Drug tests for welfare recipients?

By STEVE BARNES
Herald Staff Writer

Participants in public assistance programs will have to submit to drug testing to remain eligible to receive benefits if a bill currently under consideration in the Florida Legislature becomes law.

The bill, HB 401, would require participants in public assistance programs such as Medicaid and WAGES (Work and Gain Economic Self Sufficiency), to submit to drug testing if they are suspected of using or possessing controlled substances. Participants who refuse to submit to testing would no longer be eligible to receive assistance until they submit to the testing or are no longer suspected of the violation.

Program participants who test positive for illegal drug use initially would be required to take a second test to confirm those results. If the test results show evidence of illegal drug use, the Department of Children and Family Services will provide appropriate drug abuse treatment services to assist the participant to fulfill the required work activities of the WAGES program. Those who refuse to be tested, or who refuse treatment after testing positive, would be barred from receiving any further benefits.

Testing would be required only of those participants who are reasonably suspected of drug use by department employees. In addition, the employee who suspects drug use must get a concouring recommendation from his or her supervisor before requiring testing. Reasonable suspicion of drug use would be based on one of the fol-

Help! Firefighters rally to keep EMS service

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County's firefighters are circulating red lettered pamphlets entitled "HELP! Your Firefighters Need Your Help Now."

Informed, they say, because three members of the Board of County Commissioners are ignoring the people who elected them to office, the firefighters union has been making pamphlets to home owners associations and to certain individuals.

"We've sent several thousand out so far," union president Dick Criswell said. "We already have enormous support. Many residents are voicing their opinion to the commissioners, but three of them (commissioners Win Adams, Dick Van Der Weide and Grant Madox) are ignoring the people."

Criswell and a swarm of firefighters were engaged at Tuesday's Board of Commissioners meeting when a 3-2 vote (Chairman Randy Morris and Commissioner David McLean were against) by the BCC approved a Request For Proposal that allows private companies as well as the county's fire/rescue division to submit bids to treat and transport patients to hospitals.

The firefighters say the BCC is about to dismantle the county's highly respected, first response system by "giving away" EMS care to a private company.

SANFORD — About three dozen Seminole County students earned awards from the Tandy Corporation recently for their outstanding work in science, math and computer science.

The 1997 Tandy Technology Scholars Prize recipients were honored recently with certificates and cash prizes.

"The Tandy Corporation has many goals, chief among them is to be a good citizen, particularly in the area of education," said John V. Roach, chairman and chief executive officer of the Tandy Corporation.

The company recognized nearly 40,000 bright young scholars across the country this year as a part of its Technology Scholars program.

The program is funded by the Tandy Corporation and administered by Texas Christian University.

Nearly 80 percent of all secondary schools in the United States are enrolled in this educational initiative. It is open to all accredited high schools.

The recipients were selected by a panel of distinguished educators and approved by the Tandy Scholars National Advisory Council.

"We are astonished and hugely pleased at the growth, response and national recognition of the program," Ned Borchin, president of Keystone College and member of the national advisory council, said.

The following Seminole County students were honored with prizes of certificates this year:

Family bonds grow stronger

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

Windia Richardson Gibson has been up and down for the last year or so. On April 2, 1997, Windia was given new life in the form of a kidney donated by her brother Leroy Richardson.

Windia smiles when she talks about the hero in her life. She says she has one and she knows that he has been her hero for many years. Her hero is courageous and is a brother who is always willing to give his all. He is a leader, strong in will, heart and caring.

Leroy received these qualities from their late father says Windia. Their father passed when she was 14 years old (killed in a cowardly act-an innocent bystander that was shot to death while talking to friends). She says her brother became a father figure to her at an early age. They both remember their father who has left an everlasting impression of those 14 years. He taught his siblings the importance of work and worth.

Windia's unsung hero has been in her corner for many years. In fact, he has worked ever since their father died. Her hero is a genuine person that has worked a full-time and two part-time jobs while also attending Temple University. There

Trees cause a big stir in downtown Sanford

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Senior Staff Writer

The City of Sanford has been designated as a Tree City USA, but some residents say the city is less than "tree friendly" when it comes to the oaks in the downtown historic district.

A group of residents was recently represented by the city for their efforts to plant oaks along Oak Avenue in the residential district and several people have complained that several seemingly-healthy trees have been "red tagged" for removal from along First Street.

According to Howard Jeffries, the city's ground maintenance coordinator, certain procedures, including filling out an "arbor permit," must be followed when planting trees in the historic district.

"While I commend them for their efforts," Jeffries wrote to Julia Goeb, president of the Sanford Historic Trust, when it came to his attention that some members of her group had been planting oaks sans permission, "I must remind them that they must follow city procedures."

Jeffries went on to remind the planters that "live oaks become very large trees, which also means they must have sufficient room to grow."

Bob Cassels, one of those who had taken it upon himself to plant the trees, said he made the effort in order to help beautify the area and to increase the value of the homes in the district.

"Trees raise property values," Cassels said. "Everyone knows that."

Cassels and the others who planted the trees did so at their own expense and on their own time, Goeb noted in her response to Jeffries' letter.

Cassels said they were aware of the arbor application, but felt it was intimidating and unnecessary.

"Have you seen that form?" he asked. "Look at it. It's intimidating. They just don't want anyone planting trees."

The one page form asks for information regarding the name, address and telephone number of both the planter and the owner of the property on which the trees are planted as well as information regarding the size and location of all trees on the property and of those planned for the planting project.

"We're just trying to make the downtown historic district more beautiful," Cassels said.

Jeffries also noted that the city had plans to plant 40 or more trees in the downtown residential historic district "within the near future."

As for the oaks that have been slated for removal along First Street, Jeffries said those trees are diseased.

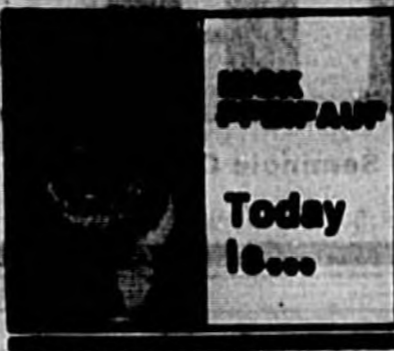

They have been examined, he explained, and it has been determined that they can not be saved. They are scheduled to be cut down within the next month.

"I want to see proof that those beautiful trees are diseased," Cassels said. "And I want to see an arbor form filled out."

Jeffries said he could provide both.

The trees which are removed will be replaced.

More World War II anniversaries

1945. American and Filipino prisoners were held together by Japanese soldiers on Bataan to mark what became known as the Death March, to Camp O'Donnell, near Cabanatuan. During the six-day march, they were only given one bowl of rice. Over 5,200 Americans and many more Filipinos lost their lives in that march.

And while we're on the subject of World War II, today is the anniversary of the liberation of Buchenwald Concentration Camp near Weimar, Germany on April 10, 1945. It was the first of the Nazi camps to be liberated. Established in 1937, it is estimated that 66,000 people died there before Allied troops took it from Nazi control. Today is the anniversary of the birth of William Booth in 1829. He is the founder of the movement combining military and religion in London's East End, in 1865. The name of the organization was officially changed to Salvation Army in 1878. In observance of the birthdate, today is officially considered as Salvation Army Founder's Day.

At Wayne State University in Detroit, they are scheduled to have a mock funeral for winter today. Many fun-filled events are scheduled to celebrate what they hope will be the last of the cold weather for this season. I hope the event does them some good. I was there on Easter Sunday and it snowed. This is also National Siblings Day, to honor all brothers and sisters who are living and memorialize those who have died.

In historic birthdays, U.S. Navy Commodore Matthew Perry was born in 1794; Rifleman Chuck Connors was born in 1921; American journalist Joseph Pulitzer was born in 1847.

For today's birthdays, sportscaster John Earl Madden is 61; sportscaster Joe Don Meredith is 59; and Harry Morgan (Col. Potter on M*A*S*H) is 62.

As mentioned yesterday, the official anniversary of Bataan Day was held in the Philippines. Yesterday's observance was in honor of the fall of Bataan in 1942. One day later, April 10,

What's the buzz?

The youngsters at Longwood Elementary School recently put on a musical presentation designed to make the audience just a little bit buggy. The cast, of course, was already that way. "Goin' Buggy" was presented by all the classes of the school. They told the stories of bugs throughout history and lore. Above, Little Miss Muffet (fifth grader Tracy Latimer) is surprised by an aggressive arachnid (fourth grader Laura Peter). At left, the entire buggy cast danced their way across the stage and into the hearts of the audience. At left, below, the cast prepares to go on stage and to protect for the Bugs' Bill of Rights under the direction of music teacher Alice J. Kae. The students were selected for the play from every class. They made their own costumes, with help from teachers and parents and helped design their own make up.

Lethal injection a better choice

If it ain't broke, don't fix it. The problem is, Old Sparky apparently is broken, but rather than fix it, perhaps the state should consider putting it into retirement.

Known as Old Sparky, Florida's electric chair appears to have a malfunction. It was noted for the second time during the March 25 execution of convicted killer Pedro Medina. When the switch was thrown, a short caused flames to shoot several inches out of the mask being worn by Medina.

Naturally, the prison medical specialist immediately announced that it did not cause any undue pain for Medina, who was supposed to be already dead by the time the flames were noticed.

This is the second time this has happened. The first time was in May of 1980, during the execution of another convicted murderer, Jesse Tafero.

Many decades ago, the common death penalty was hanging. Then, one by one, states eliminated that method in favor of the electric chair. It was more humane, they reasoned.

Recently, states have taken another step, and changed the execution process to the use of a lethal injection. Again, they say it is more humane.

Yes, without question, there are many people who would prefer the complete elimination of all forms of death sentences. Their point of view, and well taken, is that no one should have the right to take another's life.

Unfortunately, there are some, such as Medina and Tafero, who apparently don't support this. They kill. Then, try to convince friends and family members of the persons who were murdered that the death penalty is wrong. Most of them demand an eye for an eye, and fully approve of the death sentence.

But whether or not to continue that form of punishment is a question which is not going to be answered easily or in the near future.

What must be determined however, is that the state should not become involved in repairing or replacing Old Sparky. Toss it out, put it in a museum, or blow it to kingdom come. But let's eliminate it, and if the death penalty must continue, use the lethal injection method as do the majority of other states.

On gain time

I read with great concern, disgust, and anger about the ruling of the United States Supreme Court concerning "gain time" which will be freeing close to 3,000 violent felons including murderers, rapists, and robbers throughout your fine state.

This is an affront to all law-abiding Floridians and shows a complete disregard for your welfare. If the courts cannot assure your safety, then it is up to you all to exercise your Second Amendment rights as set forth in the Constitution of the United States and take up arms in order to defend yourselves against these menaces to society. I would also urge that where some of the victims or victims' families fear a reprisal or return of a perpetrator, or illicit continuation of their lives, that they not wait for the criminals to act first.

To Sheriff McDougal of Lee County and law enforcement leaders statewide: I understand the need for law and order. But it is precisely because of the higher courts' fallibility that the citizenry will need to resort to their authority as outlined in the United States Constitution. I ask that you be understanding of any such actions that may be taken in good faith for their safety.

This must be a very trying time for all of you. My God be with you, I'm sure a jury would. With utmost concern,

Becoming colorblind in America

WASHINGTON--Years ago, when she was a waitress living in suburban Philadelphia, my friend Anita often baby-sat some neighbors, two "adorable" girls of 10 and 7. One day, the older child asked her, "Do you think black is beautiful?" Anita, who is white, said, "Yeah." Clearly, the girl wanted to discuss the issue. When she asked her why, Anita recalls now, the girl "looked at me as if to say, 'You fool' and responded, 'Because I'm black.'"

Somewhat, Anita hadn't noticed. Now a Washington journalist, Anita recalls being "stunned. ... I looked at her and thought, 'Of course, she is!'"

"I'd never thought of the girls as being anything (but) my neighbors," she continues. "I'm blushing saying this because I'm supposed to be a trained observer. ... I was aware that they had a wonderful skin color--they were brown-skinned kids--but I swear it never entered my mind that we were of different races. I didn't discount it--I never thought it."

"If you're thinking, 'No way,' I don't blame you. I believed Anita only because I knew her warmth and sometimes painful honesty. Still, I remember wondering:

How does one even briefly become colorblind in America?

How does one even briefly become colorblind in America?

Now easily. Many people, like Ellis Cose, author of the new book "Color-Blind: Seeing Beyond Race in a Race-Obsessed World," doubt colorblindness is even possible.

"But the phrase remains part of the language ... and can reflect a lot of denial," says Cose, 46, who's black. "Folks show that white people have largely decided racism is not a serious problem. ... They say, 'Sure, there are some crazy racists around, but America has gotten over it.'"

But although it's terribly dishonest to say racism has disappeared, Cose says, "It's equally dishonest to say there hasn't been any progress."

When asked by young people to respond to the notion that black folks' lot hasn't improved since the Jim Crow era, Cose has said, "Problems still exist, but you are not legally barred from entering institutions ... or attending certain schools. You don't face an opportunity structure that says unless you're terribly exceptional, you'll work in a menial job."

"For some people, things are worse ... but because the economy changed," Cose continues. "Other blacks fear losing the moral high ground if they acknowledge some good things have happened ... that people will say, 'See--we don't need ... affirmative action, economic development.'"

But a vast middle ground exists between thinking nothing, and everything, has changed. Most blacks and whites believe the truth is in the middle--they just don't agree where.

Some 80 percent of that money was spent on enlistees who were discharged during the first two months.

Millions are wasted on washout recruits

WASHINGTON--There was quite an uproar when millionaire boxer Riddick Bowe approached Marine boot camp as if it were supposed to be a fun-filled fantasy camp.

Shortly after his arrival at Parris Island, Bowe decided the rigors of basic training weren't for him. He was promptly discharged by officials who realized that the former heavyweight champ wasn't one of the few good men they were looking for.

An embarrassed Bowe--who held a New York press conference to announce he was enlisting in the elite Marine reserves--quickly returned to the lavish suburban Maryland lifestyle he's grown accustomed to in recent years. Bowe's little misadventure with the Marines cost taxpayers about $5,000.

But lost in the hoopla over the Bowe fiasco is the fact that pampered prize fighters aren't the only ones wasting the military's time and money. Here's something for Capitol Hill budget crunchers to chew on: The armed services spent approximately $390 million in 1986 to recruit and train individuals who never even made it to their first duty station.

Some 80 percent of that money--$31.8 million--was spent on enlistees who were discharged during their first two months of service. Like Bowe, most of these individuals simply couldn't handle basic training, which lasts from 6 to 12 weeks.

Congressional investigators at the General Accounting Office found that recruiters aren't careful enough when screening prospective enlistees. Frequently slipping through the cracks are drug users and people with medical disorders that make them unfit for military service.

These recruits make it through what investigators call an "inadequate" screening process, only to be discharged when their problems are discovered during basic training. Some recruits are too out-of-shape to withstand the physical trials of boot camp. And still other simply lack the necessary motivation, and are discharged when their case appears hopeless.

By then, however, taxpayers have already spent $83 to ship the recruit to basic training, $91 for a medical exam, $146 per day for salary, food and housing, and $617 to 6996 for clothing. To add insult to injury, it costs an additional $83 to ship the recruit home once he or she has been discharged. The Navy estimates that the average recruit who doesn't make it through basic training costs taxpayers at least $4,700.

Recruiters--eager to enlist as many prospective trainees as they can--don't have the proper incentive to weed out individuals unlikely to make it through basic training, according to a recent GAO report on the subject. In an effort to correct this problem, the Navy has started penalizing recruiters whose enlistees can't hack basic training.

But overzealous recruiters aren't the only ones to blame. The recruiting process itself is full of flaws. It's fairly easy, for example, for prospective recruits to cover up medical problems that would normally serve as a red-flag warning that they shouldn't be attending boot camp. "The medical screening forms contain vague and ambiguous questions, and may be easy for applicants to falsify," the GAO writes.

Another problem is drug testing. The Navy and Marine Corps don't test recruits until they've already arrived at basic training. Thousands of dollars per recruit who's discharged for drug use could be saved if drug testing was done before the enlistee is shipped off.

My life as Wanda Koolmatrie

BOSTON--So much for Wanda Koolmatrie. The byline on a prize-winning memoir has been relegated to a footnote in the annals of literary hoaxes.

It turns out that the book hailed in Australia as the "lively gaily story of an urban Aboriginal girl" was the work of a 47-year-old white man. Wanda Koolmatrie's "My Own Sweet Time" was in fact Leon Carmen's own sweet revenge on his country's literary establishment.

Carving his self-defense, Carmen insisted that he was forced into literary cross-dressing by the publishers and awards juries who discriminate against white men. "I can't get published," he pointed to the press, "but Wanda can."

When I first heard this story I had trouble believing that Australia had become a hotbed or reverse discrimination. I still do. But as the news crept from Down Under to Up Over, it lodged in my memory as something other than an Aussie whine about political correctness.

My bet is that Carmen hit the literary jackpot because he switched genres, not genders. Today, the memoir's the thing, in this country too, the first person trumps the third person in publishing. The memoir is taking over from the novel.

In recent weeks, two of the top three best sellers in New York City were Frank McCourt's memoir of his Irish childhood, "Angela's Ashes" and Kathryn Harrison's memoir of incest, "The Kiss." Before that it was Mary Karr's "The Liars' Club" and the Delany sisters' "Having Our Say."

Across the country, the hottest writing workshops are now called "Memoirs." Many of our most accomplished novelists, from William Styron to my friend James Carroll, are finding wider audiences for the stories of their real lives. Indeed, the $1 million dollar sensation of the literary season is the memoir by unknown 98-year-old Jessie Lee Brown.

What has tripped this sudden craving for memoirs? Not that long ago, after all, anyone who wanted to walk a mile in someone else's mind, turned to novels. They sought to understand real life through the imagined life.

Now memoirists have taken over the cultural role of storyteller, secret sharer. Once these books chronicled exterior trips--to the North Pole or the Congo--leaving the interior trips to fiction writers. Now memoirs are less about surviving nature, war and politics. They are more about surviving abuse, alcohol, madness, family.

This success of memoirs is most often chalked up to me, great editor, me. It's easier to put me on a pedestal than to admit a man character. Indeed, Kathryn Harrison's book on her adult affair with her father has been savaged or praised by reviewers for speculation or revelation.

My bet is that Carmen hit the literary jackpot because he switched genres, not genders.

But their popularity is also and most deeply connected to our search for authenticity.

The Australian cross-writer Leon Carmen is no victim of political correctness. But in the multicultural clashes, how many men have been told that they can't really write about being a woman? How many white writers are told they cannot describe black/Asian/Hispanic lives without living them?

At the logical end of this reasoning lies the terrible idea that we cannot trust anyone to understand or speak for anyone else. In this climate a writer may be left tilting his and her own home ground.

At their best, of course, memoirists also shape their narratives, carve stories, and choose truths out of the flow of memory. They may rewrite events and conversations that took place in a distant past.

But fiction, by its very nature, requires that a writer draw around in other heads with no tool but an imagination. If serious novels are giving way to memoirs, is it a failure of the culture's imagination?

A white man made up Wanda. He made it all up. Now perversely he uses that as his defense. "I created a character and I breathed life into her," he protests in the face of uproar. But a lie is a lie, even when it is a white lie.

Nevertheless, I can't help wondering how those who loved the memoir will judge the novel. If we change the byline and the genre--not the gender--do we lose Wanda? Or rescue her?

One thing we can be sure of, Leon Carmen can now get published. The publishers wanted a sequel from the Aboriginal woman. They will get a sequel from the white man. "My Life as Wanda Koolmatrie," by Leon Carmen, it will be a bestseller.

Ruth Hamilton: 99 and doing fine

Ruth Hamilton, who will be 99 on Saturday, has but one request: That each of us remove the words hate and war from our vocabularies, replacing them with tolerance and compassion.

"That," she said would make for a very pleasant world. On the latest sunny afternoon of her sunny, sunny life, Ruth Hamilton sat on the porch Wednesday with a dozen of her friends and neighbors at Bram Towers.

As always, all eyes and ears were focused on the most remarkable of women - Sanford's First Lady.

Hamilton broke several vertebrae six weeks ago, but says she is almost completely healed. She prayed and others prayed for her. She focused on all the good deeds she would do once she was physically able.

"I expect each day that I'm capable of doing something good," Hamilton said in her 7th-floor apartment that overlooks Lake Monroe. "Today, I met some people who weren't feeling so good. They told me, I made their day."

"I don't like putting people into categories," Hamilton said. "I don't see old people here at Bram Towers. I see people. And I'm pretty optimistic about life knowing there are so many good people."

"You know what excites me the most - baby boomers. I love my baby boomers. We're going to have a good civilization with these baby boomers and no more war mongers. The old war mongers are a dying breed. If there is anything I've hated in my life it's war."

Hamilton vividly recalls seeing Adolph Hitler in Berlin in 1937. "He seemed 10 feet tall because of all the power he had. Hell this. Hell that. Everyone was overwhelmed. Back in America, I couldn't understand why no one seemed to see what was coming. Why no one was prepared to do anything to stop this horrible man."

More pleasing to Hamilton was meeting with President Oscar Arias nine years ago in San Juan, Costa Rica. "A most civilized country, a most peace-loving man," she said. "I met Oscar Arias when I was 90 years old. I visited a fort that was made into a museum for children. How easy it is to make peace, I thought. It's not really that difficult."

Of her many careers, Hamilton is most proud of having been a teacher. She was 19 when she taught fourth graders in Colfax, Iowa. She introduced her young students to the wonderful world of newspaper journalism and marveled how one boy - Carl Hogendorn - longed to be a newsmen.

"He became a fine journalist and owned a couple of newspapers in Iowa," she said. "We stayed in touch through the years - right until he died at age 71."

Another Colfax youngster, Joe Laws, wanted to be a professional football player. "He played 12 years for the Green Bay Packers," Hamilton said. "Played for Curly Lambeau, one of the game's great coaches. You've heard about Lambeau Field?"

Ruth Hamilton married Carter Hamilton, a professional baseball player who became a doctor. They were together 46 years until his death in 1949. She was elected twice to the New Hampshire legislature (from 1964 to 1973), traveled often and wrote for newspapers and magazines. To this day she writes lovely letters to editors and to President Clinton and Hillary Clinton, both of whom she admires.

Hamilton's life papers are at the Iowa Women's Archives at the University of Iowa - one of her great honors. The other, she said, is an honorary membership in the Sanford Optimists Club. On May 31st, Ruth Hamilton will go to Gainesville to deliver a speech to an international group of Optimists.

"I'm working on the speech," she said. "It's going to be the best I ever gave - one they'll remember. I'm pretty excited about everything that's happening to me."

Hamilton said she frequently watches C-Span and CNN, and saw the Braves play the Astros the other night.

"Always loved baseball," she said. "My dear husband, Carter, was a pitcher. Would have been a big-leaguer with the Cleveland Indians if he had a better curve ball. He became a great doctor. A wonderful man. I still love him so."

And we love you, Ruth Hamilton. Happy Birthday.

Lack of love in marriage is reason to leave

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to your column, "Abused Wife Learns What Love Isn't." Similarly, after 15 years with an abusive woman, I told her I had to leave. She left me emotionally overwrought and filled with undirected anger. With the help of counseling, I also figured out what love isn't. Ladies: If you see yourself in this - take warning:

LOVE ISN'T...
- Saying, "You don't know what you're talking about" when your husband says that he doesn't feel loved.

- Constantly badgering your husband to get a better paying job, when he makes an ample salary ($90,000 a year) and enjoys his work.

- Continuously referring to your husband as "old man," knowing he resents it, especially when he's athletic and youthful looking for his age (48).

- Grabbing and throwing your husband's hand down when he reaches out to touch or hold you.
- Belittling your husband before others, even in his presence.
- Telling your husband that no other woman would want him.
- Blatantly seeking expensive, tangible "trappings of influence" for status' sake, to the detriment of living within means.

- Not knowing or taking interest in what your husband does at work, realizing his work means a lot to him.

- Consciously not being home or at the airport to welcome your husband after a long trip.

- Reading and annoyingly chewing ice in bed until husband falls asleep, and feigning sleep until after husband leaves for work.

- Refusing to visit husband's relatives, while demanding frequent visits to your relatives.

Strategy fails, Oviedo edges Lake Mary 7-6 in 11-innings

By TONY DeBONNIE
Herald correspondent

OVIEDO — As Robert Burns said back in the late 18th century, the best laid plans of mice and men oft go awry.

Add baseball coaches to that list. Twice Wednesday night, Lake Mary baseball coach Allen Tuttle intentionally walked hitters to set up force plays in the Rams' 6A-District 4 and Seminole Athletic Conference game against the Oviedo Lions.

Both times, it backfired, the second time coming in the bottom of the 11th inning as pinch-hitter Ben Knapp singled through a drawn-in Ram infield to score Troy Boutwell with the winning run in Oviedo's 7-6 victory.

Earlier in the game, in the third inning, Oviedo had runners on second and third with one out. After Jay McFarlane ran the count to 3-0, Tuttle opted to put him on first to load the bases and set up a possible double-play situation.

Dave Devito spoiled that move by lifting the next pitch just over the right-center field fence for a grand slam.

On the other hand, that same piece of strategy didn't backfire on the Lions. When Lake Mary had runners on second and third with one out in the top of the seventh, Oviedo coach Kenne Brown intentionally passed Matt Allegra to set up a possible double play.

The Lions didn't get the double play, but relief pitcher Mike Halaychick did retire the next two Ram hitters on a pop up and a strike out to escape the jam.

In all, Lake Mary stranded nine runners on base, six in scoring position.

Afterwards, Brown was just pleased to escape with a win.

"We had to come from behind early, then we had to pick ourselves up after letting a two-run lead slip away in the sixth inning," said Brown. "This game had a little bit of everything."

"As far as intentionally walking batters, that's what those situations called for. Lake Mary has an excellent infield. That was the percentage play. We were just fortunate that Dave and Ben came through with big hits."

The win improves Oviedo to 16-6 overall while Lake Mary is now 11-10-1. Both teams are 3-3 in 6A-District 4 play and 4-3 against SAC opponents.

Scott Hillinski paced Lake Mary's 11-hit attack with two doubles and an RBI. Bretzer contributed a double, single, one run, and an RBI. Brad Klinger singled twice and scored twice while Jimmy Smith hit two singles and scored once.

Shaun St. Dennis and Kyle Berryhill each hit a double and scored a run. Allegra singled in two runs.

Devito also had a single to go with his second home run of the season. McFarlane added two singles and two runs. Neufeld extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a double and scored two runs.

Justin Holmes singled and scored a run while Knapp had a single and an RBI. Jorge Hernandez hit a single. Boutwell scored a run.

Halaychick (7-1) pitched the last six innings of starter Kenny Birch to record the win for the Lions. He allowed two runs (one earned) on three hits while striking out nine and walking three. Birch was touched for four runs (all earned) on eight hits. He fanned three and walked two.

Aaron Black, who worked the final two innings, suffered the loss for Lake Mary. He only gave up one run on one hit. Black walked four (two intentionally) and struck out one. Bretzer surrendered six runs (all earned) on seven hits. He struck out nine and walked four.

The Rams will host Deltona tonight at 7 p.m., while Oviedo will travel to Winter Springs High School to play Lake Howell on Friday at 4 p.m.

Walker, Cards trio hurl clubs to B. Ruth wins

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Travis Walker tossed a two-hitter, but it took some late inning heroics by the Nobles Construction White Sox offense to pull out an 8-2 victory over the Blitz Clean Royals in a battle of American Division undefeateds in Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball League action at Chase Park Wednesday evening.

The White Sox took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a two-out error and an RBI single by Leonard Britt.

But the Royals came back to take the lead with an unearned run in the second inning and another in the fourth inning on a single by Nireland and an RBI single by Antione Anderson.

The Royals still led 2-1 until the sixth inning when the White Sox plated three runs on RBI singles by Nathan Green and Walker and an bases loaded walk to Justin Frost. The White Sox then added four insurance runs in the seventh inning.

Walker only struck out four, but he also allowed only two walks to keep the Royals at bay.

Doing the damage offensively for the White Sox were Keith Parrott (two singles, two runs scored), Walker (two singles, one RBI), Green (single, two runs scored, one RBI), Brett Martin (single, one run scored), Frost and Britt (one single and one RBI each), Kendall Kenyon (two runs scored, one RBI) and Bradley Reinhold (one run scored).

The standings in the American Division are: White Sox (4-0), Royals (4-1), Elks Lodge #1241 Devil Rays (2-2), Indiana (2-3) and Master Construction Athletics (1-3).

Two-time defending champion Moose Lodge Pirates top the National Division with a 5-0 record. Trailing the leaders are the Cardinals (3-2), the Dean, Ringers, Morgan and Lawton Marlins and the Rotary Club Expos (both 1-4) and the Dakota Appraisal Braves (0-4).

On Friday, at Zinn Beck Field, the Devil Rays take on the A's at 5:45 p.m.

On Saturday, at Chase Park, the Marlins play the Braves at 11 a.m. and the Royals battle the Pirates at 1:15 p.m. At Zinn Beck Field, the Cardinals take on the Expos at 9 a.m.; the A's challenge the White Sox at 11:15 a.m.; and the Indians face the Devil Rays at 1:30 p.m.

They were getting dirty at Chase Park in the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball League Wednesday evening. Alex Anderson (No. 10, above) of the Blitz Clean Royals dives back into first base ahead of a pick off try as Nobles Construction first baseman Robert Woodward awaits the throw, while the Royals' Jason Sheffield slides safely into third base (right) with a stolen base ahead of the tag by the White Sox' Nathan Green. The White Sox beat the Royals 8-2 with a late inning rally.

COACH HANGS UP WHISTLE

Lake Brantley head football coach Fred Almon, one of the top gridiron mentors in Florida, has resigned after 12 years because of health reasons. The 48-year-old Almon suffered a heart attack during a game during last season. A search for Almon's successor is not expected to be announced until after Spring Football.

That set the stage for the battle of heavyweights, as Wells Contracting, the Wednesday Night Spring champions, and Lillie Quinn D.D.S., the Wednesday Night Fall champions, took the field.

Wells Contracting took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning before Lillie Quinn D.D.S. took the lead with single runs in the second and third innings.

Night sweats could indicate TB

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a healthy 58-year-old man who lives in Hawaii. My work often puts me in contact with homeless people who suffer from a variety of ailments.

My appetite has disappeared. Please — no dessert for me. I think instead I'll take a walk. I'm fed up... with TV.

For the past month, I have awakened several times each night with drenching perspiration. The sweating is so severe that I must change my shirt. Also, I have noticed a rather troublesome hacking cough that I never had before. I am under some degree of stress. Could this be causing my symptoms?

Another product is acclaimed for fungus-ridden loaves.

There's nothing like the toasted bread
To cure that nagging rash;
Another product will relieve One's sore gums in a flash.

DEAR READER: Great work. I'm glad I could ignite your creative fires.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I find that I can sleep soundly if I take a Tylenol PM at bedtime. Is there any harm in this practice?

DEAR READER: Probably not. But I doubt that you need the Tylenol. This product also contains Benadryl (the active ingredient), so I suggest that you simply try Benadryl (50 to 100 milligrams at night) as an equally safe, alternative sleep aid.

WHAT

It is easier in the post-mortem

By Phillip Alder

There are some plays that are virtually impossible to find at the table. It is only later that you realize you missed a chance for a coup — as in this deal from the 1985 Biarritz Festival. Following South's two-heart reverse, North's three-diamond rebid was, by partnership agreement, game-forcing. (With a weak hand, North would have bid an artificial two-no-trump.) South's use of Blackwood with a void was debatable, leading to the poor aim. At first, it looks as though South will lose a heart and a club. However, then you notice that the heart position is wonderful and that East has the spade king. So, declarer can get two spade tricks, on which he can discard his club losers. Suddenly the contract seems impregnable. And that is how the play went. After winning with the club ace and drawing trumps, declarer led a heart to dummy's nine, winning the trick when West played low. Now came the spade ace, for a club discard, and the spade queen, covered and ruffed. Back to dummy with a heart. South threw his second low club on dummy's spade jack. Then he conceded a heart to West's king, claiming the small-claim bonus. No, West wasn't wishing he had inserted the jack on the first heart play. That wouldn't have helped. He was regretting not playing the king. Taking this as a singleton, surety declarer would continue by finessing the heart 10. West would pounce with the jack and return a heart or club, killing the contract.

Star Birthday

Interesting times could develop for you socially in the year ahead. You may form several alliances from which you'll build a strong base, though friends may be envious at first. Work to bridge the gap between your personal and professional lives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not hold back if a loyal friend is in need of your assistance today. Reinforce your relationship by pulling out all the stops in your quest for a more positive atmosphere. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1788, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10118. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Be realistic, selective and cautious in your financial affairs today. Make sure that a profit is possible without taking a foolish gamble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of telling others what to do today, set a proper example so that they'll see you're not asking of them what you don't ask of yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Quiet any desire to betray a confidence today. An important friendship may be at stake if you let loose.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) All should go well with associates today, provided nothing of value is at stake. Keep the ante low and constant will remain in check.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The probability of fulfilling an objective looks strong today, but you might offend someone in the process. Keep your priorities focused.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Strive to be self-sufficient today, because associates on whom you're depending might not be available to assist you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might be called upon today to try to clear up a dispute between two close friends. Remain impartial and there will be a positive outcome.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The route to an important objective might be littered with impediments today. However, you can still succeed by using an alternative plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Putting yourself before others today may seem promising at first, but eventually what you tried to do may be publicly exposed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you are involved in a joint endeavor today, take control of the situation. A partner's input may be ill advised.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Let your humane and forgiving instincts guide your course of action today. Do not take direct measures to even the score.
