Deadly home invasion

Intruder shot by Winter Springs resident, dies after fleeing

By VICKI DEGENERMAN
Herald Senior Staff Writer

WINTER SPRINGS — Several shots rang out in the early morning hours today at the Mosswood Apartments in Winter Springs, though no one heard anything.

At about 1:20 a.m., police said, Jerry Gross, 34, kicked in the door of Ron Runge's apartment at 114 Mosswood Cir.

"He started yelling, 'Police! Police! Get down! Get down!' and demanding money and drugs," explained Cpt. Glenn Tullison of the Winter Springs Police Department.

Runge, 54, had no money and no drugs in the apartment, he told the intruder, which apparently angered him.

Tullison said the two got into a scuffle. At first

Bright flight of fancy, friendship

Youth from the Sanford Church of Christ recently attended a church picnic. One of the activities for the day included a balloon release. Parents prepared a paper listing the youngsters names and the address of the church with encouragement to respond if found. The informational paper was placed inside the balloon surrounded by a plastic bag. Over 20 colorful balloons were released.

Florida heroin arrests, deaths up

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida heroin deaths tripled in the last three years, with most of the fatalities in Miami and the Orlando area.

Other urban regions, like the Tampa Bay area and Jacksonville, haven't reported noticeable increases.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement has concluded that the state is more a hub for distribution than a destination for use.

"The resurgence of heroin in Florida is primarily due to the geographical proximity of Florida's coast to the source countries of Colombia and Mexico," the FDLE wrote in a report released Wednesday.

However, people in Florida are using heroin — and dying from it.

Eighty-five fatalities last year were related to heroin use, according to a survey of some of the state's medical examiners. That was up from 60 in 1994 and 28 in 1993.

"It is an alarming trend," Rick Lober, an FDLE agent who works with the medical examiners around the state, said Thursday.

The seven medical examiners surveyed handle 11 counties accounting for 60 percent of the state's population.

"The biggest problem we're seeing is in Central Florida," FDLE spokeswoman Liz Hirst said.

Through October of this year, Orange, Osceola and Seminole counties reported 18 heroin deaths.

The three counties, with a population of about 900,000, had 19 heroin deaths last year. That was up from five in 1994 and none in 1993.

Orhan has performed since the age of four. She began her

According to her mother, Sandra McMillen, "she wanted to sing a solo and not perform with the other kids. Before I knew it she had taken over the microphone and was all over the stage just like it came naturally to her."

She has won talent competitions, entertained at festivals, churches, retirement centers, senior citizen centers.

Go and put your word in

The Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) has held and will continue to hold various open meetings regarding the location of light rail transit which will run from north Seminole County (Lake Monroe) into the Orlando area, and eventually further south to the attractions and Kissimmee areas.

The FDOT says it wants to find out what the public thinks about the two routes which may be considered.

Presentations have already been made before various city commissions and Seminole County Commission in order to have local government input. People have also had their chance to speak out, but we are still several years from any actual right-of-way purchases and planning.

In the meantime, the selection of the route which would best serve all of the areas is highly important.

It's a difficult choice.

Should the route follow the CSX railroad tracks, (adjacent to, not using the existing tracks), the trains, possibly four to six per hour, would be traveling through a number of residential areas. It would be easily accessible from downtown Sanford, downtown Lake Mary, and other areas.

There has even been a proposal to have a major terminal within walking distance of the center of Sanford.

But this new light rail transit would also provide additional noise and traffic problems at crossings. The question is therefore, is the added noise and traffic worth the convenience of having the trains run through our cities?

On the other hand, if it were to travel immediately beside and parallel to the median of I-4, it would alleviate noise and traffic problems in residential areas. On the other hand, it would require riders to drive to established parking areas from which they would board the trains. It wouldn't be as easy for people living in our cities and residential communities.

There are also those who say we already have too much traffic in the area near the interstate, that this would add even more.

Both routes would eventually culminate at a terminal in Orlando, from where people would disembark and possibly get onto the proposed rapid rail system which eventually will travel to Miami and Tampa.

This then, should not be a considering factor. The FDOT is seeking input, and we urge citizens to voice their preferences.

Regardless of which route is selected, there will be people against it. Therefore, we must look at what is best for everyone, not just a few. We must look at it as a new era of transportation which many of us will use.

This is a case where the majority must rule. Attend the various public meetings at which input is being sought on the proper route. It's for our future and the future of our children and grandchildren.

It's important to everyone.

We must work together

When my husband and I moved to Sanford in 1980, Winter Springs was a rural area. We moved to a smaller home in Tusawilla twelve years ago, and we were concerned that good relations exist among all of the section in Winter Springs. Our ex-mayor made some unfortunate remarks after the recent election. The majority of us do not vote for only self-interests. The roads, schools and zones concern all of us. I often attended local and county commission meetings when Paul Partyka was our commissioner. He was impartial and fair but strong. At considerable personal sacrifice, he stayed with citizens to prevent the usurpation of residential areas by commercially motivated developers.

Mr. Bush lives in Tusawilla, his parents and son lived here, and later his daughter and family. We voted for Paul Partyka because for years he served in a political capacity. He led groups for community improvement such as the Central Winds Park and the community parades and fund raisers as well as serving in county volunteer organizations such as the Central Florida Zoo, of which I was an original member. He deserved to be elected three years ago; now I urge the various sections of Winter Springs to work together for the good of all of us. A number of us in developments such as Tusawilla and Oak Forest are not outsider or newcomers, but longtime, hardworking residents of Central Florida.

So they call this election reform?

Now that the television pundits can no longer display their prowess by predicting the outcome of the elections, they have turned their talking heads to another matter: deciphering the "message" of the elections. Since the Democrats won the White House and the Republicans will continue to control the Congress, there is plenty of material for everyone to spin. So conservatives say that the elections prove that voters want the Congress to continue their revolution. Liberals say that the elections prove that voters want Clinton to keep it at bay.

The whole thing reminds me of a Dilbert cartoon in which several managers are gathered for a meeting. One manager says: "We've got to give the customers what they want." Another manager says: "The customers want better products for free." So the first manager amends: "Then let's just repack the stuff we have now and call it strategy."

What the voters WANT is what we've always wanted: better government services for free. As middle-class voters we may say we want smaller government, but we don't want anyone to cut the programs that benefit us or our families, such as Medicare and Social Security. Instead, we prefer that the government cut programs for the poor, such as welfare.

The trouble is, building the poor is not a sound economic policy, since the poor don't have much money to begin with. The Washington politicians spend a lot of time and energy trying to reduce the amount of money taxpayers spend on welfare. And although they did manage to cut federal spending on welfare, you'd need a microscope to see the impact it had on your paycheck. The fact is, even if the government completely leveled the welfare program -- just threw everyone off -- it would barely make a dent in the federal deficit. That's because we're currently only spending 1 percent of the federal budget on cash payments to the poor, and 2 percent on food stamps.

But Medicare and Social Security are completely different stories -- even though both liberals and conservatives lump these three entitlements together. Social Security eats up the largest chunk of the federal pie -- 23 percent; Medicare consumes 11 percent. Other budget busters are defense (18 percent), the interest on the debt (15 percent) and Medicaid (6 percent).

Of the programs listed, only Medicaid, the health-insurance program for the poor, might be considered unpopular.

The point is not to pit the elderly against the poor -- indeed, many people fit into both categories. It is to say that if the people really want smaller government, then they must want to cut Social Security, Medicare and defense. As appealing as it may sound to cut unpopular programs like welfare, foreign aid (1 percent), and the National Endowment for the Arts (less than 1 percent), the fact is that the only way to balance the budget -- if indeed that's what the American people want -- is to go after the biggest items.

MORTON KONDRACKE

Grill Mitchell on the record

The Senate undoubtedly will confirm former Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, as Secretary of State if President Clinton nominates him, but first he should get a going-over about his foreign policy record.

Over his 14-year Senate career, Mitchell backed the nuclear-freeze movement of the 1980s, voted against the Gulf War in 1991 -- a position he still defends -- and opposed Clinton's own decision to extend most-favored-nation trade status to China.

He also never served on the Foreign Relations, Armed Services or Intelligence Committees. He has written next to nothing on international affairs and has held only one foreign policy post, that of President Clinton's special envoy for peace in Northern Ireland.

Still, Mitchell seems almost certain to be nominated. Recently, he visited with various American Jewish groups to get their consent despite his Lebanese-American background. He received it.

President Clinton hopes to name a new Secretary of State -- and possibly other top foreign and economic policy officials -- before he leaves for a trip to the Asian-Pacific summit.

Surprises may include United Nations Ambassador Madeleine Albright as White House national security adviser and outgoing Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., as Secretary of Defense, although sources say that all names remain "in flux."

Deputy National Security Adviser Sandy Berger, who very nearly became White House chief of staff, is expected to become chairman of the National Economic Council, although he still could end up as head of the National Security Council. Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott also wants the NSC job.

Retiring Sen. Bill Cohen, R-Maine, is still in the running for Secretary of Defense, sources say, but Clinton is said to be hesitant (for reasons no one can explain) to appoint too many politicians from Maine to top jobs.

Other candidates for Defense include Lockheed Martin CEO Norm Augustine and CIA director John Deutch.

Mitchell seems to have emerged as Clinton's top choice for State as a result of his work playing Bob Dole as the president prepared for the two presidential debates. Clinton told associates that Mitchell "seriously" forecast how Dole would handle various questions.

One aide who was present for mock debates said that Mitchell "whipped" Clinton in his first encounter at Chautauque, N.Y., in preparation for the Oct. 18 debate in Madison.

"After all these sessions, Mitchell was very helpful in telling Clinton, 'Why don't you handle the question this way?' They clearly bonded."

As a former chief of the Senate "club," Mitchell almost certainly will be confirmed, but Republicans who now control the chamber will want to put him through his paces, both because they have hard questions to ask about the administration's foreign policy and because they want to pay Mitchell back for what they see as extreme partisanship when he was Senate Majority Leader.

Republicans also said in interviews that they had little knowledge of Mitchell's foreign policy views because he had not made the subject his specialty.

A Clinton adviser said, though, that "this is ludicrous. As a senator and as a leader, he was involved in every major foreign policy debate of the last 15 years, including Bosnia and China policy and now Ireland. Also, he's temperamentally perfect for the job. He's smart, judicious, coherent, a good negotiator, and no celebrity-seeker."

Mitchell's foreign policy background also is down and force-overs, in keeping with the attitudes of congressional Democrats from Vietnam through the Gulf War.

During the Reagan administration, Mitchell voted in favor of various resolutions to freeze nuclear arms, even though history has shown that the U.S. arms buildup helped force the Soviet Union into reform and collapse.

He voted in favor of various aid cutoffs to anti-communists in El Salvador and the Nicaraguan contras, even though both countries are now fledgling democracies.

Even in meetings with leaders of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations in America, and the Anti-Defamation League, Mitchell defended his opposition to the 1991 Gulf War, saying he still believes that economic sanctions should have been given a longer time to work before commencing.

Jewish leaders also voiced concern that Mitchell's close personal friendship with former Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres would complicate his relationship with the pro-Israel lobby.

Still, Mitchell seems almost certain to be nominated.

Good intentions and U.N. bills

UNITED NATIONS -- Energized by his re-election, President Clinton can be expected to press Congress on several issues that laid dormant during the campaign. Getting Congress to ante up the $1.4 billion that America owes the United Nations is at the top of the list.

The subject of U.N. funding was a touchy one during the campaign. Clinton hardly mentioned it, while Bob Dole took a few political swipes at the issue. One of Dole's biggest applause lines was his Pat Buchanan-style attack on the U.N. and its secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, feeding into fears that American soldiers would soon be serving under foreign command.

Those feelings are amplified in the Republican Congress, which considers the U.N. one of the last beggars in line for American dollars, especially these days, when balancing the budget is priority No. 1 on Capitol Hill.

The Clinton administration will have an uphill road to climb if it hopes to convince Congress that the U.N. is deserving of more money. For the world body is a haven for waste and abuse, constantly giving its critics a reason to withhold funding. As our associate Dale Van Atta has learned, even the most successful U.N. projects are often rife with mismanagement and mistakes.

In Cambodia, for example, the U.N. is justifiably proud of itself for restoring peace after two decades of civil war. A peace treaty brokered by the United States, China and the Soviet Union in 1991 ended 21 years of hostilities between three rival guerrilla factions that claimed more than a million lives.

To help ensure the peaceful transition to democracy, the U.N. created the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), its most extensive and expensive peacekeeping operation ever. The goal was to complete the mission in less than two years, using more than 20,000 peacekeepers and personnel at a cost of $1.7 billion. Yet even this well-intentioned plan met with some embarrassing failures.

As part of its nation-building efforts, U.N. bureaucrats planned to turn Cambodia into an agricultural wonderland. Some 370,000 refugees returning from camps on Thailand's border were each promised five acres of arable land.

But the U.N. brass relied on faulty assessments in making that promise. They didn't know that there wasn't enough land to go around, and that much of the available land was littered with land mines. So UNTAC simply forked over cash to make up for the broken promises: $90 per adult, $25 per child.

Even the free elections, held in May 1993, came with a steep price tag. About 90 percent of Cambodia's 4.7 million eligible voters courageously went to the polls, despite threats from guerrilla groups that voting might cost them their lives. In U.N. terms, the $100 million price tag was almost a bargain -- an average of $23 per voter.

Money was also wasted when the U.N. tried building a water purification system -- a vital project in a part of the world where poor-quality drinking water often contributes to disease and malnutrition. U.N. bureaucrats failed to account for the expensive chemicals that were needed to run the system. As a result, once the initial supply ran out, the new facilities stood idle. Ordering new supplies became difficult, because some of the chemicals were hard to obtain.

The subject of U.N. funding was a touchy one during the campaign.

Keeping soldiers in Bosnia

WASHINGTON — With Bosnia's ethnic factions still on the brink of violence, the Clinton administration is prepared to keep up to 10,000 U.S. soldiers in Bosnia into 1999.

President Clinton was expected to announce the decision today before departing on an Asian trip. The administration originally said the Bosnia deployment would end next month.

Clinton administration officials, cautioning that the president had not yet signed off on the mission, said he wants to consolidate the gains made in the war-torn Balkans during the past year's NATO peacekeeping mission.

"How do you make sure that the security situation remains safe and secure enough that they can continue to do the work of building political institutions and a civil life for the people of Bosnia? That may require some type of presence in Bosnia," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Thursday.

Clinton's trip

WASHINGTON — President Clinton went to Asia on his first overseas trip as president and he's going back on his first venture since winning re-election. Some say the trip comes at a particularly inopportune time.

Clinton is sorting out one of the biggest Cabinet shuffles in history, he's still exploring his relationship with the new Republican Congress, and he's facing all sorts of difficult questions about administration dealings in his first term.

After a pared-down weekend vacation in Hawaii, Clinton departs Monday for 10 days in Australia, the Philippines and Thailand, a trip meant to underscore the importance of U.S. economic and defense ties to Asian-Pacific nations.

While he's away, this theory goes, aides can narrow down choices for top administration positions and Clinton won't be under as much pressure to listen to clamoring friends lobbying over who should get coveted jobs.

Searching for defense secretary

WASHINGTON — Hoping to cobble together a new foreign policy team with a GOP touch, President Clinton is focusing on Republican Sen. William Cohen in his search for a defense secretary, an official says.

The senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton is expected to leave today for a 12-day overseas trip without making a final decision on his foreign affairs apparatus. But he has narrowed significantly the field of candidates for secretaries of defense and state.

Cohen emerged as the most prominent candidate Thursday night, but aides cautioned that Clinton had not cemented his thinking on the matter and probably would not finalize the choice before next month.

Still, the senior official said White House lawyers were reviewing Cohen's background — a process called "vetting" — on the hypothesis that he was the top prospect.

Saying the election proved that voters want less partisanship in Washington, Clinton has promised to try to put a Republican in his Cabinet. He made the same promise in 1992, but never did.

No longer charged as a spy

WORCESTER, Mass. — No longer charged as a spy, retired KGB agent Vladimir Galkin walked out of court a free man — then admitted trying to buy "Star Wars" secrets for Russia for $30,000.

His plans? Perhaps a trip to the Statue of Liberty.

"I'd like to see ... what is America," Galkin said.

Federal charges against Galkin were dropped Thursday at the request of CIA Director John Deutch. That request came after Russia accused the United States of breaking the unwritten rules of the spy game by tricking Galkin into thinking he wouldn't be arrested on a U.S. visit.

Galkin, 50, was freed hours after Russia issued the latest of several public protests of his Oct. 29 arrest in New York.

He was accused of offering $30,000 in 1990 and 1991 for reports pertaining to the Strategic Defense Initiative, a charge he openly admitted to once he was released.

HAL's birth date

BOSTON — HAL, the mellow-voiced computer that went nuts in "2001: A Space Odyssey," secured a place in popular culture with a mutiny and dying rendition of "Bicycle Built for Two."

As HAL's fictional birth date approaches, a new book explores the areas in which today's computer scientists have surpassed the vision of HAL's creators and where they have fallen short.

The book's conclusion: Despite unimaginable advances in some areas, notably chess, a computer with common sense is still science fiction.

"Machines are really smart these days about specialized things," said Marvin Minsky, an MIT professor of computer science. "But machines are no good at the things people find easy. So it's a wonderful paradox."

Minsky, a pioneer in the field of artificial intelligence, is one of 17 luminaries who contributed to "HAL's Legacy: 2001's Computer as Dream and Reality." The book was the idea of David Stark, a scientist who credits HAL with inspiring him to try to develop lip-reading computers.

Mormon church spokesman arrested

BALT LAKE CITY — A spokesman for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been arrested for investigation into allegations of forcible sodomy.

Lloyd Gerald Pond, the 51-year-old host of the Mormon Church's nationally syndicated radio program, "Times and Seasons" and director of the church's radio news services, was booked into jail last Friday after a 14-year-old girl told a school counselor he had molested her.

Pond has since made bail. No criminal charges have been filed. Police said they will meet with prosecutors Friday to discuss the case.

KTVX news, an ABC affiliate, quoted West Valley police Thursday as saying that Pond had been helping the girl with a radio and modeling career. Last week, he allegedly took her to a parking lot behind a radio station where he showed her pornography, took pictures of her in her underwear and then told her to perform oral sex.

"He was helping her with her modeling. He was helping her doing voice-overs and taking photographs," said West Valley police Sgt. Randall Pond, no relation to the suspect. "Of course, it started off innocent and there was no problems until the other night."

The girl's school counselor informed police, the television station reported.

The Mormon Church declined to comment on the allegations.

"The church's position on standards of personal behavior is long-standing and well known," said church spokesman Don LeFevre. "However, in this matter, it would be inappropriate to make any comment."

The phone at Pond's Taylorville home has been disconnected.

Pond was booked into jail for investigation of charges of forcible sodomy and dealing in materials harmful to a minor. If charged and convicted of the felonies, he could face up to life in prison.

Pond has been a spokesman for the church on a variety of moral issues, often decrying the decay of the family and the evils of child and sexual abuse in his weekly half-hour radio program.

Cracked case

By ASHLEY H. GRANT
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Three bachelor playboys slain in a plot engineered by Jimmy Hoffa and Nixon White House aide Charles Colson?

An inmate's wild tale and an ambitious writer's quest to solve the 25-year-old killings led to charges against an Indianapolis man.

But prosecutors backed off as the story grew even wilder — the inmate later said he got details about the crime from God — and now the former defendant is suing the city.

Carroll Horton, a 70-year-old former garage owner, blames the police and will seek $300,000, said his lawyer, John Emry.

"There appears to be information that what they found was false," Emry said. "They presented the case to the grand jury anyway."

Horton may also sue Carol Schultz, the freelance writer who was seeking a Hollywood deal for a story about the 1971 case, Emry said. It was Schultz's articles about the slayings earlier this year that focused attention on Horton.

She interviewed former Indianapolis resident Floyd Michael Chastain, who is serving a life sentence in Florida for another killing, and he named Horton and implicated himself.

Horton and Chastain, who once worked at Horton's auto parts business, were charged in what were known as the "LaSalle Street murders."

James C. Barker, Robert Glene and Robert Hinson were bound, gagged and had their throats slit. The men, ages 27 to 34, were said to be competing to see who could have sex with the most women. Police recovered a notebook that contained the names of 63 women.

When investigators who had seen Schultz's articles interviewed Chastain himself they believed his story: He knew unreleased details about the slayings, including that there was a cigar and leftover pizza at the crime scene.

What they didn't know, however, was that he had gotten some of the details from Schultz, who had gained improper access to police files.

Chastain told investigators that Horton paid him and another man to kill the businessmen because one of them was having an affair with Horton's ex-wife. A grand jury indicted Horton in April, and Chastain was the key witness.

But in a preliminary hearing in May, Chastain's story changed. He testified that the killings were plotted by then-President Nixon and carried out by Nixon adviser Charles Colson, with help from then-labor leader Jimmy Hoffa. He never explained their supposed connection to the killings.

After Chastain unleashed his unbelievable story, prosecutors dropped the charges against both men and the judge blamed Schultz for feeding Chastain information from the police files.

Horton spent nearly six weeks in jail before charges were dropped.

Chastain eventually told authorities that his knowledge of the crime scene came from Schultz — and God. Chastain also said he fell in love with the writer and hoped to marry her.

Schultz admitted that she had fed Chastain unreleased details about the crime scene, The Wall Street Journal reported.

Marion County Prosecutor Scott Newman, who had reopened the case as part of a campaign pledge, said later that he had serious doubts about the evidence.

City attorney Ralph Staples, a former deputy prosecutor who helped present the case to the grand jury, will now help defend the city in a lawsuit.

"This was a full and fair investigation," he said. "The only problem we had was we had a guy in Florida who said 'I was at a murder and I was an eyewitness.'"

Hospital stay for mastectomies

By LAWREN HERRBAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A thousand managed-care companies, seeking to defuse growing criticism, are pledging to allow an overnight hospital stay for women who have a breast removed for cancer.

However, a congresswoman hopes to put that protection into federal law so no woman is forced to undergo an outpatient mastectomy.

The American Association of Health Plans had hoped its announcement Thursday that its 1,000 members would not require mastectomies to be performed as outpatient surgery would head off growing calls for federal legislation.

The move comes as new Medicare data show more elderly women are having outpatient mastectomies, particularly in the South.

Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., said the voluntary measures are encouraging, but not enough to assure "that women will not find themselves in a situation where their health can be jeopardized."

"Doctors are under pressure from insurance companies to release patients earlier than should be," added DeLauro. She plans to introduce legislation in January mandating a 48-hour hospital stay for mastectomy patients unless they wish to leave earlier.

Mastectomy is the removal of a breast, often with its surrounding lymph nodes. In addition to the psychological trauma, patients can suffer severe pain and must have the rubber tubes that drain blood from their wounds emptied and cleaned several times a day.

In contrast, lumpectomy is the removal of just the breast tumor and some surrounding tissue. It is usually performed on an outpatient basis.

Many hospitals still keep mastectomy patients for two or three days, although some women opt to go home as soon as their anesthesia wears off — an option the American Cancer Society and women's groups support.

But the controversy began in August, when some doctors in Connecticut complained of new guidelines adopted by two health maintenance organizations, Cigna Healthcare and ConnectCare Inc., that emphasized outpatient mastectomies. Doctors told of spending days arguing with the insurers that their patients needed to be hospitalized.

with being kicked out of the hospital.

"This is not hearsay, this is real," disagreed DeLauro.

The share of mastectomies performed on an outpatient basis is growing.

But Fran Visco of the National Breast Cancer Coalition said women's advocates are hearing more complaints from doctors who feel coerced to send women home earlier than they think is safe.

The schedule is: 9 a.m. — 11-Under (boys and girls); 10:30 a.m. — 13-Under; noon — 15-Under; 1:30 p.m. — All girls (ages 12-15). Boys and girls 8-Under need sign-up only, no tryouts.

The registration fee is $15, plus $10 for non-Sanford residents (good until Sept. 1997). For more information call 330-5687.

Sanford kids hoop clinic

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Department will host a pair of basketball clinics for youth players at Sanford Middle School.

On Monday, December 9 the clinic will be for players 15-Under and 13-Under and on Monday, December 16 the clinic will be for players 11-Under. The clinics are for girls also. The clinics will start at 6:30 p.m.

Cost to attend is $10 for Sanford League players and $30 for non-league players. For more information call 330-5687.

Jr. Magic Basketball

SANFORD — There will be a Jr. Magic coaches meeting at the West Sanford Boys & Girls Club, 919 Palmetto Avenue, on Wednesday, November 20th at 6:30 p.m.

Butkus finalists named

ORLANDO — West Virginia's Canute Curtis, Northwestern's Pat Fitzgerald and Colorado's Matt Russell will vie for the Dick Butkus award as college football's top linebacker.

The three were chosen from a field of 11 by a 25-member committee of sports writers and commentators making the selection for the Downtown Athletic Club of Orlando.

ELSEWHERE

Blues 5, Lightning 3

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Blues set a team record with three goals in a 39-second span midway through the third period, with Pierre Turgeon getting a goal and an assist, shocking the Tampa Bay Lightning 5-3 Thursday night.

The Blues shaved 10 seconds off their previous record set April 3, 1995, when Ian Lapierre, Esa Tikkanen and Adam Creighton put up three quick second-period goals against Toronto in a 6-4 victory.

Gonzalez wins AL MVP

NEW YORK — Juan Gonzalez of the Texas Rangers beat Seattle's Alex Rodriguez by three points, matching the second-closest victory margin for the AL MVP award.

Gonzalez, who hit .314 with 47 homers and 144 RBIs, got 11 first-place votes and 290 points. Rodriguez, who hit a league-leading .358 with 36 homers and 123 RBIs, received 10 first-place votes and 287 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Cleveland's Albert Belle finished third with two first-place votes and 228 points, followed by Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. with four first-place votes and 188 points.

Boston's Mo Vaughn, last year's winner, was fifth with 154 points. Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez received the other first-place vote but finished 10th with 53 points.

Another Pirates trade

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates continue to trade veterans for prospects, sending second baseman Carlos Garcia, outfielder Orlando Merced and left-hander Dan Plesac to Toronto for three minor leaguers and three players to be named.

The Pirates get pitchers Jose Pett and Jose Silva and infielder Brandon Cromer. The trade will save cash-strapped Pirates owner Kevin McClatchy more than $6 million in salary next season.

The Pirates, who plan to cut their payroll from $21 million last season to about $14 million in 1997, also are looking to deal shortstop Jay Bell.

Fitzsimmons quits

PHOENIX — Cotton Fitzsimmons quit as Phoenix Suns coach, turning over the 0-3 team to assistant Danny Ainge following a 92-99 loss to the previously winless Vancouver Grizzlies.

Fitzsimmons had planned to accede to Ainge at the end of this, his 21st season as an NBA coach. But Phoenix is one loss shy of the franchise record set in the 1985-86 season.

Wynn guides Tribe to rout of Hornets

From Staff Reports

WINTER SPRINGS — A new era in Seminole High School girls' basketball started Thursday night at Winter Springs High School. And it looked surprisingly like the one just completed.

New head coach Sylvester Wynn saw his Fighting Seminoles run roughshod over the Bishop Moore Hornets in the opening round of the Silver Hawks Tip Off Classic 52-24.

Wynn, who replaced the retired John McNamara this summer, got big games from his returning veterans as the Tribe took a 10-4 lead after one period and never looked back.

Dana Merrick led the way for Seminole with 18 points, four rebounds and three assists, while Felicia Henderson tossed in 14 points and pulled down five rebounds.

Also contributing for the winner's were Haneefah Miller (eight points, five rebounds, five assists) and

New Seminole High School head girls' basketball coach Sylvester Wynn started his career with a 52-24 thrashing of Bishop Moore in the Silver Hawks Tip Off Classic Thursday night.

Mike Gaudreau led Lake Mary to a 55-38 victory in his head coaching debut Thursday night.

Gaudreau enjoys new seat

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Mike Gaudreau made the move look easy.

After 10 years as Willie Richardson's top assistant, Gaudreau moved over our chair to take the reins of the Lake Mary Rams Thursday night and his charges responded with a 55-38 thumping of the Atlantic Sharks from Port Orange in the opening round of the Rams Tip Off Classic.

In the other boys' contest, Leesburg came back from an 11 point deficit at the end of the third period to nip Eustis, 58-55.

In the girls' games, Eau Gallie beat Eustis and the host Rams got past Dr. Phillips.

The Classic will conclude on Saturday, with Eustis meeting Dr. Phillips in a girls' game at 1:30 p.m.; Eustis taking on Atlantic for third place in the boys' bracket at 3:30 p.m.; the Lake Mary girls playing Eau Gallie at 5 p.m.; and the Lake Mary boys hosting Leesburg in the boys' championship at 7 p.m.

Football regular season to end tonight

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — The end of a long regular season will come to an end for five Seminole County High School football teams tonight with two of the games matching bitter rivals. At Oviedo's John Courier Field, Oviedo and Lake Howell square off with a state playoff berth at stake. The Lions (8-1) are already assured of at least a spot in a playoff and need just a victory over the Silver Hawks (7-2) to sew up the Seminole Athletic Conference and Class 6A-District 4 championship and also give Lake Brantley, which has already finished its regular season, the second state playoff spot. But a win by Lake Howell would throw 6A-4 into a three-way tie for first place and force a Kansas tie-breaker between the three teams for the two state playoff berths. See Football, Page 2B

Franklin Ball Bonds wins battle for lead

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Don't hand the shirts to Franklin Ball Bonds just yet.

Tom Gracey gave up just five singles and Franklin Ball Bonds turned in a near perfect performance as it defeated Frat House 13-1 in a game that figured to settle the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Fall Thursday Night Blowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

It would take an upset or two, but with two games still left on the schedule, Franklin Ball Bonds can't afford to relax, because Frat House is just one game behind and lurking in the shadows is Ken Rummel Chevrolet.

Ken Rummel Chevrolet kept its hopes alive as Steve Woodley allowed just one

In the other game, McConnell Towing got a seven-hitter from Wayne Fakess in a 3-1 victory over Cactus Bob's.

Franklin Ball Bonds is 7-1, Frat House is 6-2 and Ken Rummel Chevrolet is 5-3. Completing the standings are McConnell Towing and Cactus Bob's (both 3-5) and the Hit Men (0-5).

Next week, Ken Rummel Chevrolet challenges Frat House at 6:30 p.m. See Softball, Page 2B

IN BRIEF

Baptists honor educators

SANFORD — The morning worship service at First Baptist Church on Sunday, Nov. 17, is being planned to honor Sanford area educators. This day marks the beginning of American Education Week, an observance established in 1921 to increase public understanding and appreciation of the nation's schools.

County school board members, school officials, teachers and support personnel from Sanford schools are invited to participate in this special Educators' Day service.

Those attending the 10:30 service will be treated to music by combined choirs from Seminole High School, under the direction of Choral Director Bob Maguire. Area educators from the community will assist in leading the service.

Children and youth of First Baptist have given special invitations to favorite teachers, encouraging them to attend the service. "Because both church and school share responsibility in molding the lives of children and teenagers, we want to take this day to affirm that common role and thank school personnel for helping to educate and guide the youth of Sanford," Pastor Wayne Harvey said.

All school personnel attending are encouraged to come to the guest desk in the new church foyer before the service. There they will receive a small gift and name tag so they can be recognized as a special educators in the community.

For more information call the church office at 323-6041.

Ministry available

SANFORD — Project: Give a Child a Smile is in need of children's clothing. To donate call Minister Frank A. Thomas at 800-1270.

Calling all singers

SANFORD — Contrary to what some my believe, the song "Twelve Days of Christmas" did not include a certain number of singers singing. Sanford Main Street wants to change that and is seeking help from church choirs and individuals.

For WinterFest '80, coming up on Dec. 6th and 7th, attempts are being undertaken to put together a community choir. The group would perform traditional Christmas songs in a performance at 8 p.m. on the 6th.

Can Sellers is to be the director, with rehearsals scheduled for 7 p.m. on Nov. 21 and 7 p.m. on Dec. 3 at First United Methodist.

According to Toby Troutman, who is involved in helping form the group, "Our goal is to demonstrate a community-wide unified spirit. We want to bring people together."

Troutman said she had attempted to contact several dozen churches in the Sanford area, but believed a public announcement may do more good and hopefully attract more people, including those representing particular churches.

For additional information or to volunteer to be in this special chorus, phone 322-1914.

Strang raises funds for Holiday Hope

By SUSAN WILSON
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — According to a recent press release from Christian Life Missions of Strang Communications in Lake Mary, Santa's sleigh doesn't always visit Brooklyn and other inner cities around our nation. But this year, Christmas joy will come with your help.

For over 30,000 kids in the ghettos of New York and other major cities around the U.S. Christmas is just another day - no presents, no fire, no fancy dinner. It looks hopeless. But you, along with Metro Ministries (Operation Holiday Hope), can make a difference.

Bill Wilson, founder of Metro Sunday Schools in Brooklyn, New York, ministers to these 30,000 kids every week. His concept has been duplicated in over 500 U.S. cities and more than a dozen countries.

The parking lot of Strang Communications at 800 Rhinehart Rd. in Lake Mary will be transformed into a large yard sale with a car wash (professional detailing), hot dogs, chips and drinks, crafts and more. The organization will offer a craft, bake and dove sale.

The event is free to the public but there will be a minimum charge for some of the exhibits such as the car wash, horse rides (10 a.m. to 3 p.m.), moon walk and face painting. Balloons, a cake walk, games and a petting zoo will also be available.

The festival will take place Saturday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. All proceeds raised will be doated to Metro Ministries (Operation Holiday Hope). Metro, along with its founder, Bill Wilson, have a goal to provide each child with a $10 gift.

By attending the festival and donating a tax-deductible gift of $10 an American child's Christmas can be a memorable one. In an age where much assistance is given to those in other countries, on this occasion one may help individuals within our midst to have a happier day. You can make a difference in the life of a child. For more information call Strang Communications at 533-0800.

Take some religion home from church

Pastor Wesley Baker
Sanford Church of God

SANFORD — Where do you really live your Christianity? In the heart. That's where the real things of life happen. That's where the real victories are won.

What happens in the heart is what really counts. That's why the Bible says: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Proverbs 4:23).

1. Write, "The Bible lives here," over your heart. The Psalmist said: "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11).

The Bible isn't just another good book. Its unique message is directed to my heart. Someone said to me about Bible reading: "I used to read a Book; now I listen to a Voice."

A friend told me how reading from "The Living Bible (paraphrased)" has made devotions a quality time with God for him. Try it. Start listening to that Voice with intensity.

Pray, "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law" (Psalm 119:18). And don't stop reading until God has given you some wondrous thing from His Word.

People will see that you live the Christian life more than you talk about it. Let the Bible shape the inner you.

2. Let God be involved in the "dailies" of your life. He is concerned with every circumstance, every detail.

Reading Psalm 139 can be a revelation. The Psalmist summarizes it all when he says: "How precious also are thy thoughts to me, O God! How great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand" (verse 17).

How many grains of sand are there in the world? Divide the number of days in your life into that sum, and you will see that God must be thinking millions of thoughts about you every single day. What an overwhelming thought.

Nothing is too little to ask Him about - or too big. He is just waiting to be asked. To ask God for very specific things and see Him answer in very specific ways makes God's life very real to us.

3. Believe in a Christ who smiles and loves you. If we could only fathom a part of the magnitude of His love for us - if we could grasp it with our entire beings O what joy and praise would arise in our hearts. If we believe that fact, we can accept ourselves in the process. The more we experience Christ, the less we'll want of anything else.
