

Marina Owner Seeks Special Taxing Election

County Aid Sought To Fight Blind Mosquito Plague

By ED PRICKETT
Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford marina owner today declared he has enough signed petitions to call a special election on creating a special taxing district to raise funds to combat blind mosquitoes.

Gene Meadors of Meadors Marine says he has enough signatures to call a special election if the Seminole County Commission feels taxation is the best method to raise funds to rid Downtown Sanford of horrid pesky mosquitoes.

Meadors and a group of local businessmen, who complain mosquitoes are costing them untold thousands by driving away customers, have scheduled a 10 a.m. meeting Tuesday with commissioners at the courthouse in Sanford.

Meadors says mosquito fighters will deliver a report to the commission and ask for the county's help in ridding the area of the pests which have plagued the Sanford area for 18 years. The public is urged to attend the session.

"Within 30 days we could get something going," Meadors said as he readied himself for Tuesday's session. "It's time for the county to get up and do something. If it was a disease, they'd do something."

County Commission Chairman Mike Hattaway expressed interest in the mosquito problem but said he had no inkling of what will be presented at the meeting.

"The only thing I know is when I walk out of the courthouse, mosquitoes surround me," he said. "I'll be anxious to see what the report is."

Meadors said the blind mosquitoes are a "city-county problem" that should be worked through a special taxing district or an increase in the land taxes.

Mosquito fighters are seeking sufficient funds to pay for a $190-a-day spraying program for about 80 to 90 days per year, according to Meadors.

He said mosquitoes are a major nuisance as far as three-quarters of a mile inland from Lake Monroe.

If officials decide on taxation, voters in the proposed district must grant their approval during a referendum. Then the county could apply for matching funds from the state and, possibly, the federal government.

At a meeting last Wednesday, Jack Horner, executive director of Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, voiced opposition toward creation of a special taxing district. "The people are taxed to death," Horner said.

Thus far the only remedy suggested has been the fogging program. Biologists would not readily destroy all mosquitoes because mosquito larvae are food for fish and their destruction might upset the natural ecology.

The county's position, as expressed by Commissioner Richard Williams, is that the mosquito problem is confined to the Sanford area. Williams favors creating a taxing district.

Meadors said the commission tomorrow will be asked for assistance. The exact extent or form that assistance will take will be left to commissioners and businessmen who are seeking to black out the mosquito problem in Downtown Sanford.

Florida Students Lag Behind Others

By The Associated Press

Florida school children score better on evaluation tests than their counterparts in the Southeast but don't compare as well to youngsters in other regions, educators say after interpreting test results.

In its first effort to compare the performance of Florida schools with those in other regions, the state Department of Education said that:

—In testing 6,000 students in three age groups — 9, 13 and 17 — Florida students in each group scored lower in math than national averages, but not significantly lower.

—Only Florida 9-year-olds scored significantly lower on reading questions. Of that age group, 64.5 per cent answered correctly compared to 69.5 per cent across the country. Florida 13- and 17-year-olds scored slightly higher than the national averages in reading.

"We just don't count up the states, but this puts us about in the middle of the country. It would also be accurate to say the state is better regionally," said Dr. Kenneth Lowe, an assessor.

Zoo's Elephant To Get New Home

Something new is coming to the Central Florida Zoo.

According to Al Rozon, executive director of the Central Florida Zoological Society, construction of a new Pachyderm Paddock will begin next month.

Rozon said the new facility should be completed in the early fall and the zoo's four-year-old elephant, "Sobik," will be moved into the enclosure upon its completion.

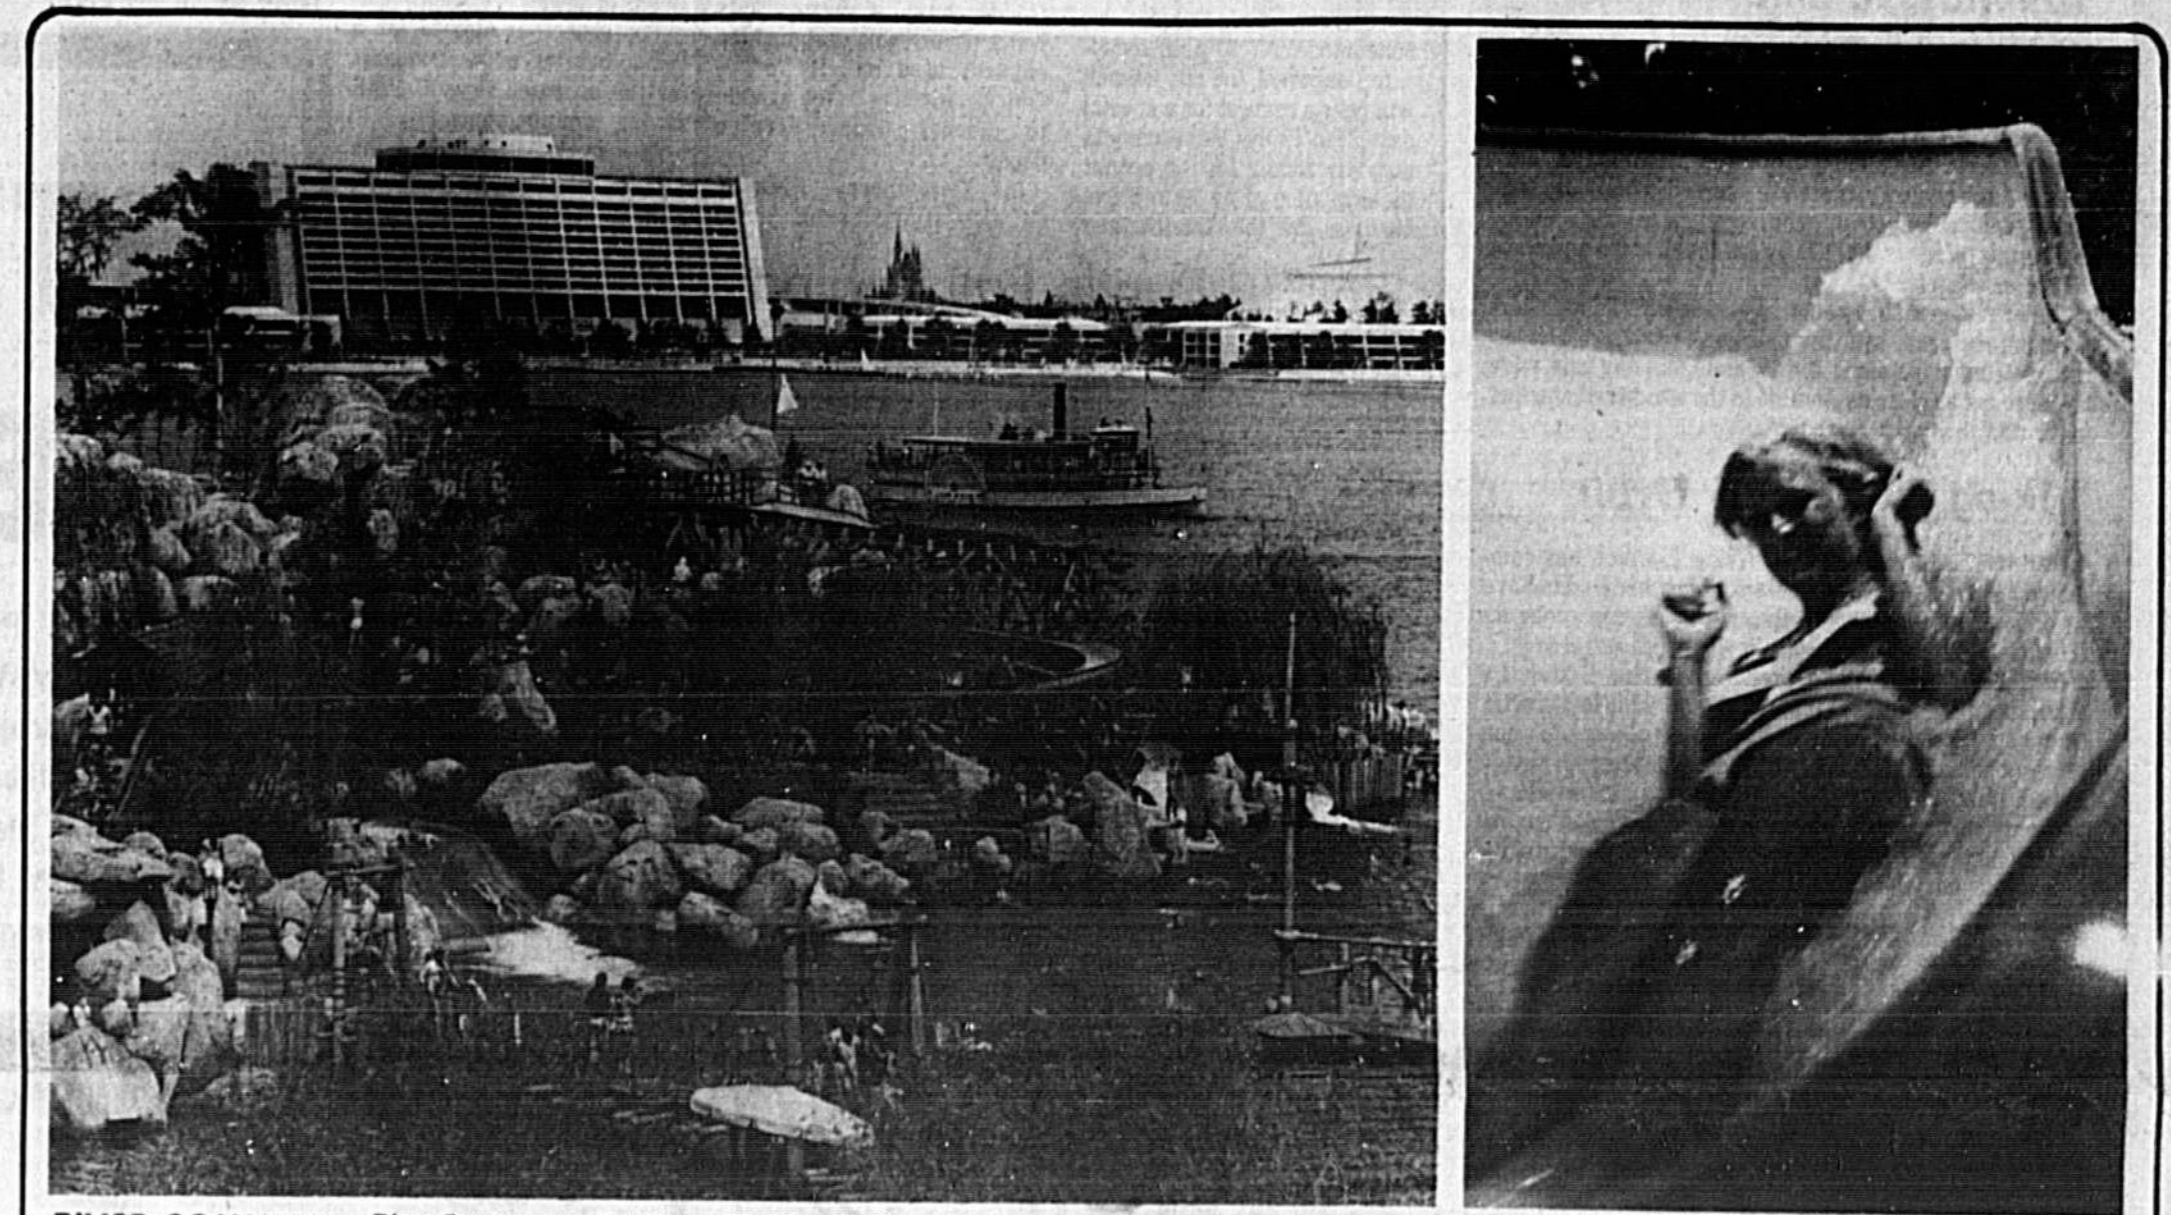

Up until now, the elephant and a 5-year-old hippopotamus have been roommates at the zoological park, located just north of Sanford of U.S. 17-92 near I-4.

Head Curator Ed Posey says that so far there have been no incidents between the two animals, but the chances of trouble increase with passing time.

Therefore, according to Rozon, it was decided to use funds made available to the zoological society last year, through the Central Florida Capital Funds Campaign, to construct a large Pachyderm Paddock on the zoo property.

Sobik will be moved into the new heated quarters before winter weather necessitates other precautions for the zoo's elephant, who cannot adjust to temperatures below 40 degrees for extended periods of time, according to Rozon.

The new facility will be approximately 2,250 square feet of paddock, surrounded by a 18-foot deep dry moat, which includes a six-foot deep wading pool and a 46-by-40-foot shelter. The paddock will include extensive landscaping and will have no raised fences or barriers between the public and the elephant, which will permit the public to look directly at the exhibited animals.

Proposed Rules Changes Defeated

Carter Forces Won't Change VP Selection

WASHINGTON (AP)—Supporters of Jimmy Carter have shown they are uninterested in pushing major structural changes within the Democratic Party during the Democratic national convention in New York next month.

The commission set the agenda for the convention and recommends changes in procedure. Among the unsuccessful proposals were moves to establish a system for selecting a vice president and for requiring that women constitute 50 per cent of convention delegates.

At the Democratic rules committee meeting over the weekend, members voted down a proposal that would have revised the way in which vice presidential candidates are chosen by the convention.

Had the proposals passed, the 1980 vice presidential nominee would have been required to run in at least one presidential primary to declare his candidacy for the No. 2 spot at least two weeks before the convention, or to be suggested by a presidential candidate two weeks before the convention.

PSC Denies 20¢ Phone Call Rate Hike

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — The Public Service Commission today turned down a request to double pay phone charges statewide and also impose a charge for directory assistance calls.

The commission voted 2-1 against imposing a 15-cent charge for each call for information above six a month.

By the same vote, the PSC turned down a staff recommendation to hike pay phone charges from 10 to 20 cents.

Commissioner Bill Bevis was the lone dissenting vote. He said he must be subsidized by regular customers.

Regular monthly bills could be reduced if the charges are reduced, the staff said.

Rate analysts said reductions of 43 cents a month could be given to the two million customers of Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co.; 34 cents to customers of Central Telephone Co.; 33 cents for United Telephone Co.; 54 cents for Florida Telephone; and 53 cents for Vista Telephone.

General Telephone, which is seeking a $71-million rate increase, already is charging for directory assistance under a PSC experiment. The rate would be reduced 30 per cent in other states which imposed the higher price, they said.

Shoppers Pay More For Food Information

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A new government study indicates that Americans are concerned about the nutritional value of the food they eat and are willing to pay a little more for extra information.

The study was conducted by the division of consumer studies of the Food and Drug Administration. It was the second such survey to try to check such items as consumer knowledge on nutrition.

The final results of the study have not been published and are expected out in about a month. A preliminary report provides some clues, however.

Among the findings:

—Almost three out of five shoppers — 59 per cent — say they have seen nutritional labeling (now required for manufacturers who make a nutritional claim for their products). More than half of those who are familiar with the labeling say they use the information in choosing some foods and beverages.

—Countering claims by some industry spokesmen who say consumers would object to the higher prices resulting from nutritional labeling, the FDA survey found that 65 per cent of those questioned would be willing to pay at least 10 cents more on their weekly food bill in exchange for the information. Fifty-six per cent would be willing to pay an extra 30 cents and 40 per cent would be willing to pay an extra 50 cents.

—In addition to looking at nutritional information on labels, shoppers also check for items such as open dating and unit pricing. About 75 per cent of those surveyed looked for dates on products and 41 per cent looked for unit pricing.

At the same time, however, there were indications that consumers don't always understand the information they get. When asked what the date on a milk carton meant, for example, more than half of those questioned either were unsure or mistakenly thought the milk should be used by the date given. (It should have been sold by the listed date.) More than half the shoppers — 62 per cent — said they would rather have the "use by" date instead of the "sell by" date.

—Many consumers are misinformed about basic nutrition and the problem is more severe among those with less education. Two out of five people surveyed do not understand the "U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance" or RDA part of the label. (The government recommends a given amount of nutrients such as protein and vitamins for every adult per day; nutritional labeling gives the percentage of these requirements provided by one serving of the product.)

The survey covered 1,664 persons who do at least half the food shopping for their households. They were interviewed in their homes.
