Guide Tells You Who's Got Pull

It is a sad fact, privately admitted by most first-rate dentists, that in hundreds of offices across the country there are dentists who are a disgrace to their profession, and a tragedy for their patients (or victims).

In the past several years the practice of dentistry has been virtually revolutionized. Radically new equipment and instruments, a great increase in scientific knowledge and understanding, and the teaching of new procedures make it possible today to save all but a small percentage of the teeth that would have been routinely extracted not too many years ago.

But not all dentists, by any means, practice that kind of dentistry. There are 117,775 dentists in the United States—based on available evidence, it can be conservatively estimated that at least 15 per cent are incompetent, dishonest or both. Some have set the figure as high as 50 per cent," says "A Shopper's Guide to Dentistry," just issued by the office of Herbert S. Denenberg, Pennsylvania Insurance Commissioner.

Denenberg, who's attracted wide attention with a series of shopper's guides on various types of insurance, and health care problems, views "the incompetent and dishonest" as a comparatively small minority. The patient's problem, he says, is knowing whether he's in the hands of a member of that minority.

For, he complains, the profession itself isn't of much help in this respect. "Dentists are sworn to be kind to each other, not to the patient." A section of the principles of ethics of the American Dental Association, quoted, prohibits members from "referring disparagingly to the services of another dentist, to a member of the public."

But if another dentist won't tell you who the bad ones are, will he give you the names of some good ones? Yes—if you ask the right dentist.

The Pennsylvania guide proposes 32 rules for selecting a dentist and obtaining a dental care—two rules to summarize here. Put No. 1, telling you how to find a first-rate dentist.

During 1918, history's most devastating influenza epidemic caused an estimated 20,000,000 deaths. The World Almanac recalls that 12,500 people died in India and 548,000 Americans died of the flu from April to November. The 1918-19 influenza epidemic, known as "Black Death" (1917-51) was a history's worst epidemic taking an estimated 75,000,000 lives.

Communication Bridges Help Campus Tranquility

By FRANK MACOMBER Cepley News Service

American have been living with violence-tinged campus unrest or the threat of it for nearly a decade now. While the threat is still there, some colleges and universities have taken the position that nothing short of a communication bridge between students and law-enforcement officers will keep campuses cool.

One of these is the University of Alabama, where Dr. David Mathews, its president, nearly three years ago began to work on a plan to build that span. It has worked so well that other universities and colleges are considering keep-campuses cool programs patterned after Mathews blueprint.

Dr. Mathews decided that members of the University police department needed to take a closer look at campus problems from the students' viewpoint, become more conscious of student feelings and attitudes which so often had erupted into violence across the nation.

It was evident to Dr. Mathews, too, that the students should know more about what made the campus police tick. So Dr. Mathews appointed a special assistant on community relations, Col. Floyd H. Mann, a former Alabama police officer.

"Before a police officer can serve and protect a college community, he must be capable of understanding and communicating with students," says Col. Mann. "He must be able to build bridges, or positive relationships, between himself and the students."

That was the name of Col. Mann's game. It was time to show campus police what students are all about. But in addition to their checking windows, rattling doorknobs and making sure the burners were turned off in the chemistry laboratory.

First, the campus cops discarded their traditional military-style uniforms for tailored, fashionable suits, blue blazers and gray slacks, white shirt and crimson tie.

Then police bought battery jumper cables to help students start their stalled cars, hauled to the campus paths, officers now stop and help the rider to repair it.

However, Mann points out, "even in the best of relationships, conflicts sometimes do arise." So the police department each year selects 25 student marshals from a cross-section of campus leaders to help in controlling students if trouble should break out.

The system worked. When a British rock group came to the campus last July 28, police anticipated there might be some student "flak." It had occurred at other campus performances of the group. But with the student marshals on duty with police, nothing happened.

Machines Malfunctioned Miami Beach Water Fouled

By TAD BARTIMUS Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP)—While hotelmen worried about a mass exodus after warnings that all drinking water in this resort city should be boiled because of contamination, vacationers and residents settled for drinks without ice and mineral water.

"It was chilled," Ross added. "It seemed like a reasonable alternative." A policeman said one hotel executive expressed fear that some guests would check out, and he had heard that guests at other hotels were packing to go.

One store reported it had sold out of bottled water, but customers were begging for empty jugs which they wanted in fill in Miami, three miles away across Biscayne Bay.

Marge Krug, a waitress, said she wasn't serving water unless customers asked for it then they got tap water.

The White House ordered two chlorination pumps (down to Miami Beach) and health officials expressed optimism that the "situation would be cleared up by Saturday."

Dr. Saslaw's statement drew immediate fire from Miami Beach City officials who said they did not believe the water presented any health problems.

Saslaw said the warning to residents to boil their drinking water was "merely a safety precaution. No illnesses have been reported and there is no connection whatsoever with the typhoid outbreak at the South Dade Labor Camp."

During the past week 72 cases of typhoid fever have been confirmed at the camp. Origin of the disease was determined to be a contaminated well at the facility near Homestead, some 26 miles south of Miami.

Thursday night U. S. Rep. Claude Pepper arranged through the White House and the General Services Administration to have two 17,000-pound chlorination pumps (down to Miami from a Civil Defense base in Anniston, Ala.

He urged that rights of way for the section of 419 from Oviedo be included with acquisition costs into the road program as quickly as possible.

His estimates of the right-of-way acquisition for this section at upwards of $50,000. He also recommended the county proceed immediately for the "relatively inexpensive" right-of-way acquisition on 419 from 17-92 to 434.

Davis said the county will have approximately $1.9 million in road funds to be provided through the 1973-74 year. Bush said "the figures applied by Davis can be used by the county in its consideration of a road bond issue."

Retiree Confesses Conner Farm Job

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—A retired state employee said he worked on state time to build horse stalls and other structures at Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner's farm, the St. Petersburg Times reported today.

Conner replied that the former agriculture inspector, Otis Akins, was paid from the commissioner's personal funds for the work and that he believed Akins did the building on time off from his state job, according to Times reporters Martin Dyckman and Virginia Ellis.

Akins said that nine years ago he worked for almost a month at the farm, building horse stalls, barns and a pump house, remodeling a barn and helping construct a cook shed, the Times said.

The Times reported that Akins said his supervisor at the farm was Silas M. Rooks Jr., an Agriculture Department marketing specialist identified in previous Times stories as manager of the farm.

Conner and Rooks both had denied Rooks does private work for Conner on state time. Conner told the newspaper he paid Akins $150 and some horses and he showed a Xerox copy of a $150 check to Akins, marked "labor" and drawn on the ranch account.

"He was invited to do some work for which he was properly paid... I made it very clear to him, he would have to work but would have to do it on his own time—off shift," Conner was quoted as saying.

Oops, there's more to the story... they may wear Bermuda shorts only if worn with black knee-length hose! The new optional regulation made no exception for mailmen with knobby knees, either.

Psychic In DeLand Search

DELAND, Fla. (AP)—Authorities have turned to Orlan psychic Anne Gehman for help in the "mysterious disappearance" of a middle-aged DeLand couple, Volusia County Sheriff Ed Duff said today.

The couple, Justin and Mabel Clifton, both in their 50s, disappeared from their suburban DeLand home Friday evening.

"There's no question in my mind at this time that they have met with foul play of some sort," said Duff, whose deputies have taken part in a large manhunt through northern Volusia County this week.

The bill still bans annexation accomplished via use of original designations in the county. Also required under the bill are public hearings on annexation, any zoning change involving city and county residents within 500 feet of the parcel proposed for annexation must be set for a public hearing. County residents would have to receive notice of the impending action by mail.

In Longwood and Altamonte Springs, there is currently no requirement for public hearing on annexations.

Cities would be required to immediately furnish newly annexed areas with police and fire protection, trash and garbage collection and other services normally given to city residents.

Also on the agenda for hearing is the redefinition of the delegation at its first hearing about a month ago of similar legislation in Sanford.

Annexation Hearing Scheduled Saturday

The final draft of the annexation legislation sponsored by Rep. Eugene Mooney, chairman of the Seminole County legislative delegation, is on the agenda for the legislator's hearing at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Casselberry City Hall.

Mooney told The Herald today the new version was prepared after some Seminole cities raised objections. The proposed requirement, opposed by the cities, that water and sewer lines be extended to the annexed areas has been deleted. The cities insisted land developers be required to extend the lines.

Two other bills relate to the Seminole County law library and its maintenance and the incorporation of Forest City.

Casselberry officials are expected to be on hand to present the proposal to repeal its legislation which allows annexation of pockets — territories completely surrounded by the city — with or without the property owner's consent.

ON RAIN-SLICKENED HIGHWAYS

One person was killed in this crash between a car and a tractor-trailer truck Thursday night on SH 437, a mile north of Oviedo. Troopers O. A. Savage and J. E. Dodson said Verna Wright, 220 11th Street, Winter Garden, a passenger in the car, was killed. The truck was south-bound when it slowed for traffic and veered out of control into the north-bound lane into the path of the car.

A Compatible Peg

Latins Still Giving Dollar Full Value

While your first cup of coffee in the morning, and all the rest, too, may start costing you more because of the devaluation, the U.S. dollar probably will go on being still worth a full 100 cents in Latin America.

Mexico and most other countries south of the Rio Grande have their currencies "pegged" to the dollar. That is to say they measure their international affairs in dollars and cents, not in French francs, British pounds, Japanese yen or German marks.

Of course it also means that when the dollar is devalued with reference to other world currencies, their monetary unit goes down, too.

And, as some Latin critics of U.S. monetary policy have pointed out, a dollar devaluation is harder on them than on the United States because it makes those goods they have to buy from the rest of the world more expensive.

Still, despite their justified grumbling, most Latin countries consider it more beneficial to keep their currency pegged to the dollar.

Take the Mexican peso, for example. The peso has been steady at 16 U.S. cents since 1954. Mexico kept it at 6 cents after the first dollar devaluation in December, 1971. And, according to Mexican government spokesmen, the peso will remain at 6 cents, despite the further 10 per cent drop in the dollar.

As Mexicans see it, they depend too much on the United States to be able to juggle the dollar-peso exchange rate.

Mexico buys a great deal more from the United States than the United States buys from Mexico normally. The difference is made up by virtue of the tourist trade.

American visitors, vacationers, retired persons and others spend half a billion U.S. dollars there a year. Mexico needs that money to pay for all the necessary extras it purchases from the United States.

Were Mexico or any other country that relies much on trade with the United States, to reduce its money, it would risk cutting into its own business.

A similar situation applies, to one extent or another, to most of the Latin American countries. Any action that raises the dollar value of their monetary unit would make the goods they ship to the United States more expensive and therefore less attractive to Americans.

For the most part, what Latin America ships to the United States also is available elsewhere in the world and the Latins cannot afford to let their prices rise rapidly, for fear of losing their dollar market, and the income it supplies them.

Coffee, your morning coffee, is a special case, though. Brazil, Colombia, Mexico and other Latin countries grow fine coffee. But they face sharp competition from African nations.

While Latins insist that African coffee does not taste good, because it is cheaper, the U.S. coffee manufacturers have been using ever increasing amounts of African coffee in the blends sold in American markets.

With devaluation of the dollar, the African promises even more delay. Ecologists are also demanding in court that the government consider rerouting the pipeline through Canada.

Congress can do more than make the necessary amendment to the 1970 law. It can declare that it is in the national interest to develop the North Slope oil resources in Alaska and to transport the oil across U.S. territory. It can do so with insistence that the pipeline be built with strict adherence to provisions for minimum ecological disturbance—provisions already laid down by the Interior Department on the basis of a nine-volume, 3,000-page study of the environmental impact of the project. More than four years have passed since these provisions were issued for our dependence on foreign fuel sources. As one weary pipeline official commented on this latest detour in getting the new fields developed, "this country will have to make up its mind whether it wants to keep running or not." That is exactly how the issue is being drawn.

The United States of America must establish energy and environmental policies based on a realistic appraisal of what it is going to take to keep our country going.

Despite occasional well-advertised meetings with Hill leaders by Henry Kissinger, top domestic aide John Ehrlichman and others, knowledgeable sources insist the Nixon team as a generally regards courtship efforts as unnecessary, at a nearly total waste of time.

The President's new budget message shows how the real cue can be given. It voices hopes for cooperation and accommodation with Congress in holding down spending. But the key attitude is expressed by Mr. Nixon, with the words deliberately set in italics, in his declaration that there is "no room for the postponement of the reductions and terminations proposed in this budget."

That's the tone of a man who thinks he not only has the upper hand but can keep it, that Congress or any other adversary can't do anything to reverse his intended course.

Erring In Delay

Labor Should Try in Phase III

The administration has disclosed that it seeks to maintain a 5.5 per cent limitation on wage increases under its Phase III economic program even if the application of that ceiling will be more flexible. In other words, President Nixon is hoping that the same wage-price formula that lowered the inflation rate to a respectable 5.5 per cent under Phase II can be continued on a voluntary basis to improve the economic picture even more.

This presumes an enlightened and cooperative attitude by labor leaders, and we wish we could be as optimistic as the President that it will be forthcoming. We cannot forget that all but one of the labor representatives withdrew in a huff from the "Pay Board" last year when it tried to make the wage ceiling meaningful, and that the AFL-CIO's main contribution to Phase II was a constant complaint that it was unfair and inequitable.

Statements from the AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting in Miami Beach indicate that labor and Mr. Nixon are still marching to different tunes on bedrock issues. While the union leaders had a word or two of praise for the voluntary aspects of Phase III, it is clear enough that they are interpreting this mainly to mean more freedom on one side of the bargaining table—their own. Their legislative program calls for imposing new price controls on raw farm products, rolling back interest rates, reimposing rent controls and placing an excess profits tax on business. They are asking for

NEW YORK (AP) — Silence is golden, they say, and talk is cheap. Well, if you put those two adages side by side, one may be right — but the other couldn't be wronger. Silence, it is true, may often be more valuable than gold. But whoever said that talk is cheap must never have had to pay the price for shooting off his mouth. It is the unexpressed remark that often costs us the most. Here, for example, are a few typical offhand remarks which, once made, may cause the speaker to wish later that he had maintained his golden silence. "I do!" countries, whose economies are more closely tied to Europe than the United States, presumably will kick their prices up 10 per cent or so.

If the hike in the price of African coffee makes the now more expensive Latin American competitive pricewise and if the U.S. companies start buying more Latin brands for their blends, the American coffee drinker will enjoy a better cup than before.

Nevertheless, despite the inevitability of higher prices for most imported goods, and the likelihood a cup of coffee will cost another nickel, Latin America will go on being a better bargain for the U.S. tourist.

built with strict adherence to provisions for minimum ecological disturbance—provisions already laid down by the Interior Department on the basis of a nine-volume, 3,000-page study of the environmental impact of the project. More than four years have passed since these provisions were issued for our dependence on foreign fuel sources. As one weary pipeline official commented on this latest detour in getting the new fields developed, "this country will have to make up its mind whether it wants to keep running or not." That is exactly how the issue is being drawn.

The United States of America must establish energy and environmental policies based on a realistic appraisal of what it is going to take to keep our country going.

Nixon Pooh-Poos Congress on Cuts

By BRUCE BOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The raging debate here over money and power has already become so chaotic that there is little chance it will be widely understood in its complexity and refined detail. That works to President Nixon's advantage, and he knows it.

The reason for that is, of course, plain enough. The big reality, recognized by public officials in both parties, is the widespread anti-tax, anti-spending mood in the nation. It translates into heavy support for Mr. Nixon in his slashing assault on some social programs and his proposed imposition of a federal budget ceiling.

The trouble is, the President is so confident of this support that the attack on spending, the reduction or elimination of programs, is being carried forward with overtones of contempt for opposition.

There's nothing new in the idea of a clash between President and Congress. Such warfare is historic. Examples far back in the 19th century are easy to find. One President was told by a leading lawmaker: "Mr. President, the leaders in Congress tell me Hell will freeze over before they do what you want about that bill."

The president responded: "Sir, tell my friends up there that Hell will freeze over tomorrow."

That sounds reasonably tough, yet I get the impression things are worse today than they ever before, and that unvarnished contempt has much to do with it.

President Nixon is known to believe that, whatever he may say to the present congressional leaders on their visits to him, they have become largely ineffectual, disgruntled, outdated in their working methods.

One friend who thinks he understands well the temper of the White House establishment, and the President's aides carry out his duties, says simply: "They take their cue from him. In this case, that means 'congressional liaison' has dwindled to almost nothing."

From Dwight Eisenhower's days through the Johnson regime, liaison with Capitol Hill had been built to major extent. Lawmakers were courted, placated, sometimes appeased, always given the feeling that they and their views and their criticism were taken into account.

One Man's Opinion

Uniform Highway Markings, Finally

By DON OAKLEY

New symbols, similar to those used internationally, are gradually replacing word messages on road signs throughout the United States to provide instant, unambiguous safety information to drivers. The changeover is to be completed by the end of 1974.

Also being standardized are sign colors—red for stop or prohibited maneuver, yellow for caution or general warning, and so on.

Another small change which should reap great dividends in highway safety is the standardization of center, edge and lane striping.

Since more than 70 per cent of this country's two-lane secondary roads—where we do most of our driving, and where two-thirds of our accidents occur—remain unmarked, color standardization in highway striping "is the most significant new dimension in pavement markings to date," according to John P. Manley, executive vice president of a company which manufactures reflective glass spheres used in striping paints.

This is what they call the "Morse Code of Highway Safety."

Yellow will be the only color used for centerline markings indicating traffic moving in both directions. White will be used for lanes of traffic moving in the same direction and to indicate pavement edges.

On two-lane highways, a broken yellow centerline indicates passing permitted, with due caution for oncoming traffic. Double solid yellow lines mean no passing in either direction. A broken yellow line next to a solid yellow line indicates a passing zone only for traffic on the side of the broken line.

On multilane highways, opposing traffic will also be separated by double solid yellow lines. Traffic lanes going in the same direction will be separated by broken white lines.

There are other variations for highways with reversible lanes during rush hours and for those with two-way left turn lanes.

Motorists interested in the full explanation of the new symbols, colors and markings can get a free booklet by writing: Morse Code of Highway Safety, Fatters Industries, Inc., P.O. Box 14, Carlstadt, New Jersey 07022.

BERRY'S WORLD

By about him. To me, Proust sounds like nothing but a homosexual pincushion. "It sure has been a nice party. Can we give anyone a lift home?" "That sounds like a great idea, boss. Just put my initials on it, and I'll put my department to work on it." "I wouldn't marry you on earth. I'd rather marry him." "Well, of course, we might play charades." "What good are judo tricks to a 120-pound girl like you? I'd like to see you try a few of them on a man my size." "No, if something ever happened to you, I doubt if I'd be in any rush to propose to anyone else — not at least until I got back from the cemetery."

Dade Typhoid Outbreak Spurs Congressional Investigation

By ERIC SHARP Associated Press Writer HOMESTEAD, (AP) — A congressional subcommittee today investigates a typhoid fever outbreak at a South Dade County migrant labor camp where doctors have complained public health officials were slow to react.

Dr. John Frey of Miami, who said he and about 16 others requested the investigation, said treatment would have been "faster and better if the people involved would have been middle class whites instead of Mexican American migrants."

U.S. Rep. William Lehman, D-Fla., announced Thursday he and Hops, Paul Hagers and Dante Fascell of the House Agricultural Labor Subcommittee would meet at the camp today to investigate the handling of the outbreak.

Medical personnel at the South Dade Community Health Center, which treats many migrant families, requested the probe in a letter to Lehman, Frey said.

"We feel as much investigation as possible must take place," Frey said. "Until today (Thursday), there was slowness to act on the part of Dade County officials. Now, they're starting to act, but it was a tragedy for our patients," Frey said. "We were very concerned, because many of these people were our families, the ones we care for."

"Migrant workers are voiceless people and have no spokesman, but the outbreak of typhoid at Homestead points out once again that we cannot let this portion of our people suffer without the entire society being affected," Lehman said.

He added he had been asked to make the investigation by "doctors attending the victims in South Dade."

By Thursday, 148 camp residents had been hospitalized, with 72 of them confirmed typhoid fever cases.

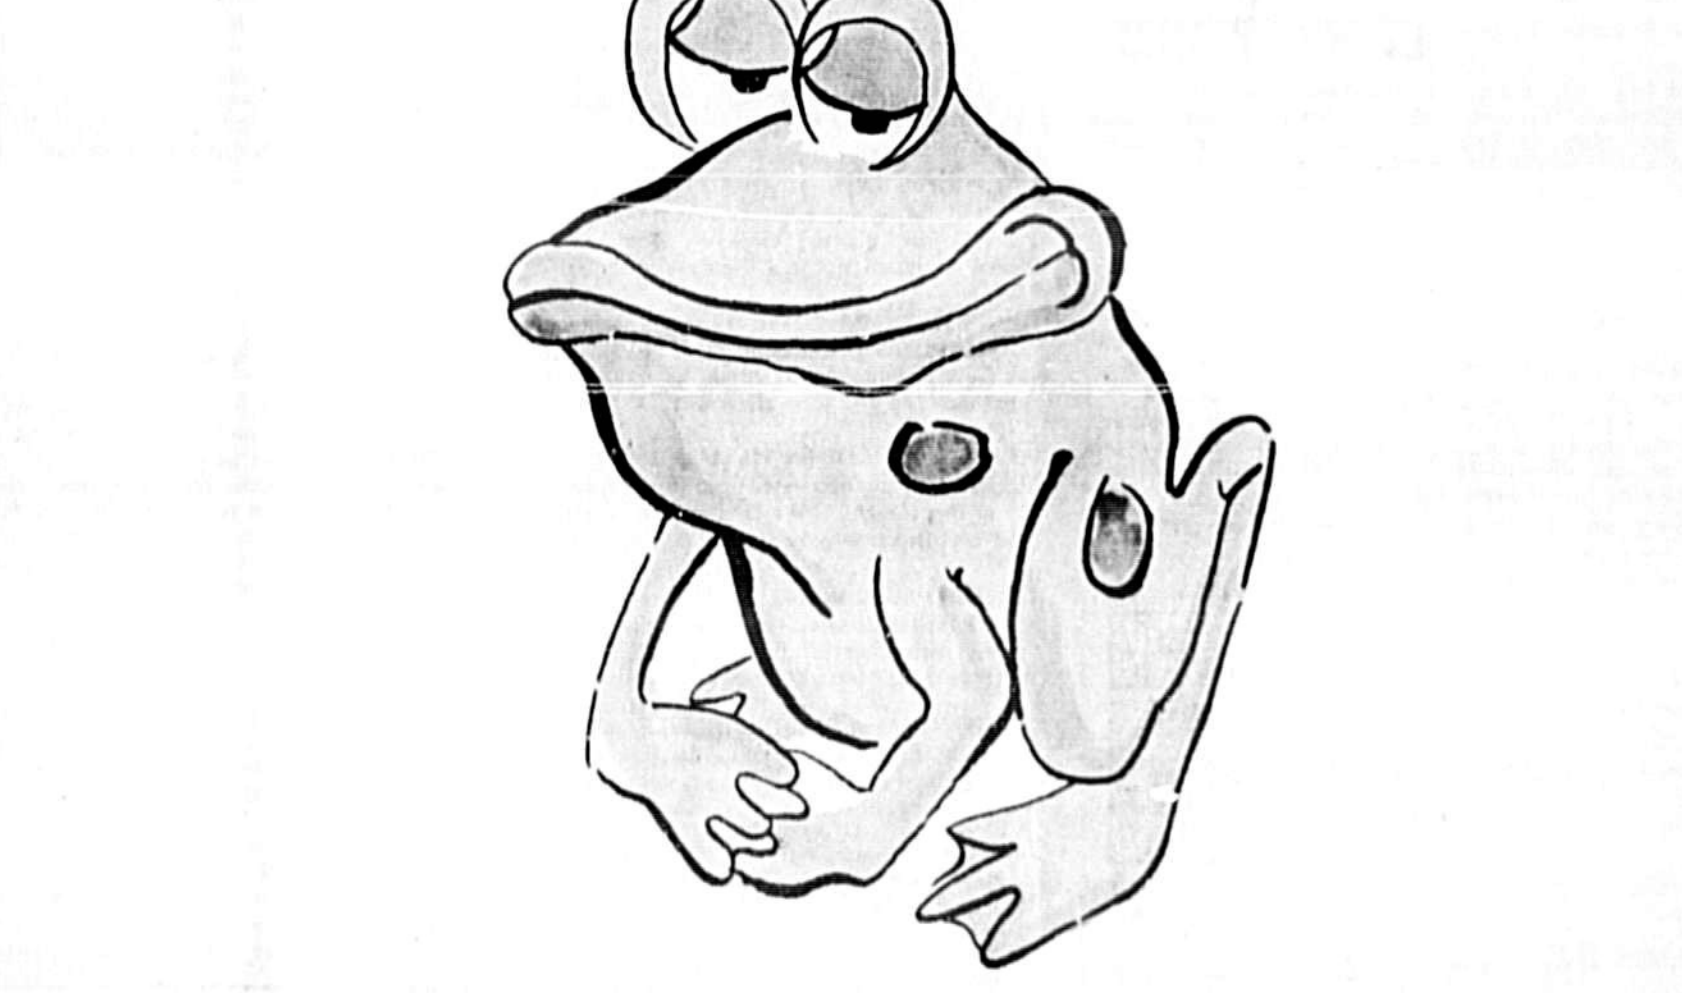

"How about one of those wonder drugs?"

"I've got a cold," the man said, and he went on to ask for a "wonder drug." The pharmacist told him some aspirin and advised him to see his physician. As it happened the aspirin first hit him up line, but the point is this: Pharmacists are not physicians. We work with doctors, providing the drugs and medicines they prescribe. We have a professional knowledge of the powerful new "wonder drugs," so we know how important it is to use them correctly. Please do not feel offended when your pharmacist refuses to sell you a certain drug. It is for your protection and in the best interest of your good health. Always see your doctor when potent medication is required.

BETTY CANARY A Boy's Speech Is A Sometime Thing

By BETTY CANARY. If you have a teen-ager and you've been concerned about your apparent loss of hearing...

What I mean is, a child who enunciated perfectly at age two loses this power at about age 10.

Ask him if he had a good time on the field trip with the Scouts and he answers, "Ninmm, I din."

Ask him, "And, what did you do at Larry's house this afternoon?" He answers, "Granzelbach fritzer."

Rub your ears and cry in despairation. "What would you like for dinner tonight?" He'll shrug his shoulders and say, "Fubds and scrod bif."

Run into the driveway and scream after him as he rides away on his bicycle. "Where are you going?" He'll invariably reply, "Gnitl dn."

The problem is cured by about age 15. However, as is usual with children, there is always another problem waiting right there in the background.

At 15 he can talk again. But he goes stonk dead. Not that you need worry about it. See it as a skill, a talent. He really isn't deaf. He has only learned to tune you out at will.

With a bit of forethought and planning one can cope with this problem. As an example, if you have been carrying, "Take out your hearing aid" all afternoon while he sits, unhearing, reading a magazine, realize you will never reach his inner ear by this method.

Go outside. Stand on the busiest street corner across town. Then, whisper. "I think I might raise your allowance." He will hear you. He will appear magically beside you. With his hand out. Grasp the hand tightly and say, "Now that I have your attention..."

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D. Bill is a victim of "honey-moon jitters" for he is deluded by mankind's age-old delusion that it is the husband's fault...

"Dr. Crane," he confessed, "I was happily married for 25 years but lost my wife, due to cancer."

"That was 3 years ago," he said. "Then I have aged 41, and have proposed to her."

"For I am scared about the honeymoon," he said. "At my age, would I be able to function properly?"

"Since she is 11 years younger than I am, and quite youthful in her behavior, would I be able to satisfy her?"

BRIDE-GROOM JITTERS. Bill is a healthy male, so he should have no medical reasons for dreading that he'd be a platonic mate.

But it is "fear" itself that could make him antipathetic. In fact, such a severe sexual inferiority complex often produces "bridegroom jitters."

At my age, would I be able to function properly? It is the wife's responsibility to excite her man, and thus make him function!

It is in the wife's responsibility to excite her man, and thus make him function! It is in the wife's responsibility to excite her man, and thus make him function!

Such "chesscake" usually involves a more slender figure, plus coquetry, perfume, diaphanous negligees, etc.

Wives, fight fire with fire and don't rebuff your middle-aged male!

If you do, you may drive him toward an outside arena, first his imagination, and then possibly in reality, too.

So, send for my booklet, "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Requests for women's news and photo coverage (parties, clubs, etc.) should be made at least a week in advance.

Rugged Stoneware Receives Plaudits From Homemakers

By VIVIAN BROWN. A newfangled dinnerware, the rugged heavy table service that may be used indoors and outdoors...

In addition to the raw materials available in that part of the United States, the natives are ideal for their jobs. The women have done so much quilting and canning with their hands...

"Everything must balance and be examined for design. That's a coffee cup. Goes through rigorous analysis - how does it look when it is full of coffee, how does it appear when you pick up the cup with big burn fingers, does it burn fingers, will the spoon stay on the saucer without falling off, can you pick up the saucer without tipping the cup, is the shape appealing?"

Pitchers must be drizzle-proof and have the right capacity. As for plates - the knife and fork should be able to deal with it. There aren't too many colors one can use in stoneware.

The year she opened the factory on Iron Mountain, she married Joseph Lamb, a ceramic engineer, who had come from New Jersey to give her advice. Two years later, at 42, she began her greatest production - 19 the United States - and her toddlers now number three, two girls and a boy, 4, 3 and 2.

Stoneware is considered unique in the United States. She developed it after sojourns abroad to countries that contributed to her knowledge. As a guest of the famed porcelain factory, Royal Copenhagen in Denmark, she parlayed a month's invitation into a two-year apprenticeship. When her work permit ran out she worked at design for a year and a half. On a back-home tour, she stopped to study Chinese brush work in Taiwan, where she was invited by the Minister of Economics to help establish a dinnerware business for export to the United States. She launched it in 1967, but in 1968 on a visit home, she decided to stay.

The nonporous high-fired dishwasher-proof stoneware she developed seemed right "for the times." Her gamble paid off. In addition to young people latching on to it, long-time housewives gravitated to it.

Each piece of stoneware is fired 34 times before it is finished. Of her eight patterns - burners have 1 room to stoneware - the most popular is brown and gold one. This year she designed a line of drinking vessels, including a medieval-gal bowl that holds 14 ounces.

But there is more to making stoneware than earth, fire, air and water, she observes, because shapes aren't really traditional, and unlike low-fired earthenware it shrinks 15 per cent in production.

The nonporous high-fired dishwasher-proof stoneware she developed seemed right "for the times." Her gamble paid off. In addition to young people latching on to it, long-time housewives gravitated to it.

Each piece of stoneware is fired 34 times before it is finished. Of her eight patterns - burners have 1 room to stoneware - the most popular is brown and gold one. This year she designed a line of drinking vessels, including a medieval-gal bowl that holds 14 ounces.

But there is more to making stoneware than earth, fire, air and water, she observes, because shapes aren't really traditional, and unlike low-fired earthenware it shrinks 15 per cent in production.

"Everything must balance and be examined for design. That's a coffee cup. Goes through rigorous analysis - how does it look when it is full of coffee, how does it appear when you pick up the cup with big burn fingers, does it burn fingers, will the spoon stay on the saucer without falling off, can you pick up the saucer without tipping the cup, is the shape appealing?"

Fitchers must be drizzle-proof and have the right capacity. As for plates - the knife and fork should be able to deal with it. There aren't too many colors one can use in stoneware.

The year she opened the factory on Iron Mountain, she married Joseph Lamb, a ceramic engineer, who had come from New Jersey to give her advice. Two years later, at 42, she began her greatest production - 19 the United States - and her toddlers now number three, two girls and a boy, 4, 3 and 2.

Stoneware is considered unique in the United States. She developed it after sojourns abroad to countries that contributed to her knowledge. As a guest of the famed porcelain factory, Royal Copenhagen in Denmark, she parlayed a month's invitation into a two-year apprenticeship. When her work permit ran out she worked at design for a year and a half. On a back-home tour, she stopped to study Chinese brush work in Taiwan, where she was invited by the Minister of Economics to help establish a dinnerware business for export to the United States. She launched it in 1967, but in 1968 on a visit home, she decided to stay.

Money Crisis Blamed On Fast Speculators

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing today blamed speculators for the new international monetary crisis and called for a concerted defense to maintain the exchange rates established after the last devaluation of the dollar.
Giscard d'Estaing spoke at the opening of an emergency meeting of the finance ministers of the United States, Canada, Japan, Indonesia and 11 West European countries, called together to see if they can bring the falling dollar back up through the floor set less than a month ago.
Giscard said the crisis "is not the reflection of markets of inappropriate exchange rates, noted and amplified by traders. It has followed im-

Anderson Calls FBI 'Gossips' IRA Admits Bombs Planted In London

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson planned to tell a Senate Committee today that the FBI has investigated persons who have committed no crimes and has prided into the "bedrooms of prominent people for no other purpose than to collect gossip for the files."
Anderson, who has been critical of the FBI in his daily column, said: "This is the sort of thing we expected in Nazi Germany or Stalinist Russia. It is intolerable in the United States of America. The FBI has gone beyond its jurisdiction beyond its constitutional authority, beyond what is proper."
Anderson made his comments prior to appearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is holding hearings on the nomination of L. Patrick Gray III to be permanent director of the FBI.
Gray was excused as a witness Thursday after five days of questioning but is expected to be recalled after public witnesses are heard.
In connection with the hearings, Ronald L. Ziegler, White House press secretary, objected Thursday to the committee's release of what he called "raw, unvaluated" material from FBI files.
Ziegler refused to specify the FBI material he was referring to. But Gray had turned over to the committee Wednesday records linking White House aide Dwight Chapin and Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal lawyer, with Donald Segretti, an alleged political saboteur.
The Social Security Administration is calling for federal and New York State investigations into Ginburg's new manual entitled, "Stake Your Claim! How to work the Social Security Gold Mine."
The agency contends the promotional ads, carried in about 200 newspapers and a dozen mass-circulation magazines, are "replete with misleading references and innuendoes," Ginburg says the ad campaign cost $1 million.
The manual, which comes off the presses today, is offered as a free gift to new subscribers of "Moneysworth" magazine.
"If the booklet . . . is what the advertisement implies, those who rely upon it may in fact unnecessarily complicate their Social Security claims," the government said.
The agency has asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate for possible violation of federal law, complained to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, and sent copies of the complaint to the New York state attorney general's office.

AMA Blasted

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Robert C. Atkins says members of an American Medical Association committee "did not do their homework" before labeling as unscientific and potentially dangerous his published dietary recommendations.
The AMA's Council of Foods and Nutrition said Thursday that Dr. Atkins' recommendation of a sharply reduced carbohydrate intake as the best way to lose weight "is, for the most part, without scientific merit."
Dr. Atkins said later, "This is another example of the AMA's persistence in trying to force obese individuals to continue their eating patterns despite the common-sense observation of every dieter that sugars and starches are fattening."
He said scientific studies quoted in his book, "Dr. Atkins' Diet Revolution," had been unchallenged until now and said the AMA had accepted them. "I think the AMA did not do their homework because they did not do any original studies," Atkins said. "Their studies were not done on this diet but diets which were dissimilar."
Dr. Atkins' book, currently on a number of best-seller lists, recommends a diet which purportedly activates a fat-mobilizing hormone and causes stored fat to turn into carbohydrates.
The AMA, however, said no such fat-mobilizing hormone has been found in humans.

General's Tooth Yanked Skylab 'Docs' Training

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The three scientist-astronauts who will man America's Skylab space station say they are trained to handle in orbit medical problems from toothache to heart seizure.
The "volunteer dental patients," being used for the training don't include only enlisted men, said Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin at a news conference Thursday.
"We had a retired Air Force general who waited two weeks just so he could say he had his teeth pulled by an astronaut," Kerwin said in reporting on dental training at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex.
Kerwin, a medical doctor, is a member of the three-man Skylab 1 crew which is to be launched May 15 to link up with a house-sized space station scheduled for launching one day earlier.
The Skylab 1 crew will remain in orbit for 28 days, conducting medical, scientific, earth resources and engineering experiments.
The other scientist-astronauts are Dr. Owen Garriott of Skylab 2, and Dr. Edward Gibson, Skylab 3. Both are solar-physicists and have required more training than did Kerwin to perform the medical experiments which will be their main responsibility in space.
The Skylab 2 and 3 astronauts both are to remain in orbit for 56 days later this year, but Gibson said his mission might be extended by up to two weeks if all goes well.
Gibson said he and Garriott have trained "to come up to the level of a good medical corpsman in the field. We can understand the basic things in an emergency room. We can do sutures and most emergency room procedures."
"We feel we could handle just about anything that occurred in flight, except an appendectomy," he said, adding that only four of the nine Skylab astronauts still have their appendices.
If an astronaut developed appendicitis, he said, the crew would have to make a quick trip back to earth. Appendicitis is the inflammation of a portion of the intestines.
Garriott said he has a case where a horse had to be set or a serious cut sutured, and Mission Control would provide expert medical consultation.

IRA Admits Bombs Planted In London

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Members of the Irish Republican Army in Belfast said today that 10 Irish men and women being questioned by Scotland Yard about bomb explosions in London Thursday were part of the IRA squad that planted the explosives. But they claimed eight other members of the gang got back to Ireland safely.
Seven men and three women were arrested at London's Heathrow Airport shortly before cars packed with gelignite exploded outside the Old Bailey and Whitehall area. Two other booby-trapped cars were found in central London, and the explosives were removed.
The explosions killed one person, wounded 243 and blew out windows in neighboring buildings.
The sources in Belfast blamed the arrest of the 10 on the 24-hour rail strike in Britain Thursday protesting the government's anti-inflation curb on wage increases. Because of the

Sam Houston Coach Hoping For NIT Call

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Sam Houston State Coach Archie Forster got the call he has been waiting for Wednesday. Now he is staying close by the telephone to see if the National Invitation Tournament in New York City will call his number.

Sam Houston was named The Associated Press college division basketball champion and Forster said "Maybe it will help get us into the NIT. I see where they still have three openings. There are a lot of teams in that tournament we could stay with."

The undefeated Bearkats need only one more triumph to erase the NCAA record for the most consecutive victories of a season by Stephen F. Austin. They play in the NAA playoffs in Kansas City beginning Monday.

"We are sure like you guys because you had us rated No. 1 before anybody else did this season," Forster said. "This will help our recruiting and maybe get a bug in the ear of the NIT people. The tournament is the week after the NAA playoffs and wouldn't conflict."

Forster said of the nationwide panel of sports writers and Catching poses problems with Jack Hatt, Art Kustner and Jeff Torborg the candidates but with the possibility of a trade for another pitcher.

Heavy hitting Bob Oliver opens at first with Sandy Allen at second and Leo Carner at third base, a switch which could prolong his major league life.

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Picher Vida Blue and catcher Dary Duncan, who have unanimous bargaining to do with wner Charles O. Finley on their Oakland Athletics contracts, have agreed the baseball world champions' training camp.

The two arrived from Oakland Thursday night, and Manager Dick Williams who was happy to have them both said he thought they'd need about 10 days to catch up on conditioning.

Earlier in the week both Blue and Duncan said they didn't want to miss too much training time while arguing pay with Finley. Blue held out last season until May 2.

The 18 open their exhibition schedule today against the Milwaukee Brewers.

TIME and TIDE

Curious, isn't it, how people look at life so differently? To some there is an irresistible desire to cope with the tides of life by escaping from dullness to new lands and faces. To others the answer seems to lie in the foaming breakers, with the sinister desire to end existence completely. And yet to others the waves of life speak of plan and order and a sureness and perfection in creation.

And so it is with time! One person begrudges every second as a relentless march toward the end of life. Another sees the sands of time as slow and painful journey. And to still another, it is the golden passing of each day ordered and well-planned.

What shapes these different viewpoints? The Christian sees, in the certainty of seconds and the regularity of days, a revelation of the order and beauty that God perfects in His works. Every man needs God and His Church to give his life its noblest point of view.

Water, Water Everywhere...? Miamians Refuse To Go 'Dry'

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Corks popped and bottle caps flew as Miami Beach tourists and residents opted for liquid alternatives Friday in the wake of a bad water scare.

Extensive doses of bactericidal chlorine were injected into the city's water supply following the hookup Friday afternoon of two chlorinators especially flown in from Anniston, Ala., on order from the White House.

Miami Beach City Manager Frank Spence admitted he was aware the water system had been low on chlorine since December but insisted health officials had never indicated previously there was a water crisis brewing.

Spence said he believed bad water samples which Thursday prompted Dade County Health Director Dr. Milton Saslaw to warn all residents to boil drinking water came from "bad spots, not bad water."

But Environmental Protection Agency regional director Jack Hevan of Atlanta disputed Spence's appraisal. "You can argue about faulty sampling procedures and in-finitum," Hevan said. "We always hear that argument after the fact, but that kind of talk doesn't solve the problem."

Hevan said Miami Beach had been clearly notified last July of the water system was under chlorinated.

"While there was no mandate that they install chlorinators, we strongly urged they improve the system during the summer political conventions," the EPA official said.

At a congressional hearing in South Dade Friday Dr. Saslaw admitted his agency was aware of the poor water test results in Miami Beach for the months of December, January and February. He said he lacked enforcement powers to correct the situation.

In Jacksonville, State Health Director Sidney Berkowitz gave equal blame to bureaucratic red tape, shortage of manpower and lack of communication.

Officials said the addition of the two chlorinating units probably would render tap water drinkable without boiling by Monday.

In the meantime, the resort islands' 90,000 residents and thousands of tourists were devising their own ways of wetting their whiskies.

At a drug store counter manager Johnny Stein asked customers "you want water?" Eighty per cent of them shook their heads but L. E. Culliver, 45, drank off one big glass and followed it with another.

"I say there's nothing to it," said Culliver, who works up plenty of sweat loading freight cars. "The way I see it, your days is numbered anyway. It may be water or it may be wine. When your time comes that's it. This is just something dreamed up to scare people."

At South Beach, lifeguard Richard Smith, 34, who spends 10 hours a day soaking up the hot sunshine, took a big drink from a public fountain.

"All this is silly," said Smith, who says he drinks half a gallon of water daily. "There's nothing wrong with that water," snapped Miami Beach's city physician.

Libby Wallick and her 76-year-old husband Carl both said they weren't worried but nonetheless were boiling their drinking water.

"Whoa! Whoa! I was in Israel in 1971. There was the cholera. They did everybody to eat garlic. It smelled so bad it drove the germs away. I should worry!" said Mrs. Wallick.

Mayor Chuck Hall, calling the whole thing "ridiculously overblown and bad for tourism, said there was "much smoke and little fire."

"People are blaming everything that's happened to them for the past three weeks on the water," snapped Miami Beach's city physician.

There have been no reports of illness resulting from the water problem.

Nevertheless, a number of major hotels, including the Pomineau, Eden Roc and the Americana, served distilled water to their guests while others posted "Do Not Drink" signs on water fountains.

One hotel gift serving water in its restaurant and customers were told to "drink Coke."

Bottled water also was shipped into Miami Beach schools and, where possible, fountains in schools were shut off completely.

A ban on the use of Miami Beach water in interstate commerce was ordered by the EPA.

Dade Health officials said February's test results showed 30 per cent of the samples of water taken contained excessive amounts of E. Coliform bacteria.

And to his charming wife Bea and family, may you have nothing but sunshine and happiness.

We're all so proud of you all.

Obviously we aren't alone in this category.

Leave it to the kids to come through for you... one of the schools mailed in over 200 letters and then there was another group of youngsters in the 6th, 7th and 8th grades who weren't content until they brought in more than 400 written thoughts.

Those which we received through the postal system came from all parts of this great country of ours... from Fort Walton Beach, Winter Park, Crestview, Sanford, Winter Springs, Casselberry, Longwood and the Pine Crest, Lake Mary, Sanford Grammar and the South Seminole Middle Schools.

BULLETIN
 LISBON (AP) — Portuguese authorities tightened guard around all military installations today in the wake of three bombings which took place in the city.

Readers from out-of-state included one from Barnesboro, Pa., and the other from Larchmont, N.Y.

Certainly there's others too which were unique... like the one which came from 7 Burham Court, Smithtown (wherever that is). On the envelope was a note to the Postmaster General, Sanford, Fla. "See that former P.O.W. Cndr. Gerald Coffee gets this."

Bombs exploded Friday evening early today in an army administrative offices near the center of the city.

The two dead were so mutilated that officials were unable to identify them more than 12 hours later.

Lloyd To Lose Beard In Docks Side Shave

Tuesday is the day! The day Herald staff writer Bob Lloyd gets his 31-month beard shaved off. The ceremony is scheduled for 9 a.m. on restored sunken docks by Circuit Judge Dominic Salfi.

Lloyd started letting the whiskers grow July 4, 1970 in protest of inactivity of the dockers that sank in Nov. 1969. Inches in length, had to be trimmed a bit because of split ends and now measures 14 inches.

Mayor Lee P. Moore will take sissors to the whiskers following signing of a final judgement in a lawsuit determining liability for the sunken docks by Circuit Judge Dominic Salfi.

William H. Ragsdale, chief chemist at the Sanford Crime Laboratory, will be on hand to receive Lloyd's beard for comparison sample use at the law enforcement facility.

Then Jack Rathwell, vice-president and general manager of Monroe Harbor Inc., representing the city-owned marina facility, participate in the public shaving.

Rathwell said Saturday's shave is scheduled with the current ruling that the work be funded by a previous lessee who had the facility when the docks went to the bottom of the basin.

The city of Sanford, in accordance with court ruling, has constructed a breakwater to protect the west basin.

A number of boats have already been docked in slips on the restored pier.

Next POW Release Set

By GEORGE ESPER Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — The North Vietnamese indicated today the next release of American prisoners of war would come sometime next week, and the United States suggested it expected 10 would be released Tuesday or Wednesday.

The senior U.S. representative to the Joint Military Commission, Maj. Gen. Gilbert H. Woodward, asked the Communists to provide him no later than Sunday with the names, times and places of those to be released.

Hundreds more North Vietnamese POWs were exchanged today at Quang Tri on the northern front and Bong Son on the central coast.

Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin announced the International Commission of Control and Supervision has tossed the issue of allied allegations of Communist surface-to-air missile sites to South Vietnam back to the military commission.

The military commission had been unable to agree on an investigation and sent the matter to the international group, which also was unable to reach a decision.

Welcome Back Cndr. Jerry Coffee!!!!
