Man charged in shooting to face court today

Paul Fairley is expected to make his initial court appearance this afternoon at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility courtroom.

Fairley, 23, of 3376 Edgewater Dr. in Orlando, was arrested Sunday morning at about 4 a.m. and charged with manslaughter in the death of 23-year-old Zachary Drinkard.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies said Fairley is accused of shooting Drinkard to death in the parking lot of the St. John's Village Apartments, 2192 Sharp Court, Fern Park.

The shooting occurred at about 3:45 a.m. on Sunday and followed an argument between the two men.

Drinkard was shot three times with a .22 calibre semi-automatic handgun, deputies said. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Florida Hospital North in Altamonte Springs, they said. Deputies said there were five witnesses to the shooting.

Racist scholarships?

Compensatory program is available to blacks only

By VICKI BOESCHNER
Herald Staff Writer

African American students have an additional chance to earn scholarships from the National Achievement Scholarship Program.

The NASP offers a special program for Outstanding Negro Students in which the standards for acceptance and award are sometimes lower than the standards set for students of other races.

"We pick the highest scores for black students in each geographic area and move down from there," explained Elaine Detweiler, public information director of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. "We want to be sure these students have an opportunity at scholarships they might not otherwise have a chance to earn."

Detweiler denies that the privately financed competition is racist, calling it, instead, a "compensatory program."

She noted, "We are conducting a compensatory program for the past deprivation in educational opportunities that the blacks have suffered."

Detweiler said the scores are often lower than the general scholarship pool, but sometimes students who qualify for the outstanding Negro Scholarships also qualify for the National Merit Scholarship program.

She noted that only students who wish to be considered for the race-based program are singled out for consideration.

"We do not make any other reference to race in our programs," she said.

Politibits: Poor vote turnout expected

By J. MARK SANFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Elections supervisor Sandra Goard predicts only 14 percent of the county's 137,044 voters will cast ballots Tuesday. "I hope we get that many," she said. Goard cited few voting choices, two Democratic races and one Republican, for prediction of a lackluster turnout. Democrats Carlton Henley and Adrienne Perry will face off for the District 2 county commission race. For U.S. Senate, Democrats Mike Wiley and Hugh Rodham, will also face voters. Republicans will select their education commissioner candidate from Frank Brogan and Bob Morris.

Wet weather woes: Flooding reported

By NICK PFENAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford and most of Central Florida were under a tornado watch Sunday evening. Thankfully, none was reported.

One tornado did touch down near Nassau Oaks, a residential area near Jacksonville. No serious damage was said to have occurred.

Elsewhere, storm systems moved north-eastward across the northern part of Florida this morning and during the night. Stronger than normal thunderstorms also were reported in southeast portions of Marion County.

Locally, the large amount of rain hasn't caused any serious problems except in areas which suffer from normal waterflow drainage problems.

Chuck Volk at the Monroe Harbour Marina said watermarks along the lakefront indicate the water level of Lake Monroe isn't quite up to where it once was several years ago. "But if we have much more rain and it goes up another 12 inches," he said, "then we may see the water level reach a new high."

He said that none of the boats moored in the covered docks at the marina were expecting problems except for a few antennas which may have to be lowered to prevent them from hitting the overhead.

Even as Volk spoke about the water level at 9:30 this morning, a new downpour waltzed its way across Sanford.

Jim Wilson with the Seminole County Public Works Department said this morning there are still several areas undergoing flood problems. "The worst is probably in the Lake Jessup flood plain," he said. "Several roadways and people living in the area are having problems."

Supermarket expansion on agenda

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The expansion of a supermarket located at the intersection of State Road 434 and Rangeline Road is the primary item on tonight's Longwood City Commission agenda.

Commissioners will review the site plan for the expansion of Winn-Dixie, 951 W. SR 434. The Delnice Corporation, N.V. owns the shopping center and is applying to expand the building leased to Winn-Dixie, according to a letter from corporation vice president Quinzio Spagiari.

The addition would expand the existing store from 30,300 square feet to 42,110 square feet, an additional 11,810 square feet. The additional space will be built on the back of the building. The extra space will allow Winn-Dixie to expand its facility into a Marketplace store.

Further, the corporation is seeking a rezoning of about .99 acres it wants to purchase from C-2 to R-P (residential professional) for a proposed parking lot behind the store. The land in question is owned by Charles B. Lowe. The rezoning is consistent with the comprehensive plan, building officials said. The new parking

2 Canadian tourists beaten

By Associated Press

CLEARWATER — A Canadian tourist remained in critical condition Sunday after he and a friend were beaten unconscious along a popular tourist strip here.

Harold Sergerie, 28, of LaPrairie, Quebec, was flown by helicopter to Bayfront Medical Center in St. Petersburg. His friend, Serge LaRoche, 34, of Greenfield Park, Quebec, was treated for injuries and released from Moulton Plant Hospital in Clearwater.

Police are looking for four men and a woman they say attacked the two Canadian tourists Saturday about 200 feet from a hotel. Police say the assailants didn't take anything and they aren't sure why the men, who had just left a night club, were attacked.

"Maybe they were attacking us because we were speaking French," LaRoche said. "I really don't know why."

Authorities said they have few clues, but believe the attack was an isolated incident. LaRoche is their only witness, and his description of the assailants was not detailed.

LaRoche said he saw a group of five people appear from between two buildings, but thought little of it. As he and his friend passed the group they were attacked from behind.

"They didn't say anything," LaRoche recalled. "I just laid down on the street and covered my face with my two hands."

LaRoche was delivering heavy equipment in the area. Sergerie, a dump truck driver from a neighboring town, was along for the ride. After making the deliveries, the pair checked into a hotel and went out to the night club.

"He just wanted to see Florida," LaRoche said of Sergerie.

Ducks and drawings

The Wilson Elementary School PTA hosted one of their biggest and most successful fundraisers of the year this past weekend. Good old fashioned fun was the focus of the day for the young and the young at heart at the school's annual fall carnival. With activities ranging from face painting to games of skill to win prizes, there was something for everyone who had money to spend to help support the school and its programs. At left, third grader Maggie Presley, tried her luck at capturing one of the fast moving rubber ducks in the plastic pool. Those who were skilled enough to nab one of the elusive critters were given a big prize. The bobbing ducks eluded most of those who tried to catch them, but everyone walked away with something to commemorate their effort. Games galore lined the school grounds. Some required skill, some required luck, but all required only that each participant have a good time. In another part of the carnival grounds at the Sanford school, Shelly Register and her daughter Caitlyn Register had their caricatures drawn by one of the talented artists at the carnival. Other artists did face painting and other decorative artwork on their patrons.

Hispanic woman warns community of AIDS risks

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Stubborn cultural traditions increase the risk of AIDS in the Hispanic community, says a Tampa-area woman who travels to schools, homes and family gatherings to warn people about the fatal disease.

Maria Caride, 27, has educated herself since she being positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, in 1990.

Now she goes anywhere she can educate to Hispanics about AIDS prevention. But education is difficult in a culture where talk of sexuality and condom use is taboo, she said.

"I was never taught about sex and condom use. If someone would have taught me about safe sex, I wouldn't be in this situation now," Caride told The Tampa Tribune for a story Sunday.

Even worse, what Caride has learned about intolerance since 1990 has wounded her and sent her outside her family and culture for solace, she said. "I have a family that will not accept it or talk about it."

After her first husband died of the disease, Caride married a man who has also tested positive for HIV. They are raising four children who are all negative.

Caride isn't alone. Hispanics are contracting the disease faster than any other ethnic group, according to the U.S. surgeon general.

While Hispanics make up about 10 percent of the nation's population, they account for 19 percent of AIDS cases in the country, according to statistics by the National Council of La Raza (NCLR), a Washington-based nonprofit group that tries to reduce the spread of HIV and sexually transmitted diseases among Hispanics.

And, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, Hispanic women represent one-third of all new AIDS cases.

Hispanic AIDS activists say until Hispanics overcome cultural differences and shatter the stigma associated with the disease, the numbers will only get worse.

Women in Hispanic families simply don't talk about sex, activists say. Even menstruation is a difficult subject for a mother to talk about with her daughter.

Hispanic men present a different set of problems, they say. Attitudes about sex are often primitive, and males are encouraged to be dominant. The Latin machismo eschews con-dom — studies show Latin men just won't wear them, the Hispanic activists complain.

Then there is the influence of the Roman Catholic church, which has espoused abstinence over condoms.

"Hispanics prefer to cover up the problem instead of dealing with it," said Hispanic AIDS activist Olga Companioni of Tampa.

Since Companioni lost her son, Raul, to the disease in 1993, she has embarked on a crusade to shatter the stigma that surrounds the disease and help Hispanic families better accept AIDS-stricken relatives.

"The less understanding and compassion we have about AIDS and the less educated we are about it, the worse it will continue to get," she said.

Super weekend a credit to all

This past Saturday and Sunday saw two organizations conducting major events in the northern Seminole County area. Both were highly successful.

The Pioneer Days 'N Ways and Crafts Festival at the Museum of Seminole County History, and the Lake Mary/Heathrow Festival of the Arts were each held at the same time.

For a few people who may have wished to get involved in both events, this may have been awkward. But most were able to make some arrangements.

For people wishing to attend each of the functions, there was little trouble. Parking at both locations was free, and the two were only a few minutes drive away from each other.

The only problem may have been the construction delays on the eastern portion of Lake Mary Boulevard, between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Country Club Road (C-15), in Lake Mary.

Having these two functions at the same time however, helped attract more people to the area from outlying areas. While most downtown retail stores are generally closed in Sanford on Saturdays and Sundays, businesses which did remain open noticed the influx of out-of-towners, who perhaps took a few extra minutes in their arts & crafts weekend to see what one of the state's newest Main Street cities looks like at the present time.

Later this year, especially at St. Lucia Festival time, there will be occasions when more than one major event will be held at the same time. Rather than being concerned about any conflict in events, we suggest accepting the concept that those will be super-weekends, worthy of your attention on both days.

For everyone who may have been responsible for the Pioneer Days 'N Ways event or the Lake Mary/Heathrow event, each of us deserves to give a round of applause. They worked hard, but the hard work resulted in outstanding features which helped make northern Seminole County a continuing fine place in which to live and visit.

Cronyism

To: Undecided Florida Voters

According to the news media, between eight and 10 percent of the voters are undecided on whether to vote for "Walkin' Lawton" or Jeb Bush. At present Bush is leading by a very slim margin.

Perhaps a small reminder of some actions by Gov. Chiles in the early days of his term will help you determine your vote.

When Chiles was first elected governor of Florida, the state was laying off $12,000 to $15,000/year park employees because there was no money to pay them. Lawton Chiles created jobs for his Washington crony and the crony's wife paying them $80,000 to $90,000/year. This amount of money would have paid for at least 10 state park rangers.

Shortly after taking office, Chiles appointed Orlando attorney James Hecking to the State Board of Regents which oversees the state's colleges. Hecking was a campaign worker in Chiles' campaign for election. Best choice or payback to a friend?

Then we have Wm. Lindner hired as "computer consultant" at the Lottery Commission at a salary of about $82,000/yr. Lindner was reportedly a business associate of Chiles son "Bud." Robert McKnight was in charge of negotiating contracts for the state at the time.

Next, directed state lottery officials through his chief of staff to negotiate a three-year contract with Control Data with no public notice. Control Data reportedly has very close family ties with the Chiles family.

A couple of months later after ordering a hiring freeze as part of a plan to eliminate the $622,000,000 state deficit, Chiles created a new job for McKnight as trash recycler at $85,000/year. Another payback at taxpayer expense?

These are just a few of the early actions of cronyism by Gov. Chiles which cost you, the taxpayer and voter, more and more. This has been going on for over three years. There isn't enough room in this paper to list all the acts of cronyism and payback committed by the Chiles administration.

Politicians like Chiles know that acts committed early in a term of office are forgotten in proportion to the length of time between the act and election. The longer the time, the less remembered by the voter.

Read, research and then decide whom to vote for. Maybe this letter will help.

The return of Bartleby the Scrivener

In Herman Melville's short story of the same name, Bartleby the Scrivener worked in a law office on Wall Street. In time, he refused to follow his employer's instructions, saying repeatedly, "I would prefer not to."

A modern real-life version of Bartleby is Enrique Oppenheimer, an accountant at New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development. Unlike Bartleby, however, who never explained his intransigence, Oppenheimer has made very clear his refusal to obey the orders of his superiors.

He claims that the government, his employer, has no right to force him to attend a sexual harassment prevention training course. "My religion," Oppenheimer insists, "instructs me as to my moral behavior code."

Last December, along with all the other staff employees of the Department of Housing Preservation and Development, Oppenheimer was told to report for "preventive sexual harassment training." Refusal would result in charges of insubordination -- with a resultant fine and reprimand, demotion or termination.

A Pentecostal Christian, Oppenheimer, during his 18 years in government, had never been accused of sexual harassment or any other untoward behavior. "If I go to that training course, I will be contaminated by it," he told me. "As a practicing Christian, I take from the Bible the mandate from God as to how to behave with my fellow humans."

The state, he continued, was trying to compel him to participate in a code of behavior that "I reserve exclusively for private religious life instruction."

This interpretation of the free exercise of religion as against the commands of the state might have made an intriguing Supreme Court case -- if it went that far.

Whether it did or not, Oppenheimer -- in addition to saving his own soul even if it cost him his job -- wanted, he says, "to embolden other people" to resist illegitimate authority.

He claims that the government, his employer, has no right to force him to attend a sexual harassment prevention training course.

Although he received considerable private support from colleagues, there is no record of anyone else in his department absolutely refusing to take preventive sexual harassment training. Ten did demur, but, Oppenheimer told Ray Kerkorian of the New York Post, "they were intimidated into attending."

Oppenheimer meanwhile was summoned to a disciplinary conference and then another hearing where the department seemed to yield some ground. A letter of reprimand would be put in his file and he would be commanded to read, at his leisure, some material on sexual harassment.

Like Bartleby, Enrique Oppenheimer preferred not to. "Why should I be reprimanded when I have done nothing wrong?"

A pre-trial hearing followed, at which the head of that tribunal tried to reassure Oppenheimer that he was making a big deal out of what was essentially a small issue. The accountant, logical as always, said that if this was not a big deal, why was he here -- at yet another confrontation?

He tried to make his case yet again. "I didn't have to wait 18 years for the government to tell me how to behave toward women. I conduct my life according to my religious beliefs. It is not a part-time thing. It is everything in my life. I explained this at every hearing, but it did not matter to them."

Revisit virtues of 'self-control'

Discipline is an old-fashioned word in dire need of present-day rediscovery. Not discipline as in order imposed from above, but discipline as in self-control. Look around contemporary America, beginning with your neighborhood, and supporting evidence for the proposition is overwhelming.

My neighborhood happens to be Washington. Here, self-indulgence and betrayal are the substitutions of choice for self-discipline. They are best illustrated by leaks, those transmittals of fact, opinion and slander from anonymous official sources to the public by way of the media's conveyor belt.

As often as not, the important leakers are high-ranking officials, or people doing their bidding. Unable to prevail within the councils of government, to which their position has given them access, they continue the debate without taking responsibility for their words.

As a recent example, the military establishment was almost unanimously opposed to the Haitian invasion. Many of us agree with that position. But having lost the internal debate, Pentagon leakers refused to accept the verdict. While the official line was that accurate predictions were neither possible nor useful, they began carefully feeding to selected reporters various dire predictions about the prospective financial and human cost of military intervention.

Why the leaks? To subvert the constitutional system of civilian control over the military and reverse a policy chosen by the commander in chief.

But the Defense Department leakers might understandably believe that no penalties would be imposed for the disregard of the chain of command. The Clinton administration is staffed at some of its highest levels by people whose past and present careers were advanced, nurtured and maintained by assiduous leaking in opposition to policies they were supposed to be implementing.

For some, it began when they were young officials in the Vietnam War. Lacking the guts or moral conviction to resign and publicly protest what they regarded as a disastrously wrong policy, they fed their reservations on background to the American press corps. They thereby won the gratitude of the journalists and developed a kren appreciation of the best way to build a favorable reputation in the press. Today, some of those with whom they developed a useful symbiotic relationship in Vietnam are among the capital's heaviest journalistic hitters, still happy to repay leaks with public praise.

For others, it is simply part of the political game as they have learned it over the past two decades. What is truly appalling about Bob Woodward's most recent book, "The Agenda," is not its revelations about President Clinton's shifting priorities and uncertain convictions. What is so chilling is the book's clear message that this is an administration staffed heavily by undisciplined self-promoters who are willing to say anything and reveal everything in pursuit of their own aims. Backbiting seems to be the coin of the realm. Men who devalue loyalty and dodge responsibility for their verbal assassinations from the shadows are valued at least as fully as those who serve faithfully and save their advice and reservations for the president.

Which raises an important question. Why is anarchy tolerated? It is not difficult to pinpoint most of Woodward's sources in "The Agenda," his much celebrated desire to cloak the identity notwithstanding. In their day-to-day work, a number of Washington reporters routinely quote background sources by name in the hopes of provoking juicier responses from big game fish. A president or White House chief of staff or secretary of defense who wants to impose discipline by making an object lesson of specific disloyalty would not be hard-pressed to find appropriate targets for the exercise.

But it doesn't happen. There are no penalties, at least none which are visible to the naked eye. The stealth attacks grow bolder, the leakers progressively more irresponsible. When no one is held to account, accountability becomes a word without meaning. Self-discipline makes less and less sense when the undisciplined suffer no consequences for their behavior. It is hard to require or expect when it seems to be devalued at the very top, and self-discipline is not a word that springs automatically to mind in connection to President Bill Clinton.

What is true for the hermetically sealed world of Washington is no less true for many other American neighborhoods. We are far-advanced in creating a society of individual free-lancers whose primary loyalty is to themselves. Rules are for other people. Discipline in anything wider or deeper than the pursuit of self-interest is regarded in many quarters as self-defeating idealism.

But what may work in the short run for individuals is destructive in the long run for society as a whole.

Discipline is an old-fashioned word in dire need of present day rediscovery.

Sam would have been on our side

STURBRIDGE, Mass. -- It is one of those soft September days in New England just before summer snaps into fall, and Carol Goodwin is taking me on a tour of her town.

We drive past the classic town common flanked by a town hall and a church. We travel down a road familiar to Sunday drivers in pursuit of the trio for fall treasures in this part of the world: foliage, antiques and apples.

Finally, we turn in to the town's tourist attraction, a re-created 19th century community called Old Sturbridge Village, and leave the car to stroll along the streets, past the brown shops, the tavern. Then, as we watch the "tinner" in his costume fashioning heart-shaped cookie cutters out of metal one at a time, Goodwin says with bemusement, "This doesn't look like Wal-Mart territory, does it?"

But less than a mile away are pink plastic streamers tied around trees staking out what may soon become Wal-Mart territory. These are the streamers that also stake out a struggle between Sturbridge folk and a distant corporation.

Carol Goodwin is a mother of six who calls herself a homebody. Three months ago, she didn't know much about superstores or big-box buildings or saturation marketing.

In July, this woman accidentally heard about plans for a massive development while she was waiting to talk about recycling before the town's planning board. She saw plans calling for wider roads, more traffic lights, for a store as out of scale for Sturbridge, population 8,000, as an ocean barge for a duck pond.

To her surprise, she's become the spearhead of S.O.S. Save Our Sturbridge. On a hot August night, 700 citizens voted 6 to 1 against the superstore in a non-binding referendum.

When that didn't stop plans, she and a colleague took a trip last week to Wal-Mart's headquarters in Bentonville, Ark. Although reminded by her eldest daughter -- a law student -- "Mom, don't smile too much," Goodwin brought a basket full of maple syrup, candles, candles and a videotape of the town meeting. The two delegates were received, heard and politely dismissed.

In this process, the Sturbridge group hooked into a small and ardent resistance movement, a network of groups with newsletters, and soon their own place on the Internet. Wal-Mart is not their only target, but it is the biggest. They are really fighting "sprawl-marts," huge traffic magnets at the intersection of highways, black holes that can suck businesses and everyday social life out of small communities.

This movement is not entirely new. In the 1920s the chains first started replacing the mom and pop stores with the A&Ps. Anti-chain legislation was introduced by people who wanted to protect more than small businesses. They unabashedly defended civic spirit, small-town democracy.

As Michael Sandel, a political philosopher at Harvard, says, "The belief was that shopkeepers and local owners would have a greater sense of civic responsibility than managers of huge stores accountable to distant profit centers."

The movement failed in the 1930s. The chains grew into malls, the malls are growing into sprawls. The "distant profit centers" of a nationalized economy are now the more distant profit centers of a world economy.

They are really fighting "sprawl-marts," huge traffic magnets at the intersection of highways.

"The Hunt Club Boulevard area water level which has been quite high is starting to go down now," he continued, "but there is still a problem in a flood area north of S.R. 436 and west of Highway 17-92, where a few residents in the area are having problems."

Wiskin said the county is well aware of these situations, and will be working on resolving problems. He says he expects that if the rainfall diminishes by the middle of the week, the flooding problems will also diminish.

Seminole County Public Safety Director Gary Kaler said he hasn't seen this much rain in Seminole County since the 1980s. "While there have been some flooding problems during heavy rainstorms," he said,

"there haven't been any problems serious enough to bring about any difficulties in public safety."

Lake Mary Public Works Director Bill Temby says his city has not had any serious flooding problems caused by the excessive rainfall. "There hasn't been anything other than general routine flooding on some of the dirt streets," he said, "but that is typical for any heavy amount of rainfall."

The worst rainfall during this past weekend was reported between Tallahassee and the Gulf coast, which faced flood threats from over eight inches of rain.

It was the second time in two months the Panhandle was affected. About 400 homes in flood-prone areas of Tallahassee, surrounding Leon County and neighboring Wakulla County felt the impact of high water from Tropical Storm Beryl in mid-August. Those waters are still standing in some low-lying areas.

"Unfortunately, getting this much rain, we feel there will be many of these same homes affected again," said Mike Rucher, state Emergency Management Division meteorologist.

Rucher said officials will monitor area streams and groundwater for the next several days and be alert for flooding.

Police had to block off some flooded streets in Tallahassee yesterday.

There appears to be some light at the end of the rainfall tunnel however. Weather forecasters are predicting that Central Florida will be seeing drier weather toward the middle of this week.

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

They are eligible for some 800 achievement scholarships worth a total of $3 million. The scholarships will be awarded next Spring.

The Achievement Program is a privately-financed competition for African Americans conducted by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

More than 95,000 black students entered the 1995 Achievement Program requesting consideration when they took the 1995 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT). Semifinalists were designated in geographic regions comprised of several states. They represent the highest scoring Achievement Program entrants in each region.

The students from this area plan a variety of courses of study in college and have differing career plans.

Michel plans to major in biochemistry and to pursue a career in biochemistry. White plans to major in journalism before pursuing a career as a reporter. And Pearl plans to major in prelaw and to pursue a career in law.

Semifinalists must meet several additional requirements in order to advance to the Finalist level.

They will have to submit their high school academic record, an endorsement of the student's high school principal and SAT scores that confirm the performance on the PSAT/NMSQT.

"We believe these are some of the finest students in the nation," said Elaine Detweiler, public information director of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. "They are future leaders, scholars and business people."

Trial

He wanted the lawyers to defend him and they contended they needed more time to prepare.

The trial has another significance for NOW because it is the first time one of the group's escorts has been killed while volunteering at a clinic. The escorts shield patients from protesters as they make their way to and from clinic entrances.

Hill is accused of killing Dr. John B. Britton, 66, of Fernandina Beach, and retired Air Force Lt. Col. James H. Barrett, 74, of Pensacola. Barrett's wife, June, 68, also a clinic escort, was wounded.

The Barrett's pickup truck was riddled with shotgun fire as they brought the doctor to the Ladies Center. They had picked him up at Pensacola Regional Airport.

Hill, a former minister in the Presbyterian Church in America and the Orthodox Presbyterian Church, was a frequent protester at the clinic. He was arrested nearby a few minutes after the shootings.

Head of a small group called Defensive Action, Hill had become a national advocate of death for doctors and others involved in performing abortions. He is married and has three children.

He began appearing on television talk shows and doing other media interviews shortly after Dr. David Gunn, 47, of Eufaula, Ala., was fatally shot March 10, 1993 outside this city's only other abortion clinic, Pensacola Women's Medical Services.

Hill contended Gunn's killer, abortion protester Michael P. Griffin, a 33-year-old Pensacola chemical plant worker, was innocent because Gunn's death was justified to prevent abortions. Griffin was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison.

The Ladies Center has been the scene of earlier violence over the past 10 years. A bomb ripped through a former building in June 1984 and forced a move to its present site. Early Christmas Day 1984, the Ladies Center was bombed again within minutes of blasts that destroyed the offices of two doctors who performed abortions.

Vinson also presided over the trial of two young 'Pensacola couples' subsequently convicted in the Christmas Day bombings. They attended an Assembly of God church and one defendant said the bombings were "a gift to Jesus on his birthday."

Feminists criticized Vinson for 10-year sentences he gave Matthew Goldsby and James Simmons, both 21 at the time, as being the most lenient ever for a clinic bombing up to that time. Goldsby's girlfriend and Simmons' wife were convicted only of conspiracy and placed on probation.

Vinson allowed the defense to present abortion-related evidence and recommended the two men serve time at a minimum-security prison camp on nearby Eglin Air Force Base.

The Air Force, however, refuses to allow violent criminals at such camps and they served about half of their sentences at a medium security prison in Tallahassee before being paroled. Vinson had recommended that they be paroled as soon as possible.

Hill's federal prosecution is part of a Justice Department investigation, still under way, to determine if others were involved and whether acts of anti-abortion violence across the nation are connected.

"Really, the eyes of the country are on Pensacola and the Department of Justice and how aggressively they're going to move to stop this religious terrorism," Katherine Spillar, national coordinator of the Feminist Majority Foundation, said in a telephone interview from her Los Angeles office. "We had to get a new law passed to make it be recognized and now we want to see how vigorously this law is going to be enforced."

Michigan high court to hear assisted suicide question

By JEFF HOLYFIELD
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. — The question that Dr. Jack Kevorkian has pushed onto the national agenda with his highly publicized involvement in 20 deaths now falls to the Michigan Supreme Court: Do people facing painful death or incurable illness have a constitutional right to assisted suicide?

The court will hear oral arguments Tuesday on whether Michigan's assisted suicide ban is constitutional, and whether Kevorkian can be tried on murder charges in two assisted-suicide deaths that occurred before the state ban was in place.

"Dr. Kevorkian has become the figurehead in the assisted suicide debate. However, the argument presented here goes beyond the man and arrives at the fundamental principles of liberty and the role of government in our modern society," Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, wrote in briefs to the court.

Fieger wrote that Kevorkian and others challenging the law aren't out to create a new constitutional right. Instead, he argued, "the right to end pain and suffering by the act of assisted suicide is a right which has always been implicit in the concept of liberty."

"Certainly, the state has an interest in protecting life. However... the state does not have an interest in prolonging suffering and death and in forcing a competent adult to endure pain and suffering under the guise of 'protecting life.'"

Michigan's assisted suicide ban, passed in an effort to stop Kevorkian, took effect in February 1993.

The Michigan Court of Appeals on May 10 ruled the law unconstitutional on technical grounds — but said there is no constitutional right to assisted suicide. The appeals court also said Kevorkian could be charged with murder in two 1991 deaths.

Attorneys for both sides predicted the issue will end up before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Richest American worth more than $9 billion

By STEVE BARSON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Microsoft Corp. Chairman Bill Gates thinks all this business about being the nation's richest person is just "silly."

With a net worth of $9.35 billion, the software king reigns supreme over the Forbes magazine list of the 400 richest Americans, outmuscled stock tycoon Warren Buffett, with $8.2 billion.

Forbes attributes the flip-flop to the vagaries of the stock market.

Buffett, 64, the folksy investor from Omaha, Neb., kept his investment company, Berkshire Hathaway, growing this year, but not as fast as Microsoft.

Thanks to his holdings in the company he co-founded in 1975, Gates' net worth grew by more than $3 billion; Buffett's rose by $800 million, according to the biweekly business journal's annual report.

Gates' stock also got a boost when Microsoft emerged largely unscathed this year from a federal probe into allegations it monopolized the software business. The antitrust case also didn't hurt Microsoft's co-founder Paul Allen, who shows up as No. 16 with $3.9 billion.

Gates, who is building a high-tech labside mansion in Bellevue, Wash., calls the Forbes list "silly" in the magazine's Oct. 17 issue, and rejects the notion that he's achieved his goal.

"If I'd had some set idea of a finish line, don't you think I would have crossed it years ago?" Gates asked.

Gates, 38, now appears to be the wealthiest commoner in the world, Forbes said. The only foreign billionaire in his league besides royalty is Yoshiaki Tsurumi, a Japanese railroad and hotel tycoon whom Forbes said is worth $8.5 billion.

Coming in third for the second year in a row was John Kluge, 60, of Charlottesville, Va., who built the Metromedia radio and TV empire, then liquidated it to invest in movies, restaurants and long distance telephone service.

Kluge's restaurant and movie interests are recovering from some weak times, Forbes reported, and the long distance company, LDDS, is now No. 4 behind AT&T, MCI and Sprint. Kluge, whose worth was listed at $5.9 billion, led the field from 1992-1993.

The stock market's bouts of weakness this year didn't hurt Edward Johnson III, 64, of Boston, chief of Fidelity Investments, the top mutual fund company. His $5.1 billion was enough to vault him to No. 4, from No. 38 last year.

Amway Corp. partner Richard DeVos, 68, of Ada, Mich., rounded out the top five with $4.5 billion, up from No. 33.

Money losers whose fortunes pushed them off the list include one-time Hollywood kingpin Barry Diller. His declining shares in home shopping channel QVC Inc. dropped him to $130 million, from last year's $345 million.

As in past years, the list shows moguls who make their millions from oil, gas and heavy manufacturing are losing ground to those in clean-burning companies like technology, retailing, finance and entertainment.

Mandela pitches S. Africa to U.S.

By MICHAEL BLOOM
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — At the start of a U.S. tour to attract dollars to a post-apartheid South Africa, President Nelson Mandela sought to reassure investors that his country is a secure place for business.

South Africa offers good roads, cheap electricity and a motivated work force, Mandela told business leaders who gathered Sunday at Gracie Mansion, the official home of Mayor Rudolph Giuliani.

"We now have created an ideal environment for investment, for tourism. We have a strong government of national unity," Mandela said.

Mandela, 76, is scheduled to speak today before the United Nations. Wednesday, he'll be in Washington for a state dinner at the White House and a series of meetings with business leaders.

American business ventures are vital to improving living standards for South Africans, he said, noting that 5 million of the country's 42 million residents don't have jobs and 7 million are without adequate housing.

"By investing in our country, you will be putting sunshine in their hearts," Mandela said. "I am here, confident, I will not go back to my country with empty hands."

Nearly 210 companies sold or closed their South Africa operations between 1985 and 1990, amid economic sanctions imposed under pressure from human rights groups opposed to white-minority rule.

Mandela called for the lifting of the sanctions more than a year ago, but many companies have been slow to return for fear of political instability.

The United States has increased trade benefits and financial aid. And on Sunday, Gov. Mario Cuomo said New York would open an office in Johannesburg to develop trade, investment and cultural ties. Giuliani said the city also would pursue trade promotions and joint ventures.

Shuttle studies peaks, pyres

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

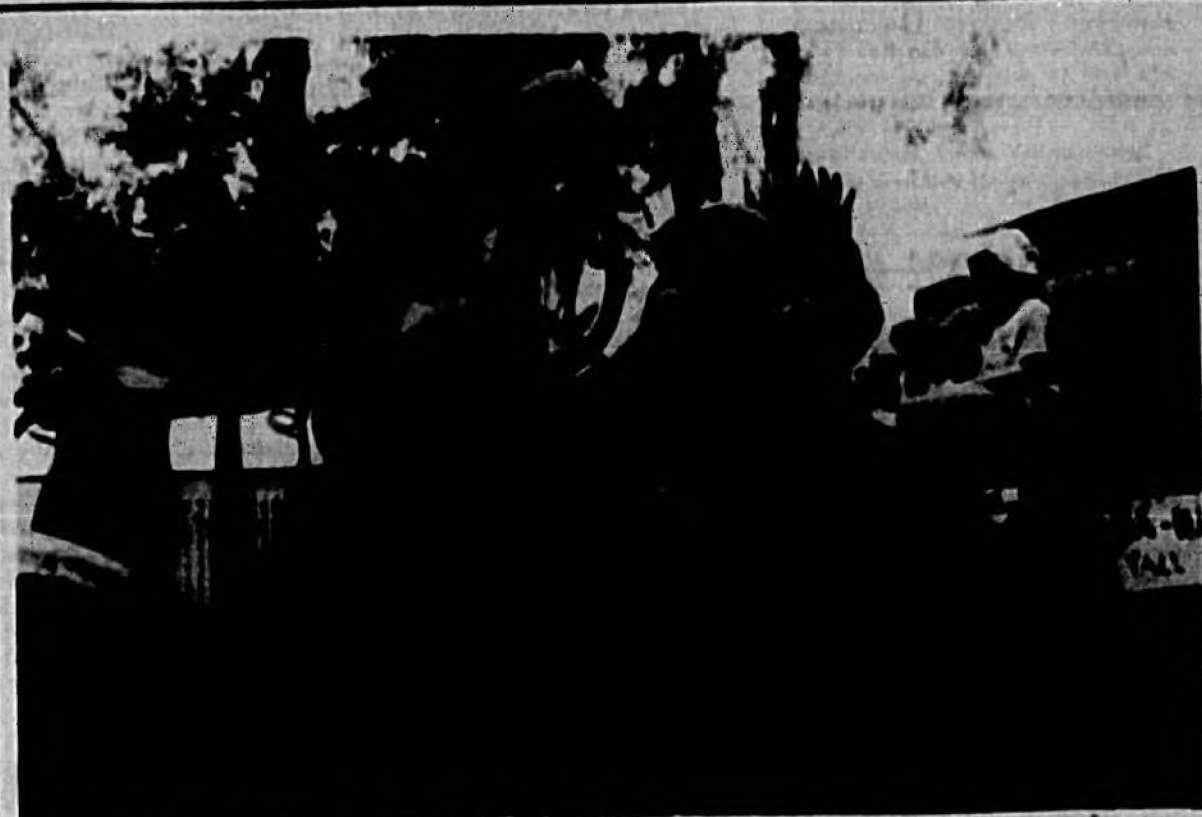

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Endeavour's astronauts scouted forest fires and thunderstorms from 138 miles up today while the shuttle's $366 million radar gathered images of the Chilean mountains and the Austrian Alps.

Endeavour's orbit is swinging as far north as the Aleutian Islands and as far south as Cape Horn to utilize the radar and another device that's measuring the distribution of carbon monoxide in the lower atmosphere.

The six astronauts, working in shifts around the clock, are assisting researchers on the ground by snapping thousands of photographs and describing storms and forest fires they see below. Scientists hope the eye-witness accounts will augment their environmental studies.

Astronauts reported seeing five forest fires in Siberia, more than two dozen along the southern coast of Australia and some "major-league thunderstorms" off the coast of Japan.

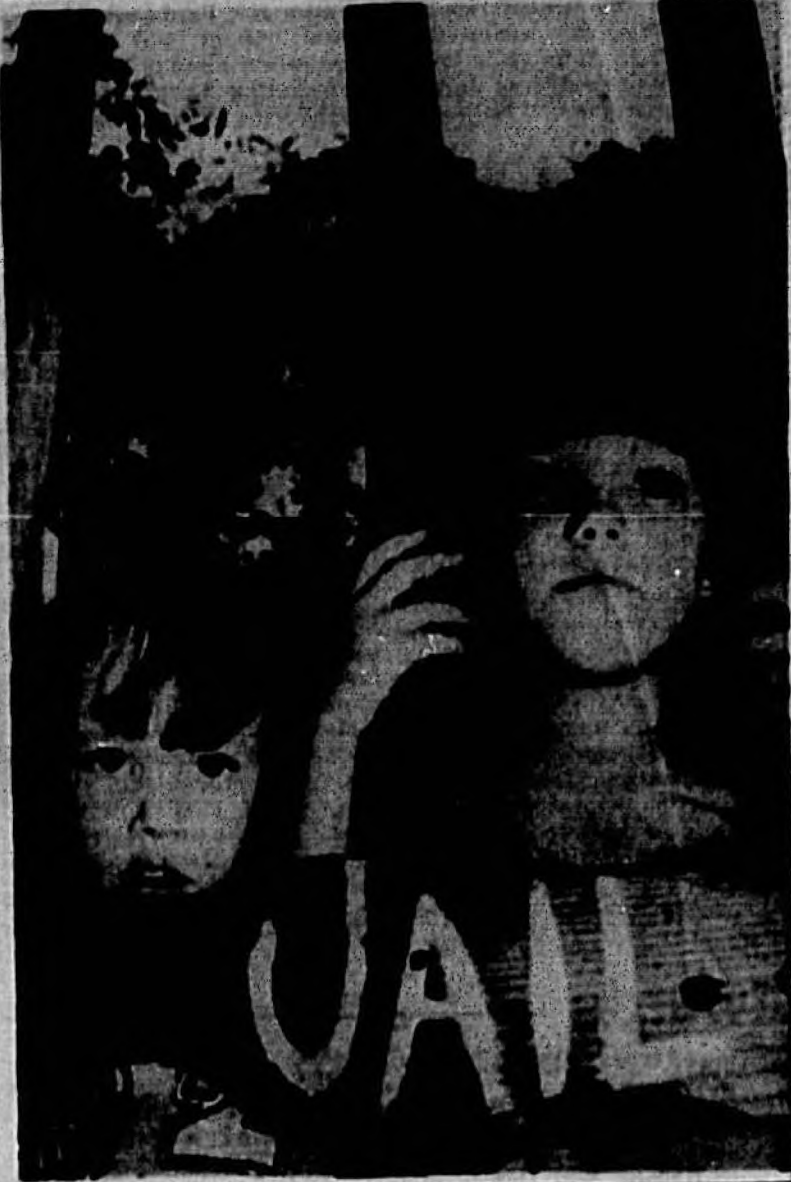

The radar, which beams down microwave energy in three frequencies, was aimed today on the Austrian Alps for a study of water distribution. Hydrologists hope to track the movement of ground water by comparing images of snow cover with those gathered during the radar's first flight in April.

Some stayed and some went

While everyone had a great time at the Pioneer Days 'N Ways festival in Sanford this past weekend, everyone had a different way of enjoying themselves. For example, though they were captivated by the activities, which included a rural prison cell, Kristen and Melissa Stram of Winter Springs, kept busy over the course of the day with a number of activities. There were arts and crafts galore at the festival grounds as well as historical exhibits and reenactments. Those who came merely to observe or shop probably didn't have as much fun as those who got into the act. The Strams did not have long faces for long as they got out of jail and found new adventures at the festival. Meanwhile the Curtis family took part in the weekend events in their new-fangled horseless carriage. Mike Curtis waved to festival-goers as his wife Julianna, in the front passenger seat, and daughters Jenny Rose and Katie Beth, (left to right in the back seat) enjoy the ride.

IN BRIEF

Local group leads Scramble

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Cocoa Beach Municipal Golf Club held a two-shot lead Sunday after completion of play in the Oldsmobile Scramble net division.

Club pro Steve Waggoner and amateurs Jeff Nott, Gary Thompson, Doug Follick and John Lingo fashioned an 18-under-par 54 for a three-round total of 53-under-par 163.

Trailing were Randall Oaks Golf Club of Dundee, Ill. (166), Bell Nob Golf Club of Gillette, Wyo., and Medford Lakes (N.J.) Golf Club (166).

Paadenia Golf Club of Houston is in first place in Gross Division at 54-55-55, 47 under par.

The top 20 teams play the final 18 holes today with each group being joined by a PGA Tour player as a sixth member. Net division players compete over Disney's Magnolia course, while gross division teams will play at Eagle Pines.

Gators alone at top

GAINESVILLE — The Florida Gators took a beating in their least-decisive win this season, but gained the respect of the nation's coaches.

Florida unseated Nebraska in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll released Sunday after the Gators beat Ole Miss 38-14. Nebraska struggled to defeat Wyoming, 42-32. The Gators remained atop The Associated Press poll.

"I noticed we were No. 1, so we appreciate those coaches voting for us," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said Sunday. "There are several teams as deserving as we are, teams like Colorado, Penn State and FSU."

The victory was not without a price. Senior defensive tackle Henry McMillan, senior inside linebacker Dexter Daniels and freshman special-teamer Kevin Walton sustained injuries that may keep them out for several weeks.

"Henry's knee injury looks like a 3-to-5 week deal, but hopefully he won't need surgery," Spurrier said. "Dexter's shoulder separation may not be as serious, maybe a 1-to-2 week deal. And Kevin sprained his ankle pretty badly trying to block a punt."

Winning for Bodine

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Geoff Bodine lapped the field in an overpowering victory in the Tyson-Holly Farms 400 at the five-eighth-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway.

Bodine led 335 of the 400 laps, including the last 301, to earn his third win of the season and the 17th of his NASCAR Winston Cup career.

It is the first time a driver has won by more than a lap since Harry Gant's dominating victory in September 1991 at Dover, Del.

"It's (sponsor) Exide. It's Ford and it's Hoosier tires, and it's a great team," Bodine said. "The car was about as fast as I needed it to go all day. The setup was perfect, and that's what you need on these short tracks."

Terry Labonte, who won the April race at North Wilkesboro, finished second Sunday.

In the Winston Cup points race, Rusty Wallace never was able to make up for an unscheduled tire stop that put his pit stops out of sequence and wound up behind third-place Rick Mast, while a late-race incident cost Dale Earnhardt some valuable ground as he slipped to seventh, two laps behind the winner.

Accident kills Caston

DALLAS — Former NFL linebacker Toby Caston was killed when his sports car slammed into a concrete barrier on a Dallas expressway.

Caston, 29, a former Louisiana State star, spent seven seasons with Houston and Detroit.

Young grididders kick off Sanford Recreation opens youth flag football season

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Department took advantage of relatively clear weather Saturday morning to get its Youth Flag Football season underway at the field across U.S. 17-92 from Sanford Middle School.

The games have been moved to the more spacious Sanford Middle School field because the field at McKibbin Park is unplayable.

In Minor League (7-9 year old) action, the Bulldogs topped the Predators, 18-6, and the Seminoles topped the Eagles, 13-12.

In Major League (10-12 year old) play, the 49ers shutout the Steelers, 20-0, and the Dolphins trimmed the Cowboys, 9-7.

In the Senior League (13-15 year old) games, the Hurricanes topped the Dolphins, 13-7, and the Bears whitewashed the Cowboys, 24-0.

Next Saturday's schedule at the field on U.S. 17-92 and 18th street has the Seminoles playing the Predators at 9 a.m. and the Bulldogs playing the Eagles at 10 a.m. In the Minor League, the Steelers taking on the Dolphins at 11 a.m. and the 49ers facing the Cowboys at noon in the Major League; and the Bears tackling the Dolphins at 1 p.m. and the Hurricanes challenging the Cowboys at 2 p.m. in the Senior League.

MAJOR LEAGUE

49ERS 20, STEELERS 0

Joey Gunter and Latrice Robinson paced the offense and Charles Stokes grabbed three interceptions on defense as the 49ers got the shutout.

Rams almost perfect in Beach Run

From Staff Reports

DAYTONA BEACH — Lake Mary High School's cross country teams very nearly had a perfect outing Saturday morning in the annual Daytona Beach-Seabreeze Beach Run, claiming all four team titles and three of the four individual titles.

Angie Olson won the varsity girls' 2-mile race in 13 minutes, 41 seconds to help the Rams score a 32-65 advantage over runner-up Brooksville Central.

Also scoring for Lake Mary were Megan Paget-Wilkes (fourth, 14:34), Karen Mangano (seventh, 15:09), Corine Taraska (ninth, 15:27), and Brenda Meli (11th, 15:36). Allison Neri finished 16th in 16:01 for the Rams.

In the junior varsity girls' race, Tiffany Taraska and Machala Keenan took first and second, respectively, with times of 16:43 to lead Lake Mary to a 19-56 win over second-place Seabreeze.

While the Ram varsity boys did outscore Brooksville Central 48-52 for the team title, they were the one Lake Mary squad not to boast an individual champion. Rich Heinzman was the top placer for the Rams, placing fourth with a 3-mile time of 19:05.

Completing the team score for Lake Mary were Aren Cook (sixth, 19:13), Simon Williams (ninth, 19:16), Eric Condon (14th, 19:37), and Kellen Williams (15th, 19:47). Jeremy Olson (16th) also ran for the Rams.

John Duda turned in a time of 20:17 in winning the junior varsity boys' race for Lake Mary, helping the Rams outpoint Brooksville Central 25-31 for first place in the team standings.

Next Saturday, Oct. 8, the Lake Mary boys are headed to Tallahassee for the Florida State Invitational while the Lake Mary girls will participate in the Newberry Run at Santa Fe Community College in Gainesville.

Hallelujah: Letter born from concern, not pettiness

If only every potential confrontation ended so equitably.

For those of you who weren't with us last Monday, I received an unsigned letter a couple of weeks ago from a Seminole High School football fan who questioned the substitution policy of the coaching staff, wondering why some kids played and others didn't.

After my column, containing bits and pieces of the letter, appeared Monday, I received a phone call here Tuesday night from the letter's author, a gentlewoman who warmed my jaded soul with her heartfelt concern.

She's not a parent frate because her 10-thumbed offspring isn't the starting quarterback. She's not a friend of the family of a slow-footed benchwarmer, calling for equal playing time for everyone in a uniform, even if it means an 0-10 season.

She's just a concerned adult, trying to help children "find the right way."

God love her.

Her letter came about from a conversation she had with a neighborhood boy who accompanies her to Seminole games. And he has a friend on the varsity squad who, according to our friend, has seen little or no playing time.

SPORTS

This apparently is contrary to comments made by a coach during a visit to this child's school, when the coach supposedly said how they try to play everyone in every game.

As a result, her young friend has wondered if he should even bother trying out for a team when he gets to high school. And that resignation in a child is what prompted her to write the letter and have it dropped off. That the letter wasn't signed was an oversight, not an attempt at anonymity.

During our phone conversation, she explained that it was her position that if an athlete was good enough to earn a uniform, then he (or she) should be good enough to get into a game, even if it's just for a few plays.

If only it were that simple.

There are innumerable factors that determine who plays, and when, in a game. Not the least of these are individual talent and the situation in which the team finds itself, both in terms of the season and the game at hand.

And quite often, the athletes themselves determine who will (and won't) play by what they do in school and in practice. In a game, a coach will use those players who have proven themselves in workouts and have earned the chance to get into a game.

Do coaches play favorites? In a sense, they all do. They play most frequently those players on whom they feel they can depend. Athletics is no different than any other facet of life: trust is something that must be earned and frequently reinforced.

The only opportunity an athlete has to earn a coach's trust is in practice. And most coaches I know are great believers in the axiom that you play as you practice. If you slack off in practice, then you might as well bring a pillow to the game because the bench is a hard and uncomfortable place to sit.

That's not to say that the friend of our friend's young friend is a poor practice player. He may be inexperienced or he may play a position where he's the deep backup, on the roster in case of a sequence of injuries.

Also, whether or not you play in a game has no bearing on your position as a member of the team. If you have a uniform, you're a member of the team. How you act in support of the best interests of the team, regardless of how little you may play, determines what kind of team player you are.

The bottom line is, if you want playing time, you've got to earn it. If you're not willing to work for a share of the 528 player minutes in a football game, someone else is.

And to my newfound friend, I thank you again for your concern. I pray that you continue to support the positive interests of the children fortunate to come in contact with you, stressing to them the importance of making the attempt and the necessity of hard work if a dream is to come true.

How to control disease

Proper plant care prevents many problems

Unfortunately, most gardeners believe that controlling plant diseases always means the use of a pesticide. The good news is many diseases can be controlled preventively or by changing the way we care for our plants.

Selecting plants can greatly reduce the amount of disease problems that occur in our landscapes. Some plants are very susceptible to certain diseases while others have few problems. Native plants generally have few disease problems. In addition, researchers and plant breeders are constantly developing varieties of our favorite plants with disease resistance. Grape myrtles, for instance, in the past had a major problem with powdery mildew. Now, varieties are available with resistance to the disease.

Always plant in a location suitable for the species. Never put shade-loving plants in high light locations or sun-loving plants in the shade. Avoid extremely wet or dry locations unless the plant is suited for those conditions. Many root diseases are favored by wet soils. Good drainage may reduce the severity of certain diseases.

Diseased branches and shoots should be removed and destroyed before the disease can spread. In routine pruning, always remove diseased or declining growth first, then prune to shape the tree or shrub.

GARDENING

Many diseases organisms carry over from one season to the next on fallen diseased leaves. Collect and dispose of diseased foliage. Do not put diseased materials in the compost pile because disease organisms may survive the decomposition process and spread.

Generally, proper watering and fertilizing produces healthy plants that are more resistant to diseases than unhealthy ones. Certain diseases like cankers are more prevalent on undernourished or under watered plants. Other diseases, however, such as rusts and mildews are more severe on succulent growth. Frequent fertilization (especially high nitrogen fertilizers) and excessive moisture will favor these diseases. Too much water usually leads to root rot problems.

For the vegetable garden or annual bed, crop rotation frequently practiced by farmers will allow plants to grow in a soil relatively free of disease organisms and hastens the natural decline of disease organisms in the soil where they have built up because of the susceptible plants, that were growing there.

Caring for our garden plants properly can prevent many diseases from occurring in the first place. If you think you have a disease problem, bring a sample to the Cooperative Extension Service Office (formerly Agriculture Center), 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, across from Flea World on Hwy. 17-92, for proper identification and control recommendations. We have a plant clinic every Monday from 9:30 a.m.-noon staffed by volunteer master gardeners who will be happy to help with your problems.

Bride-to-be defends decision to move in with her fiancé

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about the mother who was happy because her daughter was denied her wish to be married in the Catholic Church due to the fact that she and her fiancé had been living together.

I was raised in a strict Catholic family. I went to church every Sunday as well as to confession, observed the Holy Days of Obligation, and have a high moral character, except in one area of my life. I live with my fiancé. My parents were heartbroken when I expressed my intent to live with him.

They failed to consider the fact that I witnessed recurring physical abuse in my family while growing up. Many times, I had to step in front of a leather belt that was intended for my little brother — or grab my infant sister to protect her from an apple hurled toward her head. After "crime" was crying loudly while my father was on the phone.

My mother begged me to reconsider my decision to live with my fiancé, saying that it was going against everything I had been taught. I finally told her that the reason I wanted to live with my fiancé before marrying him was to make sure he is not like my father. I did not want to live in fear again, nor subject my children to the violence I had endured.

ADVICE

Abby, I have consulted a priest, and was told that they will marry a couple who had been living together. If there is a three-month separation prior to the ceremony, please pass this information along if you think it will help the daughter.

ANOTHER CATHOLIC DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Thank you for your enlightening letter. I consulted Father Joseph Moniz of St. Joseph's Church in Hawthorne, Calif. He said that such decisions are left to the discretion of the priest.

The diocesan guidelines require that couples wait six months; however, if they have been living together, or have been married civilly, and the priest believes them to be sufficiently mature, he may perform the ceremony in a shorter period of time.

DEAR ABBY: Why do we use animals and birds to describe the worst qualities in humans? For example:

As stubborn as a mule.
As fat as a pig.
They fight like cats and dogs.
He's afraid — he's a chicken.
Crazy as a loon.
What a crab!
Bird-brain — feather-brain.
A bull in a china shop.
They parrot everything I say.
What a jackass!
If, for one, would never discredit the beautiful creatures of nature, and anyone who does — is as mean as a snake!

Disc disease not linked to thyroid

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a very tired 63-year-old female. I had malignant cancer of the thyroid 30 years ago and am on a thyroid replacement. I have severe degenerative disc disease and osteoarthritis. I suffer from a great deal of pain in both hip joints that travels upward to my neck and down my legs. Could my thyroid condition be causing the problems elsewhere in my body? I can't determine if all these ailments are related and why they make me so fatigued.

DEAR READER: You appear to have two distinct and unrelated conditions.

Thyroid replacement is necessary to suppress the formation of new cancer cells in your thyroid gland. Patients with a history of thyroid cancer are customarily prescribed thyroid supplements for this purpose.

To assess whether you're receiving the proper amount of medicine, your doctor should order a blood test called a TSH (thyroid stimulating hormone) level. If your dose of supplemental thyroid is too low and is the cause of your fatigue, the test will reflect this, enabling your physician to make the necessary adjustments in dose.

Osteoarthritis, the wearing down of joints due to age, commonly affects the spine, where it may cause stiffness, discomfort and -- in cases where the spinal discs are affected -- pain, the location of which depends on where the spinal nerves are irritated. Damaged discs in the neck cause neck and shoulder pain; problems with discs in the lower spine may lead to sciatica, pinched nerves that cause pain in the buttocks or legs.

In addition, osteoarthritis will affect other joints, principally the weight-bearing surfaces, such as hips and knees.

Most patients with osteoarthritis pain are helped by over-the-counter anti-inflammatory/analgesic drugs, such as Motrin, Advil or Aleve. More advanced and serious cases may require prescription medicine, such as Indocin, Voltaren or Lidaine.

WHAT IS IT?

By Phillip Alder
Defense is tough, but with a lot of counting and signaling, you can get most deals right. However, for experts "most" isn't enough. And a new book, "A Switch in Time" by Pamela and Matthew Granovetter, is aimed at them. The authors concentrate on signaling. But their methods are, to my mind, dangerous in the hands of less experienced players. Yet all pairs would benefit from reading about and discussing the possibilities.

Every partnership should have an agreement about the situation in today's deal, which is taken from the book. It is a trump contract, the opening lead is a top honor and dummy has a singleton in the suit led. How should third hand signal?

North's four-heart response is a Texas transfer.

First, you need to know how many cards East has in the suit. If we assume he has several, traditional methods state that a high or low card is suit preference and a middle card asks for a continuation. The Granovetters recommend that a high card remains an encouraging signal. They use middle and low cards for suit preference. It is a matter of choice. Here, East wants a second diamond to force the dummy. This defense defeats four spades.

However, with this layout there is another defense: West switches to a low club at trick two. If South draws trumps, he must force the dummy himself, eventually losing a second diamond trick. Whereas if South sets out to establish his heart tricks first, East gets a club ruff.

The book is available for $14.95 from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124.

HOROSCOPES

By Bernice Bode Cool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 4, 1994

Don't be reluctant to assume additional responsibilities in this approaching year where your career is concerned. These new developments can be handled effectively, which may lead to advancement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An endeavor in which you're participating has been structured in a manner that has inhibited you from asserting yourself effectively. This may now be changed for the better. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The end could be in sight today pertaining to an arrangement you've been anxious to finalize. Once you see the signals, begin tying up the loose ends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A number of interesting developments could be in the offing for you over the next few weeks. New friendships might be involved that could become more significant with each passing day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Either through choice or circumstance, new ambitions will be aroused in you at this time. Gratification is indicated in areas where objectives are established.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make an effort from this day forth to study subjects that'll add to your storehouse of knowledge in your chosen field of endeavor. What you learn now can be profitably used later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Over the next few days you might be exposed to several interesting investment proposals. Each could be worthy of further investigation, so don't treat them with indifference.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today, a clearer understanding could result in an improved partnership arrangement. Each member will finally begin to see things from the other's perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Newly established objectives have better probabilities for success at this time, despite their ambitiousness. Progress, however, could be a bit tardy, so be patient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're an unattached Gemini, something tantalizing might develop today with a person whom you've always had a platonic relationship with -- up until now. Fonder feelings are indicated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make an effort today to assess your involvements so that you can begin to discard those which have proven to be unproductive. Replace them with something new.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) New ideas or concepts should not be treated with indifference today. Your ideas might have more merit than you're capable of seeing, so discuss them with someone you trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There are certain measures you can take at this time that could put you in a receptive mode for making or saving money. Figure them out for yourself.
