In order to acquaint our customers with the changes made in the packaging and distribution of our milk, we wish to explain the action we have taken.

Along with five other milk producers in Seminole and Orange County, we have become members of Perfection Cooperative Dairies. This affiliation makes available to our customers the Pure-Pak paper container and a line of dairy products, which we have found impractical to produce in our individual milk plants.

Milk delivered to our customers, however, is still produced on our farms and processed in Sanford, with the exception of that milk which we send to Orlando to be bottled in the paper containers at the Perfection Cooperative Plant, in order that you may have your choice of either the glass or paper container.

We will continue to operate a milk plant and business office in Sanford employing the same local personnel in the plants and on the routes who have served you in the past.

We have appreciated your patronage and confidence, and we hope that we will continue to enjoy them, for we sincerely believe we have acted in the best interests of our friends and customers, and for the best business interests of this community.

Irreconcilable Differences Over Conduct Of War Given As Removal Cause

WASHINGTON, Apr. 11.—(AP)—President Truman fired General Douglas MacArthur today on grounds he failed to support—and publicly sought to change—the grand strategy of the United Nations war against Red aggression in Korea.

In a sensational statement released at the White House at 1 A. M. after days of soul-searching and indecision, the President announced:

"With deep regret I have concluded that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur is unable to give his wholehearted support to the policies of the United States government and of the United Nations in matters pertaining to his official duties."

Acting with lightning speed on that conclusion, once he had reached it, the President:

1. Relieved the 71-year-old MacArthur of his four-fold duties as supreme Allied operations commander in Japan; United Nations commander in chief for Korea; United States commander in chief for the Far East; and commanding general of the United States Army in the Far East.

2. Named Lieut. General Matthew B. Ridgway, field commander in Korea, to succeed MacArthur in all the commands. That means Ridgway not only will direct the U. N. campaign in Korea but also wind up the Japanese occupation, assuming peace treaty plans go through.

3. Named Lieut. General James A. Van Fleet, commander of the Second Army at Fort George G. Meade, Md., to take over the Eighth Army command in Korea from Ridgway.

4. Issued a set of secret messages exchanged between MacArthur and the Joint Chiefs of Staff here. The evident aim was to show anything he said on a major political or military policy with either the State or Defense Departments.

The order relieving MacArthur of command was Mr. Truman's answer to the General's persistent campaign of public statements to get the United States to follow a different policy in the Far East and especially, with its U. N. Allies, in the Korean war.

Essentially he has advocated expanding the war to include direct attacks on Red China. He has presented Asia rather than Europe as the critical theater of conflict with aggressive Communism.

His dismissal amounts to reaffirmation by Mr. Truman of United States policies for a strictly limited war in Korea, if necessary, and for seeking a settlement as the ultimately decisive area of contact with Soviet Communist power.

The bombshell announcement was made by press Secretary Joseph H. Short at a hastily summoned White House news conference.

The President told MacArthur he is free to "travel to such places as you select"—thus freeing the General in return to his country after absence of nearly 11 years. There were immediate demands in Congress that he come at once to Washington to give his views, secret messages, orders sent out shortly before midnight to bring about the spectacular shakeup in the Far East were also released.

The secret message file showed MacArthur had been covered in a general presidential order last Dec. 5, clamping down on policy statements by all government officials. He had been bluntly reminded of this by Mr. Truman's direction on Mar. 24, after learning his famous bid to the Red commander in Korea to talk peace as U. N. forces reached the 38th Parallel.

Meanwhile, on Mar. 20, the record showed, MacArthur had sent to House Republican Joe Martin (Mass.) the letter endorsing Martin's idea of using Chinese Nationalist troops on Formosa to open a "second front" against Red China, and adding his own conviction that Asia rather than Europe is the critical theater of conflict with world Communism. Martin released the letter last week.

MacArthur Risk

He completed the list of American awards when Lt. General George E. Stratemeyer, commander of Far East Air Forces, gave him the Air Medal during a visit to Pyongyang last winter.

MacArthur liked to think that his destiny was linked his career with the Orient. His first assignment was as a young engineer in the Philippines. There he journeyed through another tumultuous era in Asia as aide to his father, Lt. General Arthur MacArthur, the first military governor of the Philippines.

His career ended in the Orient—in a controversy over the importance of this half of the world in American defense plans. MacArthur had practically three careers.

The first was distinguished by a spectacular rise to rank and power by his appointment as Chief of Staff, in 1930. At 50, he was the youngest man to hold that office in the history of the Army.

Before then, MacArthur had been the youngest superintendent of West Point and the youngest divisional commander in World War I. He conceived the idea of the Rainbow Division and served in it.

He returned from Europe's war with a chestful of medals, a reputation for reckless bravery and recognition as a shrewd tactician. MacArthur was a dashing figure, a military hero with the ruffled posture that in later years was to become one of his trademarks.

A controversy that has lived on made his name during subsequent years was his part, as Chief of Staff, in ordering the Army out against Washington's bonus marchers in 1932. His supporters said he was only obeying orders.

The General sank into relative obscurity after he returned to the Philippines in 1935 as an adviser to the commonwealth government. Two years later, on his last visit to continental United States, he married the present Mrs. MacArthur. She has been by his side during most of the thunderous years that followed.

MacArthur began a second career at 61, when Japanese imperialism bounced him back to war in the Philippines as commander of U. S. forces in the Far East.

There he made his first fight with the Japanese and returned to the United States with a reputation for reckless, determined leadership. MacArthur's interest in the better battle of the peninsula and its island guardian, Corregidor, and finally the gallant capitulation—these all left scars on MacArthur that were to resurface years later.

President Roosevelt ordered MacArthur to leave Corregidor before the end. With his wife and their young son, Arthur, the General reached Australia after almost providentially slipping through the Japanese by P-T boat and plane.

Almost from the day of his arrival, MacArthur began a running fight with the Administration to get the men and equipment he said he needed to win. MacArthur argued then, as now, that the Orient was a vital area that could not be ignored.

But he lost the battle, and the Pacific was bypassed for the greater priority flow of war strength to Europe. That defeat also left its mark on the General, to resurface years later in another—and final—controversy with another Democratic President.

MacArthur fought back in World War II, with his famous leapfrog tactics, to the edge of the Philippines. These islands and their captured people had, in his mind, become his wards. The ragged war prisoners from his first army had become a cross around the neck of this sentimental man, and years later he wept publicly when he talked about them.

Then the General was summoned to a Honolulu conference with President Roosevelt. He was to be told that the Philippines were to be bypassed; that his role in the war—and future history—was over.

But MacArthur talked his way back into destiny with a private speech to Roosevelt so persuasive that the President altered the path of war to include the re-invasion of the Philippines.

MacArthur was preparing plans for the invasion of Japan, which he was to command, when the Japanese capitulation ended the first major war of western powers against the Orient.

A third career opened for the General as supreme commander for the Allied powers—the political emperor of beaten, floundering Japan.

MacArthur came to the country with memories so bitter that he made Japan's surrender envoys use the code word "Bataan." But he exercised his dictatorship over the Japanese with such benevolence that his former enemies came to respect him with the type of reverence they formerly reserved for their emperor.

The General counted among his major accomplishments in Japan a stunning and important victory over Communism—in a regimented country ripe for it.

Long before the Communists, MacArthur blocked Soviet efforts to occupy—and thereby absorbed Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island.

He fought Japanese Communists to a standstill with a mixture of force and propaganda. And when Japan became the major supply, staging and air base for the Korean war, not a single important instance of sabotage was reported.

For years before the Korean outbreak MacArthur had warned against the surge of Communism across Asia. The General and his key officers long considered they actually were at war with the Reds in this part of the world.

MacArthur privately bemoaned what he termed the needless loss of continental China to the Communists. He steadfastly maintained that China could have been held, with some western assistance wisely administered.

Part of his latter open bitterness against the U. S. State Department stemmed from the China war. It grew when the department wined off Formosa, an island which MacArthur considered an absolute necessity for American defenses in the Far East.

MacArthur was 70 when the North Koreans struck last June. He was always mentally keen and alert; not so hard-working as he denied himself holidays. But when combat challenged again, he found he was 50 years old. He never acted like an old man.

MacArthur was in the first three days after the war started. He made periodic trips, and was never out of contact with the front, often within easy range of enemy fire.

The General had maintained consistently that Communist forces must be opposed by force, wherever it arose. His influence probably was predominate in the swift mobilization of United Nations troops.

The first decision to bomb north of the 38th Parallel—the invisible boundary that military men think has been given too much importance—was made at a war conference in MacArthur's plane during a flight to Korea.

MacArthur asked his staff of officers to find sufficient authority in his directives to take this step "without Washington hanging me."

The General was elated by the success of the brilliant Inchon landing last September. The North Korean army came apart, as he had predicted, and the war was considered almost over.

MacArthur and his officers had thought the Chinese Communists would hit during the Inchon landing or not at all.

The Chinese attack was a profound shock. It turned a brilliant victory into a bitter holding war, the end of which is not yet in sight.

It was then that MacArthur began to show his pronounced, and fatal, impatience with the restraints under which was obliged to fight.

It was then he began to demand political decisions and to suggest widening the war.

MacArthur firmly believed that the entry of the Chinese had opened a new war that could be won only by the full use of western power.

"It's a cockeyed world," he once said to me. "We're in a shooting war here, and all our troops are going to Europe."

The General wrote all of his own statements and made his own decisions about releasing them. In his most recent comments, he probably was taking his favorite "calculated risk."

Doubtless, he expected some sort of reaction. But it seems unlikely that he intended to gamble the U. N. command that he valued so much by repeating what he has said so consistently for a decade.

But as he made his statements, there must have been swirling in his memory the recollection of that other bloody peninsula which meant so much to him—Bataan.

Advocates of complete financing of the minimum school foundation program introduced a bill which would provide a special appropriation of $120,457,000 to do the job. The spending authorization now is included in the general appropriations act.

Supporters of the special appropriation said they wanted to put it in nearly in the session to bring a full clear-cut debate of school financing before the closing rush that usually accompanies action on the big pending bill.

Other bills introduced during the session would:

1. Increase the membership of the State Railroad and Utilities Commission from three to five and disqualify members from learning matters in which they might have personal interest.

2. Raise the limit on the amount of purchases a county may make without competitive bidding from the present statewide $300 to $500 in counties of less than 25,000 population and $1,000 for larger ones.

3. Approximately 290,000,000 train passengers enter and leave New York City every year.

Cocky Korean Waif Named Huey Long Becomes Correspondent's Mascot

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Of all the thousands of homeless children in Korea the one I can't forget is Huey Long.

He looked like a weeping person with a crew haircut the first time I saw him the night the American Army pulled back through burning Seoul in early January.

Dwight Martin, another correspondent, and I were touring the darkened city. It was lit only by a half-dozen acre-wide fires.

On the steps of city hall stood a small forlorn boy, all alone and weeping bitterly. Loaded troop trucks roared by. Across the way pitiful groups of pleading refugees were outlined against the flames of collapsing streetfronts.

We halted our jeep and talked to the crying boy. Tears jetted from his eyes like water from a toy gun. He spoke a few words around the all-but-empty city. Huey suddenly began to shiver violently. The child's bare toes were sticking through a tear in his rubber boots, but he had made no complaint. We warmed him by a roadside fire, then tore up a blanket and wrapped it around his feet.

It was a twelve-hour ride through freezing ether back to our press camp at Taegu. Huey went without a whimper. Every once in a while he would poke his head out of the quilt and sing a few snatches of "My Darling Clementine" and then sink back and fall asleep.

Huey immediately became the pet and outcast of the press camp. He also acquired some new nicknames—"The Cinnamon Kid," "Little Pot Belly," and "Charlie's Companion."

When "Uncle Dwight" went to Tokyo, "Uncle Hui"—as he called me—had to take over as foster father. He was a hard child to handle. Through interpreters he told us that his father had died, his mother had been killed in an Allied bombing raid, and he had been put into an orphanage but had run away from it twice.

Life had made him independent and self-reliant beyond his years. We had stuffed one of his pockets with Korean currency. One day, angry because I had been too busy to buy him a new suit, he stomped into town by himself and bought one for $7.50. Later, out of curiosity, I priced one exactly like it and the shopkeeper wanted $15. Little Huey had been a sharp bargainer.

Bedtime was always stormy. Usually two correspondents finally had to pick him up by force and carry him spreadeagle style to his cot.

But in the morning our little man always became a lonesome affectionate little boy again. He got up before the birds. He would try to crawl into our bedrolls to snuggle. Then he would go around and pat each sleeping correspondent on the cheek, grunting "ugh!" whenever he found one that hadn't shaved.

Then he would begin to sing, over and over:

"Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the Bible tells me so."
After an hour of this, even the sleepiest newsman decided it was time to get up and face an Army breakfast.

It was impossible to regulate Huey's diet. Whenever American food made him sick, he'd go into town and buy Korean food. He liked to cook for himself. One morning he boiled seven eggs and two sweet potatoes—and ate them all. After he survived that, we decided he knew more about his stomach than we did.

Huey rarely called me by name. He'd just ask one of the Korean houseboys, "Where's my American?"

Tories Beat Labor On Chinese Ration; Churchill To Speak

By LEONARD LEDDINGTON

LONDON, Apr. 11—(AP)—Winston Churchill's Conservatives bailed a parliamentary trap with rationed cheese last night and defeated Britain's Socialist government by 18 votes.

But it was no formal motion of censure, and the Laborites—disregarding demands of the delighted Tories—viewed it as a minor matter not requiring Prime Minister Attlee's government to resign.

The vote was sprung by the Conservatives on seemingly routine and comparatively calm debate on the question of Britain's cheese ration. The government had ordered it cut back to two ounces a week. The Conservatives wanted the previous three ounce ration.

The victory meant more than an extra ounce of cheese for the jubilant Conservatives, however. It for a few days. But recently I got a letter saying:

"Huey has run off again. And the orphanage staff say they want to get him back. He was beginning to pay too much attention to the little girl orphans."

At last reports—"The Cinnamon Kid" was still AWOL. And now I wish I had brought him home. He was a wonderful little alarm clock. I miss his birdlike pat on the cheek in the morning. And my conscience tells me I should have done more for him.

Churchill agreed to speak at Pennsylvania May 8 as part of the University's 200th anniversary after conferring with Harold E. Stassen, Penn's president, and Robert G. Dunlop, president of the Sun Oil Company.

Stassen and Dunlop flew to London to extend a personal invitation to the British wartime leader.

A source close to the discussion said the agreement with Churchill calls for payment only of expenses for himself and a party of 10, which probably will include Mrs. Churchill.

GOOD NEWS everywhere you look in the NEW PLYMOUTH

NEW "SAFETY-FLOW RIDER"—stability and safety never possible before! Even when you unexpectedly encounter violent bumps, dips, waves, or holes in the road, you enjoy a smooth and steady motion. You have complete control of the car at all times. "Safety-Flow Rider" comes from new Oriflow shock absorbers working with other engineering features.

NEW ELECTRIC WINDSHIELD WIPERS, unlike vacuum wipers, clean at a fast, constant speed, even when the engine is under a heavy load. They're standard equipment and with them you're not required to buy a vacuum booster. You enjoy better vision all around, with narrower front corner posts and a 15% larger rear window.

NEW BUMPERS, GRILLE, HOOD. The low-sweeping new hood permits a better view of the road close to the car. Individual grille units are replaceable, so you don't need a whole new grille if only one part is damaged. Also, all four fenders are bolted on; they cost less to repair or replace than fenders which are parts of the body.

NEW INSTRUMENT PANEL AND HAND BRAKE. The new vertical-grain dash harmonizes with a variety of rich interior fabrics and trim. The new "T-handle" hand brake pulls easily, sets positively, and releases at a turn of the handle. The ignition key does three things at once: turns on the ignition, starts the engine, and puts the automatic choke in operation!

NEW ENGINE FEATURES. A new radiator pressure cap increases cooling capacity when you need it most and also helps keep the water or anti-freeze from boiling away. A new by-pass cooling system, standard on all models, gives fast warm-up and yet circulates the coolant so that the engine is fully protected under all starting and driving conditions.

AND MORE GOOD NEWS—AT YOUR PLYMOUTH DEALER'S. This doesn't even begin to tell you the Plymouth Value Story. Your Plymouth dealer wants to tell you more, and he'd like to demonstrate the sensational new "Safety-Flow Rider." So why not stop in, or phone him, today or tomorrow?

WEDNESDAY, APR. 11, 1951 TODAY'S BIBLE VERSE

Sometimes distress itself is a means to enlargement. Thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress.

Tourists are an important factor in the growth of Orlando. According to figures just released by the Orlando Chamber of Commerce, 34,240 tourists visited that city from Oct. 1 to Apr. 1 of this year.

Not all American business is big business. In fact, 90 percent of all business firms in America employ fewer than 20 people, according to the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association.

The week of Apr. 28-May 5 is National Baby Week. "Please write us a nice editorial," we are urged in this morning's mail.

Because General MacArthur seems to think it might be a good idea to use the 500,000 Chinese Nationalists on Formosa as cannon fodder against the Chinese Reds...

The Senate has started an investigation into federal job selling in Mississippi. But everyone knows that Mississippi is no worse in this respect than other states.

We have often thought how embarrassing it must be to honest men who find themselves a part of the present State administration.

Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, has shown patience with college officials in finding ways of getting around college agreements on pay-offs.

The second incident was the MacArthur letter to Martin. Martin is a leader of the President's Republican opposition.

Peace For Our Times

When Prime Minister Chamberlain returned from his memorable conference with Adolf Hitler in Munich and carrying his little black umbrella stepped out of his airplane at Croydon Airport, he told the British people he had secured "peace for our times".

What he had done was to surrender little Czechoslovakia to the greedy German Führer in the vain hope of satisfying his insatiable appetite and thus keep war from Britain's shores.

Today the world is being victimized again by the same forces which produced the second World War. When President Truman listened to the clamor of British voices which would surrender the Far East in order to send more American planes to England, and fired General MacArthur, he yielded to appeasement.

It is important to remember just what the facts in this dispute are before they become lost in the murky blackness of political mud-slinging. MacArthur simply wanted to use Chinese Nationalist troops, on Formosa and elsewhere, against Chinese Communists.

But the British and their fellow-appeasers in this country counseled against such a vigorous policy declaring that it might make the Chinese mad, and that this is what some of them have gotten into a war with China.

You are not any less likely to make a man mad by hitting him gently than by hitting him hard. You are not any less likely to end the fight by delivering the knockout punch than by shadow boxing.

There is great rejoicing in Peking and Moscow tonight for the Communists have won another great victory.

Tax On Advertising

The staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report has cast a highly interested eye at the possibilities of a tax on advertising.

The authors of this suggestion also foresee that a heavy tax on advertising might reduce the volume of it, and might therefore also reduce the demand for goods.

The real effect, however, would be felt by the media which are supported by advertising. These are, in the main, the newspapers, the magazines, and radio and television.

Trading Experiences

In more than sixty countries of the world, the Institute of International Education is engaged in selecting, from students, teachers, engineers and government workers, individuals to take part in the Institute's exchange program.

The growth testifies to the increasing belief, everywhere in the world, that peace must be based on international understanding, which in turn is based on the free mingling of different peoples with each other.

Truman Fires

Messages between the Joint Chiefs of Staff and MacArthur on the question of arming Korean troops. This showed MacArthur raising a serious question whether more Koreans should be armed in view of the weapons needs for the developing Japanese police.

While the Truman Administration's feud with MacArthur goes back many months, two events apparently were decisive in bringing on the showdown. One was the General's 20th Parallel statement, in which he not only invited Red talks but also implied the United Nations might alter their policy and attack Red China.

The President paid tribute to the General. General MacArthur's plan to send Nationalist Chinese troops to Korea was approved.

Reaction To Firing

Senator Ertmer (D-La.)—"MacArthur should have stuck to the military and not meddled with the political. President Truman had to assert himself."

Senator McCarty (R-Wis.), one of the Administration's chief congressional critics, called the firing a "black day for America and a great day of rejoicing and victory for Communism."

Senator Jenner (R-Ind.)—"Our struggle in Korea is not finished. There is nothing to do now but bring the boys home."

Former President Herbert Hoover made this comment on MacArthur's removal: "This action can bring great tragedy to our country. It does not solve the primary question of how to end our war with Communist China without advantage to Soviet Russia."

Geneva Pupil Wins Spelling Contest And Trip To Miami

Nadine Bostick, 13 year old 7th grade pupil of the Geneva School, was winner last night in the Miami Herald sponsored spelling contest at the Junior High School.

The runner up was Robert Estes, seventh grade pupil at the Lyman School, Longwood. He is the first boy in Seminole county to win this honor.

By spelling "environment" correctly, Miss Bostick won for her school the right for a year's possession of a coveted cup donated by the Miami newspaper.

Miss Bostick was awarded a $10 prize, and with Robert Estes will represent Seminole County in the state contest at the Bayfront Auditorium at Exposition Park, Miami on Apr. 27.

Robert Estes spelled words submitted correctly until he ran out on the word "ascertain". As a runner up he won $5.

Third prize winner was Robert Newton, local eighth grade pupil who was awarded a pen and pencil set donated by Powell's Office Supply Co.

Marvin McKinley, local pupil, won fourth prize, $2.50 presented by the Touchette Drug Co.

Judges were Mrs. M. B. Smith, Mrs. Elizabeth Lynch and Mrs. Helen Walker.

Controversy and acrimony. Advised of President Truman's action by a reporter, the Atlantic Coast commander first showed surprise and said, "That's our country, isn't it?"

British officials, in private comment, said now might be the time for the United Nations to offer Communist China another chance to halt about ending the Korean war.

THE WORLD TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE, AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Many will be made anxious but none need be surprised at the statement by Speaker Rayburn of the U.S. House of Representatives that "we are in terrible danger" because the Russians are building up troop concentrations.

The late war gave them a chance to strengthen their positions in both Europe and Asia. It was not strange now to find them deploying military forces at strategic points for eventualities.

Does this mean Russia is getting ready to launch another major war?

Well, it means she is getting ready for possible war. So are the democracies getting set for contingencies. And when two opposing forces are, so to speak, drawn up in battle array, the situation always is precarious.

The Name That Counts

A name-calling argument has been going on among Tribune readers lately. It was started by somebody who wrote a letter to the editor during the Kefauver hearings.

America is the greatest nation in the world. Why? Because a native-born woman named Smith can be elected to the United States Senate and an Italian immigrant named Impelleri can become mayor of New York.
