NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Whitney Houston overdoses on diet pills

NEW YORK — Pop star Whitney Houston was briefly hospitalized in Miami Beach last week after overdosing on prescription diet pills, according to a published report.

The New York Post reports today that Houston, 29, was apparently frustrated by the pounds she put on during her recent pregnancy and became even more depressed after a chance encounter last month with a svelte Janet Jackson. Jackson, a rival diva, once dated Houston's husband, singer Bobby Brown.

"Seeing Janet made Whitney feel terrible," a source told the Post.

After complaining to Brown of nausea and lightheadedness, Houston was taken to Miami Beach's Mount Sinai Hospital on Thursday, the Post said.

She was diagnosed with acute heart arrhythmia which was apparently brought on by her diet pills, the Post said. Houston, a co-star of the smash film "The Bodyguard," was released about 90 minutes later, the Post said.

A nursing supervisor would neither confirm nor deny Houston's brief stay, the Post said.

At the time of her wedding last year, Houston weighed 100 pounds. Her weight doubled during her pregnancy, the newspaper said. Since giving birth in March, Houston has weighed from between 140 to 150 pounds, the Post said.

Padgett crowned Miss Florida

ORLANDO — Nicole Padgett, Miss Tampa, was crowned the 1993 Miss Florida and immediately set her sights on representing the state at the Miss America pageant.

Leanza Cornett, the current Miss America and first Floridian to win the title, crowned the 21-year-old blonde, who had tears in her eyes as she took the first walk of her reign across the stage Saturday night.

Padgett is a senior majoring in psychology at the University of South Florida.

She sang "Bridge Over Troubled Waters" for the talent portion of the pageant and answered a question posed by Miss America 1990, Debbie Turner, on her platform issue, alcohol abuse awareness and education.

First runner-up was Miss University of Miami, Megan Elizabeth Welch. Other runners-up included Miss Florida Sunshine, Kristi Dawn Vannatter, second; Miss Apopka, Jennifer Ragdale, third; and Miss Miami, Joanne Ferraro, fourth.

Chiles leads toll bridge opening

NICEVILLE — Gov. Lawton Chiles led an estimated 8,000 pedestrians over a new 3.6-mile-long toll bridge spanning Choctawhatchee Bay in the Florida Panhandle Saturday.

The Choctawhatchee Mid-Bay Bridge links Niceville on the north side of the bay with Destin on the south side.

Tolls of $2 each way for passenger cars went into effect Sunday.

The bridge is expected to save travelers about at least 20 minutes each way, said Jim Vest, executive director of the Mid-Bay Bridge Authority.

Prior to the opening of the toll bridge, motorists had to travel through Fort Walton Beach on the west side of the bay or use a free bridge that crosses the bay to the east.

Principal abandons three students

MIAMI — A high school principal abandoned three students at a turmpike plaza, kicking them off a field trip bus because they failed to complete a writing assignment.

Marvin Dunn, a prominent Miami educator and psychologist, says he ordered the youths off a chartered bus at the Pompano Beach plaza a week ago because they were "defiant."

The students said they didn't have enough time to finish their assignment. The bus continued without them to Miami, about an hour away.

The parents of the youths — a sophomore and two seniors — are furious. A Dade County school administrator is looking into their complaints.

Dunn contends he handled it properly.

Accountant sentenced for embezzlement

PENSACOLA — An accountant accused of embezzling $809,118 from his church and two business clients has been sentenced to three years in federal prison for tax evasion.

John M. Sansom, 51, of Pensacola stole most of the money — $700,473 — from the building fund of the 800-member Gateway Church of Christ, causing an indefinite delay in construction of a new sanctuary. He was the church's treasurer.

U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson on Friday sentenced Sansom to prison and ordered him to pay the Internal Revenue Service $247,578 plus interest in taxes owed on the stolen money from 1986 through 1988.

"You have for a long time been a contributing member of the community," Vinson told Sansom. "But at the same time I cannot ignore that people who have trusted you have been irreparably harmed."

Who's watching the gun dealers?

By Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Government is doing little to curb the flow of guns from thousands of dealers who are finding ways around licensing laws and regulations, a newspaper investigation found.

"The state of Florida has written a lot of laws, and there is nobody following up," Wain Roberts, a gun shop owner in Pinellas Park, told the St. Petersburg Times for a story published Sunday.

The federal government will issue a gun dealer's license to nearly any adult who has not committed a felony. The cost is $30, no test is required and the application can simply be mailed in.

That has led to 285,000 gun dealers in the United States — which in Florida translates to 23 dealers for every McDonald's restaurant. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has few inspectors to check on compliance with the law.

Last year, only one of every 15 Florida gun dealers ever saw an ATF inspector. The only records of a dealer's gun sales are kept at business locations.

You confiscate every firearm in the country, people will find other ways. You can kill people in a restaurant with a machete.

-Dr. Luis A. Gutierrez

In Florida, there are doctors, lawyers, police officers and convicted criminals who are licensed to sell guns. One of the dealers is Dr. Luis A. Gutierrez, a Tampa plastic surgeon who sells about 10 weapons a year.

Gutierrez blames loss of respect for authority, tolerance of homosexuality and decline of religious teaching — not gun proliferation — for America's upsurge in violence.

"You confiscate every firearm in the country, people will find other ways," he said. "You can kill people in a restaurant with a machete."

Federal law requires gun purchasers to fill out a short form asking if the buyer is a convicted felon, a fugitive or has been indicted. But that form applies only to retail gun sales by licensed dealers; the buyer can resell the weapon as a "personal" weapon, leaving no trace of the second purchaser.

Florida law requires a three-day waiting period between the purchase and delivery of a handgun, again unless it's a "personal" weapon. The state also requires dealers to call for criminal background checks, but a Times review found no one is checking whether all the dealers obey it.

In Tampa, Stephen Lemons was convicted in 1992 of four felony charges stemming from violations of the background check law. Hillsborough County sheriff's investigators found he was selling guns to people with criminal backgrounds, using sales forms filed out by phony buyers.

But for 18 months after the conviction, Lemons continued selling guns from his house with a federal license. State records show that someone at the home made 24 criminal background checks on would-be gun buyers during that time.

Budget, agency mergers, child-support laws take effect July 1

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Life gets easier for businesses seeking environmental permits and tougher for child-support and auto-repair cheats under laws that take effect Thursday.

Along with a $35 billion state budget, laws effective on the July 1 start of the fiscal year range from a local-option gasoline tax and changes in jury duty and pay to a $2 million-a-year tax rebate for a golf hall of fame in Jacksonville.

Of more than 430 laws passed in regular and special sessions so far this year, 69 take effect July 1. To give agencies more time to plan, or coordinate with federal funds or programs, about 70 are effective Oct. 1 when the federal fiscal year begins. Nine take effect Jan. 1 with the calendar New Year. Most have various effective dates throughout the year.

Budget
Lawmakers passed a $35,233,786,261 budget for the fiscal year starting Thursday.

Gov. Lawton Chiles trimmed it more than $40 million with line-item vetoes of what he said were inadequate prison-building provisions and "turkeys" that benefited only one lawmaker or area. The May special legislative session enacted a $211 million prison-building program.

The new budget increases per-pupil spending on education by more than $100, restoring cuts made since 1990. It gives schools $55 million for technology enhancement and training.

The budget adds $24 public-assistance staff positions, puts $9.7 million into the Jobs Florida economic development program, and gives state employees a 3 percent pay raise starting Oct. 1.

Mergers
The departments of Natural Resources and Environmental Regulation officially merge July 1 to form a new Department of Environmental Protection. Staff members have been packing boxes and changing desks for months, and will hold months more of workshops and public hearings on how to combine the agencies and rewrite policies.

The merger is designed to cut administrative costs and duplication. That's expected to make it easier for businesses and developers to get permits, though environmental groups warn that easier permits mean fewer opportunities to challenge projects affecting natural resources.

Also speeding action on permits for projects that create jobs and economic benefits is the Job Siting act taking effect Thursday. Eligible businesses are guaranteed a yes or no in 90 days.

In another merger, the departments of Business Regulation and Professional Regulation will form the Department of Business and Professional Regulation. It will oversee businesses such as alcoholic beverage sellers, hotels and restaurants, and professionals from doctors to harbor pilots. The merger should cut administrative costs by

$1.1 million, backers said.

Child Support
Child-support delinquents will find their teaching certificates, other professional and business licenses, driver's licenses and vehicle registrations fair game for judges under a law strengthening state powers to enforce payment.

The law also provides for discipline of attorneys who don't pay child support. Such steps are to be taken only if other efforts to secure payments fail.

Repair Rip Offs
Agriculture and Consumer Affairs Commissioner Bob Crawford sought the law to tackle auto-repair problems that generate more complaints to the Division of Consumer Affairs than any other subject.

Mechanics and repair shops must register and those with excessive complaints will face losing their licenses.

Registration kits are being mailed to the shops. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services spokeswoman Michelle McLawhorn said. Actual registration and enforcement begin Oct. 1.

Growth Management
The local-option gasoline tax was a lure to local governments to go along with the first rewrite of Florida growth management laws since 1985.

County commissions can add up to 5 cents a gallon to gas taxes starting Jan. 1. Enacting the tax requires a "supermajority" vote — a majority plus one. A public referendum can be held, but isn't required.

The growth-management revision attempts to reverse rigid rules that pushed urban sprawl into unspoiled areas while discouraging downtown redevelopment. It makes it easier for local governments to change growth-management plans and for developers to meet requirements.

Law Enforcement
Failure to stop after a fatal traffic accident escalates from a third-degree to a second-degree felony, adding 10 years to the possible prison term for violators.

Also effective Thursday is a law that makes carjacking and home break-in robberies felony murders if they result in a death.

Another will create a Florida Violent Crime Council to help local law enforcement agencies investigate major crimes such as the five slayings that shocked Gainesville in 1990.

Jury Pay
Instead of serving for a week, people called for jury duty will serve for one day or the completion of one trial under a law enacted to make jury duty less inconvenient.

The jury pay rate of $10 a day plus mileage is also being modified. For the first three days, jurors who continue to get paid by their employers won't be paid by the taxpayers.

Those who are unemployed or aren't paid by their employers while on jury duty will receive $15 a day for the first three days of service. Everyone serving more than three days will get $30 a day.

Safety at risk on state aircraft

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Pressure to meet schedules and pilot fatigue from long days could jeopardize the safety of Florida's four state airplanes, some pilots say.

The Tallahassee Democrat reported in Sunday's editions that the 10 pilots are sometimes forced to work as long as 21 hours straight and believe aircraft incidents are sometimes downplayed for the sake of convenience.

The aircraft ferry Gov. Lawton Chiles, members of the Cabinet, lawmakers, Supreme Court justices and agency chiefs to every corner of Florida.

In one recent incident report, pilot David Parke took off for Orlando after feeling "a little bump" on the left side. It turned out a propeller had struck a taxi light at the Tallahassee airport, was slightly damaged and had to be replaced.

Private pilots were incredulous that the plane took off, saying the damage could have caused potentially deadly engine vibrations. It was carrying Mary V. Goodman, director of the Department of Management Services' division of property management, and two other passengers.

"They absolutely should not have taken off," said Mack Langston, a pilot at the commercial Flightline Group Inc. in Tallahassee. "I don't care if it's the president of the United States, nothing makes it important enough to take off like that."

The Federal Aviation Administration is looking into the incident, which was never reported by the state.

County museum may move into city

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County wants to move the county museum into downtown Sanford. A proposal on the relocation will be discussed during tonight's Sanford City Commission meeting.

The new location would be the old Post Office building, at the corner of First Street and Palmetto Avenue, presently used for Tech Services. (computer personnel) associated with the county's library and leisure services department.

The county museum is presently located at 5-points, south of Sanford, but has suffered from a lack of display as well as storage space for a number of years.

J. Kevin Grace, deputy county manager, has requested the city consider entering into an agreement to allow the change of use for the facility. The County Commission gave a unanimous consent vote on the plan during a meeting on May 25, and now requires city approval to move forward with the plan.

According to Grace, "It is our feeling that the new Seminole County Historical Museum would be both a contributor to and a beneficiary of the downtown revitalization efforts, and would be a nice compliment to the Historic District and the nearby Sanford museum."

In a letter requesting city consideration, Grace wrote, "According to the 1983 deed which was executed by the county and city, if the property were to be used for a purpose other than the site of a public library, then the land and premises shall either revert to the city, or the county would have to pay the city $138,250."

He continued, "However, it also states that if both the city and county agree by majority vote of their respective governing bodies to a use other than public libraries, then the referenced reverter clause would not apply."

The proposal is scheduled for both the commission workshop meeting beginning at 5 p.m. this evening in the city manager's conference room, and the regular meeting beginning at 7 p.m., in the commission room of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Rock around the clock

Hundreds of people crowded First Street Saturday evening to admire the antique and classic cars displayed by Celery City Cruisers and other collectors during the downtown Super Street Party. Participants enjoyed refreshments and danced to the music of the 50s and 60s at Magnolia Mall throughout the evening.

Mycoff recognized for innovative programs in vocational education

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Midge Mycoff, coordinator of the Displaced Homemakers Program at Seminole Community College, was recently recognized by the Florida Department of Education and the Florida Vocational Association for developing two programs that were deemed tops in the state's vocational education system.

The programs were given awards as two of the "Best Practices" programs in the state. Mycoff submitted the programs, "Bridging the Gap" and "Career Counseling-New Directions."

The programs will soon be available throughout the state to vocational teachers and administrators. The Department of Education will provide those who are interested in formulating a similar program with the information needed to improve the services they provide to their students.

Mycoff received $300 for her work from the Department of Education.

The "Bridging the Gap" program is a joint effort between the college and the Seminole County public schools.

It attempts to facilitate the transition of single mothers from the world of high school to the community college level with orientation, information and support.

The program also offers continual contact with the mothers to encourage them to stay in school and complete their degree. Another important aspect of Mycoff's program is the fostering of on-going education and the road to financial independence through marketable skills.

The "Career Counseling-New Beginnings" program is a required 18 hour course for all single parents, displaced homemakers or single pregnant women who are seeking assistance from any of the programs at Seminole Community College.

The program provides assessments, career and personal counseling, assistance in goal setting, decision making strategies, values clarification, stress and time management and assertiveness training.

Fire destroys Hussein's Palm Beach mansion

By Associated Press

PALM BEACH — The mansion of Jordan's King Hussein was destroyed when an explosion and flames ripped through the vacant building.

Authorities had not ruled out foul play late Sunday, but pointed to a break in a natural gas line for flames that continued to burn for 3 1/2 hours after the explosion.

It was not clear what would have ignited the gas at 8:36 p.m. EDT, though the gas entered the house through an electrical conduit, Palm Beach Fire-Rescue spokesman Craig Stanfield said.

"It was like thunder," neighbor Holden Luntz said of Sunday evening's explosion. "You could see a whole burst of orange. The house was inundated in flames."

Rescuers, repelled by heat, did not search the $1.9 million home until after 10 p.m., but found no one inside.

No injuries were reported. "The inside of the house looked like a wrecking ball hit it," Stanfield said. "It's pretty much a total loss."

Neighbors said they smelled gas about an hour before the explosion rocked the upscale neighborhood. Firefighters blocked off the streets and searched several blocks, but didn't find anything, Stanfield said.

Property records show that the 5,300-square-foot home with 5 1/2 baths was built in 1950. The fire scorched tall shrubs that hugged the house and apparently destroyed a white Chrysler in the garage.

"Oh, this is a tragedy," said M.R. Rudolph, who lives across the street. "That was a beautiful home."

The property records show that the home is owned by Kimberly-Clark heir James H. Kimberly. In a 1986 interview with The Palm Beach Post, Kimberly explained that he is an honorary consul to the Kingdom of Jordan in this area and is a trustee of the home.

Honoring the National Guard

Americans have embraced their patriots since Sam Adams and 54 of his freedom-fighting friends signed the Declaration of Independence.

That was July 4, 1776.

Seven more years of war ensued before America was finally free from its English ties, but in the 217 years since that fateful day, patriots have ploughed through many wars and much disaster to preserve the rights of all.

This July 4, men and women of the local Florida National Guard will be honored at Sanford's holiday celebration. The event is sponsored by Friends of the Guard and co-sponsored by the City of Sanford, Seminole County, Florida National Guard, Elks, Jaycees, Kiwanis, Rotary, American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Fleet Reserve, Paralyzed Veterans Association and the Seminole County Area Veterans Advisory Council. Those who serve in Company B, 124th Infantry, the Second Battalion Headquarters, HHB 265th Air Defense Artillery and the 1265th Ordnance Company will be recognized for their recent involvement in Desert Storm and the relief they selflessly offered during Hurricane Andrew.

According to Friends of the Guard member Bill Marcous, some features include the presentation of commendation plaques, a 21-gun salute and a barbecue, all of which is open to the public.

Participate.

Festivities planned are a good lesson in what America has always stood for...freedom and respect.

Two hundred and 17 years after 55 conspirators for our freedom met to forge the document that continues to secure it, fireworks in their honor will burst over Sanford's lakefront.

Patriots still.

On Coach Blake's recent suspension

What a contemptible country we are, when we set up laws that are detrimental to our existence.

We allow our wealth of knowledge to become like a wicked blade that kills the user who merely knows the usage of the instrument instead of understanding how to use the instrument.

Our children have become a by-product of our own creation. Historically, we have taught them well, for "the chickens have surely come home to roost."

Look at the way we reward the negative behavior of our children, by destroying warriors like Coach Emory Blake by making him less than a sacrificial lamb. He has become a victim of the cancer that is eating away at America. A cancer which will eventually cause the American Society to become, in the history books, a great legendary power alongside Rome, Greece and Great Britain.

Extra prison time for certain thoughts

In 1972, Justice Thurgood Marshall — in Chicago Police Department vs. Mosely — said with characteristic directness: "Above all else, the First Amendment means that government has no power to restrict expression because of its message, its ideas, its subject matter, or its content."

But the Constitution is a living document and, according to the Supreme Court on June 11, if a crime has been committed to the accompaniment of bigoted thought, the prison sentence for the crime itself can be doubled or tripled because of that message. If the same crime is caused by avarice, however, there will be no extra prison time.

The unanimous decision in Wisconsin vs. Mitchell validates similar "enhancement" statutes in 26 other states and the District of Columbia. Inexorably, there will now be more such laws — including federal lengthening of sentences for those already punished for a crime and then punished again for the same crime if the motivation was racist, sexist, homophobic or among other prohibited thoughts added by well-meaning legislators.

Kenosha, Wis., is where Todd Mitchell incited some of his black friends to beat a white teenager because of his color. Mitchell could have gotten five more years in addition to the two on the books for his involvement in aggravated battery.

Nothing wrong with that added sentence for bigotry, said Chief Justice William Rehnquist in reviewing the case, because the Wisconsin statute "is aimed at conduct unprotected by the First Amendment."

Only conduct? As the chief justice himself notes, Mitchell first said, "There goes a white boy! Go get him!"

Reading the decision, a commander in the Kenosha police force, James P. Farley, told The New York Times that Rehnquist and his colleagues have made him nervous. "I'm very fearful of the concept of thought police," Farley said.

So was the Ohio Supreme Court in another hate crime case, State vs. Wyant (1992). That court struck down a statute adding to the penalties for various criminal actions if they were done "by reason of" race, color, religion or national origin.

Unlike Justice Rehnquist and his unanimous colleagues in the Mitchell case — who did not notice the slippery slope opening before them — Ohio's highest court said: "The question before us is not whether the government can regulate the conduct itself ... the issue is whether the government can punish the conduct more severely based on the thought that motivates the behavior ..."

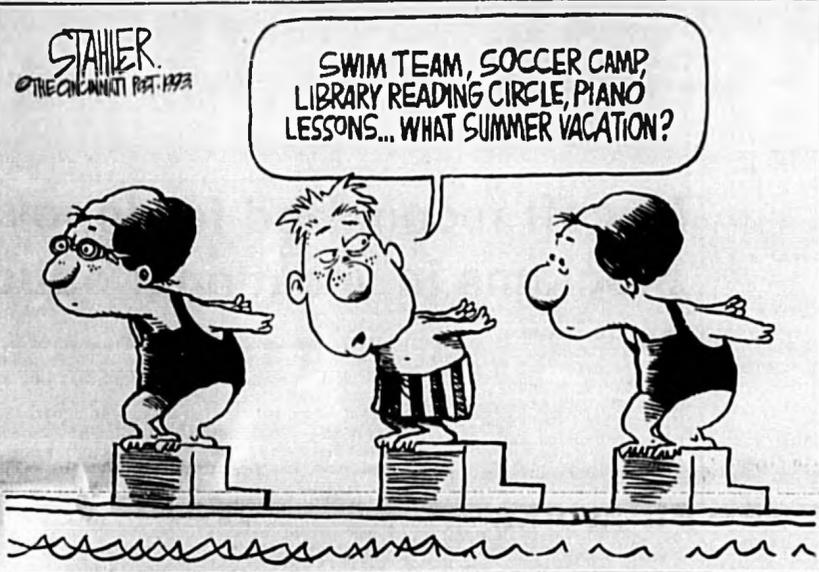

"By enacting (the hate crime statute) the state has infringed on the basic liberties of thought and speech. Once the proscribed act is committed, the government criminalizes the underlying thought by enhancing the penalty based on viewpoint. If the legislature can enhance a penalty for crimes committed 'by reason of' racial bigotry, why not 'by reason of' opposition to abortion, war, the elderly (or any other political or moral viewpoint)?"

But what about the laws against discrimination in employment and housing? In those cases, said the Ohio court, "it is the act of discrimination that is targeted, not the motive." And when there is proof of motive, the penalty is not increased because of that.

The state of Ohio appealed the Wyant decision

I'm very fearful of the concept of thought police, Farley said.

HODDING CARTER

Clinton's feud with press corps

A great deal has been made of the Clinton presidency's early mishandling of the Washington press corps and the president himself seems to believe it. There is no better explanation for the employment of former GOP flack David Gergen to soothe, stroke and flatter the White House reporters and their bosses. But if it is a mistake for a public official such as Bill Clinton to let journalists know that he, like so many others, holds them in contempt, it is a bigger mistake for the press to pretend that such contempt is unfair on its face. Too often it isn't.

It is easy enough for the press to fall into self-justifying delusion. The public allows itself to be outraged by the wrong things. "Disrespectful" questions are frequently criticized, to which journalists reply with merit that tough questions are a reporter's basic tool. Without them, what is called the news would be no more than the transfer of handouts from one printing press to another. That is why ABC's Brit Hume was right to ask the president to explain the zigzag selection process that went into the nomination of Judge Ruth Ginsburg to the Supreme Court last week, and the president was wrong to fly off the handle because of the query.

But an early Clinton administration decision to open the daily White House press briefing to television broadcast has illustrated why it is so easy to hate the press. The American public has been given the opportunity to watch sausage being made, to borrow from an old cliché, and it hasn't taken long for everyone to learn that it stinks.

The reversal of a longstanding policy may actually have been made with malice aforethought. I can almost hear the staff discussion that preceded it. Why not let the public see the press corps behaving like irascible children in living color? To read about the briefings is one thing. To witness them is another.

Even the best of writers cannot convey fully their pettiness, frequent irrelevance and even more frequent mean-spiritedness. One side pretends that it expects full disclosure and the other pretends that it might someday provide it. Virtually no one looks good. Why the reporters, print as well as electronic, agreed to conspire in making themselves look silly is beyond logic. But they did, and the cat was out of the bag. Those omniscient oracles who proclaim the word from the White House lawn each evening are capable of talking and acting like a bunch of spoiled brats.

The way the White House reporters went ballistic when the new Clinton team arbitrarily placed the old press office area off limits was equally illustrative. This infringement of their right to easy access to their handlers was treated like a violation of the ABM agreement. When Gergen made it a point to countermand the order as one of his first acts, everyone was slobberingly grateful.

But the point is that nothing significant was at issue. The places where policy-makers, as opposed to the president's public relations team, work are still closed to reporters except by invitation. The White House press beat remains one best fit for kennel dogs rather than hunting dogs; the press release is the normal form of communication. The uproar over the press office restrictions had everything to do with reporters' perks and virtually nothing to do with the public interest.

Just about everyone knows about the tempest in a teapot that was whipped up when some idiot on the press staff asked a local TV reporter in New England to apply the president's makeup before she could interview him. It was a demeaning thing to ask, but the reporter's acquiescence was more instructive. For the sake of an essentially meaningless interlude with the president of the United States, she was willing to debase herself and her profession.

But that is only something writ small which media heavies routinely write large. Journalistic standards are regularly ditched for the sake of access, most egregiously and often by network television.

For instance, if a newsmaker is a hot enough commodity, he or she can dictate who will be allowed to appear on the same show. I know this to be true from both sides of the aisle — as a sometime panelist on shows that have canceled appearances by certain people because of the demands of others and as someone who was bounced as a guest because the newsmaker of the moment objected to my presence. If you are important enough and a tough negotiator, you can even extract a promise that certain questions will not be asked, no matter how newsworthy, as the price of appearing. Remember that as you watch some of those Sunday morning network programs and late-evening talk shows.

As with most institutions, the White House reporters and their parent organizations are their own worst enemies. The chief threat to effective performance lies less in overreactive presidents and vengeful staffs than in their own behavior.

It is a bigger mistake for the press to pretend that such contempt is unfair on its face.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Definition of rape is controversial

A few months ago, there were "Take Back the Night" rallies in cities all over the country, including mine, all with the purpose of making the streets safe for women to walk.

The concept was a good one, and I didn't think much more about "Take Back the Night" until I later saw some literature from one of the rallies with this statistic quoted on it: One out of every four college women has been the victim of "rape" or "attempted rape."

I tried to let that sink in. One in four? I graduated from college 19 years ago, when rape statistics for college women were either much lower or there were a whole lot of us keeping mum. One in FOUR? Where was I when things changed so drastically for college women, that every fourth date could bring a rape attempt? Why are the several college women in my family not talking about it? And if it's true, why aren't we responsible adults yanking them back home and enrolling them in beauty school or a good auto mechanics course?

Yet, according to material I read and rape counselors I've talked to, these statistics are generally accepted within the profession.

In a recent issue of The New York Times Magazine, Katie Roiphe, author of "The Morning After: Sex, Fear and Feminism on Campus," takes issue with the roots of the one-in-four claim. She cites one troubling 1985 survey, undertaken by Ms. magazine and financed by the National Institutes of Health.

In that survey, University of California at Berkeley social welfare professor Neil Gilbert points out 73 percent of respondents didn't initially define their experiences as rape. It was the psychologist conducting the study who was said to have interpreted the responses as rape. One of the survey questions was: "Have you had sexual intercourse when you didn't want to because a man gave you alcohol or drugs?"

Roiphe takes issue with the definition some rape counselors use for the word "rape" — that even "manipulation" or "verbal coercion," based on women's perceived powerlessness to men, constitute rape. No physical violence, no force, just smooth talk.

If this were a perfect world, none of us would windle anyone else into doing something he or she didn't want to do, nor be coerced into it ourselves. But is coercion rape? We humans cajole, manipulate and wangle each other all the time, knowing full well the other person doesn't want what we want.

Let's suppose you have a teen-age son, a college sophomore. He's a kid who studies, works in a grocery store and doesn't bring the police knocking on your door in the middle of the night. He's on a date. He and the girl have had too much to drink, and he paid for the drinks. He wants very much to have sex and he uses phrases everyone would agree have more to do with manipulation than truth.

"You know you want it, too. It's normal for people to have sex and abnormal for them NOT to have sex. Don't you like me? We seemed to be having such a great time ... am I not attractive enough? You're the most beautiful, the smartest girl I've ever been out with..." The girl gives in and has sex with your son, even though she doesn't want to. Is your son a rapist?

It is not OK to coerce anyone into sex, especially when sex carries the possibility of pregnancy, venereal disease or AIDS. But rape has historically been defined as an act of force, violence or, at the very least, non-consent. To define "talking into" as rape is to dilute the power of the forcible.

One out of every four college women has been the victim of 'rape' or 'attempted rape'.

Missiles cost overstated by billions

By Associated Press

NEW YORK — A series of federal studies show that military officers lied to Congress about the need, cost and performance of some of the most expensive weapons built in the 1980s, according to a published report.

The New York Times said in Monday's editions that eight secret reports in a three-year probe by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, showed the Pentagon overstated the costs of missiles by billions of dollars. Military officials also exaggerated the radar-evading ability of nuclear bombers, as well as the Soviet nuclear threat, according to the reports.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio and chairman of the Government Affairs Committee that commissioned the studies, will discuss unclassified portions at a news conference on Monday.

Investigators said that Congress decided to spend up to $350 billion for the B-1B and B-2

Stealth bombers, cruise missiles and MX intercontinental ballistic missiles on inflated assessments, inaccurate testimony and misleading reports, the Times said.

The B-1B fleet is grounded by mechanical problems, and the B-2 has yet to pass flight tests.

Today, only the sea leg of the land-sea-air nuclear strategy developed during Ronald Reagan's presidency — the Trident D-5 submarine-launched missile — works, the GAO concluded.

After reading the unclassified summary of the report, Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of defense from 1981 to 1987, said it was revisionist history written by accountants.

"This analysis was done without any understanding of how it looked to us in 1981," he told the Times. "Yes, we used a worst-case analysis in this business. You can't afford to go wrong. In the end we won the Cold War, and if we won by too much, if it was overkill, so be it."

Base

for a new veteran's hospital which would save a great deal of money in comparison to constructing a new one.

"Of course that would be only for people with service-connected disabilities," he said. "Those of us who might have problems after our service years would still have to drive to Patrick."

Sanford navy vet Mark Whitehead said he would miss both the commissary and hospital. "I have been going to the Orlando base several times a month," he said. "but now it's going to be a trip to Patrick, but not that often."

"It's going to have a medical impact on me," said Sanford City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan. "With my recent heart problems, I rely on the medical facilities for my prescription medicine, but now I guess I'll have to drive to Cocoa."

McClanahan said he was not greatly surprised when the announcement was made. "I've been expecting this to come about," he said. "but it's still going to be a problem for a lot of ex-service men and women in Sanford."

Last minute efforts to save the base from closure failed. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., met with the commission's chairman, Jim Courter, before Sunday's session to seek reconsideration of the vote on the Orlando base, but to no avail.

In Orlando, initial reaction of shock to the decision to close down the sprawling Navy boot camp, which began life as a World War II Army Air Corps base, quickly gave way to a determination to replace it with private-public development matching the $575 million economic loss.

"We have a tough road ahead, but we are up to the challenge," said Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood after the commission's unanimous vote.

"We hope to find some kind of public-sector use that will be compatible with surrounding neighborhoods," Mrs. Hood said.

The 25-year-old base has a $250 million payroll for some 6,500 military and civilian fulltime employees and 10,000 recruits training at any given time. The remaining economic impact is in operational funding and commerce generated in the area.

The training center was on the Pentagon's hit list in 1991 but was spared at that time. It is the only one of three that trains women. The commission voted Saturday to make Great Lakes, Ill., the only basic training base for men and women, closing one in San Diego as well as the Orlando center.

Although expressing disappointment, Mayor Hood said she and other area officials had anticipated the commission's decision and had formed a group to look at re-use planning for the site.

Rick Tesch, executive director of the Economic Development Commission of Mid-Florida, said, "We think we have the resources to create an engine that could eventually surpass the economic impact the Navy has there. . . . Yes, there will be a dip in economic impact, but we will get it back as soon as possible."

The potential is for a multi-use facility, said Tesch, who has headed the group looking into public-private development.

"Our challenge is going to be to pick out the best options. Our

The shutdown process could take up to five years, officials said.

Base Commander F. Lee Tillotson said he acknowledged the commission's decision but noted that it was only step two of a procedure that requires a review and endorsement by President Clinton by July 15 and similar endorsement or rejection by Congress 45 days later.

didn't vote to discontinue the two programs, but to grant them independence.

"They started up under the umbrella of SCVP," said Cox. "We did it as another starter program. The whole understanding was that they would break away when they were up and running."

SCVP resumed operation of TEFAP in January 1992 after a 13-month dormancy. The Salvation Army operated the program from February 1989 to September 1990, when it discontinued it due to the cost to operate it. The Salvation Army also operated the program from 1987 to 1988, but stopped for about a year due to costs and food storage problems.

The program was first offered in Seminole County in 1986 by the Red Cross.

SHARE was begun by Metts in October to provide low-cost food for people who don't meet the mandatory poverty guidelines required by the federal government for TEFAP participants. The SCVP SHARE program was recognized as the "Outstanding SHARE Site for 1992 by the Orlando-area SHARE organization.

Metts said people participating in the two programs will notice no changes. TEFAP is offered to people who meet federal poverty guidelines. It distributes monthly allotments of dry goods and other government surplus foods.

SHARE is offered to everyone, regardless of income, and provides a monthly distribution of a balanced diet for $13.50 and two hours of volunteerism. Participants must show a voucher signed by their volunteer benefactor when they pick up their bags of food.

There is no limit to the number of bags that can be obtained for each family, but each requires the $13.50 payment and two hours of service.

"Hopefully, no one will notice a difference," said Metts. The next SHARE sign-up is July 10. For more information, call 322-1520.

Innocent man to be released after serving nine years

By Associated Press

TOWSON, Md. — A judge today overturned the conviction of a man who was sentenced to death for the rape-slaying of a 9-year-old girl and spent nine years in prison. DNA tests show someone else committed the crime.

Prosecutors said they would not seek a new trial for Kirk Bloodsworth, 32, clearing the way for his release later today from the Maryland House of Correction in Jessup.

Baltimore County Circuit Judge James T. Smith Jr. overturned the conviction at a five-minute hearing.

The FBI confirmed Friday that DNA tests on a small, previously undetected spot of semen on the girl's underwear proved that Bloodsworth was wrongly convicted of the crimes.

"I have been saying for nine years that I was innocent, that I did not kill the little girl," Bloodsworth said in a statement Sunday. "Now we have proved it. I just want my freedom and to accomplish something with my life."

"I always knew Kirk was innocent," said his lawyer, Robert Morin. "There was never any evidence directly linking him to the crime and now we have positive DNA tests which demonstrate that someone else must have committed the crime."

Bloodsworth, a Cambridge, Md., native, was convicted and sentenced to die for the July 1984 murder-rape of Dawn Hamilton in Rosedale, Md.

The case was based on five eyewitnesses who said they saw Bloodsworth with the girl shortly before she disappeared, Morin said. Bloodsworth insisted he never met the child, although at the time he lived a short distance from her Baltimore County home.

After his conviction, Bloodsworth was granted a new trial by the Maryland Court of Appeals because the prosecution withheld from the defense exculpatory evidence concerning another suspect.

The second trial also resulted in a conviction and Bloodsworth was sentenced to three consecutive life terms.

Morin took over the case when the appeal of the second conviction was turned down.

He asked that all physical evidence in the case be re-examined. A California laboratory, Forensic Science Associates, discovered the semen spot. The laboratory conducted DNA tests that determined the semen was not Bloodsworth's, Morin said.

Death penalty foes said the expected release of Bloodsworth will bring to 21 the number of death row inmates released from prison since 1980 because of evidence that proved their innocence.

"Cases like this should absolutely disqualify the death penalty as a punishment in our society," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Washington-based Death Penalty Information Center.

"There has been a constant string of death penalty cases in recent years in which the prosecutors clearly pursued the wrong suspect. Juries convict on the basis of what they're told, but often they're not given the whole story."

Morin said Bloodsworth's mother died five months ago. "It's sad . . . she won't be able to hear this," he said.

Prepare arts, crafts for 'Club Show'

The Lake Mary Woman's Club has some suggested categories for arts and crafts projects to enter in their "Club Show" at the end of the year for District VII in '94.

"Since there are no meetings during the summer months, some of you may wish to get started on a project," said Alta Ombres, fine arts chairman.

The categories are: painting — watercolor, oil, acrylic, pastels and chalk; needlework — needlepoint, cross stitch, quilting, sewing (clothing), knitting, crochet, dolls and doll clothing and folk art (decorating); Florida materials: dried flower arrangements, wreathes, sprays; woodworking; photography; ribbon baskets; pillows; ceramics; weaving; Christmas crafts and jewelry.

"Craft supply stores have many suggestions to assist you with both classes and supplies. Libraries have countless books to assist you, also. So have a crafty summer," said Alta Ombres.

Woman's club enrichment

The Lake Mary Woman's Club is a volunteer service organization, founded in 1962, dedicated to bettering the quality of life in the community. As a member of General Federation of Women's Clubs, the largest and oldest non-denominational service organization of volunteer women in the world, there are 10 million members worldwide. They are also members of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, 25,000 members, dedicated to unifying civic, cultural, charitable and educational efforts throughout the state.

Women of all ages, interests and experience belong to the Woman's Club of Lake Mary. They work together within the community to build a better place in which to live. They provide an opportunity for the development of talents, abilities and skills for each member, by promoting a variety of programs and projects enabling members to participate.

If you think you would like to join and start attending meetings after the summer break, call Cheryl Green at 323-5102.

An educational summer

JoAnne C. Beckner, assistant principal/testing coordinator at Lake Mary Elementary School, recently relayed information to parents regarding the first year of a statewide census test of writing skills for fourth grade students. "The Florida Writing Assessment Program (Florida Writes), our teachers regularly involve students in the full writing process including pre-writing, drafting, revising, editing, and publishing. Writing is encouraged and required throughout the elementary and secondary language arts curriculum, and one goal is to have writing as a basic component in all the curriculum areas (math, science, social studies, etc.)."

As you review your child's score, and the district and state scores reported in the media, please keep the following in mind:

- This test is in its infancy and will change and adapt with time.

- The scores reflect one 45-minute writing exercise in rough draft form.

- A score of three-out-of-six is considered a good, solid score. How can you help? You can encourage your child to write by:

- Promoting letters to friends, relatives and pen pals.
- Talking to your child about what they have written, whether at home or school.
- Writing notes of "love letters" to your child.
- Displaying any written works on the refrigerator or bulletin board.
- Demonstrating the importance of writing by sharing your writing with your children.

School may be out, but learning doesn't stop. Parents can balance leisure and learning during the out-of-school days of summer. The following are some activities that will help maintain skills and perhaps cut down some of the "boredom" of the long summer vacation:

- Let children keep a diary or journal.
- Take time every day for the entire family to read together or by themselves.
- Introduce children to the local library's summer reading program.
- Provide opportunities for application of math skills in daily situations when you go to the store, let children count change.
- Have children write letters or postcards to grandparents, friends, or cousins.
- If you are traveling, visit historical spots along the way. Have a safe, happy summer.

Juniors return from golf and tennis camp

By SARABECA ROSIER
Herald Correspondent

Session I of the YMCA Junior Golf and Tennis Camp came to a close and from the looks on the faces of the returning golfers and tennis students they didn't want the week to end yet.

"We had a lot of fun and learned a lot this week," said Mike Procopio and Brian Stensrud who were in the golf program.

The Disney/YMCA Golf Camp is a learning environment for junior golfers of all ages and skill levels, and the Disney/YMCA Tennis Camp offers a well-rounded program for all levels of junior players. This includes beginners wanting to learn the fundamentals and to advanced players looking to sharpen their game for tournament play.

Seminole YMCA, Winter Park YMCA, Downtown YMCA and Dr. Phillips YMCA all are picked up by bus for these golf and tennis camps at Disney Resort daily. The next three sessions run from June 28 — July 2, July 5-9, and July 12-16.

While enjoying the summer, beware of the sun — at the beach, playing tennis or working in the yard, the summer can cause problems: sunburn, heatstroke or dehydration, according to area physicians.

Protect yourself by wearing hats, loose-fitting clothing and waterproof sunscreen. A sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 gives most skin types adequate protection. These precautions are especially important between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. when the sun is at its strongest.

Remember that intense sun exposure without protection predisposes one to skin cancer, cataracts and other sun related disorders. Once the skin is sunburned, it is more sensitive to further exposure.

It is important to take breaks from summer activities in the shade and try to keep the skin cool and moist.

If you take prescription medications, check with your doctor before sunbathing. Many medications are sun-reactive, including some antibiotics. They can cause rashes, hives and other side effects.

Water and sports drinks are important to avoid losing too much salt when sweating. About a quart every two hours will replenish what you need during moderate exposure and exercise.

A quart every hour should be the guide for playing competitively in the sun or for prolonged sun exposure.

IN BRIEF

Magic donaton benefits children

The Orlando Magic Youth Foundation donated $15,000 to fund a summer day camp program for developmentally disabled children at Camp Thunderbird in Apopka. (The program was implemented with United Way funding.)

Scholarship monies are currently available for mentally retarded children who would like to attend Camp Thunderbird day sessions this summer. The camp is located on 17 wooded acres of Wekiwa State Park 20 miles NW of Orlando. Children can enjoy swimming lessons, games and sports, crafts, nature trails and canoeing on surrounding Lake Pevatt.

"Most parents can easily find a summer program for their children but there just aren't any (programs) for developmentally disabled kids," said Katie Porta, Executive Director "with the Magic funding we now have something to offer the community."

For registration and scholarship information, please call Camp Director, Nancy Johnson at (407) 889-8088 or write to Camp Thunderbird, PO Box 1300, Apopka, FL 32704.

Preparing plants while on vacation

The time for summer vacations is here, but before we lock up and leave we must first get the landscape and garden plants and beds ready for a vacation absent of regular care.

During a one-to-two week period away from home or even a long weekend, considerable damage can be done to house and garden plants if care is not provided. This is especially true for plants growing in containers — both indoors and outdoors. If asked, a neighbor will probably check on the plants while you are gone. It is important to give this person thorough instructions on the needs of each plant. Needs may vary considerably and a friend may not have the same devotion as you.

A little time spent in readying your home for your absence may spare some grief when you return. If your plants mean as much to you as mine do to me, the extra effort will be well worth your while. Perhaps the following checklist will be helpful:

- Place outdoor potted plants in a shady location. This may be near the side of a building having a northern exposure or beneath the canopy of shrubs or trees.

- Potted plants may be placed in the ground up to the rim of the container. A thick layer of mulch will conserve moisture and reduce the number of waterings needed while on vacation. Master Gardener Hank Veldman says he uses an ingenious technique that gives very good results. "I place potted plants, that have been thoroughly moistened, into plastic trash bags. The bags are pulled up around the container and secured loosely with a twist tie to the base of the plant." Hank says that his plants have fared well for up to two weeks using this method. If the plastic bag method is used, be sure to place plants in shaded areas. Plants left in direct sun can cause heat to build-up inside the bag and possibly cook your plants.

GARDENING

When caring for indoor plants, place them in a room that receives indirect light. Direct sunlight will dry the soil rapidly. Do not leave plants in a darkened room, because house plants will begin to lose their leaves if light levels are drastically reduced. The last thing to do before leaving on a trip is to thoroughly soak the plants. If the vacation extends over a two-week period, move house plants outdoors and sink pots in a shaded and cool garden bed.

Mow the lawn just prior to leaving, if possible. An unkempt lawn is a tell-tale sign that no one is at home, as well as being bad for the turf. If it's allowed to get out of hand, perhaps mow a little shorter than usual if your stay will be long. Water the lawn well prior to leaving, or make provisions for sprinklers to be turned on.

Give garden beds and plants, particularly those recently planted, a final and good soaking prior to leaving. It will also help to mulch plants with leaves, pine needles, compost or bark to conserve moisture.

Cut flowering annuals just before leaving. Annuals which go uncut will soon stop flowering. Energy is used to nourish developing seed instead of being put to work producing new flowers and foliage.

Give pots and beds a final weeding before leaving. If weeds are allowed to go to seed while you're away, you can bet the job of weeding will be harder when you return or next year when the seeds sprout. Weeds also compete with garden plants for food and water.

Harvest all ripened fruit and vegetables prior to leaving. Vegetables will continue to produce if harvested on a regular basis. Make arrangements with a neighbor to harvest and water the garden in payment for vegetables and fruit.

I know I've suggested that you ask a lot from your neighbor while you are away from home, but hey, what are neighbors for? I'm sure you will have the opportunity to return the favor. Happy Vacation!

All Seminole County Cooperative Extension Services are open to all regardless of race, color, sex, or national origin.

Garden of the Month

An oak tree circled with large caladiums, two sago palms and a large white blooming myrtle with many blooming impatiens at the base of each plant earned Corrine Mahon, 201 Tyler Dr., the Garden of the Month. A large Loquat tree and a Chinese Yew fill the side yard. The garden was chosen by Mary Childers of the Mimosa Circle for the Garden Club of Sanford.

Variance in condom quality can make 'safe' sex unsafe

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who works at a health research center, and in the course of her work, she examines condoms under a microscope. What she told me scared me to death!

She said that all the condoms she examined had tiny microscopic tears in them. Sperm cannot escape through these tears but the AIDS virus can! She said that a man should wear two condoms if he wants to be extra careful, because the likelihood of two tears being in the same spot is rare.

Is her information correct, Abby? And if so, don't people need to know this?

ONE OR TWO IN TEXAS

DEAR ONE OR TWO: My experts tell me that lambakin condoms are porous, and may leak the hepatitis and AIDS viruses. However, latex rubber condoms do not leak unless they are defective or incorrectly used — and they vary from brand to brand in how defective they are. You are not alone in your anxiety on this issue. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: For years now, you have told your readers that in order to protect themselves from the threat of AIDS, they should not have unprotected sex and should use a latex rubber condom.

Well, Abby, in choosing a condom, is there any way to know which brands are best? Just about every other U.S. product gets rated or tested by some watchdog group. How about condoms? Or are all of them about the same?

THINKING AHEAD IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR THINKING: Any condom is better than none, but not all brands are equally reliable. Tests by leading AIDS researchers and Consumers Union reveal vast differences among the brands.

Thirty-one brands of condoms were tested by scientists at the Mariposa Foundation and

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

More comprehensive tests, just completed, confirm the earlier data. The studies were funded by the National Institutes of Health, Sequoia Associates, the American Foundation for AIDS Research (AmFAR) and the Mariposa Foundation.

The three brands rated safest on both lists were: Ramess or Touch Non-Lube (Schmid), Gold Circle Coin (Aladain/Safetex) and Sheik Elite (Schmid). The complete list can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Mariposa Foundation, 3123 Schweitzer Drive, Topanga, Calif. 90290. It is a non-profit organization, and a $2 donation is requested. (Considering the risks, it's a worthwhile investment.)

USC/UCLA Medical Centers. Scored on a 100-point scale for strength and reliability, the best brands ranked almost five times higher than the ones that scored lowest. Alarming, the "lowest" included some of the country's most popular brands!

None of the top eight brands leaked the AIDS virus, while four of the brands at the bottom did.
