

NEW MOVE TO STIR UP IDLE MONEY BEGUN

Powerful Committee Of Bankers, Industrialists Headed By Owen D. Young

NEW YORK, May 20.—(A.P.)—A new move to put hundreds of millions of idle dollars to work was started today by a powerful committee of bankers and industrialists under the chairmanship of Owen D. Young.

The group was called together by George Harrison, governor of the New York federal reserve bank, to make the federal reserve policy of credit expansion effective and answer to a demand in many quarters for a more drastic means of stimulating recovery in prices.

It was reported out that despite the fact the federal reserve system purchased $725,000,000 of United States government securities during the past year, the amount of bank credit has not increased in many quarters for a more drastic means of stimulating recovery in prices.

The committee of 12, under the chairmanship of Young, held its first meeting here yesterday. While detailed information as to what moves were under consideration to divert the funds into their normal channels was unavailable, it was pointed out that the 12 leaders themselves had banking and industrial experience listing aggregate resources and assets in excess of $15,000,000,000, one of the most powerful groups that could be assembled.

It was reported that the committee will immediately begin to operate to revive the bond market, which is still in a state of depression, and to stimulate the financing of such a $2,000,000,000 public works program as has recently been suggested in Washington, and endorsed by Young and other leaders.

Members explained that the funds have been lying up in New York more rapidly than elsewhere, and that the organizations headed by these executives, including American Telephone, General Motors, General Electric, American Radiator, and Standard of New Jersey, reach out throughout the country, so that their activity might well be considered nationwide in scope.

The federal reserve system began in February a persistent program of buying United States government securities in the open market. The program was facilitated by the Glass-Steagall Act, permitting the use of these securities as backing for currency. Between Feb. 15 and May 14, the system bought $725,000,000.

The committee's members have to pay off their borrowings at the reserve, and has finally resulted in the piling up of some $300,000,000 of excess in reserve of members on deposit with the federal reserve bank. The chief problem now is to stimulate the use of these idle funds.

The selection of Owen D. Young as chairman of the committee, within a few days after his emphatic assertion that he was not to be considered as a possible Democratic presidential candidate, aroused some comment in Wall Street in view of recent rumors that Young might play a prominent part in an important non-partisan program to deal with the economic situation.

Floods Endangering Hoover Dam Work

LAS VEGAS, Nev., May 20.—(A.P.)—Swollen by melting snow in the Rockies, the Colorado River rapidly neared the flood stage at Boulder City today and threatened to cause interruption of work on the Hoover dam. Guards were posted at the entrance of the tunnels being bored through the mountain to sound alarm if the water reached the level of the structure.

POOL OPERATIONS OF RASKOB TOLD AT SENATE PROBE

Senators Amazed At Accounts Of Fabulous Money-Making

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(A.P.)—Stories rivaling fables of how America's finance giants "got richer quick" on the New York market were told yesterday to the Senate Banking Committee.

Amazed senators heard of a pool operation in which John J. Raskob and others made $5,000,000 in seven days; that this pool paid $92,000 to non-participants and that the only man who can explain it called for Edgemoor Wednesday night; and how a "free lance trader" with three associates made more than $1,000,000 in five weeks without putting up a cent.

The investigating committee also uncovered the first of the much publicized "bear raids," reports of which inspired it to start the inquiry into the market operations.

Further, the committee learned that a big pool in General Asphalt had lost money when the market crashed in 1929, despite that members of the company had been directors of the company and had been in the market after the syndicate was formed.

Half a dozen witnesses were paraded before the committee but they only supplemented the evidence presented by William A. Gray, committee counsel, which he had dug up during a three weeks secret inquiry into books of exchange and brokerage houses.

Gray tossed into the record a mass of names and figures. (Continued on Page Six)

Celery Club Owner Attacked, Robbed Of Day's Receipts

R. D. Cook, owner of the Celery Club, popular lake-front restaurant, was slugged in the jaw just as he prepared to leave the club last night at about 11:30 o'clock, knocked unconscious, and robbed of about $175.

Police investigating the case declare that it is almost impossible of solution because Mr. Cook is unable to describe his assailant and there are no clues which may be placed on any person.

According to Mr. Cook's story, he was alone in the club, and had just finished closing windows preparatory to leaving for the night. His day's receipts, the largest he had since he's been in Sanford, were in his pocket. A moment after he had snatched the electric light switch just inside the front door, throwing the place in darkness, someone caught him around the neck with an arm, partly choking him, and a man's fist came crashing against his left jaw from behind.

"All I remember is that I just crumpled up," Mr. Cook said in describing the robbery, "and when I woke up, about 12:30 o'clock, I found a table cloth wrapped around my neck and thrown over my face, evidently to keep me from recognizing the robber as he went through my pockets. My clothes were soiled, and I was bleeding at the mouth and nose. I telephoned police at once."

Mr. Cook declares that the attack came so quickly that he is unable to say whether the robber was white or black, short or tall, and at whatever it was "had some teeth."

Last night's robbery is the 15th reported in Sanford since May 9. Several merchants are reported as having armed themselves today after hearing of this latest attack. Many of them declaring an intention of holding their own against any more such robberies.

GARNER GIVES HIS PLAN FOR GETTING RELIEF

Program Is Designed To Help Lift U. S. Out Of Present Economic Depression

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(A.P.)—A $2,100,000,000 relief program was proposed yesterday by Speaker Garner and all indications are the Democratic House plans to lay it before the Senate.

Designed to help lift the country out of the economic slump, furnish employment to the idle and direct relief to those without food and clothing, the Garner program immediately met approval of Democrats and Republicans.

Without requiring the setting up of any additional governmental machinery, the Texas Democrat's program, briefly provides: Increasing from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 the capitalization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to states, counties and cities and the broadening of its base to permit the organization to exercise its judgment in making loans without restriction.

3 Cars Involved In Unusual Accident At Street Corner

The unusual in automobile accidents, involving three automobiles, brought cuts, bruises, and shocks to several well-known Sanford women, and varied damage to each of the vehicles involved.

It occurred at the intersection of Main and Broadway streets yesterday shortly after 12:00 o'clock.

Mrs. C. F. Stahl, driving a new Pontiac sedan east on Eighteenth Street, with Miss Mary Jane Preston a passenger in the back seat, and Miss Roberta Stahl a passenger in the front, had stopped at Park Avenue, to await the passage south of an automobile driven by L. H. Harkey.

Mrs. W. R. Brooks, driving a Ford sedan with Mrs. Glenn Whittle, and several children as passengers, unable to bring the Ford to a stop, crashed into the rear of the Pontiac with such force that it was shoved broadside into the intersection.

Miss Preston's head was severely hit when she was bounced against the Pontiac's rear window, which was broken; Miss Stahl fainted, to be revived several minutes later; Mrs. Stahl became unnerve; Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Whittle were slightly cut by flying glass of their wind shield, while several of the children were jostled, and Mr. Harkey, after surveying the damage, aided in assisting the injured women.

Today, Mrs. Stahl and Miss Stahl are confined to their homes suffering from shock; Miss Preston is convalescing at her home; Mrs. Brooks and her party, are all very and slightly unnerve, while insurance adjusters are investigating the wreck, and the extent of damage to each automobile. The case has not been reported to police.

During her short stay in Sanford, Mrs. Owen greeted many of her friends and supporters at the Montezuma Hotel.

Gangster Tells Story Of How Underworld Joined In Effort To Find Lindy Baby

MANY CITIZENS HAVE NOT PAID POLL TAXES YET

Nearly 1200 Will Be Disqualified Unless They Act At Once

NEW YORK, May 20.—(A.P.)—Underworld hostilities were forgotten, Morris Rorer told the World-Telegram yesterday, and every organized mob and gang in the country cooperated, at his request, in the hunt for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

In a copyrighted article, an amazing story is told of the gangster's search.

"The first thing I did was to go in all the mob leaders and ask them to help" Rorer was quoted as saying. "Every one of them did."

"They started off by suspecting anybody who was missing from the usual places. That included 'hamsters,' fugitives from justice, and other fellows who were hiding out because they thought they were on the spot in some feud."

"Every one of them was hunted out and questioned. Each one had to convince his questioner he was hiding for some other reason before he was released from suspicion that he knew about the kidnaping."

"I can't give names and cases, of course, but this is the way it was done: 'If a fellow was missing, word was sent out through the grapevine that he was wanted.' (Continued on Page Two)

Group Is Acquitted By DeLand Court In Shah Babar Attack

A DeLand criminal court jury yesterday afternoon acquitted Mike Stoinoff, George Stoinoff, Marvin Leavitt, L. E. King, and C. C. English of charges of assault with intent to commit the murder of Prince Shah Babar and George Monaur in Volusia county about two weeks ago.

Each of the five Sanford men began in DeLand Wednesday morning. Evidence of the accused "defendants" was admitted Wednesday afternoon, and testimony of defendants and defense witnesses occupied all of Thursday morning's session.

Each of the five defendants denied any attempt to take the lives of the two men, all testifying that George Stoinoff fought Shah Babar in a secluded spot near Sanford by agreement, a man to man fight to settle family difficulties. All denied that Mike Stoinoff had any part in the fighting, and said that L. E. King, C. C. English, Marvin Leavitt, and C. W. Hodges did nothing but watch the encounter between the two men.

According to defense testimony, the two men were taken from Sanford to the Monroe bridge, and left to leave the county, but all denied that any part of the fighting occurred in Volusia county.

Defense testimony attempted to show that Shah Babar had treated his wife, Mary Stoinoff, cruelly, and that the alleged Persian mystic came to Florida in an effort to get her to return to him.

Babar had previously testified that the Stoinoffs and the other four defendants had assaulted him when he attempted to see his wife and child.

CUBAN REVOLT THREAT RAISED ANEW TODAY

Police Discover Extensive Revolutionary Conspiracy And Find Secret Lists

HAVANA, May 20.—(A.P.)—The threat of a new revolution was in the air as the Cuban republic today celebrated quietly its thirtieth birthday. Exactly three decades ago the first American occupation which followed the successful termination of the island's long fight for freedom from Spain ended and Cuba embarked on its career as an independent nation.

There was little festivity to mark independence day today. Constitutional guarantees are still in suspension and martial law prevails throughout the island.

More than 300 arrests were made in connection with the discovery of what police described as a wide-flung revolutionary conspiracy when they forced their way into the Manzana De Gomez building offices of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Secret codes and membership lists of the revolutionary organization were seized and a search of hundreds of residences followed. Many pistoled arms.

Seminole Indians To Stage Dance To Show Appreciation

For the first time in nearly 70 years Seminole Indians will stage their dances on the soil of Seminole county when, tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock in the Seminole Indian village on the lakefront, around a blazing bonfire, Indian braves will express their appreciation of the cordial reception which has met them since their arrival here, by offering a group of their interesting and seldom seen tribal dances.

This special courtesy to the people of this county has been arranged by W. Stanley Hanson, of Ft. Myers, who brought the Indians to Sanford. Mr. Hanson declares that the Indians are grateful for the many courtesies that have been extended them, and that they wish to show their appreciation in the dances they will perform.

During their dances Mr. Hanson will describe and explain their meaning. A particular invitation is extended to children who will have a rare opportunity of seeing native Indians in their native dances.

Tomorrow and Sunday will be the last days that the Indians will be here, for on Monday morning they will break camp and return to their home, about 75 miles southwest of Ft. Myers, in the Everglades.

The Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, under whose auspices they have been camped here for the past several weeks, announces that their Indian houses will remain in Sanford, and if anyone wishes one of them to be erected on their lawn, they may be had at a reasonable cost. The seeded cloth which has been used for the enclosure is also for sale, trade body officials announce. Persons interested should call at the City Hall office.

ADDRESSES MADE BEFORE THROGS NEAR LAKESHORE

Day Of Farmer Play-Gone, Says Speaker

Declaring that the farmer who seeks to pursue his agricultural enterprises with a lone hand is doomed, L. M. Rhodes, state marketing expert spoke before several thousand persons gathered at the lakeshore, as part of the program in celebration of Farmers' Day, yesterday afternoon.

"This is a day of group action, a time when large corporations and associations are moving forward with industrial developments and marketing and it is up to the farmer to take advantage of these facts and profit by them rather than to seek to run the course alone," the commissioner said. "If the American farmer is to cease being the buffet of an industrial civilization and the plaything of controlled markets, he must enlarge farm profits and enrich farm life," Mr. Rhodes continued.

"Competition is no longer between individuals in the world's arena, competition is between groups of organizations and it is these groups where labor, finance and industry enter the mass power of their respective organizations agriculture cannot keep up with the procession if it enters only the two bare hands of the individual farmer," the speaker declared.

Growers, Shippers Can Press Charges Before I. C. C. Soon

Florida growers and shippers will be allowed to press their charges, that freight rates to out-of-state points are too high, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, meeting in Atlanta the latter part of June, according to an announcement today.

This information was received in Sanford today, by W. C. Hutchinson, traffic manager for Chase and Co.; W. M. Scott and J. E. Wathen, of the American Fruit Growers, Inc.; and Miss Nell H. Whitner, traffic manager for the Sanford-Oviedo Truck Growers, Inc.

J. Curtis Robinson, secretary of the Growers and Shippers League of Florida, is the informant who states that "the carriers filed a petition with the I. C. C. to dismiss our complaint against the rates on vegetables, Docket 25071, on the grounds that the Commission had only recently heard and passed upon a similar complaint. Our counsel wires this morning that the Commission has denied the carriers' petition to dismiss the vegetable complaint. The hearing will be held in Atlanta the latter part of June or the first of July. You will be advised later definitely of the date of hearing."

When the Growers and Shippers League does appear before the commission, Mr. Hutchinson said, its principal points of argument against high freight rates will be the actual figures on the net return of the grower, and the cost of production of celery.

The net return figures will be taken from the records of the Sanford-Oviedo Truck Growers, Inc.; the American Fruit Growers, Inc.; and Chase and Co., from 1918 through the 1931 season.

The records on costs of production will be taken from the files of the American Fruit Growers, Inc., and Chase and Co.

POLICE SEEK NEW LEADS IN KIDNAP CASE

Are Balked In Renewal Of Efforts To Get Dobson-Peacock To Face Questions

HOPEWELL, May 20.—(A.P.)—Balked in renewed efforts to induce Rev. J. L. Dobson-Peacock to come here for questioning, police hunting the kidnaper and murderers of the Lindbergh baby sought help today from two mysterious sources.

One of these was a "known gangster" who is understood to have said in Maryland before the body was found that the baby was dead.

The other mysterious source under investigation to determine if there is any connection with the Lindbergh case was the "recently tempted King kidnaper" not more specifically described by police for fear of hindering the investigation.

While these investigations were going forward Dr. John Condon, who, as Jafie, paid the fiftieth thousand dollar ransom for the supposed kidnaper of the baby, told the Bronx county, New York, grand jury how he handed the money through the cemetery hedge in a suitcase. Condon was before the jury more than two hours.

Anxious to confront John Curtis, jailed heaver in the case, with Peacock, associate of Curtis in the fantastic hunt for the murdered baby, police offered to pay the minister's expenses if he would come to New Jersey for questioning. Peacock spurned the offer, however, and announced from his Norfolk home that he would not come here for questioning.

Behind the closed doors of the Brooklyn district attorney's office, officials questioned Mrs. Harry G. Ford for several hours about a report she had communicated several weeks ago with Dr. John P. Condon, who handled the $50,000 ransom payment for Colonel Lindbergh.

In another room other officers interrogated the teacher's daughter, Miss Gertrude Ford, whom they found in a Riverside Drive apartment.

Both told substantially the same story of their contact with "Jafie," and later were released.

District Attorney W. F. P. Gough said he neither believed nor disbelieved their explanation, but would continue an investigation.

Mrs. Ford told her questioners a story of being in financial straits, thinking "Jafie" might be able to aid her, and appealing to him in vain for $2500.

Information supplied by public school officials started detective Ford off on this new tangent. They had heard Mrs. Ford talk to Dr. Condon by telephone, they said, and knew she was absent from her duties between Feb. 25 through May 1, the day of the kidnaping.

When they asked her about her conversation with "Jafie," she told officials she denied it and said it was her daughter's physician.

Under questioning Mrs. Ford said she first thought of Dr. Condon when a private detective talked on her about another matter and started discussing the Lindbergh case.

Her story of what followed was this: She wrote to Dr. Condon asking an appointment about a personal matter, and adding she would like to be of service in the Lindbergh case. He replied by letter asking for her telephone number, she sent him the school number.

Dr. Condon called her and she asked him for $2500—$1750 to settle an account and $800 for her daughter, who had motion picture ambitions.

Dr. Condon told her to write to him. Instead she called him several times. (Continued on Page Six)

"Sanford is yours today," Mr. Dorner said, "and on all sides you will find that its merchants and its citizens are anxious to make the day a pleasant one. We farmers hope to make it a day you will long remember, and if you will participate in the events of the afternoon, we are sure that you will remember it. On behalf of myself and the club, as well as every farmer in this county, we wish to express our appreciation for the splendid response you have already made to our efforts.

Those persons who did not attend one of the educational meetings at the City Hall or Court House, thronged into the gates of the free Municipal Zoo, the Indian Village, and spent considerable time moving about near the huge barbecue pits where some 8000 pounds of pork and lamb were being prepared for serving at 12:30 o'clock.

Here is the program for the afternoon:

hioner, his wife is crippled and loves him devotedly. That is when the girl becomes a woman—a woman who plans her life and that of her lover and reaches the goal she has set for him.

Written by Frank Capra especially for the talents of Miss Stanwyck and directed by him, this Columbia picture is said to offer the star her most dramatic role. A drab little librarian, one bright Spring morning she decides to take her savings of years and invest it in a grand adventure. She buys gorgeous clothes and sets sail for Havana. On the boat she meets Bob Grover, traveling alone. They fall madly in love, but know each other only by the numbers of their staterooms—sixty-six and ninety-nine.

Back in New York comes disillusionment for the girl, for she finds he is married and a divorce would be a caddish thing to do, for

Mrs. Owen's Record On The Referendum

She voted with other dry congressmen, only six weeks ago, to kill in committee and to prevent a vote on the adoption of the Beck-Lithicum resolution, which provided for a referendum on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and return of liquor control to the states, according to local needs and popular will. The measure provided for a referendum to be voted on by state conventions composed of delegates elected by the people, which is the only possible effective referendum. Every congressman who favored repeal voted to take the measure out of the committee which refused to report it to the house for a vote, because a majority of the committee favor the Eighteenth Amendment. Mrs. Owen was applauded by the Anti-Saloon League for voting to kill the measure in committee. In this way, Mrs. Owen avoided voting for or against repeal.

The Result of Mrs. Owen's Vote

The government was deprived of the opportunity to collect $1,000,000,000.00 a year in revenue from liquors that would be sold only in those states in which the people wish the sale to be legalized.

Where Mrs. Owen Put the New Taxes

Mrs. Owen voted, however, to lay $1,000,000,000.00 in troublesome new taxes on already overburdened business, while gangsters and bootleggers thrive unalarmed. She voted to increase letter postage 50 per cent and to require tax stamps to be affixed to bank checks and special taxes on telegrams, automobiles, trunks, refrigerators, radio sets and phonographs; and on admissions to baseball and football games, movies and theaters; and on children's candy and chewing gum; and to increase income taxes, and, by lowering existing exemptions, to bring under income tax laws every person who has a yearly income of $1,000 or more. And to reach the ladies in particular, Mrs. Owen voted special taxes on cosmetics.

The people of Florida will feel these new taxes within 60 days. If you think there should be a change in the congressmen from the Fourth District, vote for Mark Wilcox. He will reflect in congress and to the country the sane and liberal views of the people you live in and who visit the playground of America.

DO YOU INHALE?

...wonder why cigarette advertising generally avoids this question?

ONE of the mysteries in cigarette advertising has been the persistent fear of the word "inhale." It seems rather foolish—for every inhale—whether they realize it or not... every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Think, then, how ridiculous it is to be certain that your cigarette smoking is pure and clean—so certain that you don't inhale certain ingredients.

Do you inhale? Of course you do! So why this question is for you.

Tom Mix Returns To Screen At Princess

Tom Mix, the greatest western hero, returns to the screen after three triumphal circus years, in "Destry Rides Again." It is scheduled to play at the Princess Theater on Saturday and Sunday. There isn't a boy under sixty who doesn't like to hear as well as see Tom Mix on the screen. The only drawback to this first talking picture of Tom Mix is the fact that Tony cannot talk, but there isn't anything that Tony cannot do, but so far Mix has not been able to teach Tony to say anything, except in the sign language.
Tom Mix's reputation goes back to the earliest traditions of moving picture business. He was the original western star, and with every year his popularity and prestige increased. Strange to say, the five years of his absence from the screen have merely served to demonstrate that popularity. The study with which the theaters throughout the United States have demanded the Tom Mix pictures, delayed unfortunately by his operation, insures a

FOUR GENERATIONS OF LINDBERGH-MORROW FAMILY

Little did the now bereaved and sorrowing members of two of America's most distinguished families think slightly more than a year ago when the photograph was made. The woman on the left is a page of time that joy over the arrival of the healthy, happy infant pictured above, would be turned into the sorrow which is now shared by the nation. In the above photograph may be seen Mrs. Charles Log Cabin, a cousin of the late, great grandmother of the late, Mrs. David G. Morrow, grandmother, and Mr. Lindbergh.

CLUBS OF NEW YORK FALL TO DARK DAYS

Hold-Ups, Raids Put Grimp In Onetime Thriving Business

NEW YORK, May 20. —When will it be continuous curfew for the night clubs? Their twilight seems to fall, what with holdups by gunmen, such as that at the Four Troops in Greenwich Village last week; the raids of police and of federal prohibition agents, all kinds of restrictions cramping to free-and-easy ways, and above all the scarcity of surplus cash.

Radical changes have come over the night life world of New York since last summer, when the police look over the licensing of many of its centers. That act over the lines of class sharply among the resorts which cater to the galaxy of those who still have money to spend. The police department holds itself responsible for the good behavior of some 576 cabarets, including many which are popularly known as night clubs. Over them, it can, if it will, hold an iron hand, as they exist under a license now issued by the authority of Central Street.

There are also the night clubs which have no licenses and could not get any if they applied—glorified speakeasies with entertainment features. In theory the licensed cabarets are not doing anything to break laws, municipal or federal. Actually many do from time to time, especially the anti-leasist statutes. In so doing they came between two fires—the forces of Andrew McCampbell, Prohibition Administrator, and Commissioner Mulrooney, head of the police department. More directly, they are under the rod of Second Deputy Muldoon, in charge of salaried and dance halls. Night clubs, by tradition, are places expensively fitted-up—gay with Oriental rugs, art auction paintings, marble fountains on pedestals and Spanish leather screens. At least, that is their general style. They stand for luxury and overhead. They charge outrageous prices and used to get them a good deal more than they do now. In whatever category the high cost places of after-midnight revel are held, they are being pushed over the brink. Economic causes figure as much in the shoving as do the strong arms of the law.

Keeping a cabaret, on the night club plan and under the eye of the police, is a stiff task, beset by pitfalls. Many of the night clubs before last July, were licensed as cabarets by the Bureau of Licenses. When the police took charge, thirty-three of them, and the most important of their class, did not renew their licenses, and as far as can be learned here, have since then been closed. Getting a license to run a cabaret set up to 3 o'clock in the morning is an expensive matter. The applicant must go to the station house in the precinct where he proposes to open and sign a paper, answering all kinds of intimate questions about himself, his home, his family, his habits, his moral and material welfare and that of his clientele. Before he can really start he must have his roster examined. A roster is a complete list of all persons employed in the place, with their addresses.

The original intent of the police department was to have everybody fingerprinted and marked for criminal identification, but this plan has not been carried out for such thoroughness. It is likely only a question of time before this will be done. The police really want to know more about the waters than appears. They are especially for those who come from the kitchen, and here all plans and traps to secure in order. Scores of hundreds of details are included in these rigid examinations of physical conditions. Once the applicant has convinced the police that he is not an arch-crook and his premises a fire trap and a pest hole, he is permitted to begin business. Policemen are detached from four divisions of the department, one look after his moral and material welfare and that of his clientele. Before he can really start he must have his roster examined. A roster is a complete list of all persons employed in the place, with their addresses.

Other scrutiny is in progress. The wish of the applicant is communicated to the Building, Fire and Health Departments. The premises are awarded by inspectors. The rooms must be strong enough to bear the weight of a crowd, have plenty of fire escapes, enough cubic feet of air for breathing purposes, suitable egress

Virgin Islands Are Busily Engaged In Balancing Budget

ST. THOMAS, V. I., May 20.—Officers of the local government and the inhabitants here are much concerned over balancing the municipal budget for the fiscal year, beginning July 1, which will be sent to the Colonial Council soon.

At a recent meeting of the Colonial Council, Acting Gov. Boyd J. Brown, pointed out that in order to maintain the present standard in the island's Government it will be necessary for the Colonial Council to consider ways and means of raising additional taxes, falling which it will become necessary to reduce salaries of municipal employees by approximately 20 per cent. The Acting Governor recommended that the Colonial Council pass the following taxes in order to raise the funds necessary to balance the budget: a local income tax law, reducing the exemption now allowed in the federal tax law, which is applicable here; increasing the rate in the real and personal tax law; increasing the rates in the inheritance tax law; a poll tax, excise tax and gasoline tax.

Members of the Colonial Council are unwilling to pass any additional taxes at this time and say that the Government must be operated on whatever amounts may be raised from the present system of taxation. It is understood here that the principal income taxpayers will not pay income taxes this year on account of losses sustained through the depreciation of the pound sterling and other economic circumstances.

Politicians Warn No One Country Can Escape World Crisis

LONDON, May 20.—Within recent days many of the leading British politicians have renewed their warning that no one country can by its own endeavor escape from the world crisis in its political and economic aspects. Some of them have stopped short at a half-way point: They believe that Britain and other countries of the British Commonwealth of Nations can establish a self-contained system whatever the rest of the world does.

Others, notably Winston Churchill, have discerned the brightest prospect in Anglo-American cooperation. But a majority professes to see the necessity for joint action on an even wider scale than is indicated by the views of either of the first two groups.

It is in this connection that special interest has been paid to the result of Sunday's French election, France's going to the left has—temporarily at least—beheld two tendencies which were becoming almost universal here. First, that of assuming that the Geneva Disarmament Conference definitely had failed; and second, that of assuming, even before it convened, that the Lorraine conference was similarly doomed to ineffectiveness. The pendulum has by no means swung toward anything approaching real optimism.

The British newspapers are adopting a distinct "wait and see" policy, but they admit the possibility which they were unwilling to do a couple of weeks ago, that some constructive developments may be forthcoming.

The most interesting feature of British reaction to the French election is the fact that even the Conservative newspapers here are practically unanimous in vision, the hope that some "liberalization" of French foreign policy will be forthcoming. Alone among the London press, "The Daily Mail" goes to believe that the policy of a new French Premier will be indistinguishable from that of Andre Tardieu.

"The Morning Post" sees the possibility of "a some modification of French claims in regard to disarmament and reparations." "The Times" says that "the foreign policy will be conducted by a more accommodating personality." "The Daily Telegraph" expects at least a "readjustment for more expeditious methods in the pursuit of purposes substantially unaltered."

Naturally, the Liberal and Labor press have unreservedly welcomed the French election result, and "The Daily Herald's" characterization of it as "pure gain" in the international situation is typical.

To draw from such an episode the inference that British opinion in all parties is substantially behind practically the same foreign policy would scarcely be to generalize overmuch. It is certainly true that thus far the British delegation at Geneva has argued chiefly for such abolition or limitation as would have comparatively little effect on Britain's military establishment; and that Liberal opinion here goes for an advance of this. But Sir John Simon has felt constrained to meet the other powers on the ground chosen by them.

There is no warrant for believing that the Conservatives, if they felt real convictions by the other powers were in the offing, would not be willing to go much farther than the Geneva delegation has yet gone.

"Tiltmeter" Results From Combination Of Old, New Science

NEW YORK, May 20.—By combining the ancient and the modern science has developed an instrument, the "tiltmeter," by which it seems possible to warn earthquake areas of the approach of threatened disaster; predict changes in the floor of oceans and tidal waves, and by which regions of volcanic activity can find out when an eruption is to take place, at least some time beforehand.

The ancient part of the "tiltmeter" goes back some 4,000 or more years, the modern part less than a century, and the combination was announced within the last month.

The modern portion of the instrument is simply a form of that much modified instrument, the interferometer, which in the hands of Michelson and others gave the world a super-measuring device to detect tiny changes in length. With it science has already determined the speed of light, the true length of the standard meter in Paris, the diameters of distant stars and the value of the earth's gravitational constant.

The uses to which this fundamental instrument may be put seem never to reach a saturation point. Each year sees new ones entering fields of research quite outside the scope of the original contemplations.

But the interferometer will not do all this predicting of earthquakes, tidal waves and volcanic activity alone. It must have the help of a heritage from antiquity which comes from Egypt and China. There, before even Biblical times, the scientists of the day—the priests—had an ingenious scheme for determining when a given surface was level. They poured water into a shallow pan, with two small arranged about the rim ninety degrees apart. If the pan was not level water would flow only from one side; if it was, the liquid would drain equally from all four openings. These people realized the general scientific principle that water in an open vessel has essentially a level surface.

Four 6,000 years later—for the water level as an instrument is of indeterminate origin—scientists of the Nineteenth Century developed the interferometer, which repeats with any instrument of science in its sensitivity.

At the recent meeting of the American Geographical Union (George F. Merrill, of the Bureau of Standards, described how he has recombined these scientific disciplines of such great difference in chronological origin, into the "tiltmeter."

Essentially, Mr. Merrill's instrument consists of a clear fused quartz plate supported by a fused quartz ring which rests solidly on the rock surface and tilts with it. Within the inclosure thus formed is placed a vessel containing some fluid, preferably one which will not evaporate too quickly. The surface of this fluid, commonly some oil, will be level. Vibrations which may tend to creep into it because it is resting on bedrock are damped out by the high viscosity of the liquid.

In the slow lifting of this bedrock during those stages that anticipate earthquake activity, the rock tilts and moves with it the water plate. The containing vessel of oil also moves, but the surface of the liquid stays level. The slight angle between the two planes formed by the quartz plate and the upper surface of the liquid is a measure of rock tilting and hence must be determined as accurately as possible.

Alsop Says People Ought To Have Say As To Prohibition

MIAMI, May 20. Stressing his stand that the people of the United States should be given an opportunity to express their views through their authorized representatives in the state legislatures or conventions, on the Eighteenth Amendment, John T. Alsop, Jr., mayor of Jacksonville, last night addressed a downtown Miami crowd in behalf of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination as Florida's congressman at large.

Mr. Alsop made three speeches. Prior to the downtown gathering he talked at length to a large group of labor leaders here and following the second engagement discussed his candidacy in Miami Beach at a meeting sponsored by the Young Men's Democratic Club. He was introduced for his downtown speech by Irving Ayars, chairman of the Dade county committee.

The candidate insisted that he believed the people should have an opportunity to express themselves on the prohibition question and pledged that if he is elected he would initiate the move toward getting Congress to pass a bill which will have for its objective the abolition of the question of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the people. He explained that the passage of such a measure would, under the law, be referred back to the states for ratification or rejection, either by the legislatures or through the convention system. "Even though I am a new member, if it is not otherwise possible to get such a bill before Congress I will introduce it myself," Mr. Alsop declared.

Reminding his audience of his record of many years standing as "A Florida Booby," he asked Dade county's support so that he might be in a better position to "Talk Florida." "I'm not asking you just for a job," he said. "If you send me to Congress I will not be just among those present, but I will at all times be representing all of Florida's citizens. As the climax of every speech I make in the halls of Congress, I will say something of Florida." In that connection he praised the Minutians for what he said was their "Ever present wide-awake attitude."

Mr. Alsop talked of the Nation

at Park in the Everglades and increased the cross-state canal, declaring in that connection that the expenditure of $200,000,000 anywhere in the state "will help all of Florida." He said both projects would have "an unmeasurable value as tourist attractions."
