Brilliant Card Party

A very beautiful affair was the bridge party given by Mrs. A. P. Connelly and Mrs. S. E. Barrett, Jr., Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. P. Connelly on Magnolia avenue.

The first prize, a handsome hanging basket of growing ferns, was won by Mrs. A. W. Fitts, Jr. Mrs. Margaret Barnes won the consolation prize, a pretty little set of crocheted individual nut baskets.

Enjoying the hospitality of their gracious hostesses were Mesdames Cecil Gabbett, Chas. Tyler, B. W. Herndon, R. A. Newman, Samuel Puleston, D. L. Thrasher, W. E. Watson, Geo. D. Chicken Pillau

The young ladies of the Suits Me Club entertained the men of the club with another of their charming entertainments Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Laura Fish.

The party assembled at the home of Mrs. Gretchen Shultz and drove out in machines. Approaching the home of Miss Fish a scene from fairyland burst upon the view of the enchanted young people for Japanese lanterns hung everywhere, while the interior of the house was prettily decorated.

Plates of roses were passed and the selection of the color placed the color. It was a jolly, appreciative crowd that enjoyed the delicious menu, consisting of chicken pillau, French fried potatoes, four dainty kinds of sandwiches, pickles, and coffee with cream.

DON'TS

- Don't wait until breeding season to buy stock birds. They are then high in price and not so select.
Don't make your hens by appearance. The trap nest shows up the best.
Don't consider poultry a kid glove affair. There's hard work and dirt and no time to flit.
Don't forget to furnish a bathtub for the penguins. Well, yes, a good bath now and then is needed, too, by pigfish men.
Don't brag about your winning if you have the only birds of the breed in the show.
Don't let scoldy big get a hold in your flock. It may not let the victim, but it nips the bird and causes suffering.
Don't keep ducks and chickens together. Give the quacks plenty of litter and keep them dry.
Don't believe all you hear about big profits in poultry. Much of it is lying to induce buying.
Don't forget that a fairly fatted young goose is good eating. Try it and, like Oliver Twist, you'll yell for more.
Don't expect any more work from your hired man per day than you would do a day of it in the same post.
Don't estimate the value of a wife by the amount of work she does in a day.
Don't gamble with the future. Today's duty put off till tomorrow may bring sorrow.
Don't forget that originality has much to do with success. If we all did things the same, wouldn't life be dull?
Songs of British Soldiers.
Our French allies have been struck by the "grave ails" which our soldiers sing on march. Many of our regiments take a pride in their route singing and stick to certain songs—not all of them, however, "grave." The Manchester regiment has a fine musical reputation, their favorites being "Killaloo" and "Brian Boru." The Yorkshires march to "Dan Tucker," which consists of little more than a series of diabolical shouts. The Somersetshire chivalry country songs, particularly "To Be a Farmer's Boy;" the Rifle Brigade sings the famous '95 ballad beginning, "Colonel Coots Manningham is a very good man," while the Grenadiers' favorite is "Coon Drum Major," and the fusiliers their own particular and heart-stirring "Fighting With the Seventh Royal Fusiliers."—London Chronicle.
Improving Egypt.
Egypt has drainage problems as well as irrigation ones. Just at present the Egyptian government is pumping out Lake Marcotis, a sheet of shallow, backish water in the extreme north of the delta, at the back door of Alexandria. About a million acres of cultivable land will be reclaimed by this work, though not all at the same time. Other drainage projects of equal magnitude will be taken up later.
Here, as in so many other cases, the Anglo-Egyptian government is following in the footsteps of the more enlightened Pharaohs and Ptolemies of ancient days. Lakes were drained in Egypt 3,000 years ago. Where old-time kings used the shadoof and the unpaid labor of fellahin, modern rulers employ steam and machinery; but the end aimed at is the same.
Not All at One Time.

FLORIDA NEWSPAPER BOOSTERS

THE PRESS OF THIS STATE ONE OF FLORIDA'S MOST VALUABLE ASSETS

FROM JACKSONVILLE TIMES-UNION

The increase and the improvement of Florida newspapers is one of the most reliable signs of the progress and prosperity of the state. Several new weeklies have been recently established, and a number of the papers of the state have outgrown the weekly field and have bloomed out into dailies. So far as we know, the ventures have been as successful as the men in charge of them had reason to expect, and many a locality that now barely sustains a newspaper will sustain it liberally in a year or two.

Florida has more newspapers in proportion to population than any other southern state, and we think has more in proportion to population than any state east of the Mississippi river. This state has more newspapers than quite a number of states that might be mentioned that have two or three times as many people as live in Florida. We have more big dailies than any state in the south except Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Texas, though our state has the smallest population of any of the southern states.

The papers of Florida average high in quality as well as in number. The average man would give credit for this to their management, and he would be mistaken. Of course, management counts for something. An able writer is superior to a poor writer, and a first class business man is ahead of a fifth-rate one. But the character of a newspaper is founded on something much broader than the talents of one man or of a group of men. It is fixed by the community it serves, whether that community be a part of the county or the whole state. Money makes newspapers, and newspapers have to make money to properly represent the communities in which they are published properly.

We should have said they have to make money in order to favorably represent the communities in which they are published for the poorest papers that come off the press generally represent the communities in which they are published properly. Poor newspaper, poor community; good newspaper, good community.

about as few exceptions as any we know. The owner of a paper knows that every dollar spent on improving it adds to its earning capacity, and this fact keeps newspapers close to their revenues. The average editor takes as little as possible for his personal use, and applies as much as possible to building his paper up. No class of men live more in the future than newspaper men.

The community must make the newspaper, and then the newspaper makes the community. When the people of a town make possible improvements in the newspaper that represents the town, these very improvements are the best possible advertisements of the town, and the paper as it grows lifts us every legitimate interest with it. We find in every community pessimists who knock their towns; did anyone ever know a newspaper man who belonged to this class? There is not a newspaper man in Florida who is not a booster, and this fact has as much as anything else to do with the prosperity of the state.

The newspapers of Florida differ on many points, but all are working for the good of the state. Some are working in broader and others in narrower fields, but the latter are doing their share as faithfully as the former. The size of a paper is generally measured by the size of the city in which it is published, but the brain of the editor is not. A number of the weekly papers of Florida are managed by men who could hold their own with the ablest men on the big dailies. There is a great deal of luck about newspaper environments as well as environments in other lines of endeavor, and then there are a great many able men who prefer to be their own boss in a small community rather than hire themselves out in a larger one.

COUNTY HAPPENINGS

CHULUOTA SNAPSHOTS

We are having some nice winter weather now.

The fruit crop is nearly all off. Mr. Peterson of Philadelphia is at his winter home on Lake Pickett for the coming month or two. He is accompanied by a party of friends from the icy north who come to enjoy the fishing, boating, etc., as well as the sunshine.

Mr. C. M. Zerbe is entertaining his brother and nephew from Ohio. Messrs. DeShong, Rice, Harrison and Hutchinson were guests at the Chuluota Inn last week.

Mrs. C. F. Raulerson of Fort Pierce is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. E. Jacobs this week.

G. M. Jacobs spent Tuesday in Orlando.

A. A. Simmons of Eau Gallie visited his sister, Mrs. M. E. Jacobs, a few days last week.

Mrs. W. F. Graves of Kissimmee was called to Chuluota last Monday by the death of her little niece.

The death angel hovered over our community last Monday morning and claimed for its own little Ethel Louise, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bridges. The little one was sick only a few days but its suffering was very severe and on Monday morning its little soul returned to its Maker. The body was interred Tuesday. Rev. Wm. Stones of Oviedo conducted a short funeral service over the remains, which were concluded by the Sunbeam Band marching around the little grave during the singing of the "Child's Song Prayer." They covered the tiny mound with beautiful flowers and evergreens. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

Died at Chuluota.

The death angel has hovered over our community again during the week, as though it were loth to leave this time claiming for its own Miss Rosa Jacobs, youngest daughter of Mrs. M. E. Jacobs, on Thursday morning at 6:30, when her spirit took its flight to dwell with its Maker. Miss Rosa has been suffering for several months from a brain trouble, but the end of her earthly troubles was as quiet as falling to sleep. She was twenty-one years of age and her beautiful Christian character is a fitting example of a young woman's life.

for about five years and her enthusiastic work in the Sabbath school and missionary society is commended by all.

The body was interred Friday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Wm. Stones of Oviedo conducted a short but touching funeral service. Undertaker Hunt of Oviedo had charge of the burial. Pall bearers were: James Osteen, George Jacobs, Oscar Swanson, Leon Cunningham, Frank Story and Elijah Bridges, all young men friends of the deceased. The grave was lined with ferns and evergreens, and the floral offerings for the casket and grave were very beautiful. Every one was so anxious to do something for Rosa and loving hands failed to grow tired in her service. The bereaved family has the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community and the large attendance of friends from Oviedo, Geneva and Lockwood testified to the sympathy and kindly feeling in the hearts of the people of our neighboring towns.

It is so hard to give up one in the first bloom of youth and it is almost impossible to say anything to comfort the bereaved ones, but we can only point them to the great and all-wise Father who makes no mistakes but "doeth all things well," and commend them to these beautiful and comforting words:

"I love to think my Father knows
Why we have missed the paths we chose,
And that we soon shall clearly see
The way He led was best for me."

"I love to think my Father knows
The thorns we pluck with every rose,
The daily griefs we seek to hide
From those dear eyes we walk beside."

"I love to think my Father knows
My strength and weakness and my weakness
And that by trusting we shall see
Each cross is graced by victory."

"Vaudeville"

The term vaudeville which is now understood in the old meaning of the variety show originally meant a short, light dramatic piece in which songs set to familiar tunes were introduced. It took the name from the village of Vaudeville, in Normandy, the birthplace of the poet Olivier Busonell, who was the first to compose such songs. He died in 1815.

ECONOMIC VALUE OF DISEASE PREVENTION

BY STATE OF HEALTH

It's better to lock the stable door before the live stock is abstracted. It's better to prevent disease than to be forced to cure it, and it's better not only from the viewpoint of the victim of the disease but also from the dollars and cents side. The subject concerns the employers of labor. For, after all, the pocket is the strongest argument with some of us in our relations to others, in all matters excepting those of the most intimate personality. The human side, the pitiful side, appeals to our sympathies, it rarely excites us to the extent of giving real money.

And from this economic standpoint it is cheaper for the employer of labor to prevent sickness than to pay the cost of illness or of enforced idleness. Many of the great corporations of Florida, as of other states have established a sort of sick insurance fund among their employees, to which each is required to contribute proportionately to his wages. In return the protected laborer is cared for during illness and his wages are continued during disability caused by disease or accident. But rarely does the amount of the accumulated assessment from any individual laborer meet the cost of medical treatment, nursing, etc., in his particular case. The excess of such cost must be met from the general fund to which all employees have contributed or by the employing corporation itself. Experience has shown that the assessments paid by the employed usually do not meet the aggregate cost of administering the hospitals in which the ill or injured are cared for.

Medical science has provided practical insurance against a number of common diseases, in the form of serums which are sure preventatives of typhoid fever, smallpox and the grip, and others are being developed. They are sure to the extent that their failure has been reduced to an extremely small fraction of one per cent. This is a fact that is recognized.

For the larger employers of labor or for the smaller ones, the use of these preventatives among their employees is much the most economical use of the sick fund. The cost of preventing an attack of typhoid fever, for instance, is about $500.00. This includes the loss of time, proper medical treatment, nursing, specially adapted foods and other details caused by the disease which do not exist without it. The cost of the antityphoid treatment, the prevention of its spread, which look for a single death from this disease in the United States.

The prevention of smallpox cost so little that it is well to have a certain number of such cases demonstrated its cost.

Another question is, how can the employer of labor be made to do the work of the skilled laborer in any department? Every employer must figure it out for himself, but each knows without figuring that it is not small.

It is wholly within the authority of every employer to insist on the use of disease preventatives by every laborer. It may be made a condition of employment. The United States Army requires every soldier to take the antityphoid treatment, and school authorities insist on vaccination against small pox.

Economists everywhere recognize in disease, slight, serious or epidemic, the greatest foe to industrial progress. This fact was recognized under the system of slavery in this country, and the physical condition of every slave was most carefully guarded.

The modern principle that prevention is better than cure is gaining widest recognition. It is of far-reaching importance, economic importance, pocketbook importance, to every employer in Florida. It is worth the while of every one of them to stop and consider its personal application to the conditions that must meet.

THE FLORIDA LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION

University of Florida, at Gainesville, that may be necessary to give all a message for everyone who is interested in beef, dairy or swine production. We shall also try to have many of the local speakers from the Sanford and Kissimmee sections as possible, and give ample opportunity for all members to give their experiences. We are announcing a meeting of three days in order to give plenty of time for full discussion of these topics, and still be able to devote part of each day to inspecting the exhibits at the Seminole County Fair. The authorities of this fair assure us that they will have a good display of live stock on this occasion, well worth coming many miles to see.

One of the most important things for this meeting is to decide upon some measures that should be presented to the attention of the next legislature. With proper help from the state, the live stock industry can soon be made to fill the important place it deserves in our industries. Every member should come prepared to make suggestions as to beneficial laws, and also to be prepared to stand by what the majority may decide is best. We should have no half-way measures, nor any disgruntled kickers when the meeting is over. We need to get some live men into this issue and push matters forward like we mean business in order to secure results. The association will be a powerful force if you and all the others will make it so.

Please let us hear from you with the good news that you intend to be at Sanford one or more of these days, also please tell your neighbors about this matter and see if you can bring several from your community with you. If you will give us by return mail the names of some acquaintances who ought to be in the work, we will send them this circular. As a last resort kindly send your membership fee of $1 to help the good cause, if you are absolutely unable to attend in person. Trusting to hear from you soon with any suggestions that may help the convention, and hoping to meet you at the new quarterly work in February, 1915.

Very truly yours, C. L. WILCOX, Secretary, Florida State Live Stock Association

REV. STEINMEYER, FARMER
February 3, 4, 5, 6 the Seminole County Fair will be held at Sanford, and the citizens are making preparations to do themselves proud.

He is too busy planting churches just now, Bro. Johnson. But being a good booster he will do something for the fair.

FOR BETTER WATERWAYS

A meeting of the Florida Inland Waterways Association has been called by President deMontmolin, to be held in Sanford, Fla., February 4th.

The rivers and harbors bill is now before the United States senate and will be bitterly opposed, as was the case last session when appropriations were reduced one-half.

It is hoped that there will be a large turnout, February 4th is also "Palatka Day" at the Seminole County Fair, and Palatka and Putnam county should be well represented and see the value of a good county fair.

TALK HAPPINESS

Talk happiness instead of gloom and keep your face with smiles abloom. There's so much sorrow everywhere, so much of fear and lurking care, that one who would increase the woe we size up as a public foe.

CONVENTION DOTS

Prominent among the interesting and enjoyable features of the Sanford meet of the Florida State Federation of Labor was the auto ride given the delegate crowd.

Editor Bob Holly, Florida's great newspaper man who is keeping Seminole county to the fore co-equal with his Sanford Herald, delivered just such a talk as might have been expected of a progressive newspaper man.

The Sanford delegates, headed by Vice President Blackwelder did every thing in their power to make the "boys" feel at home and enjoy themselves.

We were unable to remain to the fish fry given for the benefit of the delegates but have little doubt that it was in keeping with the generous treatment accorded the delegates throughout.

RIGHTS ON THE STREET

The public generally and motorists in particular should be much interested in the decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, handed down a few days ago, which defines the respective rights of pedestrians and drivers of cars at street crossings.

had alighted from a street car. He admitted that he had seen the automobile coming before he stepped to the ground, and the lower court declared him guilty of contributory negligence.

Such a plain definition of the law bearing on this troublesome question cannot fail to have a beneficial effect. As a leading case on the subject it is bound to result in the exercise of more care by automobilists at crossings or else they will have to stand the possible legal consequences.

TIRE SOME TALK

The Jacksonville Good Roads Boosters are getting tiresome to a great many people in Florida, especially since they came down into south Florida where there are more good roads than all the rest of the state put together.

"Enlisting the assistance of the state press in the light to create and unify sentiment for good roads will be the purpose of this meeting."

Actually, that statement is one that J. P. Clarkson, secretary of the Florida State Good Roads Association, and Charles E. Foote, special publicity agent, are quoted as authorizing the meeting was to one with the Lake Region division of the Florida State Press Association, at Sanford.

"Enlist" the assistance of the newspapers of Florida in Good Road building!—what else have the newspapers of Florida been doing for the last ten years, but seeing to it that county authorities build roads?

If it were not so very funny we would be inclined to ask the newspapers of Florida to help us to ridicule these good-road gentlemen in proper style. The fact is that the newspapers of Florida have given thousands of dollars of space and unmeasured energy to the good road building work; and they will keep right on with the good work without the slightest cessation of interest.

In communities where the people are not steeped in ignorance and sloth there is good road building in progress; the intelligence and character of any settlement is shown by the kinds of roads it has, and travelers about Florida can easily judge the quality of the settlers by the condition of their highways.

In the Lower East Coast section, the people have needed no prodding in their good road work; they have demanded the several hundred miles of hard surfaced roads that are found today in Dade county, because they are of superior culture.

"As for 'unifying sentiment' for good roads, what is needed is house-to-house missionary work; and some compulsory road building laws that will reach the benighted sections of Florida in spite of themselves—but the gentlemen of the Good Roads Society are showing inexcusable ignorance in thinking that they need have 'meetings' to 'enlist' the aid of the state press. The state press has done it all so far, and will keep right on its educative work."

After the first of January, 1915 I will not be responsible for any debt contracted by any person but myself. C. R. Happersett. 41-8tc

Herald Bouquets and Others

Dear Mr. Editor: Some of the bouquets belong to you for your loyalty to our bright little city for your spirit of progressiveness, and for the happy enthusiasm in promoting everything which you think may render us prosperous and popular.

It is grand to see men who have the courage of their convictions wheel into line for civic righteousness when they are convinced that it is the right thing to do.

A notable example of this is your comrade of the Saturday Blade of Chicago, which we had with exclamations. Mr. Boyce was brave and unflinching when he made the following announcement:

"The publishers and employees of the Boyce Weeklies are fully convinced that the use of alcoholic beverages is injurious to everybody. We shall not, therefore, encourage anyone to use them by advertising the same."

Along with this announcement may be harmoniously coupled as a lovely companion picture this statement of Clarence R. Howard, president of the Commercial Steel Company, Granite City, Ill., refused an order of $2,000,000 worth of sharp-nel for one of the warring nations.

Polly Primrose

Rehearsals for Polly Primrose promise one of the best local affairs put on the Sanford stage and the cast are working overtime to make it a splendid success. The various parts are bright and attractive, while the songs are tuneful and catchy. Polly Primrose is a dear little actress, well fitted to the part, while jealous Daisy, a darling whom no one would ever believe could possibly be jealous. Little Jane, Polly's champion thrower a fine action into the part that makes her one of the best characters of the play. Ophelia, a coy little maiden of Dickey Murphy's choice is a charming lassie with a pretty song. The Irish maid and Bob Jinks are a scream, the real comedians of the catchy little college ensemble. Mr. Hixon, the acquired half-back on the foot ball team can make love in a truly artistic manner, while Jack and Dickie in their several parts are big factors in the success of the aggregation. Bob's Dad is a real professional and roars maledictions upon the head of the graceless son and boasts the Seminole County Fair with an energy truly inspiring.

The College Chorus is made up of sparkling pretty girls and athletic young men that carry one along with the spirit and dash of real college boys and girls. The specialty acts are as good as the play. The Perils of Pauline is a dainty portrayal of Pauline's many adventures, in song, and dance. All the way through, Polly Primrose is a jolly little college comedy well put on by local talent, under the excellent direction and inspiring energy of Miss Rogers. At the piano Miss Frank puts ginger and spirit into the music that completely a fine performance.

SCENE FROM "BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" AT THE IMPERIAL THEATER, SATURDAY, JANUARY 30

A Barbed Wire Cut, Collar or Saddle Gait not properly healed leaves a disfiguring scar.

Ballard's SNOW LINIMENT

Is the Right Remedy for All Abrasions of the Flesh.

If the wound is cleaned and the liniment applied promptly, the healing process begins at once and the wound heals from the inside outwardly, thus performing a perfect cure that leaves no scar. If the wound heals on the outside too quickly, pus forms under the surface and breaks out into a running sore that is hard to cure and inevitably leaves a bad scar.

Owners of blooded stock prefer this liniment to all others for that reason, and they use it not only on fine animals, but on human flesh, as it does its work quickly and thoroughly.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00.

[Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate]

A WANDERING HEART.

I blame thee not! This heart I know To be long loved was never framed, For something in its depth doth glow, Too strange for words or for untamed.

There are hearts which seem to have the wanderlust habit just as there are men who come restless when tied down to any one place for long.

The man may be cured of his eagerness to roam by falling in love. But where the heart gets the roaming habit it is apt to scatter dismay in its path. So many labels are attached to it that some are puzzled how to classify it. It passes by the name of sickle love, inconstancy, baffled affections, light of fancy, heartlessness and many more such appellations.

It is certain that the wandering heart is not a happy one, whether in quest of a mate or having grown weary of its life.

We have much sympathy for the heart that is wandering about in search of a mate. We believe it to be true to its ideals, but for the heart that has attached itself to another heart, then becomes weary of it, we have little consideration and less pity. It is doubtful if it will ever become fully anchored. Even the humble bee furnishes a lesson for the wandering heart.

Of it the poet has written with much truth:

The bee that many a garden vexes, And turns his lay of courtship ever, When he finds the flower he loves, He settles there and treads no more.

turn to look at her in wonder when her nurse has her out on the street. "My husband is ashamed of her. He will pass her by on the street if he is accompanied by a friend, turning his head the other way. A gentleman who was with him the other day said, 'Why, here comes your nurse girl I believe, and your child.' My husband coolly made answer, 'That isn't our little one, my nurse girl has a nelson, her child can't avenge.' The nurse told it all over, and I am almost down sick over the matter. What shall I do?"—Mrs. J.

Her grief is a unique one. I would remind her that babyhood and childhood are fleeting. Do not despair, bear patiently with your husband's ill humor, though it is cruel, most inhuman in a father. Remember the story of the ugly duckling, which all the feathered tribes on land and water made great fun of. What jokes they cracked about its long, scraggy neck and wings! Time, the great magician, wrought a wonderful change in the ugly duckling, turning it into a swan so beautiful all who saw it cried out in wonder at its grace and beauty.

Plain, homely children grow into the fairest, most beautiful and gracious maidens. Your little daughter will yet cause her father to be proud of her, rest assured of that. Crossed eyes are readily remedied in infancy, a too decided upward tilt of the nose corrected by mamma's fingers, and a face on which the skin is drawn over the bones can be filled out by the right kind of nourishing food. Get some reliable book on "babyhood" and study it carefully, acting on its best suggestions. Do not forget that homeliness in a child of four is not a lifelong condition. Looking through a collection of pictures of the most beautiful women taken in early childhood we find that the majority of them were ugly ducklings. But, no matter how ill favored a little one may be its father should never be ashamed of it on that account.

A child given to husband and wife is a gift direct from God's own hand. He is angered at the belittling of his most precious treasures.

Thursday. I would have married her the next day, but her folks put a damp upon my ardor, declaring she should not be my wife for a year. To my mind it's a silly notion, waiting a year for a girl, if she suits you and you suit her. Don't you think so?"

"Marriage is a very serious matter," declared his companion. "A year is none too long to figure out the situation. What would you do if after a rapid fire courtship and marriage you were not suited to each other?"

"Divorces are easy," retorted the other, flippantly. The words were lightly spoken, but one could easily determine that he meant what he said. Unconsciously he touched the keynote of the divorce evil. It has to do with the rich more than the poor. The honest, thrifty young workman selects a sweet young girl of his own class. Their courtship is romantic and tender. They usually bring up a family together. They may have their little tiffs—what married couples do not—but such a thing as divorce never enters the mind of either. The son and heir of wealth who has nothing to do but kill time with pleasure encounters a pretty lass. He would have her for his own. He weds her with scarcely more thought than he would purchase a ticket for Europe. If they should disagree or weary of each other he or she would go motoring through Nevada, making headquarters at Reno. A hard-luck story is told to the presiding judge. Without much ado they also entered the door as one, bound together by God until death does them part, according to his laws, are severed by man's—each to go forth into the world either to walk life's path alone or seek consolation in a new love. If uncertain in regard to happiness in the new venture they think they can afford to take a chance for they have found divorce so easy.

If a man and woman realized that marriage was for life and that only death could part them, the choice of a helpmate would be made with utmost caution and great care. Couples would be slower to disagree and air their troubles. Last remark: Easy divorce laws not only break up the home but the hearts of innocent children who still blindly love each parent. One hand is stretched to father, the other to mother. Their young hearts cry out in bitterness against the laws which made it possible to thrust aside old ties and form new ones.

GOATS AS SPY SIGNAL

Shepherd Who Aided Germans With His Flock Sentenced to Death for Treason.

Chalons-sur-Marne.—A Frenchman, Alfred Durot by name, has been sentenced to death by court-martial for treason.

During the battle which raged around Reims the French artillery operating near the village of Puseux was subjected to a terrific bombardment by the Germans, no matter how often they changed their position. A careful watch was kept, and it was discovered that a mile in front of the French batteries a shepherd was feeding his flock, among which were five snow-white goats.

The shepherd was arrested, and inquiries showed that during the German occupation of Puseux he was the only inhabitant who had not been too laxed, and that he had been given the white goats whose presence was to signal the position of the French guns.

Durot, at his trial admitted his guilt.

love, inconstancy, baffled affections, light of fancy, heartlessness and many more such appellations.

It is certain that the wandering heart is not a happy one, whether in quest of a mate or having grown weary of its life.

We have much sympathy for the heart that is wandering about in search of a mate. We believe it to be true to its ideals, but for the heart that has attached itself to another heart, then becomes weary of it, we have little consideration and less pity. It is doubtful if it will ever become fully anchored. Even the humble bee furnishes a lesson for the wandering heart.

Of it the poet has written with much truth:

The bee that many a garden vexes, And turns his lay of courtship ever, When he finds the flower he loves, He settles there and treads no more.

EASY DIVORCES.

Believe me, if all those endearing young charms Which I gaze on so fondly today, Were to fade away by tomorrow, and leave me my arms—

My fate, gifts, going away, Then wouldst still be content, as this night thou art.

For the love that's true as it will, And around the dear ruins each wish of my heart, Would outwring itself verily still.

On a trolley car the other day two young men were discussing marriage. One, a happy-go-lucky, devil-may-care sort of fellow judging from his manner and speech, remarked to his companion: "Here's a bit of news for you! I met the prettiest little girl you ever laid eyes on last Monday, made her acquaintance on Tuesday, proposed on

He differs from the other wanderer in leaving no broken hearts behind him. The heart that can tire of one love may also prove untrue to another eye and to another. The callow youth is not sufficiently matured to be capable of a great and lasting passion. A man has not such excuse for his restlessness.

He should be capable of judging when he enters the presence of the one whose heart has all the qualities which appeal to his own. Brave is the girl who accepts a lover knowing that he has won the love of half a dozen other girls only to cast them aside for a newer fancy. She must have golden opinions of herself to imagine that she is so much more attractive than they and that her powers of holding him from wandering are so much stronger.

Knowing the propensity of the wandering heart she takes him at her own risk. A man who is true and steadfast of purpose though he hasn't the second coat to his back, is a greater matrimonial prize than the son of wealth who has money to burn but has a wandering heart in his bosom.

To be popular, a man doesn't have to have a score of sweethearts, whose dead hopes hang to his belt like the scalps the warriors of old strung on their bows as trophies of their conquests. The man who knows that he is of a roving disposition and his heart has the wanderlust habit should never attach himself to any girl unless he is sure beyond all doubting that he loves her well enough to settle down for her sake and be content with her love and her love only. It is unfair to a girl to offer her a heart which has had other tenants who had been put out for non-return of affection.

DENYING HIS CHILD.

Free, off-hand your story tell When wit's a bosom crony, But still keep something to yourself Ye scarcely tell to any, I'll no say men are villains a'; The real, hardened wicked, Wha' hae nae check but human law Are to a few restricted.

The cleverest of women are apt to make the sorriest mistakes in trying to solve that greatest of human puzzles—the heart of man. He who she thinks would turn out to be a gay free lance after marriage disproves her judgment by casting aside the wild oats which he has not sown and becoming a model husband. The quiet young man becomes a martinet in his own household; the drunkard an eloquent lecturer on "the evil of wine," and so on down a very long list. She who weds the man she loves, and who professes an equal love for her, considers herself blessed, especially if children come to cement the marriage bond still firmer.

Many wives weep, wearying heaven with their petitions because they are childless. It is unusual for a wife to weep because the boon of motherhood is hers. One woman writes me: "I have been married six years. My husband and I were happy until baby came; since then we have been drifting steadily but surely apart. My trouble is, my little girl is so astonishingly homely of face that strangers

For the Baby Out of Doors

SINCE it is decreed that out of doors is best for everybody and that the baby is not to be deprived of the manifold blessings which come from breathing "the empty, vast and wandering air," many provisions for his comfort have been made. First the little baby is dressed warmly, and when about to journey in the open, his legs and feet are dressed with long, soft woolen stockings and short knitted or crocheted shoes. His "planning blanket" is wrapped loosely and pinned about them. Over his other clothing a warm coat is fastened and his little hands are covered by long, closely knitted mittens.

His hands and feet taken care of, he is provided with a thick, soft cap of knitted or crocheted zephyr lined with silk, which fits very close about the face, and a soft shelland veil may be wound about his throat.

But the modern baby is supposed to take his outing even if the weather is a little colder than usual, so another wrapping has been made for him, of warm double-faced siberdown. It is a roomy bag with a hood attached that fastens up about the neck and is to be added to all his other outdoor garb as before mentioned.

Carriages are provided with substantial curtains of velour and the curtain is to be adjusted to break the wind from the baby's face. Protected against the weather, he can take his outdoor journey almost every day, even if it cannot extend beyond the shelter of the porch.

As the baby grows older he must be more and more inured to the open air. By the time he arrives at the age of three years he will be wearing the warm knitted sweater suits with cap and mittens and overshoes. Protected with these, he can spend considerable time outside in the coldest weather.

Each added year finds the healthy child more and more inclined to play outdoors. It is a wise mother who encourages her children to spend all the time possible in the open air. In the summer time they might as well live outdoors as in. But in winter the subject of warm clothing must be given most careful attention and the children made comfortable and able to withstand the cold.
