With the Nov. 2 general election almost three months away, Seminole County Commission Chairman Bob Sturm, R-Lake Mary, has built up a war chest of $18,000-plus for use in his bid for reelection against challenger Bob French of Casselberry.

French, a former county commissioner and a Democrat, meanwhile, has raised only $1,550, with $50 of that sum out of his own pocket. And almost all the money—$1,157 already has been spent for his candidate qualifying fee of $1,152.95 and $4.45 for a bank deposit stamp.

The November election ballot of local candidates will be a skimpy one with only the Sturm-French contest and possibly one School Board race. Whether the School Board contest is on the ballot will be determined by whether one of the candidates in a three-person race can garner 50 percent plus one vote in the Sept. 7 primary.

Vying in that contest are: incumbent School Board member Allan Keeth, former School Board member Jean Bryant, and Kenneth Patrick, an unsuccessful School Board candidate in the past. The race is non-partisan.

Meanwhile, County Commissioner Sandra Glenn, a Republican from Altamonte Springs, won reelection unopposed. However, before the qualifying period closed, she had collected $4,652.83 in contributions and reported spending only $60.

School Board members Bill Kroll and Pat Telson also were elected unopposed.

Kroll's report filed with Seminole Election Supervisor Camilla Bruce's office showed his only expenditure as the $362.31 filing fee. His report showed no contributions. Mrs. Telson's report showed contributions of $255 and payment of the $362.31 filing fee.

Mrs. Bryant's campaign reports showed contributions of $540 including $100 loan she made to her campaign fund and the expenditure of $362.31 filing fee.

Keeth's report showed no contributions and the payment of the filing fee. Patrick's report showed a self-contribution of $500 and payment of the filing fee.

In financial disclosure forms filed July 30, the candidates showed their net worths:

— Mrs. Bryant, $70,042. Her assets include her 1807 Paloma Ave., Sanford, home, savings and stocks.

— French's net worth was reported at $113,000 with assets listed as his home at 643 Lake Kathryn Circle, Casselberry, two cars, a boat and household goods.

— Mrs. Glenn's net worth is $83,900 including her home at 808 Woodling Place, Altamonte. Her assets also include her home furnishings, an automobile and some savings.

— Keeth's net worth is $155,430.29 and his assets include his home at 205 Crystal View So., Sanford, two automobiles and stocks.

— Kroll's net worth is $39,400 and his assets include his home at 675 Devonshire Blvd., Longwood, a motor home and cars.

— Patrick's net worth is $292,000 including his home at 110 N. Greentree Lane, Sanford, four cars, two antique pianos, and savings.

— Sturm's net worth is $130,563.27 and his assets include his home at 201 Morning Glory Drive, Lake Mary, a condominium at Crane's Roost, three automobiles and savings.

— Mrs. Telson's net worth is $95,700 and her assets are her home at 120 Arla Court in south Seminole County and a rental house in Casselberry, two cars, stocks and bonds.

Sturm's list of contributors is a lengthy one with contributors ranging from homemakers, to lawyers, developers, engineers and friends. The contributors live for the most part in Seminole and Orange counties:

— Winter Park: Wayne Harrod, $1,000;

ComBankers for Better Government, $200; Charles W. Clayton, $150; James H. Stelling, $50; Dr. J.W. Hickman, $200; Antoinette D. Coleman, $25; Marty A. Chira, $50; Louise A. Ward, $250; Jan Leiben, $25; Sue Lewis, $25; Oscar Bergstrom, $5; Lake Florio Properties, 250; Jesse E. Graham, $200; Appleyard Properties Group, $200; and Area One Inc., $25.

— Longwood: David J. and Billie Mitro, $500 and $15; Sabal Point Properties, Inc., $50; D.E. or Joyce Sims, $100; Williams Investments, $25; George and Shirley Bennett, $100; Arthur or Jeanne Chase, $50; Christen Homes, $150; Burton or Berna Bines, $100 and $900; Wingfield Development Co., $100;

Contributions Key In Area State Races

Contributions from political action committees are playing a major role in financing the election campaigns of candidates for state office in Seminole County's Nov. 2 general election.

The political action committees range from the Mid-Florida Political Action Committee (known as MIDPAC), a home builders' organization in Orlando, to the United Liquor Dealers, Inc., of Ft. Lauderdale to Sun Bank of Florida, Inc., Political Action Committee.

State officials who will be elected by Seminole County voters include three state senators, three state representatives and two judges.

Only the judicial candidates will be listed on the countywide ballot. The legislators will be elected in districts within the county.

On the Sept. 7 primary election ballot will be a race for Circuit Judge Group 1 for Seminole and Brevard counties between incumbent Kenneth Leffler and Fern Park attorney Irving Gussow and a contest for Group 3 among contenders Eugene Collier, Edward Jackson, Franklin Kelley and Jere Lober, all of Brevard County.

The winner of the Group 1 contest will be elected. If none of the four candidates in the Group 3 race receives 50 percent plus one vote, the two highest vote getters will run in the Nov. 2 general election.

For the Legislature, only two contests will be on the Sept. 7 primary ballot.

They are between Gary Barnhart of Umatilla and Florence M. Hunter of Leesburg for the Democratic nomination to oppose Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, for the District 11 seat in the Florida Senate; and Casselberry Councilman James Lavigne and Carl Selph, for the Republican nomination to oppose Winter Springs Mayor Troy Piland, Democrat, for the District 34 seat in the Florida House.

Other contests will be decided in the Nov. 2 general election for state offices.

These include the contests between: Bettye Smith, D-Sanford, and Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs, for the District 35 seat in the Florida House; State Rep. Tom Drage, R-Orlando, and Glenn Turner, D-Goldenrod, District 36, Florida House; Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, and State Rep. Jason Steele, R-Rockledge, for the District 17 seat in the Florida Senate; and State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, and State Sen. Toni Jennings, R-Orlando, for the District 15 seat in the state Senate.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, won reelection unopposed.

All of these candidates must file with the state elections office in Tallahassee regular reports disclosing the contributions and expenditures in their campaigns.

The candidates usually file copies of these reports in their home county, as well.

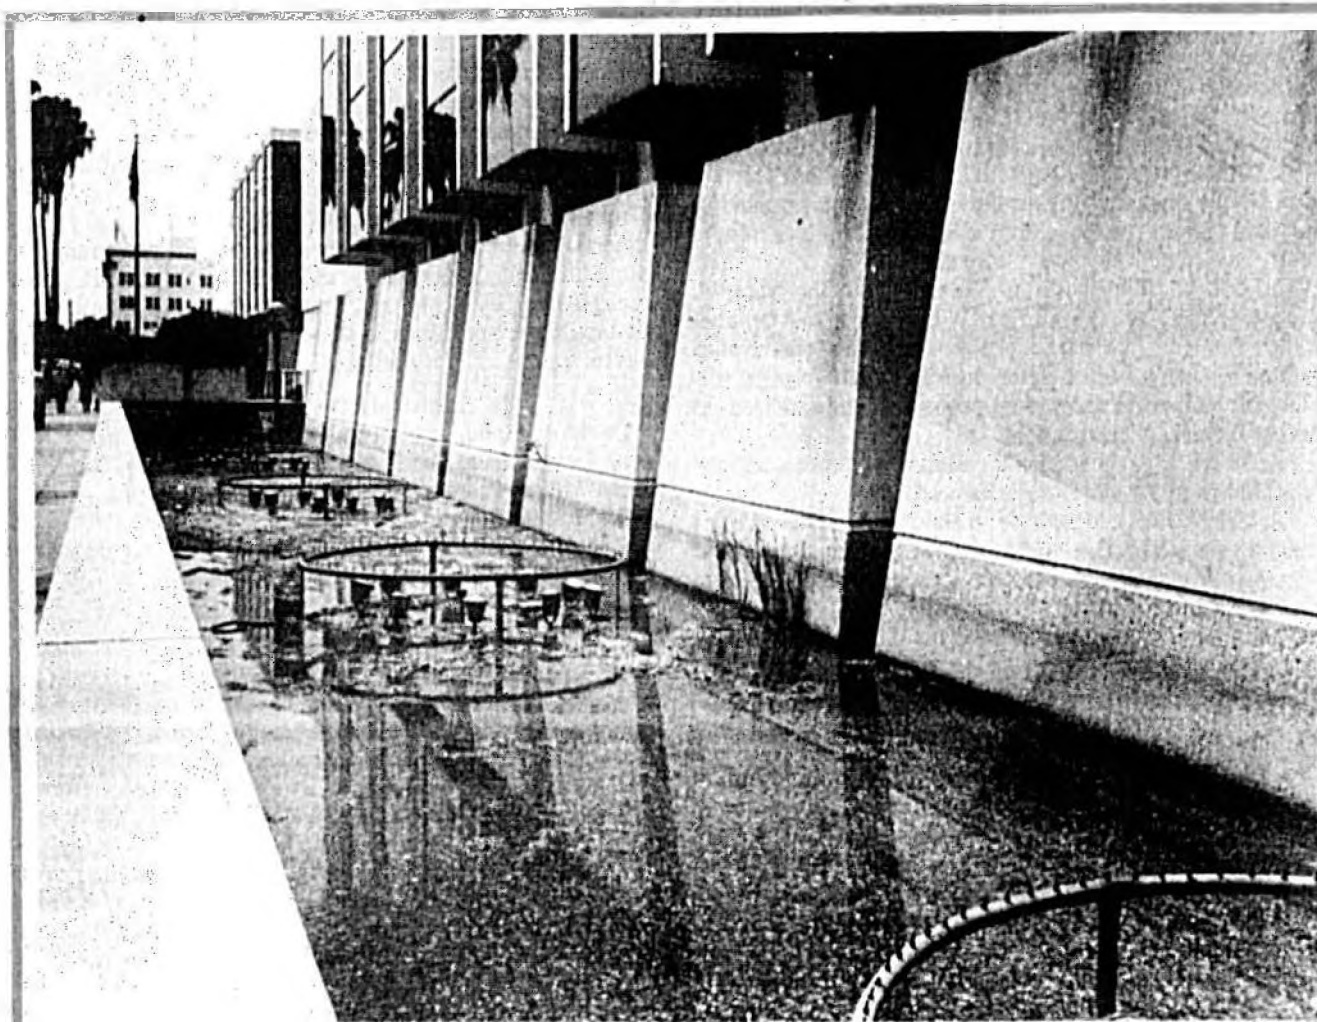

Thus, Vogt, Langley, Mrs. Hunter and Barnhart, Drage, Vogt and Steele, and Miss Jennings are not required by law to file copies in Seminole. Miss Jennings is doing so anyway.

In the judicial contest for Group 3 circuit judge, none of those four candidates are required to file copies of expenditures and contributions here.

Judge Leffler reports total contributions to his campaign of $3,615 including a loan from himself of $1,590, and expenditures of $2,261.95 including a qualifying fee of $1,590.

Contributors to Leffler's campaign are: Albert V. Pope, $100, Gerald Rutberg, $100, Robert T. Ferris, $50, Shader and Stern, $50, Massey, Alper & Wack, $100, and Harry Jacobs, $75, all of Altamonte Springs; W.L. Kirk, $50, Thomas C. Greene, $50, Phillip Logan, $100, Albert N. Fitts, $25, S. Kirby Moncrief, $50, all of Sanford; Thomas Binford of Winter Springs, $100; ComBankers for Better Government, $200. Winter Park;

Repairs to this pool and the one on the other side of the Seminole County Courthouse could cost the county $50,000. The fountains in the pools have been turned off for several months. Repairs to the pools include patching cracks which have developed in the base of the pools.

Pools Leak; Fountains Off

By MICHAEL BEHA

Seminole County could pay $50,000 to repair the pools that decorate the east and west sides of the courthouse.

That's the estimate a Goldenrod civil engineer put on repairs that would alleviate water seepage, replace expansion joints and improve the appearance of the pools.

County commissioners have authorized advertising the job for bid. Bids will be opened Sept. 1 at 2 p.m. County Director of Development John Percy said the problem with the pools began when an asbestos sealer at the bottom began to flake off.

Stones were put in the pools to stop the flaking, but that caused another problem. Bacteria began to collect on the rocks and dirt accumulated, leading to problems with keeping the pools clean, Percy said.

Several months ago the pools were turned off, he said. A study by engineer J.F. Fernandez, showed several cracks in the pools which were causing water to seep into the courthouse.

His $50,000 estimate for repairs includes materials for patching the leaks.

Percy said commissioners also might consider filling in the pools with dirt and landscaping it. The cost of that also would be about $50,000 but would reduce the cooling efficiency of the courthouse.

Percy said he doesn't know exactly how much the pools help with cooling but estimated it at about 10 percent. He said that was one reason the pools were constructed. Water from them evaporates, cooling the air outside the windows of the building, he said.

Double Taxation

County Officials To Examine 'No Benefit' Report

By MICHAEL BEHA
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Administrator Roger Neiswender said he's taking a wait and see attitude on a report claiming seven cities in the county are paying double taxation.

Neiswender said he hasn't had a chance to examine the report because of other business. "But basically, we'll want to know what methodology was used and we'll want to see some facts," he said.

The report, issued Thursday, said seven cities — Casselberry, Longwood, Altamonte Springs, Winter Springs, Sanford, Lake Mary and Oviedo — paid $2.4 million in "double taxation" in fiscal 1981-82.

The report, compiled by Kelton & Associates of DeLand, and commissioned by the cities, said the municipalities received no substantial benefit for their money.

Neiswender said the county has been through similar discussions before and no instances of double taxation have been substantiated.

But, he said, county officials will examine the report after city officials meet Monday to further discuss their position. That meeting will take place Monday at 1 p.m. in Sanford City Hall.

"We'll see what they have to say and then we'll get our budget people working on it, get (County Attorney) Nikki Clayton and the department heads working on it," he said.

Neiswender said he doesn't feel there is any double taxation in Seminole County, but added that he is willing to negotiate with the cities.

Ms. Clayton said the county has 90 days to examine the report and to file a response. If the cities are willing to negotiate, discussions will be held between the two sides.

If no solution can be found, the cities could take the county to court.

It would not be the first time the county has been sued for alleged double taxation. Several years ago, Sanford city officials filed a similar suit, but it was eventually dropped.

Ms. Clayton said several "double taxation" cases are either now being heard of have been scheduled for trials in Florida courts.

Palm Beach County lost such a case in Circuit Court and that case was recently heard by an Appeals Court which has yet to rule in the matter. Trials also are set in Escambia and Clay counties on double taxation cases, she said.

Commissioner Barbara Christensen said Friday she hasn't seen the study, but feels there is some basis for the cities' complaints.

She said her colleagues and officials from the seven cities should sit down and discuss the issue.

Mrs. Christensen said creating a separate taxing district for police protection in the unincorporated areas of the county would eliminate double taxation for sheriff's department duties.

"I've said over and over again that when people in the unincorporated areas say they need more police protection, they should have to pay for it," Mrs. Christensen said. "Everybody pays the same amount for the sheriff department. But the cities also pay for their own police departments."

Seminole Judges Oppose 'TV Courts'

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

While Orange County judges may soon hold initial court appearances via two-way television, Seminole County judges and attorneys do not want to be in pictures.

Orange County officials say the proposed two-way closed-circuit TV system for handling prisoners' first appearances could save the county between $60,000 and $80,000 during the first year of implementation.

According to Orange County Judge J.C. Stone, who is spearheading the project after reading about a similar system used in the Northwest, a camera and monitoring screen would be installed at Orlando's jail annex and another at the county courthouse. The two buildings are located on opposite sides of downtown Orlando.

Under Stone's plan, prisoners awaiting trial would be given an initial court appearance before a judge within 24 hours of their arrest. At the first appearance, the judge would determine whether there is cause to hold the suspect, make sure the suspect understands his rights and make sure the person arrested has access to legal counsel without ever having to leave the courthouse or having the suspect leave the jail. In addition, a trial clerk, court reporter and bailiff would no longer have to travel to the jail annex for the appearance.

Stone maintains the system would provide greater prisoner security, reduce the need for additional bailiffs, save transportation and overtime costs.

"I know that the system is being used in quite a few places," said County Judge Wallace Hall. "I also know that in some cases it works real well but I, myself, have not given it a lot of thought for this area."

"The system we have now works," he said. "And it seems to work well. I don't know if the TV system would improve on our current method."

"Right now, we three county judges (Hall, Alan Dickey and Harold Johnson) handle first appearances at the jail courtroom by a rotation system," Dickey said. "We travel to the jail, which takes about 15 minutes, and hold hearings in the afternoon."

"I don't feel it is any real hardship to me to travel out there to Five Points once in a while," he said. "I receive a check from the state to cover mileage at an average of $50 a month and as far as saving time, I have to do the hearings anyway so

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan Has More Trouble With Friends Than Foes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan began a rare weekend at the White House today, trying to figure out why he is having more trouble with his friends than with his political enemies.

On the domestic front, his plan to bring new money into the federal treasury is being fought sternly in Congress by conservatives, the group that normally supports the president almost without question. Normally, hostile Democrats are quietly watching the fight from the sidelines.

Abroad, Israel — of which the United States is a committed ally — continues tightening its grip on the west Beirut stronghold of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, despite Reagan's pleas for calm and a cease-fire.

Faced with the two crises, Reagan abruptly canceled his plans Friday to take off for a 13-day California vacation next week. With the holiday time originally scheduled, he had not penciled in the usual weekend visit to the presidential retreat at Camp David in the Maryland mountains. As a result, he will share Washington's hot and humid August weather with thousands of weekend tourists.

Pilot Not Told ALL

LAWNSDALE, Calif. (UPI) — The helicopter that crashed in flames during filming of the movie "The Twilight Zone," killing actor Vic Morrow and two children, was disabled by an explosion the pilot did not expect, federal officials said.

Don Lorente, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said Friday not all the production assistants on the Warner Bros. set were told of the flight path of the chopper or the timing of the blasts, detonated to simulate shelling of a mock Vietnamese village.

"The evidence does show there was some information that was not given to all the parties," Lorente told a news conference.

Morrow, 53, Renee Chen, 6, and Myra Dinh Le, 7, were killed July 23, when the helicopter crashed and struck them as they ran across a river — about 30 miles north of Los Angeles in Saugus — in a scene for the movie.

Bess Going Home

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Bess Truman's doctor says the former first lady has improved sufficiently during her week's stay at a hospital and may return to her Independence, Mo., home.

Mrs. Truman, recovering from irregular heart and respiration rates, was expected to leave the hospital today, Dr. Wallace Graham said late Friday.

"At this point we have done all we can for her at the medical center," Graham said.

Texan Guilty Of Armed Robbery

While a 25-year-old San Antonio, Tex., man is facing a minimum mandatory sentence of three years in jail following his conviction Wednesday of a Fern Park shoe store armed robbery, prosecutors say he will probably be spending the next 15 years in prison because of previous robbery convictions.

Eddie Gerald Dutton II was found guilty in Seminole Circuit Court by a five-man, one-woman jury after a two-day trial in connection with the armed robbery of the Pix shoe store, U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park, in March, 1980. Assistant State Attorney Steven G. Horneffer said Dutton netted $525 in the robbery.

Dutton is being held in the Seminole County jail pending the outcome of a pre-sentence investigation as ordered by Circuit Judge Dominick Salvi. Dutton could be sentenced to a maximum penalty of life in prison.

"Dutton has already been convicted of three out of six armed robbery charges against him in Hillsborough and Pinellas counties for robbing shoe and grocery stores there," Horneffer said. "He's serving quite a bit of time with those convictions and the law allows for a life sentence for armed robbery with a minimum time served of three years. Also, Texas still has outstanding charges against him for grand theft, but I don't know what they plan to do, whether they'll just leave him here or if they'll want him sent to them for prosecution."

AUTO ACCIDENT REPORTED

Juanita Keen, 47, of 106 Mayfair Circle, Sanford, has been charged with failure to yield the right-of-way following an accident at 5:58 p.m. Thursday at 25th Street and U.S. Highway 17-92, police said.

About $2,000 damage was done to Ms. Keen's 1975 Ford when the vehicle collided with a 1979 Cadillac driven by Douglas Norton, 43, of 127 Rock Lake Rd., Altamonte Springs, police said. About $5,000 damage was caused to Norton's vehicle as a result of the crash, but no one was injured, police said.

GEORGIA MAN ROBBED AT HOTEL

A 43-year-old Toccoa, Ga. man told Sanford police he was robbed while trying to unlock the door of his hotel room at about 8:44 p.m. Thursday.

Marion Lee Mize told police that a man pushed him from behind while he was unlocking his hotel door, knocked him to the ground, then stole an undisclosed amount of cash from his pants pocket.

Police said the incident occurred at the Holiday Inn on Lake Monroe.

THREE GUNS TAKEN

Three handguns, valued at about $955, were stolen from the home of Wayne H. Blech, 35, of 1200 S. Oak Ave., Sanford between noon Sunday and 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

PHARMACISTS REPORT ATTEMPTED FRAUDS

A Winter Park and Fern Park pharmacist reported to deputies that two men tried to have false prescriptions filled at their respective businesses Wednesday.

Anthony M. Bender, 49, a pharmacist at the Super X drugstore, 5445 Lake Howell Road, Winter Park, told deputies a man came into his store and asked to have a prescription written by a dentist filled. After checking with the dentist who allegedly authorized the prescription, the dentist denied ordering the drug, deputies said.

Bender informed the man of the dentist's comments and the man fled from the store, deputies said.

Meanwhile, Jim L. Minder, 26, a pharmacist at the K mart department store, U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park, told deputies two men entered his store at about 8 p.m. and tried to obtain drugs with a false prescription.

After telling the men that he could not fill the order, Binder said the men fled from the store to a waiting silver Buick Regal, driven by another man, deputies said.

WINTER SPRINGS HOME HIT

Thieves broke into a Winter Springs man's home between noon and 7 p.m. Tuesday stealing about $235 worth of property.

James E. Harrison, 32, of 80 N. Cortez Ave., told deputies he discovered someone had broken into the garage of his Oviedo home, which is currently under construction at 1515 Ft. Christmas, and stole a wheelbarrow, two extension cords, three gallons of concrete primer, two dead bolt locks and 10 gallons of mortar.

KEYS TAKEN, THEN CAR

Someone broke into a Forest City woman's home between 1:30 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. Wednesday, stole her car and house keys then stole her 1979 Ford stationwagon.

Mary L. Pike, 51, of 1207 Lynwood Ave., told deputies the thieves entered her home after removing the front porch screen, stole the keys then drove away in her lightblue stationwagon, valued at about $4,000.

WOMAN FREE ON BOND

A 26-year-old Orlando woman is free on bond from the county jail today following her arrest at a Longwood store on charges of obtaining property with a worthless check.

Loretta A. Simmons, 4711 Baywillow Court, was arrested after she reportedly gave the manager of Jacobson's store, State Road 434, Longwood, a check to purchase merchandise, although the check could not be redeemed for sufficient funds, deputies said.

Upon further investigation, deputies said they learned Ms. Simmons is also suspected of passing bad checks in other Longwood and Winter Park stores in excess of $3,000. Deputies say Ms. Simmons is suspected of purchasing merchandise by passing fraudulent checks under the names of Loretta Agnes Simmons, Patricia F. Marcus and Carol Benson. The physical description of Patricia F. Marcus matches the description of Ms. Simmons, deputies said, adding they consider Ms. Simmons to also be Ms. Marcus. There is an outstanding warrant on Ms. Marcus in Seminole County on charges of fraud and worthless checks, deputies said.

BUILDING MATERIALS STOLEN

David A. Stump, contractor for the Maitland-based Windson Development Corp., told deputies someone stole about $548 worth of building materials from a construction site on Lake Harney Road in Geneva.

Stump told deputies the thieves made off with 35 sheets of plywood, nine rolls of felt, a battery and a pump handle.

MAN CHARGED WITH BRIBING OFFICER

A 28-year-old Orlando man is free on bond from the county jail today following his arrest at 1:48 a.m. Friday on charges of bribery of a police officer and refusing to sign a traffic citation.

Larry Williams of 4576 Middlebrook Road, was arrested along State Road 436, near the Valley Forge Amoco service station, by Altamonte Springs police after he allegedly offered to pay the police officer not to cite him for a traffic violation, police said.

Police said they observed a motorist driving a Pontiac run a stop light, pulled him over, and ticketed him for the violation. Police said while they were writing the citation, Williams said he was an employee of the Martin Marietta Corp. and was on his way to Cape Canaveral where he is involved in the investigation of a Pershing II missile which exploded shortly after being launched several days ago.

Police added Williams said he could not get a ticket because if he did, he would be fired and allegedly told the police officer, "I have money." When asked by police if he was offering a bribe, Williams reportedly said, "I'll give you money," and was arrested, police said.

WOMAN FREE ON BOND

A 26-year-old Orlando woman is free on bond from the Seminole County jail today following her arrest at a Longwood store on charges of obtaining property with a worthless check.

Loretta A. Simmons, 4711 Baywillow Court, was arrested after she reportedly gave the manager of Jacobson's store, State Road 434, Longwood, a check to purchase merchandise, although the check could not be redeemed for sufficient funds, deputies said.

Upon further investigation, deputies said they learned Ms. Simmons is also suspected of passing bad checks in other Longwood and Winter Park stores in excess of $3,000. Deputies say Ms. Simmons is suspected of purchasing merchandise by passing fraudulent checks under the names of Loretta Agnes Simmons, Patricia F. Marcus and Carol Benson. The physical description of Patricia F. Marcus matches the description of Ms. Simmons, deputies said, adding they consider Ms. Simmons to also be Ms. Marcus. There is an outstanding warrant on Ms. Marcus in Seminole County on charges of fraud and worthless checks, deputies said.

BUILDING MATERIALS STOLEN

David A. Stump, contractor for the Maitland-based Windson Development Corp., told deputies someone stole about $548 worth of building materials from a construction site on Lake Harney Road in Geneva.

Stump told deputies the thieves made off with 35 sheets of plywood, nine rolls of felt, a battery and a pump handle.

MAN CHARGED WITH BRIBING OFFICER

A 28-year-old Orlando man is free on bond from the county jail today following his arrest at 1:48 a.m. Friday on charges of bribery of a police officer and refusing to sign a traffic citation.

Larry Williams of 4576 Middlebrook Road, was arrested along State Road 436, near the Valley Forge Amoco service station, by Altamonte Springs police after he allegedly offered to pay the police officer not to cite him for a traffic violation, police said.

Police said they observed a motorist driving a Pontiac run a stop light, pulled him over, and ticketed him for the violation. Police said while they were writing the citation, Williams said he was an employee of the Martin Marietta Corp. and was on his way to Cape Canaveral where he is involved in the investigation of a Pershing II missile which exploded shortly after being launched several days ago.

Police added Williams said he could not get a ticket because if he did, he would be fired and allegedly told the police officer, "I have money." When asked by police if he was offering a bribe, Williams reportedly said, "I'll give you money," and was arrested, police said.

Cure Needed For Britain's Troubled Health Service

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's National Health Service, often trumpeted as one of the nation's major postwar achievements, seems to be in need of some powerful medicine itself.

On-again, off-again strikes by health service workers demanding higher pay have achieved what once would have been unthinkable — the closing of many of the nation's hospitals to all but emergency and urgent cases, with the strikers themselves often deciding who should be admitted.

Even so, the health workers enjoy wide public sympathy and support from other unions.

"They are simply not getting a living wage," said a hospital radiographer.

Some hospital aides take home as little as $79 a week. A spokesman said the average pay with overtime for such workers was $175.

Holding the pay line forms a vital part of the government's overall economic strategy. The National Health Service, Western Europe's largest provider of jobs with about 1 million employees, is 90 percent funded by income taxes. The remainder is paid by state insurance contributions and the provision of hospital beds in private rooms.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has warned it has no money to offer more than a 6 percent increase to hospital aides and 7.5 percent to nurses.

The government also says part of the $700 million to pay for the increases already offered should come from economies in the health service.

Medical staff complain they are chronically deprived of the cash, resources and modern buildings to do their jobs adequately. Mrs. Thatcher calls for greater efficiency to pay for needed improvements.

Ideologically wedded to the concept of private enterprise, the government argues that many hospital services, such as laundry, could be contracted to outside companies both to save money and increase efficiency.

The health service is a financial monster whose spending has increased every year for the past 20 and will cost the country $21 billion, or about 5.5 percent of gross national product, in 1982.

This is a far smaller proportion of GNP than is spent on health in most other West European countries.

Even before the strikes closed hundreds of hospital wards, the number of patients awaiting operations stood at more than 600,000. The wait for non-urgent operations, such as hip-replacement surgery, can be as long as two years.

More than 3.6 million people are covered by private schemes, including hundreds of thousands of trade unionists. The construction of private hospitals is booming.

For all the health service's defects, Britons comfort themselves when they read about the occasional excesses of commercial medicine in the United States and elsewhere.

But Arthur Seldon, a supply side economist who has frequently criticized the health service, says the quality of medical care for the average person in America is better than in Britain.

Steel Pact Threatened

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration and the European Common Market negotiated a settlement in their confrontation over steel trade. But the biggest American steel-maker rejected it, leaving the pact in serious doubt.

The rejection raised the possibility of worsening economic relations between the two continents, since agreement by the U.S. domestic steel industry as a whole is necessary to put it into effect.

Under the proposed settlement, announced Friday, Europe would limit its steel exports to the United States for the next three years in return for U.S. steel firms withdrawing complaints charging European steel-makers with subsidizing their exports to this country.

A few hours after the agreement was announced, David Roderick, chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., issued a statement rejecting it.

Progress In El Salvador

The Reagan administration's certification of progress on human rights in El Salvador — a congressionally mandated requirement for continued U.S. aid to that country — is bound to be contested by some in Congress.

Already, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., has called the State Department report "incredible" and a "sham." These characterizations suggest that the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador and a score of career foreign service officers in Washington have conspired to distort the evidence and hoodwink the Congress.

For good measure, Dodd must also be assuming that the White House and the National Security Council are co-conspirators in this alleged fraud.

But, in fact, each of the major assertions set forth in the administration's report on El Salvador is amply supported by the available evidence. The discipline of Salvadoran troops and security forces is markedly improved. The numbers of civilians falling victim to renegade police, national guardsmen, or free-lance death squads are less than half of the comparable figures for a year ago.

The Salvadoran government's land reform program is alive and well despite efforts by the constituent assembly last spring to slow its implementation. Most important of all, the elections last March 28 gave El Salvador its first freely elected civilian government in 50 years, and plans are proceeding apace for presidential elections by 1984.

What else could all this be called other than progress on human rights? That this transformation has been achieved in the midst of a vicious war against Marxist guerrillas receiving aid from Cuba and Nicaragua makes it all the more remarkable, and worthy of continuing American support.

Predictably, the Dodds in Capitol Hill will focus on the negative, arguing that too many civilians are still being killed and that the land reform program hasn't yet wiped out poverty and injustice in the countryside. But that is not the standard set by Congress itself last year for continuing American aid.

The key word is progress, and by any measure much progress has been made.

El Salvador's real sin in the eyes of many congressional critics seems to be that it voted the wrong way in the March 28 elections. The U.S.-backed candidate was Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the junta then ruling El Salvador and leader of that country's center-left Christian Democrats.

But a majority of Salvadorans cast ballots for the five more conservative parties opposing the Christian Democrats. The new government, headed by moderate conservative Alvaro Magana, is taking a hard line against the guerrillas and would probably like to amend those aspects of the land reform program that have contributed to a drastic drop in agricultural production.

That doesn't suit Dodd and other congressional liberals who want the Salvadoran government to negotiate unconditionally with the Marxist insurgents and to redistribute landholdings of as little as 250 acres.

For the record, the guerrilla leadership insists that any negotiations address only the question of how much power should be handed over to the Marxists. The guerrillas remain contemptuous of elections, the democratic process, or their massive rejection by 80 percent of the Salvadoran electorate on March 28.

Efforts in Congress to discredit the administration's human rights certification and to cut economic and military aid to El Salvador will only make it more likely that the democratic institutions now being forged in that country may someday be replaced by a Marxist dictatorship. Even Dodd should be able to recognize that that would be the ultimate human rights disaster for El Salvador.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I'll show Margaret Thatcher that she is not the only one around who has a no-nonsense style."

By DORIS DIETRICH

I have the perfect nomination for the "Clod of the century." Let's hear it for one Mr. Jie Gang and gang up on the blatant bully who would brazenly sign his name to some gibberish garbage a Chinese newspaper calls journalism.

The gist of the highly insulting article was an asinine assault claiming, of all things, that women have proved to be "no good."

Gets your dander in high gear, huh? Appearing in the "Workers Daily," the article reads: "The mark of history shows that women are no good and must make way for men."

Continuing, the piece states: "Women have made their mark in all stages of history, but only an extremely tiny majority have had the lofty ideals and visions that have enhanced humanity. Less than 2 percent of women are in this category."

The writer adds: "To have boys is good for making contributions to society and for carrying on the family name." China's strict birth control policy, which restricts couples to one child, has provided further justification for them to want male babies, it said.

One interruption, please. How is anything — mammal, that is, born, except from the womb of the female of the species and the union of male and female cells?

And, Mr. Gang, this includes monkeys and jackasses.

But among homo sapiens, a man is born, occasionally. Mind you, I said occasionally, to offset certain male chauvinist pigs.

Back to the article that's Chinese to me, when it says that men are superior to women. An editor of the Chinese newspaper indicated the item may have been bait for a public discussion of feudal attitudes, the target of a recent campaign by Chinese authorities. The editor urged readers to send in their views.

"For even the most timid of feminists, the piece was powerfully offensive," it said.

Adding further injury to existing insult, the article questions the longstanding government policy that views men and women as equals and regards those who practice sexual discrimination as feudal and counter-revolutionary.

Another interruption, please. Just where in the world do history's great men think they came from?

And now let's hear from readers how they feel about the Chinese writer's charges. Send us a letter or card.

In the meantime, back to your cage, Mr. Gang. The women head hunters are closing in on you.

Marilyn Before Feminism

If Marilyn Monroe were alive today—if she hadn't swallowed 25 Nembutals on a Saturday night in August 20 years ago—she would now be 56.

She died despairing and depressed, bitter and bewildered by the world's view of her. "I'm a joke that brings in money," she said of herself.

She slept away, tender and tormented, just as the women's movement was awakening. I'm not saying the movement could have saved her, but if she had hung on a little longer, it might have helped her to understand herself.

Like many women of her era, she was led to believe that success is built on sexiness. But when she achieved that success, she said: "I don't want to be just a sexpot."

She hated being a sex symbol and at the same time feared becoming too old to be one.

She wanted desperately to be taken seriously as an actress, yet she didn't seem to object when a crowd of 2,000 gawked, whistled and went bananas as her skirt flew up during the New York filming of "The Seven-Year Itch."

The studios that made her a legend exploited her. Said the actress: "When I got the part in 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes'...Jane Russell...got $200,000 for it, and I got my $500 a week. I said, 'Look AFTER ALL, I am the blonde and it is 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.'"

Later, when she had both power and money, she didn't know how to handle either. Few women did in those days. She thought independence was stalking off sets, arriving late at the studio or not showing up at all.

Men loved her, yet many abused her. "She was chewed and spat out by a long line of grinning men," wrote her one-time husband, Arthur Miller, in "After the Fall," his play that probed their relationship.

She worshiped Miller because he believed in her and didn't want to go to bed with her as soon as they met. She took that to mean she had value as a person.

In time, however, she devoured him with her needs, pleading constant reassurance for mounting self-doubts. She drank more, took more tranquilizers, became more and more lost.

Eventually they divorced, and the demons within her took over.

Just before her suicide, she told a Life magazine interviewer: "I never understood it—the sex symbol—I always thought symbols were things you clash together. That's the trouble, a sex symbol becomes a thing—I just hate to be a thing."

Playwright Miller explained her dilemma most poetically in an essay, "Tragedy in the Common Man," written in 1966, four years after her death. It was not about her, but about tragic dramas. Yet, between the lines, I always see Marilyn.

A tragic feeling comes over us, he wrote, when we are in the presence of a character torn away from his chosen image of who and what he is in the world, "a character who is ready to lay down his life to secure one thing—his sense of personal dignity."

A sense of dignity, a pride of self, is what the women's movement is all about. If Marilyn Monroe had lived these 20 years, I like to think she would have been touched and influenced by, perhaps even turned on by, feminism.

Today's symbol of sex and cleavage is Dolly Parton, who, at 36, is the same age as actress Monroe when she took her life. Feminist Parton said in a recent interview that she "cussed and fought" to keep control of her songs in her new movie, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." Unlike Marilyn, she reportedly has one of the shrewdest heads for money in showbiz.

Radioactive Waste Sites Been Picked?

WASHINGTON — One of the hottest issues in Washington these days — almost literally — is where the federal government will decide to dump radioactive garbage from the nation's nuclear power plants. Nobody wants nuclear waste in his own backyard.

The Department of Energy vigorously denies that it has decided where to bury nuclear waste. But I can tell you this much: Nevada and Washington are the leading candidates for the radioactive refuse.

DOE officials told my reporter Michael Binsteln that there are still at least six states under consideration for the dubious honor of receiving nuclear waste, which is deposited deep underground where it supposedly won't make the local population's hair drop out, or render the neighbors sterile.

The Energy Department insists that it has no favorites among the six or more states under consideration, and that the "site identification" process that will narrow the choice down to three states is still wide open. But I am told that after Nevada and Washington, Utah glows brightest on the agency's dump list.

Oddly enough, the agency's own statements to Congress belie its "wide open" protestations. In a recent letter to the House subcommittee on energy conservation and power, DOE said the first phase of its research on the Nevada Test Site and the Hanford, Wash., Reservation has been completed, and the agency was ready to move on to the next stage, "site characterization."

"It should be noted that the Department has already completed the site identification process, has begun preparation for sinking exploratory shafts at these two sites and will be ready to drill the first exploratory shafts early next year," the June 15 letter states.

Asked about the letter, DOE Assistant Secretary Richard C. Odle Jr. at first said he couldn't recall the letter. Then he said, "I'm trying to get a waste bill through Congress and those were legal comments to Congress." He referred further questions to DOE attorneys.

DOE's assistant general counsel, Leon Silverstein, said the letter was poorly drafted, and merely suggested "that the process has identified these two areas as continuing to deserve more attention."

But an official of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission confirmed that the Nevada and Washington sites would make the final list of three nuclear waste dumps. John Mountain, an official of the Battelle Memorial Institute, which is a major DOE contractor, said that the second phase — site characterization — had already begun on the two sites.

On Faculty Leftism

In a recent column, I dealt with what is certainly an often-told tale, the peculiar leftism of the American academic community, these reflections being occasioned by a —once more—startling piece in "This World" magazine about the political views of professors of theology.

As I reported, those views are roughly the same as the views of humanities professors in the liberal arts generally. Some two-thirds in elite schools supported George McGovern in 1972. More than half regard right-wing dictatorships friendly to the United States as more of a threat than communism. Socialist redistribution toward income equality commands wide support, etc. And the leftism increases as the quality of the college or university goes up.

I reported on these results, considering that it is always well to keep the academic situation in mind, but I did not have the space to speculate on the roots of this peculiar phenomenon. Herewith, a few thoughts.

First and foremost, an academic career in many cases the result of a conscious decision not to participate in the ordinary productive or professional life of the outer society. It represents the negation of the outer capitalist arrangements. The demand for income equality and redistribution represents an envious response to high salaries outside and an attack upon the profit motive.

Indicative of all this is that the sectors of the academy that have the most interaction with the outer society tend to be the most conservative: the faculties of the business schools, the engineers, and the hard sciences.

The more abstract and purely academic fields tend to be the most radical: mathematics, philosophy, religion—and, surprise, classics. I was startled, during the '60s, to find that young academics going into Latin and Greek studies were often Marxists, their classicism representing some desire for another and more remote reality. Noam Chomsky of M.I.T., perhaps our leading philosophical linguist, is also a Trotskyite anti-American in his political writing.

But I would like to make a second point. It seems to me that there is an important distinction to be made between problem-solving politics and feel-good politics. The politics of intellectuals generally and academicians specifically tends to be of the feel-good sort.

The game played on the campus is to take political positions of great symbolic and emotional value to those taking them, but of little or no practical consequence. Such as removing university investments from South Africa. This would mean nothing economically to South Africa and would chiefly penalize students, whose fees might well rise. But that position "feels good." Ditto nuclear disarmament, etc.

It is part of feel-good politics that student polemics of the left, anti the outer society, are received hospitably by college faculties, while student polemics in behalf, say, of Ronald Reagan are greeted with threats of suppression.

What we see on the American campus today is essentially a rejectionist syndrome. The favorite leftist themes have been clobbered in the outer society, and most of their conspicuous spokesmen retired from public office, including George McGovern.

But in the academic enclave the old faith lives on, all the more congealed and bitter because of its decisive defeats elsewhere.

No Way Out For S. Africa

There are 20,000 South African troops stationed in Namibia. They are an occupying army, illegally imposing the South African system of apartheid on Namibia's black population.

There are 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola. They are there at the invitation of Angola's government, just as American troops are stationed in host countries around the world.

The Cubans helped protect Angola from unceasing attacks by South Africa.

Most of the world believes that the South Africans have no business in Namibia. Yet, the South Africans have resisted attempts to make them leave for more than three decades. The South African occupation, a continuation of a League of Nations' mandate granted in 1920, has long since been declared illegal.

But in a curious turn of events dictated more by Cold War politics than by African realities, the legally invited Cubans in Angola have become the focus of Western concern, rather than the South African occupation force in Namibia. South Africa has insisted that departure of the Cuban troops must precede its own withdrawal from Namibia.

The contact group composed of the United States, France, Canada, Britain and West Germany — whose three years of negotiations have failed to dent South African intransigence — now has agreed to link the Cuban departure with Namibian independence.

Two months ago, President Reagan affirmed the Cuban linkage when he said, "The simultaneous withdrawal of the Cuban forces from Angola is essential to achieving Namibian independence, as well as creating long-range prospects for peace in the region."

For the Reagan administration, the Cuban troops provide proof of the Soviet Union's designs on southern Africa.

While sharing the U.S. administration's paranoia about communism, the South Africans have another reason for wanting to rid Angola of its Cuban protection: The Cubans hinder the South Africans' desire to expand their northern borders to the banks of the Cunene River, the current dividing line between independent Angola and South African-ruled Namibia.

The five Western states of the contact group have proposed a dual system of elections for Namibia. Half of the constituent assembly would be chosen by proportional representation in which each party would receive a number of seats based on its percentage of the total vote; the other half of the seats would be assigned by districts based on a winner-take-all rule.

This system — designed to insure that whites have an influence in the Namibian government disproportionate to their numbers — has been rejected by the Namibian independence group, SWAPO, and its African supporters.

If the South Africans force this race-based election scheme upon Namibia, they will have successfully interposed that territory between themselves and the black-ruled states to the north. That is the purpose that Namibia has served under South African control and the purpose that South Africa intends for a nominally independent Namibia to serve if and when the territory is granted its freedom.

If the South Africans prevail — as they have in the negotiations so far — SWAPO will continue its armed struggle against the occupiers.

In South Africa itself, where one of every three persons is a black non-citizen, the government is desperately trying to create a new constitutional system.

That government, now totally in the hands of the white minority, wants to involve the nation's 2.5 million "coloreds" (those of mixed races) and 750,000 Asians in a coalition against the 21 million-member black majority. The coloreds and the Asians would remain voteless, but they would be represented in ethnic parliaments by representatives chosen by the white minority.

This plan is doomed to failure, as are the artificially created "homelands" for South Africa's rural blacks and the forced resettlement of urban blacks in those areas. It is like rearranging deck chairs on the Titanic, with as little chance of preventing the eventual sinking of a mortally wounded ship of state.

Chiles Praised For Hospice Help

It's rare, if not unheard of, to be able to provide more and better services to people by spending less of the taxpayers' money instead of more. However, thanks to the leadership of Sen. Lawton Chiles, that's exactly what occurred in the wee hours of the morning on the floor of the U.S. Senate this past Friday.

Senator Chiles led a bipartisan coalition which passed legislation allowing terminally ill Americans to use their Medicare-eligibility to obtain hospice services. This legislation will provide compassionate, humane, competent hospice services as an alternative to more costly, often painful, and frequently unwanted institutionalization of the terminally ill.

We were there in the Senate gallery as Senator Chiles helped generate 67 Senate votes, on both sides of the aisle, to add the hospice benefit to the Senate tax bill.

Last December, when the hospice legislation was being developed, Senator Chiles took a personal interest. He listened to the needs of those who suffer from terminal illness and made the personal commitment that he would help. While others in Washington acted on the belief that the only way to save money was to cut Medicare benefits for the elderly, Senator Chiles began looking for ways to find alternative benefits that would let people choose, voluntarily, services that met needs while saving dollars. The Senator's support of hospice makes a lot of sense when the Congressional Budget Office, the independent arm of Congress which determines the budgetary impact of proposed legislation, reported recently that passage of the hospice bill would save at least $109 million in federal spending over the next five years in reduced institutionalization.

Over those same five years, about 100,000 Florida families will be faced with the complex problems and trauma associated with terminal disease. Nothing can make dying easy. But hospice programs can meet the physical and emotional problems of terminally ill people and their families with great care, compassion, and competence. People in Florida and throughout America who will benefit from hospice will have Senator Lawton Chiles to thank.

On behalf of the many Floridians who today give of themselves to help provide hospice services, we thank Senator Lawton Chiles.

U.S. Economy Has Run Out Of Gas

Today, the American economy is like a car that has run out of gas. A car without gas does not run. Neither does an economy without money. If gas costs too much, people cannot afford to buy it. If money costs too much (interest rates), then people cannot afford to borrow it.

It is when people stop spending money that factories stop producing and the unemployment lines begin to grow. Today, 10 million Americans are out of work because of a shortage of low interest credit and a shortage of money period.

While the news commentator is on national television focus the nation's attention on the Federal deficits, most people's attention is focused on their own deficits. The Constitution of the United States gives Congress the power to coin money and determine the value thereof.

Why does not Congress coin money and lend it to the people to use interest free or at low rates of interest?

Today, the United States has enough gold and silver bullion in Fort Knox and elsewhere that it could create 200 billion in coins if it stamped a dollar value of $500 on each 1/2 ounce gold coin and a $20 value on each one ounce silver coin. Congress should then immediately give $15 to $20 billion to local city and state governments to help them solve their present financial crisis. Also, right now, another $50 billion should be lent out through the SBA and FHA and other government agencies at low rates of interest (6 percent or less) to revive the automobile, housing, farmers and small business industries.

If you would like to see the depression come to a quick end, then send a copy of this letter to the President, to both of our senators and to our Congressman, Bill Nelson. Ask them to implement these proposals immediately.

Voters Should Be Well Informed

The proposed new tax legislation recently passed by the U.S. Senate, which is composed of 59 percent lawyers, increased taxes on all U.S. citizens, including the children and the elderly, for the medical services they receive.

However, lawyer's fees incurred by U.S. citizens remain 100 percent deductible if they are for business purposes and for some non-business purposes. This new tax bill will now go to the U.S. House of Representatives, composed of 47 percent lawyers for final approval. One could speculate that the new tax bill was drafted and submitted by lawyers.

One could conclude:

- 1) The majority of the U.S. Senate considers the medical welfare of the citizenry not as important as the continued financial well-being of the legal profession.
- 2) In the new tax bill, the business of the legal profession continues to remain untouched.
- 3) The American Bar Association, as well as State Bar Associations have a somewhat hidden lobby in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives.

The lobby is paid for by the federal taxes of the U.S. citizen.

If citizens cared for their future financial well-being they would:

- 1) Vote.
 - 2) Vote responsibly; know all about their candidates, including their occupations and political philosophy.
 - 3) Demand of their newspapers front page information on qualifications, occupation and political philosophy.
- These are truly important to our future, more so than any front page article yet written.

Shuttle Out Of Space Junk

It seems that now the race is on to come up with a really cost efficient replacement for the space shuttle. The space shuttle is a giant flop cost wise and would bankrupt the government in any serious attempt to build space stations, space hotels, moon taxis, etc. What was it last time — 70 million dollars a shot?

Now we are getting news releases that NASA is studying a mini space shuttle to be fired into orbit from the back of their 747 jumbo jet. This now carries the space shuttle around between flights.

This is the first indication that NASA realizes that the space shuttle now being tested will never do much useful work. It just isn't worth paying for the launches. It is somewhat like using the Queen Elizabeth to deliver Chinese fortune cookies.

In my previous letter on this subject (April 4, 1982), I described the space Cannon that would fire tons into orbit at a much lower cost.

Recently, I have been working on another design that would absolutely be rock bottom cheap. We shall call this one High Glider. It would be possible to start putting many tons into orbit very quickly with this design.

This one is going to be built out of nothing but junk. Space junk.

First, you take two B-52s and do a little modification work on them.

The first one we will call Hot Rod. It gets new afterburning engines out of junk fighter planes. It also gets strap on rocket boosters and a big rocket engine in the bomb bay. The reason is because it must be able to do Mach 2 (twice the speed of sound) at 60,000 feet while climbing almost straight up and towing.

High Glider is our other B-52 with most of its jet engines stripped off and replaced with strap on rocket boosters and internal mounted retro rockets. This one gets the full space treatment of venies rockets and attitude gyros, etc., because it is meant to carry lots of space cargo into orbit.

Hot Rod towing High Glider take off the ground in normal glider fashion. When at extreme altitude and air speed High Glider will fire its orbit injection rocket boosters to send it into low earth orbit. At the same time it will cut loose its tow line from Hot Rod which will return to base to pick up High Glider II and so on. Two flights a day easy.

After High Glider has delivered its tons of materials, etc., to the space station building site it will be time to de-orbit. Powerful retro rockets will knock off considerable speed and then down it comes. However, High Glider doesn't come out of orbit like a falling brick the way the space shuttle does. To do so would quickly burn off those lovely 1962-vintage aluminum wings. Rather, it is round and round we go as High Glider skims the upper atmosphere with brake parachutes open. Five, six, seven times around the earth before enough speed is lost to allow safe descent into the thicker air of the lower atmosphere.

When below 60,000 feet High Glider starts its four jet engines and returns to base to pick up more cargo.

Maybe in 40 years it will be time to retire Hot Rod and High Glider. The space cannon will then be delivering cargo and passengers to the Space Colony at even lower cost. The Space Colony will be a beautiful second moon 20 miles in diameter.

An interesting place to stop over for a few days until the next Moon Taxi comes in.

If you are a serious career man in space and not just a tourist it will then be Mars, the moons of Jupiter and Saturn and its a big universe kid.

Private Pension System Support Sought

We request the assistance of Sen. Paula Hawkins in defeating any attempt to weaken the private pension system in this country, specifically HR 6410, and any similar action from the Senate. With Social Security in the condition that it is, this is a very poor time to be attacking private pension plans. In addition to delaying spending in favor of savings, two very positive results occur: (1) inflation is eased and (2) capital formation for business investment is accomplished.

It is impossible to estimate how many plans will be terminated if this bill becomes law. It would be even more difficult to determine the number of plans that will not be started because of such a law. We believe private pension plans should be encouraged. Please do not support the proposed changes.

Local Governments Have Active Business Week

This past week's local government action has included much. A capsule includes the following:

The Casselberry City Council

—Adopted a resolution opposing U.S. Senate Bill 2172 that would authorize the federal communications Commission to establish a national rate for cable television franchise fees, thus removing the franchise fee regulation from the local government level.

—Adopted a resolution opposing Florida Power Corporation's concept of abolishing Municipal Service Rate schedules that give municipal governments a 15 percent discount on utility fees.

—Approved an expenditure of up to $100 for lobbying efforts and joint legal fees with the Florida League of Cities to oppose Florida Power Corporation's move to abolish Municipal Service Rates.

—Tabled action on a request from Fire Chief Paul Algeri for $500 to cover overtime expenses for arson investigation and safety inspections for the final two months of the fiscal year.

—Approved a $550 bid from James Lynch and a $726 bid from James K. Talbert for the purchase of two used city utility trucks.

—Approved permission for city Utilities Director Ed Kruling to advertise for bids for two other used utility trucks.

—Approved renewing the city's liability insurance coverage with Home Insurance Co. at a cost of $54,393.

—Approved a $124 expenditure to cover increased cost supplies for the city's check writing machine.

The Altamonte Springs City Commission did not meet this week. The commission will resume regular meetings on Sept. 7.

The Longwood City Commission did not meet this week. The commission will resume regular meetings Monday. Seminole County commissioners this week.

—Asked the supervisor of elections and the judiciary branch to conform to county hiring policies or develop their own systems. That action came after the elections office and the judges hired personnel without following normal septic tank procedures of advertising the job opening, county officials said.

—Agreed to continue preparations for converting the county's building and development permit procedures to a computer. The conversion would take place over several years and would streamline the process, county officials said.

—Agreed to place more stringent requirements on firms which submit septic tank permit applications. The tougher requirements are designed to force companies filing those applications to provide more accurate information.

—Rejected a list of 50 job reclassifications for county employees. Commissioners said they wanted to discuss the changes at a work session before making any decisions.

The Seminole County School Board did not meet this week. Its next regular meeting is scheduled for Wednesday.

Some Start Drinking More After They Retire

Q. My husband retired from public-relations work about eight months ago at the age of 65. Since he has been home, he has begun to drink a great deal.

He always liked a drink or two before dinner, but this pattern is very different. He often starts drinking before noon. I'm afraid he's becoming an alcoholic.

A. Unfortunately, the tendency to drink excessively after retirement is not as unusual as you might think.

Many people are not prepared for the dramatic changes that may result from retirement, especially if leaving work is not a thoughtful choice, but rather a forced condition.

Although a larger percentage of elderly alcohol abusers have drunk excessively throughout their lives, some older people who are confronted with new stresses after retirement—such as lower income, loss of status, idleness or declining health—look toward alcohol or other drugs to dull the pain or disappointment.

The abuse of alcohol among older people is likely to create serious problems.

Along with the inherent health risks associated with alcoholism, alcohol use heightens the risk of negative drug interactions. Since the elderly take 25 percent of all prescription drugs in this country, we are more vulnerable to this problem.

Another complication arises because alcohol may make detection and

Growing Older
U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper

diagnosis of medical conditions more difficult.

Your husband is fortunate that you have recognized his problem. With help, he may avoid very serious consequences.

Share your concerns with him, but be aware that he may deny the problem to himself and to you at first. Your support will mean a great deal.

Remember that there are generally excellent community resources, such as counseling and treatment programs, to help deal with alcohol-related problems.

Q. There are many conflicting theories about staying healthy and young after 65. I've heard about massive vitamin therapies and miracle skin treatments, but I'm cynical in my old age. What do you think?

A. I think a touch of cynicism is a healthy reaction to any "miracle" treatments to improve the quality of life.

However, there are some commonsense ways to maintain good health and vitality that have a great deal of scientific support.

Stop smoking, for one. Eat moderately and nutritiously, for another.

And stay active! I can't overemphasize how important that has been in my own life. Keeping the mind alert and the body as active as possible seems to me the real key to improving the quality of life at any age.

Exercise has the potential to strengthen heart and lungs, lower blood pressure and protect against adult-onset diabetes. Exercise may also strengthen bones, tone muscles, help keep joints and tendons flexible.

You'll probably be more energetic, sleep better and generally feel better if you get involved in an exercise program.

Of course, see a doctor first and discuss the best program for you considering any medical conditions you may have. And start very slowly. Five to 10 minutes twice a week is a very sensible beginning if you have been inactive for some time.

Build up very slowly. Your body will signal you as to its readiness and resilience. If you feel discomfort, stop. Ease up and start again at another time.

I'm always willing to listen to new ideas, whatever the subject. But I share your feeling that there are no simple answers to the complex life process we share. The important thing is to stay active and remain aware—and when science offers evidence to support a new idea, I'll pay it heed as well.

U. S. Senate Has Its Share Of One-Man Crusaders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A stubborn man, whether motivated by passion or politics, can have a remarkable impact on Senate legislation.

In the process he will lose friends, incur enemies, risk reprisals and feel the wrath of the leaders.

But the history of the Senate is replete with men who went their own way and ignored the adage that in Congress "to get along, go along."

The most deft practitioners of the art in the Senate today probably are Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Jesse Helms of North Carolina.

Although Metzenbaum and Weicker, both very liberal on social and consumer issues, are frequently allies, they seem to pick their own fights. Helms is invariably on the opposite side.

They have vividly demonstrated during the last year what one senator can accomplish.

Witness the major rewrite of a bill providing subsidized federal irrigation water for Western farmers — courtesy of Metzenbaum.

By stubbornly refusing to buckle before an overwhelming majority, he forced key changes on acreage limits and water-pricing formulas.

Several basic elements operated in Metzenbaum's favor.

It was Friday and senators were chafing to leave the torrid capital for easier climes.

And the time agreement which had been agreed to — without Metzenbaum's consent — permitted one hour for each amendment but no limit on the number that could be offered.

Metzenbaum spelled out the rules. Either the floor managers of the bill would accept his changes or he was prepared to begin offering the first of the more than 80 amendments his staff had prepared. The Senate was paralyzed.

The abuse was quick in coming. Ted Stevens, the salsatemped assistant GOP leader, said Metzenbaum had "violated one of the basic rules of the Senate, which is to be a gentleman."

That really was mild. Metzenbaum, in an exchange earlier in the year, was addressed as the "senator from B'nai B'rith."

Finally, it was the majority that surrendered.

Metzenbaum and the floor managers of the bill left the chamber for a couple of hours. When they returned it was with an agreement incorporating the Ohio Democrats' changes.

Weicker, the towering Republican from Connecticut, singlehandedly staved off passage of anti-busing legislation for over nine months — forcing the Senate to impose cloture on him four times.

New Grads In Big Demand

Doctor Aides Not Hurt By Jobless Woes

Although the job market is highly competitive for many college graduates, most of the 29 students who graduated Friday from Florida's only physician assistant training program will be able to choose from several job offers.

Directors of the University of Florida's Physician Assistant Program have reported each member of this year's graduating class is receiving at least three offers from around the country to practice in a variety of settings including rural areas, emergency rooms, general surgery and cardiology. All but one of the students in the current graduating class will remain in Florida.

The graduates Friday included Roger J. Madore Jr. of Sanford and Barbee Ann Dyer of Apopka.

According to the school, Madore has accepted a position at the Union General Hospital at Lake Butler near Gainesville and Miss Dyer is still considering where she wants to work.

"The only trouble our graduates will have is trying to decide which offer to take," said Richard Wilkes, associate director and clinical coordinator of the UF program. Wilkes has been teaching in the program since its inception in 1972. "Physician assistants (P.A.s) throughout the country are finding jobs easily. Several national studies have found them to be highly useful, quality care practitioners. Just as important, doctors are finding the employment of P.A.s to be cost efficient."

During two years of course work and clinical experience, P.A.s are trained to relieve physicians of routine tasks, such as taking initial patient histories, ordering appropriate laboratory tests, making hospital rounds and patient counseling. With average annual salaries starting at $19,000 and an increasing demand for their services, admittance to the nation's 53 schools is highly competitive, program spokesmen said.

The students who are graduating Friday received a bachelor's degree from the College of Medicine's Department of Community Health and Family Medicine. Future graduates will receive a bachelor of health sciences degree.

While the curriculum and reliance on the medical school faculty will continue, a transition is underway. A search committee is in the process of recruiting a program director and three faculty members who meet the university's standards for academic appointments. There will be an increased emphasis on faculty research and public service.

"We have been delayed in recruiting for the program because of funding uncertainties, but we have just recently been assured that we will be able to convert some of the state money already appropriated into faculty positions next year," said Dr. Barry Green, interim director. A new class of 29 is set to begin Aug. 23.

Coins 'Will Do

FLORENCE, Ala. (UPI) — A Colbert County woman lives about 18 miles from the nearest post office and that distance prompted her last month to tape coins on the upper righthand corner of a letter instead of a postage stamp.

Pearl Smith of the Spring Valley community wanted to send a letter to her sister who was visiting a daughter in Tampa, Fla. So, she taped a dime and two nickels to the site usually occupied by a stamp.

"I didn't mean it as a joke," Mrs. Smith said. "I just ran out of stamps."

Smith said the letter sent to her sister contained "a pack of foolishness."

"We tease one another all the time. I told her to find me a redheaded boyfriend while she was gone."

Lilly Clemons of Florence returned from her Florida trip without the redhead, but with the letter — neatly framed with the coins still in place.

This isn't the first time Mrs. Smith has used coins instead of a stamp.

"Once before I put a letter in the mailbox with the money on top of it, but it was returned to me three or four months later," Mrs. Smith said she assumed the money fell onto the ground when the postman took it out of her mailbox.

Telephone Manners

Reach Out And Touch Someone, Courteously

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

In a time when communicating by telephone has become virtually second nature, one aspect of that communication seems to have taken a back seat: Phone courtesy.

While almost every facet of society relies to some extent on the ability to communicate by phone, the business community relies more than ever on Ma Bell as its lifeline.

Unfortunately, business executives who generally have impeccable manners, great speaking skills in a face-to-face situation, and refined social appearance, often have no manners at all when it comes to speaking on the phone.

As to their secretaries, there seems to be either one of two categories; either perfectly courteous and exact in efficiency, or sadly lacking in the art of telephone communication.

Southern Bell District Manager Larry Strickler says that business executives with good phone manners usually practice a "rule of thumb."

"Answering your own phone as often as you can and never having your secretary call someone else and have that party hold until you can come to the phone are the extreme examples of good phone courtesy and bad phone courtesy," said Strickler.

One Sanford businessman who gets more than his share of good and bad examples of telephone courtesy is Sanford City Manager Warren "Pete" Knowles.

Knowles said on the average he receives or makes 56 calls per day pertaining to city business.

"With an average of five minutes each call, and most are usually longer, that can eat up a pretty good chunk of your day," Knowles said.

With all that time spent on the phone, Knowles said he's seen the best and worst of telephone courtesy.

"The biggest thing that drives me to distraction," Knowles said "is that some people have their secretaries call you and ask you to hold until their boss can come to the phone. That makes you feel like the person calling you thinks his time is more valuable than yours."

"It can alienate one of the parties real quick and make them feel somewhat inferior," he said.

Another of Knowles' pet phone peeves is the guessing game.

Louise DeRosa, switchboard operator at the Seminole County Courthouse, deals with hundreds of callers each day with a variety of different telephone manners and courtesies.

"Being a city or government figure you come in contact with a lot of different people throughout the year that you might see only once in a while. They call up and say: Guess who this is?"

"I cured that problem once by telling the caller I didn't care who it was, I didn't know and then hung up," Knowles said.

"Another thing that bugs the hell out of me is to have someone's secretary call and ask what my call was in reference to if I was trying to get hold of someone. If I had wanted to talk to a secretary, I would have called her," he continued.

Knowles pointed out that persons who call structural organizations, such as city governments or the county government, will always have to go through a receptionist to reach the party they need to talk to.

"That's a simple case of the switchboard operator shutting the calls to the different departments. It's a sorting out process which usually occurs in municipalities up to the state government level," Knowles said.

He added a lot of callers trying to reach someone at the state level get the telephone run around because they don't use the state directory in the phone book.

"When that happens, it's the caller's fault. People waste their own time by not using the directory. The beauty of the telephone system is that if it's used properly, it is the best form of communication in the United States," Knowles said.

Some of the other common complaints expressed by business people who rely heavily on telephone communications include being put on hold for days at a time or having to wade through several secretaries to finally get to the person the caller needs to talk to.

"I got put on hold once for 20 minutes," said one businessman. "And not once during that period did the secretary come back on the line and ask me if I wished to continue to hold. If it takes that long to get the other party, the secretary should check back frequently to see if the caller wants to remain holding or should offer to take a message."

Another executive complained about explaining who he was and what his call was in reference to four different people before finally reaching the right person.

"By that time I forgot what I was calling about," said the businessman.

Strickler said that Southern Bell often publishes a checklist for common phone courtesy that is a valuable asset to the business world.

According to the checklist, every business could improve its image with its callers by following some of the basic rules of proper telephone manners which include:

- (1.) Always place your own calls. Avoid the "I am more important or busier than you" insult to the called party.
- (2.) Answer your own phone when you are available.
- (3.) Announce yourself immediately when calling or answering. Don't chance being recognized.
- (4.) Be sure persons answering your phone when you are unavailable offers to take a message. Don't require callers to call back later.
- (5.) When a caller is put on hold when you are unavailable, be sure someone frequently checks back with the caller to see if he or she wants to continue to wait.
- (6.) Be sure a caller does not have to go through a succession of receptionists that are asking, "Who's calling?"

Orange Juice Sales Improve

For the first time in more than a year, retail sales of frozen concentrated orange juice in a specified two-month period moved to the plus side in comparison with volume sales for the same two months a year earlier, industry officials have reported.

A food index report to the Florida Department of Citrus from the A.C. Nielsen Co., revealed that sales of 81 million single strength gallons of concentrated orange juice during April-May bettered the same period in 1981 by 5 percent. Retail dollar sales of $233 million topped last year by 6 percent.

Gallon sales of ready-to-serve (chilled) orange juice in glass, carton, and plastic also turned around for the first time in a year, with 48.5 million gallons representing a 7 percent gain over April-May a year ago. Another 7 percent increase was posted with dollar sales of $168 million, the second highest level on record.

Volume sales of 4.2 million gallons of canned orange juice meant a drop of 7 percent under last year, with dollar sales of $16 million down by 4 percent.

Frozen concentrated grapefruit juice sales of 2.3 million single strength gallons held even with the year-ago period, while dollar sales of $6.1 million were off by only 1 percent.

An 8 percent drop was registered by the sale of 4.9 million gallons of ready-to-serve (chilled) grapefruit juice in bottle and carton. Dollar sales of $19.8 million were down by 3 percent.

Canned grapefruit juice sales of 8.6 million gallons marked a 10 percent gain over last year, although dollar sales of $24.9 million were off by 1 percent.

Total volume sales for all forms of orange juice turned around for the first time in more than a year to register a 5 percent increase at 134 million single strength gallons. A gain of 6 percent was noted in sales of $417 million for orange juice products.

For grapefruit juice, volume sales of 15.8 million single strength gallons meant a 2 percent increase, while dollar sales of $50.8 million dropped 1 percent under last year's level.

Florida Growing Film Center

Florida seems to be headed toward a record-breaking year in film production in 1982, coming off a booming schedule the first six months of the year and into an even more promising second half, Secretary of Commerce Stuart Edgerly has announced.

"The first six months of this year were probably the most successful that the state's film industry has ever experienced in terms of numbers of productions and dollars," said Edgerly. "Florida clearly remains the third largest film production center in the nation, and the movie and television capital of the South."

Edgerly said a total of 22 major film productions with combined budgets of $46 million and more than $25 million worth of TV commercials went into production in Florida during the first half of this year.

He said several more film projects with budgets totaling $72.5 million are scheduled to begin shooting in the next few months. He also noted the prime television commercial season will begin in October.

According to Edgerly, Florida could double its output of major films and match or exceed last year's record commercial production total by the end of 1982. Last year, 13 major film productions with combined budgets of $50.3 million and $60 million worth of TV commercials were produced in Florida despite a national writers' strike and a threatened directors' strike that virtually immobilized U.S. production between April and July.

Projects completed in the first half of 1982 include 12 feature films or major television movies; two TV series; three special TV programs; a documentary film and a news special.

Feature films include "Stand On It," "Oldsmobile," "Hobo Joe," "The Saint Against the Crime God," "Hands Off the Island," "King of the Amazons," "Tournament," "Cross Creek," "Eureka," "Blue Skies Again," "Baby It's You," and "Little Gloria Happy At Last."

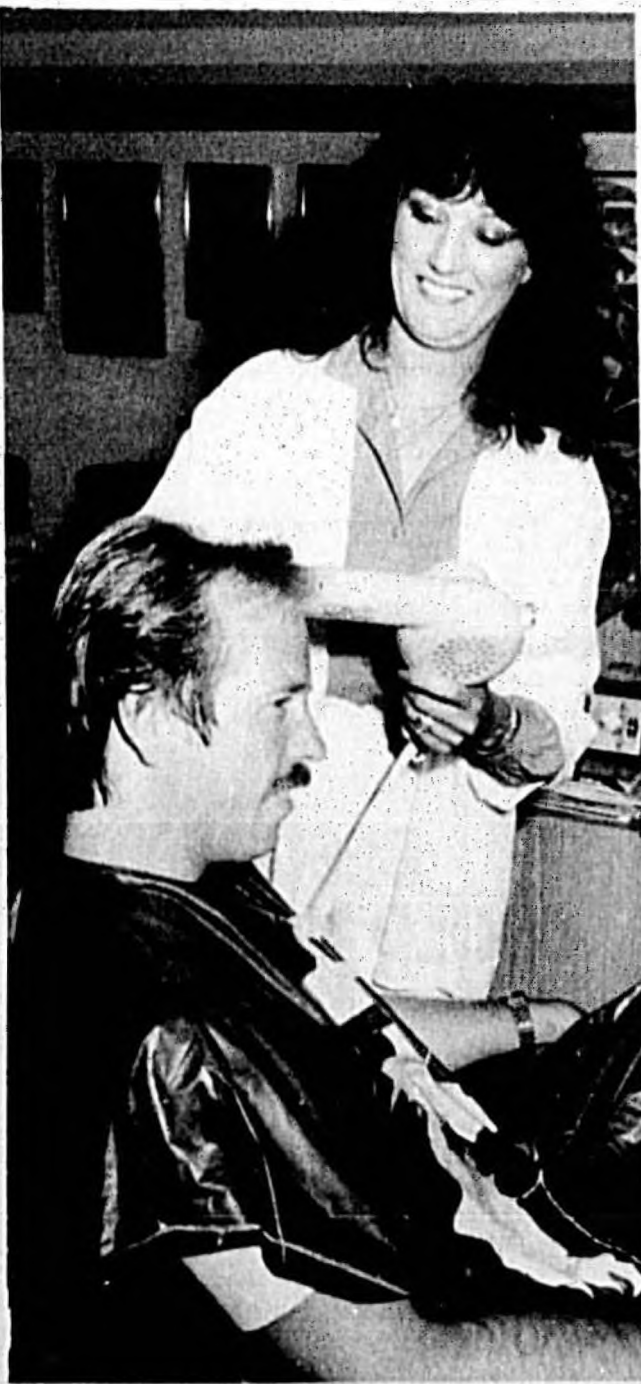

Other projects include an ABC-TV soap opera; ABC's "Superstars;" a TV series, "Fishing Fever;" a TV special, "The Greatest Show on Earth"; a Quim Martin production, "Counter Attack"; a documentary, "Pictures of America"; and a segment of PM Magazine.

Edgerly said three movies are currently being filmed in Florida. "Porky's the Next Day", a sequel to the phenomenally successful original "Porky's" is the final stages of production in South Florida. "Spring Break," a Sean Cunningham Films project is being shot in Ft. Lauderdale. "The Last Plan Out", a Jack Cox production starring Jan Michael Vincent, is being made in Vero Beach and Greater Miami.

Shooting schedules for two more major films have been announced. "Where the Boys Are Now", an Alan Carr production will be made in September in Ft. Lauderdale; "Smoky III, Bandit O" a Mort Engelberg production starring Burt Reynolds will utilize locations in Ocala and South Florida in the fall.

"Under the direction of Gov. Bob Graham, Florida is making a serious bid to become one of the film capitals of the nation," he said.

Evening Herald, Sanford, Fl. Sunday, Aug. 8, 1982—9A

Tournament Officials, City Workers Turn In Blue-Ribbon Performance

If you happened to be at Sanford's Chase Park this week you witnessed one of the smoothest run tournaments ever put on for the Florida Junior Major League state championship.

In fact, it's quite a few steps above the Florida Little Major League tourney in Tallahassee last week.

The comparisons start with the pre-tournament meal. In Tallahassee the teams were treated to a catered meal of "raw" chicken, baked beans, "cold" slaw and watered-down iced tea that none of the players would drink.

The only bright spot of the meal was the table of desserts, which ran out before Sanford even got to it. Let's put it this way, that meal was so bad that even Todd Revels wouldn't eat it.

On the other hand, the Junior League meal at the Sanford Civic Center on Sunday received a lot of compliments from players, coaches and fans from each team in the tourney.

The actual running of the tournaments are not close in comparison. I can't remember hearing anything positive from anybody about the tourney in Tallahassee.

However, the coaches, fans and people from other cities have praised the tourney, the condition of Chase Park, the grounds' crew and coverage in The Evening Herald.

"Over the last 10 years I've attended more than a dozen state tournaments and this is the second that I've been involved in putting on," tournament Director Gary Taylor said. "The coaches and players in this tournament are by far the best behaved and most sportsmanlike that I've ever seen."

"I've even heard comments from employees of the motels where they are staying about how quiet and well-behaved the teams are."

Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

It's just too bad state Commissioner Randy Trousdell couldn't make the trip.

Trousdell said he wouldn't be able to make it unless his son's team made the tournament, a tournament official said.

He later told the Evening Herald he had budget meetings. District 4 commissioner Dave Fleming is on vacation and couldn't attend even though he knew eight years ago the tournament would be in Sanford.

District 3 commissioner Gerry Hurst attended Thursday's game and was "very impressed with the handling of the tournament."

All of the commissioners were at the tourney in Tallahassee because of a required meeting for commissioners. It doesn't appear that anybody misses the appearance of Trousdell or Fleming.

The Evening Herald received several phone calls last week when Jim Jernigan, Sanford director of parks and recreation, was selected by Trousdell to fill his void as "acting commissioner."

"That wasn't fair to Gary Taylor," one of the callers said. "Everybody knows Gary is the Sanford recreation department. He's the guy who organizes all the leagues."

Trousdell said Jernigan was chosen because he was a member of the association and he had experience in operating state tournaments in the past. "I didn't know that anyone was displeased with Jim down there," said Trousdell. "In the past when he was state commissioner I thought he did a good job."

A couple of weeks before the tournament at Chase Park, two of the teams visited the field and couldn't foresee a state tournament being held at such a place.

At the time there was no press box, no scoreboard and no bleachers.

Two weeks later, viola! A very well constructed press box, a scoreboard and enough bleachers for at least 400 spectators. With 100 or so people in lawn chairs, each game has had an estimated 500 or more people in attendance.

The only time Tallahassee had that many in the crowd was when the local team was playing. Sanford does not have a team in the Junior League tournament but a lot of Sanford people have been turning out.

"The cooperation from the city of Sanford has been outstanding," Taylor said. "Howard Jeffries and his parks department crew did a super job getting the field ready for the tournament and maintaining it this week. Everybody agrees the field is in the best condition it has ever been in."

"Blair Kitner was responsible for building the press box and he really did an outstanding job. He took a lot of time away from his business and contributed financially to make it possible for us to have one of the nicest press boxes I've ever seen at a youth baseball field."

Incidentally, the "press box" in Tallahassee looked like something a hunter would construct for a deer stand. I would tell you more about it but there was never any room for me to climb up to take a closer look.

Footie Blanks Broncos

Kim Foote scattered nine hits and Liz Legacki ripped a bases-loaded double to drive in three runs as Hollywood Hills blanked Seminole, 5-0, in Southern Region softball action at Hollywood Hills Friday.

Softball

Manager Mike Averill's 15 and under Broncos played again Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in the double-elimination tournament.

Hollywood Hills seized a 1-0 lead in the first inning against Seminole right hander Beth Watkins and then used Legacki's double in the second to boost its lead to 5-0.

"We just got all of our hits spaced out," said Averill. "We didn't put them together for any kind of rally."

First baseman Kristie Kaiser paced the Bronco attack with a perfect 3-for-3 evening. Watkins rapped two hits in two plate appearances.

Crooms Grabs Zeiss For Football Position

Crooms High School Principal Edward Blacksheare has named George "Bill" Zeiss Jr. to the head football coaching position, the Evening Herald has learned.

Zeiss, 37, will replace Bill Klein, who stepped down after last season. Klein remains as the Crooms athletic director and math teacher.

"He sounds like he knows what he's doing," said Klein about Zeiss, who will teach physical education. "He was coaching at Bunnell when I was at the (Sanford) Naval Academy and they always had good teams."

"He should be pretty good," Klein added.

Zeiss worked for the Edwin Hatcher Company, a nuclear power plant in Baxley, Ga., as a physics technician last year.

Prior to that, he had extensive coaching experience in Florida. The 6-2, 220-pound Zeiss received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Florida Atlantic University.

From 1966 to 1969, Zeiss coached and taught physical education at Pompano Beach Senior High School. He was head junior varsity coach.

He next moved to Frostproof High School where he taught science along with coaching JV football and varsity baseball. His baseball team was a district finalist and finished with a 15-5 record.

In 1970, he moved to Bunnell High School where Zeiss put together the first winning season in eight years at the school. Bunnell finished 6-4 during Zeiss' first tenure as a head coach and was invited to the Potato Bowl in Hastings.

He taught science.

From 1971 to 1974, Zeiss coached at Jupiter High School as varsity assistant in football and head baseball. His baseball team posted a 35-25 record and once again was a district finalist.

His last coaching stop before the nuclear job was at Martin County High School in Stuart. As head ninth grade and JV football coach, he posted a fine 20-2 record.

Zeiss was also varsity assistant and taught physical education.

"Bill comes from a prime football area," said Blacksheare about his new coach. "We're very happy to get him."

The Panthers will hold an organizational meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 11 at Crooms at 5:30 p.m. Anyone interested in playing football should be in attendance.

Muhammad Drops Weight, 'Things Are Different Now'

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The last time, Matthew Saad Muhammad had to sit in a sauna and run in the biting winter cold of Atlantic City to lose 7 pounds the day of his fight against Dwight Braxton.

Saturday he won't have to do that before he steps into the ring at the Spectrum, seeking to regain the World Boxing Council light heavyweight title he lost to Braxton last Dec. 19.

Both fighters were to attend the official weigh-in at the Barclay Hotel today. The fight will begin shortly after 10 p.m. (Home Box Office cable network).

Saad Muhammad, who successfully defended his title eight times and had an 18-bout winning streak stopped by Braxton, has been in meticulous training under the watchful eye of new trainer Steve Traitz to prevent a recurrence of what happened eight months ago.

"That taught me a lesson," he said. "It cost me the last time. I wasn't careful in my training and I was well overweight. I was just too weak to put up a good fight."

Saad Muhammad weighed in for the last fight at 182 pounds and he contends all the work he had to do to get down to the 175-pound limit robbed him of his strength. He lost a 10th-round technical knockout to Braxton.

"Things are different now," the 28-year-old Philadelphia challenger said earlier in the week. "I'm already under 175. I feel strong. I want my titleback and I'm going to get it."

Braxton, 29, has laughed off Saad Muhammad's reasons for losing their last bout as an excuse. When his opponent had to take a few days off from training last month because of a knee injury, the Camden, N.J., champion dubbed the fight, "The Battle of Wounded Knee."

"He's just looking for another excuse," said Braxton, who learned his craft while serving a prison term for armed robbery. "I'll prove to him again I'm the better fighter. I haven't trained any different. My tactics and strategy will be the same. If he runs, he can't hide. If he comes to me, I'll rough him good."

The 5-foot-6 1/2 Braxton, who has a bob-and-weave style similar to that of former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, is expected to try to fight inside, preventing Saad Muhammad from using his height and reach advantage.

Saad Muhammad, meanwhile, says he will employ a more defensive boxing style he learned under Traitz. He also said he will press the attack earlier in the fight, instead of relying on a rally in the late rounds as has been his custom.

The McIntyre TKO last April 17 has been Saad Muhammad's only fight since losing the title, and was his 32nd victory (24 KOs) against four defeats and two draws.

Braxton, who is 17-1-1, has defended his title once, stopping Jerry Martin in six rounds, March 21.

Each fighter will receive $500,000 and the winner will be in line for a multimillion-dollar payday in a title unification showdown against unbeaten Michael Spinks, the World Boxing Association champion.

Braves Lead Shrinks To 3 1/2

United Press International
The Atlanta Braves are still in first place in the National League West but are keeping a wary eye on the rapidly advancing Los Angeles Dodgers.

Shortstop Rafael Ramirez's error on Steve Sax's grounder with two out in the bottom of the 10th inning scored Bill Russell to cap a two-run rally Friday night for a Los Angeles 5-4 victory over the Braves.

It was the sixth straight time the Dodgers' have won from the Braves and moved them to within 3 1/2 games of Atlanta.

Thursday night the Dodgers tied the score in the ninth and eventually won in 10 innings, but Atlanta Manager Joe Torre says firmly these late-inning losses are not a sign the Braves are folding.

He said, "Teams go through cold spells and you can't judge a team by a cold spell. We're in a cold spell now, but we've come out before and we've never been out of first place."

"It's exciting to win this way, coming from behind," exalted Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "Even when the Braves went ahead, we acted as though we knew we were going to win. That's what makes me feel good."

Claudell Washington had homered with one out in the 10th to give Atlanta a 4-3 lead, before the Dodgers rallied.

In the American League it was Kansas City, 4-1 and 4-0, over Baltimore in a doubleheader; Chicago 6, Boston 3; Milwaukee 5, Cleveland 2, in 10 innings; Detroit 6, Toronto 0; New York 6, Texas 0; Oakland 4, Minnesota 1 and California

Oh Yeah, Life Goes On For Altamonte 13-Year-Olds

"Oh yeah, life goes on even after the thrill of living is gone." Altamonte's 13-year-old baseball team lost a little of the thrill for living

Thursday night in Rockledge. Oh, it wasn't anything too catastrophic, they just lost a baseball game. But when you're just into your teens, a baseball game can be a pretty important thing. And these talented youngsters of manager Gene Letterio take their baseball pretty serious.

It wasn't so much that they lost, but the manner in which they lost. They gave it away. Altamonte held a five-run lead entering the last inning. They had two out and were just one pitch away from victory when Belmont Heights came back for five runs to tie the game.

In the next inning, the Tampa powerhouse pushed across the winning run on a perfectly-executed squeeze play by Melvin Foster for a 7-6 victory and the Florida Little League 13-Year-Olds Tournament championship.

Ironically, the same young man — Derrick Bell — who scored the winning run also was the culprit for Belmont in a similar manner last year. Then, too, Altamonte pitcher Mike Schmit was one pitch away from throttling the Belmonts when Maurice Crum singled in a run and Bell later scored to hand the Juniors a tough setback.

That setback cost the Juniors a state title. Thursday's loss just cost them a chance to play for the championship the next day, but it was devastating to say the least.

"They've worked too hard for this to happen to them," lamented one parent to himself while clinging to a fence for support.

Of all the Little Leagues in this area, Altamonte has a unique situation. The teams (Majors, Juniors and Seniors) are all highly successful and have tremendous support from parents, friends and community leaders.

Regardless of the distance of the game, it is not uncommon to see City Manager Jeff Etchberger, City Commissioner Lee Constantine and other city officials cheering on the hometown boys.

I have never attended a game when I didn't see League President John Strott in attendance. Altamonte Recreation directors and workers are also in attendance.

When Altamonte would play at Eustis at 1 p.m. and then at Winter Garden or Ocoee at 2 p.m., a great number of the fans would catch the first game and the end of the second. Some even made all three. And don't think that support isn't appreciated by the boys.

The backbone of the Altamonte organization is manager Gene Letterio. He is a tireless worker who demands perfection from his youngsters and sometimes comes very close to that perfection.

Thursday's setback was especially disheartening for Letterio. After last year's upsetting loss to Belmont, Letterio vowed to be "staring that same Belmont powerhouse in the eye one year later."

And darned if he didn't come through with his pledge.

I don't know if some people fully appreciate just how good Belmont Heights is. They have a situation in Tampa where they hand-pick the best players in the city for their all-star team.

World Championships and World Series appearances are as commonplace for these young men as they were for New York Yankees.

Last year, Belmont finished second in the World Series to Taiwan. And behind Bell's solid pitching and lusty hitting, it gave the usually dominant foreigners quite a battle.

A battle is something Belmont has only received from Altamonte the last two years. The Tampa boys usually blow away the opposition en route to the state finals where they run into Altamonte.

Twice in the last two years, the Juniors have taken leads into the last inning. Twice, they've been within one pitch of whipping this baseball machine. Thursday, they had a six-run lead.

Why don't they beat them? That's a good question. One reason is tradition. Tampa knows somehow, somehow, it will win. They don't worry about losing because they very seldom lose.

Luck, of course, has something to do with it. Hardly any of the balls hit in Thursday's five-run seventh inning were rapped with authority. Several didn't escape the infield. The tying hit was a late swing which looped into right field.

The reason Belmont beats Altamonte is the same reason Altamonte beats everybody except Belmont. Confidence. There is nothing like a World Series championship or a history of comeback wins to make the difference when the game is once again on the line.

There are those among us who feel that manager Letterio over-emphasizes baseball at this level.

I usually write this off as jealousy. Letterio's Altamonte teams are still playing when the rest have hung up the spikes for the year. Simply, Altamonte's teams are better than the rest of the county. The Majors and the Seniors both lost in Sectional championship games.

People also resent the coverage Letterio, in particular, and the rest of Altamonte receive from the media. They receive that coverage because they have a very thorough organization.

You'll never see Letterio run and hide after a tough loss. He's always receptive to the press and always returns your phone calls. And he's colorful. He doesn't give you the standard, coaches' lines. He is not afraid to tell you how he feels.

So if discipline, extra hours, hard work, classy uniforms, motel accommodations and hard-nosed winning baseball are over emphasizing the sport, give me Gene Letterio every day of the week.

No doubt, life will go on with many thrills remaining for the Altamonte throng.

Bruce Carlson, Altamonte second baseman, sprints across with a run after Dan Beaty's single against Belmont Heights Thursday night in the Florida Little League 13-Year-Old State Tournament at Rockledge. The Juniors built a 6-1 lead, but Belmont rallied to win, 7-6, in eight innings.

Punch Drunk

Floyd Follows Up With 69 To Keep Lead

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Southern Hills Country Club is punch-drunk two days into the 1982 PGA Championship but no longer is golfing heavyweight Ray Floyd the only one throwing the punches.

Floyd, who shot a course and PGA opening-round record 63 Thursday, staggered out of the Southern Hills' broiler Friday with a 1-under-par 69 to cling to a 2-stroke lead over an equally torrid Bob Gilder. Though Floyd who teed off in the afternoon, remained the leader, he was a beaten man, physically, by the 100-degree temperatures.

"If they would have said you can take a 69 and stay home," said Floyd, "I would have done it. The heat has gotten to me ... Yesterday I weathered it, but I've had it now."

The weather was as cruel to the golfers in the afternoon as it was kind to the golfers in the morning.

Both Jim Simons and Greg Norman used early morning tee times to take advantage of ideal playing conditions to card a 67 and 69 respectively for a share of third-place, three strokes back of Floyd, at a 5-under-par 135.

But Norman won't have that advantage today as he joins Floyd and Gilder in the final threesome off the tee in the early afternoon. Simons will be in the next to last group and the forecast is for another round of 100-degree temperatures.

Jay Haas and Gil Morgan also emerged from morning tee times Friday to shoot 66s, placing Haas at a 3-under-par 137 and Morgan at a 2-over-par 142. Lon Hinkle shot a 68 (138) as did Lanny Wadkins and Seve Ballesteros (139).

The a.m. tee times also enabled Tom Watson, Jerry Pate and Barry Neel to rebound from opening rounds of 72 to shoot 69's (141) and Johnny Miller used his second day 67 to slip in under the cut at a 3-over-par 143.

As the day grew older the cloud cover passed and when Floyd stepped onto the course at 1:30 p.m., the temperature was in the upper 90s on its way to 100. Of the 20 players to break par on the day, 13 came from the golfers in the morning half of the bracket.

"Two shots aren't anything," Floyd said. "That's one hole — a birdie versus bogey or a par versus double-bogey. There's a lot of golf to be played yet ... but I'd rather be here with my two-stroke lead than a tie."

"I don't know what it's going to take," Gilder said, "but if I shoot a couple more 68s, I'll take my chances."

The cut was made at 145, eliminating Gary Player (146), Fuzzy Zoeller (148), defending champion Larry Nelson (149), Arnold Palmer (150) and both Andy Bean and Bobby Clampett (152).

came with the score, 30-30, and 4-3 in games, Clerc leading. But what made it important was that Purcell had come back from a 4-1 deficit in the third set to get to that point.

Purcell tied the match, at 4-4, before Clerc won the last two games and the match.

Clerc's next match will be against No. 5 seed Jose Higueras of Spain. Higueras defeated spirited Pablo Arraya of Peru, 6-4, 6-0, in a quarterfinal match Friday.

past three Clay Court tournaments.

"I thought seven would be the lucky number but maybe it's eight," said Purcell after the match, which put Clerc in the semifinals. "I think I played well. I missed a few big ones, like one overhead in the third set. It's funny how some shots stick in your mind."

The overhead, which Purcell netted,

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Highway Safety Probe Widens; Chief Still Sought

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The investigation into the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles has widened, but the temporary head of the department says that won't hurt the state in its efforts to hire a permanent administrator.

Jim York, the interim executive director of the department, said a criminal investigation is under way into the alleged forgery and unlawful sale of Florida drivers' licenses.

York would not say where the alleged violations occurred but said the investigation involves allegations of forged and blank drivers' licenses.

Chester Blakemore, a career bureaucrat, was ousted as head of the department Tuesday. He had been suspended less than two weeks earlier and York was appointed to fill the post temporarily.

Two Girls Still Missing

ORLANDO (UPI) — No trace has been found of two young girls who disappeared last Monday, nor of the man who drove them away from a rest area on Interstate 4 on the pretext of taking them to Walt Disney World.

Myra Lynn Faur, 7, and her sister Raquel Rose Faur, 12, had been living in a car at the rest area along with a 14-year-old brother, their mother and her friend Herbert Johnson.

Capt. John Guemple of the Orange County Sheriff's Office, said Friday the girls had been left in the care of another man who also lived in a car at the rest area while the other three went to work.

Guemple said Steven Osborne told deputies a man drove into the area and began talking with him and eventually told him he had tickets to nearby Walt Disney World and would take the girls there.

... 'TV Court' Not Expected Here Soon

the only real time lost is travel time of about 30 minutes," Dickey said, under Seminole County's current system, the judge, a trial clerk, and the public defender travel to the jail courtroom for the first appearances. The hearings are taped, so there is no need for a court reporter at the hearings, he said.

"Now, if you count everyone's time involved, they might be able to do something else during the time it takes to go to and from the jail courtroom, you might see a savings there," he said. "However, I don't see a substantial savings to cover the equipment and implementation costs."

"Our current system works because we, the judges, and others involved, work out our schedules to make it work," Dickey said. "While we're there for first appearances we also handle traffic appearances to save time and money."

"I agree pretty much with what Judges Dickey and Hall have said," said W.J. Patterson, executive director of the Seminole state attorney's office. "We used to send a prosecutor to first appearances and that practice was later stopped but will soon be reinstated because we and the judges feel a prosecutor should be there to hear the case at that stage. But, concerning the two-way TV system, it might be more convenient to be able to stay here in the courthouse and handle the hearings but I don't know if it is cost effective."

"No, I don't see that system as cost effective and even more important, I feel that by going to such a system you are leaving out a very important factor — that human factor," said Assistant Public Defender Norman Levin. "As we all know in watching our own TV sets at home, human factors, that are so vital for communication don't always come across on TV. There are also distractions and it's cold."

"What about the person who is arrested yet presumed innocent?" Levin asks. "He should have that eye-to-eye contact with the judge. The whole idea sounds so Orwellian to me. If we don't have the time it takes to hear these initial appearances which amounts to 10 minutes per person, if we don't have the time to see them personally, then that says something pretty negative about the system and the person who should be doing it doesn't like that particular part of his job and is looking for a way to get out of it and shouldn't be in the job."

"The proposal for the two-way TV system in Orange County is far from new to us," said Jail Administrator Steven Saunders. "We've known about it. We have a great deal of video equipment here now and it would not be that expensive nor difficult to go to such a system. But, I, personally, feel the system we use now is sufficient."

"We aren't stagnant by any means," he continued. "We are constantly looking for and kicking around ideas for improvement of the system between judges, attorneys and this office. But I feel our system works and that such a TV system would not prove that advantageous for us."

Saunders said he does feel a TV system would provide greater prisoner security "because anytime you move a prisoner is a threat to security and that's one advantage to keeping them in the cell area instead of taking them to the courtroom just outside the inner jail cells."

"But, all things considered, I would have to agree with the judges and others involved," he said. "No, we don't need it."

...County Officials Express Own Taxation Views

Commissioner Robert G. "Bud" Feather agreed with Mrs. Christensen that discussions are needed between the county and the cities.

Feather said he hasn't had the opportunity to read the report yet, but wants to hear as much as he can about the double taxation issue.

"I'm open and anxious to learn as much as I can about it. I'm sorry I don't know more," he said.

Sheriff John Polk, whose department is named as one of the areas where cities are paying double taxes, said the problem is between the County Commission and the cities.

"My opinion is that there's no double taxation. I don't want to get involved in discussing it," he said. "It will be up to the County Commissioners and the cities to decide."

Polk's policy has been that the department responds to calls within the municipalities when asked. The department does not have road patrols within municipalities.

Eleanor Anderson, director of the county's Office of Management and Budget, said today the county could fund programs in question by user fees or municipal service taxing units but the process would require exhaustive studies of services and would make budgeting much more difficult.

She said the county has been gradually going to user fees in some public services over the past few years. That process levies on a case-by-case basis a charge to the individuals who use the services. The county's building and development permitting processes, for example, are funded by user fees.

The Kelton report claims double taxation exists in all costs: related to the county planning offices, and the development department's land management and building divisions, of parks and recreation programs which are financed through countywide revenues, of road patrols and investigations by the county sheriff's department.

Also claimed as double taxation in the report are engineering costs related to subdivision review and inspection, and design survey and inspection of the county road system, costs associated with operation of refuse collection and disposal, road and bridge expenditures relating to the county highway system, and costs of the Environmental Services division for permits and inspection associated with new connections to the county water system.

The report suggests the county can remedy the situation by levying user fees, assessments or other fees to cover the cost of service in unincorporated areas.

The report also suggested rebating to the cities their share of taxes for the services in question or reducing property taxes to residents in those municipalities.

The Kelton report also questioned the way the county's transportation fund is used. It says the seven cities lost an additional $500,000 because of the handling of those funds.

The report said the county's use of non-transportation related revenues coupled with the inclusion of the public works director's office and drainage engineering expenditures appear to be designed "to reduce the amount of ... (property taxes) ... necessary for the transportation fund."

Crackdown Sought On Illegal Aliens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With 10.8 million Americans out of work — a 41-year high — former Labor Secretary Ray Marshall wants a crackdown on illegal aliens because he believes they get jobs Americans might otherwise fill.

Marshall called the 9.8 percent July unemployment rate reported by the Labor Department Friday "intolerable" and asked for congressional action to deal with illegal aliens.

"Large numbers of these unemployed workers find themselves in direct competition for jobs with the millions of illegal aliens in this country who are easily exploited and therefore depress wages and working conditions," Marshall said.

He said employers often hire workers in the United States illegally because they are afraid to complain about low wages and poor working conditions.

Harold Hall

The Cancer Victim Who Wouldn't Quit

By LEIGHTUCKER
Special To The Herald

Harold Hall is a winner. Anyone who knows him would know he would be—even to defeating cancer and continuing to lead a normal life, which his doctor said was nothing short of a miracle.

Miracle it was not; it was determination. He never took the easy way.

Harold was born on a farm near Winner, S.D., in 1921, a proper omen for him. When his father died in the midst of the Great Depression, he and his brothers kept the farm going. Until the family decided he should go to college.

At 19, he borrowed $35 from the local banker and set out across the state to Spearfish Normal College to become a teacher. The towns of Spearfish and Deadwood there were still redolent with the history of the gold rush mania of 1875 and the Dakota land boom of 1878.

Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane are buried in Deadwood which was also the home of the Deadwood Dick dime novels. Spearfish had a stream in which the water froze from the bottom up in winter, instead of the other way round. Perhaps it was called Spearfish because of that—it's easy to catch fish when they can't hide beneath the ice.

Harold got a job at a nearby lumber mill to pay his expenses. The mill supplied "sand lacing" (four-by-fours to keep tunnels from caving in) to the Homestead Mining Company which had been in business since 1877, and enrolled in the college.

His first year he studied English and music and other subjects for teaching small Dakota urchins. Then the owner of an airfield near Spearfish took him up in a plane—an incident which changed his life. With both feet firmly on the ground, so to speak, he took to the air.

His college subjects from then on were analytical and aerial geometry, trigonometry and navigation. He haunted the airfield after school and managed to squeeze some money from his lumber mill earnings for flight instruction.

That was in the fall of 1941. After Pearl Harbor, the U.S. government paid for his lessons in Civilian Pilot Training and he obtained his license.

"From farmboy to air pilot in ten months," Harold said proudly.

He wanted to be a naval air pilot, but there were some hurdles first. After graduation from the two-year college he went to Iowa City for pre-

Harold Hall has a specially designed chair in his Sanford office and a reclining chair in his automobile. The removal of a hip joint reduced his left leg three and one-half inches. But the wired hip and elevated leg don't keep Harold from playing a winning game of golf. 'I shot a 44 in nine holes Tuesday,' he beamed.

Harold Hall was not about to give up to being an invalid.

flight courses in navy lore and regulations, then to Minneapolis to what was known as the "elimination base."

"Nobody's going to eliminate this farm boy!" vowed Harold. Pensacola was the last step to commission, Sept. 3, 1943. He was where he wanted to be.

After two months of flying submarine inshore patrol from San Diego, Calif., Harold was stationed at Guadalcanal as carrier aircraft test pilot, not a safe or easy job. He stayed there until the end of the war.

He expected to be released to inactive status as a reserve officer at the end of the war, and he was—after stints of duty in Pensacola, Panama and Banana River, in Brevard county, which lasted until 1947.

Planning ahead for civilian life, he decided that Central Florida and real estate were an excellent combination and so, on demobilization, he and his bride Berta settled (they thought) in Orlando area, where he passed his real estate exam and sold his first piece of property (a chicken farm).

The plan was premature. Recalled in 1948, with only one more short period in civies, he spent the next 19 years in the navy, teaching instrument flying to Korea bound fighter pilots at the Sanford Naval Air Station, flying "Super Connies" on the DEW Line extension (Newfoundland to the Azores) and going wherever else the navy required his skills.

Before his eldest son had turned eighteen, the family had moved 17 times. Harold learned a lot about real estate buying and selling houses to suit the needs of his growing family—seven in all, three girls and four boys.

Finally, in 1967, Harold Hall retired with the rank of commander, after 25 years of service, and settled once more with his family in Sanford. He soon set up his own real estate office in Sanford, while his wife established herself as an interior designer first in Sanford and now in Winter Park where the family moved in 1972.

Life was very pleasant. Then disaster struck. The stiffness he had noticed in his left leg and hip turned out to be cancer, and it looked pretty bad, on preliminary investigation. From the naval hospital he went to Shand's Teaching Hospital in Gainesville for his operation. Twelve hours and 26 pints of blood later, the cancer was removed but so was his whole hip joint. Only wires kept his leg bone attached to his pelvis.

Never again would he walk, his surgeon said. Or, at most, only with the aid of walkers and canes.

The doctor was wrong. Harold Hall had kids to put through college and a lot of living to do. He was not about to give in to being an invalid—not ever. He went to work on therapy and exercises.

Today, Harold Hall walks unaided, runs his office with the help of two of his sons who also went into real estate, drives his own car and plays bogey golf regularly.

He also takes time to visit Shand's hospital in Gainesville to show other cancer victims what determination and perseverance can do.

A walking inspiration. He's a winner. He always will be.

Infant Swimming Research Teaches Surviving An Aquatic Accident

Karen Bircher instructs Monica Miller, 16 months, in wall work.

Monica Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Miller, Sanford, floating.

A demonstration of Infant Swimming Research was held at Sanora Clubhouse and pool, Sanora Boulevard, Sanford. Approximately 40 parents concerned with water safety for their infants attended.

Infant Swimming Research is a program developed by Dr. Harvey Barnett, a Ph.D in psychology. Infant Swimming Research is the product of 16 years of research designed to give infants and young children, 6 months to 3 years of age, the best chance of surviving an aquatic accident.

Approximately 22,000 children have undergone ISR training throughout the country. Eighty two have had to use their training to save themselves from a drowning incident and no former ISR student has drowned.

In the United States alone, over 4,000 children under the age of 4 drown each year, only a few inches away from the safety of a pool edge.

The aquatic skills of ISR students was demonstrated by three area instructors, two of whom will be teaching at the Sanora Pool. The children who participated in the demonstration were at various levels of their training. ISR lessons are individualized with one instructor to one child, five days a week. The children are taught to swim face down, roll-over onto their backs to rest and breathe, then to flip back over and continue swimming until they reach safety.

Reception To Honor Pair On Wedding Anniversary

The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Reynolds cordially invite friends, neighbors and relatives to their parents' golden wedding anniversary celebration.

The open house reception will be held Aug. 15, from 2 to 5 p.m., in fellowship hall of the First United Methodist Church, 5th Street and Park Avenue, Sanford, where the couple are active members.

Children hosting the golden gala are Marilyn J. Greenburg, Ind.; Robert, Connersville, Ind.; Dwight L., Denver, Colo.; and Mrs. Dean (Blythe) Smith of Sanford.

Mr. Reynolds is currently employed with HUB Industrial Supplies, Orlando, and Mrs. Reynolds recently retired from HRS, Casselberry. They make their home at 2437 Princeton Ave.

Gilda Chacey of Sanford is the chairman of the Sweetwater Oaks Garden Club Second Annual Garden Festival coming up on Sept. 25, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., "under the big top" behind Springs Plaza, Longwood (corner of Wekiva Springs Road and Montgomery Road).

Clubwomen are hard at work creating lovely items for the event including grapevine wreaths and silk flower arrangements. Other features will be garden supplies, entertainment, a bake sale and a flea market.

MR. AND MRS. DWIGHT REYNOLDS

Wife's Mistakes Discretion For Mate's Lack Of Valor

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my husband and I were at the beach with our two daughters. We were just sitting there, minding our own business, when two couples parked themselves near us, using the filthiest language imaginable. They seemed to be deliberately hanging around, trying to provoke some kind of reaction from us.

My husband did not utter one word of reprimand, or let them know he objected to their gutter talk in the presence of me and our daughters. I was so humiliated I wanted to burst out crying and hitchhike home.

I lost some of my respect for my husband. This is not the first time he sat there like a mouse instead of speaking up like a man. It's a good thing I didn't have a gun, or I'd be in jail right now.

Am I wrong to feel let down and disappointed? DEPRESSED IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR DEPRESSED: If these filthy-talking people were deliberately trying to provoke your husband into a fight, I think he was wise to have ignored them. Would you have "respected" your husband more if he had taken them on and been beaten (or worse) in the presence of your children? Furthermore, these days you never know who is "high" on what, or if a switchblade, gun or lead pipe will be used to help settle an argument. (P.S. You could have moved.)

DEAR ABBY: "S.B. of Mountain View, Calif." writes that "If the good Lord had intended for us to go around naked, he would have created us that way."

Gee whiz! I thought he (she?) did. Course, that mean old serpent came along, so I suppose we will just have to leaf it that way.

The directors plan a fund-raising masquerade ball on Nov. 13. Joe Monserrat is chairman of the event which will be held at the Sanford Civic Center.

The Ballet Guild Board of Directors welcomed a charter member back on the board — Eleanor Maresca. Another face back on the board is Elsa Caskey with Mary Ann Grover Duxbury voted in as the newest directors.

BGS President Jean Clontz and her family, Dr. Frank Clontz and children, Lisa and Todd, are home from a "cool" vacation at Blowing Rock, N.C., where Jean, the children and her mother spent nearly a month.

Gail Stewart and her family, Dr. Roger Stewart and children, "camped their way" to the World's Fair and other points. A good time is reported.

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford will honor supporters who helped make the club's "First Annual Miss Sanford Pageant" so successful.

During the Sunday afternoon festivities, Catherine Jean Stewart, who succeeds Deanna Pitman as Miss Sanford, now Miss Florida, will be crowned.

AMERICAN CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

From Slow to No Growth

SOURCE: National Council of Churches

Membership in American churches is increasing, but not as rapidly as the population is growing. A study just released by the National Council of Churches and based upon 1980 membership, the most recent year for comprehensive figures, notes that what growth there has been in recent years is uneven, with several mainstream Protestant denominations showing declines.

Holy Cross Welcomes

The Rev. R. M. Anderson

The Holy Cross Episcopal Church, Sanford, has a new curate on its staff, the Rev. Robert M. (Bob) Anderson. Father Anderson will assist the rector in all aspects of the parish ministry.

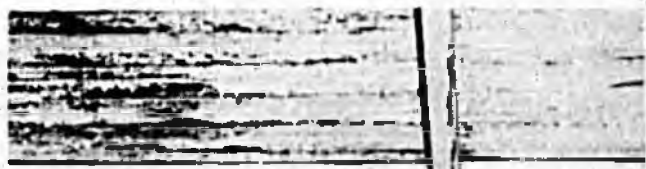

He received his master of divinity degree from Nashotah House Seminary, Nashotah, Wis., in May and holds a bachelor of arts degree from Parsons College in Fairfield, Iowa.

A Vietnam veteran, he was a Marine Corps fighter pilot. After serving in the Marines, he returned to his native Orlando where he was involved in land development and real estate. He was, along with his father, Robert T. Anderson, a developer of The Forest community at Lake Mary.

Father Anderson and his wife of 18 years, Janet, have four children, Bob, Tom, Katie and David.

Still Fragile

China's Religious Freedom

By DAVID F. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

Although religious freedom has dramatically increased in the Peoples Republic of China over the past several years, a new report says that freedom is fragile.

The report, written by Paul Richard Bohr of the Midwest China Center and published by the China Council of the Asia Society, notes that despite the resurgence of religious activity on the mainland, the number of religious believers in China relative to the total population is still small.

"Yet the cumulative effect of the recent changes in government policy and the response of Christians is one of the most striking developments in post-Mao China," Bohr added.

He said the religious resurgence, which has touched Buddhism as well as Christianity, has been resisted — both covertly and overtly — by lower-level officials responsible for ideological orthodoxy and public order.

"There is no guarantee," he adds, "that the current climate will continue indefinitely. There are several tripwires which, if pulled, could bring renewed government controls and a narrowing of the limits of toleration."

Those "tripwires" are both internal and external.

A key one, of course, would be the fall of the current reform-minded leadership — a prospect Bohr does not find likely.

But a more immediate danger, according to Bohr, is the orthodox elements within the regime that are trying to "chip away at the reform package of Deng Xiaoping."

In that context, Chinese church officials must move cautiously, making an effort to overcome divisions within the churches themselves while avoiding any perception that foreign churches are interfering in Chinese religious affairs.

"If church divisions are not resolved, if foreign churches are perceived to be interfering with Chinese church affairs, or if the church and state reach a stage of open rivalry, the anti-Deng officials who are against religious toleration will have the ammunition they need to force the leadership to restrict church activity," Bohr said.

The issue of foreign interference has been sharply debated in the United States as the mainland has opened up for foreign travelers, and a large number of U.S. religious leaders have visited the country.

"Church independence from foreign control was the government's condition for religious toleration before the Cultural Revolution, and remains so today," Bohr said. He noted that orthodox party officials feel that some foreign Christian institutions have not shed their "imperialist" nature in their relations with the Chinese churches.

"If sufficient evidence accumulates to validate this suspicion, increased restrictions are likely," he added.

In the West, the major problem has come from hardline anti-communist Christians, primarily the so-called "Bible smugglers" who cannot conceive of any degree of cooperation between Christians and communists.

In China, the issue is complicated by the internal division between the "house Christians" and the more public churches affiliated with the Three-Self Movement which has tried, in Bohr's words, "to insure the survival of Christianity by cooperating with the powers that be."

He said the Three-Self Movement, and its Catholic counterpart, "have offered the hand of reconciliation to their more anti-Communist brethren" and the effort has met with some success.

"But there continue to be holdouts, and government control over religious activities may intensify if the 'patriotic' churches are not able to convince all Christians to join the fold," Bohr said.

Ancient 'Science' Of Soul Travel

Edgar Burnside of Albany, N.Y., woke up one morning at 4:30. He had had a dream—or was it a dream?—that he was floating in space over his brother-in-law's home in Kansas City.

He saw his brother-in-law in the kitchen making coffee. It was all very real—and weird.

Edgar then went back to sleep. But when he woke again at his accustomed hour of 7:30 a.m., the experience was still vivid.

He decided to phone his brother-in-law, who told him that he had got up the night before around 3:30 (it would have been 4:30 in Albany) because he couldn't sleep. He had plugged in the coffee-maker and made a pot of coffee and read awhile.

Edgar Burnside, who had witnessed this, was having an out-of-body experience.

Rare? Maybe not. At Duke University, one out of three students answered "yes" when asked on a questionnaire whether they had ever had an out-of-body experience.

Many people—like Edgar Burnside—have these experiences involuntarily. Others induce them.

Mary Hirdler of Santa Monica, Calif., had an appointment with the dentist and dreaded it. She kept the appointment but when she got into the dentist's chair, she left her body and took a spirit trip to Japan where she "enjoyed the serenity, beauty and fragrance of a Japanese garden" while the dentist worked on her teeth.

Mary is an Eckist—a student of Eckankar, known as "the ancient science of soul travel."

While Eckankar is said to have had its origins on the lost island of Atlantis, it is only since Paul Twitchell started writing about it in 1965 that Eckankar has come to the notice of the general public. Some estimate there are 2 million Eckists in the world. Others put the figure more modestly at close to 30,000.

Twitchell learned about Eckankar, he said, from an ancient Tibetan master, Rebazar Tarzs. He became the Living Eck Master. When he died in 1969, his "rod of power" passed to Darwin Gross, the current Living Eck Master, who lives in Menlo Park, Calif.

Gross, who was working in an electronics plant when he got to become Living Eck Master, frequently travels in his soul body to Venus—to a city there called Ritz. He says he likes Ritz better than most American cities because it is cleaner.

Saints And Sinners

George Plagenz

"The planet is at a higher vibrational level so it doesn't break up into dust particles," he says.

Eckists, however, do not take up the study of Eckankar so they can travel fancy-free to exotic places like Venus. Or so they don't feel the pain of the dentist's drill.

These things happen to Eckists after they realize that man is not a physical body. He is a soul with a physical body at his disposal—one that he can put off at any time. What they are striving for is "total awareness" or "God realization."

By leaving the body and human consciousness behind during soul travel, they become aware, Twitchell wrote, "That we live in a divine world of omnipotence, omniscience and omnipresence and we realize that we share in the power, the knowing and the ability to be anywhere at any time."

Isn't it likely that Eckists just imagine—or dream—the experiences they say they are having while they are on their soul travels?

Gross admits it is difficult to separate spiritual reality from illusion, but "if you have a true spiritual experience—well, you just know it's real," he says.

The technique most Eckists use for soul travel is to concentrate the attention on "the third eye"—a spot that is said to be between the two eyes and back from the forehead about 2 inches. The two glands located here are the "doorway to the connection with our spiritual body."

After concentrating on the third eye (some chant certain sounds while concentrating), Eckists have the experience of leaving their physical body.

Anybody, says Gross, has this ability to rise above everyday consciousness by opening himself up in this way and becoming a channel for the Eck—or cosmic current.

All To The Glory Of God THOUGHTS

"...whatsoever you do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Corinthians 10:31.) Surely the truth here must be that whatsoever in our daily life is lawful and right for us to be engaged in, is in itself a part of our obedience to God.

This then would be a part of our religious experience. The large truth is found in a paraphrased verse within the Living Bible. This verse places an added responsibility upon us, "However, Christ has given each of us special abilities—whatever He wants us to have out of His rich storehouse of gifts." (Ephesians 4:7.)

Whenever we hear people complaining of obstructions and hindrances that come between them and the devoting of themselves to God, we may be sure that they are under some false view or another. The preceding verse places an emphasis upon our abilities. Every responsibility placed upon a Christian is a God-given necessity. These, like every daily work, are tasks to which God has set us, and obedience is due Him.

We may go further and say that the duties of life, be they ever so toilsome and distracting, are not obstructions to our life, but are direct means when rightly used, to promote our satisfaction. For a person who has truly found a place of service and ministry is fulfilling

Pastor's Corner

By Dr. JAY T. COSMATO

God's desire and at the same time filling full their own life. This is a condition with which God is satisfied.

I cannot read this verse which says, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," without being reminded of the apostle's words which say, "And everything, whatsoever ye do in word or deed, all things do in the name of the Lord Jesus..." (Colossians 3:17.) This verse seems to sum up universal obedience to God in the one thing of always acting in the name of the Lord Jesus. "Everywhere, and at every instant this is the one principle and power of victory over evil, and of progress in holiness."

The doing of everything "in the name of the Lord Jesus" is to do a thing in the joy of realized salvation. For the Christian this is the joy of realized oneness with Him and in the felt power of fellowship with Him. This is the one principle and power of all acceptable service.

When the woman poured ointment of spikenard on Jesus' head, he said she came "aforehand" to anoint his body for burial.

"And being the Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious, and she broke the box, and poured it on his head." — Mark 14:3

When Martha asked Jesus to tell Mary to help her, Jesus suggested that Mary is concerning herself about something more important — spiritual instruction.

"And Jesus answered and said unto her Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things. But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." — Luke 10:41-42

KIT 'N' CARLYLE by Larry Wright

WIN AT BRIDGE

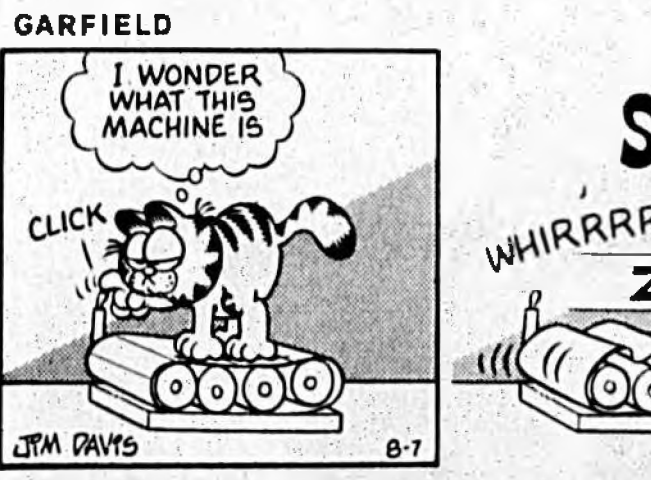

If the defense starts with three rounds of clubs South ruffs the third one. Then he can find a way to guard against finding both the king and queen of hearts with East.

He cashes one high trump and the ace and king of diamonds. Then he ruffs his last diamond and comes to his hand with a second trump, but must leave one with West. Then he takes and loses a heart finesse. But the defense can take no other trick. West can do nothing with his trump. East can't afford a heart lead. If he leads a club or diamond South ruffs in dummy and gets to discard one heart. Then he takes dummy's heart ace, ruffs a heart high, pulls the last trump and claims.

Could the defenders have beaten declarer? Yes, but it required exceptionally good play. East should follow to the first club with the nine and the second with the 10. West would stop to think and realize that East was using a suit preference signal to ask for the higher side suit? It might look silly to lead a heart, but West would trust his partner and lead one. East would take the queen or king, lead a club or diamond and wait for his second heart trick. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

HOROSCOPE
By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Sunday, August 8, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY
August 8, 1982

This coming year promises to be an exciting one, because you tend to be far more questing and adventuresome than usual. Instead of backing away from competition or challenge, you'll welcome them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 21) In conversations today, try to touch upon a number of subjects instead of dwelling on one which may be of special interest only to you. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail #1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Joint ventures could turn out rather lucky for you today, provided you contribute all that is expected of you. Don't be a slacker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Seek the best advice possible today regarding matters important to you financially. Wise counsel could help you expand upon something which is already promising.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Go out of your way to be helpful to those who need your assistance today. Kindnesses you do for others, even if they are but small gestures, will not be forgotten.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In social sports do your best today, but don't make winning all-important. If you take the game too seriously, it will cause your opposition to do likewise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Set up a proper schedule today so that things which should be attended to are not lost in the shuffle. You're not likely to function well if your routine is unorganized.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you have an important issue to discuss with another, don't be trapped into doing so today if your presentation isn't properly prepared.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions are rather unusual and uncertain today, but they're likely to work more to your advantage than against you. Be alert for opportunities from left field.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be a good listener today, rather than yield to temptations to try to teach others. What you learn could be of value to you in the future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others are not likely to respond to your needs today if you're too demanding. You can get what you want however, by dropping subtle hints.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Strive now to develop better relationships with persons you've met recently. However, take care to do so without shunning old favorites.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Press forward with your interests today, but also know when to back off if you see you're not generating the proper response from persons whose support you're soliciting.

For Monday, August 9, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY
August 9, 1982

This coming year you are apt to be more restless than usual, and considerable travel is likely for both business and pleasure. You may even have a chance to go to some distant places about which you dreamed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may misinterpret what is said to you and take offense today at another who is only trying to be helpful. Don't be so sensitive. Listen and learn. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birth date and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph, Mail #1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone may give you the inside scoop today concerning a money situation which another has taken pains to conceal. Just because it's unpleasant, don't close your eyes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It may seem today that someone with a lot of influence is blocking your progress. Actually, there is a group gathering which will negate his or her efforts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although there is a lot of talk going on about changes which could negatively affect your work, someone who is in a position to do so is protecting you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There is a possibility someone in your group may try to exclude you from a social happening. However, your more loyal pals won't permit this person to succeed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you and your mate are likely to be in accord where major issues are concerned, but it will be the small ones that could cause problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you are involved in a situation today which calls for a collective effort, be sure that what needs doing is equally assigned to all parties.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be prepared to work hard today to get what you want. The returns are there if you try. There will be no free rides today. Don't gamble on one.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Perhaps you're not getting along with those at home today because you're giving more consideration to outsiders than you are to the family.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you've been neglectful regarding your work, don't look for forgiveness from those who are affected. Instead, make catching-up your No. 1 priority today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A problem concerning money could develop today among your friends. Don't try to resolve it with only one person. Get all together who are involved and sort it out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Appearances in how you look and how you behave are important today, especially if you are attempting to please someone who is normally critical of you.
