Oil Spill Breaks Up; Florida Danger Fades

MIAMI (AP)—A 60-mile-long oil slick floating just miles from Florida Keys beaches and the continent's only living coral reef was breaking up Saturday, and the Coast Guard said it might be completely dissipated by the end of the day.

Wave action, currents and the wind were breaking up the enormous oil spill, said Coast Guard spokesman Dade Tait.

"All major concentrations are gone," he said. "Right now, it's just a light sheen on the water."

The remnants of the spill were moving closer to Florida coast, collecting information on all tankers moving away from the spill.

The slick was believed to be diesel fuel mixed with detergent that is used when ships wash out their tanks. Using "oil fingerprinting," experts can compare oil from a spill with oil from ships known to have been in the area of the spill. Dumping oil within the 12-mile limit can be a felony punishable by a $10,000 fine and a year in jail, Durfey said.

Durfey said the oil was probably dumped by a tanker passing through the Florida Straits. He said it could have either been a deliberate cleaning of the tanks or an accidental spill.

shore, but no beach or coral damage was believed to have occurred, he said.

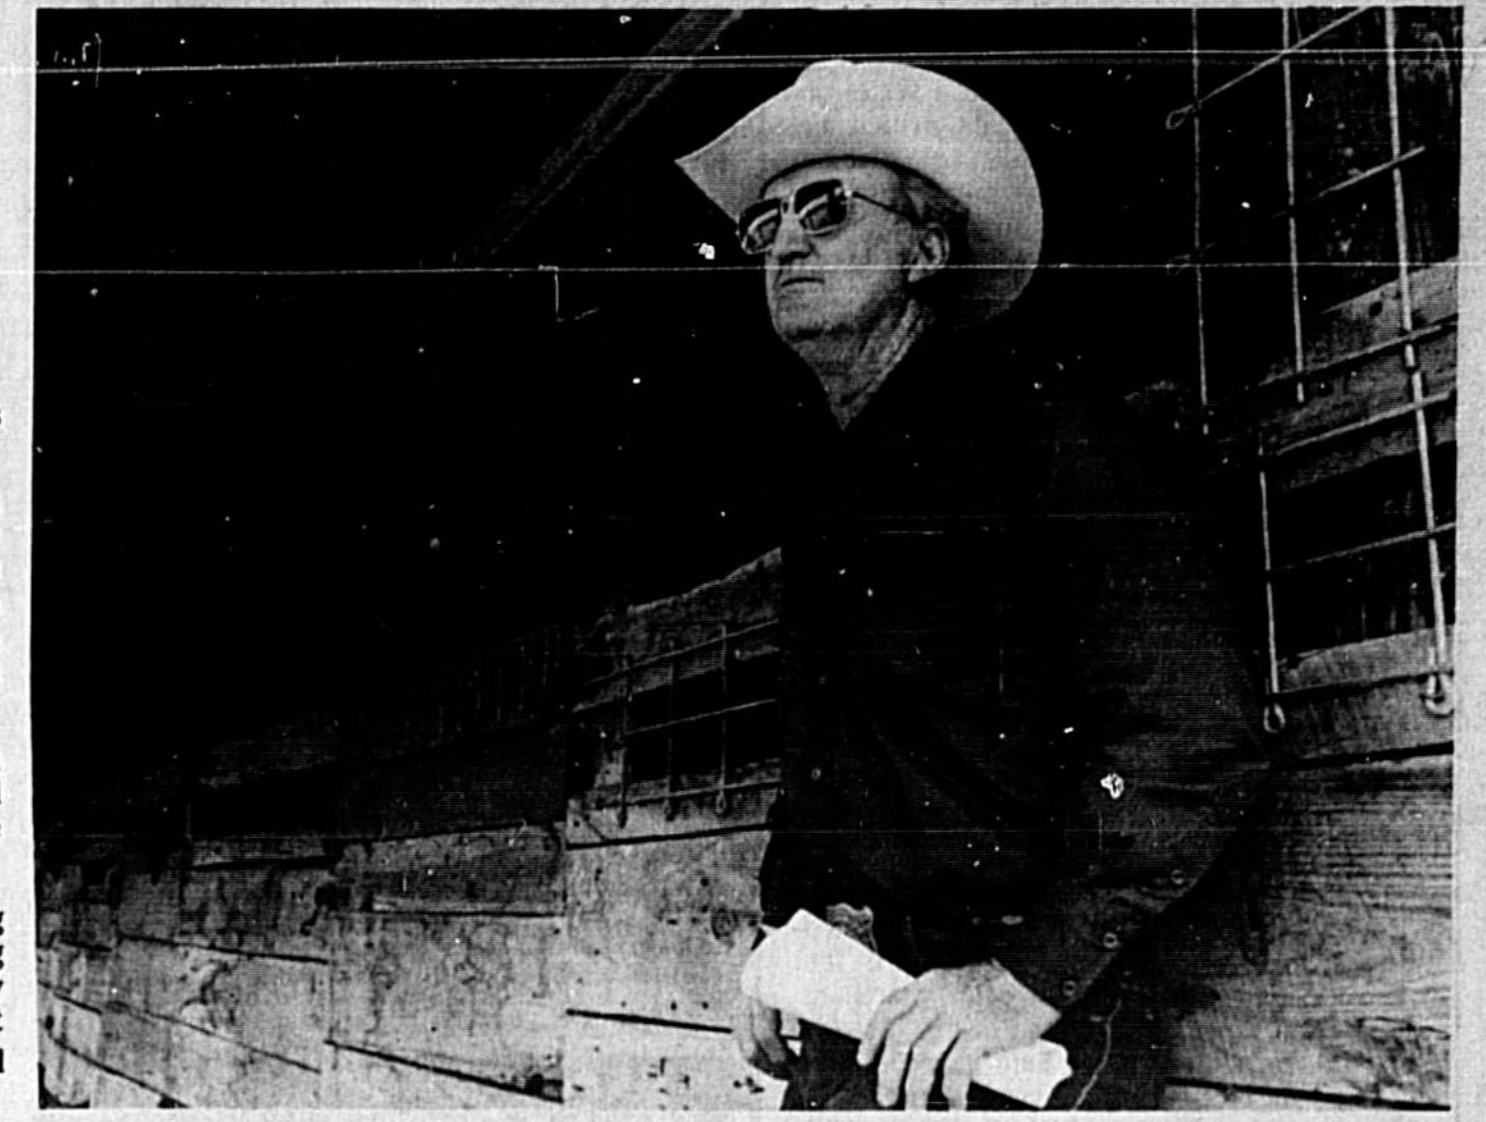

When discovered Friday, the oil was located about seven miles from the nearest shore, but only two miles from some off-shore reefs. The amount of oil involved was not estimated.

Rear Adm. Robert W. Durfey, commander of the 15th Coast Guard District, said Friday that if the oil reaches the beaches there, always the possibility of significant damage to reefs and shores ... we would have a major problem."

Meanwhile, Coast Guard planes searched northwest toward New Orleans and northeast, up the Durfey said the slick, first spotted Friday morning by a Coast Guard plane, appeared to be drifting slowly away from shore. It was reported late Friday to be about seven miles from the nearest shore but only two miles from some reefs. The amount of oil involved was not estimated.

A newsman who flew over the slick, which extended from Key Largo in the northern keys to Marathon, about 50 miles up from Key West, said the section he saw appeared to be no more than a hundred yards wide at its widest point.

'Boy Monday' Fights Bias As Male Secretary

By JEAN PATTESON
 Herald Staff Writer

People simply refuse to believe that Ken Drawdy is a secretary.

They scorn the notion of a guy typing and taking dictation.

Or they giggle at his little joke and ask to see the "real" secretary — "meaning a female secretary," says Ken.

"Yes, people react very strangely," he muses, adding with a chuckle, "especially when I wear my miniskirt!"

But kidding aside, it is as difficult for some people to grasp the reality of Drawdy being a secretary as it is for others to accept that women today are driving garbage trucks, manning oil rigs or piloting 747s.

"The assumption is," says Drawdy, "that either I'm moving on up into management, that I can't function in the real world, or that I'm gay."

But none of that really bothers Drawdy, a young man with an ever-present sense of humor and a tremendous professional pride in his job.

His boss is Charles M. Unkovic — "of criminology, juvenile delinquency and alcoholism fame" — chairman of the sociology department at Florida Technological University (FTU).

"I think he gets a charge out of introducing me as his secretary," confides Drawdy.

"We have a great working relationship," he continues. "He can say to me, 'Read this, find out what they want and answer it.'"

"It feels good when your boss has that kind of faith in you."

Part of Drawdy's job involves coordinating the work load for the 18 sociology faculty members. He also handles budget work for department grants and is involved in many of the research projects being done in the department.

"People think I'm a secretary because I can't get a management job right now. But I'm not interested in management. I am a professional secretary," asserts Drawdy.

He is the only male secretary at FTU, and as far as he knows, only one of three in the entire Greater Orlando area. But he predicts the future will see more men answering telephones and taking dictation — just as it will see more women making the calls and giving dictation.

"Private industry is where we'll have the hardest time breaking in," he suggests. "They feel they have to project a certain image. You know, the glamorous secretary ..."

"But management must realize secretaries are not all blonde, well-built and kept around for after-hours activities," said Drawdy.

"We are highly trained professionals. We are skilled at typing, filing, computer operation, office management and personnel management.

"We've got to get management to see their secretaries effectively."

Drawdy was impressed at a recent meeting of the National Secretaries Association in Winter Park by the "uniting feeling among secretaries to me more professional."

"I think secretaries are becoming better educated," he said. "And I think higher professional standards will be the result."

"I have a dream for the future," he said, "for secretaries to establish their professional credibility in the community."

A staunch supporter of the women's liberation movement, Drawdy says he is "really into 'people liberation.'"

"As people liberation comes full swing, discrimination becomes less, and people will be judged on their qualifications, not their sex."

"I was very disappointed to see the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) defeated in Florida," he added. "I see the equal rights movement for women as an equal rights movement for men as well."

The job of secretary, he explains, ranges from "clerk-typist I through executive secretary II."

"There are good paying secretarial jobs," he stresses, conceding however that "they are few and far between right here, right now."

Upgrading their salary scales will be a necessary and important part of upgrading the professional image of the secretarial job, Drawdy believes. Particularly if more men are to be attracted to the field.

"I guess men have just been conditioned to expect more when it comes to good pay and opportunities for advancement," he said.

"I've been looking in the past at the professional benefits of the job, and not the monetary ones," confessed Drawdy.

"Wherever I go, there seems to be 100 women ... and me. It can be very interesting!"

Drawdy says he often finds himself in a supportive role to some of the secretaries with whom he works. He also has a large circle of friends who are all women.

How does his wife, Carol, feel about that?

"So long as they're just friends ..."

During his high school and college days, Drawdy always thought he would become a teacher. A 1963 graduate of Winter Park High School, he attended Seminole Community College (SCC) through 1970, and graduated in 1972 from the University of West Florida, Pensacola, with a BA degree in French.

"But whenever I joined an organization, it seemed to take about two meetings, and I'd be elected secretary," said Ken.

"I guess I really got my start as a professional secretary at SCC. I worked as a student assistant running the switchboard, doing keypunch and typing. That's also where I got my start dealing with the public."

At the University of West Florida he worked as a student assistant too, this time in the foreign languages department.

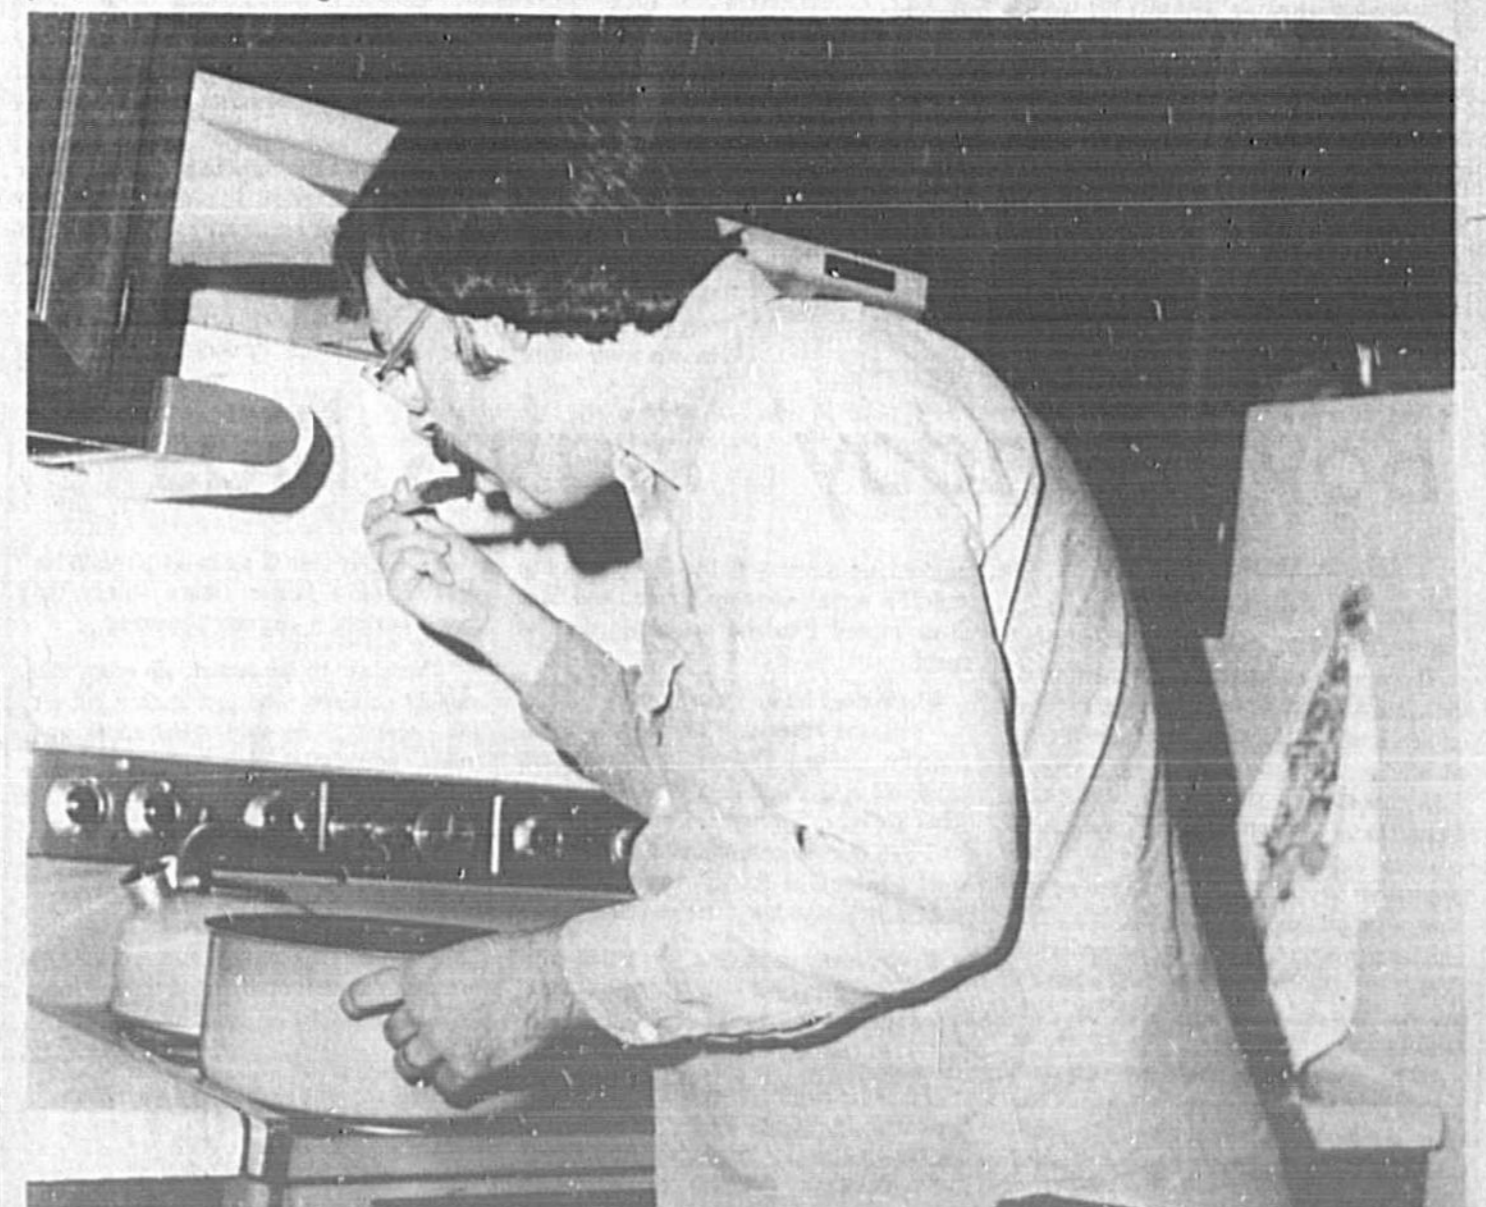

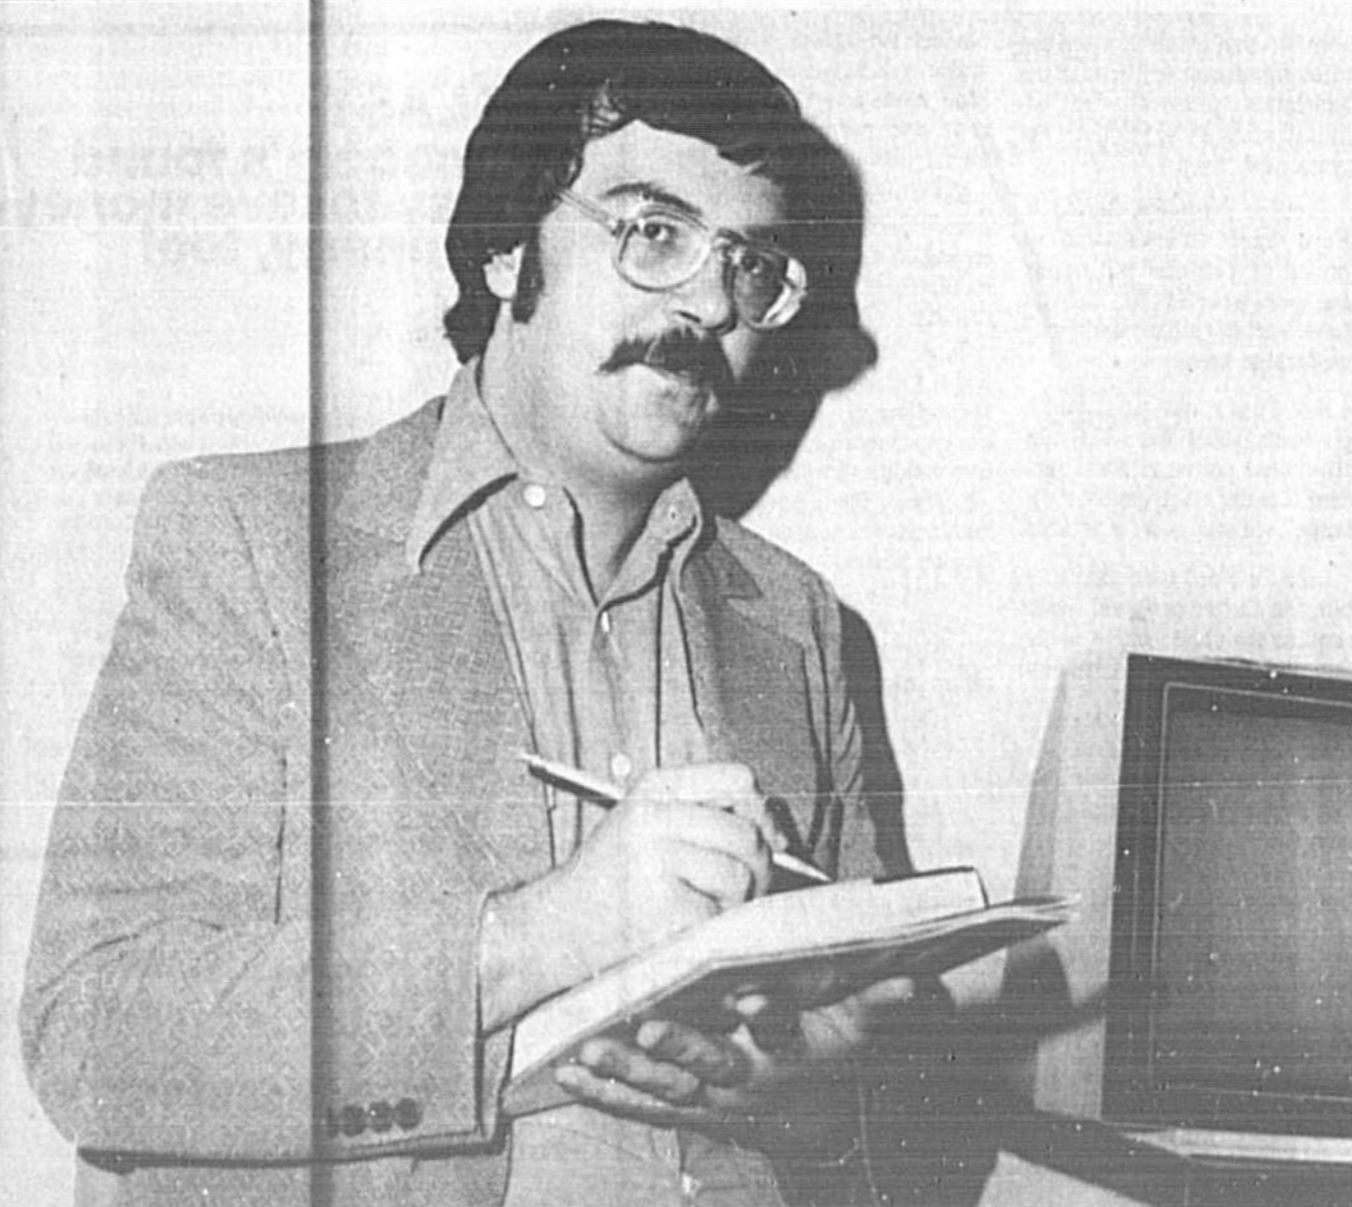

"This is when I taught myself speed-

Our Future In Good Hands

You hear it every day. It has become something of a cliché.

Today's youth, the word goes, are shiftless, unambitious, selfish, arrogant, dirty, uncaring no-accounts.

That's a sweeping, prevailing view. And it might hold true in some cases. But, if Seminole County is an example, not always.

For the past several days, The Evening Herald has been sharing with you insights gained from interviews with each of the student government presidents at the county's five high schools.

These interesting, alert and intelligent youngsters and future leaders were chosen by their classmates. This should say something about their judgment.

Each of the class leaders — Valerie Saunders of Seminole; Ross McClellan of Lyman; Kathy Steidley of Lake Howell; Mike Buchanan of Oviedo; and Vicki Laws of Lake Brantley — is aware of what is going on around them. More so, it could be argued, than some of their apathetic elders.

In the interviews, they demonstrated a keen grasp of the functions of the Presidency and of the problems facing them and their contemporaries as citizens of this nation. They addressed themselves to such topics as President Carter's campaign for human rights, the Equal Rights Amendment, the need for communication between youths and adults, the importance of honest representation in government, and more.

The parents, families and friends of these five youngsters must be very proud indeed. Justifiably so.

We wish them the best of luck in their future endeavors.

On Right Route

Most postal studies in recent years have suffered from single-mindedness and a lack of imagination. The Commission on Postal Service report which went to Congress recently is no exception.

The commission's conclusions are familiar. It recommended that the Postal Service should avoid further deficits by eliminating Saturday mail deliveries, reducing overnight sorting operations and moving more rapidly into new electronic technology.

Just a year ago the Ford administration was proposing roughly the same thing. The goal behind both proposals is to save money so that the Postal Service can break even.

Unless something is done, this latest report said, first-class mail will cost 23 cents an ounce by 1985.

It's true that a 28-cent stamp to mail a letter would inhibit some potential postal patrons. It's also true that even that price isn't much higher than an extension of the present inflationary rate. And not the least of the reasons that the post office is in its present financial bind is that its previous organizational retrenchments have driven away customers and encouraged private delivery organizations.

Acknowledging that the Postal Service has been studied to death already, we would nevertheless suggest two more analyses to the House subcommittee on postal service, which is holding hearings on the subject as of April 28.

First, Congress should reexamine its mandate that the Postal Service has to break even financially.

Second, if the Carter administration desired to postulate problems with the same intensity that it waded into energy, strategic arms discussions and fiscal matters, some innovative ideas might emerge. So far as the Postal Service is concerned, one new idea would be worth 10,000 words from any blue-ribbon commission.

BERRY'S WORLD

Say, you're not one of those "human rights" creeps are you, buddy?!"

Around

The Clock

By ED PRICKETT

County government. It's an $18-million-dollar-a-year business. That's what county commissioners tell you when they want to impress you with the high degree of responsibility they have.

That $18-million may be a rise. OMAE Director Pat Glisson says there is a $2.8-million gap between revenues and money the government plans to spend next year.

What does that mean? For starters it means your land taxes may go up. Instead of 5.40 mills ($5.40 for each $1,000 assessment) you might pay $7.40 per $1,000. That's the long and the short of it.

But like all stories, there's more to this one. It doesn't have to go up. But they will, unless you, the general public, make it known you're not willing to accept a tax hike.

"We're mad as Hell, and we're not going to take it anymore." That's what the message will have to be. If the public remains silent, I have a feeling land taxes are going up. Count on it. Believe it.

There's still another part to our little story. And that is the public demand for more and more services. Services cost money. Elected officials can cut services. That, naturally, will cut taxes, or at least leave them at the present level.

But you'd better not cut out the basics. Like roads, sewers, water, etc. A careful search, however, might turn up some areas that could be reduced.

But it's doubtful they'll be found unless the public gives commissioners this message: "We're mad as Hell, and we're not going to take it anymore."

Newspapers have carried the story that tax hikes are on the way.

And what has the public said in return? County Commission Chairman Dick Williams said he's had three telephone calls about taxes. One call was from his wife, a second from a friend of his wife and a third from an Oviedo councilman.

Not a very good response.

Not exactly what I'd call citizen involvement. It's more like citizens not caring. And you need to care. If for no other reason than it's going to cost you money.

Williams should have received 100 calls. That'd be more like it.

But he received three.

Want higher taxes?

Being apathetic is a sure way to get them. You might get them, anyway. That would be because they are needed — and justified. But at least you, the taxpayer, would have the satisfaction of knowing you hung in there and became a part of the governmental process.

That's what it's all about.

THE HEALTH ROBBERS Eyeglasses Shouldn't Be Dropped

The mistaken belief that poor eyesight can be cured by special eye exercises has been held by many people since ancient times.

This belief was brought to its highest state of fruition by a one-time reputable physician, William Horatio Bates, M.D., who published a volume in 1920 entitled "The Cure of Imperfect Eyesight by Treatment Without Glasses." The following account is a summary of the work of Dr. Bates and his many followers as described in a book by the late Dr. Philip Pollack, a prominent optometrist of New York City. Entitled "The Truth About Eye Exercises," it was published in 1957 and is now out of print.

contrary to scientific fact, Bates taught that the dimensions of the eyeball and the state of the crystalline lens have nothing to do with poor eyesight. All defects in vision, he said, are caused by eyestrain and nervous tension. To achieve perfect vision, just relax the eyes completely.

Bates warned that eye glasses cause the vision to deteriorate. He also deplored the use of sunglasses. Bates claimed his exercises could correct nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism and presbyopia (the inability of older people to focus their eyes on nearby objects). They could also cure such disorders as cataracts, eye infections, glaucoma and macular degeneration. His exercises were as follows:

1. Palming: This is the principal procedure of the Bates System. The patient must first look at a black object, then close his eyes and recall to mind its blackness. This procedure supposedly relaxes the eyes, relieves eyestrain, corrects vision to normal and eliminates pain during surgery.

2. Shifting: By shifting his gaze continually from object to object, the patient will improve his vision.

3. Sun Gazing: Staring directly into the sun, the patient will benefit from the "warmth of light."

Remembering Blackness: Presbyopia will be cured when the patient closes his eyes and recalls the condition of "blackness."

It should be obvious that these exercises cannot influence eyeglass disorders as Bates claimed. Nearsightedness, far-sightedness and astigmatism result from inborn and acquired dimensions of the lens and the eyeball.

Presbyopia is the result of rigidity of the lens. As for eye diseases, the only thing the exercises can do is delay proper medical or surgical treatment and result in permanent impairment of vision. It should also be noted that all eye doctors caution patients against looking directly into the sun. Such a practice can cause permanent damage to the macula, the most sensitive and important area of the retina.

It is difficult to understand the widespread popularity of the Bates System unless one considers that its followers make up what is essentially a cult.

Its practitioners are faith healers who appeal to the gullible, the nervous, the highly emotional and the psychosomatic. Even the author Mac Fayden admits that the System's results are 90 per cent "mental."

Should Burger Bow Out Of Mitchell Case?

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren Burger is deeply indebted to his old friend, ex-Army General John Mitchell, for his Supreme Court job. Yet Burger has refused to disqualify himself from Mitchell's appeal of his Watergate cover-up conviction, now pending before the high court.

About Knowing Yourself

"When I discover who I am, I'll share the information with you," someone said to me. Those are iron words, colored with a slight tint of frustration, but they are wise.

In many ways it is much better to be unable to define oneself in simple lines or paragraphs. To be able to do so would be a clear indication one's life was surrounded by a fence, that growth had stopped.

"Know yourself" is pretty good advice, but it must be tempered with awareness that growth means change, and that knowing yourself well means allowing yourself those changes.

Real self-awareness does not permit one to decide in indecision or to make decisions carelessly and assume they can be changed later if it becomes convenient.

Nor does real self-awareness preclude stability in all areas of life. In fact, it should enhance the ability to make decisions, to take responsibility for them, and to cope when new decisions are required.

Knowing yourself is a weighty sensation, because it means not only accepting responsibility for your faults, but being able to acknowledge honestly, albeit modestly, your good points.

It also means learning that your ability to understand the actions of others does not make you superior to them, whether or not you would indulge in those same actions yourself.

Each time you evaluate another you open yourself to more knowledge of your own inner workings.

Each time you respond, happily or not, to something another person says to or about you, you have more input about what is really going on inside your own head.

One of the strongest guides to those inner characteristics is your own pet generalization about the world. Beware, for instance, if you tell people that "everybody goes 60 miles an hour, even if the speed limit is 55" or "everybody in the class but me cheated, and that's why I was the only one who failed."

Consciously or not, we judge the rest of the world by our own behavior. Those who always accuse others of cheating, generally do it themselves. Those who loudly complain "you can't trust anybody any more" are with rare exceptions, untrustworthy themselves.

Frankly, my friends would frighten me if they could clearly define themselves, down to minute details. Where else would life have to offer them?

Never would I want any of them to be caught battling through a fogged brain, or borne aloft on wispy possibilities instead of activation. But never would I want them tied to one small definition of who and what they are.

Let us discover that together, each with the other, and let us make that discovery on ongoing friendship, rather than on stilted through-hardened definition of personalities.

DON OAKLEY No Contest In Roots Arguments

When something stirs the hearts and minds of people as much as did the now-famous television series, "Roots," there is bound to be a reaction. Most of it has centered on the question of the historical accuracy of the book by Alex Haley, of which the series was based, and some of it has been even international.

The London Sunday Times, for instance, has thrown doubt on Haley's discovery that he was descended from a young African named Kunta Kinte, who was kidnapped by slave traders in the 18th century. Other critics have pointed out that the story ignores the important role played by black Africans themselves in the slave trade.

Still others, while they take pains to condemn slavery as an evil institution, argue that it really wasn't all that bad, you know. It was to the economic self-interest of slaveowners to treat their slave humanely.

All of which criticism would seem to be quite beside the point.

Alex Haley is not Swiss-German or Scotch-Irish. He isn't Chinese. His roots obviously are African, as since there is no record of Africans ever having kidnapped passing ships to take them to America it is also obvious that somewhere along the line one of his ancestors was forcibly brought to this country.

As for the claim that slavery was not, despite those who have always thought it was, those who make the claim have the burden of explaining why it was necessary to have a Fugitive Slave Law, such a thing as the Underground Railroad, why, indeed, the nation nearly tore itself asunder over slavery.

In short it is difficult to figure out just what the critics are getting at. If "Roots" is not absolutely verifiable in every detail, it is not offensively essential historical truth. If it does not tell the whole story of the black experience in America, it never pretended that it did.

As for the criticisms that all the black characters "Roots" are good and noble and all the white are mean and cruel, and that rehabilitating this stuff about slavery will contribute to racial discord — the one charge was also laid against "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the other in terms of historical accuracy, there is really no contest.

The owners of the property involved in the annexation petitioned the city to have their lands included within the city.

The commitments made by the property owners to the city when the hatrow PUD was originally approved are remaining in effect. Included among the commitments are space to be provided for schools and a police and fire station to be constructed by the developer.

According to city officials, the developer, Pauletti Enterprises, has not requested release from any of its commitments, nor has it requested waivers of any kind in the deed plans approved by the county more than two years ago.

The law requires that the zoning the property after annexation remain the same for two years.

The county, apparently still proving the development plan, granted the developers an extension of time to begin development until August.

Politics: Art Of The Possible

The philosopher has to be the bad conscience of his age.

— Friedrich Nietzsche

Politics is the art of the best.

— Otto Von Demark

Politicians, due to the nature of their jobs, are often forced into things they wouldn't do had they the opportunity to do something different. But a person who represents the masses will do the bidding of the masses, or he will cease to drink from the public watering trough. That's just the way it is. A philosopher, in other hand, lives in a different world; he depends on the public, the mass public that is, for his sustenance.

In Seminole County during the recent election for county commissioners we were treated to both politics and a philosophy of sorts. How so? Well, remember the cartoon campaign Dick Williams put on during his bid for reelection? They were cartoons of a philosophical nature, but they were designed to win a political race.

Did they work? Not as well as Williams thought they would. But, then the concept of using cartoons as political propaganda was new.

A key to political cartooning, according to Williams, is messages have to be kept simple and to the point. In other words, keep philosophy out — let politics in. When Williams' cartoons first appeared they caused a flurry of attention.

Williams' opponent, Dave Gunter, began taking out advertisements in newspapers to debunk the cartoon campaign. So, they worked. They captured the attention of Williams' political opponent — if not the total imagination of the voting public.

Former county attorney Tom Freeman went on the defensive. He issued a press release disputing Williams' depiction of Freeman as "Boss" of a political machine. So, the message got across. . . One of the disappointments expressed by Williams about the campaign was it "didn't have the feedback" he had expected. But, they had a Republican (Williams) running against a Democrat (Gunter) in a Democratic year, the year of Jimmy Carter. Williams was only by a narrow margin, but I don't think the narrowness was because of his novel campaign approach — political cartooning.

"I'd do it again," the commission chairman says. But, he adds emphatically, the message would be a "surface message," one easily understood by everyone. In other words, no philosophical points. Just political ones. . .

Dr. Orville Barks is retiring. After a long association with Seminole, and two years as health director, Barks is stepping down. Tip of the hat to Dr. Barks for a job well done. . .

Now I've heard it all. A Caselberry man wants to chop 80 per cent of the trees down in the heart of environmentally sensitive Spring Hammock. It's a natural filtering system for water. And, as such, should be preserved. That's not to say that a man shouldn't be able to make some use of his own property. But not a use that is of detriment to his neighbors. A.L. Seligman owns 25 acres. He says he wants to raise horses and plant vegetable gardens on the cleared land. So it goes. . .

County commission offices are looking more and more like Gettapp headquarters. Signs direct you to check with secretaries before proceeding. There was a time, you know, when those signs weren't there. Also, there was a time one sign was stolen. Most everyone I know resists the signs. Why not take them down?

The Sanford Connection

Uncle Sam's On The Ball

I propose to do something radical, unfashionable and unusual — praise the federal government. . .

I am aware that most of us think of the federal government as a far-away bureaucracy that eats our paycheck through the Internal Revenue Service, turns us in with volumes of unneeded regulations and confounds our local governments with complicated and sometimes self-contradictory guidelines for carrying out federal edicts.

I wish I could report this is not the case. I can't.

But every so often, the government does something well, and that alone is worth noting.

On Friday Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Joseph Califano issued new regulations, at least a year in the making, forbidding discrimination against America's 35 million deaf, blind and otherwise handicapped Americans in federally supported programs.

In addition to other things, the rules issued Friday by Califano require that federally supported buildings such as schools, colleges, hospitals be readily accessible to the handicapped.

I decided to find out how the regulations, which go into effect in June, would affect projects like Sanford's new city hall, being built with $1,006,000 from the U.S. Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration.

Mark Weinberg

State law has required consideration of the handicapped in the design of new buildings for "two or three years," Knowles said.

I was to learn later that standards developed by the American National Standards Institute relating to accommodations for the handicapped have been adopted by 48 states.

Next, I called federal officials. Each one I talked to was courteous, helpful and well-informed — in short, they were not at all "bureaucratic."

Mr. Winston was unavailable but transferred my call to the department's general counsel's office. I spoke with attorney Alexander Buek who had a copy of the new regulations.

Yes, Mr. Buek said, regulations by other federal agencies would be issued later. The regulations supplied by Miss Brooks were indeed part of the new regulations. The lawyer added that the "through" the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968 prohibited federally financed buildings from being designed to restrict access to the handicapped.

Ms. Buek transferred by call to Charles Goldman, general counsel to the Architectural Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, which administers the 1968 law.

Here it goes, I thought. But to my pleasant surprise, the phone rang in five minutes and the specialist supplied me with the name and phone number of a public information officer in HEW's Atlanta regional office.

The official whose name I had been given was out of the office, but the operator dutifully switched me to Susanne Brooks in the Atlanta HEW Office of Planning and Evaluation.

Miss Brooks had been studying an April draft of the new regulations that stated HEW has the authority to "issue general agencies to follow in their promulgation of regulations" which "will be dealt with separately at a later time."

She couldn't tell me if this wording had found its way into the final version of the regulations signed by Califano. She could tell me, however, that last April President Ford issued an executive order stating HEW would "coordinate government-wide enforcement" of the regulations.

Miss Brooks recommended I talk to her "old friend" Sandy Winston, public information officer for the office of the secretary of HEW in Washington.

Mr. Winston was unavailable but transferred my call to the department's general counsel's office. I spoke with attorney Alexander Buek who had a copy of the new regulations.

Yes, Mr. Buek said, regulations by other federal agencies would be issued later. The regulations supplied by Miss Brooks were indeed part of the new regulations. Ms. Buek transferred by call to Charles Goldman, general counsel to the Architectural Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, which administers the 1968 law.

Goldman confirmed that the 1968 law covered the situation I described and added several helpful comments.

I had talked to four federal officials (counting the information center specialist in Orlando) I suffered no wrong numbers, no misinformation and best of all, no confusion.

For those who wish to try their luck at getting information from Uncle Sam, the Federal Information Center's phone number is 422-1100.

A Look At Florida Law

Sunday is Law Day in the United States. It's a day set aside to demonstrate that our society is one based on and governed by laws, contrasted to the May Day celebration of the Russians, whose society is based on totalitarianism and dictatorship.

Although not a pioneer in social legislation, Florida does have some significant laws on the books worthy of mention. Florida's divorce laws are fairly progressive, with no-fault divorce in effect about five years, but still not available in many states.

The state's Landlord-Tenant Act, only about four years old, prevents landlords from evicting tenants without first getting a court order. It also provides the tenant with the right to withhold rent if the landlord fails or refuses to make repairs required by local codes.

In an effort to protect consumers, Florida passed the Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Act four years ago. Referred to as the Florida Little FTC Act, it outlawed many deceptive practices, incorporating several Federal Trade Commission rulings as a basis.

Auto mechanics, under the act, must give a written estimate of repairs before the work is started. If the job will cost $25 or more, work must be guaranteed and the customer has a right to bring the auto back if the work was not satisfactorily done.

There also is a section protecting consumers against fraud in the mail-order insurance industry. And, Florida has an equal-pay act prohibiting wage rate discrimination based on sex. It was passed in 1963.

Still, the state best known as a frontrunner in social legislation is Wisconsin.

Indeed, a close look at many of today's federal laws and laws passed by several states, would turn up such similarities to Wisconsin laws that the question of who passed them first would be raised. In most instances, however, the answer would be Wisconsin.

As a matter of fact, Wisconsin wage earners were the first to pass a valid income tax, even before the U.S. Congress managed to get such a law approved.

Wisconsin's state income tax law came about as the result of a joint resolution by the Legislature in 1905 amending the state constitution to add enabling legislation permitting income to be taxed.

Home Gardening

An attractive lawn is largely the result of regular cutting at the proper mowing height. A properly mowed lawn is more vigorous and will have fewer disease problems.

It is natural for the homeowner to want to cut the grass as short as possible in order to lengthen the time between cuttings. "Scalping" the lawn, however, can seriously injure the grass. Removal of large portions of the leaf results in reduced carbohydrate production, because the leaves are largely responsible for photosynthesis.

Mowing height is fairly well established for Florida lawn grasses. Bermuda grasses and zoysia grasses can be mowed at centipede grass and carpet grass at 1-2 inches, and St. Augustine grasses and Bahia grasses at 2-4 inches.

The "rule of thumb" is to mow often enough so that not more than 1/3 of the total leaf surface is removed at any one mowing. If it is desirable to maintain St. Augustine at 2 inches, mow when the grass is 2 1/2 inches tall.

Removal of clippings is another factor that merits consideration. If the lawn is mowed frequently, the small amount of clippings may not be detrimental. Short clippings decay rapidly and usually do not contribute to thatch formation.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Kitty C. Ellison, Sanford; two daughters, Mrs. Carol Haskins, Titusville; and Mrs. Margaret Pappas, died Friday at the Seminole Memorial Hospital. He was a retired U.S. government accountant, and was a native of Birmingham, Ala. He came to Sanford 54 years ago from Montgomery, Ala.

He was a member of the Central Park Baptist Church of Birmingham; the Shiloh Lodge No. 1 Masons F&M, of Fargo, N.D.; the Elks Lodge No. 1241, Sanford; and the Moose Lodge No. 1851, Sanford; and an active member of the Columbus Club.

Well, Since You Asked...

Q. Which travels faster, a baseball thrown by a pitcher the 60 feet 6 inches to home plate, or a tennis ball served by a top-flight pro? — D.M., Elizabeth, N.J.

A. Good to read the ricknacker. The ball balls of pitchers such as Nolan Ryan have been timed in the 60mph range. Last year, Colin Dobie, the Australian professional, won the Billye Fast Serve Tournament, after he later coast-to-coast, with a serve timed at 130 mph. In runner-up competition, a club player actually smashed a ball 133 mph. Of course, a baseball's a lot heavier to throw — smarts, too, if it hits you.

Q. Why was Dr. J. so upset when he found out he was being cited as collateral for a loan by his old team, the New York Jets? What's wrong with being an asset — K.L., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Dr. J. (Julius Erving) reacted by saying that he thought slavery had been dead for more than 100 years. Personally, I think his bruised feelings were a little extreme. As long as you accept the system that a player under contract to that team belongs to that team, then the latter has some negotiating rights. However, recent court rulings have limited a club's claims to a player ad infinitum. Dr. J. is a case in point. When he got unhappy with the Jets, he simply skipped to Philadelphia.

Q. A few years ago, he played under Dino Restelli broke in with the Pittsburgh Pirates. He hit all kinds of home runs and the

Cey, Hey! Ron Macking A Name

By The Associated Press

Cey, Hey! Look who's making a name for himself.

Ron Cey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, already nicknamed "The Penguin," has no doubt earned some kind of a new sobriquet like Willie Mays' famous "Say Hey Kid" the way he's hitting this April.

Off to the best start of his career, the best-showered third baseman established a major league record Friday night by driving in his 28th run of the month while leading the Dodgers to a 4-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

In other National League play, an inning with an inartistic fielding error, is sailing right along with the red-hot Dodgers, who lead the National League West by seven games.

Cey previously shared the April RBI record with Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell, who drove in 27 runs in 1974, and Reggie Jackson, who knocked in 27 for Oakland the same year.

Cey entered the 1977 season with 316 lifetime RBIs in four full seasons, including a career-high 117 in 1975.

Cey set a record-setting run batted in record for his latest run, led by the Dodgers in their 14th game in their last 15 starts and their 16th against only three for the season.

In other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 3-2; the Houston Astros whipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-3; the St. Louis Cardinals turned back the Atlanta Braves 2-1; the Philadelphia Phillies edged the San Francisco Giants 4-2; the New York Mets routed the San Diego Padres 9-2.

Tommy John and Charlie Hough combined to blank Montreal on 10 hits as the Dodgers won their seventh straight game. Rick Monday singled some of the Dodgers' first run off Hooper Don Stanhouse, 3-2, and Cey's infield out drove home the second.

Reds 2, Cubs 2

Woodee Fryman and Rawly Eastwick combined for a seven-inning and George Foster singled in the winning run as Cincinnati defeated Chicago. Fryman settled down after a shaky start to end his record at six.

Eastwick was summoned with two outs in the ninth after George Mitterwald doubled. He was greeted by Larry Bitner's single, then retired by Ivan DeJesus on a fly ball to give his fourth save. Pister delivered a one-out single off Lee Phil Bonham, 2-0, to break a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning.

Phillies 6, Giants 5

Pitcher Steve Carlton belted the decisive run-scoring single in the sixth as Philadelphia edged San Francisco. The Phillies scored three times in the sixth to overcome a 4-3 San Francisco lead. Carlton's single capped the rally, driving in Philadelphia's three runs.

Met 9, Padres 2

Dave Kingman drove in three runs with a pair of three-run homers as New York beat San Diego 9-2 and handed the Padres their sixth straight loss. Kingman, who was second on the Padres' batting line, hit his first home run last year with 37, got his fifth of the season in his first inning to put the Mets ahead 4-0.

In the fifth inning, Kingman broke the game open when he hit a home run off pitcher Dave Freudenstein's first pitch into the left-field seats to put New York ahead 8-1.

papers at that time were calling him the next Babe Ruth, and I don't think he lasted very long. Whatever happened to him, just how long did he play in the big leagues? — Lou Milano, Santa Ana, Calif.

Dino Restelli came up to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1949 and hit something like 11 homers in three weeks. "Then," recalls a baseball old-timer, "the pitchers decided if he could hit sitting down." Pitched high and tight, Restelli only hit half the Pirates' games, then went back to the minors, returned only briefly for 21 games in 1951. His major league career ended with 13 homers. He later became a member of the San Francisco Police Department, retired on disability after he hurt his back and has been living in San Carlos, a suburb to the south, active in a youth program.

Q. What do you think of the scandal about TV-promoted boxing bouts? Why does boxing encourage such practices as kickbacks, payoffs, fixed, etc.? — D.R. Giacomini, O.

I can remember years ago when Telponorm Corporation got involved with boxing, through telecasting bouts on closed circuit, that Irving Kahn shed away from the natural inclination to participate in the promotion. He foresaw the dangers of conflict of interest when a communications organization got involved with staging an event. ABC got too bold after all its sports coups in recent years. Boxing has been susceptible prey to unsavory interests because it's so easy to control one man in the ring and because historically boxing always has operated on the fringe of legitimacy.

Q. What is Christie Evert really like as a person? — Linda L. Oakland, Calif.

Not the Miss Frost Face that has been suggested in accounts of her implacable vengeance. She learned early that to control her finely tuned game she had to control her overt emotions. In the last couple of years she has matured into a poised, articulate player on the court with warmth and gentle humor that doesn't surface during a match. Know her, you'll like her.

Q. What is the nickname for Ron Rey, the Dodgers' third baseman? And what is his origin? — L.M., Ventura, Calif.

To everyone around the Dodgers, and in fact around the National League, he is known simply as "Penguin." The reasons are strictly physical. The chunky third baseman has a running style in which his legs never seem to be more than an inch off the ground, resembling the waddling style of the Antarctic birds. But he's deceptively fast.

Q. Such athletes as Rob Scriber of the Los Angeles Rams, Donnie Green of the Buffalo Bills and Terry Bradshaw of the Pittsburgh Steelers are all members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. # Who Was That Flash? How About Tim Raines?

By ANDY GIRARDI Herald Correspondent

Tim Raines is a common name to many baseball fans around the Sanford-Oakland area but in the past few weeks Tim Raines has been running track for SHS, and man has he been running!

Raines officially is not even on the track team, due to the fact that it would conflict with the baseball teams schedule. But with many track team members quitting as the season progressed, Raines has tried to help out.

In the past two weeks Raines has set a conference record with a long jump of 22 feet 9 inches and has also set a county record with a 41 ft flat run of the 330 intermediate.

"He did the same thing (or as last year, helping out in the county and conference meets," said Coach Jim Dawson of Seminole High School.

So Raines' season doesn't seem so bad after all. Even Raines had trouble hitting over 500 this year, getting over 500 while Raines did last year, (.526) is almost an impossible task in any league.

But Raines is not exactly your average player. Not only has he had any offers from colleges, he has a good chance to be picked in the annual baseball draft which is coming up in June.

"I think I'll be drafted," Raines calmly said with a shake of his head. "Hope so."

Who's Waiting For It To Happen?

Houston (AP) — "I'm waiting for something to happen," George Burns said, pointing to a picture of himself in the Houston Open last year. He blew a two-stroke lead over his five hole to go, and with it a chance for his first victory on the golf tour.

Littler, a laconic veteran of 23 years of top activity who has had produced 28 titles, splashed nine "3s" across his card in a spectacular 55. The effort included a 60-foot eagle putt on the 16th hole.

Two strokes back of the co-leaders was Canadian veteran George Knudson, who overcame a double-bogey seven and shot 68 for 137.

Thompson and Doug Tewell followed by 138.

Mark Hayes, who shared the first-round lead with Burns, blew to a 76 and was tied at 143 with defending champion Lee Elder. Elder shot 70.

They say you can't make it happen," Burns said after following a second consecutive round without a bogey and taking a share of the 36-hole lead with veteran Gene Littler.

"They say you just have to be patient and let it happen, particularly in the case of George Knudson."

"Well, I'm waiting for it to happen."

You couldn't blame Frank Tanana if he was delighted when the California Angels grabbed Joe Rudi and Don Baylor in the free agent bidding war.

Rudi, the top free agent (Baltimore's Jim Palmer, who you know you can't give up many runs," Tanana said. "In the past, if we got ahead, we were done. But with the hitters we have now, I would bet the Angels would win this year."

Mickey Stanley led by the age 5-4 with a leadoff homer in the eighth inning to win the game over Oakland as the Red Sox powered past Oakland. The two teams battled a total of six home runs.

Bowling Dottie Hogan New President

By The Associated Press

The Seminole County Women's Bowling Association held their annual meeting at Bowl America last Sunday. Officers for the 77th season were elected and delegates to next year's state convention were chosen. Elected for the coming year are President, Dottie Hogan, 14 V. P. Kathy Baker, 2nd V. P. Linda Allen, Sec. Franke Kaiser, and Sgt. Al Arms Dinnes. Dottie Hogan and Linda Allen were elected to the executive committee.

The state convention will be held in Daytona Beach next May. Delegates are Ruth Zvatovny, Kathy McNabb, Sharon Shriver, Gwen Lineau, Mary Johnson along with the five newly elected officers. A total of 16 will be representing Seminole County at the convention.

Happy to report that the youngsters living in the Regional Youth of the Year roll-off at the Winter Park Lakes, and representing Bowl America in Sanford, came away the winners in three out of the four divisions. Members of the Classel family are through with flying colors in their divisions. Edward won in the 7-8 age group bowling 45 pins over his average.

Alberta Clark took the honors in the 12-13 group beating her opponents by bowling 102 pins over her average. A healthy 93 pins over his average was James Martin the title in the 16-18 division. Our fellow bowlers are mighty proud of you all!

Who Buys New Home: End Of Myth

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Association of Realtors has just come up with a finding that seems to destroy one of the oldest myths in the business of buying and selling homes.

Based on the conventional wisdom, there is a hierarchy of home buyers, led by the existing homeowner who moves up to a new, more expensive home, leaving the resale home to a buyer who previously had rented.

More familiar to most people is a smaller figure — that for housing starts, which were at a rate of 1.5 million units in March. Assuming that those houses will be sold, and adding in 3.4 million sales of existing homes, you arrive at a figure of 4.9 million as a possible total for 1977. Never has there been a year like that.

Glascoc: 'The People Meant What They Said'

"It's an exhilarating feeling to win, particularly when you know you are right and the fight was for a sacred principle upon which the nation was founded." Charles Glascock said, thinking back to the five-week battle that ended last week.

Casselberry citizens attended council meetings for five weeks in record numbers and 17.5 per cent of the electorate petitioned for a referendum before four city councilmen last week agreed to call a June 3 election.

Van Meter: 'I Finally Got The Light On...'

The people and his colleagues finally understood last Monday night — "the light turned on" — that he wasn't trying to block a referendum, only trying to come up with a solution to a problem, says Casselberry City Council Chairman Nathan Van Meter.
