Expressway Route Proposed

By Deane Jordan Herald Staff Writer

A more specific path for the proposed Seminole County Expressway has been included in a funding proposal by the Orlando-Orange County Expressway Authority. The route, however, may be based on a Department of Transportation plan and has not been approved by the Seminole County Expressway Authority.

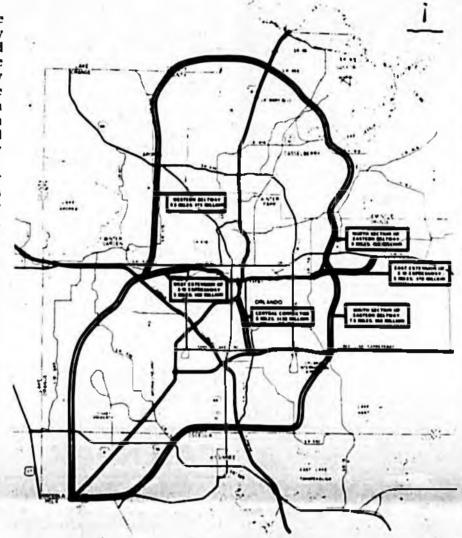

The Seminole County corridor Included in Orange County's long-range plans, calls for Seminole County to connection to the Orange County expressway at State Road 426. After arching through Seminole County, Intersecting with Interstate 4 near State Road 46A north of Lake Mary, the expressway would then enter Lake County west of Sylvan Lake.

Chairman of the Seminole County Expressway Authority. County Commissioner Fred Streetman, said the route is very tentative and does not take into consideration a possible xtension of Lake Mary Boulevard east of U.S. Highway 17-92 or possible impact on Lake Jesup, which it would cross, not skirt, according to the plans. He said the authority is not working on the specific route at this time. The authority is currently trying to hire an executive director and then seek funding for feasibility and environmental studies.

He said the proposed expressway corridor has been narrowed from earlier this year but it is not set. He added that although the route is included in Orange County's Expressway Authority proposal, it is the city because an expressway. If the route was adopted however, it, unlike a previous recommendation, would not divide the city of Lake Mary by following Lake Mary Boulevard to the interstate, much to the pleasure expressway route detailed in the of the city's representative to the authority.

"That was our concern all along, that is to align the corridor so it doesn't cut the city in half," said Lake Mary City Commissioner Paul Tremel. He said it would be good news for

As of Dec. 1, monthly water bills in Senford will rise by as much as 96 percent for resi-dential users and 300 percent for commercial customers and fees paid by developers to hook-into the city's water and sewer system will have nearly doubled.

In applying the new rate scale, residents who previously averaged a monthly bill of $5.88 for 1,000 gallons of water consumption will now be charged $9.15 in water, sewage and tax fees. Those using 7,000 gallons a month will pay $22.90, rather than the current 14.36.

The measures were unanimously adopted by the Sanford City Commission on Monday night, during a meeting at which no residents turned out to discuss the measures, although two representatives from the Home Builders Association of Central Florida did attempt to

Jacobson: City Knew Nothing Official Of County's Plans

Sanford entreprenuer Jeno Paulucci's statements Saturday regarding calls he received in early October from Sanford's scenie improvement board chalrman Sara Jacobson concerning his Yankee Lake property gave rise to speculation over what capacity the calls were made in and why Sanford continued throughout last month to allege it was unaware of Seminole County's interest in the property.

Paulucet said he assumed Ms. Jacobson was calling on behalf of the city when she requested he consider selling the 2.867-acre site in unincorporated northwest Seminole County to Sanford for its wastewater management program. Paulucci also said he told Ms. Jacobson more than once the county was negotiating for

As a result of this information, and "Centerra," a project he will Sanford's repeated claims it was unaware of the county's Intentions were untrue, Paulucci said.

City commissioners and administrators continued to disayow knowledge of the county's negotiations until last week, when Paulucci sold the land to the county for its own wastewater management program.

On Monday Ms. Jacobson acknowledged she told City Manager Frank Faison about the county's efforts. Falson, however, said he considered this information "rumors."

Under Paulucci's agreement with the county, a sewage plant will be constructed on the property. It will serve northwest Seminole, including Paulucci's Heathrow development conduct with other area developers.

Regarding her contacts with Pualucci over the Yankee Lake site. Ms. Jacobson issued the following statement Monday:

"The city is an integral part of the county. The county is made up of the various cities it envelopes. To me, they must comprise a strong unity in order to properly serve the citizenry that supports each of them.

"In the case of the sewer issue, four parties are involved: the city, the county. Jeno Paulucel and the citizenry. I am one of those citizens. I serve both the city and the county in various voluntary capacities. It appeared to me, as an involved citizen, that the city and county were not working together to solve the sewer problem.

"Both had definite needs and both were looking at the Yankee Lake site as a potential solution to their needs. Mr. Paulucci owns the Yankee Lake site and also has specific needs relative to his Heathrow develop-

"I knew that the city had made overtures, if not offers, to the county to work together at the Yankee Lake site - in fact, to possibly jointventure their efforts in attempting to solve their individual, and, therefore, mutual sewer problems.

Lakefront Village Gets Sanford's Approval

By Karen Talley Herald Staff Writer

A $2-million tropical mini-village, including seven glass-enclosed wooden buildings and plenty of public beachfront, will be constructed by Beta Marine operator John Smith and Sanford architect Gerald Gross on the shore of Lake Monroe.

Smith, and Holiday Inn co-owner Ed Welch, had both yied for the spot, which is located next to the Holiday Inn and behind Beta Marine. The Sanford City Commission went with Smith on Monday night, citing his plan's benefits for the city and the public support of it. According to Commissioner John Mercer. the Chamber of Commerce and the city's downtown merchants had expressed a preference for the Smith development.

Welch had offered a $1-million project, also with a tropical feel, although Mercer said this proposal was more "a conceptualization, than a firm project."

In granting approval, the commissioners said that-while Smith was the son of Sanford's mayor, this fact had nothing to do with their considerations. Mayor Bettye Smith did not vote on the approval.

Describing his project as "low silhouette commercial." Smith said he plans to "target the public, rather than private enterprise," with plenty of free recreation, including a beach, a boat ramp and more of the sailboat regattas he has run in the past.

The buildings will be glass-enclosed to allow a variety of Lake Monroe vistas. Smith said, and when combined with an abundancy of boardwalk and natural landscaping, "the site will have the feel of a tropical open mail."

A glass-enclosed lakeside shopping village received a go-ahead from the Sanford City Commission Monday. The project will be built east of the Hollday Inn and could be finished by spring.

The Winning Edge

One Winner Ran The Rack

By Jim Searis Herald Staff Writer

While a 64 year-old youngster was the big winner, 81 year-old Louis Ambrose stole the show in the men's billiard rotation tournament in the Golden Age Olympic games. The tournament was held at Woogie's Pub on north U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford, It was sponsored by the Sanford Optimist Club.

"Oh, this thing is great," Woogle Badger said of the two day tournament held at the bar. Badger, whose given name is the logo for a chain of bars and pool halls across Central Florida, said he was pleased to have the seniors and liked watching them

"These guys love it here and we love having them. They're having fun." Badger said.

Rotation is a billiard game where the balls must be sunk consecutively with the shooter receiving the point value of the number on the ball sunk. The first man to score 120 points wins the match and in the finals the men played to 250 points.

The real story in the pool shoot-out was 81 year-old Louis Ambrose. Ambrose, the oldest cue stroker in the games, was only able to reach the semi-finals but achieved a special recognition of his own. In his first match. Ambrose beat his opponent without allowing him a single shot. He ran the table by sinking all 15 balls, something rarely seen in pool competition.

While that was going on the other 17 shooters were busy drawing pairings out of a baseball cap and waiting their turns at the tables. Each pair of contestants were also responsible for scoring their own matches. Maurice Brown. 66, of Winter Springs, said he hadn't had much luck but he said it was fun. "Yeah. I won a couple and I lost a couple today," Brown said. "I just couldn't play. You know how it is, this is a game of luck sometimes. These games are a great thing though: I was here last year and I'll probably be back next year.'

The semi-finals boiled down to Ambrose, Arthur Snow, 64, of Leesburg, Quinton Smith, 65, of Sanford and Charles Schwartz. 78, of DeBary. The shots were coming slow and deliberate now and discussions over scoring were becoming more common. Participants take their events seriously and train for them. Custom-made, two-piece pool cues were as obvious here as baseball caps and work shirts.

As present as the apparel, was a cheerful attitude about the competitors. One man said in leaving that he spent a lot of time practicing for just this event, only to lose in the early rounds. "Sometimes you can't shoot for nuthin', it just goes that way I guess, I couldn't have showed up at every one of these games without a little bit of luck you know," he said with a grin.

In the finals Schwartz was beaten by Smith and had to sit patiently by waiting for the medal ceremony. He said that he couldn't see well out of one eye but that he hoped he could, "go all the way and win the thing. I have been to every one of these games and never won. I did get a medal though."

The final match was a contest of nerves between steel-eyed Art Snow and streak-shooting Quint Smith. Smith. a former high school pole vaulting champion from West Virginia, said he was nervous awaiting the championship but he hoped he would make a friend in the audience happy. "He signed me up for this you know." Smith said alluding to his beer drinking buddy. "I didn't know anything about it. he did it as a gag but it's turned out pretty well though."

In the final game Snow methodically stroked his way to the victory beating Smith by playing defensively and making the important shots. Snow said he grew up playing pool and this year was satisfying for him because he finished second in eight-ball last year.

"I started playing pool when I was four years-old." Snow said. "I made my first shots standing on a wooden "pop" case and hitting the balls with a short cue stick. I shoot a lot since I've retired from Pittsburgh Plate Glass in Ohio. we have four tables in our trailer park and I'm on them all the time. I love this game," he said.

Snow, a World War II veteran had high praise for the efforts of the volunteer staff of the games. 'they do a super job- all of em' do," and said he would return to defend his title next year.

As the competitors filed out of the bar, many of them arm-inarm, each one took special care to say goodbye to one another. When one of the participants in the Golden Age games smiles and says, "I'll see you next year," it takes on a special meaning; both to the gracious participant and the lucky observer. It says something about life itself, it's best lived a day at a time, ask any participant.

Close Counts In Horseshoes

By Jim Searle Herald Staff Writer

The game of horseshoes is like the game of life: it doesn't matter whether you win or lose it's how you play the game. And, how you play determines success or failure, according to world champion horseshoe pitcher Sparky Hall.

The record number of contestants, plus the unexpected storm, extended the contest past the five hour mark but failed to dampen the spirit or enthusiasm of the participants.

The game of horseshoes dates back to colonial days when groups of blacksmiths found a diversion from laboring over their hot forges by pitching shoes at metal stakes embedded in the ground.

Today's game is similar in that the stakes are set in clay with two slabs of concrete on either side. Points are scored by pitching the shoe underhanded at a metal stake and a perfect score of three points is awarded if the inside of the shoe "rings" the stake: that is called hitting a ringer. If the shoe bounces on the grass before it hits the pin, or if it hits the concrete on either side then no points are awarded.

One point is given for the shoe that lands closest to the stake that is not a ringer. Each man (or

Reagan Can End Discrimination

President Reagan will soon decide whether to rescind or revise Executive Order 11246 that promotes the insidious practice of reverse descrimination in the work place.

The order, issued by former President Johnson in 1965, effectively requires federal contractors to set numerical goals for hiring and promoting minority and women workers. That onerous policy is administered by the U.S. Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs. Failure to comply can make a contractor ineligible for federal work.

As originally intended, the executive order's primary purpose was to prohibit discrimination in employment among private-sector firms contracting with the government. Fair enough. Some unscrupulous employers have deliberately excluded minorities and women, and the federal government must not subsidize discrimination in any form.

Unfortunately, a succession of liberal bureaucrats have distorted the order's intent by institutionalizing job discrimination. Existing rules compel contractors to make "good faith" efforts to recruit and promote women and minority workers in proportion to the number of available, qualified candidates in a given labor market. Contractors who do not achieve numerical hiring goals are penalized by the Labor Department.

This numbers game undermines the enlightened principle that employemnt decisions must be color blind and gender neutral. In fact, such arbitrary federal rules force employers to consider race, sex and ethnicity, the very factors they are directed by law to disregard.

Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act specifies that employers will not be required "to grant preferential treatment to any individual or group on account of any imbalance." Similarly, such treatment clearly violates the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection under the law.

Apart from the legal and moral aspects. there is the staggering cost of enforcing these discriminatory regulations. The federal government will spend $47 million this year on the OFCCP, and private-sector firms will spend many times that amount trying to comply with the federal requirements. Those costs, of course, are passed along to the taxpayer.

All the more reason why President Reagan should issue a new executive order that prohibits the Labor Department from compelling federal contractors to hire a certain percentage of women or minorities. Instead, that order ought to require employers to redouble their efforts to recruit qualified persons regardless of their race, sex or national origin. Such an approach would signal a renewed emphasis on equal opportunity, not equal results.

Released from the coercion of federal regulation, contractors would then be free to establish affirmative-action goals and timetables on a voluntary basis. At the same time, victims of job-discrimination would still have legal recourse via existing civil-rights laws.

However well-intentioned, the concept of job quotas is fundamentally flawed because it perpetuates the very evil it is supposed to eliminate. Ronald Reagan promised to roll back such quotas when he took office. He can do so in federal contracting with a stroke of the pen.

Attention On Dollar Slows Protectionists

major industrial nations agreed to a U.S. orchestrated plan to reduce the value of the equitable trade policies and expanding U.S. dollar, Sen. Bill Bradley pulled the document out of his desk and asked a group of Japanese cabinet ministers what they thought of it.

The heavily underlined report, and Bradley's knowledgeable questions, showed the New Jersey Democrat was intimately familiar with a subject that few members of Congress truly understand.

"How many members of the Senate the next day have the G-5 report, have it underlined and could talk about it?" one of the meeting's participants later remarked. "The guy obviously does his homework."

Bradley is a leader of a young new generation of legislators who worship at the altar of economic growth and low taxation. In recent months he has steeped himself in international monetary issues, reading everything he can lay his hands on. While some of his older colleagues in Congress have rushed headlong down the path of protectionism. Bradley, along with Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., has been preaching the need to reform the international monetary

WASHINGTON - The day after a group of five our European and Asian partners are many, but central to them is the dollar. The key to more markets overseas is an international monetary system that is badly in need of an overhaul. The target: the 14-year-old floating exchange rates. which Bradley and Kemp want to junk in favor of fixed exchange rates - although there is more consensus about the need to overhaul the floating system than there is over what should

> All of this will be discussed at an important conference Bradley and Kemp are hosting - the U.S. Congressional Summit on Exchange Rates and the Dollar - which will be attended by a star-studded cast of leading political and economic movers and shakers from here and abroad.

The Nov. 11-13 conference will bring together deeply disparate elements in the Democratic and Republican Parties - from liberal Democratic leader Jim Wright to conservative supply-side evangelist Lewis Lehrman - as well as key world figures. Among those planning to attend are Jacques Attali, French President Francois Mitterrand's closest adviser and counselor, and other ministers, bankers and parliamentary leaders from Europe and Japan.

Bradley and Kemp obviously want the conference to propel the issue forward to the point where change is possible - and already some important, although tenative, movement has occurred. Treasury Secretary James Baker's brilliant handling of the G-5 meeting on Sept. 22 not only succeeded in sending the dollar lower. but energized worldwide interest in the need to stabilize international currency rates in a manner that will open the way to a new era of global economic growth.

Notably, all of this attention on the dollar has slowed the protectionist stampede in Congress. Interest in the dollar is replacing interest in protectionism.

Significantly. Baker has accepted an invitation to address the conference, which will begin with a reception in his honor. Equally significant, Baker's deputy secretary, Richard Darman, will be attending every session.

The most important thing to watch for in the conference's aftermath is how quickly the Treasury and the administration will move toward the Kemp-Bradley position on the dollar. It's hoped that this mini-summit will accelerate the move toward needed and long-overdue monetary reforms.

ROBERT WALTERS Rockwell Caught

Again WASHINGTON (NEA) - Once again, the second largest private contractor serving the federal government has been caught engaging in illegal activities - and once again, the company insists its executives were unaware of the transgressions. The company with a proclivity for running afoul of federal contracting laws and ethics regulations is Pittsburgh-based Rockwell International, which does more than $7.6 billion worth of government business annually. That includes $6.2 billion from the Defense Department, which has designated Rockwell as the prime contractor for the B-1 strategic bomber, and $1.4 billion from the National Aeronauties and Space Administration, which has selected Rockwell as a prime contractor for the space shuttle.

Rockwell's most recent indiscretion became known late last month when the company pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Dallas to 20 criminal charges of defrauding the Defense Department and agreed to pay at least $1.2 million to avoid a trial.

The scheme dates back to the 1982, when Rockwell had cost overruns on a fixed-price government contract that required the company to absorb any excess expenses.

But Rockwell charged the government for those costs by falsifying 20 time cards and thus billing the work to another federal contract that authorized cost-plus billing.

Exactly three years ago. Rockwell paid the government $1.5 million to settle a civil complaint filed by the Justice Department alleging that it similarly sought to avoid financial responsibility for cost overruns by wrongly shifting expenses from a fixed-price to a cost-plus contract.

A former mid-level manager claimed in the late 1970s that the practice was widespread within the company. He later was fired by Rockwell - an action he charged was in retaliation for his whistleblowing.

Earlier this year, the House Armed Service Committee released documents showing that Rockwell was among seven Defense Department contractors that routinely billed the government for thousands of dollars of improper expenses.

Gorbachev Is Ready

WASHINGTON (NEA) - As Ronald a meeting was first discussed, he Reagan prepares to meet Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev, there is a near consensus - although no one at the White House would admit it publicly - that the United States has been badly out-maneuvered in the pre-sommit give-and-take.

The two leaders will probably have three or four working sessions on Nov. 19 and 20 in Geneva and a working dinner on the first day.

However, as the summit neared, the two sides were having a difficult time agreeing on what would be discussed at those sessions. The United States has wanted the meetings to cover a wide range of topics. while the Soviets want the sessions to focus on arms control.

When Gorbachev first offered to meet with Reagan. White House officials were almost gleeful. They believed Gorbachev would be almost desperate to resume detente and work out a new arms agreement, because the arms race is simply too expensive for the Soviet Gorbachev, they thought, would be ripe for the picking. As one high White House official put it several months ago: "In our judgment, the president goes to Geneva with the strongest hand of any president since Eisenhower in 1955.

Gorbachev's first priority is improving the Soviet economy. When had already announced his intention to boost the economy's rate of growth by 5 percent - from its current rate of less than 3 percent every year for the rest of the century.

U.S. officials also believed that Gorbachev was still consolidating his power within the Kremlin and would not be free to wheel and deal on his own.

But now everything looks different. To start with, Gorbachev has moved faster and more ruthlessly to consolidate his power than U.S. experts thought possible.

He has positioned himself as a man of compromise and, to an extent, is in a no-lose situation. U.S. officials worry that, if the summit fails to produce an arms control agreement, the world will blame Reagan. It will see his failure to compromise on "Star Wars" as the major stumbling block.

Both U.S. and Soviet officials would like something positive to come out of Geneva. So, in Washington and Moscow, talks have been going forward at a furious pace about a new civil air travel agreement between the two countries. It could be ready for signing at the

Surgery Aided By Heat Coil

By Jan Ziegler UPI Science Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Scientists trying to develop equipment to help in cancer treatment have come up with a device that may one day save lives in open heart surgery.

Paul Ruggera, a biomedical engineer with the Food and Drug Administration, and colleagues developed a radio frequency coil that can appears to eliminate the problems of re-warming a body cooled down for open heart surgery.

Cooling is used in infants, who are too tiny to be hooked up to a heart-lung machine to keep their circulation going during surgery. When temperature is low enough metabolism slows and cells need less oxygen. Brain and tissue damage is prevented.

The patient is then re-warmed using blankets, heating pads and intravenbus saline solutions. However, with these methods, the body's outer parts warm up before inner organs, including the heart. and the stress can cause the heart to beat wildly and irregularly.

The death rate in infants warmed conventionally is 15 to 20 percent. In small dogs, it is 50 percent, the scientists said.

"This coil works so uniformly, the heart heats up as quickly as the surface," Ruggera said.

Ruggera developed the device with scientists from the FDA's Center for Veterinary Medicine and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. The coll, attached to a generator, is wrapped with wire that emits radio waves in the amateur radio frequency. The frequency can be changed by changing the length of the wire. The FDA scientists tested the device on 10 dogs that had been cooled down to surgically acceptable levels and found it warmed them in a little over 31 minutes with no detrimental effects - even heating air inside the lungs, said Dr. James Keith, a Virginia Polytech veterinarian who participated in the experiments. Tests on dogs that actually undergo surgery will take place in December. He said he hoped other researchers would test the device in people. "We're looking at it for use in veterinary medicine, and of course in human medicine," he said.

For 1 Vet, Pentagon Is Purple-Heartless

WASHINGTON - Sam Sortland isn't bitter: that's not his style. But the blind World War II veteran would like one thing from his country: a Purple Heart for the wartime injuries that robbed him of his sight.

To anyone outside a Pentagon swivel chair, his request would seem reasonable. Sortland, 71, who lives in Ambrose, N.D., a small town near the Canadian border, emerged unscratched from the five-month siege of Corregidor, the island fortress in Manila Bay. But during nearly three years as a prisoner-of-war, he was systematically tortured, beaten and starved by his Japanese captors.

On Feb. 4, 1945, Sortland and a handful of his surviving buddies were rescued by U.S. Rangers from their Manila prison. He weighed 70 pounds and had lost all his teeth. And he was permanently blinded from the effects of starvation.

But when Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., tried to get a Purple Heart for Sortland recently, he got this replay from Air Force Lt. Col. John J. Weaver:

"An analysis of these cases showed that many prisoners of war had been awarded Purple Hearts on what would have been insufficient evidence to support the award to a soldier who was engaged in actual combat on the field of battle. It would be extremely difficult to define brutality, starvation or malnutrition for the purposes of award of the Purple Heart.

The Pentagon explained that Sortland would have rated a Purple Heart if he had been wounded while being captured, when trying to escape or during hombardment of the prison.

The distinction is understandably lost on Sortland. "Whether you got blind fighting or blind in prison camp doesn't matter." he said. "You're just as blind either way." As a sort of consolation prize, thanks to Dorgan's efforts. Sortland will be awarded a Bronze Star in a ceremony at a North Dakota air base next month. "People like Sam haven't asked for much." Dorgan told our reporter Jenny Cunningham. "The little things are important. They demonstrate that this country doesn't forget.'

This cheery view might be disputed by some veterans. Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., asked for a General Accounting Office investigation when she learned that a constituent had been waiting 40 years to receive the 14 medals he had earned in World War II.

The GAO reported that a surge of requests following publication of two magazine articles had resulted in a backlog of 114,000 applications for medals in 1983.

Although the GAO found that the distribution program has improved significantly since then, it warned that a change recently proposed could create another big backlog.

As things stand now, the Army processes requests from its own veterans, while those who served in the Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard are handled by the records center of the National Archives. Acting archivist Frank Burke said the records center wants to hand the responsibility back to the military services.

"We were wondering, as archivists, what we are doing in medals, anyway." Burke said. He added that Archives has taken a lot of heat from veterans and their families because of delays that he sald aren't the records center's fault.

The Navy has agreed to begin processing medal requests for itself, the Marine Corps and Coast Guard by Dec. 1. The Air Force is thinking

Last year, Oviedo's powerful offense was too much for the Lady Knights to handle. The Lady Lions don't have as many strong hitters this season, but they get plenty of power from senior Stephanic Nelson and junior Kelly Price. "We don't have as many hitters this year but we have much better back row defense,'

Carlson said. The back row defense is led by Lisa Knapp, Cindy Wood and Kim Verne while Nelson has also improved greatly in the back row. Another good back row player is Mikki Eby.

Nelson's play at the net has been impressive since she rebounded from midseason injuries to her wrist and ankle. Price was outstanding in Nelson's absence and makes the Lions even more dangerous with Nelson. Another player coming on strong offensively is sophomore Jill Knutson. Jodie Switzer, also a sophomore, is another good player at the net.

Running the offense for the Lady Lions is Verne, a senior setter. Carlson said Verne improved her setting with every match and she is also one of the top servers on the team. Other top servers include Barbara

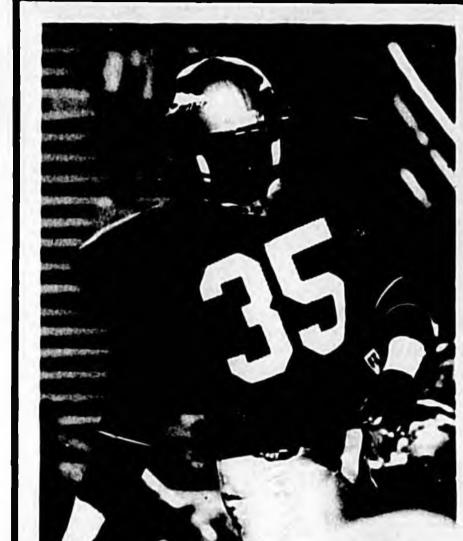

Malone and Trudy Ferguson. It took Oyledo three games to dispose of Kissimmee Osceola in the district final. After winning the opening game, 15-10. Oyledo suffered a bit of a let down in game two as they built a 9-3 lead only to lose, 15-9. The Lady Lions rebounded to win the third, 15-8,

"The girls were real enthused today (Monday)," added Carlson. "We had a good practice. They seemed mentally ready. Now we'll see how that is when we walk in some place we've never been before.'

A&M IS CONFERENCE FAVORITE Florida A&M University's Rattlerettes were chosen favorites to win the New South Women's Conference by the league's coaches and Sports Information Directors.

Away 49ers DENVER (UPI) - Unlike last year's Monday night game which was played in a blizzard. the one conducted at Mile High Stadium in 1985 will not be remembered for a snowstorm. Instead, it will be remembered for a single snowball.

It was tossed by an anonymous Denver Broncos fan with 17 seconds left in the first half and ultimately, it could be argued, that snowball decided a game filled with oddities and big

The official game winner was a 24-yard field goal by Denver's Rich Karlis with 1:27 to play that brought the Broncos a 17-16 victory over the San Francisco 49ers and gave them sole possession of the AFC West lead at 7-3. The Super Bowl champion 49ers. meanwhile, fell to 5.5 and placed themselves in jeopardy of missing the playoffs.

Karlis' field goal was set up by two king-sized plays - a 42-yard interference penalty against the 49ers' Dwight Hicks and a desperation 22-yard throw from

John Elway to Steve Watson. And there were plenty of other big plays, such as:

Ray Wersching's 45-yard field goal with 3:46 to play that appeared to have brought the 49ers the victory.

— A 50-yard "flea flicker" pass from Elway to Vance Johnson which set up the second of Elway's two first-half touchdown throws.

 Ronnie Lott's stop of Sammy Winder at the goal line which kept Denver off the scoreboard in the third quarter.

- And a decision by San Francisco coach Bill Walsh to go for a touchdown on 4th-and-2 in the second quarter that backfired when Roger Craig was stopped short of the goal line.

But it was the "snowball" play which will live on from a frigid evening in which the chill factor dipped below 10 degrees. With the Broncos leading. 14-3, the 49ers had a 4th-and-1 situation at the Denver 2. Having failed in a touchdown gamble earlier in the game, Walsh ordered a field goal. But just before the ball was snapped, the offending snowball came sailing out of the stands and landed just in front of holder Matt Cavanaugh. He bobbled the snap and the field goal try was botched.

"I saw the snowball," said Cavanaugh. "It broke my concentration. I'm not sure if I got the ball back up in time to kick it, but there must not have been time because Ray decided not to kick it."

Referee Jim Tunney saw the snowball being thrown, but said after the game there was little he could do.

What he did do was demand more security during the second

"Cooperation was excellent by security," said Tunney. "There were virtually no snowballs thrown during the second half.

'We had no recourse in terms of a foul or to call it on the home team or the fans. There's nothing in the rule book that allows us to do that.

"There is no way you can construe unsportsmanlike conduct on a snowball incident like that."

By the time the snowball incidem came along. Elway had thrown touchdown passes of 3 think we would have been where yards to Gene Lang and 6 yards to Watson while the 49ers had come up with a 26-yard field goal by Wersching.

The 49ers closed the deficit in the second half with a 13-yard touchdown throw from Joe Montana to Mike Wilson and a 22-yard field goal by Wersching. San Francisco later went ahead on Wersching's 45-yarder. Denver then moved to the winning field goal courtesy of the interference penalty on Hicks and the 22-yard throw from Elway to Watson.

KANSAS CITY. Mo. (UPI) -Pitcher Bret Saberhagen of the Kansas City Royals experienced the third or fourth greatest thrill of his young life Monday.

Saberhagen isn't quite sure where his winning the Cy Young Award Monday fits on his list of lifetime thrills — but he is sure it's not in the top two. It just can't compete with his becoming father on Oct. 26 and his winning a World Series on Oct.

STRATFORD. N.J. (UPI) -Philadelphia Flyers goaltender Pelle Lindbergh, who stopped flying pucks for a living and drove fast cars for fun. lay unconscious today as his family decided when to turn off the respirator keeping him alive.

Lindbergh, 26, was hooked up to the life-saving machine after his custom-built Porsche sped into the concrete steps of a school in suburban Philadelphia early Sunday. He was declared brain dead and given no hope of survival.

"The prognosis continues to be not compatible with life." Flyers team physician Edward Viner said Monday. "It really is a matter of how long the support system is continued. Brain death means if the respirator were turned off, he would die."

Officials at Kennedy Memorial Hospital. Stratford Division. scheduled a 10 a.m. news conference today to provide an update on Lindbergh's condition. Doctors said the all-star netminder was legally drunk when the accident occurred. His blood-alcohol level was 0.24 percent, more than twice the legal limit in New Jersey.

He was "a bubbly little guy bouncing around on the ice and fooling around in the locker room," said Flyers general manager Bobby Clarke, who played with Lindbergh in Philadelphia before being elevated to the front

His friends said Lindbergh enjoyed high performance cars and had his 1985 Porsche Turbo sent back to West Germany so it could be rebuilt to run faster. He also purchased a speed boat last year.

Lindergh's family was deciding when to switch off the respirator. They wanted to donate Lindbergh's organs, but were told by doctors that the transplants would have to be done within 48 hours.

His mother. Anna Lisa, was with her son at the hospital all day Monday. His father, who suffers serious heart problems. flew in from their native Sweden Monday evening.

Lindbergh's tragedy would provide a lesson for all. "Hopefully, something this tragedy will change some of us." said Clarke, who led the Flyers to a pair of Stanley Cups in the early 1970s. Lindbergh, who posted a 40-17-7 record in helping lead the Flyers to the Stanley Cup finals last year, last played for the Flyers Thursday. He was on the winning end of a 6-2 score that night, and was given a rest Saturday when the Flyers beat

THOUGHTS ELSEWHERE STRATFORD, N.J. (UPI) -

The Philadelphia Flyers' schedule called for the players to practice, but no one could blame them if their thoughts were elsewhere.

While the Flyers engaged in a short, solemn workout Monday at the Coliseum in Vorhees, N.J., their teammate, goalie Pelle Lindbergh, remained brain dead and connected to life-support equipment in a nearby hospital after a Sunday, morning car accident.

"Everyone's thoughts have been with him and with his family," said center Ron Sutter. "It was important that we were together.'

Philadelphia coach Mike Keenan, who is known for his organization and has the team's schedule planned for the entire season, said he also thinks it was good for the players to practice.

"I think it was very healthy," Keenan said.

And his protege? "Vance Hall can really play. His main problem is lack of aggressiveness. He's such a nice guy," Johnson said. "I like everything about him. He really has the talent. His vertical jump is one of the highest on the team. I don't think he knows how much talent he has.'

A talent which Johnson wants to blossom. "My job as a sophomore is to help Vance all I can.' Johnson continued. It's not all basketball, it's studying, too. I'm not on his case but I do stress to impressed with the collection of him what is important for him to do."

Johnson said he thinks more aggressiveness will come when Hall gets his feeling for the JuCo game. "When he goes up, there's nobody can block his shot without fouling him." Johnson said. "I had the fitterbugs myself last year. When Vance settles in. he'll get more aggressive toward

Dickerson Turned His Back On College Dollars

NEW YORK (UPI) - How many times have you heard money isn't everything? How many times have you laughed to yourself whenever you've heard that? This was one time I heard it and didn't

Not because Eric Dickerson, the man who was talking about it, is bigger than me. Or is among the rich and famous now.

The reason I believed what he was saying is because of something he told me three years ago. It concerned an enormous and tempting money offer in his teens that he turned his back on before he became a big football star at Southern Methodist and an even bigger one with the Los Angeles Rams.

Another reason I didn't laugh listening to Eric Dickerson after the Rams' loss Sunday to the New York Giants was because I realized that what he was talking about meant far more and was infinitely more important to him than mere dollars and Unquestionably. Dickerson is one of the NFL's premier players. For years, the Bears' Walter Payton was considered the league's No. 1 runner and there's certainly nothing wrong with the the kind of season he's having this year.

Still, whenever people talk about the top runner in professional football now the first name they usually mention is Dickerson's. That's not surprising since he broke O.J. Simpson's single-season record by rushing 2.105 yards last year, only his second in the

I remember the time in 1982, the year Herschel Walker won the the Heisman trophy, the Kodak film people bringing in two of the runnerups to New York in connection with their awards luncheon. John Elway and Dickerson were the two All-Americas they trotted out for the media.

Elway got most of the attention, almost all of it, in fact. He had just come off a spectacular season with Stanford, he was known to be an exceptionally good outfielder and everyone wanted to know whether he was going to play pro football or go with the Yankees.

Dickerson, who was at the same function, was almost ignored. He didn't seem to mind a bit, but for the benefit of those who wanted to know a little more about his background, he told how he had played high school football in Texas and how intensely he had been recruited.

He revealed all the college offers he had. some of them promising him sums of money that could easily turn a 19-year-old's head. But he rejected all of them to go to SMU, he

As things developed. Dickerson has made a greater impact on professional football than either Walker or Elway. The Rams originally signed him for something like $550,000 a year. He felt his performance with them over his first two years was worth more and he didn't report to them when they opened training this year.

He held out for 46 days, past the start of the regular season, and he wasn't sure what kind of reception he'd get from the rest of the Rams when he finally rejoined them on Sept. 15.

Rather naturally, he was a bit apprehensive about it. Acceptance by his fellow players meant everything to him. It was far more important to him than any money.

That's what he talked about after the game with the Giants.

"My players' acceptance of me," he answered immediately. "They showed me right away they had no animosity."

Dickerson laughed at the question.

"The whole thing happened very quickly after the club and I reached agreement." he said. "We had a game in Philadelphia and when I got on the plane with the rest of the guys all I had with me was a little bag.

They all saw it and started kidding me about it. 'Whadd'ya got in there, all your paychecks?' they asked me. They all made lokes about it and that made me feel good. What did I actually have in that bag? A comb. a shirt and shaving cream.' Dickerson laughed some more.

The Rams' players did something else to show how they felt about their recordbreaking running back who wears eye glasses when he plays.

A group of them took him out for dinner to a special restaurant in Los Angeles after they got back from the game with the Eagles.

"We all had a wonderful time welcoming back Eric," says linebacker Mike Wilcher, who was there along with Henry Ellard. Norwood Vann, David Hill, Kent Hill, Charlie DeJurnett, Doug Reed and Gary

And what did all these guys cat at this big happy reunion?

What else but soul food, of course.

The Rams' trainer and Eric Dickerson tend to an injured toe.

"The Refrigerator" Perry, the Chicago Bears' mammoth defensive lineman turned running back and receiver, is keeping his arm limber for Coach Mike Ditka.

Perry related a story of drinking 48 cans of beer after a game while at Clemson University.

"Well that was after a big were a freshman, you and your party like that."

Bennett: Win Wasn't Best Game

TAMPA (UPI) — Hoping for a strong finish to salvage his frustrating rookie season. Tampa Bay Coach Leeman Bennett said Monday the 1-9 Buccancers didn't necessarily play their best game of the year in beating St. Louis.

The Buccaneers broke into the win column Sunday with a 16-0 home victory over a Cardinal squad that couldn't overcome ir juries to All-Pro wide receiver Roy Green and star runner Ottis guys. ## 'Super' Feeling Returns For Pass-Happy Miami

MIAMI (UPI) - It was easy to figure out why Miami Coach Don Shula was feeling "Super"

The return of Mark Super Duper — he had his name legally changed last summer - to the Miami offense meant the return of the big play and led to the Dolphins' 21-17 win over the New York Jets.

With Duper on injured reserve for seven games with a hairline fracture of his left tibia and a hamstring injury, the Miami offense was noticeably lacking the big play as defenses sagged all over Mark Clayton.

Duper caught two Dan Marino passes for touchdowns - the second score a 50-yarder with 41 seconds left to win the game.

"Right now, I feel better about it than I have for some time," Shula said Monday at his weekly news conference. "It's just got (me) feeling so much better about everything. The fact that there was some offense, some big plays, which were missing.

The offense has been struggling. but there's just such an explosion with him in the lineup.

"It's been such a struggle trying to get things going." Shula sald. "Not having Duper in the lineup put all the pressure on Clayton.

Duper caught eight passes for a club-record 217 yards and two touchdowns in his first game since Sept. 15.

The Jets also had plenty of big plays on offense, rolling through the Miami defense for 491 yards.

"We made some glaring mistakes defensively." Shula said, "But we also made some big plays, and that's what it's coming to. You've got to make the big plays because with the new rules, you're going to get

In addition to the customer base charge, a sewage treatment fee of $1.65 per 1,000 gallons will be applied to all accounts. This, however, will be capped at a maximum charge of $21.80 (including base charge) for single • family dwellings.

Multiple dwelling charges will increase from $23.04 to $45.45 for 20,000 gallons used and for 36,000 gallons, the monthly rate will be 60.05, rather than the $32.37 presently charged.

Much of the project, including parking, landscaping, beach rehabilitation and many of its buildings, will be completed within six to eight months, according to Smith, who said the mall's 12,000 square feet of retail space will house shops and food outlets. Smith said he also plans to provide boat rental facilities.

According to Gross, the project will benefit not only residents and the lakefront, but also offerfinancial benefits to the city and its downtown merchants.

He cited additional tax revenues and said "the entire downtown area would feel the repercussions" of additional traffic generated by the project.

Gross also said safety conditions would be improved and "the rundown look of the lakefront" eradicated through the project's "aesthetic rehabilitation" of the site.

One safety measure cited by Smith was a narrowing of the lake access road currently located at the property. He said cutting its width by approximately half would slow traffic. although it could still serve as route for boat launchings. Cars with trailers could then park across the street at the city's municipal lot, he said.

He, in the past, has told me he wants to work with and help Sanford and asked if I could arrange a meeting between Mr. Faison, our new city manager, and himself to discuss economic development and/or any other service he might offer. It occurred to me the Yankee Lake site proposition was the perfect opportunity to bring Mr. Paulucci and Mr. Falson together.

I did indeed call Mr. Paulucci on Oct. 3, 1985. The important details surrounding that conversation are as follows:

Hooper also cited the purchase contract's calling for efforts to be taken to accommodate effluent from Sanford and Lake Mary. Regarding Sanford, he said and as far as he knew, the meeting between the county and city commissions "has yet to be cancelled, so I'm assuming it's still on."

The meeting, scheduled before the county purchased Yankee Lake and the city began its eminent domain proceeding, is slated for Dec. 18, five days after the condemnation action is heard in court.

DEAR ABBY: For several years a young woman (she's now 29) has been coming to my home to trim my three poodles. She would drive to our place in the country after work, so I paid her very well, adding a generous tip. I always had a lovely dinner for her and she enjoyed being with my husband and me. I'm 68, but the age difference didn't matter - we became good friends.

I was invited to her bridal shower. At first I hesitated, knowing all her friends were younger women, but I finally accepted, took an expensive gift and had a wonderful time.

Then came her wedding invitation. Written across the top - in her own hand - was: "Fifty dollars minimum for the gift, please." Abby, I nearly had a stroke! I could not believe it. I studied it for a week, then wrote her a note saying that her suggestion of a $50 minimum for a gift was the maximum in poor taste, and I would not be attending her wedding.

When she received my note, she called crying. "It was supposed to be a joke. I thought you had a better sense of humor!" Then she hung up on me.

A few days later she returned my shower gift by U.P.S., so I phoned her and told her I had and was sending it back to her. I also said I had discussed her invitation with several friends who all agreed it was in terrible taste. Again she said she thought I had a better sense of humor, and perhaps because I was in a different age group I took it wrong.

Abby, am I old-fashioned, behind the times and lacking in a sense of humor? Or have good taste and manners gone out of style?

POODLE LOVER

DEAR LOVER: Good manners and good taste have not gone out of style. You cannot be faulted for reacting as you did. The poodle groomer's so-called "joke" was tasteless and devoid of humor for any age group.

DEAR ABBY: I applaud "Katherine from Georgetown, Texas" for wanting to donate her organs after death. I find it hard to believe that no family given her that gift in good faith member or friend was willing to tial.

I am now 25 years old and can see. The gift of sight was the greatest gift I could have received from anyone, but it happened only because someone gave a part of himself to improve the life of a stranger.

Whatever excuses Katherine was given by family and friends for refusing to sign her donor form, I'm sure they would have felt differently if they had a loved one in need of an organ.

If Katherine still hasn't been able to find a witness to sign for her. I volunteer. I'm signing my name, but if this is printed, sign

American Weight Loss Center Uses No Drugs, No Contract

Hi. My name is Jill Gongwer and I am one of the nurses here at American Weight Loss Center in the Sanford Zayre Shopping Plaza, Airport Boulevard and Highway 17-92. I have lost 63 pounds on the program here and have about 40 pounds left to lose. It took me about three months to lose the 63 pounds, which have stayed off for about a year and a half. I am now working on the last 40. Keeping it off is a major part of any weight loss program.

America is one of the hardest places to lose weight and weight loss is one of the most frustrating and difficult situations we face. We are surrounded by food, our social activities revolve around it.

We are invited out to eat or we go to the movies and indulge in snacks. At parties, tables laden with delicacies scream out - "taste me." "try me" or "a little bit won't hurt, who will know."

We try to be strong and protest. "No. no. no. I'm going to lose some weight," but one thing leads to another and the first thing we know canapess smeared with cheese and liverwurst jump in our mouths, potato salad nestles shyly on the plate beneath a lettuce leaf and bean sprouts. and the yummy chocolate cream pie has worn down our resistence. Soon, we find ourselves guilt-ridden, wondering, "Why did I do it?"

We promise ourselves that tomorrow is going to be different. Tomorrow we will REALLY start to diet. But in the morning we snack on donuts while packing lunches and when serve hubby his hoteakes dripping with butter and syrup we fix a stack for ourselves. We absentmindedly munch as we watch TV, we cat leftover potato salad. roast beef, mashed potatoes, corn-on-the-cob and blueberry muffins. Once again, it's bedtime and we promise tomorrow we'll turn over a new leaf.

Don't keep putting it off. People right now are saying that they will wait until after the holidays (January), but if they start now they could be 30 or 40 pounds lighter by then.

People that are on the American Weight Loss Center program now may go up a couple of pounds on Thanksgiving and Christmas, but then it comes right off and they continue on their way down to their goal weight.

We know, only too well, what people go through that battle with weight, the broken promises, resolutions, the diets, devices, and pills, the prayers and the guilt, the rejections and

There really is a way to lose your extra weight. whether it's 20 pounds or 200 pounds, it doesn't matter. You really can reach your goal weight and feel so much better physically and mentally. These are the three of the most common questions that we are asked: "Are there any drugs on the program?"

"Do I have to sign a contract?"

• "Do I have to buy any special or prepacked

The answer is "no." The program is based on vitamins and minerals, you come for as long as you desire to come or until you reach your goal weight, and you cat normal food available in the grocery stores. We also have a free maintenance program to help you keep off the weight that you

Anyone is welcome to either come by or call for a free consultation at 323-6505. We will explain the program to you and answer any questions that you my have. Write your questions down so that you don't forget them.

Halley's Comet Comes Calling

William Harwood UPI Science Writer

Armchair astronomers with binoculars, patience and a clear night sky have an excellent opportunity this week to catch a glimpse of Halley's comet as it barrels toward the heart of the solar system.

On the nights of Nov. 14 through Nov. 17, the fabled comet should be dimly visible roughly in the same field of view through reasonably good binoculars as the easily located Pleiades star cluster in the constellation Taurus.

To find the Pleiades. face the castern horizon a few hours after sunset and look about halfway between the horizon and straight overhead. Scan the area for a tightly packed cluster of stars that resembles a tiny dipper — the Pleiades.

Carefully study the area around the cluster with binoculars, looking for a patch of fuzzy. diffuse light that does not form the pinpoint image of a star. That is Halley's comet.

Alan MacRobert. writing in the November edition of Sky & Telescope magazine, gives the following description of what observers can expect to

But Steve Edberg with NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., and a coordinator for amateur observations for the International Halley's Watch, said he had no problems locating the comet with binoculars on Nov. 7.

"It looks like your classic comet, or rather, your classic comet if you're an astronomer, sort of like a little puff ball in the sky," he said.

In December, the comet may become vislble to the naked eye. Still, it will not be an easy object to locate and dark sky is essen-

Coffee Linked To Heart Disease

 A study released Monday showed people who drink five or more cups of coffee a day are almost three times more likely to suffer heart disease, but the evidence is too weak to urge Americans to curtail their coffee habit. Scientists prominent in heart disease research said during presentation of the study that other investigations have turned up no link between heart disease and coffee consumption and that smoking is more dangerous. Dr. Lynn Rosenberg of Boston University School of Medicine said overall evidence was insufficient to support either the presence or absence of a link between heart disease and coffee drinking.

"I think people should stop smoking rather than coffee. which has been implicated in some it was published.

Regular Exercise Helps At Any Age

DEAR DR. GOTT - I'll be 62 anything to do with it? in August. I swim five days a week, one-and-a-half miles. I don't swim fast, just at a steady pace. I would like to know if, at my age, can a person overdo? I hope not, because I could swim longer!

DEAR READER - Brave for your continuing and regular exercise. Anybody can overdo strenuous exercise, but if you keep a steady pace and don't push yourself. I think you will experience only health benefits from your activity. If you feel you can swim longer distances. by all means do so. But work up. gradually and make sure you have qualified supervision until you become accustomed to the higher level of exertion.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I have a disease that has puzzled two ear. nose and throat specialists and two allergists. I have had septum surgery, with sinus windows. tubes in my ears and inner-ear surgery on one side. My soft palate has atrophled completely. so it is now like a cleft palate. My throat is partially paralyzed. My hearing is bad and I have a discoloration and rash all inside my mouth and on my lips.

I'm taking allergy shots again. What else can you think of that might help? This has been going on for 15 years and I'm now 62.

DEAR READER - Your case puzzles me, too. Maybe the chairman of the Otolaryngology Department at a major medical center could shed some light on your peculiar symptoms.

DEAR DR. GOTT - Please say something about yeast infection! About a year ago I got an infection under my thumbnail. Then I noticed funny white streaks going down almost all the other nalls, and they were very sensitive. I'm now on my second bottle of Lotromin and they are very much improved. When I asked the doctor what caused this yeast infection, he was very "iffy." What is it? How can it be prevented? I am an artist, but I'm am always careful to wash up after. Could this have

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Atlanta bridge professional Jim Kerkorian was on opening lead with the West cards of today's deal. It seemed strange to him that South, who could not act over one spade, could suddealy jump to four hearts when his partner, who had passed originally, made a belated takeout double. He decided that South's aggressive bid was based on strength in spades and that leading a spade would only help declarer. So he led the two of hearts.

That worked, Declarer ducked in dummy, and East won the king. East now returned the king of diamonds. Declarer won, drew a round of hearts and played the club king. East won the ace and played another diamond. Later. when South tried the spade finesse. West took the spade king and cashed the setting diamond trick.

Even though Kerkorian's K76 thinking was top-level, declarer | $\vec{\psi} 952 should still have prevailed | J 10 5 3 against the trump lead. After | $652 winning the diamond ace, he should have played a heart to dummy and then led the spade nine. If East does not cover, he lets it ride. If East does cover the nine with the 10 or jack, South's queen will lose to West's king. but later declarer can finesse again to his eight. He will thus establish a spade, on which he can jettison a small diamond from dummy.
