Panel Asks That Crooms Remain 9th-Grade Facility

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Crooms High School in Sanford will remain open as a wholly ninth grade facility if a special committee appointed by county School Superintendent Bob Hughes to study the situation has its way.

Doreen Freeman, chairman of the committee, said today the group voted 5-4, with two members absent, to recommend the school be retained as is. The completed report is to be presented to Hughes at the end of April or the beginning of May, she said.

Mrs. Freeman added that Hughes apparently will pass the report on to the School Board.

She said at a meeting held earlier this week, the nine members present agreed to go ahead and vote on the issue even though two of them were absent.

Mrs. Freeman said she would have preferred that the voting be delayed, thinking the input from the two absent members would have been invaluable.

She declined today to name the two absent members, and added that no attempt has been made to poll them to determine their positions.

Mrs. Freeman said she will be calling another meeting of the committee to summarize its findings in the next two weeks.

She refused to reveal the exact input which assisted the committee in making its decision. She said that information would be included in the report. She added that a random telephone survey was conducted among parents, lay persons and students in the Lyman, Oviedo, Seminole and Crooms high school areas to determine "attitudes about social and academic needs." She declined to give specifics about the content of the questions in the survey.

Members of the committee, in addition to Mrs. Freeman are: Ted Barker, Lakeview Middle School principal; Janice Springfield, vice president of Flagship Bank of Seminole; Fran Westerfield, Sanford Middle School teacher; Joella Singleton, Crooms teacher; Betty Freddie, Seminole High School teacher; Blanche Bell, a lay person; Mary McIntosh, a Seminole parent; Earl Minnot, Seminole High registrar; Billy Wells, Sanford Middle School PTA president and a Sanford businessman; Sandra Gaines, a Seminole High School parent; and School Board member Roland Williams, ex-officio committee member.

The committee held its first meeting in September and had at least six workshops, Mrs. Freeman said. In addition the members conducted studies individually at their homes.

Crooms was built in 1926 as an all-black high school. In the 1970-71 year it was converted, with integration, into a ninth-grade facility for the Sanford area. Students from Crooms complete their high school training at Seminole High School.

The school, on W. 13th Street, was named for the late Dr. Joseph Nathaniel Crooms, who made the property available for the school in 1926. He also was the first principal at the school.

Currently, Crooms has a student enrollment of 511 ninth-grade students. Students from Lakeview and Sanford middle schools go to Crooms before they attend Seminole High.

Paper Checks Still Alive And Well

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

Barnett Bank has "Sam the Super Teller," ComBank has "Command-24," and Flagship Bank has "24-Hour Jack," just to name a few of the monickers given to electronic funds-transferring systems. But while the easy access and convenience of banking around the clock is popular with customers, an old staple of financial transactions, the paper check, continues to thrive.

Several local bank branch managers agree on one central reason behind the continued, and in some cases growing, popularity in the use of paper checks. It boils down to a simple matter of personal record-keeping of financial transactions.

"The general public has become enamored with the use of checks to keep records," says Jerry Poppell, vice president and branch manager for Tropic Bank of Seminole.

"Some people are a little distrustful that one little electronic blip can take care of their money," he says. Poppell says that while electronic funds transferring is more economical for banks and cuts down on the amount of paperwork processing, the electronic funds system remains a disappointment for the banking industry.

"Electronic funds transferring was one of the hottest predictions for future banking trends in the early '70s," says Poppell. "But of all the predictions about future banking practices at that time, the electronic funds system turned out to be the one that missed the mark the most," he adds.

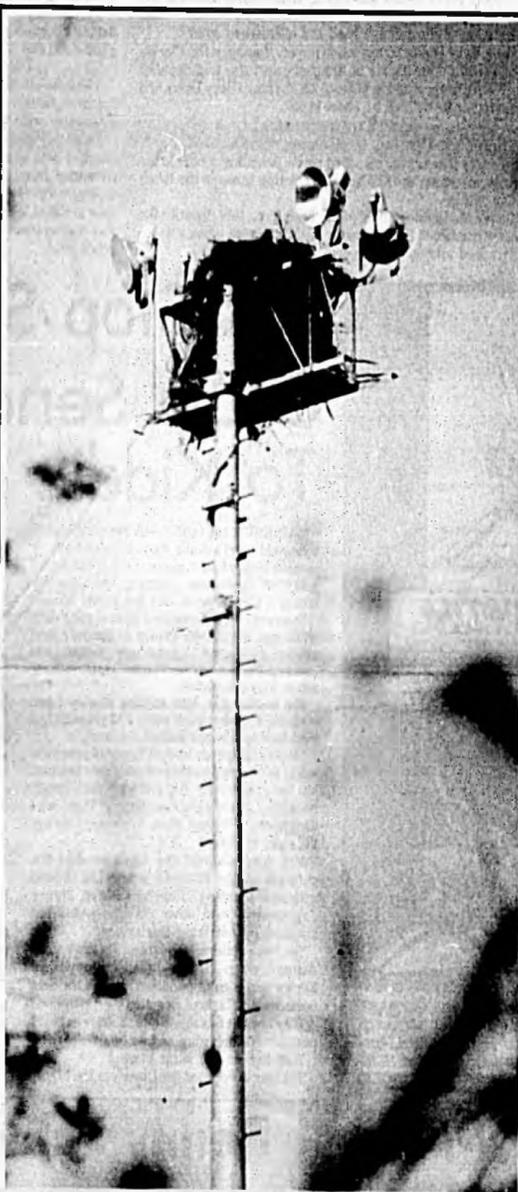

"There's a great reluctance on the part of people to let go of their checks. It will probably take almost a change in generations for the concept to really catch on," says Poppell. "Younger people are exposed to electronic banking at an early age and are more receptive to it."

Poppell also notes that while retired persons are using the relatively new concept of automatic deposit of their monthly Social Security checks, they still like to keep an eye on what's happening to their money.

"A lot of older folks have accepted the automatic Social Security deposit," he says.

"They like the idea that their checks can't be stolen out of their mailboxes. But toward the end of the month we get a lot

Detective Quits Sanford Officer Blasts Officials

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

A nine-year veteran of Sanford's police force has turned in his gun and badge — but not before blasting the Seminole County Sheriff's Department's handling of recent drug investigations and charging that city police officials betrayed him.

In his letter of resignation to Police Chief Ben Butler, Detective Tony Leonard Brooks Jr. said it was with "great regret and a profound sense of loss" that he resigned but that recent actions by the city Police Department and the Sheriff's Department "have left me confused and a bit dumbfounded as to just what the responsibilities of a law enforcement officer are."

Brooks, who began as a police officer with the department in May 1973 and more recently specialized in drug investigations with the Seminole County Strike Force, said his "ability to carry out such duty is being severely hampered here, and by design my life, health and welfare are threatened."

"You have allowed the Sheriff's Department to dictate policy where I am concerned and allowed your supervisors to profane and remove official reports and tamper with evidence in significant drug investigations where mention of the Sheriff's Department is made," Brooks wrote.

"In view of the threats of the sheriff in your (Butler's) office toward me, and the fact that for no just cause I was relieved of duty status, I feel the next step will be attempts to lie and trump up some sort of fictitious allegations regarding me," Brooks said at the closing of his letter of resignation.

"There have been no threats made in my office by the sheriff toward Brooks," Butler said. "The sheriff hasn't even been in my office to talk to Brooks, and the sheriff has never threatened him in my presence."

TONY BROOKS
...with great regret"

Butler said Brooks has made comments to him and City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles alleging threats on Brooks by Sheriff John Polk, but that such allegations have never been substantiated.

"He (Brooks) has never put into writing as to what these threats were, if any, and who made them," Butler said. "He was a fine police officer and he did a great job in narcotics, but the department has no problem with the Sheriff's Department as he claims," Butler said. "The sheriff does not dictate to us. The sheriff cooperates with us."

Brooks, who was one of two remaining black officers with the Sanford police force, received an annual salary of $17,524.50.

"I regret you feel this step is necessary," said Knowles in a letter to Brooks on receipt of the resignation letter. "You are dedicated, and you have performed good law-enforcement work."

Knowles added that he understood Brooks' difficulties in working with the county task force, and said several meetings had been held with city and county officials in attempts to resolve the difference, "to bring into the open the specifics and the proof of your allegations. When this could not be detailed out, the county reacted and relieved you of deputy status," Knowles wrote.

Knowles indicated he thought "a solution was in sight" when Brooks indicated a desire to transfer to the police motorcycle squad.

However, after police supervisors had arranged the transfer, as requested by Brooks, the officer decided to resign, Butler said.

"With regard to the retrieval of Brooks' deputy status, it is routine procedure when someone is loaned to the task force from another agency that when that person leaves the task force for whatever reason, we take the deputy's credentials back," said Chief Deputy Duane Harrell. "They just don't need it any more. It's nothing personal. It's just a matter of routine procedure."

Harrell declined to comment on other allegations made against Polk and the Sheriff's Department, saying, "I feel the sheriff is the more appropriate person to respond to that, and he is currently in Washington, D.C., on business."

Brooks' resignation comes two weeks after Longwood police officer Daniele Dow submitted her resignation to Longwood police.

Ms. Dow, formerly a member of the county drug task force, was relieved of her deputy credentials by Polk.

Dow said she was ordered to abandon an investigation involving political figures being paid off by drug dealers in the Longwood area.

City officials have not acted on her resignation pending a department investigation.

Rev. Book Still Convinced County Schools Teach Sex

School officials deny that sex-education classes exist in the Seminole County school system. But the Rev. John Butler Book thinks there are such classes, and has not given up his fight demanding that parents be made aware.

In Washington, N.C., for a series of revivals and television appearances, the Rev. Mr. Book said Thursday he wants the Seminole school administration to abide by federal law, which he insisted requires parents to be notified and give approval in advance before their children are exposed to books, movies or slides on sex.

He also criticized the policy on controversial materials passed unanimously by the School Board on Wednesday night. "I'm disappointed that the policy has (School Superintendent Bob) Hughes appointing a committee rather than the School Board," Mr. Book said.

Mr. Book had asked the board to appoint a committee of laymen, unassociated with the school system, to review challenges of controversial materials.

The committee called for in the policy is to be appointed by Hughes. Its members are to include four school administrators, the president of the Countywide Parent-Teacher Association (PTA) Council, the chairman of the Countywide School Advisory Committee and one other lay person.

On March 11, Mr. Book wrote to Hughes asking for a list of books, pamphlets, filmstrips and slide presentations relating to sex education and human reproduction and used in the schools.

Hughes responded 13 days later that the school system does "not have such specific listings, whether for textbooks or audiovisual materials."

"Books used in Seminole County classrooms are listed on the state-adopted textbook list and are broken down by academic disciplines. Audiovisual material available for use in our schools is listed in a film catalog which is available at the county audiovisual office," Hughes' letter said.

He said that if Mr. Book is interested in reviewing the state-adopted textbook list or the audiovisual catalog, he should call the school office to make an appointment and the materials will be made available to him.

"If after pursuing the lists you should care to view a book or a particular film, a time may be scheduled for you to do so," Hughes said.

"Should you find something definitive that troubles you, I will be happy to meet with you and discuss it," he added.

A week ago school officials said human reproduction is taught as part of the health courses in middle schools and as part of the biology courses in high school.

Angelin Taylor, consultant-coordinator of the audiovisual section, said a filmstrip on human reproduction was purchased for use in high school biology classes in the county schools 17 years ago. The film, produced by McGraw-Hill, "has been used all these years," she said.

The school principal must give approval before the film is shown to a class.

The filmstrip has been used at South Seminole, Jackson Heights and Rock Lake middle schools. — DONNA ESTES Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore, president and general manager of the Sunniland Corp., Sanford, has purchased the corporation from Reichhold Ltd. of Toronto, Canada, for an undisclosed figure.

Reichhold acquired Chase & Co. in September 1979 and changed the name to the Sunniland Corp., with Moore remaining with the company.

"The employees are enthusiastic," said Moore, "and everybody's excited about the company coming home."

The deal was concluded Wednesday with funds provided by Flagship Bank of Seminole and Citicorp Industrial Credit Corp. of Atlanta, Moore said. "Reichhold Ltd., will hold some of the paper," he added.

IN BRIEF

Repple Is Top Producer In Southeast For Hutton

E.F. Hutton & Co. has announced that Glenn A. Repple, 35, of Winter Springs, has been recognized as the top public real-estate producer in the Southeast and one of the top producers nationwide for the firm in 1981. Repple raised more than $4.5 million from clients to invest in high return real estate investments.

"Our objective is to have a safe program that can beat the return on CD's and the Money Market funds," said Repple. This approach to investing is particularly attractive to retirees, according to Repple, who estimates 75 percent of his clients fall into that category. He specializes in pooling clients' money to buy land and accompanying office or industrial buildings.

Florida Economy Positive

The Florida economy began the new year on a positive note, with the Florida Trendline of economic indicators standing at 119.2 at the close of December 1981, an increase of 3 points over December 1980, according to figures just released in the current issue of Florida Trend business magazine.

The average Trendline value in 1981 was 119.7 points, with the lowest value occurring in April at 118.5 and peaking just two months later in June, at 121.3 points.

Hall Realty Wins Honor

The National Statistical Research Company of Chicago has awarded a certificate of excellence for 1981 to Harold Hall Realty Inc., Sanford. This is the third consecutive year Harold Hall Realty has received this honor.

The award is based on a computer analysis of hundreds of thousands of questionnaires sent to recent home buyers asking for an evaluation of the service they received from the real estate firm who handled their transaction. Harold Hall Realty scored above the national average of the 84th percentile when more than 10,000 real estate companies were surveyed.

Third-Party Calls Verified

Do you make third-party phone calls? If you do, you might be interested to know that operators are now verifying third-number calls, according to Larry Strickler, Southern Bell's Manager in Sanford.

Increasing volumes of third-number long-distance calls have been causing a problem in collectibles. Lost revenue incurred, as well as customer aggravation, are results of fraudulent use of this service. With implementation of the verification plan, operators will obtain approval of toll calls placed from public telephones and billed to a third number.

With the use of a Calling Card, which may be received at no charge by the customer, waiting time is minimal, since the operator can bypass getting approval from a third party.

Guidelines On Deductions

Internal Revenue Service agents have received guidelines to be followed where a taxpayer is unable to fully document a claimed deduction for travel expenses incurred while away from home.

Under the guidelines, an examining agent is given the authority to allow a taxpayer reasonable amounts for such travel expenses, even though the taxpayer cannot precisely document them.

Program On Volusia County

For area residents interested in the area's early beginnings, the Orange City Telephone Speakers Bureau now provides a program on the history of southwest Volusia County.

The program, entitled "Orange City Telephone: Past, Present and Future," outlines the early beginnings and important milestones reached for the cities of Orange City, Lake Helen, Cassadaga and Deltona. It is available free to any civic and service group, social club, church group, school or other recognized audience within the company service area.

Grapefruit Poll Delayed

Concluding that the results of a strategy study should first be received and reviewed, the Florida Citrus Commission has postponed until November a referendum of Florida grapefruit growers in regard to a proposal to add eight cents to the current assessment on each box of fruit moved commercially.

Gibson has an extensive sales and marketing background, having worked previously with Top Value Enterprises as vice president of marketing in the consumer products division. Area Employers See Slowdown In Their Hiring Employers in Central Florida predict a slowdown in hiring activity for the next three months, according to a quarterly survey conducted by Manpower Inc., the world's largest temporary service firm.

Gay Hopkins, manager of Manpower's Orlando office, said, "Overall, 7 percent of the area employers polled plan to hire additional workers during the second quarter of 1982 (April, May, June), a sharp drop from the 16 percent with similar intentions one year ago. Another 17 percent expect staff reductions, and 76 percent plan no change in staff levels."

In a similar survey conducted a year ago at this time, 3 percent expected staff reductions and 81 percent predicted no change in staff levels.

A few local job opportunities are predicted by durable goods manufacturers and service industry employers. Staff reductions are expected by construction companies, wholesale and retail merchants and educational institutions. The outlook is stable in other sectors of employment.

Orlando area results are less optimistic than those reported nationally and regionally.

Weak hiring plans are expected to continue in the second quarter of 1982, according to a quarterly survey of over 10,000 U.S. employers conducted by Manpower Inc.

This quarter's survey results predict the lowest level of net hiring expectations recorded for any second quarter in the six-year history of the survey. While second quarter hiring plans are traditionally the strongest of the year, the current outlook is gloomy with only slightly more employers planning to increase staff size than expect staff reductions during the next three months (April, May, June). The depressed outlook is reported in all employment sectors.

Overall, 19 percent of employers polled nationwide plan to hire additional workers during the second quarter, while 13 percent expect staff reductions. Another 63 percent plan no change in staff levels, and 3 percent are unsure of their hiring plans.

Mitchell S. Fromstein, president of Manpower Inc., said, "The current employment outlook remains dreary for job seekers, and there seem to be no signs of an upturn in any business sector. In fact, more than three-quarters of the employers who plan to add staff in the second quarter characterized their hiring increases as 'slight' which indicates that few new job openings may be created. Current hiring intentions also indicate that summer jobs for students and teachers will be more limited than in past years."

However, second-quarter survey figures are slightly more favorable than first quarter results, when 15 percent of employers polled nationwide planned to increase staff; 18 percent expected reductions; 63 percent planned no changes and 4 percent were unsure of their hiring plans. Historically, first-quarter figures are the lowest of the four quarters of the year.

Some Collectibles Are Less Risky Than Others

Although no collectible is certain to appreciate in value, or provide quick profits, some collectibles are less risky than others. To minimize the risk of losing money, search for quality collectibles in well established fields. And be prepared to hold your acquisition for 5 to 10 years.

According to dealers, stamps, coins and diamonds currently rank highest in investment popularity behind gold, oil and silver. Their popularity stems, in part, from having established standards for evaluation of their worth. These standards mean your collectible is less likely to lose value because of popular trends. Even if you can't profit from your collection, you should be able to sell for the price you paid originally. Trading in these areas may be slow, but prices rarely fall.

Liquidity figures importantly in the popularity of collectibles. To judge the size of a market, simply count the number of dealers listed in the yellow pages. Because an influx of investors raises prices, trendy fields show spurts of growth followed by sudden decline. But the market for fine and decorative art and collectibles is stable because it depends on collectors who enjoy their hobby with or without a profit.

Nostalgia items, on the other hand, often exhibit the inconsistency of fads. Occasionally you may read headline of a record breaking sale of baseball cards, comic books or autographs, but your memorabilia will probably be more difficult to sell. Auctions occur infrequently and dealers profit by buying low and selling high. If you invest in these riskier, less rare collectibles, keep in mind how strongly their prices react to changes in taste.

Historically, numismatics (coins) is one of the highest yield, lowest risk investments. Over the last five years 20 rare U.S. coins appreciated more than 20 percent. Experts say three billion to four billion coins are traded annually. This large, well established market makes numismatics one of the most liquid collectibles.

The monetary value of your coins offers you a small safeguard against market collapse, but your big advantage in numismatics is the small amount of management required. You can store your coins in a safe-deposit box for a small fee. If you wish to sell your portfolio, it can be easily divided. And you don't have to worry about the durability of your collection.

Since 1973, 129 rare U.S. stamps have appreciated 406 percent. You can further decrease your risk in this field by buying a share of a stamp syndicate. An organizer, often a stamp collector, combines your money with that of the other share holders to buy available, rare stamps. The portfolio is later sold at a profit and your initial share and a percentage of the profit is returned.

Business Activity Stays High

Despite the national recession and a projected shortfall in total state revenue collections, Florida's Division of Corporations is still showing a flurry of new business activity in the state, with new corporate filings and fee collections making strong gains.

According to Secretary of State George Firestone, more than 69,000 new corporate entities were formed in Florida in 1981 and, if current trends continue, more than 72,000 new businesses will set up shop here in 1982.

During the 1974 recession, new business incorporations dropped by 10.4 percent, from 34,299 to 30,741.

Additionally, Firestone said that corporate filing fee collections were up 25 percent in 1981 and are expected to increase by a record 30 percent in 1982.

Southern Bell Sets Oviedo Open House

The Southern Bell Telephone Co. will hold an open house at its new electronic switching office at 84 S. Central Ave., Oviedo, on Saturday, April 3, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

In addition to tours of the new facility, the company will provide several exhibits, including custom calling services such as call waiting, call forwarding, speed calling and three-way calling, lightweight communications, special services for the disabled, and presentations of cable recycling and vehicle maintenance.

A technology film festival and cable splicing demonstration will also be featured, as well as bucket truck and installer demonstration. In addition, Southern Bell officials will be on hand to answer questions about electronic switching and telephone services in general. Refreshments will be served.

The nearly $4 million electronic switching facility is a combination of telephone and computer technology. According to Larry Strickler, Southern Bell's Sanford manager, "The electronic switching system connects calls faster, needs less maintenance and will be more flexible in meeting the future needs of customers. It does most of its own routine maintenance on itself, saving time for our maintenance forces."

Strickler said the system is also quieter, much more compact and efficient. Since it went into service in December, customers served by the facility have had the opportunity for the optional custom calling services of call forwarding, which allows incoming calls to be transferred automatically to any local telephone number; three-way calling, which allows a third telephone to be added to an existing call; speed calling, which allows a group of local or long distance telephone numbers to be reached by dialing a one- or two-digit code, and call waiting, which allows the talking party to receive another incoming call during a conversation by putting the first call on hold while answering the second.

"The Electronic Switching System is another step in our program to provide the best possible service to our customers," Strickler said. "We invite everyone to attend the open house and see this new system along with our other interesting telephone-related exhibits."

Coupons for the radios and refreshments are available at the store and are also redeemable for a free balloon.

A variety of prizes, including a 10-inch portable color television set, will be given away to patrons who correctly guess the number of chocolate Easter eggs in a jar on display in the store.

Not Very Much Enthusiasm For A Second Ditch

By TOM TIEDE
PANAMA (NEA) — There has never been any argument that construction of the Panama Canal was one of history's greatest engineering achievements. More than 20,000 men died while digging the 49-mile link here on the Isthmus, and enough earth was removed to fill four rows of boxcars circling the equator.

The job could probably be done faster and cheaper. But only if nuclear excavation were used, stringing of 100 kiloton detonations could literally form a rough canal in less than a minute, but nobody thinks it will happen. For one thing, the nuclear test ban treaty precludes the suggestion.

And there are other dilemmas besides time and money. Charles Schmidt, a U.S. treaty officer, says a sea-level canal would transfer marine life from one ocean to the other, with unknown results; he also says there are a good many volatile Panamanians who do not want their country split in half again.

Schmidt concludes the problems may be insurmountable. Particularly since the American government seems to have withdrawn a good deal of its enthusiasm for the project. Washington is not casting about for places to spend money these days, particularly in places like the Republic of Panama.

And no wonder. Many people up north have not forgotten what happened to the first canal. The United States has been forced to yield its control by the year 2000. A second ditch might be nice, Schmidt says, and maybe even vital, but the United States may never again be willing to commit lives and treasure to a dig.

So the old notion of a sea-level passage remains the ultimate dream here. No one thinks the present mechanical canal was a mistake, necessarily, because its scope was limited by the time of its origin; nonetheless, the thought now is to supplement the trench with a second and much larger channel.

The thought is not brand new. The United States began to think of a second canal when it developed aircraft carriers too big for the first. And other nations joined in with the advent of giant cargo ships and oil tankers. The worriers say that in 20 years, five of 10 ships will not fit in the Panama Canal.

Given that outlook, then, Congress established a study commission to evaluate the prospects of a second canal, and its 1970 report stands as the definitive word on the subject. The commission considered a variety of proposals and concluded that a second ditch was not only desirable, but necessary.

The commission rooted its conclusion in highly technical matter. But it also had a share of crackpot ideas. One counseled the laying of railroad tracks, 100 feet apart, which would serve as a "dry land canal"; the designer said ships would be placed on the tracks and rolled across the Isthmus.

Apart from this clunker, the commission identified about 30 proposed water routes, some of them as far north as Mexico and one in the South American nation of Colombia. Most of the routes were rejected as too long or too costly, and in the final analysis the commission picked four possibilities.

One is the Colombian route, a 110-mile passage that would follow existing rivers for most of the way. Two other proposals would be shorter and married to the present canal; the first would add a third lane of locks to the passage, and the other would convert it into a sea-level conduit.

Then there is the fourth possibility, perhaps the best of the lot. It would be a sea-level affair, 10 miles west of the existing ditch (much of Panama runs east-west rather than north-south). The commission liked this route because it is short and would be cheaper than most of the other designs.

Not very much cheaper, though. In 1970 the sea-level canal was said to be a $3 billion proposition, and that tag has probably tripled today. In addition, the new canal would probably take 14 years to complete (the first one was finished in eight), and 2 billion cubic yards of earth would be removed.

AMERICAN MOTORS PRESENTS THE USED CAR RETIREMENT PLAN

AMC WILL GIVE YOU UP TO $800 TO RETIRE YOUR BOTTOMLESS PIT.

1974 or older	$800
1975-78	$700
1979-81	$600

Get up to $800 extra for your gas-gulping trade-in if you buy a new Spirit, Concord or Eagle by March 31st.

We're making it easier for you to buy the new car you need. By paying you more to trade in your old car. You can now get up to $800 on top of the dealer trade-in allowance. Direct from American Motors. And the older your car is, the more you'll get. Even with no trade-in, you'll still get $600.

The youth will participate in a special visitation effort on Tuesday with prospects invited to the church for a pizza party. On Wednesday the youth will be in charge of the midweek prayer service. Thursday night there will be a Bible study taught by Mrs. Linda Wells at her home on the subject "Choosing a Date Fit for a Mate."

On Friday night parents and youth will enjoy a time of fellowship and entertainment at the church. On Saturday the youth will be divided into groups and given an instant camera to take pictures in the community on themes as "Peace," "Brotherly Love," and "God's Creation." The photos will be mounted and judged.

On Sunday, April 4, there will be a Parent-Youth Continental Breakfast at 9:15 a.m. followed by a "rap session" at 9:45 and a youth-oriented service at 11.

Baptist Village Thrives In Israel

Special to the Herald
KFAR HABAPTISTI, ISRAEL—A fragrant orange grove, the sounds of children at play, and the echoes of "Jerusalem! Lift up your gates and sing!" greet the visitor approaching "Baptist Village," an intriguing example of Christian life in Israel.

The village is located 10 miles north of Tel Aviv near the Mediterranean coast, in a pastoral setting of orchards and open fields. The tiny community of three American families and a dozen or so volunteers devotes its energies to summer camps and year-round conferences at its spacious facilities, the nurturing and harvesting of citrus fruits, and its renowned choir.

The director of Baptist Village is the Rev. Don Mantooth, originally from Tennessee. He and his wife, Suzanne, were assigned here by America's Southern Baptist Convention, which sponsors and staffs the village. In all, the Convention has about 30 representatives living and working in Israel, and Baptist Village is their center.

"It's an ideal venue for meetings and conferences," explains the tall, sandy-bearded Mantooth. "Our churches in Nazareth and Jerusalem, for example, make use of the facilities here throughout the year."

As summer approaches, the community moves into high gear for its program of children's camps. Some 500 youngsters from up and down the country take part in the camps, which are organized in language groups: English, Arabic, Hebrew, French and German. "We've quite a tradition of camps here," the village's director points out. "As early as the 1940s, our Arabic churches in the Galilee used to bring school parties to this spot. The Yarkon River runs close by and that was of course a prime attraction."

It was also in the 1940s that the forerunner of Baptist Village was set up on this site: a farming community composed of Christians from various countries and backgrounds. "But that venture failed," relates Mantooth, "and then in the mid-50s the Baptists moved here and opened an orphanage for Arab children which later became a high school. That was eventually phased out, and since 1973 Baptist Village has been exclusively a camp and conference center."

Well, almost exclusively. With lush orange and grapefruit orchards rolling into the distance all around, life at Baptist Village also has its agricultural side. During the picking season, the community expands as young volunteers arrive from the United States to lend a hand. "The fruit is sent to the Israeli marketing cooperative, 'Tnuva,'" says Mantooth, "and then it's exported. Who knows?" he muses. "Our friends back home may be enjoying our fruit right now."

This cultivation of the land makes the villagers feel they are really a part of the Israeli scene. Mantooth puts it this way: "The people of this country have developed the land and made it produce. We feel that with our citrus crop we are contributing our share."

Baptist Village has also been active in a different kind of national undertaking — Israel's assistance to the Southern Lebanese villagers who cross through the "Good Fence" on the country's northern border, seeking help. Many sick and injured Lebanese have received treatment in hospitals in the Tel Aviv area, and Baptist Village offers the patients relatives a place to stay during the period of hospitalization. "One elderly woman stayed with us for eight months," recalls Suzanne Mantooth. "She spent all day at the hospital with her son and returned here to sleep. It all ended happily and they're both back in Lebanon now."

Music-making is another of the village's specialties: The Singers of Praise, its 60-voice choir, has a nationwide reputation for its Christmas and Easter concerts. It is composed of expatriate Christians from some ten different countries, Arab Christians from various parts of Israel, and even a number of Jewish members, all under the baton of John Carr, a trained conductor on a two-year assignment from the United States. Suzanne Mantooth, who is the coordinator of the choir, reflects, "It's a very special experience to sing together in one voice with people from so many different backgrounds."

For everyone at Baptist Village, in fact, it is evidently these enriching encounters with different faiths and cultures that make an Israeli Baptist Village quite unlike any other.

Forgiving Therapeutic For Forgiver

"Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us."

Forgiving other people is one of the nice things you can do for yourself.

We usually think of forgiving as a nice thing we can do for others. And of course it is.

But we might be more readily inclined to forgive if we realized it can be even more important to us — to our health and happiness — than it is to the person who is forgiven.

When 5-year-old Linda came to her father and said, "Mary stuck her finger in my eye but I forgave her and it doesn't hurt any more," she may not have realized it but she was giving an illustration of the connection between the act of forgiving and a sense of well-being.

We say it takes a big person to be forgiving. That way of putting it is very suggestive for, in a physical sense, it is hard to hurt a big person, especially if his antagonist is a little person.

Therefore, it is easy for the big person to be forgiving because he hasn't really been hurt. An elephant no doubt finds it a simple matter to forgive a mosquito despite the mosquito's malicious intentions.

But how do we get to be a "big person" who cannot be hurt and who therefore finds it easy to be forgiving? The answer lies, first of all, in the realization that our beliefs determine our experiences.

If we believe what we have been saying up to this point in our meditations on the Lord's Prayer — that God is our father who can do anything, that we are heirs of a rich king, that God will look out for our happiness and "give us richly all things to enjoy" — then these beliefs will be reflected in our human experience.

The Lord's Prayer

Therefore we will have nothing to fear from what people say or do to us. Knowing that nothing can hurt those who put their trust in God, we will find it easy to "forgive those who trespass against us."

In reality, there will be nothing to forgive for they "can harm us none," as we sing in "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

When we have learned this lesson well, we will find that we have given up faultfinding. The more we depend on God, the less we will care what other people do to us. It can have no effect on us.

As for our own trespasses, they are forgiven — that is, their consequences are wiped out — in the same way "as we forgive those who trespass against us" — by concentrating on the good and forgetting the bad.

The devil's only chance with us lies in his getting control of our minds. If we give up thinking of trouble and tragedy and think instead of the true, the good and the beautiful, evil loses its power over us. Our sins are forgiven.

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Mrs. William A. (Olive) Hunter was inducted into First United Methodist Church of Sanford's league of "faithful servants" March 21 and was presented a plaque. She joined the church in 1946 and is a member of the Council on Ministries. A former Sunday school teacher she is official church visitor and ambassador of good will.

It's Mary Schmah Day

The Congregational Christian Church of 2401 South Park Avenue will conduct a service of recognition for Mrs. Mary Schmah during the 11 a.m. worship service this Sunday. Mrs. Schmah has been a member of the congregation for the past 68 years. During that time she has been active in the various programs of the church. She was a member of the Christian Endeavor, sang in the church choir, and served as Sunday School superintendent and teacher for a number of years.

Mrs. Schmah moved to Florida from New York in 1911. She attended the University of Florida and Florida Southern College in Lakeland. She taught school in the Sanford school system for 30 years. She retired from teaching in 1951 after several years of service at the Southside Elementary School. She was married to the late Gus Schmah, the contractor and builder of the present church edifice.

MRS. MARY SCHMAH

In connection with the special service, Mrs. Schmah will also be celebrating her 82nd birthday. Mayor Lee P. Moore has officially proclaimed March 28 as "Mary Schmah Day." A reception for Mrs. Schmah will follow the worship service during which time her former students present will be recognized.

Ex-Boxer Traded Gloves For Gospel

Steven Jones, former West Virginia Golden Gloves champion turned evangelist, will bring his interdenominational ministry to Sanford, setting up his revival tent on West 13th Street at Lake Avenue. Meetings will be held April 1-10 under the sponsorship of the Tabernacle of Prayer at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

He brings with him a youthful evangelistic team. His wife Cathy, 23, plays the organ and his new lead singer, Terry Morgan is 24. Jones also plays the guitar and sings as well as preaches.

As an open class boxer, Jones fought top contenders and became Golden Gloves champion by the time he was 17. But he abandoned boxing at age 18 for a Bible and a tent.

He travels around the country taking his Worldwide Faith Outreach ministry on the road. His tent will seat 1,000 persons. His main emphasis is on reaching young people with a combination of "dynamic" preaching and contemporary Christian music performed live at each service.

He prefers a tent ministry because he says young people who "have a thing about not wanting to go to church" will often pass by, hear the singing and stop at an outdoor tent because it's freer.

Though Jones had no formal college or seminary training, he said he reads voraciously about the lives of such evangelists as the Rev. Billy Graham and the Rev. Oral Roberts benefiting from their experiences. He also takes religion courses by correspondence to further his education.

His services are Charismatic, but he said he chose an interdenominational ministry because "There's not but one church and one faith. We're all bought by the price of the blood."

Steven Jones—boxer turned evangelist

Re Wedding Rites: 'I Stand Corrected'

DEAR ABBY: You were off base in your response to "Lutheran Mother of Four Daughters" who wrote in support of the pastor who refused to allow an obviously pregnant bride to have "I'm Having His Baby" sung at her wedding.

Your answer: "A pregnant bride is also entitled to a church wedding with a soloist, fanfare, etc." If that's what she wants, it is not the pastor's function to judge her. That's the Lord's job."

That answer might have been all right if you had preceded it with: "In my opinion." As it stands, it is dead wrong — at least in Lutheran practice.

Lutherans consider a church wedding a religious service and have strict rules as to how it is to be conducted.

Dear Abby

No secular music is allowed. There are rules on the types of floral arrangements. A specific liturgy must be followed; bride and groom may not prescribe their own rites, etc.

The Lutheran pastor is charged with seeing that these rules are carried out and may refuse a church wedding to those who insist on deviating from them. He may, in fact, refuse to marry a couple if he feels they are not entering the marriage in a right relationship. On the other hand, he may perform a secular marriage for the couple at another location if they choose not to abide with the church wedding rules.

So you see, a bride (pregnant or not) is not necessarily entitled to a church wedding with a soloist, fanfare, etc., if that's what she wants — at least not in a Lutheran church. I think you owe your readers a correction.

AN OHIO LUTHERAN DEAR LUTHERAN: I do, and you provided the evidence, for which I thank you. I stand corrected.

DEAR ABBY: I sit home about two nights a week while my wife goes out to play tennis with her friends. Abby, there is no way I could ever be interested in that sport.

I tell her she has no right to leave me alone, but she says she has her own life to live and I should find something of interest to do myself while she's playing tennis.

This argument is shaking our marriage. Who is right? UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: She is. Even though you are not a tennis player, the ball is in your court!

DEAR ABBY: All those letters in your column about "the missing silverware" apparently caused a twinge of conscience in one of our past dinner guests.

My husband and I just received a package containing the clipping of your column plus a knife, fork and spoon!

But here's the kicker: It wasn't our pattern! STILL LAUGHING IN ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURTING: Give your grief a chance to express itself. Cry your eyes out. Let yourself go and let the tears flow. It's healthy. Don't try to put on a "brave" show. It takes honesty, courage, strength and real manliness for a man to express his emotions. The weak man hides.

"Easter Orientale," a luncheon and fashion show ushered in spring Thursday at the First United Methodist Church. A charming Oriental setting was captured in the colorful decor and food. Lucila Echols and Justine Lee preened while relaxing in peacock chairs to take up tickets outside the fellowship hall. All of the hostesses were attired in traditional Oriental fashions.

Nancy Terwilliger, president of the UMW, welcomed the crowd and chairman Rubye King acknowledged the many workers who helped to make the event such a success.

Fashions were from Lois' Place, Sanford.

About 250 guests showed up for the noon event. Two nearly new brides, both beach buffs, joined the throngs. Linda Voltoline O'Gara from New Smyrna Beach was with her mom, Jean Leonard. Wearing a big wide-brimmed hat, Linda looked great, and says she is enjoying "not working."

Bride Muriel Scott Kline was lovely in her knit dress. She and her husband, Robert, are in the throes of moving to their condo at New Smyrna Beach.

Bill Gielow's guest was Marian Lancaster from Gadsden, Ala., who has also been entertained this week by Lourine Messenger. Marian said she "really enjoyed" the luncheon and fashion show.

Pictures of the event will be published next week.

Emily Bill, chairman of the Social Department of the Woman's Club of Sanford, was hostess at a coffee at Holiday Inn. Guests were the committee planning a Continental Coffee and Card Party for members and their guests on April 14 at the clubhouse.

Cecil Herring, electroforming artist from Geneva, received an invitation to exhibit at the 69th Annual Convention of Electroplaters to be held in San Francisco June 20 - 24 at the Moscone Convention Center.

Mrs. Herring's invitation was extended during a visit last week from Dr. Robert R. Coleman of Angels Camp, Calif.

Dr. Coleman was in Florida to learn more about his new assignment as a consultant for the student activities program with the American Electroplaters Society, whose national headquarters are in Winter Park. It was during this time that he visited Mrs. Herring.

Dr. Coleman has an outstanding background including a BA in Commercial Art, a MA in Design, and a PhD from Columbia University. He retired in May, 1980 from San Jose State University where he had been a professor of art since 1946. Dr. Coleman taught such subjects as hand wrought metal, enameling, silver smithing and production techniques.

He said, "I also had the privilege of studying one summer with the famous Maholy-Nagy, author of Vision In Motion."

Dr. Coleman and Cecil Herring were brought together through an article appearing in the Journal of the American Electroplaters Society which featured some of her jewelry and statuary on the cover along with a feature story on the artist's techniques and background.

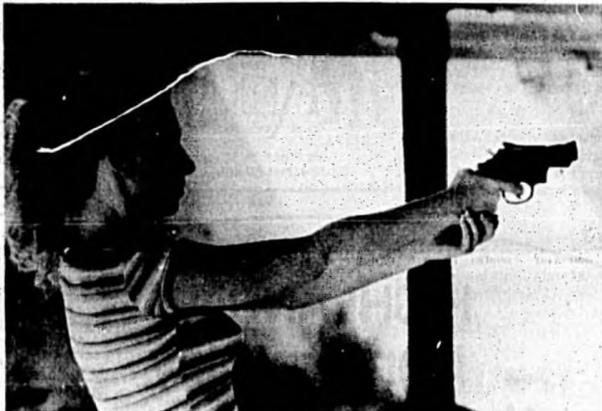

Since Dr. Coleman is collecting data for a book he is writing, he said he was "very interested" in meeting Mrs. Herring, seeing and photographing her studio and the many art forms she has created.

Mrs. Herring said she is "very excited" about participating in the electroplaters convention in San Francisco since it is a limited invitation which will feature only 12 artists.

Dr. Robert R. Coleman of Angels Camp, Calif., observed Cecil Herring at work last week in her Geneva studio.

Earphones in place. Weapons at the ready. A whistle blows. Silence.

After two evenings of class instruction on firearms safety, students lined up at the firing range on March 20 for some practice in target shooting, but when it came time to pull the trigger, the entire line froze.

Minutes later, though, the women overcame their stage fright and began blazing away at the targets — with surprisingly well-aimed accuracy.

The 21 women in the basic firearms training and safety class offered at Seminole Community College March 18-20 were "good students," said one Seminole County Sheriff's deputy who supervised the firearms practice. "The women listen and they ask questions."

Most of the women in this course had fired a gun at least once before taking the class which may account in part for the good shooting they displayed. The course, the second offered within the past year, featured instruction in such areas as when and how to use a gun, gun laws, maintenance, safety and range qualifications.

The class, said a deputy, is designed to provide self-protection in the home; thus, targets are set up at seven-to 15-yards, the average distance a homeowner might need to aim at an intruder.

The greatest honor the club received was the presentation of the silver tray awarded to the "Most Outstanding Club in District," based on overall achievement for an unprecedented third year in a row.

The Sanford Juniors also took an impressive number of awards for their work in nine out of 12 departments. These included first place in Home Life, Domestic Violence, Leadership and Membership; second place in Public Affairs, Education, Conservation and Fund Raising; as well as third place in Parenting.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Phelps Drops NCAA Bomb; Colleagues Challenge Claims

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps dropped a bomb on the NCAA Final Four tournament and quickly came under fire from several colleagues who challenged him to identify coaches guilty of buying high-school talent.

Phelps left town Friday on a recruiting trip, but first told a small group of reporters he knew of seven NCAA schools that had paid as much as $10,000 a year to lure high-school players to their schools.

He declined to name any of the schools but said he had personally given information to the NCAA concerning two of them.

"I would turn a school in and I have turned them in," Phelps said as he packed his bags. "Some coaches are hesitant to do so. They are afraid."

The scandalous remarks leaked to news-hungry media brought sharp criticism from two coaches who guided their teams to the Final Four.

"I have a big problem with his saying the coaches are doing this when you don't name them," said Georgetown's John Thompson. "I think that casts a very dark shadow on the coaching business. If you say that, you better go on and name someone."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum agreed.

"If he (Phelps) has proof and takes it to the right places, that's fine," Crum said. "But if he doesn't he shouldn't be saying anything. It is not good for our profession."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said there were problems in college recruiting, but steps were being taken to correct them.

"Many fine coaches over the years have been concerned about illegal recruiting," Smith said. "Maybe if the NCAA made the penalties greater it might scare some people."

"You grow up with the American ideal of not squealing, but it's gotten to the point where you have to do something."

Phelps said it was up to nationally known coaching figures to step what he thinks is rampant cheating in basketball recruiting.

"Guys like Bobby (Indiana Coach Bobby Knight), Dean and myself have to get going and have to say things," he said. "This problem has been going on too long."

"We have got to come up with some preventive measures, some stiff penalties."

5 Tied For Heritage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Five golfers share the lead going into today's third round of the $100,000 Heritage Golf Classic, but when it comes to winning, only one of them has been there before.

Tom Watson, who routs a 1979 Heritage victory among his 38, survived a pair of late bogeys Friday to shoot a 3-under-par 68 and join Tommy Valentine, Mike McCullough, Frank Conner, and Fred Couples atop the leader board at 5-under-par after 36 holes.

Watson said he thinks his game is picking up steam. "I feel good about the way I struck the ball today," he said. "I feel I'm in a good position for the next two days."

Valentine had a second-round 69, McCullough had a 70, Couples shot a 68, and Conner had the day's lowest round, a 66 that included an eagle on the par-four 9th hole when he hit an eight iron 140 yards into the hole.

Two shots off the pace were Craie Stadler with a second-round 70, 1980 Heritage champion Doug Tewell with a 71, John Mahaffey, with a 71, George Archer with a 69, Dan Pohl with a 69, and first-round co-leaders Bud Allin and Mike Donald, who followed their first-round 64s with 75s Friday as the winds — and scores — picked up over the 6,804-yard Harbour Town Golf Links.

Three-shots behind the leaders were Barney Thompson, Scott Hoch, Larry Nelson, J.C. Snead, and Bob Shearer.

Two two-time champions here fell victim to the rut. Hubie Green, with a 76-72-148, and Hale Irwin, who had rounds of 73-76-149, went home early, along with Arnold Palmer, who shot 76-74-150.

Conner's eagle on the 324-yard hole was only the second on that hole in the tournament's 14-year history and was his second in two days.

"That eagle got me going," he said.

Rookie Weeks Learns Quick

By United Press International

Rookie goalie Steve Weeks is a quick learner. "You never want to give up five goals, but the first thing is to get the two points," Weeks said Friday night, after teammates Don Maloney, Ed Johnstone and Ron Duguay scored third-period goals to help the New York Rangers overcome a 4-3 deficit and go on to an 8-5 victory over the Buffalo Sabres. "I'll always take eight goals, but I'd rather see it 8-2 than 8-5."

The victory extended the Rangers' winning streak to five games and their unbeaten skid to nine.

"We've tried to emphasize the intangibles this season, especially our play without the puck," said New York Coach Herb Brooks.

Maloney beat Sabres' goaltender Don Edwards during a New York power play at 9:50 of the third period and Johnstone followed with a short backhand at 11:09. Duguay then added an insurance goal at 11:31 on a breakaway to give the Rangers a 6-4 lead.

Buffalo's J.F. Sauve drew the Sabres within one with 3:09 left, but Mike Rogers got it back 16 seconds later and New York's Mark Pavelich scored into an empty net with 48 seconds left to complete the scoring.

"We kicked the game away," said Buffalo Coach Scotty Bowman. "We took some foolish penalties and made too many mistakes."

In other games, Colorado and Edmonton skated to a 4-4 tie and St. Louis and Winnipeg tied, 4-4. Harkles 6, Olers 8.

At Denver, Brent Ashton and Bobby MacMillan scored 41 seconds apart in the third period to lift the Rockies into a tie with the Oilers, despite Wayne Gretzky's 91st goal. Gretzky also had two assists to push his league-leading total to 206 points. Blues 4, Jets 4.

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, St. Louis' Bernie Federko's third goal of the game tied the score with 3:32 remaining. The win clinched the Blues' berth in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Penley Works For Skating Gold

By DAVID FAILOAD
Herald Feature Writer

For a lot of high school students the end of the school day means time to take it easy — maybe watch a little TV or relax outside before dinner. For Steve Penley of Sanford, though, it's time to get to work. Every weekday except Wednesday, the Croombs High School freshman goes to the Semoran Skateway skating rink in Casselberry to practice competitive roller skating from 3 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The training has paid off. Last February Steve competed in the Midwinter Invitational, featuring over 800 roller skaters, some from as far away as Massachusetts and New York. He won first place in the Sophomore Division of both the free-skating and figure-skating competitions.

Steve has been skating for fun for years, but it was only last summer that he turned competitive. He wanted very much to skate competitively, but local opportunities were limited. "It was my other pro who didn't want me to, at the rink in Sanford," he said.

So it was time for a different rink and a new pro. It was at Semoran Skateway that Steve found his present coach, Brian Monaghan. At Semoran, both the teaching and the setting of the rink itself are geared towards training for competition. The size of the floor, the lighting, and the recorded music are all designed with competitive training in mind, and the pros focus on competition. "It's like a training camp," explains Monaghan.

Monaghan, who has been teaching at Semoran since November, was impressed with Steve from the beginning. "My reaction when they asked me to teach him was 'Would you let me?'" Monaghan recalls. "He's very coachable, and he has a very open mind. I think that I was more interested in him than he was in me."

"I can see what talent he has...It's not going to be like that (the two first place victories in the Midwinter Invitational) all the time, but we won't be far off the mark."

When Monaghan began working with him, Steve was skating only freestyle. Monaghan started him on figure skating after Christmas, while he was recovering from an injury that prevented him from doing his usual freestyle.

Two weeks later, Steve took second place in a Tampa figure-skating competition. He now practices both free and figure styles. Another refinement that Monaghan introduced into Steve's routine is the use of music and choreography. He's prepared a program of music specially tailored to Steve.

"My approach is I don't use the same program for any of my kids," Monaghan said. Steve's program begins with an excerpt from "Rodeo," a fast-paced classical piece by Copeland. This gives way to "Feels So Good," a much slower jazz song from Chuck Mangione. Then it's back into the fast lane with a return to Copeland.

Monaghan has added organization and discipline to Steve's natural ability. "Some of the things I throw at Steve are pretty extreme," he feels. Steve comes in to the rink at 5:30 a.m. on weekends so that he'll have the rink to himself for practice.

The day of the Midwinter Invitational, the rink was already crowded at 5 a.m. with skaters warming up.

Monaghan felt that conditions were too crowded for Steve to get a proper work out on the rink. Monaghan's solution was to have him out jogging at 3:00 so that he'd be sure and get properly warmed up for the meet. Both teacher and student seem pleased with the partnership.

"We get on well 90 percent of the time," Monaghan explained. "We have a very even exchange of dialogue between us, he's not hesitant about voicing an opinion."

"But when I want something very definite, he is very cooperative. His attitude is improving all the time," Monaghan said. "He's an even-tempered skater, which means a lot. He can get a lot more accomplished. If 'anything, you're too laid-back. He's very consistent in his skating. He's not the nervous type."

"When you train a skater, you have to go with a positive approach. Steve is intelligent, and he wants it very badly. His parents are very cooperative. We're all working for the same thing, which is the success of him as a skater. He is a conscientious skater. Mind you, he's not above a little goldbricking when he can get away with it."

Steve's training is geared to the future. Last January Monaghan took Steve to the national ice-skating championships in Indianapolis "so he could get some exposure to advanced competition and see what would be expected of him." Steve picked up some good ideas from the championships, as well as autographs from such big names as Peggy Fleming.

This June he competes in the State games, which will be held at Semoran Skateway. This summer Steve will attend the National roller competition in Texas, as well as begin his own year-long preparation for next year's National meet.

Monaghan doesn't feel that Steve is ready just yet to participate in national competition. "It would be like throwing him to the wolves" is his appraisal. As part of his training, Steve will work with ex vert skaters that Monaghan has worked with in the past.

Golden Comb Cuts Up Casselberry

By JOHN REICH
Herald Sports Writer

Longwood Golden Comb won the first of four rounds of Winter Springs 5-Points Bronco Baseball action when it defeated Casselberry II, 10-3.

The confrontation occurred with the two teams deadlocked at 4-0 in the league, with the winner of the fifth taking the round. Longwood Coach Gary Owens slated Gary Stapleton for the start against Casselberry and the youth turned out a sparkling one-hit performance.

Stapleton's pitching expertise coupled with a late-inning Longwood offensive surge led by Mike Clark and Jerry Smith (each with three hits) powered the Bronco Team past Casselberry in the final inning.

The Longwood squad fell behind 3-1 in the fourth, but they rallied in the final two innings to win the game. Stapleton's one-hitter was highlighted by 13 strikeouts and just four walks, while the Longwood squad accumulated 12 hits for the day.

In other Bronco action, Longwood and Forest City II met and displayed their defensive finesse by playing errorless ball, something not often seen in Little League play.

Forest City came out on top 3-2, however, on a perfectly-executed suicide squeeze by Darren Sufelt to score Johnny Lucien in the final inning. J.W. Waring turned out a two-hit day which provided the offensive punch of Forest City.

Mickey Helms pitched excellent baseball as Casselberry I overcame Winter Springs. Helms,

Five Points

Spelman and Fluth paced Casselberry with three hits each, with one of Fluth's being the game-winning home run.

Meanwhile, Forest City III powered past Winter Springs III, 12-2, on the strength of 14 hits and the pitching of Bart Gammons. Gammons also had a three-hit afternoon, as did Mike Ganock to lead Forest City's hit parade.

In Mustang Baseball, Alan Migliorato led Casselberry II to a 14-3 win over Longwood III with a three-hit day five RBI. Other Casselberry hitters who aided the effort were Scott Alan (homerun), Chris Till (2 singles-four RBI) and Daryl Turnage, with two singles.

Bobby Mauro and Tommy Frank each turned in two-hit afternoons as Forest City rallied past Winter Springs I. With this win, "Pop's Pirates" improve their record to 3-4 and lead the Mustang National League.

In other Mustang Action, Longwood I took batting practice off of Salvagio's Boys to win 18-1 in three innings. Jerry Dodd (two doubles) and Jeff Iversons (double and triple) led the massacre which kept Gene Oliver's record unblemished in Round One Play.

In other Five-Points games, Casselberry I tripped Forest City 6-3 as Mickey Helms smacked a pair of singles and a double, and Raymond Williams lined two solo-base hits. Mickey Helms turned in another outstanding two-hit day to push Casselberry I past Forest City. Michael Davis of Casselberry and J.W. Waring and Greg Ebbert of Forest City each had two hits, but the Casselberry Youth's hits were more timely and thus produced the 4-2 victory.

In Girl's Softball at Five-Points, Winter Springs squeaked past Forest City II 5-4, as Mikki Eby rapped a double and a four-bagger.

Tropic Bank aided by Forest City 7-6 on the strength of nine hits. Deana Boggs, Jennifer Stevens, and Krista Creighton led the barrage with two hits apiece.

Susan Rogers took it upon herself to lead Precision Grafix past H.D. Realty, 18-3. Rogers allowed only three runs while on the mound, and strode to the plate to rap out four hits. Andrea Flemming, Jill Lewis, Margaret Conroy, and Michelle Lloyd turned in three-hit days while Angle May and Terri Blayne smacked two hits to fuel the Precision Grafix Victory.

Precision Grafix outlined its hitting as they rolled over Central Florida Circuits and Lake Howell Amoco.

The Central Florida Circuits confrontation ended with Precision Grafix ahead 17-6 as Jill Lewis, Terri Blayne and Kim Averill continued their unchecked hitting display with two hits each.

Precision Grafix then proceeded to run by L.H. Amoco 18-2, as, once again, Jill Lewis, Terri Blayne, Andrea Fenning and Lis Stone had tremendous games with three hits each.

Larry Parrish, former Seminole Community College standout, signs a few autographs for some fans at Winter Haven Thursday. The Montreal Expo third baseman is looking for a chance to play in the World Series this October.

Bullets Above .500, Hayward Eyes Playoffs

United Press International
Spencer Hayward thinks the Washington Bullets may see post-season action. "We're getting into the spirit for the playoffs," Hayward said Friday night after scoring 27 points in Washington's 104-96 victory over the New Jersey Nets at Landover, Md. "We're in a position now that we can't afford physical or mental lapses."

The triumph raises Washington's record to 35-34, lifting the Bullets past New Jersey, 35-35, and into fourth place in the Eastern Conference. Washington is above the .500 mark for the first time since Feb. 2.

"This is really an exciting race for us," said Bullets' Coach Gene Shue, himself a veteran of many playoff runs. "Every game is so important. It's going to go down to the wire."

Kevin Grevey added 20 as Washington outscored New Jersey, 24-17, in the third period to lead, 78-60. The Nets cut the lead to 81-71 on two foul shots by Ray Williams with 9:05 remaining in the final period. But Grevey scored six points in a 10-2 Washington surge, and the Bullets took a comfortable 81-73 lead with 5:10 left.

Darwin Cook paced New Jersey with 15. Len Elmore and Ray Williams each had 14.

"I don't think we shot well all night," said New Jersey Coach Larry Brown. "It seems we always had two guys running into each other."

In other games, Boston defeated Detroit, 125-104. Atlanta downed Indiana, 100-87. Philadelphia stopped Cleveland, 118-111. Chicago beat New York, 131-107. Dallas got by Kansas City, 95-87. San Antonio downed Los Angeles, 118-105. Phoenix stopped Milwaukee, 112-111. Golden State stopped Portland, 102-80, and Houston edged Seattle, 99-97.

It Looks To Be Warren Beatty's Year For The Oscar

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The drama of the 54th Annual Academy Awards Monday night lies in the duel between veteran Henry Fonda, and the brilliant, eccentric Warren Beatty, neither of whom has ever won an Oscar.

More than likely the 1982 Academy Awards will go down in history as Warren Beatty's year — the first in which a single individual dominated the Oscar race.

He could win four personal Oscars, a feat never achieved by anyone in academy annals. His influence is apparent in every major category this year.

Beatty is nominated for best actor, best writer, best director and best producer for "Reds," the story of communist John Reed, the only American buried in the Kremlin wall. His cast is represented in all acting categories.

"Reds" was nominated for 13 Oscars. "Ben Hur" and "Gone With the Wind" were nominated for as many or more, but neither of these hallowed films was so much the product of one man as "Reds" is Beatty's.

The tall, handsome, secretive Beatty poured his life's blood into "Reds" for more than four years. He was driven obsessively to bring it to the screen, even to the point of trying to live Reed's spartan life on locations.

Unfortunately for Beatty, his triumph most likely will not be total. It is probable he will lose the best actor award to Fonda.

Fonda, magnificent as fiery, caustic, cackling Henry Thayer, a retired professor railing against the vicissitudes of old age in "On Golden Pond," is an overwhelming sentimental favorite.

But Beatty's "Reds" is favored to win the Oscar for best picture, best director and best screenplay. Chances are that Maureen Stapleton, in the role of a disillusioned old Communist party liner, will win best supporting actress.

"Reds," too, could steal away with Oscars for best art direction, costume design, cinematography, editing and one or two others.

Beatty already has been honored with a Golden Globe and the Directors Guild of America award, a bellwether for past directorial Oscar winners.

Challenging "Reds" for best picture is "On Golden Pond," the story of a couple (Fonda and Katharine Hepburn) defiantly facing their sunset years.

Other best picture candidates are "Atlantic City" with Burt Lancaster as an old hood in love with a young woman; "Raiders of the Lost Ark," an exciting comic book adventure; and "Chariots of Fire," a superb and moving film about England's 1924 Olympic track and field team.

As is often the case, the best actor award is the most interesting and competitive in the performer categories.

This year Beatty and Fonda are competing against Dudley Moore, who plays an hilarious drunken fop in "Arthur," Lancaster for his petty criminal role in "Atlantic City" and Paul Newman as the victim of unscrupulous newspaper reporting in "Absence of Malice."

PAUL NEWMAN
"Absence of Malice"

HENRY FONDA
"On Golden Pond"

WARREN BEATTY
"Reds"

KATHARINE HEPBURN
"On Golden Pond"

DIANE KEATON
"Reds"

MERYL STREEP
"The French Lieutenant's Woman"

Diane Keaton, Beatty's costar and off-screen paramour, could add to Beatty's expected night of glory by winning the Oscar for best actress. She portrays Louise Bryant, the communist writer who married John Reed in "Reds."

Also nominated for best actress are Hepburn, Marsha Mason as a distraught single parent in "Only When I Laugh," Meryl Streep in the title role of "The French Lieutenant's Woman" and Susan Sarandon as the pathetic waitress-blackjack dealer in "Atlantic City."

Vying with Beatty for best director are Mark Rydell, "On Golden Pond;" Steven Spielberg, "Raiders of the Lost Ark;" Louis Malle, "Atlantic City" and Hugh Hudson, "Chariots of Fire."

Jack Nicholson, who plays Eugene O'Neill in "Reds," is a nominee for best supporting actor, but John Gielgud is favored to win the Oscar for his comic butler role in "Arthur."

Also in the race for best supporting actor are James Coco, "Only When I Laugh;" Howard E. Rollins, "Ragtime;" and Ian Holm, "Chariots of Fire."

In addition to Miss Stapleton, the nominees for best supporting actress are Melinda Dillon in "Absence of Malice," Elizabeth McGovern in "Ragtime," Jane Fonda in "On Golden Pond," and Joan Hackett in "Only When I Laugh."

The nominees for best foreign language film are Switzerland's "The Boat Is Full," Poland's "Man of Iron," Hungary's "Mephisto," Japan's "Muddy River," and Italy's "Three Brothers."

Best song nominees are the title tunes from "Endless Love,"

MARSHA MASON
"Only When I Laugh"

BURT LANCASTER
"Atlantic City"

SUSAN SARANDON
"Atlantic City"

DUDLEY MOORE
"Arthur"

"For Your Eyes Only" and "Arthur," along with "The First Time It Happens" from "The Great Muppet Caper" and "One More Hour" from "Ragtime."

Jenny Carson will host the awards show with special Oscars being presented to Barbara Stanwyck, producer Cubby Broccoli and comedian Danny Kaye.

Country's Version Of The Hulk David Allan Coe

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — There used to be a law in Scotland requiring fishermen to wear a gold earring in one ear. If they drowned, the trinket was used to pay for their funerals.

Ex-convict David Allan Coe, 42, used to wear five earrings in one or both of his ears. Now it's down to one, but it has nothing to do with fishing.

You see, Coe does what he wants to do. Nobody — not his parole officer, not his seven wives, not his former Outlaws motorcycle gang, not even his record company — can change that. They have given up trying to make Coe conform.

"I had foresight to know that concessions were going to have to be made," said Coe, recalling earlier days spent trying to break into Nashville's country music scene.

"The way to do that is you start out wearing five earrings in your ears, so when you take four of them out everybody thinks you made a concession. But you still got an earring in your ear."

Just a look at the Mormon-born Coe confirms he's not taking orders from anybody. He's so scary looking, you might not even make a suggestion.

Coe, dressed all in black, slouched on a couch at an exclusive Nashville hotel, slurping melted chocolate ice cream out of a crystal bowl to soothe his sore throat.

His beard was trimmed, except for the front where beads dangled from locks of hair that resembled a psychedelic fu manchu mustache. Tattoos cover his massive body from head to toe. A thick, chunky gold bracelet held a gem-studded watch on his wrist, the only visible indication you're not talking to a junkie or a rough rider.

"I don't want you to like me because of the way I comb my hair, or because you think I'm pretty or you like the clothes I wear," he said. Two reporters interviewing him nodded hastily, not anxious to argue with country music's version of the Hulk.

"I want you to like my music. The person is not important."

This person is the last you would expect to say his favorite entertainer is Wayne Newton.

Coe has resisted change and conformity, something most people only dream about, except the flower children of the '60s.

But you won't find flowers poking out of Coe's hat. Maybe a metal stud or two, but no flowers.

"David Allan Coe is real. He's a real ex-convict. He's really been in prison. He really beat some guy up in Texas, man," said Coe, who once spent time on Death Row because there was no space in the main prison.

Coe said his image — although it's his real personality — gives people the wrong impression.

As an example, he said the worst crime he committed was "being in possession of burglar tools which happened to be a screwdriver in the glove compartment of my car."

Gardner Tends To Develop Blooming Twins

ORLANDO (UPI)— Billy Gardner reminds me of those old pioneers.

Come hell or high water, he's going to get that wagon over the Great Divide.

Most people are sympathizing with him already with the job that faces him as manager of the Minnesota Twins. They aren't spilling over with a lot of high-priced talent. Nor are they likely to be in the near future because Calvin Griffith, the man who runs the club, has this sound but lately unsupported idea it's far more beneficial in the long run to develop your own ballplayers than go out and spend millions for them in the free-agent market.

Gardner knew what he was getting into when he became Twins' manager last May, having been one of their coaches. Still, he likes his job and the Twins' chances.

"We have a lotta people who wanna play and that makes my job easier," he says watching pitching coach Johnny Podres work with righthander Pete Hedfern, who put together a fine 6-1 record over the second half last year.

"We're the youngest team in the majors," continues Gardner. "I know we don't have the kind of stars the other clubs have, but many of our players can be in time. I tell the kids — 'When you go out there on the field, you're a big leaguer. Let the other side know it.'"

Gardner managed in the minors 12 years, leading six of his clubs home first and finishing lower than fourth only once.

Under Gardner, the Twins did remarkably well the second half of last season staying in contention for the American League's West Division title until Sept. 30. They were only 3 1/2 games back two days before that, then finished fourth six games out. Injuries killed them.

Shortstop Roy Smalley was in and out with a bad back. Catcher Butch Wynegar took part in only 47 games due to bone chips in his throwing elbow. Righthander Roger Erickson suffered a broken finger in August. Third baseman John Castino required back surgery shortly before the season ended and rookie first baseman Kent Hrbek, who hit a 17th-inning homer to beat the Yankees the night he was called up, Aug. 24, pulled a hamstring three days later and was out for two weeks.

"We started to call our trainer, Dick Martin, 'Hawkeye,' like the guy in M.A.S.H.," says Gardner. "I thought if we had all our people available, we might've had a shot at winning the second half."

Some of those people were raw rookies like 21-year-old shortstop Lenny Faedo, who ruptured his right heel on a close play at first base on Sept. 4; 23-year-old catcher Jim Laudner, who hit 42 home runs with Orlando and was bothered by a knee problem after the Twins brought him up in late August, and the 21-year-old Hrbek. The Twins have still another excellent rookie in Gary Gaetti. He hit 30 homers last year with Orlando and homered in his first at-bat on Sept. 20 against the Rangers.

Most impressive of all this spring, however, has been Jim Eisenreich, a 22-year-old non-roster outfielder who hit .311 at Wisconsin Rapids last season and could wind up staying with the Twins next month.

So far during the spring exhibition season the club has been struggling, winning only four of its first 14 games but Gardner realizes his green kids will need time to ripen.

All this good-looking, but as yet largely untried, young talent with the club somehow is reminiscent of 1969 and the action Griffith took in Washington before he moved the club to Minnesota. He ordered Cookie Lavagetto, his manager, to play two kids on the team, 23-year-old Harrison Killebrew and 24-year-old Bob Allison, regularly, even though Lavagetto wasn't sure they were ready.

Killebrew hit 42 home runs and Allison connected for 30, both going on to become future All-Stars on this team," says Griffith, enthusiastic over the Twins' chances this season when they move into their new domed stadium in Minnesota.

"So far," he adds, with a slight gleam in his eye, "I haven't ordered the manager to play any of the kids regularly like I did when we were in Washington. But I might have a thought before we start the season. If I do, I'll sure tell Gardner about it. Why not? When things go wrong, who catches all the hell? The president and chairman of the board does — and that's me!"

Lake Mary's Paul Alegre tossed a seven-hitter and banged out three hits Friday as the Rams knocked off their first varsity squad, Trinity Prep, 3-1, at Trinity.

Alegre struck out seven and walked four while giving up a run in the third inning. The Rams, 9-3, host undefeated Lyman at Westmonte Monday at 4 p.m.

Lake Mary picked up a run in the first inning when Keith Wallace reached on a fielder's choice, stole second base and came home when the Prep shortstop dropped Alegre's fly ball.

In the third inning, Alegre drove in what proved to be the winning run with a double after Wallace had reached on an error and stolen second base again. Scott Underwood rapped up the Ram scoring in a solo home run in the fourth inning.

On-Again Off-Again Seminole Hitting Perplexes Lundquist

Prep Baseball

Seminole's on-again-off-again hitting attack was off again Friday night at Spruce Creek.

"I can't figure it out. We hit like the dickens against Lake Howell," said manager Bobby Lundquist. "Then nothing last night. The guy wasn't that good either. He was throwing meat balls up there."

The guy was Jack Sanford. He tossed a three-hitter as the Hawks blanked Seminole, 8-0 in Five Star Conference baseball action at Port Orange.

Of the three hits, just one was hit hard — a double by William Wynn in the seventh inning — as the Tribe dropped to 5-8 in the Five Star and 8-11 for the year.

The Creek jumped on Seminole starter Fred Howard for seven runs in the third inning and picked up another one against Wynn in the sixth.

"William pitched real well," Lundquist said about his sophomore lefthander who was seeing his first mound action of the year. Wynn gave up a two-out run in three innings of work and struck out two. Lefthander Greg Register and shortstop Tracy Walker had the other hits. Senior Brett Von Herbulis returned to the lineup as a designated hitter and hit several balls hard.

"He (Von Herbulis) backed the guy to the wall (50 feet) one inning. It would have been out of our park," said Lundquist. "But his thumb is still cracked."

Blue Jays Bombard Astros, 15-10

United Press International
The Houston Astros tied the National League in ERA last season with a 2.66 mark. They obviously avoided many days like Friday.

Willie Upshaw, Barry Bonnell and Ernie Whitlitt hit homers, highlighting a seven-run first inning and leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 15-10 exhibition victory over the Astros at Dunedin, Fla.

Bob Knepper was the victim of the homers in the first inning, which sent the Bluejays on their way to a 17-hit attack.

Tilo Garcia, Dickie Thon, Ray Knight, Danny Heep, Dave Roberts and Scott Loucks homered for the Astros, who are now 5-9 in exhibition games.

Atlantic Bank Seeks Third Straight Crown

Atlantic Bank, looking for its third straight title in the Sanford Little American League, opens its 1982 campaign at 5 p.m. Monday at Ft. Mellon Park against Krayola Kollege.

That will be one of three games scheduled for Monday as the Sanford Youth Baseball Association kicks off its program for 1982. In the other 5 p.m. game, Butch's Chevron plays Jack Prosser Ford at Bay Avenue Field, while newcomer S&H Fabricating and Engineering battles Seminole Petroleum at 7 p.m. at Ft. Mellon Park.

The American League's seventh team, Adcock Roofing, is idle Monday. Adcock opens against Butch's Chevron at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Ft. Mellon Park.

S&H Fabricating and Engineering replaces Flagship Bank, which dropped its support of the Sanford program after more than two decades as a sponsor. Adcock Roofing is also a new sponsor in the Little American League, replacing Triple I.L.I. Trucking.

Defending Sanford Little National League and city champ First Federal plays Rinker at 5 p.m. Tuesday at Bay Avenue Field. Rinker is a new sponsor in the program this year, replacing Clem Leonard Shell.

In Tuesday's other 5 p.m. game, Poppa Jay's plays Cardinal Industries at Ft. Mellon Park. In the 7 p.m. game at Ft. Mellon, Sunniland Corporation tangles with Sanford D.A.V. Chapter 30.

The Railroaders are idle Tuesday. They play their first game Thursday at 7 p.m. at Ft. Mellon Park against Rinker. Teams in each league will play 18 games, with the league champs earning a right to battle for the city championship in post-season play.

There are a host of new managers in the two leagues this year. In fact, both defending league champs will have new managers at the helm when the 1982 season opens.

Bob Shaw is the new manager of First Federal, while Nathan McCall is Atlantic Bank's new field boss. Other teams with new managers are D.A.V., W.C. Smith; Railroaders, Jack Moriarty; and Seminole Petroleum, Dennis Stewart.

Sylvester Franklin Jr. will again manage Poppa Jay's, Albert Fryer will return to manager Cardinal Industries, Rick Taylor returns as the Sunniland Corporation manager and Jim Gross returns to manager Rinker.

In the Little American League, Harold Johnson is still manager of Krayola Kollege, Barbara Lewis returns to manage S&H Fabricating and Engineering, Jo Jo Anderson will again manage Butch's Chevron, Blair Kitner returns to manage Jack Prosser Ford and Lawrence Hawkins is back to manage Adcock Roofing.

Leading the list of returning players in the Little National League is Calvin Davis of First Federal, last year's most valuable player in the city championship tournament.

Poppa Jay's has several outstanding players returning, including ace hurlers Willie McCloud and Ronald Blake.

Willie Grayson is the player to watch on Rinker, while Cardinal Industries has a pair of outstanding 11-year-olds, Burnette Washington and Hubert Williams.

In the Little American League, Atlantic Bank has all-star catcher Leslie Thomas coming back, while S&H Fab. and Eng. has pitcher Johnny Wright among its top prospects.

Tommy Mitchell heads the list of returnees for Seminole Petroleum, while Reginald "Cheese" Bellamy and Tommy Edwards, both all-stars last year, are back for Adcock Roofing. Adcock also picked up Patrick Dougherty, an all-star in the Paola Little Major League last year.

Jason Heffington will be back on the mound for Krayola Kollege, which also added Hobbie Myers, who played last season in the county league.

Cash And Communism

According to news reports, little has been accomplished by the high-level U.S. delegation headed by Undersecretary of State James L. Buckley, which has been in Europe during recent days to coordinate tougher economic measures against the Soviet Union for its part in the military crackdown in Poland.

This negotiating team, we are told, has been carrying an administration deal to Western capitals: The United States would not oppose a trans-Siberian natural gas pipeline to Western Europe in return for a commitment to control export credits to the Soviet Union. The administration has concluded that a coordinated Western economic squeeze at the present time, when the Soviets are known to be in serious financial straits, would count for more than haggling over the pipeline, which the West Europeans consider so much in their interest that they're helping to finance it.

The trouble is, our European allies know from media reports about U.S. ambivalence on the pipeline, with the State Department going along for fear of offending and the Defense Department bitterly opposing any such Soviet club over Western Europe. Having apparently won this inter-administration feud anyway, the State Department has little to offer. Not surprisingly, the allies told the State team recently not to rely on Western Europe to join a trade squeeze on the Communist bloc. This is not to say they refuse such action, and some have already instituted mild economic retaliation; they are merely keeping their options open.

Unfortunately, the failure of this ill-advised U.S. initiative emboldens the Soviets at the very time when they are more vulnerable to Western pressure than in years. For the first time since 1945, the Russians are having to reschedule their foreign indebtedness, which totals about $18 billion. They are lined up with their satellites trying to delay repaying debts due the West. Russian deposits with western banks plummeted from $8.6 billion early last year to less than $2 billion now, according to latest estimates.

Western bankers are naturally nervous over a series of poor Russian harvests, the crisis in Poland, and the shaky economies of other Eastern bloc countries where Soviet credit is also on the line. Their reluctance to extend further credit to Moscow has forced a major sell-off of two commodities — gold and oil — of which Russia is a major world producer. But the sale last year of 225 tons of gold worth almost $3 billion helped to depress gold prices to the lowest levels in years. And the world oil surplus caused not only lower income figures, but a net reduction of 13 percent in Soviet oil products sold last year compared with 1980.

The Soviets are pressed therefore to scrape up hard currency to pay for imports from the West that will total about $25 billion this year, of which $10 billion will be for agricultural products. About $7.5 billion of the food bill will be for grain. With more than half of this year's expected imports of 42 million tons due from the United States, the administration will have a prime chance to apply a squeeze close at hand by simply requiring that all grain sales to Russia be cash on the bushel instead of being financed even partially with shortened bank credits.

The London Economist points out that the Carter administration's grain embargo following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan hurt much more than was generally realized. Although the Russians found new supplies in Argentina and France, they had to pay hard cash instead of buying on the usual U.S. credits. The result was a hard-currency loss to the Soviets of more than $5 billion, which is to say a major reason for their current crunch.

The administration invited the rebuff it received from its allies in its maladroit deal for a united economic front against the Soviet Union. Instead of offering its acquiescence in the pipeline, already a foregone conclusion, the administration would be far more persuasive if it placed overdue Polish and Romanian debts in default, and if it required cold cash for every single export to the Soviet Union.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Sure, Grampa, I'd like to go for a walk with you. What kind of special expensive gear do we need for THAT sport?"

Let me tell you about my new friend. She's attractive, bright and blonde. And she's a terrific teen-ager. Since she's so refreshing and delightful as a spring shower, let's call her April. April is a lady. At least she looks and acts like what I was always taught that ladies are all about. Teen-agers' problems of today concern April. Many of her peers, she says, are like that one horse out of a whole herd on a carousel—moving round and round, but never getting anywhere. "I guess you can say I've lived a sheltered life, she says—a life away from most problems teen-agers face today. I've gone to a Christian school most of my life where I haven't been exposed to the 'pleasures of the world.' "Although, I've been sheltered from the problems of smoking, drugs and drinking etc., I haven't escaped the emotional problems teenagers face today. I know what it is like to be rejected by peers because they think you're "strange" not to smoke. "I also know what it is like to face failure when it comes to reaching out and trying something you always wanted to do. "But I've learned a great quality from all of these disappointments. That is, not to be a quitter," April adds. April says she's polled several adults, asking what they think of teen-agers in general. She says, "Adults feel that teens of this day are far too bold with no respect for their elders." April adds that she feels young people of today don't spend enough time helping others. "They prefer to hurt themselves with the use of drugs, tobacco and alcohol," she says. In speaking of her background, April says, "I consider myself very fortunate to have been brought up in a Christian home and school. I have always been taught that harming your body is no retreat from life's problems. I look at problems and disappointments which we face each day as learning experiences. The only antidote is to tackle them head on." April quoted the following from Dr. Katz, senior research scientist at the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J.: "One of the biggest mistakes young people make in future planning is not doing anything because they think they have plenty of time." April says she believes a teen-ager can be that one horse on the carousel, spinning round and round, or he can jump off that spinning platform into a life of adventurous possibilities waiting to be conquered. April's final thought: "A nobody who does something is a far greater success than a somebody who does nothing."

JULIAN BOND Another Long, Hot Summer?

A segment of the population is angry. These people believe that they are the victims of insidious racial discrimination. The best jobs, homes and schools are reserved for others whose only qualification is skin color.

The resentment builds and one day explodes. Watts revisited? Newark in flames again? Detroit destroyed?

Not this time. These angry people aren't inner-city blacks suffering an unemployment rate twice the national average. This volatile mob-in-waiting isn't found in tenement ghettos or bursting barrios seething with racial tension.

This time it's Anglo-Saxons who are ready to riot if relief isn't granted before the long, hot summer begins.

This unfamiliar and unsettling scenario has become the Reagan administration's rationale for abandoning affirmative action.

Never mind the 44 years of legal authority for federally mandated elimination of white preference in employment. Never mind the decades of court decisions authorizing race-conscious remedies for race-conscious wrongs.

Reaganists say that affirmative action must go because it creates tension and resentment among "the previously advantaged population"—that is, the overwhelming majority of Americans whose skins are white.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds warns that affirmative action programs "have driven a wedge of resentment between fellow workers. The issue has divided the country, engendering new tensions and threatening the hard-fought civil-rights gains of the past three decades."

This is a serious indictment of nearly half a century's efforts to achieve racial peace—especially coming from the man whose job it is to enforce civil-rights law.

It is long been known that the victims of racial discrimination—largely the descendants of African slaves—were resentful of the treatment they received from their white fellow citizens. That resentment became righteous anger at several points in our national history and found expression in slave rebellions, riots and non-violent protests.

Public-opinion polls demonstrate that resentment and tension still exist among the victims of continuing discrimination, but now Reynolds tells us that the practitioners of that discrimination are resentful, too.

Reynolds did not go far as to predict white riots for the summer of 1982. But his message seemed unequivocal: Unless something is done to reduce white tension, past civil-rights gains will be threatened and the country will be torn asunder.

The Reagan administration is on top of this problem, however. If civil-rights enforcement causes tension in whites, then eliminate the enforcement.

The Justice Department will no longer use goals and timetables as a remedy in employment-discrimination suits, thus ending a 12-year-old policy begun under President Nixon. Reynolds also tried to repeal a requirement that government contractors demonstrate their compliance with federal anti-discrimination law. Finally, he has declared that the U.S. Supreme Court "wrongfully decided" the case of Steelworkers vs. Weber that upheld a voluntary affirmative-action plan.

It is good news I guess, to learn that the Justice Department will spare no pains to see that unhealthy Caucasian racial tension is eliminated.

Refitting Battleships: Navy Boondoggle

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's romantic Elizabethan dream of ruling the waves is being exploited with typical extravagance by the Navy as it plows ahead with its program to demobilitate four antique battleships.

Few question the need to bolster our fleet in the face of the Soviet Navy's continuing buildup, but throwing hundreds of millions of dollars around is not the way to do it. To justify the huge sums allotted to the Defense Department, the least the brass hats can do is see that the money isn't wasted.

Yet the admirals' foolhardy fantasy of a new Great White Fleet is already piling up mountainous cost overruns. Though the Navy stubbornly insists it can dust off its seagoing dinosaurs for $1.2 billion or so, there is alarming evidence that the final cost to the taxpayers will be twice that amount or more. A secret General Accounting Office report

RUSTY BROWN

From Barrio To Diplomat

Her father was a chicano shoemaker in a small town along the Santa Fe Trail. Her mother made her skirts from flour sacks because the family couldn't afford store-bought clothes.

She got up at 5 in the morning to do her homework as the winter wind swept through Allinas canyon and around the adobe house.

She huddled in a blanket, drew close to the wood stove and lit the coal oil lamp for both light and heat.

"My parents spoke only Spanish," she says, "and I didn't learn English until I went to school. But I was taught to value my heritage at a time most people wanted to forget."

These were the early days of Mari-Luci Jaramillo who, one day in 1977, would be plucked from obscurity to be the first Hispanic woman named a U.S. ambassador and the first woman to represent this country in Latin America.

Between the dawn beside the coal oil lamp and a diplomatic passport were the years she married young, cleaned houses and sewed in a parachute factory to work her way through college.

There were the years she taught in the mountainous rural areas of New Mexico and, in time, an end to the marriage. She traveled to Albuquerque to take a job in a "barrio" (Hispanic area) school and soon her unusual techniques for teaching oral English were being noted. Professors from the University of New Mexico came to observe and were impressed and asked her to direct a similar program for Latin American graduate students at UNM.

"I make many trips back and forth to Latin America to promote UNM's teacher training programs," she says. "Of course, I never dreamed of being an ambassador. I was neither rich nor political and, to this day, I have no idea how I was chosen. When the State Department first called and told me I was being considered by President Carter for an ambassadorship to Honduras, I said, 'Heavens no. Couldn't possibly.'"

Luckily, her second husband, Heriberto, a Columbian educator who had come to UNM and stayed, was a better judge of the opportunity. "How can you say no to your president?" he asked.

"I was only thinking of the risks involved," she explains now. "That we might not have teaching jobs when we returned... that my husband might not relish being a member of the supporting cast. But he insisted he wasn't worried."

She worried, too, that she knew nothing of protocol, or seating dinner guests according to rank, or how to head an embassy staff of 100 Americans and 200 Honduran employees. But they went and lived three years in the second-largest, most mountainous Central American country.

She was excited to be on hand as the country worked towards a 1980 national election and the first freely elected civilian government.

"What an achievement," she told the people at that time, "while your neighbors in El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua struggle amidst strife and civil war."

She traveled widely by jeep, boat and small plane. She met and talked in her quiet voice with businessmen, campesinos (farmers), trade unionists, military and religious leaders and the poor living in bamboo huts.

"Because I spoke the language and was Latina, I was accepted. Everybody was my friend," says Mrs. Jaramillo.

At the end of her three-year term, the popular ambassador gave a tearful farewell speech that, unknown to her, was broadcast on national radio. The next day the headline in a leading newspaper read: "She loves us!"

After a six-month stint in Washington as a deputy assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs, the 33-year-old professor is back at UNM. She reflects on the most eventful time of her life and says, "I find it regrettable that all but seven of the 134 U.S. ambassadors today are men."

Other countries, she points out, have far less reluctance to appoint women.

"Women are excellent ambassadors," she says, "because of their instinctive sensitivity to the feelings and reactions of others... the art of compromise, negotiation and peace-making."

"But to achieve these goals, women must learn to be risk-takers first. I'm glad I had the chance to learn that."

JEFFREY HART Economic Recovery Near

I come before you today as a bearer of glad tidings. All the needles on the economic dials are turning favorable, sooner than even I had thought possible.

Consider. Inflation is on the way down, down, down. It may well fall below five percent for 1982. The figures for January may be an aberration, but if we project them over a 12-month period, the result is something like a 3.5 rate of inflation for 1982.

The consequences of this drop in inflation are enormous both economically and politically.

For one thing, interest rates. A high rate of inflation, of course, is factored into interest rates. Under inflationary conditions, a lender, to realize a profit on his loan, has to charge high rates of interest.

As inflation drops, so will these interest rates. Indeed, looking at a second key indicator, they have already begun to drop. This includes long-term rates and short-term rates on Treasury bills. Bond prices have also been rising, a further indication that long-term interest rates are headed downward.

What lowered interest rates mean, first of all, is jobs. Customers will be able to afford mortgages on houses, and the lagging construction industry will revive. They will be able to afford the interest on automobile payments. The effects will be felt all along the economic line.

Just as important, the effect upon the federal deficit will be dramatic. Indeed, the whole congressional debate now going on about the size of the deficit may have been overtaken by economic events.

Thus for every one-percent drop in the rate of inflation, the federal government saves $10-15 billion on cost-of-living escalators in entitlement programs such as Social Security, food stamps, retirement payments, and so forth. As a result of the drop in inflation already achieved, the deficit has probably been cut by around $50 billion.

Another favorable indicator. Personal savings have increased by 1 to 1.5 percent. For each percentage point of increase, the reservoir of investible funds for the purchase of securities from the Treasury or from private corporations is increased by $30 or $40 billion. The availability of this money for investment exerts a downward pressure on interest rates equivalent to that of a $30 to $40 billion cut in the federal budget. If savings increase as much as 3 percent, not a wild figure in the present climate, that would be the equivalent of a $100 billion cut in the federal budget as far as interest rates are concerned.

Over the course of his career, Ronald Reagan has not only been a skillful politician but a lucky one. And, across the board as we move into the spring of 1982, the Reagan luck is holding.

In dire economic straits, Iran desperately needs to export oil. Both Britain and OPEC are lowering the price of oil. This has begun to show up both at the gas pump and in home heating oil bills. The Ayatollah didn't intend it that way, but his lunatic policies have made him an economic ally of Ronald Reagan.

An abundance of grain and corn, due to good harvests, means the stabilization of food prices.

The key to it all was the drop in inflation, a cancer eating at the American economy.

You would not guess any of this from network television news, with its endless parade of the unemployed, the impoverished and talks with Navy and industry sources make clear that the admirals have been shamelessly misrepresenting the staggering cost of the battleship boondoggle.

The first of the old battlewagons — USS New Jersey — is being refitted at the Navy's shipyard in Long Beach, Calif. The official cost estimate is $228 million. But by the time the job is completed, the bill will run to more than $400 million, sources told my associate Les Whitten.

The second ship, which the Navy is sworn testimony said would cost $402 million to refurbish, will eat up $500 million or more, Navy experts privately concede.

In fact, the secret GAO report casts serious doubt on the Navy's ability to get the battleship work done at all within a reasonable time, let alone at the price it promised Congress. There are just too many complex problems involved in the program, from conception to practical details.

My sources say the Navy's planners are totally out of touch with reality if they think they can get the last three battleships out of mothballs without astronomical overruns and stupefying delays. They cite four major areas where the Navy is hopelessly fogbound:

— Except for the New Jersey, it will take years to find competent personnel to man the now-antimatter ships. Experienced petty officers in particular are simply not available.

The Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin will need many radically new and replacement parts, and there is no subcontractor system to provide them.

— The Navy's own shipyards are no longer adequate to reactivate the floating behemoths. And they have long since lost the technical skills needed to repair the old ships.

— Commercial shipyards have demonstrated their inability to handle jobs of this intricacy without staggering cost overruns. They, too, lack the technology required; the know-how has been forgotten, and there aren't enough Navy experts left to teach the skills.

— Because the president has put such a high priority on the battleship boondoggle, work on other ships is being seriously delayed.

But the most serious flaw in the program is the question of whether it is a worthy undertaking at any price. When cornered, Navy officials admit that if a battleship is ever cut off from its ring of protective escort ships, it will be a sitting duck for a submarine or an air attack.

Footnote: The Navy disputed our findings on every point, denying that there's any shortage of shipyard capacity, technical skills or seagoing personnel.

OUR READERS WRITE

'I Forgive You; You Know Not What You Do'

I am disappointed that the Evening Herald would print the column "Dome Next for Lyman?" (March 22) by Sam Cook. Knowing Mr. Cook as I do, I am not surprised that he wrote it.

I have served Lyman High School for some 19 years. In that time, my name has appeared in the Herald on numerous occasions. Many of the articles were accurate and well written, but on other occasions they contained inaccurate information. I have always accepted the good and the bad without exercising the option to respond in writing, although I have been tempted many times to respond to articles written by Sam Cook during the past two years.

Mr. Cook joined the Herald staff shortly after his contract as teacher and coach at Lyman High was not renewed by the principal. Since then, he seems to continually allow his bitterness to affect his attitude in writing about the Lyman principal and coaches.

I have been called at home by Mr. Cook at midnight and 8 a.m. on numerous occasions with ridiculous inquiries. Mr. Cook was repeatedly invited to call or come to my office for the information he desired. These late-night and early-morning calls to my home stopped after I called the managing editor.

It appears that Mr. Cook's latest effort to use his position to strike at me occurred when he insinuated that I built a wrestling room at Lyman because my son was a wrestler and that I am now lighting the baseball field because my other son is a baseball player.

That statement is ridiculous. Mr. Cook failed to say that the Lyman Booster Club built a swimming pool on my recommendation and my children are not swimmers, that tennis courts were constructed and my children are not in the tennis program, or that a softball field was built and I do not have a softball player. On my recommendation, the Lyman Boosters have helped to provide the best high school athletic training facility in the state long before my children came to Lyman.

I'm proud of the Lyman High School Athletic Booster Club's accomplishments and make no apologies to anyone for our efforts, because we are in the business of helping young people.

I admit to Mr. Cook that I am not perfect, that I make mistakes — as I did when I employed him — and he knows well that I try to correct my errors. The only perfect individual who ever walked the face of this earth was nailed to the cross, which is what many people think Sam Cook is trying to do to me. Sam, to borrow the words of Him who was nailed to the cross, "I forgive you, for you know not what you do."

Let's Trust Mr. Reagan

After over 35 years of "giving away," the American people are opposed to President Reagan's policies of cutting off some of these giveaway programs. He is asking the people to get back to basics and start earning their livelihood again.

During the last 20 years or more we have overeducated our people to the extent that they now believe the education will earn them a living without working any more. Even with all this education these smart people are far behind in computers that they try to implement.

Maybe we, the ordinary people, don't agree with our president and his staff of advisors; but if we don't then why did we put our trust in these people and elect them to run our country? I wonder how many of our people had any idea of the condition our country was in when the present administration took over, or how much longer we could have continued at that pace before we would all be bankrupt.

Our president is doing what he and his advisors think is best for our country and its people. If we want to show our patriotism, we will all put our trust in them and back them one hundred percent to get our country back on a stable basis for the good of all people.

Loose Dogs Out Of Hand

I clipped the attached letter from the Winsted (Conn.) Evening Citizen.

Will you please print it? I believe it should be brought to the attention of some of our local dog owners, especially some who live in the Country Club area.

The loose-dog nuisance is getting out of hand, and it is high time some action is taken to eliminate it.

LOOSE DOGS

A young boy cried last Sunday morning; a loose dog jumped a fence, got into a rabbit hutch, and killed the boy's pet rabbit.

Coincidentally, a four-year-old cried last Friday morning; the small bird feeder carefully crafted at nursery school was gone! The tracks in the snow were dog.

Ask anyone in the area about garbage day. Ask them if they enjoy having to pick up garbage strewn by loose dogs.

Talk to the family whose dog was tied in the yard and attacked by four loose dogs.

Let's shoot each and every loose dog we see! If the owner of a pet fails to take responsibility for it, then I'm more than willing to eliminate a large problem.

Do you know where your pet (dog) is?

An Onion For Brantley

Recently House Bill 7, sponsored by two Democrats, Everett Kelly of Lake County and Dexter Lehinen of Dade County, and a Republican, Jim Watt of Palm Beach County, passed the Florida House by a vote of 56 to 46. This bill permits counties (such as Lake and Seminole) that currently hold nonpartisan school district elections to continue to do so, while allowing other counties the choice between partisan and nonpartisan elections for these positions.

HB-7 is now before the Senate, and I would hope that the senators who represent Lake and Seminole counties would give it their wholehearted support. The people of both counties adopted the nonpartisan method of electing their school officials — Lake by a 4 to 1 vote and Seminole by more than 2 to 1 — and both counties stand to lose this right due to a court decision declaring existing law unconstitutional.

House passage of this bill came about through the untiring efforts of Rep. Kelly, Rep. Robert Hattaway, and others who put the will of the people above the questionable motives of a small group of power-hungry politicians. For their efforts they deserve an orchid.

Rep. Bobby Brantley, whose district includes parts of Lake and Seminole counties, voted against this legislation, stating as his reason, "All county offices should be partisan." Brantley's logic, followed to its apparent conclusion, would extend to putting our judges back under the partisan system. Neither the judiciary nor our school systems should ever be forced back into the clutches of the pork-barrel politicians, and the voters of both Lake and Seminole counties have spoken loud and clear on these issues at the ballot box.

Rep. Brantley should remember that he serves to represent the will of the people, not the boys in the back room. For his vote against the people of Lake and Seminole counties Rep. Brantley deserves an onion — and a ripe one at that!

Taxpayers Are Ripped Off

The Legislature gathered together a coalition and brought them to Tallahassee to howl their heads off and give us another penny on our sales tax. It reminds me of the Bible story where Pilate gathered together a coalition to have them shout, "Give us Barabbas." History will prove that both decisions were detrimental to the well-being of mankind.

I wonder what our great-grandchildren will think of their forefathers who raised taxes one penny after another until the sales taxes were 88 cents and the other penny went for a token that was used for grocery rations.

This kind of government has a different name in Moscow. I believe over there they say, "The state will take care of you, and we will control your decisions and your trend of thought."

Grover Ashcraft
Pierston

How long will it be before we will be controlled by the state? Can we have private enterprise in America if we are taxed out of all our money? Overtaxation can destroy democracy in America.

There are two kinds of people in America who could care less if you have groceries after you pay your taxes. One is the union-boss who controls the salaries of the individual paid by your tax dollars. He has got to get a raise every year or he becomes useless.

The other is the politician who has got to raise taxes every year to take care of the rapidly inflated cost of government brought about in part by the ruthless union boss. Both these people rip off the taxpayer to meet their goals.

The 'New Federalism' And Democracy In U.S.

By KEN MASUGI

Public Research, Syndicated
In his State of the Union message, President Reagan announced his plan to transfer responsibility for a variety of social programs from the federal government to the states. Reagan's proposal for a "New Federalism" reveals once again the extent to which he follows the thinking of the French political philosopher and statesman

COMMENTARY

Alexis de Tocqueville.

Reagan had referred to Tocqueville in a previous nationally televised address on the budget:

"More than a century ago a Frenchman came to America and later wrote a book for his countrymen telling them what he had seen here. He told them that in America when a citizen saw a problem that needed solving, he would cross the street and talk to a neighbor about it, and the first thing you know a committee would be formed and before long the problem would be solved.

"And then," he added, "you may not believe this, but not a single bureaucrat would ever have been involved."

The book to which Reagan referred was Tocqueville's "Democracy in America." This priceless gift to defenders of freedom offers praise and criticism of democracy as a form of government and a way of life. Of all the marvelous insights contained in this book, the one most immediately relevant to Reagan's legislative program is Tocqueville's belief that the growth of centralized power posed a threat to the liberty of citizens in a democratic regime.

Tocqueville believed that in a democracy citizens would grow more and more alike as a result of the inevitable historical trend toward egalitarianism. As this process unfolded, he believed, the notion that different laws should rule individuals living in different states or localities of the country would become illogical. For similar individuals one set of laws, established by the national authority, would eventually appear to be the more sensible way of being ruled.

But such excessive centralization would pose an enormous threat to individual liberty. By liberty or freedom Tocqueville did not mean simply the ability to do whatever one wanted so long as it did not hurt anyone else. To remain free in a democracy, a citizen had to participate actively and directly in the governing of himself and his community. And for Tocqueville, this in turn meant that citizens had to involve themselves in what are usually thought to be trivial matters — school board meetings or repairing a local road, for example.

Tocqueville admitted that most Americans might eventually find local self-government a taxing and boring chore. Why should they not, after all, allow the resources of the federal government replace inept local struggles? The French philosopher answered this question by showing that unless Americans continued to exercise their political freedom by governing themselves locally, they might all blend into a huge herd, shepherded by the federal government. And should this occur, the central government would then be in a position to rule arbitrarily, degrading even further the political freedom of its subjects.

Thus Tocqueville's objection to growing centralization in a democratic nation is not that it would necessarily result in Soviet-style totalitarianism, but rather that it would cripple men's ability and desire to care for themselves and others in a direct, immediate way. Such self-government, he thought, was an essential part of human well-being.

President Reagan's New Federalism proposal reflects his understanding of the consequences for political liberty that follow from overly centralized government as they were stated by Tocqueville. But of course neither the president nor Tocqueville would regard the struggle against increasing centralization as an easy one.

Consider, first of all, that the New Federalism calls for total federal control over a program previously shared by the states and the federal government. To take one step forward, toward decentralization, Reagan had to take one back toward more centralization. The problem is whether Congress will permit him to take the necessary two steps forward.

Despite the prestige that would accrue to state and local governments under the New Federalism, the central government will still remain preeminent in resources and opportunities for glory. As a result, young, talented men on their way up will continue to seek power and fortune in Washington, and less in Sacramento, Jefferson City or Tallahassee.

And of course even those interested parties professing opposition to increased centralization as a general principle will demand more of it when it favors their particular cause. For example, legislators from states with large welfare demands support the food stamp program — one scheduled for decentralization — but it may surprise some that certain conservative Republican senators from Midwestern agricultural states may not be so eager to decentralize the program either. After all, food stamps serve as a type of subsidy for agricultural products.

In "Democracy in America" Tocqueville foresaw all these challenges and more. He was not so sure that they could be met and the loss of individual liberty forestalled. In a democracy, given the overriding demand for equality, he thought centralized government would be an almost inevitable result. On this point, obviously, the president disagrees with the Frenchman. Perhaps that is because Reagan believes that much of the centralization that has occurred in America has been the result not of the forces of history, but of the policies of another president, Franklin D. Roosevelt. In Reagan's view, American statesmen may yet have more scope for action than even the prescient Tocqueville realized.

Programs That Can Save Lives

With flashing lights and wailing siren, our fire department's paramedic squad arrived at our condominium building — and reminded me of the importance of the Vial of Life.

This vial doesn't contain a magic health elixir. Rather, it contains information that could make the difference between life and death for a stricken person.

This program isn't only for the elderly. It's equally important for people of all ages.

The vial is a round plastic container about 2 inches long and 1 1/4 inches wide. It's similar to those used by the druggist in filling prescriptions.

It's what's inside the vial that counts: vital medical information about each member of the household.

List for each person the name and phone number of his or her physician. If the person is being treated by a specialist, include that doctor's name and phone number as well.

List all current illnesses — particularly a heart condition, high blood pressure, use of a pacemaker, diabetes, etc. — and all allergies and special medications. At the top of my own list are the red-lettered words "NO ASPIRIN."

Especially important are the names and addresses of your next of kin and the local phone numbers of relatives or friends who might be able to provide additional information for the paramedics.

Roll or fold the sheets of paper with this information for each individual, place them into the plastic container and tape it to the right side of a refrigerator shelf.

Some municipal governments provide the plastic vials and information forms. The latter aren't necessary. You can simply write the information on a small sheet of paper and make carbons for additional use.

Growing Older
Harold Blumenfeld

We keep another plastic bottle clearly marked "Vial of Life" on the front seat of our auto. My wife and I carry additional copies of the information in our wallets in case we have a seizure or are in an accident away from home.

If you already have a Vial of Life in your refrigerator, it's important to update the information. I confess to being slow to add information about my new doctors, pacemaker and medications after my recent open-heart surgery.

Many communities have a "911" general emergency number. But precious seconds can be lost while the operator relays the information to the rescue squad.

Many paramedic squads also have their own direct-dial phone numbers for use in emergencies. Tape that number on all of your telephone extensions and inside the doors of one or two closets. It could be one of the most important phone numbers you will ever dial.

The family of a stricken person, particularly an elderly spouse, might find it difficult to operate as a one-man or one-woman life-saving squad while waiting for professional help.

I admire the communities and residents of large apartment complexes who are organized to provide CPR (coronary cardiopulmonary resuscitation) until the ambulance arrives. Such a program could save a life — even your own.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan Hopes To Improve His Image Among Blacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is contemplating a major strategy change in an effort to repair his tattered image among blacks.

Normally, when the president has gone on the road, the audiences have been mostly middle-class whites, Republican contributors and state legislators. Events such as a $1,000-per-plate GOP fund-raising breakfast were not unusual.

Reagan now apparently has decided to change his style, according to former civil rights leaders, and will personally visit black communities to counter stinging criticism his administration does not care about the nation's poor.

Doing Something Nice

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — An elderly, disabled war veteran who just wanted to "do something nice" for his country has given the federal government a $10,000 check to help reduce the national debt.

Carol Fishback of the U.S. attorney's office said Friday the veteran, who wanted to remain anonymous, came into her office earlier this month and asked how he could donate $10,000 to the government.

"He just wanted to do something nice for the federal government, because it had taken good care of him for many years," she said.

Social Security System OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new study by a presidential commission says the Social Security system might be better off than some financial projections seem to indicate.

A report by Elizabeth Duskin, senior adviser to the National Commission on Social Security Reform, said Friday a few small changes in official economic and demographic assumptions would paint a more optimistic financial picture for the retirement system.

The Reagan administration — and many prominent experts — contend the Social Security system faces a long-term financial crunch in the middle of the next century, when the post World War II baby boom retires and begins drawing benefits.

Mount St. Helens To Blow?

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Scientists are closely monitoring unpredictable Mount St. Helens after its first eruption since 1980, two weeks ago.

Geologists said Friday the mountain's lava dome, which continues to bulge out of the north side, had grown to a height of about 600 feet since the volcano produced a powerful explosion of ash and pumice March 18.

The dome, which eventually could fill the volcano's huge crater, was 600 feet high before the eruption.

Seminole Plagued By Rash Of Burglaries

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

Burglars in Seminole County have apparently not been hit by spring fever. They're busier than ever. Local law enforcement agencies report no less than six burglaries in the last 48 hours.

Sometime late Friday night, burglars gained access to the Russ Salerno tire store, U.S. Highway 17-82, Fern Park, by removing a window glass. One of the subjects tripped an ultrasonic alarm, then fled. Nothing was reported missing from the store.

Miguel Rosa, 33, of 344 Reeves Court, Orlando, told deputies that an unidentified male gained entry to his 1974 Ford Van by popping the lock with a screw driver late Friday night while the vehicle was parked at 440 Plumosa Ave., Casselberry. Rosa, however, chased the would-be bandit away before he could steal anything.

Sheriff's deputies responded to an alarm at the Gold Nugget Jewelry Store in the Butler Plaza, Casselberry, at approximately 3:35 a.m. Saturday morning.

Upon arrival, deputies found a hole had been made in the ceiling of the store and another hole had been cut in the hallway directly in front of the store. Store owner Joseph Miller told deputies he could find nothing missing.

Sanford police are investigating three burglaries. Sometime late Friday night, someone attempted to enter the Goodyear Tire Store, 866 West 1st Street, Sanford, by removing an exhaust fan from the south side of the store. Store manager Charles Johnston reported to police that he found nothing missing.

Sanford police are also investigating the Friday night burglary of the Army-Navy Store, 310 South Sanford Ave.

Someone entered the store through a window, pried open the cash register and ransacked the store. The burglars also took numerous watches, assorted footwear and clothing. The value of the stolen property is unknown.

Police are continuing their investigation of a burglary at the Seminole County Manpower Division Office, 100 East 1st Street, Sanford.

Manpower Division manager Leonard Carswell told deputies that sometime between Thursday night and Friday morning, someone removed several calculators and other personal items from nine desks in the office. Police are still trying to determine the perpetrator's point of entry.

30 New Jobs To Be Created

CFS Continental Expanding

CFS Continental, the second largest supplier to the food service industry in the U.S., has received approval from the Seminole County Industrial Development Authority (SCIDA) to issue $1.5 million in Industrial Development Revenue Bonds.

The bonds will be used for the expansion and equipping of its sales and distribution center to be located at 2100 Country Club Road in Sanford. Expansion of the facility, which has been in operation since 1974, will result in the creation of 30 permanent new jobs, according to CFS Continental Vice President Stanley Owens.

Groundbreaking and construction timetables for the expansion project have yet to be determined.

The addition will provide an additional 27,000 square feet of dry warehouse space and roughly 7,000 square feet of freezer space. It's estimated by CFS Continental that an additional $200,000 worth of supplies, materials and services will be purchased annually from local businesses due to the expansion project, beyond the $80,000 spent in fiscal 1981.

The Chicago-based company, which operates approximately 40 distribution centers and manufacturing facilities around the country, specializes in providing food and related products to restaurants, health care facilities, schools, hotels, airlines and vending operations.

The Sanford facility will serve north and central Florida with a full line of DFS manufactured and purchased products.

CFS Continental operates a distribution center in Miami, a bakery in St. Petersburg and is currently building a specialty bakery in Orlando Central Park, and has total annual sales of approximately $1 billion dollars.

ONE MORE TIME

A Maitland woman's home was burglarized at about noon Thursday, marking the fifth burglary to her home in recent months.

Leigh Del Vecco, 38, of 1048 Manchester Circle, told deputies the thieves broke into her home through a locked window over the kitchen sink, ransacked her bedrooms and stole an undetermined amount of property.

FROZEN MEAT STOLEN

Thieves made off with an undetermined amount of frozen beef and pork from a Sanford woman's home sometime between 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8:15 a.m. Thursday.

Lise Harris, 53, of 2107 Oak Ave., told Sanford police someone broke into her unlocked utility room and stole the meat from her freezer.

TEACHER GETS PROBATION, FINE

A Seminole County school teacher has been sentenced to 15 years probation and fined $2,000 in connection with the death of an Orlando woman last July.

Linda Coleman, Orlando, suspended sixth-grade science and social studies teacher at Jackson Heights Middle School near Oviedo, was sentenced by Orange County Circuit Judge George Diamantis in the shooting death of Doris Thomas outside the Port Au Prince Lounge in Orlando. Adjudication of guilty was withheld by Diamantis.

Ms. Coleman was charged with second-degree murder last July, but pleaded no contest to a lesser charge of manslaughter in November.

Dismissal proceedings against Ms. Coleman by the school board are underway.

ATTACKS AT FERN PARK BAR

A man and a woman were attacked in the parking lot of the Fern Park Station, on Fernwood Boulevard, in two separate incidences Sunday.

Michael Francis Loftus, 19, of the Naval Training Center in Orlando, told deputies two men hit him on the head and stole his wallet containing $70 cash and identification cards at about 12:20 a.m. Sunday.

Nancy Ann Peteroy, 24, of 1112 Cheetah Trail, Tusawilla, told deputies she was approached by a man as she was entering her car parked at the Fern Park bar at about 2:10 a.m. Sunday. The man reportedly hit Ms. Peteroy in the right side of the head, knocking her to the ground, deputies said. The man then fled in a beige van, deputies said.

DOGS GONE

An Osteen man reported his two hunting dogs missing after he turned them loose three weeks ago to chase wild hogs.

Jack Martin, 68, of Lemon Bluff, told deputies that Babe, his 7-year-old black-and-tan female dog, and Lonesome, "a long-eared white-and-black male dog," have been observed by friends since their disappearance March 6 near Black Hammock in Oviedo, but that efforts to catch them have failed. Martin said he feels someone has taken the dogs and is using them to hunt, deputies added.

The dogs are valued at about $250 each, deputies said.

PILOT PLEADS GUILTY

A professional pilot has pleaded guilty in Circuit Court, Sanford, to a charge of possession of marijuana and has been freed from jail on a pretrial release program.

Gary Paul Hamilton, of Miami Springs and Maryville, Tenn., admitted his participation in a scheme to fly from Seminole County to the Bahamas to obtain more than 100 pounds of marijuana.

Hamilton faces up to one year in jail.

PRYING THIEVES

Thieves broke into an Oviedo man's trailer home by prying open the side door, and stole a television set and welding tools at about 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Alfred W. Talley, 34, told deputies the thieves also broke the chain lock on the gate at the driveway entrance to his home.

Dorm Rents Going Up

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — The state Board of Regents Friday approved new dormitory rents, representing increases ranging from 7 percent at the University of West Florida to 18 percent at the University of Central Florida.

Steve McArthur, a regents staff member, said the increases, which will go into effect during the 1982-83 academic year, were needed to avoid running a deficit. The universities had requested the increases.

McArthur said the increases reflect higher costs for utilities and maintenance for the campus residence halls.

The regents also approved a negative checkoff rule allowing state university students not wanting money from their student activities fee to go to groups such as the Florida Public Interest Research Institute to use as designate.

Students at Florida State University in Tallahassee had objected to the use of $2.50 a term from the fee to finance institute activities.

Art Grindle, Seminole County entrepreneur and Republican candidate for the State House from District 33, has named Maryanne Morse to manage his 1982 campaign. Mrs. Morse is secretary of the state Republican party and past chairman of the GOP in Seminole County.

Democrats Tee Off

There will be some real heavy hitters at Sanford's Mayfair Country Club Saturday when the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee holds its first annual golf tournament.

Such luminaries as Lt. Gov. Wayne Mixson, State Democratic Committee Chairman Charlie Whitehead, Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, and State Rep. Dick Batchelor, D-Orlando, as well as several local Democratic officials are scheduled to participate in the affair.

Golfers will tee off in a shotgun start at 9 a.m. and wind up their round with a buffet lunch at 1:30 p.m. in the clubhouse.

Entry fee is $30 which includes golf cart, greens fees, and the meal. If you just want to eat, buffet tickets are $7.50. Monday is the deadline for registration.

IN BRIEF 6 Guilty Of Running Largest Pot Ring Ever

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Six principals of "The Corporation," including a former Key West city attorney, were found guilty late Friday on various charges of operating the largest marijuana smuggling ring ever investigated by federal agents.

Closing out the three-week "Operation Sunburn" trial and 3½ years of undercover investigation by more than 50 federal agents, a federal court jury returned verdicts convicting all six defendants after 18 hours of deliberation over two days.

The three-week trial gave jurors a rare glimpse into the heart of a smuggling ring that prosecutors said imported more than $300 million worth of marijuana from Colombia between 1977 and 1981.

Gasoline Prices Decline

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida motorists were benefiting from an average 3.7 cents a gallon drop in gasoline prices last month, the American Auto Association of Florida reports.

The AAA said Friday the decrease was the largest since the early 1970s when the Arab oil boycott sent fuel prices soaring.

The survey report says the biggest drop in gasoline prices was at self-service pumps, an average of 15 cents a gallon for all grades. Self-service regular dropped an average 19 cents.

Weather Is Big Concern

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Shuttle astronauts Jack Louma and Gordon Fullerton swept into day 8 of their week-long test flight today, assured a peppy radio problem will not force them back early.

Weather at the White Sands, N.M., landing site, however, remained a matter of concern for controllers directing the third mission of the nation's winged rocket ship.

Louma and Fullerton are scheduled to land Monday, but Eugene Kranz, deputy director of flight operations at the Johnson Space Center, did not rule out a descent a day early or late if the weather looked bad for Monday.

WORLD

Salvadoran Leftists

Disrupting Elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist rebels hoping to torpedo the nation's anxiously awaited elections launched striking raids that cut roads to the nation's second largest city and blew up a tenth of the polling booths in the capital.

Saboteurs and government troops also battled in the southern sector of San Salvador Friday where the sound of intense gunfire echoed near National Police headquarters, residents said.

Despite the violence, officials predicted Friday an 85 percent turnout in voting Sunday for the 60-seat constituent assembly — the centerpiece of American efforts to bring democracy to Central America and stability to El Salvador after three years of civil war.

West Bank Mayoral Elections

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel, apparently bowing to growing international condemnation, promised it will hold new elections to replace three West Bank mayors it dismissed as PLO sympathizers.

The announcement Friday, however, did not set a time for new voting.

Menachem Milson, the Israeli civilian administrator of the West Bank, said three Palestinians Israel regards as acceptable will be appointed in the interim. Israeli army officers now run the Arab municipalities of El Bireh, Ramallah and Nablus, where riots left five Palestinians and one Israeli dead and more than 40 wounded in eight days.

Reapportionment Issue Goes To Supreme Court

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Legislative reapportionment, in one form or another, is now in the hands of the Florida Supreme Court.

Saying further negotiations with the Senate would be futile, the House re-adopted its own redistricting plan late Friday and promptly adjourned, giving the Senate no choice but to reject it.

Once the Senate also formally adjourns, the dispute automatically goes to the Supreme Court.

Before the House adjourned, the Senate adopted a resolution launching a lawsuit against Gov. Bob Graham contending he should have called a 30-day special session on reapportionment instead of a 3½-day session as he did.

If the Senate prevails in its suit, the Supreme Court conceivably could order Graham to call yet another session.

Graham, meanwhile, scheduled a separate 3½-day special session beginning at 1 p.m. Monday for the Legislature to consider congressional redistricting.

The House and Senate failed to agree on any reapportionment plan during the regular and extended session, which the House also ended abruptly Thursday night. Graham then called them back to deal with legislative districts in a session that had been scheduled to end at noon Monday.

The two chambers are wide apart on their plans for mapping new Senate districts based on the 1980 census. In addition, the House contends all 40 senators should have to run for re-election this year in the new district and not just the 20 whose terms are expiring.

House leaders failed in an effort to win unanimous approval for their plan by giving concessions to Republicans in Dade, Broward and Pinellas counties. The plan was approved 73-25 with most of the nays cast by the GOP.

Six-Year-Old Girl To Be Tried As Adult

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — The 6-year-old defendant smoothed her crushed velvet dress, brushed back the blonde bangs from her forehead and held her mother's hand as the judge ordered her tried as an adult for aggravated battery.

Circuit Judge H. A. Green Jr. told a packed courtroom he had no alternative, under Florida law, but to grant the motion by Alan Wilhite, attorney for Nancy Jo Burch, that she be given a full-blown jury trial.

"Both I and Nancy Jo's parents have complete faith in our jury system," Wilhite told reporters outside the courtroom. "In a juvenile proceeding, she would have had no right to a jury trial."

Wilhite maintains that the girl cannot be held accountable for criminal acts because of her age. He said he feels certain a jury will exonerate her so she does not carry a criminal record through her life.

Nancy Jo and her mother, Josephine Burch, burst into tears in the courthouse hallway when reporters began questioning them. Her father, Walter Burch, a self-employed mechanic, said the whole thing was "ridiculous."

The frail-looking little girl was accused by Nancy Nickolls, the mother of her playmate, Shirley Lynn Nickolls, 7, of hitting Shirley Lynn twice with a stick and causing her nose to bleed last Feb. 4.

"If they let her go now, in five or 10 years she might be out committing other crimes because she lost respect for the system," Mrs. Nickolls said. "This was dangerous. They (a 13-year-old boy who is a co-defendant held Shirley Lynn's arms) got close to messing up my little girl for life."

The Airport, Where's That?

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jump in a cab in Chicago, experienced city dwellers say, and you may never reach your destination.

Karen Pettite, the city's consumer affairs commissioner, says the recent influx of immigrants who have obtained chauffeurs' licenses has triggered a spate of complaints about cab drivers who can't speak English and don't know where they're going.

The city Tuesday began retesting its 12,000 licensed cab drivers in an effort to weed out those who don't know their way around town.

"What if you want to put your mother or elderly aunt in a cab and send her somewhere in the city, to the doctor, say?" Ms. Pettite asked. "She may not know where she's going, so the driver better."

Ms. Pettite said her office gets about 2,500 complaints a year about cabbies and recently the focus has been on drivers who couldn't get a passenger where he wanted to go.

Syndicated columnist Mike Royko of the Chicago SunTimes wrote recently of encountering a cabbie who couldn't find the Wrigley Building, one of the city's most famous and most centrally located landmarks.

Deputy Consumer Affairs Commissioner Jesse J. Blackmon said three drivers who had been the subject of consumer complaints were tested about the city's geography and all three failed the quiz. Blackmon said the three will be suspended for one year.

Beginning in December, when licenses must be renewed, drivers who have not been the subject of complaints will have to take the revamped, 25-question, multiple-choice test that will require them to identify the locations of prominent hotels, restaurants, museums and historical sites.
