"Confidence"

Confidence, as applied to business, is the same as faith in the field of religion.

Confidence in the good intentions of each other; confidence in the ability of another to fulfill promises: confidence in the soundness of the community -these are the things upon which business is based.

And this applies with double force to the banking business. The customer's confidence in the strength and integrity of the bank; and the bank's confidence in the character and good intentions of its customers, are the factors upon, which this institution is founded.
