren't serious about everything before it's time to start. We need the support of the entire school as well as parents and the community. With everyone behind us we'll have no worries about defending our national titles. (That's right, we're National Champs!)

Prom is ahead and you'd be wise to start saving money now. With dresses to be bought, tuxes and limos to rent, flowers for you both, and (of course) tickets, there's sure to be plenty of green spent. The location is the same place as last year but don't fret, it's been promised to be memorable. Colors are teal, black, and silver and the theme is "An Evening of Enchantment". Sounds romantic, huh?

Start scouring now for dates, all you juniors and seniors, and no one said you have to go with a boyfriend or girlfriend. Best friends make wonderful dates and since you're comfortable with each other there shouldn't be many, if any, awkward moments. Worried about not finding a date? There have been plenty who have gone stag and some say they prefer it that way.

Since the prom is a gift given to the seniors by the junior class, fundraising plays a big part in paying for the food, decorations, D.J., etc. So when you have a desperate 11th grader begging you to buy a t-shirt try to do all you can to help out. Even if this isn't your year for prom maybe someone else will help for your's.

Graduation is around the corner seniors. Start looking into scholarships now and applying to colleges. The sooner you start the better chance you have at choosing where you want to go instead of where you have to go.

Wilson believes in kids

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Marion Wilson said she has always been excited by teaching. Her mother tells her that she always wanted to play school even as a very young child.

This year, she was named teacher of the year at Hamilton Elementary School in Sanford. She teaches third grade there.

"I had a sister (who is a primary specialist in Broward County) and many teachers who inspired me to become a teacher," she said.

She said she loves children and wants to teach them the standard curriculum items as well as helping them to live within the society.

"I really believe these children need to learn some skills to help them get on in this world," she said. "I'll do what I can to help them."

She said that she believes the students in her class learn a great deal because there are few disruptions once they settle down to learn. Any problems are dealt with before class starts.

"If I have to take a student out in the hall and talk to him for five minutes before class starts if I see he is having some problem or that he'll be disruptive for some reason, I'll do it," she said. "It's worth the five minutes to make sure we're all able to settle down to learn afterward."

She said her students feel they can talk to her about any problems they might have. Whether it is at school or at home, no problem seems to be off limits for discussion her students seem to feel.

"I feel like they trust me," she said. She has been teaching for 14 years and said that many of the problems remain constant, though the decline in parental involvement in education has made the teachers job more difficult she said.

Wilson lives in Sanford with her husband Kelvin and her son Khalif, a first grader at Hamilton.

Studies support needle exchanges

CHICAGO — Two new studies of needle-exchange programs found that addicts readily trade used syringes for clean ones, reducing their risk of AIDS.

The studies, published in today's The Journal of the American Medical Association, are important because they were done in New York and San Francisco, while most similar studies have been done in Europe, said Dr. Don C. Des Jarlais, lead author of the New York study.

Des Jarlais' team surveyed 141 intravenous drug users at Beth Israel Medical Center in 1984 and 974 intravenous drug users there from 1990 through 1992. Over that time, the use of dirty syringes declined from 51 percent of injections to 7 percent.

The researchers said the reduction appears to stem from needle-exchange programs and a significant increase in the number of addicts who sniff heroin instead of injecting it.

The San Francisco study evaluated a needle-exchange program that began in 1988. By the spring of 1992, 45 percent of intravenous drug users surveyed reported "usually" obtaining syringes through the needle exchange, said the researchers, led by John K. Watters of the University of California at San Francisco.

HIV protein damages brain

NEW YORK — Scientists have found new evidence that a single protein of the AIDS virus may damage brain cells and lead to the impaired thinking and movement seen in some infected people.

Strains of mice made to produce the protein in their brains showed brain abnormalities like those in infected humans, researchers said.

The mice should be useful in assessing drugs to ward off such damage from HIV, the AIDS virus, the researchers suggested in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The protein, called gp120, is shed from HIV-infected cells in people, researchers said. For the experiment, mice were given a gene to make them produce the protein without HIV infection.

The work was done by scientists at the Scripps Research Institute in La Jolla, Calif., the University of California, San Diego, and the Boston University School of Medicine.

In a Nature commentary, Dr. Stuart Lipton of Children's Hospital and Harvard Medical School said several drugs have been claimed to reduce cell damage from gp120, and that tests in humans are in progress.

FDA approves test of artificial heart

TUCSON, Ariz. — Building on two successful transplants here, doctors at five centers around the country are preparing to test an artificial heart once banned by the government.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved a privately funded study of the CardioWest heart to keep terminally ill patients alive until human donor hearts can be found to give them transplants.

If the results warrant it, the agency would allow CardioWest to sell the air-driven, plastic and metal pumps to be used as a so-called "bridge" to heart transplant.

"We got the artificial heart back in our arsenal, and that was goal No. 1," said Richard Smith, biomedical engineer at the University of Arizona's University Medical Center, which will coordinate the study.

The other centers, each of which will implant at least seven of the devices, are: University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, St. Luke's Medical Center in Milwaukee, Loyola University Medical Center in suburban Chicago and San Antonio Regional Hospital.

Smith said he hoped that one of the centers would open by early February and that all four would be operating within 60 days. The FDA authorization issued Nov. 19 covered six centers; the sixth will be named later, he said.

Donors needed to help others

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

What may be devastation in the life of one family, could be a blessing of life to another.

Becoming an organ donor can turn a tragedy into a fulfilled prayer for a person anxiously waiting for a transplant. A death sentence can become a second chance at life.

A 1967 issue of "Life" magazine, with a heart transplant patient in surgery on the cover, a stack of transplant information and a thick book called Transplant Success Stories 1993 are never far from the hand of Theresa Coker. She is the director of the National Organ Transplant Foundation, located in Casselberry.

On numerous occasions she has lent her caring and sympathetic ear to a family facing the uncertainties of life. Her small sports car has arrived at locations to pick up furniture and donations to help the foundation. She is very dedicated to helping people through the organization and educating the community of the dire need to save lives by becoming an organ donor.

The purpose of the organization is to help all transplant patients — heart, kidney, liver, lung, bone marrow, cornea, pancreas, bone, skin and heart valves. Their goal is that no patient or family will wait alone for an organ transplant without support in Central Florida. They also strive to educate the community to become aware of tissue and organ donation through speakers and programs of information. Limited financial aid is provided for needy patients. Support groups are sponsored for transplant recipients before and after surgery. Monetary support for the foundations received through the generosity of citizens and businesses.

"Many people are afraid to sign a donor card to leave their organs after their death," she said. "They feel that they are signing their mortality away." The statistics are high for the number of people waiting for transplants. "33,000 are awaiting transplants and 45-60 percent will die just waiting for a donor," said Coker.

"When I start my speeches, I

Florida Hospital is the regional headquarters for kidney transplants. Kidney transplants are done there more than once a week. Florida Hospital, Orlando, did 710 kidney transplants. Shands in Gainesville performed 269 bone marrow, 147 heart and 58 liver transplants.

"Baboon livers are ideal for patients awaiting a human liver transplant," said Coker. "Hepatitis will filter out, so it will save the person while waiting for a human liver."

Adults can help small children by giving only a piece of their liver. "An adult liver will replenish itself within 90 days and the child's liver will grow within his body. The really amazing thing is that one person donating their organs can help up to 70 people awaiting transplants. Essentially every organ can be used, even skin grafts and tissue transplants.

"When I start my speeches, I ask how many people have a will," said Coker. "Most everyone raises their hand." She then explains that becoming an organ donor no more decreases mortality than the will they drew up. There is no cost to the donor family.

"The foundation will provide donor cards to businesses, at no cost to the business," according to Coker. "40,000 donor cards were placed in employees paychecks to give them an opportunity to participate." The Driver License Office have donor cards available to the public. An indicator is then placed on a driver's license to identify the organ donor.

The week of April 17-24 has been identified as Organ Donor Week. Many lives are at stake and so many can be saved.

Everyone can do their part and help another even in the event of their death or the death of a loved one.

Breast feeding reduces risk of breast cancer

By DANIEL O. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — The longer mothers breast feed, and the younger they begin, the more they lower their risk of getting breast cancer before menopause, a large study has found.

It found that a woman who begins breast feeding in her teens and continues for at least six months cuts the risk almost in half.

The study found no evidence that nursing prevents the disease from occurring after menopause. Breast cancer before menopause is relatively rare.

Except for those who began nursing in their teens, the reduction in risk was generally small, about 22 percent. The finding is still noteworthy because breast feeding represents one of the few voluntary things women might do to change their odds of this cancer.

Experts in the past have wondered about the possible effects of breast feeding, but the data have been murky. Some earlier studies have linked nursing with reduced cancer risk, while others have found no correlation.

The latest study was directed by Dr. Polly A. Newcomb of the University of Wisconsin and published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"There are a number of reasons to breast feed," Newcomb said. "First and foremost is to provide the child with complete nutrition and psychological benefits. But a woman might also consider the possibility that this could reduce her risk of breast cancer."

Her study was based on a review of 5,878 breast cancer patients in Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire. Their nursing habits were compared to those of 8,216 women who did not have breast

TransLife celebrates transplant success

TransLife of Florida Hospital will hold a reception to honor its first patient to achieve 20 years of successful organ transplantation today, Jan. 16, from 2-4 p.m. in the Barker Conference Room at Florida Hospital in Orlando.

Kidney recipient Diane Dykes of Winter Park will be featured guest, along with her sister, Linda N. Farris of Atlanta, who donated one of her kidneys to Diane 20 years ago this weekend.

"Diane's success is a tribute to her healthy lifestyle and exuberance for life," according to Robert A. Metzger, M.D., TransLife Medical director and nephrologist who established the kidney transplant program at Florida Hospital in 1973. "Her courage in being willing to undergo transplantation when it was very rare has been rewarded." Winter Park Urology Associates, TransLife's surgeons, performed only 10 transplants during the first two years of the service, yet performed 155 within the last two years.

Although many transplant recipients will attend the reception, a special call has been made for other recipients who live in Central Florida and who have achieved 20 years or more of transplant success to attend the reception.

TransLife is federally designated as this area's organ donation program, and working with all hospitals in Central Florida has consistently been among the top four programs in the country for donation rate. TransLife is the area's only transplant program and has performed nearly 900 kidney transplants at Florida Hospital since 1973, ranking in the top 10 percent of kidney transplant programs in the U.S.

Cold weather no excuse to avoid exercise

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Exercisers needn't fear being out in the cold. They are their own portable heaters. But they have to know how to keep the fires burning.

Vigorous exercise can transform the chill a jogger feels as he starts his workout into a comfortable glow within minutes. But staying out in the cold — and the wind, which makes the cold worse — takes special techniques, such as providing the right amount of insulation.

That's where layered clothing comes in.

As exercise raises your temperature, you unzip, unbutton or take off enough clothing to let the air absorb the excess heat your body gives off. After exercise, as you cool down, you zip, button and put back on enough to stay comfortable. At least one layer should be wind-resistant.

This doesn't require a lot of clothes. Your major problems are wind and wetness, which soak up heat you want to retain. If you can prevent this, you can get by fine with loose layers, which also keep your clothes from restricting your movements.

People whose exercise is less than vigorous have slightly different problems, according to researcher Andrew J. Young. Walkers, for instance, don't get the body temperature peaks that runners do, said Young, a physiologist at the U.S. Army Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, Mass. Lighter exercisers will need to wear more, he said.

Major muscle groups doing vigorous exercise need less protection because they are being drenched in hot blood. So is your skin, where the blood sheds heat so you can cool down.

But extremities such as earlobes or fingers are another matter. In biting cold or wind, you can get frostnip or frostbite if those areas are not covered. Windproof mittens can protect your hands; earmuffs or a stocking cap can protect your ears.

Muscles take some extra warming up in the cold, said Ira Jacobs, head of environmental physiology for the Canadian military's Defense and Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine in Toronto.

Otherwise, the muscles may be somewhat tight at the start, and more likely to get hurt as you move a limb through the range of an exercise motion, Jacobs said.

You can avoid injury by starting your workout at a slower pace, Jacobs said. For a runner, five minutes of slow jogging should be all you need to transfer heat to your muscles and get them limber, he said.

Exercisers also may dry out in the cold. You may think of thirst as a hot-weather problem, but it presents special problems when the temperature is low, Young said.

"We believe most of our soldiers who get sent to cold climates tend to be a bit dehydrated," Young said. Cold seems to blunt the sensation of thirst, he said.

What's more, people who are not exercising enough to build their body heat may find the cold has a special ability to sap fluid from their bodies, Jacobs said. Your blood vessels tighten to conserve the blood's heat, forcing liquid to leave the vessels, which means it's filtered more rapidly by the kidneys, creating more urine, he said.

This could be a problem cancer.

The study found that a woman who begins breast feeding before age 20 and continues for at least six months cuts her risk of breast cancer before menopause by 46 percent.

The researchers estimate that if all women with children breast fed for at least two years, the incidence of breast cancer before menopause would fall by nearly 25 percent.

Breast cancer is the leading cancer killer among women after lung cancer. It kills 46,000 annually. Less than one-quarter of cases occur before menopause.

because a body that's low on water can send less hot blood to the skin, leaving skin at greater risk for frostbite and raising the risk of hypothermia, Young said.

"If everyone carried out the axiom of an eye for an eye," he said, quoting Mahatma Gandhi, "everyone would be blind."

The Brotherhood Award, presented annually by the Martin Luther King committee, was given to Bernard Mitchell, president of COMA (the Concerned Organized Men of Action).

After a hearty breakfast of scrambled eggs, grits, sausage, bacon, ham, biscuits and Danish, most of the attendees settled into their seats to hear the featured speaker, Elder Barbara Gainey.

Gainey, a small fireball of a speaker, often waved her hands, wiped her brow and shook with the inspiration of the Spirit as she addressed the crowd with the same fervor she addresses a religious revival.

She called for people, all people, to not worry about what they can or can not do, but to follow the calling of God in their lives.

"It's not our abilities that are important," she said. "It is our availability to God."

She said the adults in our society fail to set a good example for the children.

"Just look at the headlines," she said. "Shootings. Children divorcing their parents. Killing babies. Fathers molesting their daughters. And we expect our children to be perfect?"

She said that in earlier generations parents were there for their children and that is no longer the case.

Drugs. Alcohol. "These are not problems," she said. "These are the results of society that has created a monster it can't fix."

The answer, she said, lies in faith in God.

"Without Jesus there is no

Barbara Gainey, introduced by her daughter, Mary Shavers.

peace," she said. "America, you have taken your eyes off of God. We have fallen down and been taken apart, but we refuse to be put back together by the Master Fixer."

Gainey did not believe in finding excuses for societal ills, she said we must go out as individuals and as a community and find solutions.

"Just get up and do what you gotta do to get it done," she said. "Get up and go to work. There are jobs. Go get them."

Poverty, she said, is not an excuse for failing to succeed.

"You can be poor and be a success," she called out. "Know who you are, know where you come from. And move ahead. We've forgotten that we can graduate and become doctors, lawyers, county commissioners and judges."

Gainey's voice shook with the fervor of her beliefs and she shouted with the joy of Jesus in her life, but she held back tears as she admonished the parents to help their children rather than allowing them to be confused.

"They are confused," she said. "And we expect them to be perfect. Society is killing our children. Not poverty. Not drugs. We must remind them of what they can do."

The Martin Luther King commemorative celebration continues this afternoon at 2:30 with an inter-denominational worship service at the Sanford Civic Center.

A youth celebration will conclude this year's events on Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the civic center.

pot and we need the jail space for more violent offenders."

Tim Eaton said, "I really don't have an opinion. If legalized, crime should drop, but what are we really solving?"

Harold Chapell elaborated a bit on legalization by saying, "If they made it legal then it should be for the over 21 age group. If someone is caught dealing to a kid, they should be taken out and shot. If they want to mess up their life, fine, but a kid's life is different."

Pat Smith felt an involved government could benefit financially from legalization. He said, "Okay, maybe crime will come down. They're (the users of drugs) doing it anyway so it might as well be legal. Tax it for extra revenue just like the tax on cigarettes."

Several people took a more middle-of-the-road view and felt some, but not all, drugs should be made legal.

A man wishing to be identified as W.W. said, "Drugs shouldn't be made legal. Legalize marijuana but not drugs like crack or hard drugs. I know people that are better people when they smoke pot. They're happier."

Kathie Jandula agreed by saying, "Drugs in general, no. Just take a closer look at legalization of marijuana."

On the flip side of the issue, many had a very strong opinion of the matter.

Leo Brunelle said, "Absolutely not! Take into consideration alcohol being legal and the statistics that show accidents to DUI, the death and injury rates are very high. If drugs are legalized there would be an increase in crime, increased health problems and a bigger financial burden on the healthcare system."

Sherril Williams said, "No! Although I have a different outlook from the AIDS patient standpoint. Possibly marijuana should be prescribed to patients that have AIDS for their medical problems, but in moderation."

"I don't think so," said Jim Young. "I think the drug addict and the politician that lets it happen should both be taken out and shot. No other country puts up with repeated offenders like we do."

Harold Walker said briefly and to the point, "No! Drugs...they're no good!"

Andrea Fortson also said, "No! It kills people! It's plain stupid!" Robin DeProspero heartily resounded agreeing with the former answers. "No! Drugs damage the brain and cause the person to lose control of themselves. So...legal or not, people who use drugs harm themselves and sometimes innocent people."

Bob Skinner said, "No! It's stupid! We've got enough druggies without making it legal."

Jerry Dan said, "I don't think it should be made legal. It won't help anything. I feel it will make people want to do harder drugs and the drug problem will become worse."

30, of Lake Monroe Terrace, Jones was taken to the Seminole County jail.

Sanford Investigator Pat Smith said Jones is the shooter wanted in the May 11 incident. Cherry told police he was awakened by two men, including one pointing a shotgun at him and demanding "Where is it?" Cherry reported he raised his hand in defense and the man fired, blasting a hole in his hand.

Smith said Cherry has had several operations on the hand, but will probably never regain use of it. The second man, Major "Go-Man" Wheeler Jr., 18, was arrested June 2 on charges of attempted murder, use of a firearm during the commission of a felony and burglary.

grams begun in elementary and middle school are being continued through school assemblies and through the Teacher As Advisor program.

"We make it very clear that we are an educational institution and this kind of activity disrupts what we are doing," she said.

An anti-drug educational program has also been incorporated into the full service school program at Seminole.

At Lake Mary High School there have been 11 drug-related arrests this school year. Proechel said.

While Lake Mary administrators did not respond to calls regarding the situation, Proechel attributed the high number to the cooperation between students and administrators and the school's resource officer.

"Students are coming to the teachers, administrators and the school resource officer with information that is leading to the arrests," Proechel said. "Our sources in the school tell us that drugs are not as prevalent at Lake Mary (as they had been)."

He said the Lake Mary administration is using all their resources to eliminate drugs on campus. Student movement on campus and their ability to leave the school grounds has been greatly restricted, he said.

"I think there has been a big increase (in drug related arrests at Lake Mary) over last year," Proechel said. "I see it as a good thing. It shows the level of cooperation we're seeing in the schools that we'll need to eliminate the drugs in the schools."

At Lyman High School, where there have been four drug-related arrests this school year, Principal Carlton Henley said he believes the message that the school will not tolerate drug use has been "made very clear" to all the students.

"We take the approach that we will not accept drug use by our students," Henley said. "We follow the district guidelines, whether that means suspension, expulsion or arrest."

He said the campus is heavily patrolled by teachers and administrators who are trained to spot drug use.

He said Lyman also puts great emphasis on anti-drug education.

"We want the students to know about drugs and the dangers and we want them to know they are a no-no here," he said.

Henley said, however, that the education needs to go beyond the school walls.

"It's a community problem," he said. "The problem doesn't originate here."

Proechel said district security officials are willing to take whatever measures are necessary to eliminate drugs from the schools.

"If we have to," he said, "we'll bring drug sniffing dogs on campus for random searches. That's always an option. Our main objective is to rid the schools of drugs and weapons. We'll do whatever it takes."

Baseball umpire clinic

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Orange Baseball Association Inc. will conduct an organizational meeting for the 1994 season tonight, Jan. 16 at 7 p.m. in the Lake Brantley High School cafeteria.

All officials interested in officiating high school baseball should plan to attend.

Also, the OBA is offering a one-day clinic for anyone interested in officiating high school or amateur baseball.

The clinic is scheduled for next Saturday, Jan. 22, at Lake Brantley beginning at 9 a.m.

For more information, contact: Tom Storey (831-0130), Fred Ryan (775-5505), or Don Trawick (830-8835).

Mercer holds off UCF

ORLANDO — Guard Will Tuttle scored 25 points as Mercer secured its second win in the past 11 games with a 67-58 Trans America Athletic Conference victory here Saturday over Central Florida.

Trailing 42-32, Patrick Butts keyed an 8-0 Central Florida run with a pair of 3-pointers to slice the margin to 42-40. But Mercer responded by scoring the next six points, rebuilding their advantage to 48-40.

Ochiel Swaby then hit a jumper and a slam dunk as Central Florida (7-5, 2-3) mounted its last serious challenge, closing to 48-46 with 9:39 remaining in the game. But that challenge quickly evaporated as the Bears (4-10, 2-2) led the game with a 15-5 run of their own.

Central Florida was led by Swaby's 15 points.

AROUND THE NATION

Bills gain AFC title game

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — In record cold, the Buffalo Bills didn't need a record comeback, just a couple of mini ones.

Ignoring sub-zero temperatures and a wind-chill that reached minus-26, the Bills rode the hot passing of Jim Kelly and two touchdown catches by Bill Brooks to a 29-23 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders Saturday.

Buffalo is 7-0 at Rich Stadium in playoff games and is one victory from a record fourth consecutive Super Bowl appearance — and a shot at improving a more infamous number: 0-3 in the NFL title game.

Buffalo will host either Houston or Kansas City next Sunday in the AFC title game.

49ers easily dispose of Giants

SAN FRANCISCO — The offense was methodical, determined and anchored by Ricky Waters' record-breaking performance. The defense was relentless.

With San Francisco borrowing the ground game style New York showcased all year, the 49ers swept past the Giants 44-3 Saturday in an NFC divisional playoff.

Steve Young led seven scoring drives, five of them ending in touchdown runs by Waters. That was the most TDs scored in a postseason game, surpassing the previous mark of three achieved by 19 other players.

San Francisco advances to the NFC championship to play the winner of Sunday's NFC semifinal between Dallas and Green Bay.

DeClerq rallies Gators

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Andrew DeClerq had 14 points in the second half and tipped away South Carolina's last-second inbound attempt at a tie in Florida's 77-75 victory Saturday.

DeClerq finished with 18 points and touched off a 17-point streak for the Gators (13-2, 3-0 Southeastern Conference).

Florida was down 49-41 when DeClerq's 3-point play began the spurt. Craig Brown, who had two 3-pointers during the run, tied it with his first and closed it with his second.

South Carolina (4-8, 1-2) had only one second left when Carey Rich's inbound attempt to Emmett Hall was knocked aside by DeClerq.

UNC-Charlotte drills USF

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jarvis Lang scored 23 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead North Carolina-Charlotte to an 83-61 Metro Conference victory Saturday over South Florida.

UNCC (1-0, 8-3) took command with a 19-0 first half run after Jarvis Jackson's three-point jumper gave South Florida (1-2, 8-6) a 15-14 edge with 11:31 remaining.

UNCC converted 10 of 13 free throws down the stretch to seal the win.

Andre Davis scored 14 points and Jermain Parker added 10 for the 49ers, who shot 53.6 percent from the floor.

South Florida, which shot only 30.3 percent in the second half, was paced by Chucky Atkins' 14 points. Greg Summers added 12 and Jesse Salters scored 10 points.

Defend first, then attack

Rams blank two-time state champs

Tony Bazile gave the Lake Mary Rams a 3-0 lead over Daytona Beach-Seabreeze when he scored off a perfect give-and-go with Aren Cook.

LAKE MARY — For the second time in three weeks, Lake Mary shut out the two-time defending Class 3A boys' soccer state champions, blanking Daytona Beach-Seabreeze 3-0 Friday night at Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

On Dec. 29, the Rams defeated Seabreeze 2-0 for fifth place in the Pizza Hut Invitational.

While the final score suggests that Lake Mary controlled the game, Seabreeze dominated the first 20 minutes of the match. Only the play of goalie Greg Velho and defender Brandon Mahana kept the Sanderabs off the score board.

"It was kind of frightening," said Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle. "They were having their way with us. They were going right around us."

After weathering the early storm, the Rams broke on top when Jodi de Bruin, playing in his first game since returning from a tour with the Under-20 national team, connected for his 40th career goal, playing a crossing shot to the left corner of the goal with 4:54 left in the first half.

The Rams needed a little less than a minute to build on the lead.

Once again, de Bruin was in the middle of the action, blasting a shot that Seabreeze keeper Bryan Roddy parried off the cross bar. The rebound went to Aren Cook, who booted it past Roddy for a 2-0 Lake Mary lead.

It was de Bruin's 41st assist of his career. "This was one of those games where we showed some of our strengths," said McCorkle.

"We didn't come out and play extremely sharp, but our defense really kept us in the game. Greg came up with some saves that could have easily put us down three goals and our offense came up with the big goals."

Velho finished the night with 10 saves on 11 Seabreeze shots in recording his 14th shutout of the season. The Rams had 21 shots on goal.

Tony Bazile accounted for the third Lake Mary goal, working a give-and-go with Cook to perfection and sliding the ball into the open net with 29:47 left in the game.

"I am not unhappy with the way we played at all," said Seabreeze coach Angelo Rossi. "We did what we could do against a great team which just outplayed us."

Lake Mary (18-2-3) will host Oviedo in a Seminole Athletic Conference match on Tuesday, Jan. 18. Seabreeze (11-4-5-2) was scheduled to host Lake Brantley on Saturday morning.

COUGARS EDGE PATRIOTS

ORLANDO — Homestanding University struck for two goals in the first half Friday night and made the lead stand up in a 2-1 victory over the Lake Brantley Patriots.

Adrian Quevedo scored in the second half for the Patriots, who outshot the Cougars 12-8.

Lake Brantley won the junior varsity game, 3-0.

The Patriots, who took a 9-10-3 record into their Saturday morning match with two-time defending Class 3A state champion Daytona Beach-Seabreeze, will host Seminole in a Seminole Athletic Conference match this Tuesday.

'Quiet' Certo leads Pats

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

OVIEDO — Lake Brantley made a little Matt Certo go a long way Friday night.

While the 6-foot, 2-inch senior guard seemed to be in the background most of the game, Certo led the Patriots in scoring and rebounds as Lake Brantley kept its Seminole Athletic Conference title hopes alive with a 54-41 victory over the Oviedo Lions at Oviedo High School.

Certo only shot occasionally, but when he did, he made it count as he connected on five of six attempts from the floor (including two of three from three-point range) and all four free throw tries for a team-high 16 points. He also pulled down seven rebounds.

Other than Certo, neither team shot exceptionally well in a very physical contest as Lake Brantley hit a lukewarm 40 percent (18 of 45) while Oviedo was absolutely frigid, making just 13 of 53 attempts (24.5 percent).

The Patriots raised their overall record to 8-6 and, more importantly, improved their SAC record to 2-1, just behind conference-leading Seminole (3-0).

The Lions, who were Class 4A state champions two years ago, state semifinalists last year, and the two-time defending SAC champions, fall to 5-11 overall and 0-3 in the conference.

The Oviedo junior varsity saved at least part of the night for the home fans as it posted a 60-47 victory.

Certo was the only Patriot to score in double figures, but there was a lot of balance between the rest of the team as Greg Tadd (eight points), James Adameczyk and Dee Brown (seven points each) and Todd Pollack (six points) contributed.

Oviedo's Ben Boss made just four of 17 tries but still ended up with a game-high 17 points. Jason Watts collected a game-high 10 rebounds for the Lions.

Both teams will be in action again

Tribe pins Cypress Creek; Rams stumble

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — In a dual meet where the number of matches that weren't wrestled outnumbered those that were, the Seminole Fighting Seminoles hung a 66-0 pounding on Cypress Creek in a 4A-District 4 match Friday night.

Seminole picked up victories by forfeit at 119, 130, 135, 140, and Heavyweight classifications. There were also double forfeits at 103, 152, and 171 pounds.

The Tribe swept the remaining six weight classes with pins.

Winning their matches with pins were Ricky Justice (112 pounds), Cyrus Patterman (125), Bart Counts (145), Griever (160), Bernie Mitchell (189), and Teixeira (220).

Seminole, which was scheduled to compete in a quadmeet at Lake Brantley on Saturday, will return to action on Wednesday, Jan. 19, when the Seminoles will host Kissimmee-Gateway in another 4A-District 4 dual meet.

DELTONA UPENDS RAMS

LAKE MARY — Trailing 12-6 after three matches, Deltona scored wins in four consecutive (and five of six) weight classes on their way to a 41-33 upset of Lake Mary in a 5A-District 4 wrestling dual meet Friday night at Greenwood Lakes Middle School.

Deltona also won the junior varsity meet, 39-30.

In all, the Wolves posted wins in eight of the 14 weight classes, five of the victories coming on pins.

Rich Bradley (103 pounds) and Kevin Dunn (119) gave Lake Mary its 12-6 lead by winning their matches with third-period pins. Bradley nailing his opponent in 5:07 while Dunn's pin came at 4:54.

But the Rams' next win didn't come until the 145-pound match, where Brad Harris pinned his opponent in 2:53.

Pat Paroline (171) also recorded a pin for Lake Mary while Donnie Casey (160) won on an injury default. Ronel Jumpp (220) scored a 5-4 decision to win his match.

Lake Mary, which was scheduled to host New Smyrna Beach in a dual meet Saturday night, will entertain Oviedo in a Seminole Athletic Conference dual meet on Tuesday, Jan. 18.

SANFORD — Home sales in the Seminole and Orange County areas increased during this past year over 1992. The Greater Orlando Association of Realtors, GOAR, has released its latest statistics.

The GOAR members reported writing 12,593 contracts in 1993 as compared to 10,858 in 1992, an increase of 16 percent. Actual sales for '93 were reported at 17 percent above the previous year.

The median price of the homes was listed as $87,883. In comparison, the median price two years ago was $68,031, and in 1979, the price was $43,380 even though 8,139 homes were sold.

Following a 13 percent decrease in 1991 from 1990, the real estate market has enjoyed two of its strongest years in relation to sales of single-family existing homes.

Three bedroom homes were the most preferred, accounting for 48.52 percent of the sales. Four bedroom homes were 28.81 percent, while those with two or less accounted for only 9.61 percent.

The GOAR reported that $52.74 percent of the homes were financed by conventional means. FHA financing accounted for 20.18 percent.

December saw the greatest number of sales for the Realtors in the two counties at 1,181. August was the second highest month with June in third position.

Statistics indicate that December's sales were the most recorded in any single month in the Orlando area. It reportedly finished with a 22 percent increase over the preceding Deember. "Following a 13 percent decrease in 1991 from 1990, the real estate market has enjoyed two of its strongest years in relation to sales of single-family existing homes," said Association President Glenda Philpot.

Nationwide, sales had increased by 10 percent in 1993 through the month of October. The National Association of Realtors has predicted that 3.91 million units will be sold in 1994, which will be the best year for sales since 1978.

The Greater Orlando Association of Realtors is located on E. Central Blvd., in Orlando. Statistics compiled included sales for both Seminole and Orange Counties, and were not individually broken out.

'Operation Heart Transplant' 'Awesome!' Surgery success; Rays visit home

SANFORD
DORIS DIETRICH

Troy Ray Jr., an accomplished Sanford artist, and his wife, Barbara, model the T-shirts he designed following his heart transplant surgery at the Medical University of South Carolina.

Troy Ray Jr. is as spry as a 20-year-old these days. And no wonder. The 66-year-old former Seminole County Tax Collector for 24 years has a brand new heart from an unknown 20-year-old donor.

Troy and his wife, Barbara, have returned from Charleston, S.C. where they have spent the past seven months awaiting surgery — and finally, the highly successful "Operation Heart Transplant."

"It was an overwhelming situation," Troy said. "Awesome! We will never forget it. I feel like a new person — haven't felt this good in 20 years."

Barbara added, "We're thankful it's behind us and we're doing so well. He's back to his old self."

The Rays arrived in Sanford last week for a brief visit, but

Jet fighter goal changes to role of beauty queen

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — She is pursuing a modeling career after years of wanting to fly a Navy Tomcat jet fighter.

Kristie Stankiewicz, a Lake Brantley High School senior, has finally come to grips with the real life after realizing the career she wanted for so many years, a fighter pilot in the U.S. Navy, was a formidable task not usually accomplished by a young woman of her beauty and poise. Now she plans to head in the direction of modeling, acting, and a career in the broadcast field after graduation from college.

Recently, she participated in a nationwide search for the Miss Teenage American sponsored by TEEN magazine. All the contestants, approximately 10,000 from across the continent, received a questionnaire of 15 questions that asked for brief, but concise answers. She mailed the questionnaire, along with additional photos, to the contest headquarters for judging. All the finalists picked were interviewed by phone. With the information they received attesting to Stankiewicz's scholastic achievement, general awareness, community service, poise, appearance and expression, they named her as one of the top 46 finalists in the program.

She plans to participate in many more programs similar to Miss Teenage America. Modeling, commercial and dramatic acting assignments will also be on her agenda for the future.

Stankiewicz's interest in flying goes back many years when her dad was a Navy pilot flying an A-6 from a carrier. Her mom, an eighth grade English teacher, said, "Kristy is the only girl I know of that had a picture of a SR-71 (high altitude, highly secret reconnaissance plane) on her wall. Her bedroom was loaded with all kinds of model planes. I worried for a while that she would become too interested in becoming a pilot because I knew she could achieve that goal if she wanted it."

After years of pondering her

A little of this and a little of that, was how Carolyn Sanborn began her adventure in the world of crafts. She loves dabbling in all areas of this art.

Born in Miami, Sanborn moved to Sanford 23 years ago. Her husband, Stephen, is a teacher so creativity seems to keep the couple happiest. She proudly spoke often of her son, David, and her little grandson, Todd. Being a homemaker and an active grandmother keeps Sanborn very busy. She does hope to open a craft store in the near future because her hobby has turned into something she would like to share with many others. What began five years ago as an outlet for stress and creativity, evolved into an enjoyable pastime. "It takes imagination, creativity, skills in the good old days and a nostalgic trip down memory lane lovingly emphasized. The festivities include craft vendors, entertainment, food and static displays.

There's a lot going on with spring coming up, but perhaps the biggest celebration will be Old Lake Mary Days scheduled May 7.

Already, Shari Brodie, Etlie Jane Keogh and Betty Dedman, plus a host of others, are hard at work planning for the historic celebration. An organizational meeting will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m., at Old City Hall. Organizations, churches and schools are encouraged to attend this meeting to lend input to this community endeavor. Everybody's needed, Sahri says.

She adds that 15 X 15 feet booths will be available for $20 to those desiring to display.

Guess what prominent Lake Mary personality celebrated her birthday on Jan. 11?

For openers, she's an author, historian, one of Lake Mary's busiest citizens, is extremely involved and may be considered as Lake Mary's grande matriarch.

You guessed it - Margaret Wesley. Margaret turned 85 with little fanfare except a night out on the town for dinner with a companion. She has been a little under the weather, but is feeling better.

It may have been a secret at one time, but Margaret is 85 and proud of it. You would never know this vivacious little lady is any where near love for the speed and wide open sky she explained her decision to abandon her love of the jet airplane and choose a more mellow career.

"I wanted to have a family and I wanted children. After you go through your four to six years of college and then get into the Navy flying program you have spent 12 years of your life. I would probably be about 30 years old and I don't want to start a family at that age. I want my children when I am a little younger than that. I have put the emphasis on college and a career in broadcasting, preferably as a TV anchor woman."

While she is attending school she will constantly be on the lookout for auditions for experience in commercial and dramatic acting. She feels the experience can help her in achieving her ultimate goal as a hostess on one of the network television shows.

This is her final year in high school. She will attend Florida State University, but she is not resting on her laurels. She is a member of the cheerleading squad and a secretary in student government. Many of her evenings are spent with her church youth group in community service. This past year she did a volunteer video on AIDS Awareness for Red Cross. It will be seen in high schools and colleges across the country.

using materials and patience," she said. "It really helps me with my patience when I sew and do things with crafts." Sanborn explained what fueled her interest in crafts. "I saw some neat things in stores that I couldn't afford, so I decided to make them."

One of Sanborn's works are painted T-shirts. The new patterns, she felt "are just gorgeous." "I saw painted T-shirts at a craft store and I thought, boy, they are so pretty, but such a high price. I knew I needed to learn to do them myself."

Her T-shirts are made with paints that are drawn on the shirt and a surger is used to apply the glitter thread around the neck of the shirt. Surgers are used to finish the seams of material. "Whenever you buy anything at the store the seam is stitched," she said. "A surger sews and cuts and finishes the seams. They're quite nice but quite expensive.

Another of Sanborn's crafts are mop dolls. "You go to the craft store and buy a mop head. You divide it into different sections for hair and body, then cut for the hair. I made the face out of muslin and drew the features on. I also added ribbons and lace."

A glue gun is one of her prized possessions. "Anyone that does crafts needs a glue gun," she said. "I'd be lost without mine." Sanborn enjoys making baskets with porcelain flowers. "I start with silk flowers," she said. "I then buy liquid porcelain and dip the silk flowers in and rub off the excess. I paint the flowers with the liquid porcelain and lay them on wax paper to dry overnight. After I paint the color I want them, I use a clear acrylic spray and put them on the basket with a hot glue gun." The paints she used were the folk art type acrylic paints.

Last, but not least, Sanborn loves to quilt. "I have 30 books on quilts you can make," she said. "You can use scrap pieces." The quilt she has almost completed is called the Around the World pattern. "I absolutely adore quilts," she said. "It's been four years since I've taken a quilting class, now there's new designs of quilts you can make."

Sanborn felt classes were an added extra that beginners may want to consider when thinking about getting into particular crafts. She prides herself in the fact that she can look at most things and can go home and make it. She often works on crafts during the day three or four times a week.

"I go to the library for craft ideas and I buy books in craft stores or department stores," she said. "There are craft shows all over the state you can go to for ideas too. Sometimes I even buy things at yard sales and take them home and redo them." She went to a quilting class and felt one of the benefits was meeting new people and making new friends. "I'm just joining a sewing club," she said. "We will meet once a month at a sewing studio and talk about and show different crafts."

Giving her creations away is one of the more rewarding things Sanborn savors. "It's rewarding to create things that you're proud of and can give to others," she said. "It's nice to give them to someone for a special occasion like birthdays, anniversaries or Christmas."

A jack of all trades and a master at none, definitely does not describe Sanborn. Her beautiful crafts brighten her own home and add a touch of her love to those receiving her gifts. The patience she frequently says she needs is exhibited through her work and shines with the time, love and care that was put into each creation.

Gone fishin'

When the going gets tough, the tough may go fishing.

At least, that's the way it is with Patrick J. "Pat" Hargon of Lake Mary, who owns and operates H and M Printing in Longwood.

For rest and relaxation, Pat and his key personnel venture off on a deep-sea fishing trip "several times a year," he says.

He and his son, Mike of Casselberry, company sales manager, and Mike Davenport of Orange City, company production manager, have recently returned from Islamorada, in the Mid-Florida Keys, where they fished to their hearts' content.

Calling the locale "one of the most beautiful places in Florida," Pat says the venture there is a "business retreat."

The trio's recent catch included kingfish and yellow tail snapper, among others. In accompanying photo taken aboard the Reef Runner with John Gargan at the helm, the amberjack was slashed in half by a huge barracuda just as the fish were being hauled aboard. Some tense moments, no doubt.

Pat and his wife, Mary, have been in the area for 20 years. Although he loves fishing and the Keys, he admits it would be very hard to lure him from Lake Mary — permanently, that is.

To missing dads: Someone who loves you is waiting

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago my husband disappeared, leaving me with our two young children, who cannot understand why the daddy they adore doesn't come home. We don't know whether he is dead or alive, if he left in a selfish bid for freedom or in the agony of shame.

An outpouring of support from friends has helped me to deal with my feelings of hurt, shock and betrayal, as well as the financial nightmare he left behind. But these kind, supportive friends could not give my children what they wanted the most for the holidays — just knowing that their daddy was alive and doing OK.

Abby, my husband may never read this letter, but there are countless other families out there who experience the same mixture of hope and fear every time the telephone rings.

So, I ask your readers: If you are among the "missing by choice," please put aside your anger, your shame, your fears, and pick up a phone. Someone who loves you is waiting for a miracle.

AMONG THE WAITING

DEAR WAITING: It's too late for a Christmas miracle, but that missing person could be a sweetheart and let his (or her) family know where he (or she) is on St. Valentine's Day.

ABBY: I just have to respond to the letter from the reader who wrote that during the years when her children were small, every Christmas was spent traveling between the homes of her parents and her in-laws. And now that the "children" are grown, they have no family traditions of their own.

She went on to say that she was going to stress to her children that when they marry and have children, they should spend Thanksgiving with her — but Christmas should be spent with their own families, and if invited, she would visit.

Well, I guess people are never happy. You know the old saying, "the grass is always greener..."

We have lived away from home and family since my son (now 15) was 20 months old. I would give anything to be home with my family at Christmastime. That's what the holidays are all about — the hectic pace, the shoving, the running out of hot water; those big, fun meals, board games, renting videos; talking into the wee hours of the morning, vowing tomorrow night you all swear you'll go to bed at a "decent" hour, and then repeating the same routine and talking until 2 a.m.!

What is this woman complaining about, for god's sake — her kids have wonderful family memories and those are their family traditions! I was home for Christmas...

BUT ONLY IN MY DREAMS

DEAR ABBY: I just want to thank you and everyone who participated in your Operation Dear Abby and wrote to those of us in the service who are doing tours throughout the world. Each and every one of our jobs is difficult and the rewards are scarce. I used to wonder whether people thought of us back home. But now I can lay those thoughts to rest.

I hope that you print this so those who wrote will realize how important a simple 10-minute letter is to those of us thousands of miles from home.

On behalf of the U.S. Armed Forces, I thank you.

must return for final therapy and assessment at the Medical University of South Carolina. They are hopeful that they will be home for good by the middle of February.

Troy has suffered from congestive heart failure for several years and the condition kept getting worse. There was little hope for improvement and his days were limited from "at any time" to "a matter of months."

He said, "I couldn't see sitting back and not doing anything about it."

His local physician, Dr. Robert Rosemond, recommended a heart transplant, and the paper processing proceeded. Dr. Rosemond attended MUSC and Troy's other specialist, Dr. Lawrence Vallario, had a fellowship there. So, it was only natural that this highly recommended facility was the place for Troy's proposed transplant.

But it was not that simple. To begin with, Troy was too old (over 60), according to the university specifications. But after nine days of more evaluation, the doctors considered Troy a "good candidate." He said, "I was pretty old for a transplant — the first one that age (at UMSC) and from out-of-state."

To say that he and his family were not fearful of the undertaking is somewhat unrealistic, but Troy's unbridled faith and courage came triumphantly shining through. There were several trying moments and maybe a few concerns, but Troy said, "I never felt it (the transplant) would fail. There was not any great fear there, but it is a frightening thing to a lot of people."

Without too much fuss and fanfare, the Rays rented an apartment in Charleston for the duration of their stay and to start the waiting game. They spent their days sightseeing and exploring the historic and charming old city — always carrying a beeper in the event of the anticipated call that a donor was available.

Also, they joined support groups, attended Trinity Methodist Church, the oldest church in Charleston, played cards and made numerous friends. They were on prayer lists and experienced an "overwhelming spiritual feeling."

During their stay in Charleston, a number of relatives and friends visited the Rays from Sanford, including Janice and Wendell Springfield. Also, they enjoyed visits from Alvin Calhoun, a former Sanfordite who now lives in Charleston.

It was six months to the day from the time Troy registered for a transplant until the operation was completed. Barbara had gone to the beauty shop and Troy was reading when the long-awaited call came. He phoned the shop to interrupt Barbara's hair styling and in a little over an hour, they were at the hospital.

Barbara was a little apprehensive, but said, "Troy had such a positive attitude, it made it easier to cope which helped me."

He was in surgery six hours which began before midnight on Nov. 19 and ended on Nov. 20. When he came out from under the anesthetic, he couldn't believe how much better he felt and that he could breathe. "I was so excited the first week I couldn't sleep," he said. "It (the excitement) still hasn't left. My energy level is way up... I enjoy everything more."

The Rays are aware that his heart is from a 20-year-old person, but don't know whether it's male or female. "I have no idea where the heart came from," Troy said. "And I don't care. I have no desire to find out. My obligation to the donor is to live a long, healthy life and to take care of myself. It's awesome."

Although he is still on medication, there has been no sign of rejection. He engages in a daily physical fitness program which is necessary in conjunction with the medication.

Troy explained that according to a film they viewed, in 1986, there were only 250 persons awaiting transplants in the United States. Today, he says, there are thousands and the success rate is over 80 percent.

The Rays and their family have become strong donor advocates. During their absence, their daughter-in-law, Tammy, was the family spokesperson and did a superb job. Troy said she also signed up many transplant donors.

Today, life goes on to the fullest for Barbara and Troy. And how sweet it is!

Juniors set awards, installation

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford has scheduled the Annual Installation and Awards Ceremony Jan. 20, at the clubhouse, 309 S. Oak Ave. This is the time the vivacious juniors are honored for their activities during the past year.

Kathy Krasnoff is chairman of the event.

Barks back home

Dr. and Mrs. Orville (Georgia) Barks have moved back from New Smyrna Beach to their Sanford home for the winter. Dr. Barks has had two heart surgeries and was serious condition at one time, but is doing well today.

Cousins entertained

Nellie and Boyd Coleman have probably attended more high school reunions than any couple around. Nellie, a former Latin teacher at Seminole High School, was a class sponsor nearly every year, so the Colemans are always on the invitation list.

Then, there has always been her family to gather. But the tables turned this year. After Christmas, she and Boyd entertained 16 of his cousins at a reunion at their home. From all reports, a good time was had by all and Nellie's home cooking was the best.

Mass birthday party

Herman Schroeder tells us that a gala birthday party was held at the First United Methodist Church last Sunday night for the entire congregation. Birthday tables were festively decorated for each month and celebrants sat at the table representing their month.

About 100 members and guests enjoyed the covered-dish event. Herman said.

SHS 1974 reunion

The Seminole High School class of 1974 is planning the 20th class reunion. An organizational meeting is scheduled Tuesday at 7 p.m., at the Rich Plan, 306 W. 13th St.

Classmates are cordially invited to attend and be a part of this event. Your input is needed. For information, call David Russel, 323-9124.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY Jan. 16, 1994

There could be a major change for you in personal dynamics in the year ahead. Your chart shows you will now manage situations which previously managed you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Charm and wit are two of your best assets today and it looks like you will use them to your advantage in several situations. Smile and the world smiles with you. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions are quite unusual today and chance might play a dynamic role in your affairs, especially where business or money is concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you look out for others today, especially close friends, you will be the one who is likely to profit the most in the long run. In order to get, you must first give.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The goals and objectives you establish for yourself today should remain confidential. They could lose some of their impact if too many people know of them prematurely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you might start out as the student but could rapidly change into the role of a teacher. Others will want to hear what you have to say.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The secret to your success today is in put your heart as well as your head into your work. If what you're doing enhances your self-esteem, it will have an equal effect upon others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be in for a pleasant surprise today when you discover the two people who have been talking behind your back were both saying nice things.

In the year ahead your chart indicates more fun/things could be in store for you than serious ones. It may be due in part to new interests and new friends you'll be developing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a strong possibility you might find a way at this time to acquire something you've been wanting. In order to do this, you may have to strike an unusual bargain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today your way of doing things is likely to be an improvement upon the ideas of your companions. However, you'll have to be a good diplomat in order to convince them this is true.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Personal advantages might result today from something that has thus far only produced problems. This is a strange development that could turn a loser into a winner in front of your eyes.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although you won't deliberately try to be flamboyant or showy today, everything you do or say will have a dramatic impact on others, owing to your unique charisma.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you could be powerfully motivated by inclinations that are of a giving rather than a taking nature. It looks like you will do something very impressive before the day ends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) That which is of true value today cannot be counted purely in material ways. You could generate extra rewards others might not understand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your personal interests can be advanced today if you include others in your attempts to improve your own lot in life. If this isn't part of your motivation, you're apt to do less.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your dreams are not that far out of line today regarding things for which you're presently aspiring. However, you must act upon your aspirations and merely just entertain them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you might be more fortunate than usual in joint endeavors, especially if you are associated with an individual who is idealistic, moralistic, as well as smart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you may not be very demonstrative today, the subtle kindness you display in both words and deeds will make a powerful impression on others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Persons with whom you'll be involved today might not be able to match the quickness and brightness of your mental faculties. Don't use this as an excuse for upmanship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Decisions you make today could have far-reaching effects on your associates, as well as yourself. Fortunately, you should be able to judge and accurately evaluate both sides of all issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) One of your unique talents is your ability to perceive and sense the needs and wants of others. Today, while trying to make life better for them, you too might reap unsolicited advantages.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you might encounter someone with whom you'll share a very strong, mutual attraction. This could turn out to be an extremely interesting relationship.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

If a man will comprehend the richness and variety of the universe and inspire his mind with a due measure of wonder and awe, he must contemplate the human intellect not only on its heights of genius but in its abysses of ineptitude.

So wrote A.E. Housman, and today's deal holds the potential for both the abyss of ineptitude and the height of genius. How would you plan the play in six hearts? West leads the diamond king. It was a delicate, but reasonable, auction. North's initial response was game-forcing unless he rebid three diamonds. When South showed a sixth heart, North made an advance cue-bid of four clubs, showing a fondness for hearts and the club ace. Declarer made short work of the play. He won the first trick with dummy's diamond ace, played a spade to his ace, cashed the spade king and ruffed the spade six with dummy's heart eight. East gleefully overruled with the jack and shot back a trump. Now declarer had to try the club finesse, but it lost and East returned a diamond. With no way to reach dummy's club ace, South conceded two down.

South, of course, complained about his bad luck. But the other players were unympathetic. They had noticed that if South had taken his first spade ruff with dummy's heart king, he would have been safe. South returns to hand with a club to the king and ruffs the spade jack with dummy's heart eight. It doesn't matter that East over-ruffs: South has the rest of the tricks.

Climbing ladder of success in fire department

Female fire officials find careers unique

By SUBAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — For the past 25 years, psychologists and psychiatrists have spent countless hours and studies searching to prove if there is a difference in men and women and their performances on the job.

And now, more men are going into what began as female-oriented professions and women are entering predominantly male-centered jobs. There are now men and women nurses, policemen and firemen are now police officers and firefighters as women enter these professions.

Sanford and Lake Mary happen to have two such women, climbing the ladder of success in the fire department.

Lyn Wright, new City of Lake Mary fire marshal, began her position in November.

"I'm the first full paid female," she said.

Eleven years ago her career began in fire service. Wright has little contact with women in the course of her day. One week into the job she was ushered in to assist at a large brush fire.

Her main job duties include plans review, and arson investigations for cause and origin. She is a member of the Seminole County Arson Task Force. The largest part of her job involves basic fire safety and inspection for commercial properties within the city limits.

"I deal with mostly men," she said. "Contractors, plans review and architects."

She related her earlier dealings in training to become a firefighter. Even though her career seemed to be off to a rocky start in regard to being accepted, she knew she was prepared.

"I began some aggressive training four months before I started the academy," she said. "I lifted weights for strength and began running stairs at the football field for endurance."

According to Wright, women firefighters came into the field about 1974 or 1975, but the early '80s sparked more interest. On a national scale less than one percent of women comprise the fire services. The saying she follows in dealing with the occasional sexist comment is "What goes around comes around." She felt that at times you are part of the practical jokes and then give back.

"Males go through the same type of acceptance as females," she said. "We all have to demonstrate that we're part of the team. On a scale of one to 10 I only feel I'd rate teasing on the job that I'm female as a two. It's not bad."

She spoke of the reasons she chose this profession.

"It was a euphoric attitude. I wanted to assist women and children. People had told me how in crisis situations women can many times be of more assistance to other women and children. I thought, wouldn't it be nice with my special talents as a mother in a specialized field. I took a class at Daytona Beach Community College in 1987 on crisis intervention for rape victims."

Wright also discussed how frequently people see women in law enforcement and fire service with short hair and presume they are trying to be masculine.

"Until recently some departments required shorter hair because of safety factors. Now the hoods worn hang completely over the shoulders so longer hair would be covered." She concluded, "There's no reason why women can't come into the field. They should talk to other women already in and get the inside track to understand all aspects of the job. For male or female they have to know they're strong enough to deal with the emotional strain. You witness children dying in a fire and if you have children at home it's hard to see. That was the hardest thing for me. We're required to assist the coroner and move bodies from the remains of the fire. We put our life on the line and we do it because we care. After all we're the ones going into a burning building when everyone else is running out."

Terri Murray, investigations inspector for the Sanford Fire Department, has more of a law enforcement background. "I've been in law enforcement since high school," she said. "I was a youth deputy, then out of high school I was a dispatcher for nine years. Starting out, it was an experience. I'm probably more assertive now."

Over the years she felt she has learned to deal with things better. "Generally anyone coming in new, whether male or female, must earn respect," she said. "Those women that are new coming in now are not having as hard a time because it is more accepted."

Murray felt any woman in a typically male-oriented career is going to have some problems.

Her solution — "Maintain a good sense of humor, that's very important and an understanding of human beings and realize males and females are different." Her job duties are much like Wright's yet Murray is a sworn police officer. She follows investigations all the way through to the arrest, which she can make. "I'm just like a police investigator but I work for the fire department," she said. "The police department doesn't have anyone to do arson investigations. They can be very time consuming. She determines cause and origin and if a burglary is suspected, she retrieves fingerprints. "I do most anything a crime technician would do," said Murray.

She is also active in the public relations aspect of the department.

"I go to Boys Town frequently and talk to them," she said. "I really like that age group." After being in the field for 23 years, her advice to women considering a position is, "Be aware that problems may exist but be yourself, and believe in yourself. Don't wear your feelings on your sleeve. Just take things with a grain of salt, but don't be taken advantage of. You need balance. No one deserves to be treated without respect and sometimes you will, whether it be from the public or people you work with."

Murray felt very content in her job and with her male co-workers.

"I like working with men," she said. "The guys I work with treat me like a lady. They treat me
