Jury set in drug house arson

WEST PALM BEACH — A jury has been seated in the amon trial of a man accused of setting fire to a house where dealers peddled drugs and addicts got high.

Sam Mohammed, 35, who has admitted to setting the blaze last September, grabbed national headlines as a vigilante arsonist. His case was featured on CBS' 60 Minutes.

Circuit Judge Roger Colton excused 15 of 40 prospective jurors who said they had read or watched news reports about Mohammed's case. From the rest of the pool, the lawyers on Tuesday picked a jury of three women and three men.

Mohammed's attorney, Sammy Berry, said it was difficult picking the jury. "We're looking for law and order jurors who are fed up with crime and understand the ramifications of a drug problem."

Berry said.

Eneriab faces fines

FORT LAUDERDALE - Enerfab Inc., a Cincinnati-based company which builds and refurbishes liquid tanks, has been cited for safety and health violations and faces $110,000 in penalties.

The U.S. Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration on Tuesday cited the company's Fort Pierce site for one willful violation involving confined space standards, resulting in a proposed penalty of $70,000.

Eight additional serious citations, most involving proper use of a mast climbing work platform, drew penalties of $5,000 each. The OSHA investigation began after a complaint from an employee. According to Jose Sanchez, OSHA's Fort Lauderdale area director, 20 employees are assigned to Fort Pierce.

Enerfab has 15 working days to contest OSHA's citations and proposed penalties.

Book, OCSO split over gays

ORL'ANDO - Outspoken televangelist John Butler Book will no longer serve as the sheriff's office volunteer chapiain because of his criticism of homosexuals.

Book, a longtime supporter of Orange County Sheriff Kevin Beary, recently argued that the department violated its own policy by allowing a patrol car and deputy to be part of a gay-pride parade in downtown Orlando.

Book called the parade a political event, and said the sheriff was quietly reversing his stand on gay rights.

Beary responded by sending the preacher a letter, telling Book his public stand against homosexuals means he can no longer be a counselor for deputies and their families.

Those who work with the sheriff's office must serve all people and not show bias against any group, sheriff's spokesman Steve Jones said.

"If they had a Jewish parade, the sheriff would be involved even though he's a Christian," Jones said Monday in Beary's absence. "He's not endorsing the parade. . . The sheriff is the sheriff for all people."

Book said he had been so dismayed by the handling of the gay-pride parade that he sent the sheriff's department a letter of resignation before Beary told him to step down.

Charter schools ready

by Jackie Hallifax Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Several dozen groups are working on proposals to open charter schools, but only a handful are in good position to start teaching children this fall.

"Three to six is the conservative number," Tracy Bailey, a former national teacher of the year who now coordinates education reform for the state Department of Education, said Tuesday. "There are three that are all over except for the shouting."

Students getting bad grades in the Panhandle, youngsters who have a hard time paying attention in Central Florida, and children in a black urban neighborhood near Miami will likely be among the first to experience this new type of school.

"I think it's pretty solid," said Jim Boggs, president of the Pensacola Instructional Academy, which expects to have a charter school enrolling 150 high school students in Escamble County next month.

There is also a proposal to open an elementary school for children with learning disabilities, including attention deficit disorder, in Polk County and a middle school for students with academic problems in Occeola County.

Jeb Bush, former Republican gubernatorial candidate, said Tuesday he was "cautiously optimistic" about his plan to open an elementary school in Liberty City, north of Miami, for 60 children in kindergarten through second grade. The Dade County School Board plans to vote on a contract next week pending board approval of the project application. It is a joint venture of the Urban League of Greater Miami and the Foundation for Florida's Future, a group Bush started after he Systems, a Fort Lauderdale, Pla.-based day care company, has agreed to pay the federal government $220,000 and limit the claims it makes in promoting its franchises to prospective buyers.

The Federal Trade Commission announced the settlement Monday of a suit accusing Tutor Time Child Care Systems of violating federal laws on franchise marketing. Tutor Time has sold more than 200 day care center franchises in at least 21 states and reported 1994 sales of about $3 million. the FTC said. It said buyers pay a $27,000 fee to the company. Other fees and expenses bring the initial cost to at least $150,000.

The PTC lawauit said Tutti Time made fatte claims to franchisees and its own public carnings claims.

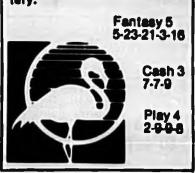

The company also failed to disclose the fact that one of its owners was "subject to a restrictive order resulting from an earlier law-enforcement action." the FTC said. Neither the court documents nor an FTC staff member provided details of that allegation.

The settlement, filed in San Francisco federal court and awaiting a judge's approval, does not contain any admission of wrongdoing. But the document, signed by company officials. describes the $220,000 payment as a civil penalty.

The settlement prohibits the company from misrepresenting the prospects of franchise-holders' day care centers, and also includes a five-year ban on gag orders.

Don't throw tax $ at stadium

In a similar manner, it would be great if Crystal Lake in Lake Mary would once again become the family fun and swimming center of that area. It used to be back in the 1950s.

Or perhaps we might wish to see trolly cars in downtown Sanford again, or a beach along Lake Monroe rather than a seawall.

But we must fact facts. Even though there is much to be said about historic preservation, there are just some things which cannot be done without a large-scale use of taxpayer money.

In this light, we agree with some of the discussion at a recent Sanford City Commission workshop, that rebuilding the old memorial stadium not be undertaken without a professionally done study regarding the overall cost.

There should be little doubt having a fine baseball stadium in Sanford would increase baseball and softball sports in the com-munity. But the only difference between this structure and others is that it is an enclosed area, with a covered grandstand.

We can't say this is the only possible ball field in the area.

Lake Mary's sports complex has a number of outstanding ball fields which are seeing continuous usage. The only difference is that they have bleachers rather than a grand-

We strongly urge an extensive study of the Sanford stadium. Just a glance at some of the structural stept and other construction problems at the stadium should get people

What would be needed to bring the old adium back into not only full-use status, but full-eafety condition? How much would it really cost? Would the investment in refurbishing be worth whatever return may result?

We have mixed emotions over the suggestion that the stadium be repaired. On one side, it would be nice to have it back into it's former state and put into full use once again. It is a historic landmark (44 years), and a structure remembered with fond memories of

But there must be a limit on how much tax money should be spent to repair something which may be in as bad condition as this particular structure.

Let's look before we leap. Check into the true need of repairs first, even if it costs several thousand dollars. It will be much better than wasting several thousand dollars if the project is attacked without extensive

Don't dismiss the Libertarians

What do John Quincy Adams, William Har-rison, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore and Andrew Johnson have in common? All were elected president and none of these six men were members of either the Democratic or Republican party.

At least four presidential aspirants hope to add their name to this list: Billionaire populist Ross Perot and former Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm are vying for the nomination of the Reform Party. Crusading consumerist Ralph Nader is expected to be the standardbearer for the nascent Green Party.

And the most serious of all these third-party candidates is author-turned-politician Harry Browne, who tops the ticket for the Libertarian

Perot and Lamm and Nader deserve to be lumped together, despite their differing views on the issues, because their campaigns are ephemeral. They are not offering the electorate a real alternative to the parties of Bill Clinton and Bob Dole, but are simply hoping to focus public attention on their personal agencies.

Browne is different because the 25-year-old Libertarian Party is here to stay. It is the first third party in American history that has man-aged to appear on all 50 state ballots two presidential elections in a row. And not only are Libertarians vying for the highest office in the land, but they're also running for more than 1,000 other state and local offices around the country.

The Libertarian Party is determined to have a meaningful and lasting influence on the American po-litical system. And while candidate Browne hardly ex-pects to best Clinton or Dole at the polls. he hopes to win enough votes to make the Libertarians a viable third of course, the two major parties couldn't be less concerned about the Libertariana.

Indeed, in his acceptance speech at the Libertarian Party convention earlier this month

Browne is dif-ferent because the 25-year-old Libertarian Party is here to stay g

(which C-SPAN brought to millions of viewers), Browne posed a question that would never be uttered by candidates Clinton or Dole. "Would you be willing to give up your favorite government programs if it meant you would never again have to pay income tax?"

That's right. While the Republicans and (less so) Democrats promise to slow the growth in certain government programs, and to "flatter".

so) Democrats promise to slow the growth in certain government programs, and to "flatten" the tax system somewhat, Browne and the Libertarians aim to "get the federal government out of everything not specified in the Constitution." That would enable the party to deliver "huge tax cuts now, huge spending cuts now, (and) a balanced budget now."

The Libertarians believe that the only way to save the federal government is to strip it bare. Indeed, says Browne, "Government has failed. Government reforms have failed. Government politicians have failed. Government doesn't

To Republican and Democratic party in-crementalists, the Libertarians sound like political revolutionaries. But that's precisely the point, says Browne. To return to the same philosophy of governance that this nation's founders fought and died for.

Olympics and Mr. Negative

Negativity. You find it everywhere. I found it at a fast food restaurant in Lake Mary recently. I was there with my kide waiting for the Olympic torch to go by. There were some very enthusiastic people there. One woman was talking about what a great thrill she had just watching the torch go around Lake Eola on TV. She was overjoyed at the prospect of getting to see it in person. So was I. Negativity. You find it everywhere. I found was I.

An older gentleman sitting at a table nearby said, 'I don't care what you say , it's the biggest joke I've ever seen. And we're paying for it twice. What the Olympics don't make, they get from the cities, the counties, the states and the federal government. Our tax money. And half those people who win the gold medal will be on cocaine next year.

Sour grapes? Not enough bran in your diet? I don't know why you said what you said Mr. Negative. But it certainly wasn't because you were working with any facts about the matter. I'm assuming you're a resident of Seminole County. After all, you may not know this, but netther. I these-cities is an Olympic site. There's actually not an Olympic site in all of Seminole County. So that means Seminole Seminole County. So that means Seminole County is not obligated for a dime. Hene of the cities in Seminole are either. Yes, the city of Orlando and Orange County are obligated to make up any shortfall from the occer games. But according to Chuck Row at the Citrus Bowl, there is a reasonable chance the Olympics will end up paying for itself. The torch run doubled the daily ticket sales. So the City of Orlando and Orange County may not have any monetary obligation at all. If they do, that money will come from resort tasses. Certainly none of it will come out of your pocket.

The State of Florida did give the Olympics a $500,000 grant for security. But I expect they'll make that back up sales and gas tax by the added number of visitors the Olympics will bring. Not just because of the soccer games in Orlando, but because of the other venues in Savannah and Atlanta. Atlanta is estimating 2 million people to pass through the city for the games. The Orlando and Orange County Convention and Visitors Bureau doesn't have a clue how many people the games will bring to the area and ien't willing to estimate how many people will come; but a lot of people I've talked to in the touriem industry new we'll people will come; but a lot of people I've talked to in the tourism industry say we'll be getting a lot of Olympic tourists from Atlanta and not just from the soccer. Atlanta may seem like a long way off to us, but when you've crossed the ocean to get somewhere, a few extra hours to get to Dieney World ien't that much.

Let's estimate we get 250,000 extra tourists. One-fourth of them drive. Conservatively, from the Florida/Georgia border and back--that's about 16 gallons of gas they'll buy in the state. That equates to $125,000 in gas taxes. Let's say just half of them buy a $15 T-shirt as a souvenir. That's an additional $112,500 in sales taxes. We're an additional $112,500 in sales taxes. We're being conservative, so we'll say each person only eats 4 meals in Florida, each costing only $5. That's another $300,000 in sales taxes. So far that's $637,500 in tax money the state has collected and we haven't included taxes on hotel bills and taxes on attraction tickets. And if each of those tourists bought just one attraction ticket, that's easily another $500,000. Conservatively speaking, the state will double the return on their investment. So, arain, there's no money orming out of Mr. again, there's no money orming out of Mr. Negative's pocket.
The federal government does technically apend money on the Olympics, but it doesn't cost us any more than their day-to-day operations. You see, although some other countries' government support their athletes, our government doesn't. Whatever money our athletes get for their training and money our athletes get for their training and support comes from their parents, private organizations and sponsors. The federal government is sending people from the Department of Defense to Atlanta to help with security. But, farmy thing about government employees, we have to pay them whether they're in Atlanta working the Olympics, in Tunns doing field coursess or

I can't tell you what the gold medalists from this year's games will be doing next year. But I can tell you about some of the past gold medalists. Remember Mark Spitz. lie did pretty good after the Olympics didn't he? One of the gold medals he won was in the 20400 relay. His partner in the relay was Find, Tylus, Find is the sum could far Lake Mary High School. An inspiration to all of his students, Fred was one of the many Floridians chosen to be part of the torch run.

Jeff Turner and John Koncac are doing pretty good. They were both gold medalists in basketball during their college days, before the pros were allowed to compete. Mary Lou Retion is happily married with a young son and a good career. The only time gold medalist Johnny Weismuller had a gold medalist Johnny Weismuller had a monkey on his back, was a real one named Cheeta when he was playing Tarson. I think you could say he turned out all right. If you get the July 18th edition of People Magazine, you'll find out about other medalists who aren't on comine. 1884 gold medalist Nancy Hogshead is in her last year of law achool at Georgetown University; 1984 gold medalist Rowdy Gaines will be an Olympic commentator for NBC; 1988 gold medalist Dick Fosbury is an engineer and surveyor in Idaho. 1984 gold medalist and surveyor in Idaho. 1964 gold medalist Billy Mills, the subject of the 1963 movie Billy Mills, the subject of the 1963 movie 'Running Brave', is retired from the insurance business and spends all his time speaking to Indian youths and raising money for charities. 1968 gold medalist Bob Beamon, whose Olympic record long jump still stands, has spent his life helping inner-city children. 1964 and 1968 gold medalist Wyomis Tyus is a naturalist at an outdoor education camp in California.

Maybe the truth about Mr. Negative is his attitude. He sees young, healthy athletes and he is jealous. He wants to be them, but can't; so his jealousy turns to bitterness. I see the young, healthy athletes and feel pride. Pride in my nation for producing such people who have sacrificed so much just for ple who have sacrificed so much just for the privilege of representing my country at the Olympics. Part of their victories and the privilege of representing my country at the Olympics. Part of their victories and their loss belong to the people of this country...to me. I remember when akater Dan Jansen fell during his race after his sister died. I felt part of his pain and I cried with him. How sweet the victory was at the next winter Olympics when he won the same race and proudly carried the infant daughter he had named after his sister on a victory lan around the toe. I cried again but victory lap around the ice. I cried again, but this time they were tears of joy. Unlike Mr. Negative, I do not begrudge the victories of those who have worked hard and long for them. And I do not belittle them. Even in defeat. Olympic athletes have proven themselves to be worthy of our admiration. Who can forget the Chinese gymnast who finished his routine despite a broken leg because not to finish would have lowered his team's score? Or the British runner, who, with the help of his father, still crossed the finish line in pain from a pulled hemstring?

I was upset with Mr. Negative for awhile, because he tried to steal the joy from those around him. But the joy could not be stolen. We all happily stood by the side of the road and cheered and waved when the torch passed by. I didn't see Mr. Negative outside when the torch passed. I was giad the dark cloud that he is wasn't there; but I felt serry for him too. Borry that he would never know what it's like to stand shoulder to shoulder, with strangers and share a common jey.

Bob and Liddy: today's twofer

If you plan to vote Republican this fall, it is beginning to look as if you'll be getting two for the price of one.

Isn't that an interesting turn of events? Remember how Bill Clinton got rossted for saying Hillary was a full partner and that a vote for him was a twofer?

Now it appears that Bob Dole's wife Elizabeth has begun to take charge of his "message," meaning she is telling him what to say and how to say it. Personally, I have no quarrel with strong husband-wife teams, but I am intrigued by the irony trigued by the irony and am curious to right handles this turn of events. Elizabeth's move to mold Bob's message came in the a recent "unity" luncheon with the candidate and his former primary foes. Dole For the rest of had been floundering in the polls and had just experienced a hellacious spell of gaffee and his cam-pages and his cam-paign handlers were desperate for ideas on how to discipline him. So everybody more or less agreed that Dole should henceforth speak only in "message modules." He will eachew the media, make no more sarcastic remarks, utter no more jokes that are comprehensible only to those who live inside the Beltway.

One official present told the Washington Post that from now on, Dole would "focus on three broad themes: more economic opportunity, smaller government and stronger.

That luncheon powwow occurred at midday, on July 16.

midday, on July 16.

On the evening of July 16, Bob and Elizabeth went on CNN's "Larry King Live," and the host, famed for his fearless, probing interrogations of the powerful, posed the daunting question: "What messages do you feel you haven't gotten across?"

Elizabeth answered: "The message is very strong. I think it's more opportunities, it's amaller government, it's stronger and safer.

smaller government, it's stronger and safer families. Larry, if you wanted to just sum it

For the rest of the interview, Bob took his cues from Elizabeth. She cut him off and changed the subject when he started to meander. She touched his arm or squeezed his shoulder when he tried to get off one of his humorous lines.

Again, I say that I personally find such exchanges endearing. I believe this is what husbands and wives are supposed to do—help each other. But can't you see the boys in the backroom who think Elisabeth ought to be home swabbing floors and sticking cloves in baked hams? They must be chomping their class in frustration: There sees the their cigars in frustration: There goes the Hillary issue.

I think it is about time somebody started managing Bob Dole. He is the classic, old-time pol who would rather shake hands and rub elbows than do photo ops. He is given to ornery one-liners. He says things that are easily misconstrued — for example, that the head of the NAACP invited him to speak to the group in an effort "to set me up." He is so stubborn, that when he says something stubborn that when he says something stupid - for example, that tobacco may not be addictive - he clings to it like a drowning rat to a piling.

If only Elizabeth can now summon the If only Elizabeth can now summon the wherewithal to tell the rabid elements of the Republican Party to shut their yaps, her husband might yet make it an interesting race. With his natural flaws, Dole is toting a heavy load. It cannot help to have the gun nuts and anti-shortion sealots, with whom his party has easily aligned itself, acrosming about every more he makes.

Vatican: 'Prenatal adoption' OK to save frozen embryos

Dy BRIAN MURPHY Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY - Threading through the sensitive ethics raised by fertility technology, the Vatican is suggesting 'prenatal adoptions" as a "last resort" to save frozen embryos destined for destruction.

The quandary for the Roman Catholic church is this: It is appalled at British fertilization clinics' plans to destroy frozen human embryos, but also holds that the only way to procreate is intercourse by a married couple.

Thousands of embryos products of in vitro fertilization are in cold storage around the world. In Britain, where the law stipulates that such embryos can be stored only five years without special consent, an estimated 6,000 embryos are expected to be destroyed next

In the Vatican newspaper techniques.

L'Osservatore Romano, the Rev. Maurizio Faggioni on Tuesday called the destruction of frozen embryos "a prenatal slaughter" in which "tens of thousands of innocent lives will be legally cut short."

"The solution ... to rescue embryos abandoned to certain death has the merit of seriously considering the value of a life so fragile as the embryos," the theologian wrote.

Faggioni said only married couples should consider "adopting" an embryo and could consider it akin to "taking in an orphan or abandoned

"This would be treated as prenatal adoptions." Faggioni

The proposal — which has not been publicly discussed by Pope John Paul II or any high Vatican official - would mark a new direction for the church in dealing with advances in fertility

In a sign of the article's weight, however, the Vatican took the unusual step of distributing it separately to journalists before the newspaper was published.

In the past, the pope has de-nounced in vitro fertilisation and hormonal treatments on post-menopausal women seek-ing to become pregnant. He has also called for an end to the production of frozen embryos, equating the destruction of surplus embryos to abortion.

Faggioni touched on a range of theological and social consequences from so-called test tube babies and transplanting embryos, including separating conception from sex and the possibility of charging infertile women high prices for embryos.

"In the case of frozen embryos, we have a strong example of the inextricable labyrinth in which science imprisons us," he

Housing starts up last month led by single-family homes

Dy JOHN D. McCLAM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Housing starts rose 1.3 percent in June as builders rushed to meet consumer demand despite the highest mortgage rates in more than a year. Single-family con-struction hit a two-year high.

Regionally, activity was mixed, with starts increasing in the South and West and declining in the Northeast and Midwest.

The Commerce Department said today construction of new homes and apartments totaled 1.48 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up from a revised 1.46 million in May. The May total initially was estimated at 1.43 million.

Analysts had expected construction to edge up to just a 1.45 million rate in June.

Starts have bounced up and down in recent months as builders attempted to gauge the market in the face of rising fi-nancing costs. They had risen 5 percent in April, to a 1.51 million rate.

Welfare reform

WASHINGTON - Three-quarters of the Senate joined in passing a welfare bill that would end six decades of federal promises to assist the poor, but President Clinton says more work is needed to develop a measure he supports.

Republican leaders, however, said the Senate had produced what the American public wants.

This is a bill that will end the limitless cash benefits that we've been dealing with," Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said just before the 74-24 vote Tuesday, "And it will end welfare as a ... way of life."

Clinton, who vowed during the 1992 campaign to "end welfare as we know it," praised some changes senators made to accommodate White House concerns, but indicated they would not guarantee his signature.

Storing used nuclear fuel

WASHINGTON - Used nuclear fuel now stored at more than 100 reactors from Maine to California must become the Energy Department's responsibility in 18 months, a federal appeals court says.

The department does not expect to have a permanent storage site for the spent fuel until at least 2010, and the court's decision Tuesday essentially forces the government to find a temporary repository, a requirement certain to spark a political battle over where to locate it.

Legislation is pending in Congress to establish a temporary storage facility near Nevada's Yucca Mountain, but the effort is vigorously opposed by that state's two senators. The Senate has scheduled a vote Thursday to restrict debate on the bill and clear the way for its passage.

The nuclear refuse will remain deadly with radiation for more than 10,000 years, and the special cooling pools of water currently used to store the spent fuel are reaching their ca-

The right to pray in school

Conservatives urge amendment to reaffirm religious freedom

By CASSAMDRA BURRELL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - A constitutional amendment is needed to reaffirm guarantees of religious liberty because stu-dents are routinely denied the right to hold religious meetings on public school campuses, a conservative group says.

A Republican amendment clarifying students' right "to pray without government sponsorship or compulsion" would help fight misperceptions that have fostered hostility toward religion, Jay Alan Sekulow, chief counsel for the American Center for Law and Justice, told a House panel Tuesday.

Religious people must be allowed to express themselves and worship without threat of government interference or intolerance." he said. "Religious people must be allowed to proclaim their faith in the public square, their own private busi-nesses or where they go to school."

But opponents said the last thing religious Americans need now is a revised First Amendment. Education is the answer. the Rev. Oliver S. Thomas, special counsel for the National Council of Churches, told the House Judiciary constitution subcommittee.

"The amendment before you is fraught with problems." Thomas said. "So much so that to pass this measure would diminish — not expand — the exercise of religious faith."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., accused Congress' Republican majority of being too quick to tinker with the Constitution.

"Right now students can pray in class, can read Bibles in school, can say grace before meals, can pray before tests and. of course, can study religion," he said. "Schools aren't looking for help with religion. They're looking for help with funding and safety. That's how Congress can help.

The proposed amendment, sponsored by Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-III., and House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, seeks to clarify the role of religion in public life.

"Our problem is not with the Constitution itself, but with courts that interpret the First Amendment in a way that undermines rather than protects religious freedom." Hyde said. As examples, he cited "public school teachers who accept reports on witches, forbid students from writing reports on Jesus.

Hyde said the Housing and Urban Development Department once asked a religious group to change the name of its homeless shelter, the St. Vincent de Paul Shelter, because it received federal money for blankets and "This is simply madness," he said. "And it is madness that is eroding the foundations of American democracy.'

But Thomas said requiring equal treatment and prohibiting discrimination based on religion could take away some of the exemptions religions enjoy today, he said. Conscientious objectors could be required to serve in combat, for instance, he

'A guarantee of equal benefits could easily be interpreted to include education. The result would be the largest unfunded mandate in history," he said. Religious colleges could be eligible for the same government funding state colleges receive, he

"It is no secret that many of the proponents of this amendment would try to use it to obtain public funds to send their children to private religious schools," Thomas said.

USA women win gymnastics gold

ATLANTA - The Olympic Games may be over for Kerri Strug.

That's OK, though. Her courage is unquestioned, her legacy is assured, and she's already got her gold medal.

On Tuesday, the American gymnast provided what certainly will be one of the defining moments of the Atlanta Games, the kind of poignant performance they'll be replaying years from now in a Bud.

Greenspan-like documentary, long after everyone has forgotten all the transportation problems and technological glitches.

Her left ankle throbbing, her team holding a tenuous lead over the Russians, Strug summoned every bit of inner fortitude for a final sprint down the runway, a final spin over the vault. When she landed, the pain was intense, but she could still manage a smile after helping the Americans win their first women's team

College football title game a reality

By MANK KURE Jr. AP Sports Writer

A true college football championehip game was born Tuesday when the Rose Bowl joined a bowl alliance and ABC announced a four-year plan to televise the title game beginning after the 1998

ABC Sports and four conferences announced the formation of a "super alliance" that brings the oldest of the bowl games, the Rose Bowl, together with the bowl alliance in a system that guarantees a championship game for the next four years.

Beginning with the 1998 season, the champion will be decided from among the six major conference champions and two at-large selections. The conferences are the ACC, Big East, SEC, Big 12, all from the bowl alliance, and the Pac-10 and Big Ten, until now bound by contract to send their champions to the Rose Bowl.

The at-large selections leave room for Notre Dame, a regular among the nation's elite teams and member of the existing alliance. and another team, or two other teams in seasons when the Fighting Irish don't qualify.

Roy Kramer, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference and a key architect in the plan, said the polls produced by the AP and CNN-USA Today will probably still play a role in determining the No. 1 vs. No. 2 matchup.

So far, only the Rose Bowl is assured a spot in the mix, with the other bowls to be determined. □Goo Pootball, Page 28 medal was on the line." Over at the pool, the Americans have removed any drama from the swimming events.

Expected to struggle, the United States has left everyone in its wake. The Tuesday medal haul was the best yet — three golds, one silver and one bronze. And the total of seven golds, eight silvers and two bronzes is a major reason the Americans lead the overall medal chart.

After four days of competition, the United States led with 24 medals (9 gold, 12 silver, 3 bronse), followed by Russia's 16 (9-5-2) and Germany's 15 (0-6-8).

Today, the Dream Team returns to the court for its toughest game yet against Lithuania, while Janet Evans swims a qualifying race in the 800 freestyle, an event that provides her last chance to equal Bonnie Blair's record of five gold medical by a U.S. woman.

At the medal ceremony. Karolyi scooped up Strug in his big, beefy arms and put her on the highest rung of the medal platform with her teammates.

No member of the American team is over age 19, which was only appropriate on a day ruled by the kids. Fourteen-year-old swimmer Amenda Beard won her second aliver of the games in the 200-meter breaststroke and a 17-year-old Kim Rhode captured a shooting gold in Salad: Plenty of pasta-bilities!

I have always been firm in my conviction that I hate pasts salade. Bowle of them turn up in large numbers at summertime picnics and potlucks — the poor, limp noodles drowning in mayonnaise or bottled salad dressing and tasting like last week's leftovers. Potato salad, I like (although there are a lot of really bad potato salads out there). Rice salad, I love, espe-cially when it's made with wild cially when it's made with wild rice. But pasts saled? Yuck.

So when I challenged Chef Kenny Guerrier of the New England Culinary Institute in Essex. Vt., to find me a pasts saled I could be proud of, he set one of his students longe in the one of his students loose in the kitchen. The student, Dave Pedersen, came up with a refreshing shrimp and pasta salad with a tequila-lime vinaigrette that I would welcome at ANY picnic or potluck. Pedersen's salad is everything that the others are not: crisp and tasty, not to mention mayonnaise-less. You could serve this dish as a first course on a summer evening, or as a full lunch or light dinner. A saled and some sorbet (wouldn't lemon or lime be nice?) could top off this meal perfectly.

Another other pasts saled that I have grown to love is from Giuliano Hasan's incom 'Classic Pasta Cookbook." which should have a prominent place on every pasta-lover's bookshelves. I find it significant that Hazan only includes one recipe or a pasta salad in this collection of 100-plus recipes; perhaps he shares my antipathy to the genre? But this one recipe — which he credits to his wile.

Polly — is a great one.

Sherri Eldridge, author of a seasonal series of new England cookbooks, also picked only one pasta salad for her "Coastal New England Summertime Cooking" volume. Again you'll find crisp colors and flavors and great taste. So now I find that, when it comes to pasta salad, I have to eat my words. And I would, too. Except my mouth is full.

LINGUINE SHRIMP AND GRILLED SHRIMP

2 tablespoons rice wine

1/2 cup fresh lime juice

1/4 cup tequila 2 tablespoons minced shallots 1 tablespoon freshly minced motor running, slowly drizzle in the oil until an emulsion is formed. Season with salt and pepper. If making one hour ahead, leave at room temperature. If making a day ahead, cover and refrigerate and bring to room temperature, before us-

Prepare the shrimp: Peel and devein shrimp. Brush lightly with olive oil, season with salt and pepper. Cook, turning, over hot coals on a grill or in a dry (unofied) saute pan until pink, which will take only a few minutes. Do not overcook, as shrimp will become rubbery.

Drain. Lay pasts on a baking sheet or jelly-roll pan to cool, and coat with a light layer of olive oil to prevent sticking.

To assemble salad: Toss the tomatoes, peppers and scallions with the pasta and enough vinaigrette to lightly coat and to flavor the pasta. Season with salt and pepper.

Divide pasta (tossed with tomatoes and peppers) among four plates. Toss shrimp with vinaigrette to lightly cost and place 5 to 6 shrimp one sale plate, around the pasta. Sprinkle with minced clientro.

Childless woman celebrates chance to help others' kids loge, pursued careers, traveled to eastic places and get involved in our communities. Some of us get mar-ried, and some of us even raised our husband's children from a failed first marriage. Overall, we've had a great half-century.

I know I owe much of my happy state to the adults — aunts, uncles, cousins, friends of my parents, teachers — who took an interest in me when I was growing up. My immediate family verged on the dysfunctional, but these other wonderful, caring people provided the shelter, laughter and inspiration that my parents couldn't give me. I've tried to return the favor to nephews and nieces, and the children of my friends and neighbors. In this day and age, an empty womb is not a tragedy — it just means that you have the time and good fortune to make a difference in someone else's life. It's time for childless people to toes those tear-stained pillows away, go to the nearest school, and offer to tutor or help a disadvantaged child.

tion can you give me on sugar allergy? Several local physicians say it is impossible to have one, but after esting sugar, my ordinarily quiet hus-band becomes mean and violent. One doctor indicated it was psychological.

DEAR READER: A few years ago, sugar allergy was considered to be the reason why some children became over-excited (and some adults exhibited aggressive behavior) after consuming sugar.

However, in the past 10 years, several medical studies have proven that sugar allergy doesn't exist: The strange behavior was found to have other causes, such as emotional instability or attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder.

It is possible that a periodic high intake of sugar may osuse your hus-band to be irritable, but such a reaction is more likely caused by a metabolic imbalance than an allergy.

For example, diabetic patients don't burn sugar as efficiently as do non-diabetics; therefore, an elevated blood sugar will lead to dehydration and aci-dosis, both of which can alter behavior. Or, as one of your physicians suggested, your husband's violent behavior may simply have a psychological cause.

In any case, your spouse needs a thorough examination and blood tests to identify a hidden metabolic abnormality, such as diabetes or hypoglycemia. If the testing is negative, he probably could be helped by counseling. While this difficult situation is being sorted out, try to persuade your husband to forego sugar products.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had muscle spasms in my back for years. I've had many physicals, and local doctors cannot tell me what causes this. I see a chiropractor once a week. Any suggestions for me?

DEAR READER: Muscle spasm is a common cause of back pain and can result from arthritis, heavy lifting. prolonged inactivity, stress, and a host of other factors.

If your physicians have tested you - with X-rays - and found that you don't have a physical abnormality, such as a herniated disc, I believe that you could be helped by special strengthening/stretching exercises that your doctor can show you. Or you can give the chiropractor a chance and follow his instructions for a few condition and usually can be controlled or eliminated by daily exercises. However, before assuming that back pain is harmless, patients must first be tested to make sure that a serious cause (that must be aggressively treated) is not to blame. Your doctor can advise you. DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 74 and scheduled for my first sigmoidoscopy. I've heard horror stories about how painful the procedure is. I also have

DEAR READER: During office sig-oidoscopy, the doctor inserts a flexible fiberoptic tube up into the rectum to identify cancer or pre-cancerous lesions. The procedure is not affected by hemorrhoids or vice versa. Nonetheless, it is unpleasant, as the physician manipulates the sigmoido-scope around the twists and turns of the lower colon. If the procedure is properly performed, it should not be particularly painful, however.

I believe that your apprehension is unjustified, although understandable. No one relishes having a tube used in this manner, but the potential benefits are substantial.

Ask your physician to explain the details of sigmoidoscopy; perhaps this will allay your anxiety.

This isn't child's play

By Phillip Alder

Perhaps your local PBS station is showing a Britcom called "2.4 Children." It centers on the tribulations of a feisty wife whose husband is a plumber. They have two difficult teenage children, and are always in fi-nancial trouble. It is reasonably funny, but I still cannot imagine the wife fancying this particular husband. It's nothing personal, but he just doesn't seem to be her type.

In today's deal, South overlooked a small percentage improvement in his line of play. And, of course, as the deal is seeing the light of day, he paid for his error.

Playing in three no-trump, South re-ceived a low-diamond lead to East's queen and his king. How should he have continued?

South saw only one chance to make his contract. At trick two, he led a heart to dummy's ace. Then he finessed the spade queen. However, West grabbed the trick with his king and cashed four diamond tricks to defeat the contract.

"Why do my finesses never win?" grumbled South. But North was unsympathetic.

"True, the contract did appear to depend on the spade finesse. However, there was a small extra chance. At trick two, you should have cashed the club ace. Here, the 2.4 percent chance comes home when the king flutters down. Then, as you have the necessary communications, you can immediately claim 10 tricks: one spade, three hearts, one diamond and five clubs."

Despite feeling embarrassed that he hadn't thought of this, South recovered his composure quickly enough to ask, "How do you know it is 2.4 percent?"
