Ex-Lake Mary Mayor Faces Ethics Probe

By Rick Brunson Herald Staff Writer

Former Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson is scheduled to appear before a member of the state Commission on Ethics to answer charges that he violated state statutes by making illegal long distance phone calls, using city vehicles for personal business and drawing advance expense money contrary to a city ordinance.

The hearing, announced in a memo from the commission; will be held Feb. 6 at the Seminole County Courthouse.

The findings will be sent to the full commission which will decide the case in March, according to its executive director Lawrence Gonzalez. It will then send its decision, along with recommendations, to Gov. Bob Graham.

If the commission finds no wrongdoing, the charges will be dropped. But if Sorenson violated state statutes he faces a $5,000 fine, along with a reprimand, public censure, and may have to make restitution of any benefits.

The charges were originally made by former Lake Mary City Commissioner Ray Fox in September of last year. After a committee appointed by the City Commission investigated the allegations, they were sent to the ethics commission in Tallahassee

He said the phone calls, made between city hall and his real estate office, were necessary to maintain his business.

Man Accused In Precious Metals Scam Gets Fine, Probation

An Atlanta man accused of defrauding several Seminole County residents of $50,000 via an Altamonte Springs silver and gold outlet was sentenced in absentia Thursday to one year unsupervised probation and a $2,500 fine.

He had pleaded no contest to four counts of petty theft. The state agreed not to prosecute eight counts

Connie Mack Berry was originally charged with one count of first-degree grand theft and 11 counts of second-degree grand theft. A theft of an item or service worth more than $20,000 is first-degree grand theft. The state accepted the pleas to the lesser charges because it was thwarted over a three-year period from prosecuting the case.

Berry was sentenced by Seminole Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr.

Berry was accused of defrauding several Seminole County residents by accepting payment but then not delivering silver bars and gold coins. Berry claimed a dive in the precious metals market prevented him from filling the orders. According to court records, Berry's company, The Kinnishaw Mint. of Atlanta, ran into Anancial problems from the market fluctuations and adverse publicity.

While State Attorney Douglas Cheshire was the original attorney on the case, Assistant State Attorney Beth Rutberg recently handled the

She said the state accepted the plea to the misdemeanors because the prosecution could not make a case a against Berry for several reasons.

The state, she said, considers itself lucky getting the misdemeanor plea.

Ms. Rutberg said the state of Georgia and the federal government were uncooperative in the case. She etted, for example, Georgia's refusal to extradite to Florida Berry's mother who was indicted along with Berry.

She said the difficulty the Seminole office encountered in Georgia "smacked of politics."

Further, she said, most of the wlinesses were from Georgia, some changed their story, and corporate records of the business were poorly kept, or incomplete, or were reportedly burned. There was no 'paper trail.'' she said, adding that the business had gone through bankruptcy and a trustee said no evidence of fraud was uncovered. Customers shortchanged by the company's closing have been given credit according to the bankruptcy trustee, she added.

"We just didn't have enough to prove criminal intent," Ms. Rutberg

Electrical Fire Guts Home While Family On Vacation

A house near Goldenrod was gutted by a fire early Sunday while the occupants were out of town, fire department officials said.

The home of Glenn Marshall, 5230 N. Indiana Ave., received about $100,000 damage after faulty wiring apparently sparked the blaze in the attic at the north end of the house, according to Seminole County Fire Department investigator Bob Christian, But, he added, the cause was still under investigation. The fire was discovered by two teenagers returning to their homes in the area at about 3 a.m.

Christian said Marcus Camacho, 18, of 5332 Tangerine Ave., and Brian Raines, 17, of 5407 Nicholson Ave., both of Goldenrod, saw a glow in the neighborhood. When they went to the home they said flames were shooting through the roof 40 feet into the air.

After breaking open a sliding glass door and checking for occupants, they woke a neighbor who called the fire department, Christian said.

It took firefighters from three stations - two from Seminole County and one from Orange - 45 minutes to put out the fire. The only thing left were the block walls," Christian said.

Optimism On Arms Talks

LONDON (UPI) - Mikhail Gorbachev, regarded as the Kremlin's No. 2 man, told Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that Moscow was optimistic about the upcoming U.S. Soviet talks on resuming arms control negotiations.

During a nearly three-hour meeting Sunday at Chequers. Thatcher's weekend retreat 40 miles from London, the two leaders also agreed on the need to avoid an arms race in

The session lasted an hour longer than expected and Gorbachev, 53, who many believe is next in line to succeed Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, was expected to meet today with Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey

British sources said Gorbachev read out to Thatcher a personal message from Chernenko setting out "the positive attitude" with which Moscow approaches the meeting next month in Geneva between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on resuming arms control talks.

The unit repeatedly entered into hostile territory in Central America in 1982 and 1983 to aid rebels, relatives of the soldiers said in interviews published Sunday in the Detroit Free Press. One father said his son flew missions in Nicaragua.

Doctors Concerned About Schroeder's Sagging Spirits

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - Artificial heart recipient Bill Schroeder is recovering physically from a stroke but doctors are concerned that the man who once craved milkshakes and beer and kidded the staff has lost the zest so crucial for healing.

Schroeder got out of bed with assistance Sunday and sat in a chair for the first time since he suffered the stroke Thursday, said George Atkins, a spokesman for Humana Hospital Audubon where Schroeder received his artificial heart Nov. 25.

But while he was "very conversant" during a visit with his wife, six children and some grandchildren, he was not as talkative as he was before the stroke.

Dr. Allan Lansing, chief medical spokesman for Humana Heart Institute, said he would become concerned if Schroeder did not show steady improvement in attitude soon. A psychiatrist was scheduled to visit Schroeder today, and doctors hoped to get him out of bed again in an effort to lift his spirits.

Police said early today that Amy Hall, 11, saw smoke from a street outside her home early Sunday and ran back into her family's two-room apartment on the third floor to warn her mother, brother and sisters.

Sgt. John Keane of the Bomb and Arson Unit said "there is a possibility they weren't dressed and took the extra time to get dressed. We can't say for sure,' Sue Hall and her five children were found "huddled in

Chicago Schools Reopen

CHICAGO (UPI) - Approval of a new contract by the policy-making board of the Chicago Teachers Union cleared the way today for the opening of schools in the nation's third largest system for the first time in two weeks.

Members of the CTU's House of Delegates Sunday voted 605-59 in favor of the one-year agreement, which calls for a 4.5 percent pay increase and a 2.5 percent one-time bonus for teachers.

'We are pleased to tell the students and the parents and the citizens of Chicago that the strike is suspended, and that classes can resume on Monday," CTU President Jacqueline Vaughn said following the vote.

Rank-and-file members of the teachers union will vote on the pact Thursday. The CTU and the Chicago Board of Education announced before dawn Sunday they had reached a tentative agreement following a 15-hour bargaining session. 'We were convinced at 5:00 this morning that we had gotten the maximum amount that we could possibly get from the Board of Education," Vaughn said.

"We feel that we deserve much, much more, and we feel that we should go together to the Legislature to ensure that the next time ... we will get the kind of salary increases that we deserve without having to resort to a strike." The agreement came in the face of rising public pressure for schools to reopen for the city's 431,000 students.

A two-week Christmas vacation begins Friday, and some observers felt that if a settlement was not reached during the weekend, the strike could drag on until vacation's end Jan. 7.

Operating engineers also approved their tentative contract Sunday, and reported to work Sunday night to get the school buildings ready for resumption of classes.

Other unions, who joined the teachers' walkout on Dec. 3, did not have to formally ratify the new contract, said Timothy Bresnahan, co-chairman of a coalition of trade unions allied with the CTU. Bresnahan said the seal of approval was given to the settlement once coalition officials agreed to the terms of the new

The pond, in Concord, Mass., has been marred in recent years by squat, concrete bathhouses that have become eyesores to history buffs and nature lovers.

Donations To Unopposed Candidates May Become Illegal

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Two state senators, contending unopposed political candidates should not be allowed to accept campaign contributions, have introduced a bill that would make the practice illegal.

The proposal, filed by state Sens. Mattox Hair, D-Jacksonville, and Ken Jenne, D-Hollywood, would provide a maximum penalty of one year in prison for any unopposed candidate who accepts campaign contributions after candidate qualifying ends.

Lawmakers in uncontested races currently are allowed to continue accepting donations after the candidate qualifying deadline. Published reports have indicated that thousands of dollars flowed into the campaign coffers of legislators who faced no opposition after this year's July 27 candidate filing deadline.

The proposed bill would allow unopposed candidates to spend money they receive before the filing deadline. Current law says legislators may put leftover campaign funds into their legislative office accounts, donate it to charities or reimburse contributors.

3 Arrested In VCR, Stereo Theft

A Sears employee has been charged along with two Deltona men in connection with the theft of video recorders and stereo equipment from the Altamonte Mall store. The three have been released on bond.

Altamonte Springs police reported that the 18-year-old Sears worker sold two VCRs and a stereo to the suspects for a total of $20. The merchandise was picked up Saturday at the store's packing and pick-up area. The buyers were to come back at 4 p.m. Saturday to pick up more VCRs and stereos, but were slated to pay $450 for those.

Before 4 p.m. police confronted the suspected employee and he agreed to go through with the second deal while police watched, a police report said.

Two men and a boy arrived and the transaction was made. The men were arrested, but the boy, who is the son of one of the suspects, was not charged because police reported he was not involved.

Charged at about 4:30 p.m. Sunday with conspiracy to commit a felony, dealing in stolen property and grand theft were: the Sears employee, David Richard Barto. 18, of 206 Graham Road, Fern Park; Reinaldo Aviles, 19, and Ignatius Beveduci, 34. #### Noble Leviathon Worth Rescuing

Sixty-or-so feet long, with an enormous, blunt-nosed head, the sperm whale scours the depths of temperate seas for squid, cuttlefish and sharks. Its awesome size, its role in ocean ecology and its evolution over the millennia are reasons enough to save this noble leviathon from extinction. (About 200,000 of the mammals remain.)

But the sperm whales' survival is uncertain. Killing of these creatures was to have stopped this year under an agreement of the International Whaling Commission, the 40-member organization of major whaling

However, Japan, where the sperm whale is prized for its meat, has shown no inclination to go along with the ban. And the U.S. government regrettably has refused to impose penalties on an ally and important trading partner, even though federal law requires sanctions against countries that violate IWC

Instead, a so-called compromise between the two nations will allow Japan to continue hunting sperm whales until 1988 without risking punishment. The Japanese are permitted to take up to 400 sperm whales this season and the same number next year; the number would drop to 200 for 1986-87. In return, the Japanese will stop all commercial whaling by 1988, according to the Commerce Department.

But Japan denies that it has agreed to an overall ban. And its reluctance to abide by IWC rules raises questions about the effectiveness of any unenforced restrictions on sperm whaling. If Japan can get away with violations, other whaling countries may follow suit, thus pushing other species of whales still closer to the brink of extinction.

The United States ought to resume discussions with Japan with an eye toward restricting fishing in American territorial waters if the Japanese do not end the killing of sperm whales, as the IWC requires. Japan would doubtless protest loudly; its whaling industry employs more than 50,000 people.

But whaling will die out anyway if the resource on which it depends is decimated. And no economic interest is compelling enough to justify extinguishing so magnifi-

Tough Fight

The House of Delegates of the American Medical Association has voted overwhelmingly to call for the abolition of boxing. This means that doctors throughout the country will be urged to campaign for state and local anti-boxing laws.

The doctors are in for a fight. Boxing has defenders who are willing to go as many rounds as it takes to defend their favorite sport. But the AMA will not be without allies. Cases of brain injury and death among prizefighters regularly raise the issue of whether boxing is worthy of being called a sport at all.

Boxing goes back to ancient times, but so does throwing Christians to the lions. Through history, boxing enthusiasts have tried to devise rules and other safety measures to make fisticuffs less brutal and more sporting.

Dr. Joseph R. Boyle, president of the AMA, believes there is no way to modify the physical harm of boxing to an extent that would make the sport safe. Head guards may be causing more harm than good, he says, because they allow boxers to absorb all the more pummeling which is harmful to the brain. More padding in boxing gloves would not help, either. Dr. Boyle would prefer bank fists, because fighters would then "break their fists before they do so much damage as they do with gloves."

The AMA position is that boxing is dangerous to the health of the people who engage in it. Doctors have been saying the same thing about cigarette smoking for a long time, and many persons will always insist on the right to smoke. It may be just as hard to keep fighters out of the ring and fans out of their ringside seats.

BERRY'S WORLD

SON! Well, how's It going, Michael?"

By Susan Loden

Most of us do it, some more so than others, but have you ever stopped to consider how we all learned how to

It wasn't an easy process, according to Lynn Holland of Growing Child of Lafayette, Ind. "Child development doesn't proceed evenly and smoothly. Children have spurts and plateaus in maturation. When they start to walk their energy is needed for movement and during this time learning to speak may slow down."

But once a baby becomes a toddler he or she redirects his energy and develops gestures that help convey his needs. He points and pulls you toward what he wants and screws up his face in different ways, Ms. Holland said.

Tots pick up clues that help them understand language. The tone and rhythm of your voice, body posture. facial expressions and hand gestures of those around them help them begin to understand what is being communicated, Ms. Holland said.

Between ages one and two a toddler's sentences are most often single words. "Bail" is likely to mean "I want the ball" and "more" is used to indicate "I want more," according to Ms. Holland.

Adults, she said, aid children in their efforts to talk by expanding on a child's use of a single word and repeating it back in a complete sentence. If a child said "Car" an adult might respond by saying "We're going to ride in the car," Ms. Holland said.

OK, EDDIE, LET'S

But just because toddlers use only single words, she said, doesn't mean you can assume they don't understand what is being communicated. "Comprehension exceeds a persons production of words and this is generally true through out life," she said.

"In fact, up to age 10 a child rarely tries to understand each word. He simply incorporates what he hears into the general scheme of his perceptions at that time." Ms.

Holland said.

Change Is Not Reform

John Randolph of Roanoke, one of the great statesmen of the early republic, frequently reminded voters in his time that "change is not reform.'

One is reminded of that in reading descriptions of the tax proposal submitted to President Reagan by the United States Treasury Department. The authors of the tax plan undoubtedly were wellintended, but their design includes provisions which would be counter-productive if the Reagan administration intends to continue to emphasize economic growth.

The most serious defects in the Treasury proposal are the recommendations for repeal of the investment tax credit and the accelerated depreciation system. The Wall Street Journal concludes that these and other features of the proposal would raise corporate taxes 37 percent. One has to stop a minute and ask oneself: is this the Reagan administration that wants to impose a huge new purden on business? This tax proposal makes on think that there is a Mondale administration in charge of Treasury.

Perhaps this proposal represents the much-discussed new Republican populism, which has a strong anti-business flavor.

Whatever the ideological origins of repeal, it's a bad idea. Repeal would have the most immediate and severe impact on the nation's basic industries, which already are reeling under foreign competition. These industries and the businesses and industries which serve them need the investment credits and accelerated depreciation if modernization is to be accomplished.

Without modernization, these industries will suffer and continue to lose their ability to offer employment. The investment credits and accelerated depreciation are in the tax code because there was broad bipartisan awareness of the need to help American business and industry modernize.

Other provisions of the Treasury plan could have hurtful effects. For example, the proposal to limit deductions for interest could have a crushing impact on the home construction industry and its suppliers. A decline in investment in housing would mean extensive unemploy-

Then these is the proposal for limiting the tax deductibility of charitable contributions. This most probably wouldn't affect those who donate millions of dollars. But it's very likely that it would dry up small contributions to charities, colleges, hospitals and other worthy activities. These small contributions are very important to tax-exempt organizations.

The Treasury tax proposal is a trial balloon. In its present form, it deserves to be shot down. It's inconsistent with the growth theme that has characterized the Reagan administration.

Part Of The Hive

My journalistic colleagues Tom Bethell and Joseph Sobran have come up with a metaphor for and operation of the left. They call it The Hive. The idea is that in a bee hive the different kinds of bees perform different tasks, always advancing the over-all purposes of The Hive. and while they may sting outsiders. they never sting each other.

The overall purpose of the leftist Hive is the advancement of socialism. For that reason, The Hive is much more sympathetic to Castro, for example, than to Pinochet of Chile and was much more drawn to Mao than to the de-socializing Deng. The Soviet Union, gross and brutal as it is, is very much a part of The Hive. Thus George McGovern spoke of Andropov in terms usually reserved for Pericles, while more or less foaming at the mouth when he though of Ronald Reagan. On a day-to-day basis, the members of The Hive go about their various tasks, attacking Margaret Thatcher, pooh-pooing yellow rain. downplaying the Pope assassination plot, depicting Korean Airliner 007 as, maybe, a spy plane, ridiculing Star Wars missile defense, attacking South Africa, interviewing Bishop Bernadin, buzz, buzz, buzz.

Any edition of The New York Times or The Washington Post will provide textbook examples of all this, 'The Hive buzzing away so energetically that the newspapers move around on your coffee table. but the edition of Sunday, Nov., 25, was an absolute collectors' item.

Now everyone in The Hive knows that the United States is supposed to be "flexible" in any arms control negotiations with the Soviets, "flexible" as opposed to "rigid" or "unyielding" or "hard line." That is to say, we should make concessions to the Soviet position. Now anyone who monitors Pravda, Izvestia and other official media organs - indeed, they are all official - knows that Moscow has some very specfic pre-conference demands to make.

That is, it wants the political scalps of Caspar Weinberger and Richard Perle. It would like Kenneth Adelman's too, but Weinberger and Perle, in the immortal Watergate phrase, are the Big Enchiladas. The Soviet media are direct and brutal in advancing this political project.

Everyone knows who Caspar Weinberger is. Richard Perle came to the Defense Department from the staff of the late Senator Henry Jackson. He is knowledgeable to an impressive degree, and on any agreement he is inclined to hold it up to a strong light. Both Weinberger and Perle, that is to say, are are hard-headed as the usual Soviet negotiator.

So what do we read in The Times of Nov. 25, buzz buzz. Lead editorial: "Equally plain, however, is the evidence that key members of the Reagan team are not reconciled to (arms control). Centered at the Pentagon (that's Weinberger and Perle) and Arms Control Agency (that's Ken Adelman), these officials remain convinced that past agreements were damaging to American security (they were). Instead of parity (the Soviets define parity in a self-serving way), they would offer the Kremlin only agreements that produce a clear advantage for the United States." Bzzzzzzzzzzzzz.

When you finish this lead editorial, you move past a discussion by Edward Zuckerman about whether or not a nuclear war would end the world - "All those who oppose the nuclear arms race are doing important work" - to one of te suavest of all the buzzing bees, James Reston: The first serious test of President Reagan's effort to preside over an effective bipartisan foreign policy in his second term will come when he picks the people who will go back to Geneva to talk to the Russians about the control of nuclear weapons." Get It? Bzzzzzz.

Creating More Homeless

NEW YORK (NEA) - They seem to be everywhere - on sidewalks and streets; in parks, doorways and alleys; in bus depots, railroad terminals, subway stations and airport waiting rooms. They are huddled in abandoned automobiles and condemned buildings; sprawled across chairs and benches in hospitals, police stations and public libraries.

They are the homeless - and nowhere in the nation are there more of them than here in New York, a city which this year has sought to offer solace to approximately 100,000 men, women and children processed through its emergency shelters.

On an average night, the city provides shelter to 7,650 individuals and 3,600 families - twice as many homeless people as it cared for only two years ago.

The costs of that operation are staggering. Five years ago, New York spent $8 million to shelter the homeless, but this year it will spend $75 million and begin a three-year, $64 million program to develop new shelter

Other cities also have mounted ambitious programs to care for their homeless. As in New York, however, their efforts have been overwhelmed by the federal government's Draconian cuts in assistance to the poor, Nowhere is the inequity and insensitivity of President Reagan's approach to government more obvious than in his drastic reductions in programs that previously enabled low-income people to retain their homes and their dignity rather than become dependent upon municipal aid to the homeless.

Indeed, the Reagan administration apparently has resorted .to statistical sleight of hand to even deny the existence of a substantial homeless population in this

The Department of Housing and Urban Development produced a report earlier this year that claimed the nation's total homeless population was 250,000 to 350,000 - an estimate universally rejected by public and private agencies working with the dispossessed. They insist that the total actually is 2 million to 3 million.

Federal housing subsidies to aid low- and moderate-income people have been cut in half during Reagan's presidency. Payments to New York residents have been slashed by $49 million during the past two years.

In one highly publicized Reagan administration initiative, the Defense Department was given $8 million to rehabilitate unneeded federal buildings as shelters for the homeless - but the Pentagon used only $900,000 for that purpose, then spent the remaining $7.1 million for its own military pro-

Capitol Hill Pests Harry Lawmakers

WASHINGTON - Capitol Hill is overrun with pests - and they're not all lobbyists, nosy reporters or demanding constituents.

Cockroaches infest the Capitol and the House and Senate office buildings — even the newer ones. It's not that Congress has ignored the problem. It has contracted with exterminators for years. But in the peculiar, penny-pinching way of people with billions to spend, the honorable members are too cheap to pay for a proper job.

The current contract, with Entech Inc., pays $2,000 a month for supposedly keeping roaches out of the hundreds of offices, suites and hideaways in the nine buildings and surrounding grounds that comprise the steadily growing Capitol com-

Gene Budowski, president of Entech, told my reporter Scott Barrett that a more realistic figure would be $5,000 to $6,250 a month, and other exterminators familiar with the job agree.

Like Abe Lincoln's legendary hero being ridden out of town on a rail. Budowski indicated that if it weren't for the honor of the thing, he'd just as soon skip it. Though acknowledging that the Capitol job was a "prestige account," he said he wouldn't bid on it again - not at Congress's prices, anyway. There are other problems besides congressional stinginess that are peculiar to the Job. For one thing, Budowki's crews are only allowed to spray for vermin by request instead of doing so on a more effective, regular basis.

For another thing. Budowski, like his predecessors, has found that many members of Congress and their staffs are uncooperative. Maybe they realize how little Entech is being paid, and figure that any company that gets only about $15 a hour can't have much clout.

At any rate, few congressional employees are willing or able to authorize the exterminators to move books and papers so they can where the little six-legged rascals lurk. "It's very frustrating because and was understandably appalled at it's so simple," Budowksi said. Furthermore, Budowski claims - and this may shock some of you who've read about fancy, three-Campari lunches in Washington that many congressional staffers eat lunch at their desks and keep snacks in their desk drawers for emergencies. Crumbs and forgotten leftovers are the meat and potatoes of the cockroach community. Another headache stems from the fact that the buildings' cafeterias and kitchens are in the jurisdiction of another exterminating firm, and there's no coordination between the two assault teams. As one former contractor explained, food carts being wheeled through the corridors to catered events pick up roaches in the kitchens, and the nervy little hitchhikers peel off along the way in search of new fields to conquer.

It's barely possible that help will arrive with the new Congress next blem."

Before he learned the financial realities of life as a congressional exterminator. DeLay cracked to reporter, "I could make a fortune here if it wasn't a conflict of interest." But when told what the job pays, he hedged: "I'd have to survey the situation before I would do it for $2,000 (a month)."

Will he, then, try to remedy the roach problem by raising the anic? No doubt remembering the c's/arvative constituents who seed him to Washington, DeLay said, S can't say I'm going to work for more (appropriations) money." That, he explained. BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iraq says its warplanes struck a "very large naval target" south of Iran's key oil terminal, one day after a Greek-registered tanker was set ablaze by an Iraqi missile in the Persian Gulf.

There was no independent confirmation of Sunday's reported attack.

The term, "a very large naval target." is generally used by Iraq to describe attacks on supertankers heading for or coining from Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island.

If confirmed, Sunday's attack would be the 61st on international shipping in the Gulf since the so-called "tanker war" - an offshoot of the Iraq Iran war that began over border conflicts in September 1980 - started in

Who Will Assume Control After Pullout?

Troop Withdrawal Talks At Impasse

NAQOURA, Lebanon (UPI) -Israel and Lebanon appeared to be still at an impasse today as they began their 10th round of pullout from southern Lebanon.

Lebanon, claiming its regular army will begin taking over control of the key coastal highway, said it would insist on negotiating first on an expanded role for its army after an Israeli pullout.

Israeli officials, on the other hand, have insisted the two sides reach an agreement on an expanded role for the United Nations Interim Forces in Lebanon by next Thursday's Christmas break.

'We'll speak about the Lebanese army first of all," Brig. Gen. Mohammad Al Hajj, head of the Lebanese delegation, told

Brig. Gen. Amos Gilboa, head of the Israeli delegation, when asked what Israel would do If Lebanon does not agree to an expanded role for the U.N. troops, said, "I don't know."

But Gilboa expressed skepticism over Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami's statement that the regular Lebanese army will take over the coastal road "within a few days."

"I doubt it." Gilboa told a

"The Lebanese Army will deploy to the Awali River within days," Karami said. The Awali, some 24 miles south of Beirut. marks the northernmost position of the Israeli army, which invaded Lebanon in 1982 to oust Palestinian rebels.

Karami's remarks came after Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, who last week visited Israel and Lebanon's powerful ally Syria, gave Lebanese officials a list of Israeli 'suggestions" to expedite the

Newlyweds Should Be Together On Christmas

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a woman who was married before. She has two children, 8 and 11. My new wife and her children have always spent Christmas with her former inlaws. It's become a family tradition - one the kids enjoy and look forward to. So naturally they plan to spend Christmas with Grandma and Grandpa.

Now the problem: I would like to spend Christmas at home with my new family and create our own holiday tradition. I was not invited to Grandma and Grandpa's, but even if I had been, I wouldn't feel comfortable there. They live in another city and expect their guests to stay with them.

I don't want to spend Christmas alone. My own family lives on the East Coast, and I don't want to fish for invitations from my friends.

My wife hates to break the tradition of Christmas with the grandparents because the kids

Any recommendations? HOLIDAY BLUES IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BLUES: I think it's imperative that you and your new wife be together on Christmas. If the kids would be heartbroken unless they went to Grandma and Grandpa's, why not send them there the day before Christmas for a short visit? Ideally, the nuclear family should be together at Christmastime, providing it doesn't start a nuclear war.

'The Best Source Of Comedy Is Real Life'

By Joan Hanauer UPITV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) - Wayne Rogers likes serious comedy, but he certainly isn't above a little light cntertainment.

"The best comedy is when you take a real life story and turn it over," Rogers said in an interview. "The best source of comedy is real life. - take a real life situation out of the newspapers. one that has some conflict and basis in fact and basis in reality and turn it around to make it

. When he starred in "House Calls," he said, he wrote a script based on the shooting of a homosexual San Francisco city councilman, and another with the character of Watergate culprit .G. Gordon Liddy.

"As soon as I finished reading 'Will' (Liddy's autobiography). I sat down and wrote that script in two hours," he said.

"All the good shows do that — that's what 'All In The Family' did, that's ultimately the way 'M-A-S-H' did it. It gives a show longevity, 'Mork & Mindy' and gimmick shows last a couple of years but they run out of gas."

Rogers' latest TV movie, he said, is not exactly a case in point. It's called "He's Fired, She's Hired," to air on CBS Tuesday at 9 p.m. Rogers plays a 48-year-old advertising executive who gets fired.

"You get fired if you drink or steal - or if you live in Detroit," the character says.

He tries to reassure his wife, played by Karen Valentine, who was poor as a youngster. "I'll survive," he says. "You'll never have to separate two-ply Kleenex like your mother did..." The wife goes out and, with her husband's help. goes to work for Elizabeth Ashley in an ad job at which she shines — mostly because he is feeding her material.

"This show doesn't really illustrate what I mean because I don't think we go that deep, Rogers said. "It never deals with what it means to be out of work when you've worked for an organization for a considerable length of time.

"What makes this show funny - I hope - are the characters. This guy I play is really a shallow guy. And he's a guy who's dancin' all the time.

'He's in the advertising business, where 'perception' is reality. Everything is about prestige values, not about real values. He even perceives himself that way. His perception of himself is such that when he loses his job and is faced with that reality, his immediate solution is not to deal with it but to deal with how other people perceive it. 'I can't go anywhere - people will think I'm a loser."

New Probe Asked Of Pentagon Official's Ties To Israelis

Arab-American leader wants President Reagan to reopen a 1978 Justice Department investigation of a Pentagon official who he says offered classified information to Israelt officials.

The reopening of the investigation of Stephen Bryen. then a staff member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and now a deputy assistant defense secretary. was requested by Michael Saba, former executive director of the National Association of Arab Ameri-

The 1978 investigation was triggered by an affidavit in which Saba swore he overheard a conversation in which Bryen offered to let the Israelis see a secret Pentagon document on Arab military bases.

"Two years later, however, the investigation was closed quietly without a determination of innocence or guilt," Saba said in a letter to Reagan. Saba has written a book on the charges that is based largely on documents he obtained from the Justice Department on its first investigation.

Copies of the heavily censored documents released to reporters by Saba revealed the investigation was dropped even though Justice Department investigators recommended that the matter be referred to a federal grand Saba, a Bismarck, N.D., businessman, said a new probe is needed to determine whether Bryen was guilty of espionage or failure to register as a foreign agent.

Bryen has declined to comment on Saba's renewed charges and calls to his office were referred to the Pentagon's public affairs office.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - An where a spokesman said published reports on Saba's book were "enough for us to judge that the book is a combination of half fantasy and half trash."

The spokesman said Bryen would not comment because the matter had been "fully investigated" and "there's no need to go into that again."

Saba, in his 1978 sworn statement, said he overheard a conversation between Bryen and Israelt officials in a Washington hotel coffeeshop and took notes as he sat at a nearby table.

When asked whether "certain information" was available, Saba said, Bryen replied: "I have the Pentagon documents on the bases, which you are welcome to see.'

At a news conference in the same coffeeshop. Saba told reporters that he did not fully understand the significance of Bryen's remark at the time but later learned it apparently referred to a document describing Saudi Arabian bases.

The documents showed that investigators suspected the document might have been a secret Pentagon document sent to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. where Bryen worked at the

If that was the document referred to, the DIA said, it would have been of "high intelligence value" to Israel. Its "most damaging aspect," DIA said, was that it revealed "the entire Saudi Arabian air defense organization.'

In his book, Saba raised the possibility that Israel might have used the information to avoid detection of Israeli aircraft that flew across Saudi Arabian territory in 1981 to destroy a nuclear reactor in

Neo-Nazi Group Linked To Series Of Violent Crimes; Have 'Armageddon-Type Mentality'

By Penny Spar United Press International

The White American Bastion, a tiny band of facist fanatics that white supremacist leader Richard Butler called the future of the racial purity movement, has burst from obscurity in a blaze of gunfire during recent

Although the group is believed comprised of only about a dozen members, it has been linked to the gangland-style slaying of a liberal Jewish radio talkshow host at his Denver home, two armored car robberies netting $3.5 million in California and Washington state, and a spectacular shootout with the FBI near Seattle in which its chief apostle was believed to have been killed.

But group member Gary Yarbrough, listed as a suspect in the Denver killing, denied in an interview during the weekend at a jail in Boise, Idaho, he had anything to do with the slaying or any other violent crime.

According to FBI affidavits, the White American Bastion plotted to overthrow the U.S. government by 1999. The "revolution" was to be financed with robberies and counterfeiting operations.

FBI officials refused to divulge details, but other law enforcement officials say the White American Bastion is a splinter group formed by members and associates of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian Aryan Nations, a white supremacist sect based in Hayden Lake, Idaho.

Officials say some members of the Aryan Nations group were dissatisfied with the lack of action by Butler, 65, their leader. In an Interview with the San Francisco Examiner Sunday, Butler admitted that the younger, more militant members are eroding his influence.

The future is theirs," Butler said. "We cannot tell them what to do."

Butler added he was proud of Robert J. Mathews, the Bastion's leader, who died in the FBI shootout Dec. 8, and called him "a

"I feel sorry about his death," Butler said. "He was a man of the highest idealism and moral character. He exhibited a willingness and courage to die for his beliefs."

Based Work On 'Turner's Diaries'

Under Mathews, the White American Bastlon is thought to have based its activities on a book called "Turner's Diaries," published by the National Alliance, a right-wing association in Washington, D.C. Mathews reportedly carned money from the National Alliance by distributing

"Turner's Diaries" describes a plan by right-wing fanatics to take over the country through political assassinations, nuclear attacks, disruption of public facilities and the systematic elimination of minorities and the "liberal Jewish press."

Andy Anderson, a police officer in Sandpoint, Idaho, said the White American Bastion had an "Armageddon-type mentality."

"There isn't a Shilte Moslem terrorist in the world that is any worse at generating hate than these guys," Anderson said.

It appears from records on file in federal courts that the White American Bastion put the book's plan into operation earlier this

Robberies Used To Finance Group

Officials allege that:

-On April 23 the group held up an armored car in Seattle, escaping with $500,000 in cash.

-On June 18, talkshow host Alan Berg was machine-gunned to death in the driveway of his Denver home by Yarbrough. 29, of Sandpoint, Idaho.

-On July 19, members of the group staged a daring daylight robbery of a Brink's armored car in Uklah, Calif., fleeing with more than $3 million in cash.

-On Oct. 18, Yarbrough shot at officers at his home in Sandpoint as they sought his brother, Steve.

-On Nov. 24. Mathews wounded an FBI agent during a shootout at a Portland, Ore., motel before he escaped; police captured Yarbrough.

A search of Yarbrough's Sandpoint home after the October shooting turned up thousands of dollars in cash and $15,000 worth of weapons, including 100 sticks of dynamite, plastic explosives, hand grenades, infrared vision telescopes and semi-automatic rifles.

In Denver police said Friday ballistic tests showed one of the weapons found in Yarbrough's house was used to kill Berg.

But Yarborough said. "I've never harmed anybody. I've never been involved in a violent crime or a crime with a handgun.

"Just because they say it was the weapon that was used doesn't mean it was," he continued. "And I'm not saying they were or weren't my weapons."

The latest violent episode involving the White American Bastion began Dec. 7. when 100 FBI agents converged on scenic Whidbey Island in northern Puget Sound near Seattle, where several members of the group - including leader Mathews - were hiding out.

Officers arrested four of the fugitives, including a husband and wife accused in a counterfeiting operation in Oregon two years ago, without incident.

But Mathews, the father of a 3-year-old son, holed up in a house surrounded by an FBI SWAT team for 36 hours. He singlehandedly repulsed with machine-gun fire two attempts by the FBI to storm the house on Dec. 8. When FBI officers in a helicopter set the house ablaze by firing illumination flares into it. Mathews kept up a barrage of automatic weapons fire from the secondstory window. The house blew up in a ball of flame, and the next day officers recovered Mathews' charred body from the rubble.

Mathews' widow. Debbie, refuses to talk about her husband of eight years. But in a statement issued last week, she said she believes the FBI "murdered" her husband because he was "brave enough to stand up and fight for God, truth and (his) race."

Leader Foretold His Own Death

In a letter apparently written on Whidbey Island, Mathews foretold his own death.

"I am proud that we had the courage and determination to stand up and fight for our race," Mathews wrote in the four-page letter released by the Aryan Nations. "Doing so, it is only logical to assume that my days on this planet are rapidly drawing to a close ... I will leave knowing I have made the ultimate sacrifice to secure the future of my children."

Sheriff Tony Bamonte of Pend Orellie County in northeastern Washington, where Mathews lived, remembered Mathews from when he first turned up there 11 years ago from Arizona, looking for work and a quiet

Bob was always a pleasant man, cleancut, intelligent," Bamonte said, "Now and then he would bring up his racial ideas, but he never forced them on me, or showed any violence.

In recent years, however, Bamonte said Mathews grew more outspoken and joined anti-Semitic rallies and confrontations with

Gas Firm Flees Before Paying Taxes

ficials are trying to track down a wholesale gas company which disappeared before paying more than $8 million in delinquent

Houston Holdings Co. has been selling 18 million gallons a month but now officials can't find it. Officials say the firm did the same thing earlier in New York when investigators moved in on widespread theft of fuel taxes.

Officials said Houston left New York early in 1983 and set up a small office near Port Everglades that March. It applied for a license to sell wholesale fuel in Florida, saying it intended to sell 30,000 gallons a month. It posted a band of $7,200.

But last summer, Houston said sales were 18 million gallons a month. The firm dropped out of sight last September, owing the state an estimated $8.6 million in unpaid taxes.

Authorities in Florida and New York said the firm moved south when investigators upnorth began to move in.

"Houston used to be in New York," said ment.

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) - State of- George Bilinski, a New York State Department of Revenue investigator. "I guess they must have got a little shaky and moved down there.

Bilinski said authorities are presenting evidence to a grand jury involving Houston and similar firms. Since the move, Houston Holdings' licenses to sell wholesale fuel have been revoked in Connecticut and New

"They're down there doing to you what they've been doing to us for the last couple of years," said John M. Ryan of the New York attorney general's office. "The profits are enormous and the risks are incredibly

State and federal officials in Florida say they suspect Houston is one of a dozen or more Florida companies of systematically defrauding state and local governments out of fuel taxes. 'We estimate the documented loss to date to be approximately $13 million in federal and local taxes," said Joseph Pappacoda of the Florida Department of Law Enforce-
