Proponents of the proposed changes expressed confidence today, however, that with the change in the House membership in the new congress, they would have more than an even chance of success.

There seems to be more doubt in the minds of these leaders about the situation in the Senate, but they expressed hope that with an increased Democratic and Republicans "progressive" vote, a revision could be put through.

OSTEOPATHY

The Rule of the Artery

An old Osteopathic adage reads, "The Rule of the Artery is Supreme." The flow of blood must be pure and unrestricted. It is a truth full of significance for those who value health.

OSTEOPATHY is generally credited with the ability to achieve substantial results in conditions involving nervous disorders.

But the benefits of Osteopathy extend far beyond its unusual effectiveness in this limited group of ailments. The adage above illustrates a principle, recognized by the Osteopathic physician as a vital part of the physical foundation upon which all health must rest. As truly as lack of adequate and normal nerve force will weaken resistence and open the doors to contagion, infection and organic trooble-so surely will impure blood and restricted circulation spell weakness in the organs of the body.

attaches to the "rule of the artery"—the principle that pure blood, normally circulating in normal quantity, is absolutely necessary to maintain or restore health in the body. Through the methods of adjustment of the spine which charac-

Many people are not aware of the importance that Osteopathy terize his science, through necessary correction of diet, through personal hygiene, through adjustment of the environment in which the body lives—the Osteopathic physician works toward normal blood supply as earnestly as towards normal supply of nerve force.

Every physical factor that enters into the problem of restoring and maintaining health is fully recognized and carefully treated by the Osteopathic physician.

Adjustment of structure, particularly the principle of spinal adjustment, was first given to the world by Osteopathy in 1874. For half a century the scientific value of this principle has been successfully demonstrated by Osteopathic physicians. Osteopathy does not use drugs as curative agents. With the single exception of materia medica, however, it embraces every scientifically proven principle of diagnosis, hygiene, sanitation, environment, The Osteopathic physician is required to complete a four years course-nine months study in each year-in order to prepare himself for conscientious and efficient service in treating disease and sickness. Osteopathic literature may be had upon request.
