Developers to discuss road plan

SANFORD — Developers of the $100 million Seminole Towne Center regional mall tonight will present to the Sanford City Commission a redevelopment plan to improve roads through west Sanford.

Last year, the commission declared the proposed 213-acre mall site, located at the interchange of State Road 46 and Interstate 4, a blighted area in order to create a tax increment financing district for the mall. The TIF will allow developers Melvin Simon & Associates to use money collected as property taxes on the mall site to make necessary road improvements in the area.

The redevelopment plan, which includes $8.48 million in improvements, is required of the developer by state statute in order to secure the TIF financing. The plan to be presented tonight includes widening and signaling of I-4 exits ramps; six-laning of SR 46 from I-4 to Upsala Road; extension of Rinehart Road between County Road 46A and SR 46; realignment of Oregon Avenue between SR 46 and Rinehart Road; and construction of a four-lane connector between the realigned Oregon Avenue and Rinehart Road. The plan also includes water system and drainage improvements, surveying and testing, and relocation of existing utilities.

The commission will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave. The redevelopment plan will also be discussed during a 5 p.m. commission work session in the city manager's conference room of city hall.

Turkeys get Solomon-like verdict

CRETE, Neb. — Residents are divided over whether they want a flock of about 25 turkeys to continue wandering through their town, so the mayor says he'll appease both sides by getting rid of half.

The flock moved into this rural community of about 4,800 people a little more than a year ago. Wildlife experts believe they were released by a breeder.

At first they amused residents as they walked single file across roads and added their gobbling to the barking of neighborhood dogs.

But now, residents say, they've gotten destructive, scratching out lawns and breaking television antennas.

"We're trying to please everybody," Crisman said. "The turkey-lovers will have a few turkeys and the turkey-haters won't have so many of them tearing up everything."

Troops storm Kuwait

14,000 POW's taken; Guards rumble south

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — American and allied troops stormed Kuwait by land, sea and air early Sunday and wrested pieces of the emirate from Iraqi forces. By day's end, U.S. paratroopers and Marines were reported on the doorstep of Kuwait City.

The huge Desert Storm offensive, striking along a 300-mile front, also swept up into southern Iraq in the largest American-led invasion since World War II.

Iraq's Republican Guard gave its first sign of life early Monday. About 80 tanks from the elite force, roused from their positions by attacks deep inside Iraq, rumbled south toward advancing coalition forces, pilots flying over the battlefield said.

"They're finally flushing," said Lt. Col. Steve Turner, an F-15E fighter-bomber squadron commander. "They've got to do something — either that, or get killed in their holes."

Allied casualties overall were "remarkably light," said commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, who gave no figures for U.S. dead and wounded.

In the first 24 hours of the ground war, more than 14,000 Iraqis were taken prisoner, the U.S. military command in Saudi Arabia said Monday. No information was available on Iraqi casualties.

Led by hundreds of tanks, the troops from 11 nations raced across the desert battlefield, at times under pounding rain. Aircraft screamed in low, attacking through greasy black smoke from 200 oilfield fires. Hundreds of assault helicopters streamed into Iraq carrying American airborne troops.

Reduced-rate phone service wave of future

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — With the general acceptance by businessmen in the Lake Mary-Heathrow area, Southern Bell Telephone Co. is now offering its "MarketReach" reduced-rate telephone service to residents in that area during the next year.

Under the plan, unique in Florida, residents pay $7.50 per month instead of the $13 basic charge. But in return for the reduced base rate, they pay for local calls as well as long-distance calls. The local charges are capped at $8.50, charged in addition to the $7.50 base charge.

MarketReach subscribers are also given a discount for calls to Orlando and a 40 percent discount to long-distance calls to central Florida locations. The plan also offers a 50 percent discount for central Florida calls during "off-peak" times, 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and throughout the weekend.

Strickler said someday, base rates may inflate so much that local usage charges may become the norm.

"This is the wave of the future," said Larry Strickler, area Southern Bell manager for corporate affairs. "This is getting people used to paying for what they use. I don't think many people really object to that if it works."

Strickler said MarketReach has been mandatory for Lake Mary-Heathrow businesses since March 17, 1990. He said interviews with customers have revealed no strong objections nor enthusiasm.

"It appears that it has not had a significant impact on them," Strickler said. "Some people's rates went up a little, some went down a little. But not enough to make much of a difference either way."

If the Public Service Commission allows, Strickler said the program may be continued in some form after March 1992, the end of the two-year test. Strickler said he does not know if the program will be expanded to other areas after the test completion. Strickler said Lake Mary and Heathrow were chosen for

Guppy chosen from 43 as county Teacher of Year

By VICKI DESORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Jeanne Guppy, a fourth grade teacher at Wilson Elementary School, was named teacher of the year for Seminole County in a ceremony this morning at the school.

Guppy, who has been teaching for 20 years, was selected from 43 candidates as the outstanding Seminole County teacher by a committee of administrators and community members. She was nominated for the honor by her peers.

From the original 43 nominees.

10 finalists were chosen by the committee to be subjected to classroom visits where they were observed in action with their students.

According to the district guidelines for teacher of the year nominations, the candidates for the honor must show "exceptional dedication and professionalism with an outstanding ability to promote a genuine love of learning in the classroom."

Terry Rabun, Wilson's principal, said he believes Guppy fulfills those criteria.

Artist selected to display in U.S. Senate building

SANFORD — Many local residents take pride in displaying paintings in their home done during the past many years by local artist E.B. Stowe. Now, the United States Senate has been able to enjoy his work as well.

Stowe, 95, who lives at Hillhaven Healthcare Center, 950 S. Mellonville Avenue in Sanford, was selected as one of more than 50 senior citizens throughout the entire nation to have one of his paintings displayed in the U.S. Senate Office Building rotunda. The display is part of an exhibit honoring the artistry and creativity of older Americans.

Stowe's painting was chosen as a winner from the 1990 Hillhaven Art and Poetry Contest.

"Everyone at the facility is very proud of him," said Orin Elmers, administrator at Hillhaven Health Care. "His contribution to the exhibit truly exemplifies what this competition is all about — the creative expression of our elderly."

In commenting about the display, Senator David H. Pryor of Arkansas, chairman of the Special Senate Committee on Aging, said, "Our nation's elderly are using their creativity and artistic abilities to send a message — we're alive, we're vibrant and we still have a lot to offer." Pryor said the exhibit is a celebration of creativity for the older citizens of our country.

The national sponsorship of the contest, which was for both art and poetry, was the Hillhaven Corporation and Johnson & Johnson.

Stowe, who was born in Mount Dora in 1896, has not only created thousands of beautiful paintings, but has instructed many oil painters in Sanford and throughout Central Florida, whose work has been prominently displayed in homes, businesses, museums and government offices in various parts of the state.

Officer warned officials about backlog

BARTOW — A document used to make the case for demoting a lieutenant at the Polk County Sheriff's Office because of a backlog in sex-crime investigations shows that she had warned about the growing number, a newspaper reports.

"At present, it is almost impossible for the detectives to manage their case load and in the absence of overtime, to keep up with the assigned cases," Lt. Fran Shiver wrote last March.

Ms. Shiver, 42, who has been with the Sheriff's Office for 13 years, was demoted Friday to patrol sergeant.

The discipline followed an in-house investigation that identified a backlog of 211 rape and child-abuse cases, some three years old. Ms. Shiver, then a sergeant, was the supervisor in charge during the time the backlog existed, and the sheriff's office blames her record keeping.

"The notes in your case assignment log indicated serious cases which were to be sent to the State Attorney's Office, yet never were," reads Shiver's letter of demotion from Col. Paul Alley. "By your own admission, you never checked, balanced and followed up on those cases."

Another document shows that four years ago, Ms. Shiver, then a detective in the unit, told her boss that there were not enough hours to do the job, and that delays in criminal investigations were causing concern among prosecutors and social workers.

City council members seasoned, not old

KENNETH CITY — The senior member is 87 and the average age is 76, but members of Kenneth City's city council says that means they're seasoned, not just old.

Mayor Alfred Wells and Alice B. Kinney are 75. Hazel Nancarrow is "73-plus." At 71, Charles Knox is the junior member. At 67, Carl Schleck is the senior member.

These are public officials who witnessed the Great Depression, World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and watched wide neckties go in and out of style a number of times.

They say they use their experience to run the tiny town — population 4,400 — which is located on a patch of land nearly lost in suburban St. Petersburg.

The town has no debt, comparatively low taxes and only enough employees to get the job done.

Managing editor resigns

TALLAHASSEE — Bill Fuller, managing editor of the Tallahassee Democrat for 11 years, has announced his resignation.

Fuller said Friday that he will leave at the end of March and the move was requested by publisher Carrol Dadisman.

Fuller's departure will give newly appointed executive editor Lou Heldman "an opportunity to choose the managing editor who will work with him in leading the staff and accelerating further improvement in the Democrat," Dadisman said.

Fuller became managing editor of the Knight-Ridder newspaper in May 1980 after serving as news editor at the Tampa Tribune. He also had been a reporter and editor at the Charlotte Observer.

Heldman, who replaces Bob Stiff, will begin his new job March 4 after running Knight-Ridder's 25-43 Project, which launched a highly publicized redesign of the Boca Raton News aimed at attracting Baby Boom-age readers.

Crew fought help while fighting fire

MIAMI — The captain of the Sovereign of the Seas argued for more than an hour last week against outside help in battling a smoky fire that quickly exhausted firefighters aboard the cruise ship, witnesses said.

The testimony came from a joint investigation by the U.S. Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board into the Wednesday fire that forced the evacuation of than 3,000 passengers and crew from the ship, docked at the time in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Miami-based cruise ship, operated by Royal Caribbean Cruise Line, is the world's largest in terms of passenger capacity.

At the daylong hearing Saturday, ship's officers disclosed that they used the Sovereign's security staff to keep San Juan firefighters from boarding the ship to fight the blaze.

"I wanted to get on board and take over the fire-fighting. I wanted to be in charge and in control," said Kjell Karlsen, captain of the Sovereign.

But other witnesses said the firefighters among Karlsen's crew were near exhaustion and were running out of bottled air for their breathing equipment while the arguments went on.

After an hour of arguments, Karlsen finally let four San Juan firefighters aboard, and the flames were soon extinguished.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Obstetricians earned $1 million

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Delivering the babies of women who go to public health clinics is far more lucrative when physicians set up contract arrangements with the state rather than working as staff doctors.

Rodrigo Velez-Londono made $201,408.27 last year handling deliveries in a Central Florida public health clinic — far more than Gov. Lawton Chiles will make this year.

Velez-Londono's annual salary was $65,000 when he worked as a staff obstetrician for the Kissimmee clinic for four months in 1980, delivering babies and doing administrative tasks.

He quit in the middle of November but signed back up two weeks later on a contract basis. In 1990, he made more than twice in contracts what he would have made as a direct employee of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

"He was not ineligible to be contracted with us," said Peggy Brown, personnel manager for the HRS district that includes Kissimmee. "I know of nothing that says if you're a career service employee you can't resign and work on contract."

At the Kissimmee clinic, Velez-Londono delivers babies five days a week. A staff doctor does the weekend deliveries.

"This is his full-time job," said Ray Plummer, business manager for the clinic.

All together, Velez-Londono and seven other obstetricians who contract with the state to deliver babies at public health clinics made just over $1 million last year.

HRS officials blame doctor shortages and the high salaries obstetricians and gynecologists can command in the private sector for the salaries those physicians are paid to work in clinics.

All the doctors receive medical malpractice insurance from the state, and Medicaid reimburses the clinics or the doctors $400 for each baby. HRS rules also make it possible for doctors to quit their low-paying clinic jobs and return to the same clinic to do the same work for a lot more money.

The seven other contract obstetricians who are among the state's best-paid employees work in West Palm Beach, Fort Myers, Punta Gorda and Sarasota.

Two in Fort Myers — Fernando Betancourt and Craig Sibley — are paid a total of $250,000 through the clinic for being available as backups to the 12 midwives who actually perform most of the deliveries, said clinic director John Naponik.

"What I've bought is 24-hour on-call availability," he said. "It's fantastically economic."

Pari-mutuel slumps, state revenue slips

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's $1.8 billion pari-mutuel industry faces problems that can be traced, in large part, to the state lottery, and pari-mutuel regulators face problems stemming from a lack of funding.

State pari-mutuel officials told The Tampa Tribune in a story published Sunday that some of the industry's problems require legislative action to fix and others just need more money.

For instance, they say, the number of races and jai alai matches has increased 37 percent in 10 years while the number of regulators remained constant.

That means the state has seven investigators to watch as many as 30 facilities, instead of one investigator at each, a major recommendation of a study by Florida State University last year.

Former FDLE official and wife sue county law enforcement

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A lawsuit filed by a former state law-enforcement official and his wife accuses local law enforcement officials of charging them with child abuse because of a romantic rejection and ambition.

Sheriff Eddie Boone denied the charges detailed in the suit by Danny and Lee Ellen Johnson.

The Johnsons were charged May 4 with the aggravated child abuse of Lee Ellen's 15-year-old son. Five days later, Johnson was fired from his job as head of criminal investigations for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

In July, State Attorney Willie Meggs dropped the charges when the Johnsons agreed to relinquish custody of their child to the state. Johnson has also filed suit against FDLE Commissioner Tim Moore and the agency.

Mrs. Johnson said Boone maliciously arrested her because she had rejected his advances several years ago, the two "secretly dated," the suit said. The Johnsons said Boone was married and Mrs. Johnson was not at the time. Boone kept asking her out after she had told him she no longer wanted to see him, the suit said.

Gayle S. Swedmark, representing Boone, Campbell and Detective Michael Troelstrup, who investigated the Johnsons' case, said in a written statement:

"One has to wonder, due to the publicity and viciousness of the attack, if it is not inspired by political motivations that will surface soon."

—Gayle Swedmark

"We'll respond to the specific allegations in due course. One has to wonder, due to the publicity and viciousness of the attack, if it is not inspired by political motivations that will surface soon."

The suit charges that Campbell's motive for arresting the Johnsons stemmed from his desire to be the head of FDLE. Campbell had applied for the job in 1980, but former Gov. Bob Martinez appointed Moore.

Since then, Johnson — a 20-year veteran of FDLE — said he had become a likely candidate for the job, if a vacancy arose.

Observers interpret gun-safety verdict

Associated Press

ORLANDO — The precedent-setting conviction of a father charged with leaving a loaded firearm within easy reach of a child has observers debating the legality of the verdict as well as its meaning if upheld.

Circuit Judge James Hauser said he may overturn last week's decision because he had questions about whether there was enough evidence to allow the jury to deliberate. He has asked the lawyers to help him research the issue and expects to decide in about a month.

But the sponsor of the 1980 state law, which was widely publicized when it was passed in the wake of several accidental shootings by and of children, said he thinks the decision is legal.

"The whole idea was to get people to recognize their responsibilities and take reasonable precautions if they have guns in the house," said Rep. Harry Jennings, R-Sarasota. "If a jury felt that putting a gun on a 6-foot-tall teen-age boy in the house wasn't enough, they have a right to find him guilty."

James Kalkok, 44, was found guilty of a misdemeanor in what appeared to be the first test of the law, designed to make parents responsible for keeping loaded guns out of children's hands.

Under the law, parents must keep loaded guns either locked up or "in a location which a reasonable person would believe to be secure." If a child 16 and under finds the weapon and injures or kills someone, the adult can be convicted of a felony. If a child finds the gun and just displays it, the charge is only a misdemeanor.

Kalkok, a 26-year Navy veteran with extensive gun training, was charged after his 14-year-old son, John, found a loaded .38-caliber pistol and accidentally shot a friend. Even though there was an injury, the six-member jury Wednesday found Kalkok innocent of the felony charge and guilty of the misdemeanor charge.

Kalkok faces up to 60 days in jail and a $500 fine when he is sentenced April 15.

Lawyers and those on both sides of the handgun control issue were confused over what the jury's verdict means to gun owners — and even if the verdict is legal.

"If the state was looking for a message here, they didn't get it," said attorney Robert Wheelock, who defended Kalkok.

Wheelock and others questioned whether the verdict was even legal since the gun was involved in causing an injury, a felony offense. They predicted the verdict will be overturned by an appeals court — if not sooner.

Lake Mary forms business board

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

“This will go a long way to show that the city is just the opposite of what people think—we go out of our way to cooperate with business.”

—Mayor Randy Morris

LAKE MARY — When Lake Mary adopted the Lake Mary Boulevard signage standards two years ago, it called them innovative: businesses called them tough. And developers have found the city no pushover for commercial, residential or industrial development at any cost. The city fought long, tough battles with developers of major projects like Heathrow and Primera for that very reason. The steps the city has taken to protect what city officials believe are the best interests of Lake Mary residents may have distracted the city government from Lake Mary's business community. Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris said. The city hopes to bring the two closer together through the formation of Lake Mary's first city Business Advisory Board.

“The city has the reputation of being tough on business,” Morris said. “And by some people, it is perceived as being unfair.” Through cooperation of the city with the new board, Morris said, the city hopes to dispel that perception. In return for the jobs and tax base businesses provide the city, he said, the city wants to show a willingness to cooperate.

“This will go a long way to show that the city is just the opposite of what people think—we go out of our way to cooperate with business,” he said.

The Business Advisory Board is charged with a couple of missions. The first is to review the city's relationship with business — how it carries out development, inspection and permitting policies — and to recommend more efficient procedures where problems exist. The second is to devise ways for the city to promote Lake Mary as an attractive place to locate new business.

The commission created the board by resolution earlier this year. Four members were selected by the city commission, while three members were named by the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce.

- Here are the seven members:
- Mark Ambach, project manager for Arvida
 - Dennis Courson, First Seminole Bank president
 - Terry Duffy, past president of Seminole County Board of Realtors
 - C. William Harkins, of Harkins Development Corporation
 - David Ligier, Lake Mary Public Manager
 - Fran Sledzinski, of Stromberg-Carlson
 - J. Craig Spearman, independent strategic planner

“We're real excited about this,” said Diane Parker, of the chamber. “We work closely with the city, anyway, so we think this can only enhance our relationship.”

The board will be a voice for Lake Mary businesses, Parker said. When merchants do run into conflict with the city's tight codes, she said, such a voice will make business concerns more clearly heard and easier to resolve.

Although Lake Mary's codes are tougher on businesses than those in other cities, Parker said, they actually attract new business.

“We're very proud that we're so strict,” Parker said. “Businesses like it because they know nobody's going to move in and put up a big Las Vegas sign next door.”

She added that an influx of new business locating in the area shows that tough codes don't scare off merchants.

“We just did six ribbon cuttings last week,” Parker said. “This is still a very desirable area.”

Man charged with battery

SANFORD — Charlie Leon Boykins, 48, of 3396 O'Neal St. in Sanford was arrested late Friday and charged with battery.

According to the arrest report filed by the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, officers, responding to what they thought was a burglary in progress, arrived at the home of Carolyn Williams, 1809 Dixie Way in Sanford, to find her lying on a bed in “a state of near hysteria.”

The report noted that Williams had obvious facial lacerations under her left eye and in the right corner of her mouth.

Williams allegedly had taken equipment from a job site supervised by Boykins. He reportedly followed her back to her residence where the battery allegedly occurred.

Williams was treated for her injuries by Sanford Rescues and transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital.

The report noted that tools from Boykins' job site were in plain sight in Williams' room.

The report also noted that Boykins “did not enter Miss Williams residence with the intent of committing burglary, but rather to recover his own property.”

Boykins was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

Tag violation brings arrest

LONGWOOD — Anthony Robert Stewart, 48, of 377 Knights Ct. in Lake Mary was arrested by Longwood Police officers and charged with having an auto tag not assigned to his vehicle and with driving with a suspended driver license.

The report stated that Stewart was stopped by an officer who had “previous knowledge” that the tag on Stewart's car was allegedly not assigned to that vehicle.

A routine computer check showed that his driver license allegedly had been suspended twice for failure to pay traffic fines.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $100 bond.

Man turns self in SANFORD — Dean Frank Hall, 23, of 11924 Lane Park Dr. in Tavares turned himself in to Sanford Police officers on Saturday stating that there was a warrant for his arrest.

According to the arrest report, Hall allegedly approached officers at the 7-11 store at 4103 Orlando Dr. in Sanford and said that there was an outstanding warrant for his arrest on charges of battery.

He was arrested and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

Open container arrest

SANFORD — Steven Franta, 35, of 775 Seminole Ave. in Longwood, was arrested on Friday and charged with violating the open container law and with resisting arrest without violence.

According to the report, Franta was allegedly standing outside the 7-11 store at 100 N. French Ave. in Sanford drinking a 12 ounce beer when police approached him and asked for his identification.

Franta allegedly first told police that he had no identification, then identified himself as John Johnson and then as Steven Johns.

After his arrest, Franta's identification was found in his rear pocket.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

Fake driver license brings arrest

SANFORD — Maria Catherine Evans, 46, of 721 Airport Blvd. in Sanford was arrested on Saturday and charged with displaying a fraudulent driver license and with driving without a driver license.

Evans was stopped by police officers for having an inoperative tail light on her vehicle.

When she presented her license to officers, it reportedly had a photo of Evans taped over the original photo. The license was in the name of Julieta Estora Sequera, 33, of Lake Placid.

Evans also allegedly gave police a photo ID which bore the name Maria Catherine Evans and had a picture of Evans.

Computer checks showed there were no outstanding warrants for either Evans or Sequera.

Evans was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held in lieu of $100 bond.

Disorderly conduct charged

SANFORD — William Edward “Red” Greene, 35, who did not report his address at the time of his arrest was taken into custody on Friday and charged with disorderly conduct.

According to the Sanford Police Department arrest report Greene was arrested at the ABC Cocktail Lounge at 2885 S. Orlando Dr. in Sanford after he allegedly refused to leave after managers of the establishment asked him to do so.

He reportedly shouted obscenities at the management and patrons of the lounge. When police arrived and ordered him to leave the area he allegedly shouted obscenities at them.

He was arrested and held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on $100 bond.

DUI arrest

SANFORD — Leo F. Hoff Jr., 25 of 2000 Lake Mary Blvd. #100-Q in Sanford, was arrested on Saturday and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and attempting to elude police.

When he was stopped by police for allegedly driving 75 miles per hour in a 45 mile per hour zone, Hoff reportedly took off on foot when asked for his identification.

He was stopped a short distance later by officers who found a strong odor of alcohol and performed a field sobriety test.

According to the report, Hoff allegedly failed the test having an alcohol level of .143.

He was arrested and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

Kuwait

punched 30 miles into Kuwait was “moving like a knife through butter.” Associated Press photographer Laurent Rebours reported from the front.

Some defenders tried to hold their positions. “They're fighting, they're resisting,” a Marine colonel said at one point. And American military sources cautioned that days of hard fighting could lie ahead — particularly if allied forces grapple with the Iraqi army's elite Republican Guard.

American commanders, nonetheless, could barely restrain their euphoria.

The Iraqis have proven to be “remarkably inept,” said one senior military source. Schwarzkopf hailed the first day as a “dramatic success,” and military planners said the early gains led him to put his troops on an “accelerated schedule.”

Asked by a reporter whether the allies might be skirting Iraqi positions to hold down casualties, the Army general shot back, “We're going to go around, over, through, on top, underneath and any other way.”

Hours after the invasion jumped off about 4 a.m. Sunday (8 p.m. EST Saturday) and Baghdad came under renewed air bombardment, Saddam Hussein went on official Iraqi radio to urge his troops on. “Fight them and show no mercy,” the Iraqi president said. Iraqi military communiques later asserted that the offensive “has so far failed utterly,” and claimed to have “wiped out” paratroopers dropped behind Iraqi lines in western Kuwait.

Iraq struck Israel early Monday with two missiles, the 38th and 39th Scud attacks on the Jewish state and the first since the ground offensive began. Officials said the missiles landed harmlessly in an unsettled area of southern Israel.

President Bush, in a television address late Saturday in Washington, announced he had ordered the ground attack in the “right and just” cause of freeing Kuwait from Iraqi occupation.

Sheikh Saad al-Abdulla al-Sabah, Kuwait's crown prince, said in a U.S. television interview that after liberation his country's parliament, dissolved in 1978, would be restored, and suffrage for women considered.

Bush adviser Brent Scowcroft spoke Sunday of an objective beyond returning Kuwait to the rule of its royal family: eliminating Iraq's offensive military power.

The long-expected ground assault came just eight hours after a deadline set by the Desert Storm allies for Iraq to begin a pullout from Kuwait.

The Iraqis had dismissed that ultimatum as “shameful.” The Bush administration at the same time rejected a Soviet-sponsored plan for a slower-paced withdrawal.

A Soviet spokesman complained Sunday that a “very real chance” at a negotiated peace had been missed.

The offensive climaxed a 7-month-old crisis that began with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last Aug. 2, intertwined with the buildup of more than a half-million troops on each side, and exploded into warfare Jan. 17 when the anti-Iraq coalition launched a devastating air campaign against targets in Kuwait and Iraq.

That air umbrella of fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships fanned out over the smoke-shrouded battlefield Sunday as battalion after battalion of Marines and British tankers, French legionnaires and U.S. Army cavalrymen, Saudi, Egyptian and other Arab troops rolled across the border in a multi-pronged attack that stretched from the Persian Gulf coast far west to the vast sand-and-gravel plains of the desert.

The armored phalanxes headed north stirred up huge dust storms over the desert floor. Offshore, the battleships USS Wisconsin and USS Missouri opened fire with their mighty 16-inch guns on Iraqi coastal positions.

“I can't fathom the size of this operation,” said Lt. Col. Randy Bigum, an Air Force F-15C pilot back from a mission over the desert. “I can't grasp it. It's enormous.”

Besides making a direct assault on Kuwait City, strategists apparently intend to sweep up the Iraqi western flank with U.S. and British armored units, to encircle Iraqi troops in Kuwait and perhaps pin down reserve forces — the vaunted Republican Guard — in southwestern Iraq. Reports on battle action were sketchy, because the Desert Storm command was leaking only limited information, and dispatches from reporters in news pools at the front were slow in reaching rear areas.

Iraq's best troops showed signs of life today after allied forces — in the first day of the land battle for Kuwait — carved a path to the gates of its capital, dropped a forward post 50 miles into Iraq by helicopter and took at least 14,000 POWs.

The first casualties trickled into Navy Fleet Hospital Five in eastern Saudi Arabia late Sunday night. One, Marine Lance Cpl. Martin Wilcox, 34, of Seattle, insisted he felt good and wanted to return to his outfit, despite the bullet that shattered the bone in his upper left arm.

The boldest strike of the new campaign, reported by allied sources who asked anonymity, was a drop of U.S. 82nd Airborne Division paratroopers over the outskirts of Kuwait City, 50 miles north of the Saudi-Kuwait border.

Later, forward units of the U.S. 2nd Marine Division, pushing north from the frontier, also reached the edge of the Kuwaiti capital, the AP's Denis D. Gray reported from the front.

“I can't fathom the size of this operation,” said Lt. Col. Randy Bigum, an Air Force F-15C pilot back from a mission over the desert. “I can't grasp it. It's enormous.”

But a senior U.S. military source cautioned that street fighting in Kuwait City might take days if allied units meet stiff resistance. “It could be very slow,” he said.

On Saturday, the U.S. command had added a further note of urgency to the campaign to free Kuwait City, reporting that Kuwaitis were being summarily “executed” in the streets by Iraqi forces.

Hard liner

The more Mikhail Gorbachev resorts to threats and repression to keep the restive Baltic republics in line, the more determined they are to free themselves from Moscow's suffocating grip.

The depth and breadth of that determination was apparent in the recent Lithuanian election held over Gorbachev's strenuous objections. In what was described as "a festival of defiance to the Kremlin," Lithuanians overwhelmingly reaffirmed their independence from the Soviet Union.

The balloting came 11 months after Lithuania's elected representatives declared the republic's freedom. Nine of every 10 voters opted for a break with the Soviet Union, despite Gorbachev's advance warning that the vote was illegal and thus invalid. The Lithuanian landslide was all the more impressive because 10 percent of the majority consisted of ethnic Russians, Poles and others who supposedly sympathized with Moscow.

Emboldened by the resounding vote, Lithuania's President Vytautas Landsbergis has appealed to the United States to stand beside his republic as it seeks to liberate itself from five decades of Soviet domination. Gorbachev himself once conceded the legitimacy of that quest last year, for example, he condemned the 1939 Hitler-Stalin Pact, which led to the Soviet Union's forcible annexation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. The Soviet constitution, moreover, explicitly allows member republics the right of secession.

But an increasingly intolerant Gorbachev has all but abandoned perestroika and glasnost. For now, at least, he has cast his lot with Communist Party hard-liners, who crave the stability of a totalitarian regime. In January, he dispatched Soviet paratroopers and tanks to Lithuania to quell the separatist drive. Even more recent, Soviet soldiers began patrolling streets in several Baltic cities.

But Gorbachev's intimidation tactics have failed to bring the republics into line in the Baltic or elsewhere. Estonia is planning a plebiscite and is moving to privatize its socialist banking system. The republic of Georgia has approved the creation of an independent army and refused to implement Moscow's decree ordering joint street patrols by the army and police. The Russian republic has refused the decree as well and recently adopted a number of free-market reforms. And Azerbaijan has just enacted a private-property statute based on Anglo-Saxon common law.

A priority for many of the 15 republics is an independent currency upon which to base a solid economic foundation. Gorbachev has alienated much of the country with his program of currency confiscation, which is destroying what little hope remains for free-market reforms. Under such circumstances, there is scant popular support for his proposed Treaty of the Union, by which the republics could affirm their status as a part of the Soviet Union. A nationwide vote on the treaty is set for March 17.

Although purportedly designed to bestow a greater degree of independence on the republics, the treaty actually would grant absolute power to Gorbachev. This move toward dictatorship is one reason Eduard Shevardnadze resigned as foreign minister. It also helps explain why so many of those committed to democratic reform have deserted the Soviet leader.

By reversing course, Gorbachev has turned his back on the pluralistic, democratic society he once espoused. Since coming to power six years ago, he has unleashed the pent-up aspirations of a country composed of 126 nationalities. Unless these differences are reconciled, they could spin out of control.

Iraqi would be better than Arnett

Is there anything Peter Arnett is saying or doing, in his CNN broadcasts from Baghdad, that couldn't be said and done equally well by a paid agent of Saddam Hussein?

And if, as I contend, the answer to that question is "No," shouldn't CNN order Arnett home, and thereafter, if it wishes, broadcast the reports of some Iraqi stooge?

For there is one vital and inescapable difference between Arnett's reports and those of an Iraqi: No matter how often CNN precedes or follows Arnett's transmissions with the warning that they are being "monitored" by Iraqi censors, Arnett is perceived by his viewers in the United States as "our man" in Baghdad, and therefore as vastly more credible than some Iraqi spokesman, even if their statements are identical.

If Americans were shown TV scenes of a bombed building and wounded children, accompanied by the declaration of some Iraqi announcer that the building was a purely civilian structure in a wholly civilian neighborhood with no military target nearby, and that the children were wounded when American bombers attacked it, we would automatically remember to doubt these assertions. Above all, we would reject the implication that American bombers were deliberately targeting purely civilian structures and innocent civilians.

But when Arnett broadcasts from the scene, with the wreckage in the background, and says precisely what I have imagined an Iraqi saying, what do we automatically assume? Not, I think, that he is saying these things under duress. He is not under duress; as far as I know, he can leave Iraq any day he wants to. No, we assume, however reluctantly, that the statements must be true, or Arnett wouldn't be making them.

Besides, more often than not, Arnett adds personal touches that give powerful reinforcement to the basic claim. He himself has toured the surrounding area and seen no military targets; he himself has carefully inspected the basement of the Hotel al-Rashid, all doors being opened to him at his request, and has found nothing remotely like a military communications center; he himself can find no evidence that a "civilian bomb shelter" was, in fact, a vital command and control facility.

If what we instinctively accept, since it comes from Arnett, is true, only one of two explanations is possible: Either our military leaders are a bumbling bunch of Mortimer Snerds, bombing schools and mosques like some modern Don Quixote attacking windmills, or they are a smooth clique of systematic liars who are deliberately killing women and children for its presumed negative effect on civilian morale.

There are, however, considerations that apparently rank higher, with the producers at CNN and with Arnett personally, than what his reports from Baghdad may be doing to the truth, the reputations of honorable men, or the war effort of the United States.

From CNN's standpoint, there is just no question but that Saddam Hussein's decision to permit it to continue broadcasting from Baghdad has put the network "on the map" as nothing else in the realm of journalism possibly could.

We assume that the statements must be true.

Cutting cane bitter, not sweet

SOUTH BAY, Fla. — When Wilfred Brown was laid off his job in Jamaica last summer, he met a man who told him it was just as well. The man recruited people to harvest American farm products, and he said Brown could make more money and live in splendor if he signed on for seasonal employment in the land of opportunity.

So began Willie Brown's odyssey of disappointment. He came to Florida last autumn to cut sugar cane in the Everglades, and he's regretted every moment of it so far. He says he does earn a little more money in this country, but under unhappy circumstances; he says he works, lives and is treated like an animal.

"Well, maybe not like an animal. The animals I see get better handling. At least they can stop to relieve themselves. If I want to do that, I have to ask permission, and sometimes they say no. I say, 'I have to go. I can't hold it,' and they say, 'That's too bad, mister. Don't fall behind. Get back to work.'"

Brown's lament is not unusual in his business. The men and women who gather the nation's groceries have been complaining about their lot for generations. There have been scores of investigations on their behalf, and endless promises of reform, yet field hands may still have the most wretched jobs in the society.

Particularly those who cut sugar cane. Willie Brown says it is "the worst of the worst." It's so bad the laborers must be imported. Brown is one of 10,000 West Indians who've been brought to the cane lands in the past year; they've been admitted under a 1983 law that allows foreign hiring for work Americans do not want.

One reason Americans do not want to cut sugar is that it's too strenuous. Brown says, "It almost kills you." He says workers must walk between cane rows that are half a mile long, and swing a machete blade in alternating arcs, cutting first on one side, switch to the other side, back and forth without stopping.

Then there are the hours. Brown says he must get up at 4:30 a.m. to catch transportation to the fields, where he arrives at 6:30, and where he thereafter works without an appreciable break, even for lunch, until 3 in the afternoon. He says he is expected to cut a ton of sugar cane every hour, and do it seven days a week.

Brown says the pay is about $300 a week for the effort. That is about $50 more than his old job in Jamaica, but he got time off there, and he did not work nearly as hard. Besides, he says he must give his Florida employer $200 a month for meals, and he makes additional payments for personal maintenance in his shelter.

"Oh, God," he groans, "that shelter!" It's a cement-block dormitory that houses more than 300 men. He says there is no air conditioning, the toilets are often broken and the bugs march across the bunk beds like armies: "You can't get comfortable, you can't sleep, and there's no one who cares one way or the other."

Brown says no one cares because the West Indians have few labor rights in the United States. Or at least that's the way it works out.

He says some cane cutters make less than the minimum wage, others have been held up by crew bosses for extortions, and there are no overtime payments, retirement benefits or disability plans.

Worse, Brown claims the foreign workers also suffer from a lack of civil rights. He says they do not count for anything. He tells of a friend who cut his leg slightly with a machete blade, and when he asked to be taken to the hospital he was told that if he left his row he could just keep going all the way to Jamaica.

"And that's how they treat you all the time," Brown says. "If you don't do what you're told, you are sent back to the islands. If you get hurt, you are slacking. If you want to go to the toilet, you are slacking."

People who protest the treatment are also said to be slacking. But things are so bad that some of the immigrants do it anyway. Brown says he has joined a clandestine union in his camp, and it has helped part in one "work slowdown." In fact, he has partially camouflaged his name for this article to protect himself and others.

"It's not that we are doing anything wrong," he goes on. "But the growers don't see it that way. They put spies in the camps, and the crew bosses look for any little thing regarding dissatisfaction. If you are accused, you are fired on the spot, you are sent back to Jamaica, and you have to pay for your own ticket."

As it happens, Willie Brown may have to buy the ticket, pseudonym or no. He may be released for another reason. He says he got up early one morning to suit his program, and missed the truck to the fields. When he arrived an hour late, he was told to make up two hours in extra cane, which he insists was impossible.

"I don't know what I should do. I really want to leave, because this is a terrible thing for me, but I have counted on five months' worth of work. My wife is going to have a baby soon. I have more kids, too. You see how it is. I'm poor and in trouble."

There have been scores of investigations and endless promises of reform.

Executive exchange program has ills

WASHINGTON — An obscure White House program that President Bush once likened to "a hallmark of democracy" may also be a hallmark of government sleight of hand.

The President's Executive Exchange Commission recruits corporate hot shots to work in top federal posts for a year, and government bureaucrats are placed in temporary jobs with private companies.

The goal is mutual understanding, but the result has sometimes been to place corporate representatives in government agencies when their companies when their companies do business with those agencies.

Many of the participating corporations over the past two decades have been big campaign contributors to the party in power. The executives' temporary duty with the government sometimes allows them to infiltrate agencies that regulate their industries and dole out contracts to their own companies.

The leased executives enjoy perks: like last year's three-week, all-expenses-paid trip to Europe. Their mission was to talk to foreign trade and government officials.

This is the government revolving door at its most blatant. Our associate Scott Sleek looked into the executive exchange program and found that some of the job placements have pushed the limits of ethics. Officials from drug companies have gone to work for the Health and Human Services Administration. One executive with an aircraft manufacturer worked for the Federal Aviation Administration. And farm pesticide makers have set up offices in the Agriculture Department.

An executive with a major defense contractor even got a sensitive job at the Pentagon. Andrew Phelps of Bechtel Corp., an engineering and construction firm, joined the exchange in 1989. He got a senior post in the Pentagon and his job was to carry out studies and confidential projects involving research and technology in engineering — Bechtel's bread and butter. Bechtel did about $136 million worth of business for the Pentagon that year. Government lawyers check each assignment for conflicts of interest, and they cleared Phelps for the job.

Last year the federal Office of Personnel Management reviewed the exchange program and recommended that the commission pay closer attention to the ethics question. OPM cited one questionable case: John Healy, a Chicago public relations executive, was initially assigned to the Energy Department, but when that job didn't work out, he was given another post. The salary was $12,000 lower, but Healy got the higher salary and did some extra duties to earn it, like setting up photos on the European trip.

While on the government payroll, Healy was responsible for producing a brochure for the exchange commission, and he recommended that the contract go to a Chicago firm that he knew. OPM warned that the case could be interpreted as favoritism.

The commission, run by Elizabeth Heitman, has an annual budget of $1.4 million, with about one-third of that paid by participating companies.

The commission made the mistake of thinking that it didn't have to obey all federal spending rules because some of its money was private. Commission staffers were flying business class instead of coach and broke other federal spending rules. But OPM set the record straight, saying the commission got bad legal advice.

The OPM review is not the last the commission will see of scrutiny. The General Accounting Office is also looking at the commission, and so is a congressional committee headed by Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif.

This is the government revolving door at its most blatant.

Bar business plunges

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. — Business has plunged more than a third at Josh Lounge, a bar popular among Marines in this desert base town. Many of its customers are fighting in the sands of Kuwait.

But owner Kathy Mapes supports the war, even if it means some of her best customers, whose names are written on yellow ribbons all over the bar, don't come back.

"It's not as lively as it once was here," said Ms. Mapes. "But so far, I have to agree with the president. You can't give in or they'll want more and more."

Twentynine Palms is next to the giant Twentynine Palms Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center, 130 miles east of Los Angeles.

More than 6,000 Marines stationed here are in the Persian Gulf.

On Sunday, churchgoers prayed for the soldiers' safety. Many wives of Marines watched television all day, hoping for news about their husbands.

Female pilots invade enemy territory

WASHINGTON — The Persian Gulf War is bringing home to America a dramatic vision of women in uniform: Female pilots streaked into Iraq on Day One of the land battle as part of an airlift of 300 helicopters.

They were piloting Chinook supply choppers when the Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division airlifted 2,000 soldiers and equipment into Iraqi territory.

It was the first time American women soldiers flew helicopters into enemy territory as part of an invasion. Under military regulations, women are excluded from jobs directly related to combat, but they serve in many support and supply units that could be caught in battle.

The war is supplying less triumphal images of women at war as well.

Broad support for ground war, but some nations worry

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

The allied ground offensive won general political support today, but the prospect of a swift victory led some supporters to worry that U.S. objectives might go beyond driving Iraq from Kuwait.

China, the Soviet Union, India, Indonesia and Arab nations that support Saddam Hussein were among countries that either withheld support for the assault or opposed it outright.

Financial markets surged today on hopes the war would end soon. In Tokyo, the dollar soared and the Nikkei index jumped 559.95 points, closing at 26,462.76. Australia's share market had its highest close in five months.

Allied nations strongly backed the ground assault, and many newspapers joined their governments in blaming Saddam for what the Daily Telegraph Mirror in Sydney, Australia, called "bloody arrogance."

"The ground war signals the allied powers' determination not to let Iraq, and its shifty friends, snatch a political victory from the jaws of almost certain military defeat," wrote the Straits Times in Singapore.

British Prime Minister John Major said on Sunday that he was "absolutely convinced that there is no choice" but to continue the ground war until Iraq has been forced from Kuwait.

In Germany, where anti-war sentiment has been strong,

Chancellor Helmut Kohl declared "firm and inviolable support" for the assault.

Kuwait's ambassador in London, Ghazi Al-Rayes, told the allies, "Thank you for liberating my country."

"People there are suffering, waiting for you to help them," he said.

But there also was uneasiness that Bush's military solution might go beyond restoring Kuwait's sovereignty — as provided for in resolutions passed by the U.N. Security Council — to getting rid of Saddam.

"The United States should refrain from conducting military actions that might lead to an expanded interpretation of the U.N. resolutions," the Japan Economic Journal said.

"We should not make this ground war 'the war for Americans,' instead of the benefit of the U.N.'s function to maintain peace."

The Soviet Union said Bush had missed a "very real chance for peace" by not giving more of a chance to Soviet efforts at brokering a peace acceptable to both sides.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitaly Churkin complained that "the instinct to rely on a military solution prevailed, despite ... Iraq's agreement to withdraw its forces from Kuwait."

The United States rejected the peace plan, saying it was not in line with U.N. resolutions demanding that Iraq withdraw unconditionally.

British warship destroys Iraqi anti-ship missile

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Iraqi gunners fired a Chinese-made Silkworm anti-ship missile at allied warships in the northern Persian Gulf today, but the projectile was destroyed by British air defense missiles, British officials said.

The HMS Gloucester launched two Sea Dart missiles, intercepting the Chinese-made Silkworm before it hit its target, a British Ministry of Defense spokesman said in London.

The missile launch, apparently from an Iraqi shore battery, appeared to be Iraq's first use of the large land-based missiles in the Persian Gulf War and the first such retaliation against 31 British and U.S. warships shelling the Kuwait coast.

The ministry and local British authorities said the attack occurred just before 5 a.m. local time.

Officers on the bridge of another unidentified warship watched the wreckage of the Silkworm and the two Sea Darts fall into the sea, according to a British source in Riyadh.

The Silkworm is a relatively old weapon with an unsophisticated homing mechanism and is a big target. It has a 50-mile range.

The Sea Dart is designed primarily as a medium-range defense against aircraft and was used by Britain in the 1982 Falklands war. A number of Silkworm batteries have been destroyed by allied aircraft along Iraq's short gulf coastline. In addition, several of the Iraqi patrol craft damaged or sunk by coalition forces were equipped to fire the missiles.

The Silkworm, a Chinese version of the 30-year-old Soviet Styx, is a radar-guided missile. Despite its age and relatively crude technology, military officials say it is considered a potent and effective threat to ships.

During the eight-year Iraq-Iran war, Iran maintained fixed and mobile Silkworm batteries along the coast of the Strait of Hormuz, the gateway to the Persian Gulf, and in occupied areas of Iraq's Fao peninsula at the head of the Gulf.

In October 1987, two Silkworms fired from Fao hit ships at Kuwait's main Al-Ahmadi oil terminal on successive days.

The second attack severely damaged the oil products tanker Sea Isle City, a Kuwait-owned tanker that had been relagged by the United States. The U.S. Navy retaliated by destroying some Iraqi oil rigs in the central Gulf.

We are at war: Day 40

Eight allied troops reported killed

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Four Americans and four members of other allied forces were killed in action in the first day of the overland offensive to seize Kuwait, U.S. military sources said today.

The Iraqis claimed to have repulsed the allied attack, inflicting high casualties.

Neither side in the Persian Gulf War has given any count or estimate of Iraqis killed or wounded in the allied ground assault to recapture Kuwait from Iraq. An Iraqi official said earlier this month that more than 20,000 Iraqis have been killed and 60,000 wounded, but did not specify whether it meant military or civilian casualties.

With war deaths prior to Sunday's escalation, the number of allied soldiers killed in combat would be 51, including 28 Americans, and 51 missing, including 30 Americans.

U.S. casualties in the new assault had been described by Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf in a briefing on Sunday as "remarkably light" for the size of the force involved. He did not say exactly how many troops had been killed or injured, however.

The U.S. military sources reporting the eight deaths said they could not provide up-to-date figures on the number of Americans and other allied troops wounded, but said injuries, too, were "very low" considering the forces involved. The military sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

A key part of the strategy in planning for the invasion of Kuwait was to keep allied casualties to a minimum, military officials have said.

In the early stages of the offensive by thousands of allied soldiers, Army units reported no deaths while Marine divisions reported some deaths and injuries as they punched northward into Kuwait along two fronts.

In media pool reports from the field, the 2nd Marine Division said on Marine was killed an eight wounded as the unit took at least 1,500 Iraqis prisoner in its drive up the coast toward Kuwait City.

Farther west, the 1st Marine Division reported two Marines killed, nine wounded and more than 3,200 Iraqis captured. Media pool reports also quoted Marine officers as saying one Marine AV-8B Harrier jet had crashed and the pilot was missing.

Reporters saw some of the first wounded of the ground invasion — eight Americans — arrive at Navy Fleet Hospital 5 in Eastern Saudi Arabia late Sunday.

One of them was a Marine with a bullet wound in the arm. Another had shrapnel wounds from a land mine that he said had killed one of his friends.

Exile groups waiting to move into Bagdad

Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — A shaky alliance of exile groups opposed to Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein is waiting to move into Baghdad if the government falls in the Persian Gulf War.

But some anti-Saddam leaders fear that differences between the groups — ranging from Communists to Kurdish guerrillas to Islamic fundamentalists — could plunge postwar Iraq into civil strife.

The fundamentalists want to establish an Iranian-style Islamic republic. The Communists, liberals and nationists want a secular Iraq. The main Kurdish guerrilla groups have presented themselves as a political alternative to Saddam and his Arab Baath Socialist Party, pledging democratic elections and reforms.

A Europe-based opposition figure said of the groups' alliance: "It's like taking your marriage vows while making plans in your head for a divorce." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

About 250 opposition figures from the various groups are expected to meet, possibly in Europe, early next month to try to agree on a manifesto.

JUCO BASKETBALL

SCC starts journey

ORLANDO — If the Seminole Community College men's basketball team is to earn a spot in the state tournament it will have to do it the hard way. Not only will the Raiders have to win three games in a row, they'll have to do it away from home.

That road starts tonight when SCC opens the Mid-Florida Conference Tournament at Valencia Community College starting at 7:30 p.m.

Making things even tougher for the Raiders is a rash of injuries that have hit the team. The latest was a broken arm suffered by center Lealie Cephus last Wednesday. Cephus joins Robert Moore (broken hand) and Tony DeJesus (broken foot) on the shelf. Forwards Darnell Robinson (thumb) and Dennard Ford (ankle, back) have also been slowed by injuries.

The schedule for the MFC playoffs were determined by the finishing order in the regular season. Lake City and Central Florida tied for the regular season title with 11-3 records but Lake City gets the automatic bid to the state tournament because it beat Central Florida twice. The Patriots get a first round bye and will host the final four Wednesday and Thursday.

The third through fifth place finishers (Daytona Beach, Florida C.C. and Valencia) get to host games tonight. SCC ended up sixth, so they will play at No. 5 Valencia.

In other games tonight Santa Fe will play at Daytona Beach and St. John's River will play at Florida Community College-Jacksonville. The winners go to Ocala for games Wednesday.

State champion x 3

Campos, Larum, Times earn wrestling crowns

From staff reports

WEST PALM BEACH — What's better than one state champion? How about two? How about three?

That's what Seminole County high schools came away with this past weekend at the Class 4A Florida High School State Wrestling Tournament at the West Palm Beach Auditorium.

Lyman junior Willie Campos completed a perfect 32-0 season by winning the state title at 119 pounds. Oviedo senior Kyle Larum claimed the state crown at 171 and Lake Howell junior Ken Times won the state championship at 220.

Each of the trio participated in the state tournament last year. Larum finished second at 171 last year while Campos managed to get past the second round but was eliminated in the semifinals. For Times, this was his third trip to the state meet.

As if merely winning state titles weren't enough, Campos, Larum and Times did it impressive fashion. Campos earned his state championship by scoring a 15-6 major decision over Plantation's Fred Berrian. Larum and Times both won their title matches by pin. Larum (31-1) sticking Miami-Southridge's Mike Griffith at 3:52 of the second period while Times, who didn't wrestle until after Christmas this year because of an injury, nailed Miami-Southwest's Omar Andres in 5:19 of the final period.

Lake Howell's Brendan Buckley was the only other county wrestler to place at the state meet this year, finishing fourth at 130 after dropping a 9-6 decision to Miami Beach's James Marus in the consolation finals.

In the team standings, the Oviedo Lions were Seminole County's top finisher, scoring 44 points to finish sixth. The Lake Howell Silver Hawks were seventh with 37 points.

Coming in 12th were the Lyman Greyhounds with a team score of 26. The Lake Brantley Patriots, who won the District 4 and the Region 1 team championships, and the Lake Mary Rams, who had won the last seven district and regional titles, were tied for 27th with nine points.

Brandon High School of Hillsborough County won its sixth team title with a score of 108 points, easily out-distancing second-place Miami-Western (85).

At last year's state tournament, Lyman was the top county finisher, placing 11th with 32 points. Lake Mary (24) and Oviedo (23.5) were 14th and 15th, respectively. Lake Brantley (13) finished in a three-way tie for 37th and Lake Howell (5) was tied for 50th.

OCS Rams claim first hoop title

From staff reports

MAITLAND — Orangewood Christian School held off a late charge by top-seeded Melbourne Central Catholic to post a 52-48 win in the championship game of the 1A-District 8 girls' basketball tournament Saturday night.

Earlier in the season, Melbourne Central Catholic defeated Orangewood Christian 50-48. Melbourne Central Catholic, which had a 9-0 record against Class 1A opponents coming into Saturday's game, ends its season 13-9.

It was Orangewood Christian's the first district tournament in basketball. The Rams, now 21-8, advance to play in the 1A-Region IV championship game Tuesday night at Hawthorne.

On Saturday, Orangewood Christian's Liz Hufford scored a team-high 18 points on 6-for-8 shooting from the field. She also had five rebounds, five steals and five assists.

Christa Hogan added 15 points, a team-leading 12 rebounds, five steals and four assists. Kristy Dwyer contributed five rebounds and four steals.

For Melbourne Central Catholic, Kelly Harrell tied Hufford for game-high scoring honors with 18. Cris Waterhouse chipped in with 15 points and eight rebounds.

The Rams jumped out to a 16-8 lead after one quarter of play and extended by a point, 27-16, by halftime. Orangewood Christian led 37-26 going into the fourth quarter, when Melbourne Central Catholic outscored its host 22-15.

In Friday night's semifinal games, Hufford scored 25 points on Friday night to lead Orangewood Christian past Luther 85-54 while Waterhouse netted 18 and Harrell had 14 as Melbourne Central Catholic defeated Lake Highland Prep 58-37.

will play in the 3A-District 6 tournament at Edgewater while Alonzo Brundidge (No. 15, right) and Lake Mary will take part in the 4A-District 9 tournament.

Dunbar's, Boys-Girls Club post victories

From staff reports

SANFORD — Tenneshia Eason poured in 25 points as Dunbar's crushed the Rec's 42-14 in Sanford Recreation Department Girls' Basketball League play at Lakeview Middle School Saturday morning.

In the other game, Latonya Farmer and Danyelle Robertson combined for 30 points as the Boys/Girls Club mashed Sunniland 38-4.

Eason got Dunbar's off to a good start by scoring nine first-quarter points to lead her teammates to a 11-6 lead after the first quarter. It didn't get much better in the second period as Dunbar's outscored the Rec's 11-4 to take a 22-10 lead into the break.

Eason had 15 first-half points while Yolanda Baker chipped in with seven.

The rout continued in the second half as Dunbar's outscored the Rec's 16-3 in the third stanza and 4-1 in the fourth.

In addition to Eason's 25, Cox also finished in double figures with 11. Also scoring for Dunbar's were Shantika Eason (four) and Sentia Barnes (two).

Rena Thompson and Dana Merrick did the scoring for the Rec's with nine and five points, respectively.

Farmer tossed in 18 points and Robertson added 12 to pace the Boys/Girls Club to the mauling of Sunniland. But even more impressive than the scoring was the Boys/Girls Club defense which held Sunniland scoreless for the first three periods.

Robertson and Farmer scored six points each in the first period as the Club took a 12-0 lead. The lead was 24-0 at the half as Robertson added six more second period points. The second half was much closer, the Boys/Girls Club outscoring Sunniland 6-0 in the third quarter and 8-4 in the fourth.

Also scoring for the Boys/Girls Club were Lahoma Falson (four) and Kizzy Vernans and Shevelle Robertson (two points each).

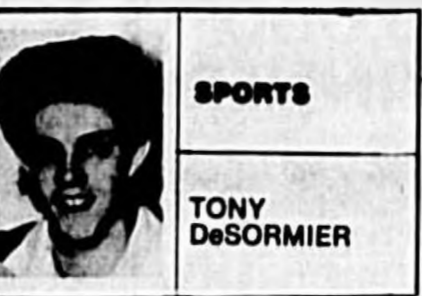

Shawana Montgomery scored all four points for Sunniland.

Wrestling champs ease basketball disappointments

It's been that kind of year. On Saturday night, three Seminole County athletes won individual state championships while the Seminole High School girls' basketball team, normally as predictable as death, taxes and the seasons, saw its season suddenly end.

While it's not unusual for Seminole County wrestlers to do well at the state tournament, three individuals won state titles this year — Lyman's Willie Campos, Oviedo's Kyle Larum and Lake Howell's Ken Times.

What compounded the uniqueness of it was how it coincided with the Seminoles' elimination from the state basketball playoffs. Last year, the Tribes advanced to the sectionals before being eliminated. The year before, Seminole lost in double overtime in the state championship game.

SPORTS

And there wasn't even a full moon out.

In reality, neither occurrence is all that extraordinary. Campos, Larum and Times all have experience at the state tournament. Last year, Larum was second in his weight class while Campos wrestled his way out of the second round. For Times, a junior, this was his third straight trip to the state meet.

On the other hand, the St. Cloud Bulldogs were ranked No. 8 in last week's Florida Sports Writer Association's Class 3A state poll while Seminole was ranked No. 5. Also, St. Cloud's Dana Smith and Stephanie Eken are considered to be among Central Florida's top players.

Even so, three state wrestling champions and not even a district title in girls' basketball will make the 1990-91 school year a memorable one.

While there may be no way to check it, the Lake Brantley High School girls' basketball team may have set a new state record this season by having four team members whose first name was a variation on 'Christine.'

Playing for the Patriots this season this year were Kristi Wilson, Christa Schroefel, Kristen Forst and Kristen Ariza.

All they needed was someone like Orangewood Christian's Christa Hogan to round out a starting five.

Pinellas County, specifically the city of Clearwater, pulled off an interesting perfect in claiming two of the three boys' soccer state championships on Saturday night.

Clearwater-Countryside, and Clearwater Central Catholic, which are about 10 miles apart, defeated Winter Park and Bishop Moore, less than 10 miles apart, for the titles in Class 4A and Class 2A, respectively.

SANFORD — Church of God of Prophecy and Sanford Christian emerged as the early leaders in the "A" and "B" Divisions of the Sanford Church Softball Spring League this past Saturday at Pinehurst Park.

In the "A" Division, Church of God of Prophecy walloped Central Baptist 24-10. St. Stephen Catholic stymied Neighborhood Alliance 14-4 and First United Methodist took the measure of Holy Cross Lutheran 18-9.

In the "B" Division, Sanford Christian nipped Church of God 7-5. Holy Cross Lutheran skinned past Markham Woods First Baptist 20-10 and First Nazarene of Sanford pulverized Grace Christian 14-3.

Prepare your spring garden

The spring vegetable gardening season is just a few weeks away. March is the time to plant, and now is the time to prepare your garden.

The most physical part of vegetable gardening is preparing the soil. You can rent a rototiller to do this or you can use a shovel or hoe if the area is smaller. Large clods of soil need to be broken up and debris should be removed.

The garden soil should be tilled or broken up a few weeks before you plan to plant. The grass or weeds that you turn over need a few weeks to decompose before planting. If you plan to add organic materials to the garden like manures or grass clippings, these materials especially need a few weeks to decompose. They can reach very high temperatures in the decomposition process which may be harmful to your newly developing seedlings.

Adding organic matter is very important because our sandy soils retain very little moisture and nutrients. Organic materials like compost, grass clippings, manures and leaves make great organic amendments and help the soil retain water and nutrients. Add a two or three inch layer and incorporate well.

A soil test is your next step in soil preparation. A pH test will indicate whether you need to add lime or sulfur to raise or lower your pH. We perform soil testing on Mondays and Thursdays at 9 a.m. at the Agriculture Center. Our pH test costs $1.50.

GARDENING

CELESTE WHITE

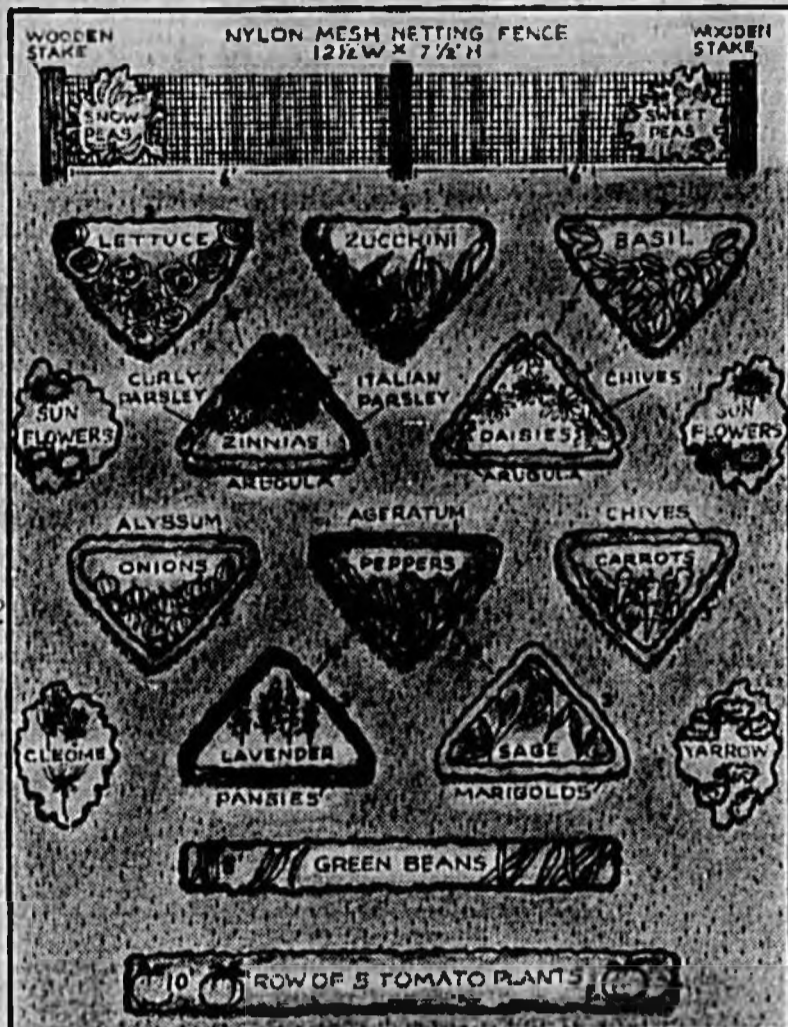

If the pH test indicates that you need to add lime or sulfur, they need to be added to the garden a few weeks before you plant also. Never add lime or sulfur unless you have had a soil test indicate the need to do so. If you had your soil tested a year or two ago, then you probably can skip it this year.

Nematodes control is another task that you need to do a few weeks before you plant. Nematodes are soil-borne parasites that invade the root system of the vegetables and reduce the vigor of the plant. Damage by nematodes reveals stubby, swollen or distorted roots.

Nematode control can be achieved by either using a soil fumigant called Vapam or by a process called soil solarization. Information on either process is available from the Extension Service.

Once you have prepared the soil, adjusted the soil pH if necessary, incorporated organic materials and controlled the nematodes, you are ready to plant the garden.

A seminar focusing on the basics of vegetable gardening for beginners will be held on Wednesday, March 6, from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. at the Seminole County Agriculture Center Auditorium. The program is free and open to the public. For more information, just give me a call. Celeste White is the Seminole County Urban Horticulturist, 323-2500, Ext. 5558.

American way of death complicated

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent, "Unfinished Business," attended a friend's funeral and was "dismayed to learn that the family had decided to have a closed-coffin burial," thereby denying a visual farewell and the opportunity to better cope with reality. As you rightly pointed out, the next-of-kin have the final say in such matters.

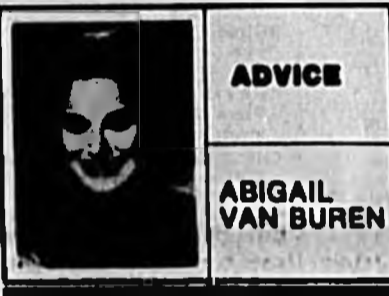

A word of amplification: The open-casket funeral is unique to the United States and Canada. In no other country is the bizarre ritual of "viewing" the deceased a part of any funeral service.

In the 1920s, a public relations spokesman for the funeral industry coined the phrase "Beautiful Memory Picture" to describe the embalmed and pretified cadaver in a suitably costly casket.

The funeral industry has long tried to convince the public that "viewing" is essential to what they are pleased to call "grief therapy," swallowed whole by the likes of "Unfinished Business." If that is so, how come it isn't practiced in England, France, Germany, etc.?

To the contrary, an English jurist wrote that a public exhibition of an embalmed body as that of Lenin in Moscow, would in England be considered a revolting spectacle and therefore a public nuisance.

Readers looking for a simple and inexpensive funeral should write to the Continental Associa-

JESSICA MITFORD (AUTHOR OF "THE AMERICAN WAY OF DEATH")

DEAR JESSICA MITFORD: How well I remember the bombshell your book created in 1963. "The American Way of Death" rode the best-seller list for a year. And in its wake (no pun intended) was spawned a new generation of Americans who would bury their loved ones without feelings of guilt or embarrassment.

Previously, too many poor people went into debt for lavish, expensive funerals because they were emotionally stressed at the time, and felt that the amount of money they spent on their final farewell was an indication of how much they valued the deceased. Utter balderdash!

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago when I moved to Arizona, a clerk in a small business establishment asked, "What is your name?"

"Springer," I responded. "No, no, I mean, like what should I call you?" she asked. "Mrs. Springer," I replied succinctly.

Not two weeks later, I received a telephone call from our priest.

He said, "Hello, Sherri, this is Father (so-and-so)."

Abby, am I super-sensitive to be bothered by this rudeness? I think not; I believe I am entitled to a little courtesy. My solution is to patronize no establishment where this rudeness occurs whether the product is cheeseburgers or religion. Am I wrong?

MRS. SPRINGER IN MESA

DEAR MRS. SPRINGER: Yes, it's your privilege to patronize whomever you choose for your own reasons, but don't write off your priest as "rude" because he addressed you by your given name. You could be denying yourself a superior spiritual leader.

Hypothyroidism bigger problem if it's ignored

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss sluggish thyroid in the elderly. I am a healthy 80-year-old woman who cannot tolerate Synthroid. My doctor suggests no other alternative.

DEAR READER: Although hypothyroidism can affect all ages, as people grow older, they can develop a naturally occurring waning thyroid function. In its mild form, the thyroid deficiency causes lassitude and constipation. As time progresses, however, and the thyroid gland produces less and less hormone, more serious consequences become apparent. These include loss of hair, intolerance to cold weather, depression, slow pulse, fatigue and heart failure. Such symptoms reflect a slowing of body metabolism that is not age-related.

Because good health depends on a proper amount of thyroid hormone, hypothyroid patients must take supplemental thyroid pills to make up for the glandular deficiency. This medicine is readily available by prescription and is inexpensive.

Several types of thyroid replacement are commonly used, ranging from thyroid extract to synthesized, purified substances, such as Synthroid.

I have never heard of a hypothyroid patient who could not tolerate Synthroid, given in a suitable daily dose. Problems develop when patients are given too much, resulting in doctor-induced hyperthyroidism—too much thyroid hormone, causing overstimulation.

I suspect you could tolerate Synthroid if your doctor were to adjust the dose, according to blood tests that measure your level of thyroid hormone. If you are truly reacting to the Synthroid, your physician should consider changing brands—for example, to Euthroid, Levothyroid or Cytomel, three popular alternatives.

In any case, hypothyroid patients need treatment. Ask your doctor to consider prescribing one of the brands I have mentioned and make sure he or she follows up with appropriate blood tests to document the proper dose. As a final option, you could request a referral to an endocrinologist, a physician trained in the diagnosis and treatment of glandular disorders, including thyroid deficiency. Working together, the two doctors should be able to arrive at the suitable amount (and type) of thyroid hormone.

I am sending you a free copy of

Answer to Previous Puzzle

By James Jacoby

New York Times bridge editor Alan Truscott has a winner with his latest book, "Intermediate Bridge in Three Weeks" (Perigee Books). The book describes how a vacationing bridge player visits his uncle Sam, an expert at the game, to get some hints on improving his play. Sam's instructions on theory are interspersed with exciting deals like this one.

You hold the South cards and arrive at six hearts after Sam has shown a maximum no-trump with heart support by cue-bidding four clubs over three hearts. When the queen of spades is led, you play low from dummy and then ruff the second spade. You play two rounds of hearts ending in dummy and ruff another spade. But the ace does not fall, and you go down one.

Sam points out how you should have made the contract. After ruffing the second spade, it's fine to play two rounds of trumps ending in dummy. But now ruff a spade, go to the ace of diamonds and ruff the last spade. Get back to dummy with the ace of clubs and pitch your queen of clubs on the king of hearts as you draw the opponent's last trump. The diamonds are now all good and you make your slam.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Feb. 26, 1991

You could be extremely lucky in the fulfillment of your ambitions in the year ahead, especially those that are of a material, rather than an esthetic, nature.

PIECES (Feb. 20-March 20) You might not get out of the starting gate as fast as your competitors do today, but you're a good runner down the stretch. When the final score is tallied, you should be ahead of them. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have a knack today for improving upon the ideas and suggestions of others in ways that make them more beneficial for all parties concerned. It will be used constructively.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're in a favorable trend where your finances are concerned. You could be lucky in generating a greater yield from something that is already producing quite handsomely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An endeavor in which you're presently involved is sorely in need of leadership. This role is tailored to your capabilities, so don't leave decisions up to others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't be hesitant to play your hunches today, especially in your commercial affairs — even if they induce you to do something daring that you've never previously tried.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though developments may not have lived up to what you had anticipated, do not lower your hopes and expectations at this time. Things will get better if you're persistent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You should be an excellent strategist today, particularly when confronted by competitive developments. Success is likely if you rely upon your mind and not your muscle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The same tactics and procedures that worked effectively for you recently could work for you again today, even though you might have to deal with a new set of players.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do a bit more detective work today regarding a situation about which you've been suspicious. The information that has been eluding you can now be uncovered.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Conditions in general look rather encouraging for you today, but things you do with the aid of partners could really be the big standouts. It might be wise to give them priority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Changes you've been hoping for where your career is concerned could start taking place today. It's a favorable tide and you'll do well riding the waves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone who has been lucky for you in the past could be equally as fortunate for you in the present. This individual may talk to you today about an arrangement in which you may be invited to participate.
