Longwood official resigns

LONGWOOD — Lois Martin, Longwood's first personnel director, has resigned her post effective March 16 to assume similar duties in Lake County.

"The opportunity came along to work for a larger organization, and I just couldn't pass it up," Martin said.

Martin said her yearly salary will jump from $31,600 to $42,000.

Mayor Gene Farach said Martin will be missed. "If we could afford to match Lake County's offer, we would do so," he said.

Martin was influential in initiating several new programs in Longwood, including new insurance coverage, health care containment, revised pay plans, and a worker's compensation review board.

"We were just starting to roll along. I have 15 irons in the fire, and will miss Longwood," she said. "But I'm very excited about my new job."

Martin's first day as Lake County personnel director is March 19.

Russell trial delayed

TAMPA — The trial of Joe Thomas Russell, 50, of Osteen, and his son Jeffrey Thomas Russell, 34, of Sanford, scheduled this week in federal court in Tampa, has been delayed to accommodate a defense attorney. The two are charged with conspiracy and trafficking in marijuana.

The Russells were arrested June 7, 1988, at Russell Seafood just east of Sanford on State Road 46. The restaurant is operated by Joe Thomas Russell's ex-wife and employed Jeffrey Thomas Russell. The Russells were caught at the scene as federal, state and local lawmen intercepted an airplane loaded with 628 pounds of marijuana that landed at a nearby airstrip. Lawmen, acting on a tip on an international smuggling ring, allege the Russells were there to take delivery of the marijuana shipment from Belize in Central America.

Six other suspects were also arrested later and are co-defendants in the case in Florida. The investigation extended to Las Vegas, Nev. The trial is rescheduled for April 30 in Tampa.

The delay was granted because a defense attorney said he is involved in another trial in Miami, which may continue for about two months.

LONGWOOD — A man was arrested yesterday after allegedly bashing his sleeping stepfather in the head with a beer bottle and reportedly returned $1,500 out of $2,000 stolen from the victim.

Gregory Lamar Rainer, 27, 714 St. Johns River Drive, Sanford, was arrested Wednesday by Seminole County Sheriff's investigator Willie Chandler at the county jail. Rainer is charged with armed robbery, armed burglary, kidnapping and aggravated battery in an attack on Billy Carr, 55, 1485 N. County Road 427, Longwood.

Carr reported to Sheriff's deputies he was asleep on his living room couch Feb. 24 when he awoke to find Rainer allegedly standing over him with a beer bottle in his hand. Carr felt blood on his face and told Rainer he needed to go to a hospital.

Rainer allegedly demanded $100 from Carr before he would allow him to go to a hospital, police say.

When Carr brought out his wallet Rainer allegedly grabbed it and ran. Carr said he chased Rainer and asked for his money back. The wallet contained $2,000, and Carr told police Rainer returned $1,500 and kept $500.

Carr went to a hospital where cuts to his head required stitches. Chandler reported.

Christmas life saver

Letter carrier Felix Figueroa (left) received a plaque of recognition from Sanford postmaster Fred Rader this morning for helping Les Owen in a life-threatening situation. Figueroa was delivering letters to Owen's house when he found Owen semi-conscious from a shock from electric Christmas tree lights. Figueroa rendered aid to Owen until rescue workers arrived. Owen was treated at Central Florida Regional Hospital and released. He is fully recovered. The plaque is signed by Owen's wife.

Job, recognition is handicapped woman's reward

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Dawn Violante has won national recognition for her on-the-job performance in the finance department at Pepsico in Orlando.

The Lake Mary High School student is very good at her job. She arrives promptly in the morning. She performs her duties well. And she gets along with everyone.

A year ago, Violante would never have considered even taking a job. Today she's thinking about the possibilities of living on her own.

A vivacious 21-year-old, Violante has cerebral palsy, which has paralyzed her legs and has left her right hand with limited motion and very little mobility in her left hand. She is also mildly mentally retarded.

"She has very poor math skills and probably reads at a third grade level," said Kathy Bercht of the school district's Transition Services Division of the Exceptional Education department.

Despite her handicaps, which her supervisor, Pat Quinones, describes as more physical than mental, Violante has been able to perform many clerical tasks that used to bog other department employees.

"She helps this department run more efficiently," Quinones said.

On a day off, Violante sits at the dining room table in her parents' Altamonte Springs home and leans her crutches on the chair beside her. She's wearing white shorts and a white shirt with a subtle tie-dyed design in it.

"I like to shop for clothes," she said, smiling shyly and pointing at her shirt.

She said that she is honored.

Lake Mary Seniors celebrate first birthday

By LACY DOMEN
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Everyone is welcome to attend a party celebrating the Lake Mary Seniors first birthday, March 20th. Director Pauline Stevens said she expects people "from three through 104 years young" to attend.

"We would like to encourage anybody who's a senior in Lake Mary to bring in examples of any hobbies or crafts they do other than watching TV or reading," she said. The crafts will be exhibited during the birthday party.

Stevens said the party, which will be at the Community Improvement Association building in Lake Mary from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will feature entertainment, exhibits, and prizes.

Everyone should bring a covered dish for the luncheon, Stevens said.

The Seniors organized in March 1989, and currently have about 70 members, Stevens said. They are a special project of the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce and hope to become part of the city's recreation program.

Stevens said every Tuesday is Senior Day, when art, quilting, and craft classes are scheduled at Lake Mary sold city hall from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Any senior citizen can get information pertinent to aging from the group. Stevens said area seniors don't have to go to several sources to find information on taxes, Medicare, transportation, and services available to seniors. "We even found a volunteer to fill out a Medicare form for an elderly lady," she said.

The Lake Mary Seniors is planning several outings in the near future. Stevens said the group is scheduled to cruise on the Dixie Queen in Daytona Beach on March 31. The outing is in conjunction with the Older Youngsters of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Lake Mary.

Two sergeants, 18 others indicted

MIAMI — Two U.S. Army sergeants and 18 others were indicted Wednesday on drug charges stemming from a smuggling ring that shipped cocaine from Panama to the United States in duffel bags, authorities said.

The indictment, which did not involve soldiers sent to Panama in the Dec. 20 invasion, was returned by a federal grand jury in Fort Lauderdale and named as defendants Sgt. Raphael Fultz, who is in custody in Miami, and Sgt. Jarvis Earl Worelds, who was arrested in Fort Ord in California. U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen told a news conference.

Ex-state senator arrested

PENSACOLA — A former state senator now practicing law in Crestview has been arrested and charged with money laundering, authorities said Wednesday.

William Dean "Wig" Barrow, 56, was arrested at a Crestview motel Tuesday and transferred to the Escambia County Jail. He was scheduled for an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Susan Novotny late Wednesday.

Barrow was elected to the Florida Senate in 1986 and served until 1972.

Dade schools select new superintendent

MIAMI — The Dade County School Board chose a local school administrator Wednesday to become the next superintendent of the nation's fourth largest school system.

Board members made the decision unanimously after Paul W. Bell received four of seven votes on the 17th ballot, said Andy Gollan, a public information officer with the school system.

Bell, 58, who is currently the system's deputy superintendent for education, will replace former Superintendent Joe Fernandez, who left to take the chancellor's job in the New York Public School System.

College offers free tuition to blacks

BOCA RATON — Florida Atlantic University has offered free tuition to every black freshman who meets admission standards, a dramatic gesture designed to boost black enrollment at the public university.

FAU President Anthony Catanese announced the offer Tuesday. The university is the only one in the nation to guarantee full scholarships to each black freshman, the United Negro College Fund said.

Teen who shot baby back in jail

TAMPA — A teenage drug dealer who seemed to slip through cracks in the criminal justice system Tuesday was behind bars again Wednesday after state prison officials realized they had miscalculated his prison sentence.

Sedrick McKinney, 18, was sentenced in court Tuesday to six years in prison for violating his parole, the maximum penalty allowed under Florida law.

But when Hillsborough County Jail officials called the State Department of Corrections later that day, they learned that McKinney had already earned enough gain time to satisfy the sentence imposed by Circuit Judge Richard Lazzara.

Auto insurance report criticized

TALLAHASSEE — Suggestions from a state task force seeking ways to reduce auto insurance rates lack credibility because the body was stacked with insurance people, a lawmaker said Wednesday.

Rep. Steve Geller, a trial lawyer from Hallandale who served on the task force, said at a news conference the recommendations that came out of the Motor Vehicle Insurance Task Force last week proved his original fears that the panel would be a rubber stamp for the insurance industry.

"It is our opinion that the report is largely without credibility," Geller said. "The insurance industry chose to use their overwhelming influence on the committee to push through their recommendations."

Nevertheless, in a minority report that he and state Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, wrote, they endorsed most of the task force's recommendations.

City readies to lobby for baseball's sake

ST. PETERSBURG — City officials are gearing up to petition the state Legislature for millions of dollars to outfit the recently opened Florida Suncoast Dome for Major League Baseball.

Although baseball officials have said no word on expansion will be announced before the end of the year, St. Petersburg City Manager Robert Obering said Tuesday he has heard it could come much earlier.

And the city is preparing to lobby the Legislature during its upcoming session for millions of dollars to get the stadium ready for a team. At present, the 43,000-seat, $110 million stadium which opened last week lacks a scoreboard and turf.

The Legislature was ready to grant the city money in 1988 when it was courting the Chicago White Sox. That team eventually decided against moving.

Welfare guinea pig compromise

Poor people may be used as subjects in 'closely-monitored' social experiments

By MICHAEL MOLINE
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — State welfare officials could use their clients as subjects for social research experiments, subject to strict outside oversight, under a compromise approved unanimously Wednesday by a House committee.

The measure would create a nine-member Review Council for Human Subjects with the power to veto social research experiments proposed by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

"The legislation we just passed, I think, provides the needed balance between positive research and safeguards for the public," said Rep. Ben Graber, D-Coral Springs, chairman of the HRS oversight subcommittee.

The bill is a product of a rancorous dispute over a proposed experiment to determine if Florida's Project Independence program is really successful at weaning welfare recipients off the dole and into productive jobs.

That experiment is proceeding under a protocol hammered out by HRS and critics outside the agency. The legislation would not effect that research, but would establish safeguards for future experiments of that nature.

"It does not eliminate this type of research, but creates a screening process for this type of research," Graber said.

Project Independence, currently in its third year of operation, provides child care, job training, education and other assistance to welfare recipients trying to enter the workforce. Each participant is closely assisted by a case manager.

The research calls for a control group whose members will not get the same close assistance as Project Independence participants, even though they would be eligible for that program.

The idea, said researcher Judith Queron, is to see whether Project Independence really helps, or if people would do just as well on their own.

Sex-education bill survives important test in Legislature

By MICHAEL MOLINE
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — An ambitious sex education proposal survived its first committee test with bipartisan support Wednesday despite attacks by social conservatives.

The House Health Care subcommittee on Finance gave unanimous approval to a $15.7 million proposal requiring school districts to provide health education that includes reproductive health and parenting for all grade levels.

The bill by Rep. Lois Frankel, D-West Palm Beach, and Rep. George Albright, R-Ocala, also provides financial grants for districts to establish campus health clinics, which could counsel students on reproductive health.

Subject matter would be decided locally and would be appropriate to the children's age. If parents object, their children would be barred from the health clinics and attend general health classes lacking the sex education subject matter.

That wasn't good enough, though, for representatives of the Florida Catholic Conference and anti-abortion groups, who charged the classes and clinics would promote premarital sex and abortion.

"They are a direct funnel for abortion in Florida and elsewhere," said Rosemary Gallagher of the Catholic Conference of the clinics. "There's no way we can support the bill with that portion, even if it's (only) an option."

Frankel and Albright maintained some forceful state action is needed to reduce Florida's teenage pregnancy rate, fourth highest in the nation and still climbing even as the national rate declines.

"Even though we would like to have parents doing the job at home, we have decided to take our heads out of the sand," said Frankel following the vote.

Women bend over to aid fake doctor

BARTOW — A man has been arrested on charges of practicing medicine without a license for allegedly posing as a doctor, asking female clerks at a convenience store to bend over and giving them vitamin B-12 injections.

The shots were given to three clerks in a back office of the Farm Store in Lakeland where they worked, according to an arrest affidavit filed by the State Attorney's Office in Polk County.

Hurtis Lamar Proctor, 37, was charged Tuesday with two counts of practicing medicine without a license and one count of violating the nurse's practice act.

The suspect visited the store Feb. 15 and told the first two victims he was a doctor. The Lakeland man convinced them that they looked listless and needed injections of vitamin B-12.

"We felt like idiots," one of the clerks, Rachel M. Echols, said after realizing they had been duped. "It could've been anything."

She said the suspect wore nice slacks, a shirt, tie and sports coat.

"The way he talked, it was very professional," Echols said.

Family wants son's brain returned

United Press International

FORT PIERCE — The mother of a man who underwent an autopsy after being killed in a motorcycle accident said Wednesday she wants her son's brain to be returned so it can be buried with the rest of his body.

Richard Chapman Jr. died at Orlando Regional Medical Center of a head injury after a motorcycle accident in Okeechobee County in April 1989.

Dr. Thomas Hegert, the medical examiner who performed the autopsy, kept the brain for the post-mortem. He said Wednesday the brain was still in his office.

"Saving a brain for a more detailed examination is a very common and frequent occurrence in autopsies when the person died of a head injury," he said.

State law allows medical examiners who perform autopsies to retain body parts without the family's permission.

"To me, he's violated my rights. I'm the mother of this child. I brought him into the world. I took care of him for 22 years. I have no say how he goes out? To me this is not right. It may be legal, but it's not right," said Mary Ann Chapman of Okeechobee, Chapman's mother. After the Chapmans hired an attorney in November, Hegert wrote them Jan. 2, saying he would release it once the family gave him written consent.

"We have finished all of our needs for the brain tissue, so we would be happy to do whatever the family wants done with the brain tissue," Hegert said.

He said all the Chapmans needed to do was sign a release form and provide an address where he should send it, however, he admitted that he had known for a long time that family members wanted it returned and knew how to reach them.

"We just don't want to put it in a carton and mail it, for heaven's sake," he said.

"So he wants me to sign a release? ... I kept thinking how many has he got up there, and who knows if it's my son's that he's through with."

Urinals for women 'installed' as popular innovation

By DAVID TORTORANO
United Press International

PENSACOLA — More than five years after coming up with her eyebrow-raising idea, the inventor of a urinal for women will see the first production model installed at a regional airport next month.

"I think the women who use public restrooms on a regular basis are going to be very excited," said Kathie Jones, president of Urinette Inc. of Pensacola.

She thinks women will eventually demand the "She-Inal."

The She-Inal looks like a urinal with a flexible tube and flared cup on the upper end. A disposable paper lining covers the surface of the flared end. When the hose is returned to the bracket a lever is pulled and water flushes clean the hose — paper and all.

Unlike urinals for men, She-Inals will be in stalls.

"We're in production now and our first fixture came off the assembly line Friday afternoon and delivered here Monday," said Jones. The base is made in Omaha, Neb., and the funnel and handle unit in Pensacola.

Jones has signed a contract to provide four She-Inals by April 1 to Pensacola Regional Airport, which is slated to be finished in the late summer or early fall.

Plumbing engineers have specified the female urinal for projects in several other locations, including a factory in Iowa, a performing arts center in Illinois, and projects in Pennsylvania, Colorado and Maryland.

Research done by the University of West Florida shows a general acceptance of the She-Inal. Among other things, the study found that 94 percent of the respondents said they do not sit on a public toilet seat.

The marketing department poll of 130 females showed 60 percent saying they were moderately to highly likely to try the She-Inal, while 30.8 percent said they would prefer it over a traditional water closet.

Jones came up with the idea more than five years ago when she regularly traveled between Panama City and Bay St. Louis, Miss. She said she found many of the public facilities "disgusting," or she found lines.

She came up with the female urinal and got a patent in August 1987.

On Feb. 24, Clarke allegedly bought beer for several boys including the victim. The victim said he rode with Clarke to a nearby convenience store. The suspect parked off Dike Road, would not let the boy leave the van, and allegedly made sexual advances. The boy escaped from the vehicle and ran to a nearby house for help, according to sheriff's reports. Clarke was arrested at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Teachers hit Martinez' budget again

From staff and wire reports

Gov. Bob Martinez' education budget came in for more sharp criticism Wednesday, this time from the head of Florida's second-largest teachers' union and a state Senator who serves on an education committee.

Teachers' union officials in Seminole County, however, have expressed optimism that the upcoming legislative session will produce a more favorable outcome and that a strike, threatened in some of the state's larger counties, can be averted.

"There is nothing more crucial to public education and the children of the state of Florida this year than for the Legislature to find some way to circumvent the shortsighted and irresponsible budget contrived by the governor," said Kathy Bell, President of the Florida Teaching Profession-National Education Association.

Meanwhile, a report that the Florida Chamber of Commerce delivered Wednesday to a House subcommittee said that the funding problems in education are being caused by the Florida Lottery and that revenue shortfalls last year resulted in the largest decrease in education spending since the recession of the mid-1970s.

Delivery failed Paulucci says in legal action

From staff reports

LAKE MARY — Frozen food king and developer Jeno Paulucci is seeking more than $25 million in damages in a lawsuit filed against a Jacksonville subsidiary of AT&T.

Paulucci claims the subsidiary, American Transtech, failed to deliver computer software and services as promised to a Paulucci grocery delivery service, Groceries By Phone Inc., of Sanford. Paulucci contended the claims are based on misrepresentation, breach of contract and breach of expressed and implied warranties. Transtech has not responded to the claim.

GBP was formed as a home-delivery grocery service allowing people to call a local telephone number and having a local grocery deliver food and other products to their home for a fee.

Because of the alleged problems and delays, Paulucci claims GBP lost their competitive edge to other companies.

Fruit flies invade Brevard County

TITUSVILLE — Fruit flies, lured by a feast of rotting, freeze-damaged citrus, have inundated Brevard County, the county extension service reported Wednesday.

"They're an annoyance worse than anything," said Susan Boorse, horticultural technician at the Brevard County Extension Service.

Residents from all parts of the county have complained about the flies.

"They're just a common little fruit fly," said Don Short, a professor of entomology at the University of Florida. "They just eat on rotting fruit, decomposed fruit."

"They're a little larger than a gnat but similar in appearance," Boorse said.

More questions about Reagan

He didn't know, wasn't told, doesn't recall and sure didn't worry. There were so many meetings, so many people.

To this day, Ronald Reagan testified in his videotaped deposition in federal court the other day, he has no knowledge that funds from the profits of the arms sale he had secretly authorized for Iran had been diverted to the support of the Contras in Nicaragua. He didn't know that Oliver North was providing military equipment to the Contras (all of which was illegal). He hardly knew North, whom he would subsequently call a genuine American hero. When one of the deposing lawyers showed him a copy of the Tower Commission report, which he himself had ordered, he said that "this is the first time I have ever seen a reference that actually specified that there was a diversion."

The man who said all this was, until 14 months ago, the president of the United States. He believed, he said, that the arms he had approved were going to private citizens in Iran who opposed the use of terrorism.

Although the former president's testimony was sought by former National Security Adviser John Poindexter, who is accused of lying to Congress in connection with the Iran-Contra scandal, what's now on the tape will be far more significant for historians.

Viewing the tape, the old questions will trouble them more than ever: What understanding — or concern, for that matter — existed in the Oval Office in those crucial years? Is it really possible that he thought the arms were going to private citizens in Iran? Had he really never heard the word diversion? From the point of view of history, if not of justice, it would be more reassuring if one could be confident that, in his answers to those questions at least, he had been lying.

Lost generation

The disclosure that one of every four black American men in his 20s has been convicted of a crime is a national tragedy. This disturbing statistic has complex roots in a drug-ridden society where incentives to work for a better life have been steadily undermined.

According to a study released by the Sentencing Project, a Washington-based non-profit group, 25 percent of black men in their 20s are in jail, in prison or on probation or parole. This number refers only to those actually convicted of crimes and does not include suspects who are arrested and released. By contrast, only about 6 percent of white men in their 20s are being held or supervised by criminal courts.

Marc Mauer, author of the report, rightly points out that America now faces the frightening prospect of "writing off an entire generation of black men from leading productive lives."

The implications of the report are ominous. From almost every standpoint — education, health, income, mortality and family unity — black men are one of the nation's most troubled groups. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, who is not known for alarmist statements, aptly declares: "Not since slavery has so much calamity and ongoing catastrophe been visited on black males."

The causes of the crisis are many and varied. Drug abuse obviously is a prime factor. Poverty and lack of employment add to the problem. Well-intentioned welfare programs have eroded traditional values and helped create a permanent underclass. Despite the best efforts of legislations, discrimination still exists. Most of these causes are exacerbated by inadequate education, poor self-esteem and resultant feelings of despair.

The Sentencing Project report makes no attempt to expain why so many black men run afoul of the law but contends that it is counterproductive merely to lock them up. Mr. Mauer recommends alternatives such as forcing criminals to repay their victims or work on community projects.

The report's main contribution is to spur national debate on a subject that has become too critical to neglect. We as a nation must recognize that far too many young black men are in deep trouble. A battle must be waged to break the festering cycle of violence and hate that dooms so many to lives of crime and years behind bars.

The day Gorbachev came to power

WASHINGTON — On Monday, March 11, 1985, "perestroika" and "glasnost" were mere glimmers in the mind of Soviet Politburo member Mikhail Gorbachev.

Muscovites woke that day to the strains of Tchaikovsky's "Pathétique" symphony on Radio Moscow, instead of the usual early-morning exercise program. In November 1982, the same music had announced the death of Leonid Brezhnev. Fifteen months later, it heralded the death of his successor, Yuri Andropov. Now, barely more than a year later, it was being heard again: Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party was dead at the age of 73.

For months, it had been apparent to the United States that Chernenko was in falling health. It was believed only a matter of time before he would succumb. When he finally died, it was pretty much business as usual in Washington.

President Reagan, who recently had been sworn in for his second term, had just ordered a U.S. negotiating team to go to Geneva for strategic arms talks, which had been in recess for 15 months.

It was an occasion for Reagan to talk tough about the need for the Star Wars defense system and the MX missile. Reagan stressed that the U.S.-Soviet negotiations would probably be a long, drawn-out process. "I don't expect we'll make very much progress for a while," he said. It was definitely not business as usual in Moscow on March 11, 1985.

While Radio Moscow played its somber music, the Central Committee was holding an emergency meeting to put Chernenko's successor in place.

To Western observers the Soviet options seemed clear: pick yet another caretaker, like Andrei Gromyko, 75, or Viktor Grishin, 70, or make the generational break that had been forecast for so long. The committee chose the bolder course: Mikhail Gorbachev, 54, became the new head of the Soviet Union.

The committee chose the bolder course: Mikhail Gorbachev.

His selection was announced little more than four hours after the announcement of Chernenko's death.

Some U.S. analysts were quick to warn that just because Gorbachev was younger, there was no reason to expect great changes in the Soviet Union. As they saw it, he would simply be a younger version of the usual Soviet leader. Sovietologist Dimitri Simes said there might be a difference in style, "but nothing is going to change radically."

Such analyses were made as then-Vice President George Bush went to Moscow for Chernenko's funeral — and a meeting with the new Soviet leader. Even as Chernenko was being buried, stories began to appear in the Western media about the "teeth of steel" behind the broad smile of Mikhail Gorbachev.

Typical of this reporting was a Time magazine article which said:

"...The principal augury out of the Kremlin was not one of change, certainly not change in the sense of sweeping internal reform and more accommodating patterns of behavior abroad. Quite the contrary, everything that Gorbachev has said, and everything that can be read between the lines, suggests that his accession heralds not change but continuity. What a difference five years can make."

The toll from tobacco

WASHINGTON — While you read this column, three Americans will die of smoking-related illnesses. Not surprising, considering that in 1986 the Surgeon General reported, among other horrible things, benzene concentrations in cigarettes up to 2,000 times greater than the amounts that caused Perrier water to be pulled from markets worldwide. What is surprising, and will flabbergast future generations, is that public policy is so flaccid regarding the nation's foremost cause of preventable death.

Policy may become more muscular in the aftermath of an anomalous controversy, one concerning a major corporation's attempts to market in a normal way a legal, indeed subsidized, product. The product is addictive (80 percent of adults using it want to quit; two-thirds have tried and failed), sickening and often lethal when used as it is intended to be used.

Today's subject is cigarettes and the task, not exactly chivalric, is one of protecting "virtile females." They have various attributes, but the one most lovely to R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company is that they are minimally educated.

According to a company marketing memo, virtile females are 18 to 20, have no education beyond high school, work in entry-level service or factory jobs, wear jeans and knit tops, watch "Roseanne," enjoy such events as motorcycle races, tractor pulls, monster truck competitions. Virtile females are the market segment targeted by the new brand "Dakota," which may be promoted by Dakota-sponsored "Nights of the Living Hunk" and male strip shows.

Reynolds recently retreated from a plan to test-market a brand, "Uptown," targeted at blacks in inner cities, a group that already smokes much more than whites. (Billboards — advertisements that cannot be turned off or otherwise avoided — hawk cigarettes are concentrated most heavily in inner cities.)

Tobacco companies bring a chilly clarity to the task of coping with a shrinking market. They use sophisticated marketing like a sniper's rifle, drawing beads on the most vulnerable, manipulable Americans. The rate of smoking is two-and-a-half times as high among Americans who have not finished high school as among college graduates.

America pays $52 billion annually — $221 per American — in health care, insurance costs and lost productivity because of tobacco, which every year kills more Americans than World War II did. The toll from tobacco is far higher than from cocaine, crack and heroin, combined. One thousand deaths a day, one every 90 seconds. If an industrial accident killed everyone in the Augusta, Ga., metropolitan area, the nation would be horrified. That is the scale of the annual tobacco disaster.

Last week, Sen. Edward Kennedy chaired a spirited hearing that considered, among other good ideas, Sen. Bill Bradley's proposal to deny tax deductions for tobacco advertising — $2.5 billion of it annually. The companies, spending $6.9 million a day on advertising and promotions, cheekily claim it is all aimed at winning market shares, and none of it is aimed at children.

But about half of all smokers start by the time they are 15; few start after 21. Only 10 percent of smokers switch brands a year. Death and intelligence cost the cigarette companies 6,000 customers a day. That many new smokers must be found daily to keep the companies running in place.

Cigarette advertising plays upon teenagers' desire for autonomy and anxiety about social acceptance and sexual allure. If just 3 percent of cigarette sales are to underage children, that market segment spends $1 billion, giving the companies $150 million in profits.

New smokers are disproportionately women and minorities. Forty years ago, just 3 percent of women with cancer had lung cancer. Now 20 percent do.

You say cigarette advertising is off television? Look again. Cigarette signs are in most of the key television camera sight lines in sports arenas and stadiums. On NBC's 93-minute telecast of the 1989 Marlboro Grand Prix, there were 4,997 images of Marlboro signs, 519 of Marlboro billboards and 249 of the Marlboro car. The brand name was visible 46 of the 93 minutes — 49 percent of the telecast.

Targeted marketing, a common tactic, is now considered disgusting when the targeted group is picked because it is badly educated and informed, and hence manipulable, and the product being marketed is injurious. But senior executives who set the tobacco companies' marketing strategies do not have daughters who fit the "virtile female" profile.

One wonders: Do the executives' daughters smoke? If so, are the executives pleased? If so, are they not strange parents?

The toll from tobacco is far higher than from cocaine, crack and heroin, combined.

Job training program fraught with fraud

WASHINGTON — Ask Dan Quayle what he is most proud of from his years in the Senate, and he will say the Job Training Partnership Act. It was a good idea — federally subsidized job training for the poor to save money down the road on welfare. But what the bureaucracy has done with that $3 billion a year program is nothing to be proud of. The participants would have been better off if Quayle had simply handed them the cash.

The program hasn't put a dent in the welfare rates for poor and uneducated workers. Half of the people trained by private companies using taxpayers' money were never hired permanently by those companies when the subsidy ran out. And 60 percent of them already had high school diplomas when they took advantage of this program for the "uneducated."

The problem, according to our sources at the Labor Department, is accountability. The JTPA doesn't have any.

Each state that gets JTPA money makes its own rules, and in many cases the states can't even tell the federal government where the money went. When federal auditors have found fraud, they have also found contracts so loosely written that there is no way to demand compensation for wasted money.

The JTPA was formed in 1982. Since 1985, auditors from the Inspector General's Office of the Labor Department have been sounding the alarm, but the department simply discounts their reports.

Our associate Tim Warner has seen those internal investigations that the department chooses to gloss over. The auditors have found widespread fraud, abuse and misuse of JTPA funding.

Overall, according to the inspector general's staff, the JTPA has only slightly reduced the number of trainees dependent on welfare. The states and private businesses using JTPA grants are hiring trainees who are not qualified as disadvantaged or uneducated, leaving the truly needy still in the welfare lines.

In Scott County, Ky., the auditors found that the state used $2.54 million in taxpayers' money to train 545 auto workers who did not qualify as needy.

In Houston, $41 million was spent over two years and less than a third of the money went into training programs. The rest was spent on administration.

Another inspector general audit looked at 263 JTPA contracts and found that 83 percent of them — $189 million worth — had no provision in the contracts to protect against fraud and no way for the government to get the money back if it was being misused. More than half of the contracts didn't even give the federal government the right to audit the state agencies assigned to distribute the money.

In Houston, one agency under contract to the JTPA spent $104,085 in one year traveling to conventions and paying dues to a professional organization.

In Mississippi, $1.2 million was spent on a youth job training program and much of the money was spent on computers after the program was over. In that program, only 56 percent of the trainees met the goal of upgrading their reading and math skills. Labor Department officials and congressional staffers recently drafted some proposals to increase accountability in the JTPA. But some of our sources in the department say the proposals don't go far enough and the JTPA is still a wide open invitation to abuse.

Each state that gets JTPA money makes its own rules.

Bush unveils transportation legislation

WASHINGTON — President Bush today presented a new transportation policy that officials say will seek to improve the nation's road, rail and air systems by shifting a large portion of the federal planning and financing commitment to states and local governments.

Administration officials said the policy would address mobility problems on land, sea and air, urging states and local municipalities to rely more on revenues generated through tolls, transportation taxes and other user fees.

Bush was to announce the first new transportation policy in a decade to legislators at the White House, and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, who drafted the document, was to detail the plan in congressional testimony later in the day.

FDA announces change in food labels

WASHINGTON — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, likening the supermarket to the Tower of Babel, has announced the first major government effort to improve food labeling in 17 years.

The labeling changes to be proposed by the Food and Drug Administration this year will require most foods to carry consistent nutrition labels, Sullivan said. Currently, the FDA requires nutrition labeling only when a food company adds vitamins, minerals or protein or makes a nutritional claim. About 60 percent of all packaged foods currently bear nutrition labels, most provided voluntarily by manufacturers.

Sullivan said Wednesday the labeling changes are needed to reduce the "confusion and frustration" that exists among Americans trying to select healthful foods.

Older mothers can have healthy babies

BOSTON — Women who wait until age 30 or older to have children appear as likely as younger women to have healthy babies, but do face more medical risks themselves, researchers said.

A study involving more than 3,900 women found no significant differences in the rates of prematurity, low birth weight, growth retardation or death among babies born to older women than those whose mothers were 29 or younger.

However, the study found older mothers were twice as likely to develop pregnancy-induced complications such as diabetes and high blood pressure and twice as likely to give birth through Caesarean section as women under 30.

The overall results nevertheless are "good news" for women who worry delaying childbearing may jeopardize their chances of having healthy infants, said Gertrud Berkowitz, co-author of the study published Wednesday in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Witnesses: Hazelwood appeared sober

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood did not appear intoxicated before the Alaskan supertanker set sail and slammed into Bligh Reef, causing the nation's worst oil spill, two defense witnesses said.

After 4 1/2 weeks of testimony by 44 witnesses, the prosecution rested its case Wednesday with a final witness who said the captain was drunk when he sailed his tanker out of Valdez and still drunk when it hit the reef.

The defense opened its case later in the day, presenting a witness who testified Hazelwood was in her Valdez shop buying flowers during the time a prosecution witness said the skipper was in a bar drinking.

Derailment kills three, injures 152

PHILADELPHIA — One engineer said a dislodged motor may have caused the derailment of a rush-hour subway train that killed three people and injured 152, but federal investigators said it was unclear why the accident occurred.

The packed six-car train jumped off the tracks in a tunnel near the busy 30th Street station Wednesday morning and officials who organized the rescue from the bloody scene called it the city's worst transit accident.

Ethics Committee admonishes Gingrich

WASHINGTON — The House Ethics Committee has "admonished" House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich for failing to disclose a real estate deal with his daughter, one of 20 allegations against the Georgia congressman under review by the panel, said the lawmaker who initiated the investigation.

It remained unclear what action, if any, the Ethics Committee took Wednesday on the other 19 charges against Gingrich, who led the ethics battle that forced former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, from Congress last year.

Quoting congressional sources, The Washington Post reported Thursday that the committee voted to drop its review of the remaining allegations against the second-ranking House Republican.

Poindexter jury seated; North due

WASHINGTON — A jury has been seated for the Iran-Contra trial of former national security adviser John Poindexter, and the judge in the case has ruled that prosecutors can call Oliver North as the first witness.

Opening statements were set to begin today in U.S. District Court after which North was scheduled to take the stand. There were indications North's testimony would last several days.

ers deny Hi-Oaks Development Co. permission to build up to 680 homes on 683 acres north of the Orange County line and east of the Econlockhatchee River. P&Z commissioners also denied a 432-acre development at the northeast shore of Lake Mills.

But P&Z commissioners allowed a 221-acre development north of Chuluota and east of Old State Road 13, favoring planning that went into the development.

County commissioners will consider the recommendations in April and forward their recommendations to the state for review. Final county commission approval is expected in July.

More than 100 Chuluota-area residents turned out to the meeting Wednesday night to urge land planners to prevent suburban development from encroaching into their rural neighborhoods.

"I had to pull over to the side of the street the other night on the way home," said Harry Smith. "Do you want to know why? Because there were three deer up ahead in my headlights. Do you think you're going to see three deer walking through clustered homes? I don't think so."

In the most controversial of the three proposals, Hi-Oaks Development Co. sought approval to build 680 homes on the wooded and marshy site east of the Econlockhatchee River. The Hi-Oaks proposal has raised the greatest concern because the developers wanted to build nearly two homes per acre on environmentally sensitive lands near the Econ River.

The developers are Orange County counties Charles Clayton and W. Malcolm Clayton. The pair have built about 5,000 homes on either side of the Seminole-Orange County line during the last 44 years, Charles Clayton said.

A three-county St. Johns River Water Management District task force is considering imposing building restrictions for the entire length of the Econ that would prevent construction closer than 580 feet from the river's edge and at least 50 feet from the wetlands that feed the river with water. The task force is expected to vote on the proposal March 13.

Most of the Hi Oaks project east of the river is 1,000 feet or more from the river's edge.

Seminole County planners opposed the Hi-Oaks plan saying the proposed density of nearly two homes per acre is too high for the area where one- to five-acre homesteads are common. Planners also said roads in the area are inadequate for the 6,800 car trips expected to go to and from the development. Planners also oppose the project because there is no water or sewer available.

Hi-Oaks engineer Hugh Harling said water and sewer lines would be extended along McCulloch Road to the sites by way of a bridge over the Econ. Residents opposed allowing a bridge to be built to allow development.

Sharon Carveth of the Sierra Club said only one or two bridges are expected to be permitted over the Econ throughout the entire three-county course of the river. Carveth said many developers would seek similar bridge approvals and allowing one now is premature.

Charles Clayton appealed to commissioners to consider the quality of their developments, offering a school site on the project.

"We're community builders," Clayton said. "We want challenges like this. We need the traffic for the expressway. We're a team with you. We're here to work with you."

P&Z commissioners sided with the residents, saying the task force should be allowed to complete its job. They voted to recommend county commissioners oppose the project.

P&Z commissioners also opposed the 432-acre Lake Mills Estates proposal on the shores of Lake Mills by a 4-1 margin, with commissioner Harry Hagle voting for the project. Hagle said the approval would allow a planned development on the site at a housing density at two homes per acre or lower. Developer Sami Herich sought a 2.3-home per acre land use at the site.

But residents said the density should be increased over the maximum one-home per acre zoning. Aaron Gorovitz, attorney for the project, said to "buffer" surrounding neighborhoods from the project, half-acre and one-acre homesteads would be built along its perimeter with higher home concentrations being developed internally. Residents opposed the Lake

Mills Estates proposal to place homes on half-acre lots fronting the lake. All of the current lakefront homes are either one or five acres in size, they said.

The Lake Mills Estates area also lacks water and sewer service and the area utility company, Southern States Utilities, would need state approval to expand into the site, Gorovitz said. Although Gorovitz assured commissioners there would be no development if the services couldn't be provided, commissioners sided with residents in opposing the proposal.

Commissioners did recommend approval of the Magnolia Lake proposal west of Old SR 13, which land owner Mike Hattaway characterized would be similar to the exclusive Lake Forest development west of Sanford.

Residents strongly decried the proposal, saying the site is not served by a road. Old SR 13 is an unimproved abandoned railroad right of way and is the only direct access to the site.

Although Hattaway said he had county permission to use the right of way, Tom Chitty noted the permission to use the path to remove fill from two borrow pits on the site, permission that would expire within three years. Chitty is president of the Southeast Seminole County Voter's Association, representing the 1,300 Chuluota-area residents.

Commissioners voted 4-3 in favor of the proposal. It was the first of the three Chuluota proposals considered.

Meeting

If the review is not completed, commissioners may schedule a third hearing, possibly next week.

The hearings will be in the county commission chambers of the County Services Building on First Street.

Overstreet Investment Co. proposes to build 499 homes and a golf course on 837 acres between the Wekiva River and Markham Woods Road. Most of the homes will be "clustered" on one-third acre lots, a plan generally endorsed by the state and county.

County planners will oppose Overstreet's "Lexington Estates" proposal tonight because the overall density of the project is slightly more than one home per buildable acre. Though supporting clustering to preserve more open areas on sensitive lands, county officials require the average housing density not exceeding one home per acre.

Because the project is similar in nature to the controversial nearby Plantation development, where residents and environmentalists opposed clustering, little opposition to the Overstreet proposal is expected.

Two proposals could affect the Spring Hammock project south of Lake Mary. George Siler wants to change the land use of seven undeveloped acres classified for recreational purposes to commercial uses west of U.S. Highway 17-92 and south of Nottingham Road. The Florida Department of Natural Resources is seeking to buy the same seven acres for preservation and recreation.

County planners oppose the proposal because of its possible preservation and its wetlands that cover 90 percent of the site.

A chemical and electronics manufacturing company wants to expand its business located within the Spring Hammock area. The owner, David M Co., is operating the business on half of an 18-acre site east of County Road 419 within the Spring Hammock area. Spring Hammock was classified for recreational purposes by the county after the business was founded. DNR opposes the proposal and has in the past sought to buy the undeveloped portion of the site to prevent further industrial encroachment into the preservation area.

County staff is approving the project with promises from David M officials the nearby Environmental Study Center will be screened from the site with trees, lighting and noise will be kept to a minimum at night, and road improvements will be made into the site.

Heathrow developer, Arvida Corp., is asking the county to approve an 227-acre addition to the development west of Interstate 4 north to Markham Road and to spread 314 homes already allowed in the existing development into the new area.

The proposal will serve to reduce the density throughout the entire development, although 100 homes might have been successfully added to Heathrow at Arvida's request under allowable zoning regulations. County staff doesn't oppose the request.

by the "Yes I Can" award that she won. She is one of only 44 students nationwide who won it this year.

The award, sponsored by the Shell Oil Company, is given to young people with disabilities who achieve high standards in the competitive job market, in academics, in athletics, in community service or in independent living skills.

Violante said that she is not going to Toronto to pick up her prize. "I'm not too thrilled with that," she said.

A native of Utica, New York, Violante said she doesn't want to go back where it's cold.

Becht said that she has seen Violante transform from a frightened girl, who six months ago was unsure of herself, to a self-reliant young woman who arranges for her own transportation to work and fights with the HRS for her right to have a wheelchair to help with her mobility.

"At work, she has modified her working conditions to help her work faster and better," Becht said. "She's gotten them to give her an electric stapler, for example, so she can staple with one hand rather than struggling to do it."

Other minor changes in the routine initiated by Violante have made the job easier, but Becht said the important thing was that she was able to modify the job on her own.

"We started off with Dawn just opening the mail because that's all we thought she could do," Quinones said, "but every time we've added something new, she's met the challenge."

As part of the Transition Service Project, Becht trains exceptional education students in basic job skills, helps them secure employment and then accompanies them on the job to help them make the transition from the workshop to the workplace. On average, she stays with a student for 11 weeks.

"After a week, she was telling me to go away," Becht said of Violante.

Violante shrugged and giggled. "I could do the job on my own," she said, though she admits that her efficiency dropped at first after Becht left because she "wasn't paying attention to her work." Quinones said, however, that she is now at least as efficient as other employees, if not more so.

Violante is not happy with the treatment she is getting from the bank with which she is currently dealing.

"I'm going to another bank," she told Becht. "I'm going to get a checking account too."

After a moment, she leaned to Becht and asked if she would accompany her on the trip to banks.

"She's still a little scared of things," Becht explained later. "She wants to be able to have the skills to move out on her own, but she is a little frightened to be completely independent."

Violante said that she likes everything about her job. Except getting there.

"I have to take a special taxi," she explained, "because I can't get on a regular bus." The taxi is sometimes late and Violante has to call and complain. "But I always get to work."

76ers need to stay on course

Now that Philadelphia has reached the top of the Atlantic Division, exuberant Sixers forward Charles Barkley is calling for his team to maintain perspective.

Philadelphia defeated the New York Knicks 110-93 Wednesday night to move past the Knicks into first place by a half-game.

"We're glad to be in first place but we don't want to get too high or too low," said Barkley, who had 15 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists. "We've got a long way to go."

Elsewhere, Phoenix beat Washington 113-111, Portland nailed Boston 130-117, the LA Clippers nipped New Jersey 119-115, Miami dumped Orlando 122-105, the LA Lakers tipped Dallas 103-91 and Denver topped Minnesota 86-73.

Tribe improves mark to 5-0

SANFORD — David Eckstein gave Seminole its first lead with a two-run single in the fourth while Jeremy Chumat pitched a three-hitter Wednesday to lead the Tribe to a 10-2 junior varsity baseball win over Lyman.

The visiting Greyhounds took a 2-0 lead in the top of the second inning. Seminole cut the advantage in half with a run in the third, then went ahead to stay on Eckstein's single. The Tribe blew the game open with a six-run fifth.

Demetry Beamon had two singles and Matt Freeman doubled to lead the Seminole offense. Chumat struck out seven without walking a batter and allowed just one earned run.

Seminole will try to improve on its perfect start Thursday, hosting Oviedo at 3:30 p.m.

Players bid to end deadlock

NEW YORK — In a dramatic effort to break a spring training lockout that reached 22 days Thursday, the Players Association has offered to compromise on the issue of salary arbitration.

Under the proposal, players in the disputed category would be ranked in terms of total Major League service, with the top half eligible for arbitration and the bottom half not.

Owners insist that only players with three years of service be eligible, while the union, until its latest proposal, wanted it reduced to two years.

Owners' representative Chuck O'Connor said he would present the proposal to the Players Relations Committee later Thursday.

FOOTBALL

Half of Robbie Stadium sold

MIAMI — H. Wayne Huizenga, chairman of Blockbuster Video Inc., has purchased half interest of Joe Robbie Stadium and 15 percent of the Miami Dolphins, club president Tim Robbie announced Wednesday.

Robbie said Huizenga, who heads the nation's largest video retail chain, will have budget approval responsibilities, but the family of the late Joe Robbie would retain control of the operations of the stadium and the football team.

"This arrangement with Mr. Huizenga has no effect on the Robbie family's role overall and day-to-day management of the club," Robbie said. "On the stadium side, we have sold a 50 percent interest in Robbie Stadium Corp. to Mr. Huizenga, which gives him the right to review budgets on an annual basis and involve himself in all major acquisitions and improvements on the stadium."

Flames burn Penguins early

CALGARY, Alberta — Theoren Fleury scored short-handed during Calgary's three-goal first period and added two assists Wednesday night to spark the Flames to a 6-3 triumph over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The decision allowed the Flames to overtake the Edmonton Oilers for first place in the Smythe Division by one point and kept the Patrick Division's runner-up Penguins six points behind the idle New York Rangers.

The Flames ended a 17-day homestand with a 5-2-0 record while the Penguins' winless road streak since Mario Lemieux went out of the lineup with a back ailment, reached 0-6-1.

In other NHL action Wednesday, Winnipeg dumped Quebec 6-3; Minnesota edged Chicago 5-4; and Montreal stopped Los Angeles 5-2.

Win moves Whiskey River into tie for second place

From staff reports

SANFORD — Whiskey River moved into a tie for second place in the Sanford Recreation Wednesday Night Softball League with a 9-8 come-from-behind victory over RMC at Chase Park.

The win raises Whiskey River's record to 4-3 while RMC fell to 2-6. No information was received on the scheduled game between the Sanford Police Benevolent Association and the Killer Bees.

The Killer Bees lead the league with at least a 5-1 record. RMC and Harcar Aluminum Products are next at 4-3. SPBA is 2-4 and RMC 2-6. Next week's schedule has the Killer Bees taking on Whiskey River at 6:30 p.m. and Harcar facing SPBA at 7:30 p.m. RMC has the week off.

Whiskey River led 4-2 entering the top of the fifth inning when RMC came up with six runs on six hits. The big hit in the inning was an inside-the-park grand slam by Mike D'Amico.

But Whiskey River picked up a run in the fifth and three in the sixth to tie the game 8-8 entering the seventh. Whiskey River retired RMC on three fly balls in the top of the seventh and came to bat looking for the run that would send them home with a victory.

The first two batters went out on fly balls and it looked like the game was headed to extra innings. But James Garner tripled to right-center and Johnny Haddock followed with a single to end the game.

Contributing to a 21-hit attack for Whiskey River were Trey Brasser (triple, two singles, two runs scored), Spencer Baggett (three singles, two runs scored), Mike Rotundo (three singles), Garner (triple, single, two runs scored) and A.W. Ives (triple, single).

Also chipping in offense were Haddock (two singles, run scored), Jimmy Jenkins (two singles), Ron Ryan and Frank Sigg (one single and one run scored each) and Jack Jenkins and Scott Normandin (one single each).

RMC made excellent use of its hits, scoring its eight runs on just eight hits. Providing the offense were Tom Tews (double, single, run scored), Mike D'Amico (grand slam, run scored), John D'Amico and James Ledford (one single and two runs scored each), Delton McCormick and Bob Keeney (one single and one run scored each) and Benito Aviles (single).

Greenlee, Twiggs deliver

Two-out hit lifts Lyman over Tribe

By TONY DEBORNER
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — In a game that neither team seemed to want to win, Heath Greenlee singled home the winning run with two out in the seventh inning to lift Lyman to a 4-3 win over Seminole in a Seminole Athletic Conference baseball game at Lyman High School.

"We won this one by the skin of our teeth," said Lyman coach Bob McCullough, whose team improved to 7-2, 2-1 in the SAC. "We tried to give this one away but we couldn't."

"We just didn't play good defense. We hit the ball and got as many scoring opportunities as we could. But we just put our pitchers in difficult spots all night with errors."

To their credit, the Lyman mound triumvirate of Frank Harmer, Jason Goodpastor and Chuck Lamb didn't let their teammates' poor fielding (six errors) rattle them.

Harmer started and went five innings before leaving with stiffness in his shoulder and the Greyhounds up 3-1. Goodpastor came on and pitched well but the Seminoles still managed to tie the score 3-3 with a pair of unearned runs in the sixth inning.

After Mike Senechek reached on an error in the seventh inning and Erskin Howard came on to pinch run, Seminole had the potential lead run on base. A stolen base and a ground ball later, Howard was on third.

On came Lamb, who has been a thorn in Seminole's side all season. This would be no different as Lamb struck out the two batters he faced to kill the rally.

"Lamb has a lot of poise and control," said Seminole coach Mike Powers, who has seen his club lose to Lyman three times already this year, twice by one run. "He's a good pitcher. When he throws that curve, and he has a good one, he's not going to have to many problems."

As it was, Lamb's moment of glory was almost snatched away by Seminole's Willie McCloud, who started the game on the mound for Seminole but moved to left field in the fourth inning when he also experienced tenderness in his pitching shoulder.

In the seventh inning, after Joe Talbot doubled and Kevin Waincoat was intentionally walked to give Lyman runners at first and second with one out, McCloud gave a glimpse of his ability when he ran down a shot by Lamb in the left-center field power alley for the second out.

McCloud almost pulled off the Heat beats Magic to take 2-1 lead in season series

United Press International

MIAMI — Rookie Scott Haffner scored 10 of his 14 points in the first five minutes of the fourth quarter Wednesday to seal a 122-105 Miami Heat victory over in-state rival Orlando.

It was the Heat's second straight victory and the win gave Miami a 2-1 edge over the Magic with one more game left to play this season, in Orlando. It was also the fourth straight loss for the Magic.

Miami was led by Rony Seikaly with 31 points and 21 rebounds. Rory Sparrow added 19 points off the bench.

Reggie Theus scored 31 for Orlando and Nick Anderson had 19.

The Heat took an 81-77 lead into the fourth quarter when Haffner, a 6-4 shooting guard, hit five shots without a miss to make the score 100-88 with 7:51 left in the game. The Heat held on from there.

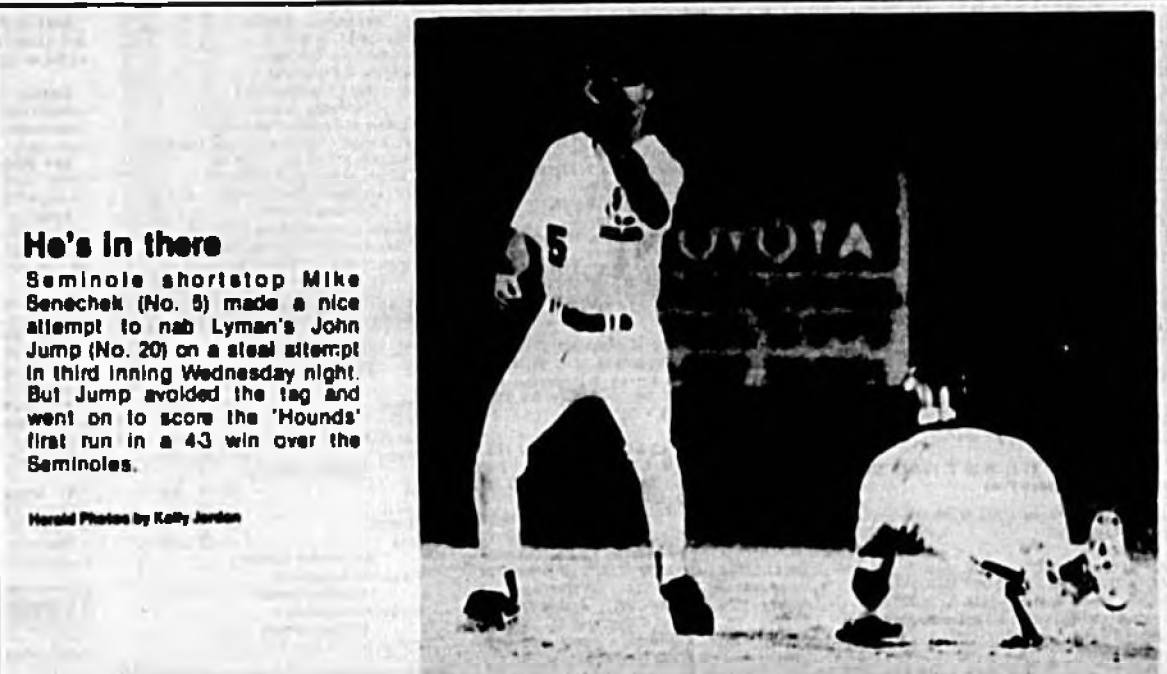

The two teams played evenly in the first 12 minutes and the Heat went into the second quarter with a 24-23 lead. Miami quickly expanded the margin, and Grant Long's two free throws with 8:51 to go made it 35-27.

The Heat later went on a 16-2 run, and Seikaly's basket inside made it 58-39 with 1:39 left in the half. Orlando scored four straight free throws by Reggie Theus and Sidney Green and a goal-tend call on Seikaly.

The Magic closed it up again in the third quarter, outscoring the Heat 34-23. Orlando got an 8-0 run of its own going midway through the quarter on a drive by Mark Acres and three inside power moves by Terry Catledge, narrowing the Heat lead to 69-59 with 7:29 left in the period.

Orlando kept its drive going and when Catledge sank two free throws with 13 seconds left trailed 79-77. Rory Sparrow's 13-footer at the buzzer widened the Miami margin to 81-77 going into the final quarter.

Oviedo squeezes Lake Mary in 11th

By DEAN SMITH
Herald sports writer

LAKE MARY — Greg Twiggs squeezed home the winning run in the 11th inning and out-dueted Lake Mary ace Curt Prom on the mound as Oviedo defeated the Rams 4-3 in Seminole Athletic Conference baseball action Wednesday night.

The win advances the Lions' record to 5-3 overall and 1-1 in the SAC. Oviedo's next game is Friday night when they host Seminole at 7 p.m.

Lake Mary falls to 7-4 overall and 2-1 in the SAC. The Rams have a home game tonight starting at 7 p.m. against Dr. Phillips before traveling to Lake Howell Saturday to take on the Silver Hawks at 1 p.m.

Both Twiggs and Prom struggled early. Prom gave up three runs and eight hits over the first four innings while Twiggs surrendered three runs and seven hits over the first five innings. But once they settled down, they were virtually unhittable.

From the fourth through the 10th, Prom only allowed two hits and four base runners. At one point, he retired 19 of 21 batters. Twiggs was almost as tough, giving up only two hits over his last six innings of work and retiring 13 of the last 14 men he faced.

Twiggs ended up with a nine-hitter, striking out 10 and walking only three, while Prom gave up 10 hits, struck out five and walked two.

Oviedo finally got the break it was looking for in the 11th when Kevin Twiggs's grounder was booted for an error and Rufus Boykin went in to pinch run. An out later, Boykin broke for second and Jason Huish hit a perfect hit-and-run shot through the hole vacated by the second baseman, sending Boykin to third.

Greg Twiggs then came to the plate. On a 3-and-2 pitch, Lion coach Mike Ferrell called for the suicide squeeze. Twiggs' bunt was perfect and Boykin scored. Huish also scored when the catcher's throw to first hit Twiggs and rolled into right field.

"That was probably as fine a high school baseball game as you will see," said Ferrell. "I knew it was going

Quilters get back to the 'Garden'

SANFORD — The Central Florida Quilters Guild's "Quilter's Garden" held recently at the Sanford Civic Center was a showcase of quilted art and excellent workmanship from members of the guild and the quilting community.

The three-day event, held March 2-4 at the Sanford Civic Center, featured many interesting activities including quilt exhibits, a miniature quilt auction and a merchants mall.

There were also two film presentations. One film, "Hearts and Hands", depicted in a dramatic presentation, the role played by women and their textiles in the 19th century. It illustrated how women made quilts whose beauty exceeded their functions.

"Quilts in Women's Lives" was a series of portraits of seven contemporary quiltmakers who revealed the passion and values behind their quilting tradition.

Judges at the show were Deanna Powell and Marilyn Buffmire, who presented a special display of their own quiltwork.

Powell is a lecturer, teacher and quiltmaker, who specializes in color and design, expansion apparel, and clothing embellishment.

With 18 years experience teaching needlework, Powell conducts national workshops and seminars.

Buffmire, a graduate of Michigan State University in retailing and advertising, began quilting in 1973. She opened Village Quiltworks in Rockledge in 1978. She has taught and judged for 12 years.

Quilters Garden quilt exhibits featured pieced quilts, applique quilts, crib size and wall hangings, miniature quilts, group quilts and other quilted items. These are the winners of the 1990 CFFQ Show:

Mother hurt over calls about son's crime

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of 10 lovely (all wanted) children, all by one father, and we've been married almost 24 years. We have never been on welfare. My husband works, and

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

I work in home day-care. Our 20-year-old moved out, fell in with an immature crowd and stole some beer. (He was waiting in the car — he didn't go in.) He was charged with theft, but because this was his first offense, he had to pay a fine and do 100 hours of community service.

His "crime" was reported in the newspaper. As soon as the newspapers were out, I had half a dozen calls from people I hardly knew saying they had seen my son's name in the paper. How terrible!

Why do people do this? We were hurt and embarrassed over the whole thing, and didn't need these phone calls to pour salt on our wounds. Also, many of my husband's co-workers brought it up at work; he carried a heavy heart for weeks.

Abby, I have had enough insults about having 10 children. They are all good kids — one is in college and the 12th-grader is an "A" student, but nobody calls to say, "Isn't that nice?"

Why are people so mean? And how can we answer them? Thanks for listening. I feel better already.

MOTHER OF 10
DEAR MOTHER: Only the most insensitive and mean-spirited person would call, as these people did. Should anyone else bring it up, say, "He made a mistake, but he's our son and we love him. We appreciate your interest and concern, but be assured, his family is behind him 200 percent.

DEAR ABBY: I have never said any kind of blessing at mealtime. Two questions: Is it proper for a host to ask his dinner guests to join him in saying the blessing? Is it proper for a guest to decline?

D.L. IN ARIZONA

DEAR D.B.: Yes, the host may invite his guests to join him in saying the blessing, and those who wish to join will do so. Those who prefer not to, need not make an issue of it — they should bow their heads and remain silent.

DEAR ABBY: I quote a paragraph from your column: "The heart of education is in our literature, so read for knowledge and read for pleasure. The person who does not read is not better off than the person who cannot read."

The importance of reading has never been more succinctly expressed. I am inclined to think it's an Abby original. In my 82 years, I have never seen it. Abby, those words should be posted in large type in every classroom, library and recreation center where people of all ages gather.

 It would also make a fine slogan for our nation's effort to combat illiteracy.
MRS. MILLICENT ANDERSON

DEAR MRS. ANDERSON: It's original, and I am complimented. And to anyone who wants to use it — help yourself.

Therapy can help cope with inflammation pain

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please write about tenosynovitis-bursitis.

DEAR READER: Tenosynovitis (inflammation of a tendon sheath) and bursitis (inflammation of a joint covering) are usually separate conditions.

Tendons are the smooth, strong attachments of muscles to bones. Surrounding each tendon is a thin envelope of tissue that provides the fluid necessary to lubricate the moving tendon. When this envelope or sheath becomes inflamed — from injury, strain or disease (such as rheumatoid arthritis) — it swells and hardens, sometimes drying out in the process. This leads to extreme pain when the tendon is moved.

In some cases, the lack of lubrication causes a "friction rub," a squeaking or scraping sound as the tendon moves within the sheath. If the inflammation is severe, the pain can be disabling and movement becomes impossible; this can lead to calcium deposits within the tendon or sheath, causing further, chronic disability.

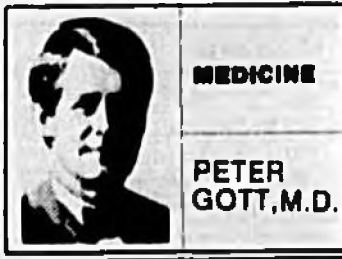

Similarly, most joints in the body are covered by a thin, sensitive membrane called a bursa. A bursa secretes lubricating fluid so the bone surfaces of the joint can move smoothly and painlessly. However, like a tendon sheath, the bursa can become inflamed from trauma (such as repetitive motion), stress (during unaccustomed exercise) or diseases (such as gout and other types of arthritis). This inflammation (bursitis) causes pain on joint movement. The discomfort can be so pronounced that a patient cannot tolerate even infinitesimal amounts of motion.

Treatment for both tenosynovitis and bursitis is attempted in stages. First, rest (with a sling, splint or cast) is mandatory. Heat is sometimes helpful. Doctors usually prescribe anti-inflammatory medicine — such as Indocin, Butazolidin or Motrin — although over-the-counter aspirin and ibuprofen often suffice.

Physical therapy with hot packs, ultrasonic treatments and gentle, passive motion (to maintain mobility) is the next treatment stage. Ultrasonic treatment, in particular, is helpful: A licensed therapist beams high-frequency sound waves to the painful area, sometimes after applying cortisone cream, which appears to accentuate the benefits of ultrasound.

Third, the inflamed areas can

be injected with cortisone. This reduces inflammation and usually leads to permanent relief of symptoms.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

The diamond fit with North turned South aggressive in the bidding. After North rebid one no-trump, South jumped to three spades. That got him to the spade game. He bid it well and played it badly. Declarer took the first trick with dummy's ace of hearts and led the spade queen from dummy. West won the king and quickly cashed two heart tricks. Later East's remaining 10-9-8 of spades took the setting trick. What went wrong? It was pointless to lead dummy's queen of spades. If East held the singleton king, it would be played on the queen, and declarer would later lose two trump tricks. So a low spade from dummy makes sense. Then what happens if East plays low? Declarer should ask himself if he has anything to gain by putting in the jack. Even if it holds, he can only play the ace and give up a spade trick afterward. So he should play the ace. If nothing happens, a spade to dummy's queen will force out the king, and the jack will later pick up the last trump. If either defender started with something like K-10-9-8 of trumps, he cannot be prevented from taking two tricks. But declarer is paid an unexpected dividend when today's layout exists, with the king singleton. The king falls under the ace and only one trump trick is lost.
