Paterson's arraignment set

SANFORD — Suspended Lakeview Middle School band instructor Stephen Paterson will be arraigned on felony charges March 1 at 1 p.m. at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility courtroom. He is charged with lewd and lascivious acts upon a child under 16 and with sexual activity with a child in custodial authority.

During his first court appearance Wednesday, Paterson told Judge John Sloop he will be represented by attorney J. Cheney Mason.

Moore to head hospital board

SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital Board of Trustees has named Lee P. Moore, board chairman. Moore has been on the board since 1991.

Dr. Gomez, M.D., was named to serve as chairman.

Moore is a former mayor of Sanford and served as president of Sunland Corporation and its retirement last year. He still maintains active time off operation at Sunland.

Moore succeeds Dr. Earl Weldon, president of Seminole Community College, the 1992 chairman. Weldon served on the board from 1980 to 1984 and again from 1987 until 1992.

Dr. Gomez, an internal medicine/orthology physician in Longwood, has served on the board since 1988, as well as from 1980 until 1985.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith was named to her first term on the hospital's board. She will serve a three-year term.

SANFORD — The City of Sanford Housing Authority will be holding an art show starting Monday. The exhibit, called The Heritage Art Festival, will be open to the public through March 1.

The exhibit has been organized by art historian and artist M. Shelton and Phyllis D. Richardson, executive director of the Housing Authority in cooperation with the Orlando Museum of Art, Rollins College, and the University of Central Florida.

The show will be open seven days a week from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m., Richardson said. This is an excellent show, and I feel certain people will benefit greatly from the knowledge they can obtain by seeing these exhibits.

The show will include Zulu art, art from the Congo, wood carving from Kenya, contemporary African art, and Afro-American art.

Ex-husband of slain Lake Mary woman to face charges

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

New York State Police arrested San Francisco's Goungo, the man police say allegedly killed his ex-wife in Lake Mary a week ago.

Local officials hope to have him back in Seminole County to face charges within a few days.

George Proechel, Seminole County sheriff's office spokesman, said that Goungo will appear in court in Rochester this morning.

If he waives extradition rights, he will return to Seminole County soon to answer charges that he fatally shot Matilda Ferrer in the parking lot of the Albertson's supermarket at Lake Mary Center.

We hope to have him here in a few days, Proechel

“All we can do now is wait. We'd like him back here as soon as we can get him.”

—George Proechel, sheriff's spokesman said. It could be as long as 90 days, but we hope to have him here sooner.

A motive in the killing is still unclear to law enforcement officials who said that Goungo and Ferrer had been married about 13 years ago. Goungo had come to the area a week ago to visit and police said the two seemed to be on good terms with one another.

Life before murder charges

Principal: Brooks had difficult time growing up

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

A 14-year-old youth facing life in prison if convicted of murdering a Sanford neighbor last year had difficulty dealing with authority as he was growing up, according to one of his former school principals.

Terrance Brooks, 14, a freshman at Seminole High School, is in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility charged with the Nov. 7 murder of Mark Edward Marsh. Brooks will be 15 on March 23.

Enrolled in regular level ninth grade classes and a vocational education construction course, school officials said they could not find any extra-curricular activities in which Brooks participated. Assistant principal Verma Jackson declined to release Brooks' grade point average.

Facing expulsion after three suspensions while a seventh grader at Lakeview Middle School, he was placed in the Crooms School of Choice discipline program, according to Crooms Principal Barbara Kirby. Living in a single parent household headed by his mother, Kirby recalled Brooks had difficulty dealing with authority. With his 2.3 grade average, Brooks was sometimes on the school honor roll and recognized for his work. He attended remedial classes for math and a half.

Kirby noted that during his time at Crooms, school officials seldom met with him. She said Brooks lived with his father in Miami. That SANFORD — Benjamin Scott, 14, came from a troubled home, but he had been making strides to turn things around for himself.

Barbara Kirby, principal at the Crooms School of Choice, where Scott had been enrolled before his arrest last month on first degree murder charges, said that the young man had often talked about becoming a teacher and about wanting to help other people.

Scott was allegedly the "trigger man" in the killing of Mark Edward Marsh, 20, a newcomer to Sanford in November.

Police believe that the murder occurred during a robbery gone awry.

"I believe he got involved in the wrong crowd," said Kirby. "I think that there is hope for him to be rehabilitated."

Kirby said that Scott was enrolled in the discipline program at Crooms for violating school board policy and that he was there as an alternative to expulsion.

They were minor things," she said. "This is not something that I would have expected of him."

She said that he had been a hard worker in school and that he had been on the honor roll at the school for two consecutive semesters.

Kirby said that he had been working against the odds, coming from a single parent home under

Castor to give grants to all 6 high schools

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

Betty Castor, commissioner of education for the state, will visit Seminole County tomorrow to present all six high schools with awards as part of the state Accountability grants.

Lake Mary, Lake Brantley, Lake Howell, Oviedo and Lyman high schools will each receive checks for $25,000 for fulfilling all of their goals in the school improvement plans they set before themselves. Seminole High will get a check for $20,000.

Seminole will get less money because their enrollment remains under 2,000 students.

We are the only school district in central Florida to have all of our high schools receive grants," said Dede Schallner, director of the President's School Volunteer Program, which is sponsoring the awards presentations tomorrow at Lake Mary High School.

Some larger counties, including Orange County, failed to have even one of their high schools earn any grant money.

I think that in itself says something about the quality of education here in Seminole County," Schallner said.

In addition to the $20,000 Accountability grant, Lake Mary High School will be presented with

Judge throws out guilty pleas

MELBOURNE — A judge Wednesday threw out a motorist's guilty pleas to the drunken-driving deaths of two police officers and ordered a trial because of the disclosure of previous drug convictions.

Kevin Hugh O'Neill will be tried next month on two manslaughter charges and several misdemeanor counts arising from the May 31 accident that fatally injured Satellite Beach officers Edward Hartmann, 37, and Philip Flagg, 22.

The officers were working a traffic stop by the side of State Road A1A when O'Neill's pickup truck slammed into Flagg and then struck a patrol car that hit Hartmann.

O'Neill's blood-alcohol level was 0.22 percent. The legal limit is 0.10.

O'Neill, 34, has been in the Brevard County jail for three months, since he told Circuit Judge Martin Budnick he wanted to plead guilty in exchange for a prison sentence of no more than 17 years.

But prosecutors asked Budnick to revoke the plea bargain because of additional information about O'Neill's drug convictions in Ohio.

Chiles 'dismayed' at losing Guard units

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles says he is dismayed that the Florida Army National Guard will lose eight units this year as part of the nationwide restructuring of military forces.

"This will definitely work a hardship on our communities and our national readiness," Chiles wrote Wednesday in a letter to the state's adjutant general.

"I hope you can understand my dismay at the fact that Florida stands to lose 671 positions," said Chiles, noting his concern about further cutbacks next year.

Maj. Gen. Ronald O. Harrison says that the reduction was necessary because of national downsizing of Army forces.

Harrison said no armories will be closed, but some leased facilities will be shut down. The Florida Guard, however, plans to create four new units, while adjusting troop strength in others.

1 of 5 indicted on weapons charges

MIAMI — One of five men arrested off Cuba with machine guns and rocket launchers on their boat was indicted on weapons charges and pleaded innocent before a federal magistrate.

Ivan Rojas, 54, was indicted Wednesday for illegal possession of six unregistered guns and faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

His attorneys sought a reduction in his $100,000 bond and Magistrate Peter Palermo said he would consider the request.

Federal prosecutors dropped charges Tuesday against the four others on the boat and they were freed.

All five had been in custody since the 45-foot fishing boat Angelina was stopped by the Coast Guard while anchored 50 miles from the Cuban coast on Jan. 30.

Rojas was arrested in the Bahamas last year on similar charges, but was acquitted in a trial.

Woman charged with hiding son's body

MONTICELLO — A woman has been charged with hiding her disabled 8-year-old son's body for seven months after his death and continuing to cash his Social Security checks.

Kaira Nolinman Brown, 32, of Monticello remained free on $1,700 bond Wednesday as authorities continued their investigation to determine whether her son, Sean, had been abused, said Jefferson County Sheriff Ken Partman.

However, he said an autopsy indicated the child, who had cerebral palsy, apparently died of natural causes.

A state Health and Rehabilitative Services worker checked Ma. Brown's home Monday and became suspicious when told the child was with someone else. Police were called and she admitted the child's body was in her home.

Child crushed to death in auto mishap

FORT LAUDERDALE — A 17-month-old girl left alone in a car wiggled out of her child seat, moved the gear shift, crawled outside and was crushed to death when the car rolled over her.

Monique Alexandria Morris died Wednesday in the driveway where her mother had parked for a moment to run into the family's house, investigators said.

"It's been difficult to talk to the father when the child is laying right there in front of him," said a shaken Florida Highway Patrol Sgt. John Borzner.

The girl's mother, Rudenia Morris, told troopers she parked the car in the driveway and took the keys, leaving Monique in her child seat in the back and the driver's side door open.

A minute or so later, Ockley Morris stepped outside and saw the car had rolled over his daughter.

Investigators were not immediately sure how the child got out of her seat and knocked the shift on the automatic transmission car into gear. The shift was in first gear, but the car rolled as if it were in neutral.

Court animation
Computer-generated video allowed in criminal case

By Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — A computer-generated videotape showing a pickup truck ramming into a group of five young playmates will be allowed as evidence against an accused hit-and-run driver, a judge ruled.

The presentation allowed in the case of Kenneth Pierce is believed to be the first use of computer animation in a criminal trial in Florida and only the third nationally, defense attorney Bo Hitchcock said Wednesday.

Circuit Judge Mark Spelzer decided over defense objections Tuesday to show jurors a three-minute tape, generated by computer animators, in the vehicular homicide trial scheduled for March 1.

"A jury trial is basically an attempt to recreate something that occurred in the past," said prosecutor Ken Padowitz. "A computer animation is one further aid in communicating to the jury what the evidence is."

Hitchcock objected to the tape as a sophisticated "computer game," but he is now scrambling to make one of his own.

"I believe in the power of the television. It's a TV generation. The jurors are very impressed by whatever they see," he said. "It's a tough situation, and I think an unfortunate one, but I guess we'll live with it."

Computer animation has become increasingly common in civil cases, but Hitchcock said research by the judge, prosecution and defense determined it had been used before in only two criminal cases, one in California and the other in Arizona.

"It's a boom industry if they let it in in criminal cases," Hitchcock said. "The state's going to be doing it. The federal government's going to be doing it. The defense is going to be doing it."

Nicole Rae Walker, 6, was killed and two friends were injured when a pickup swerved into the children playing in a puddle at 9 p.m. last June 23. The victim was blind in one eye and was being carried by a 10-year-old friend.

Pierce was arrested Oct. 15 after investigators linked paint chips and a grille piece left in the puddle to his truck. He also is charged with leaving the scene of an accident, driving with a suspended license and tampering with evidence.

Panel approves penalty to minors buying tobacco

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Minors could be cited for the purchase or possession of cigarettes under a bill approved Wednesday by a House panel.

A bill to require health warning signs where alcohol is sold failed in the Alcoholic Beverages & Tobacco subcommittee, though a parliamentary move left it available for resurrection.

The group voted 8-0 to approve the bill on tobacco sales to people under 18 (HB 45) and send it to the full Regulated Industries Committee.

"All the punishment and responsibility is on the seller of the products, and we think it is time to put some of the responsibility on the purchaser," said Rep. Carol Hanson, R-Boca Raton, the sponsor.

Lawmakers passed a bill last year requiring tobacco sellers to buy $50 permits and face losing them if caught selling to a minor.

Under Hanson's bill, minors buying or possessing tobacco could face reprimands, counseling, fines or public service or community work. They could be ordered to attend substance abuse programs, be put on curfew for 6 months, or lose their driver's license for 3 months.

They'd be barred from buying from a person or a vending machine. The same penalties would apply to anyone giving a minor money for tobacco.

About 48 percent of Florida's population is already covered by local requirements for health warning signs in places that sell alcohol, said Rep. Daniel Webster, R-Orlando, sponsor of a bill to require them statewide.

Subcommittee Chairman Harry Goode, D-Melbourne, who voted no as the bill (HB 573) was defeated 6-3, moved to reconsider and leave it pending.

That means the proposal can be tacked on another bill as an amendment as the legislative session goes on, Webster said. "We'll definitely look for every opportunity to do that." Webster blamed pressure from the alcoholic beverage industry for swaying the group against the bill.

"This is a tough committee," he said.

He decried about a foot-high "Health Warning" sign required where alcohol is sold in Lake County. The signs could be posted statewide for less than $50,000, he said.

"Alcohol in beer, wine and liquor can cause intoxication, addiction, birth defects," the placard read.

It urged buyers to avoid drinking and driving or operating machinery, mixing alcohol with other drugs, or drinking when pregnant.

Counties including Dade, Hillsborough, Palm Beach, Duval, Orange, Citrus and Polk already require such signs, Webster said.

Federal law already requires warnings on beer cans, said Rep. Luis Rojas, R-Hialeah. "At what point is this overkill?"

500 kids to air crime

By Associated Press

WILDWOOD — Some 500 high school students from five counties are to take part in a forum aimed at identifying the causes of teen-age crime and coming up with ways to reduce it.

The gathering, tentatively set for April at Central Florida Community college in Lecanto, will be sponsored by the Juvenile Delinquency and Gang Prevention Council of the 5th Judicial Circuit.

Among the teen-agers invited are troubled youngsters, who can relate their own experiences.

"We want to find out firsthand what they believe is the cause of juvenile delinquency and gang formation," said Cory Pool, a member of the council.

The group met in Wildwood on Tuesday, spurred by the killings of two young sisters, who were wounded of their mother in nearby Eustis Jan. 30. Two youths, 18 and 14, have been charged with the slayings.

The chairwoman of the 5th Circuit panel is Beverly Steele, aunt of Dorothy Reid Lewis, who survived the Eustis shootings and is recovering in an Orlando hospital.

Steele said she was trying to use her grief to help prevent young people from committing crime, and urged members of the audience to play a part in preventing delinquency.

"If you molest your children, you are a major contributor to juvenile delinquency and gang formation," she said. "If you desert your children, you are a major contributor to juvenile delinquency and gang formation. You must take responsibility."

The council hopes to use celebrities to attract students to the forum. Young people will be invited from each of the district's five counties: Lake, Sumter, Hernando, Citrus and Marion.

Ray Snow, an elementary teacher from Leesburg, warned colleagues not to turn the forum into a media event.

"I like the idea, but I'm trying to think as a troubled young person in front of the media."

Agriculture seminars set

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Florida Cooperative Extension Service Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, IFAS, is planning important seminars during the next few weeks. Both will be held at the Seminole County Agriculture Center in Sanford.

On Tuesday, Feb. 16, the subject will be pesticide recordkeeping and worker protection standards. Extension Agent Stephen Crnko said, "This is an important seminar that will be valuable for anyone who deals with chemicals, but especially farmers."

"Some people may not think this is important, but it is a serious matter," he said, "and one that people should make themselves knowledgeable about."

The seminar will begin at 6 p.m. with a sponsored free dinner, followed by a pesticide record-keeping video, and a discussion with Dr. Norman Nesheim, pesticide information coordinator for IFAS.

On Tuesday, March 2, a seminar will be held at the same location, dealing with solar water pumps, and watersupply economics. Guest speakers will include Helen H. Whiffen, with IFAS's Florida Energy Extension Service, and Jeff Sopp, president of Nomad Systems, who discuss alternate energy systems and solar water pumps.

"Again, this is important to many people, especially those who deal with the agricultural community," Crnko said. "We hope everyone will turn out for this one."

The event begins at 6 p.m. with a free sponsored dinner.

"We would like people to phone in advance reservations," Crnko said. "There isn't any charge, but we will need to know how many people will be attending each of the two seminars, so we can arrange for the food, which is all provided by a sponsoring organization."

The meetings will be held at the Seminole County Agriculture Center, 250 W. County Home Road. For further information or reservations, contact Stephen Crnko, at 323-2500, ext. 5554.

Listen to the explanation for Mainstreet

At first glance, financing of the Sanford Mainstreet Project appears to be poorly planned. The City donates $10,000 to hire someone to fill out paperwork to obtain $10,000.

The City Commission's donation, made last November, was to be in matching funds, from the Sanford Historic Association, the name of the organization until the word "Mainstreet" can be legally used.

The SHA came up with the match in the form of a donated office area at 101-B West First Street. It is now used as an office for newly hired Neil Fritz, and as a Welcome Center, for the downtown area.

The money from the state would go for downtown designs, promotion, and marketing analysis.

Fritz is looking at additional benefits he expects the city to receive by being selected as a member of the Mainstreet U.S.A. and Mainstreet Florida programs.

His job is to compile information regarding the present downtown Sanford area. He will be asking for recommendations from downtown business persons, local historians, and creative individuals, on what they would like to see the city become.

Fritz is confident that Sanford will be one of the three cities selected in Florida in 1993 to be part of the program. He is looking forward to having federal and state project experts meet with local people and discuss how to go about creating the image the people want for the downtown area.

Fritz's job is to depend on input. If he receives positive but diametrically opposed opinions, he's in for a tough time.

Should research produce a taking-of-sides by people wanting the downtown area to take on a historical nature, versus modernization, his task will fall.

If mainstreet program is rejected on the basis that it will merely be a refurbishing project for old buildings, it will lose enthusiasm in a very short time.

Whether Fritz can compile the applications and obtain approval for Sanford to be part of the official Mainstreet Project remains to be seen.

He has obtained the project for other cities. We suggest organizations give him the opportunity to explain the program.

Perot still haunts President Clinton

Which single thought do you suppose is uppermost in President Clinton's mind these days? The problem of restoring health to the economy? Finding an attorney general? Stopping the slaughter in Bosnia?

I have no doubt that he spends a lot of time on each of these — and on many other problems equally difficult. But Mr. Clinton, like most presidents, is first and foremost a politician. And presidents in their first term spend an extraordinary amount of time worrying about how to be elected to a second.

No doubt Mr. Clinton (again, like most presidents) tells himself that his chance of re-election depends on how well he does during these next four years, and, thus inspired, goes briskly off to the Oval Office to do the best he can.

But Mr. Clinton has one problem that is unique; at least, I can't think of any recent parallel. For across his path to a second term there falls not only the shadow of the Republican Party, a highly competent organization still firmly in the grip of the conservative movement, but another shadow as well: that of Ross Perot.

Never forget that George Bush won 38 percent of the popular vote last November, and Bill Clinton 43 percent. The rest — 19 percent — went to Mr. Perot, whose platform was simplicity itself: outrage over the federal deficit, and a grim determination to do something about it. What's more, this outsider (who happens to be a multimillionaire) has already signaled his intention to keep his political following organized under his management, and is hitting what looks very much like the traditional campaign trail preparatory to a second run in 1996.

Of course, there is a sense in which Mr. Clinton can afford a second Perot candidacy better than the Republicans can. After all, in 1992 their three-way split elected Mr. Clinton. But there are all sorts of pitfalls for him on the road to re-election, if he fails to reduce the federal deficit and those Perot supporters start to increase, or begin to move in the wrong direction. That alone is enough to convince me that Mr. Clinton is dead serious about cutting spending and increasing taxes.

Paradoxically, Mr. Clinton might actually like to see Mr. Perot run again, provided the president's own record on the deficit is acceptable enough, or Mr. Perot's appeal still strong enough, to prevent more than a quarter of 1992 Perot voters from switching to the Republican candidate.

On the other hand, if Mr. Perot doesn't run, Mr. Clinton will need to capture more than a third of 1992 Perot voters to win re-election, and the Republicans would need just about two-thirds of them to defeat him. Since most of them are so-called "Reagan Democrats," and the GOP's general reputation for fiscal responsibility is still a good deal higher than George Bush's or the Democratic Party's, that might not be too hard for an attractive Republican candidate to achieve. One more good reason for Mr. Clinton to reduce that deficit.

Moreover he must assume that the Republicans will be busy opening lines of communication to Mr. Perot. They certainly won't want him as their own nominee in 1996 — after all, the man has demonstrated remarkably little in the way of real qualifications to be president. But they must surely long for his endorsement of their candidate, and there may be things that they can in good conscience offer him in return, short of the nomination. Of course, if there's to be a bidding war, that's a game at which the Democrats, too, can play.

Special interests ruining democracy

If our traditional democracy is to survive into the next century, the people we elect to operate it are going to have to find some way to resist the teledemocracy of phone and fax.

It sounds like a paradox, but it isn't. Traditional democracy, the kind designed by Franklin and Jefferson and Madison, is deliberately representative in form: We the people elect others whose judgment we trust to deliberate and decide the issues.

Teledemocracy is direct: Public sentiment is whipped up by special interests, fanatics, showmen and demagogues; the resultant phone calls and fax messages are jotted up; our representatives, cave in and the majority gets what they demand.

Direct democracy works like this: Congress passes a health plan that would protect senior citizens from bankruptcy in the event of catastrophic illness. Problem is, the seniors have to pay a fair share of the cost. They like the benefits, but not the premiums. They inundate Capitol Hill with calls, faxes, telegrams and letters, and the legislation is repealed. The elderly rich fear not; the elderly poor suffer.

Or like this: A Marine lieutenant colonel assists Central American insurgents in direct defiance of Congress, and the legislators call him to testify. He shows up in bemedaled splendor, flashes a gap-toothed grin at the cameras, lays a Bible on the table in front of him, and assumes the posture of a bearded hero. The messages come pouring in and the colonel's interrogators turn to mush. He exits an idol.

There is nothing wrong, of course, with people expressing their viewpoints on any subject. The problem comes when lawmakers and presidents surrender to public passion. This is a frightening prospect for a number of reasons.

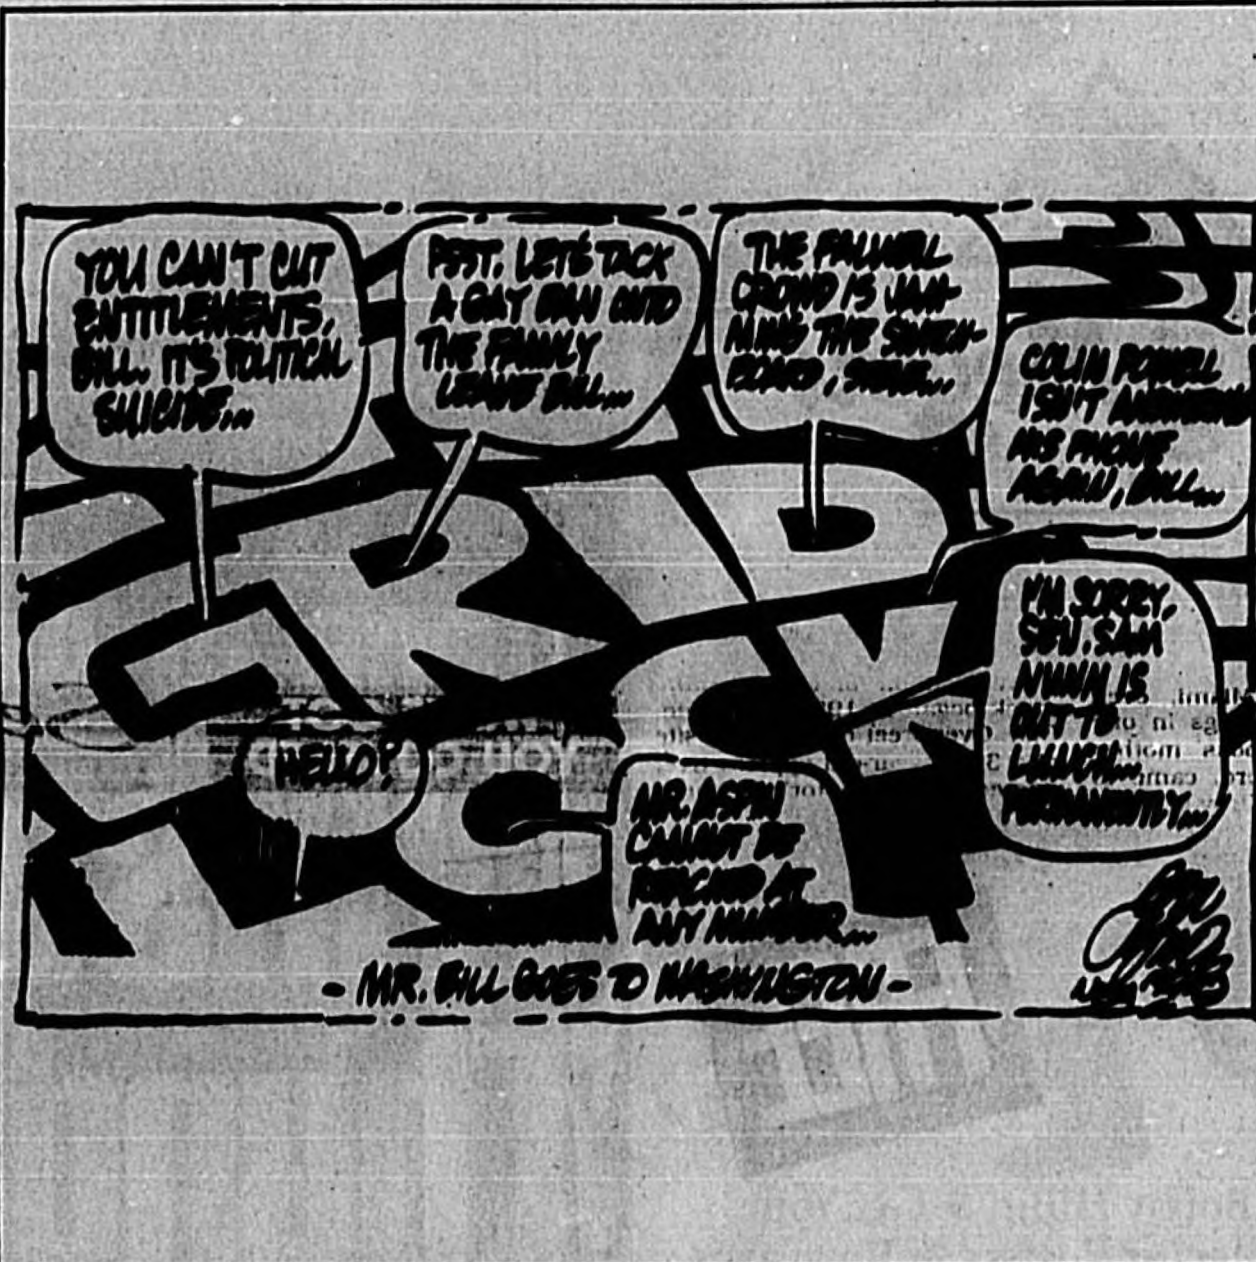

For one thing, sensible people are rarely the ones who do the shouting. It's usually angry people who are motivated not by reason but by rage. Are you ready for government by tantrum? For another thing, direct democracy is frighteningly susceptible to manipulation by demagogues. Hitler and Mussolini exploited radio to whip up support for plebiscites that cemented their power. Every narrow-minded agitator from Father Coughlin to Jerry Falwell has used his flock to further his agenda of intolerance.

Even as I write these words, Falwell and his fellow provocateur Pat Robertson are prodding their formidable congregations to bury the Congress in fax and phone messages in opposition to gays in the military — a fundamental issue of fairness that should be decided by reflection and not by fury. "A new, radical homosexual rights agenda" is shaping up, Falwell told his "Old Time Gospel Hour" listeners, and they should join his drive against gays in the ranks. "What should a Christian do?" said Robertson on his "700 Club" television show. "Get on your telephone and dial your congressman or your senator." As bad as the situation now is, the all-time call-in showdown has yet to come. Wait until the great deficit debate really gets rolling and decisions have to be made about what programs to cut. Senior citizens, veterans, farmers, contractors, librarians, litchi nut growers — all will be on the horn to the Hill. Gridlock City, here we come.

The problem is going to get worse with every advance in communications technology.

The people we elect are going to have to find some way to resist the teledemocracy of phone and fax.

Solutions to drug problem

In a recent newspaper article dated Feb. 9 it amazes me when the Sanford city mayor, Betsy Smith and acting police chief Ralph Russell as well as a few comments from city commissioners, challenged the city residents to offer solutions to the drug problems that plague our communities.

Well fasten your seat belts residents.

First of all, there are solutions, always have been and will continue to be, but everyone must play their role in this charity bazaar for special purposes to benefit special people and you must understand your role. You are the marketplace lined with shops and stalls for selling of drugs to benefit these special people, for their special purposes. You are the vehicle that is used for the manifestation of this bazaar. It is a disgrace and disgusting for us as blacks to continue to cry out to city, county, and even state officials about our drug infected communities. It's time to emerge and see the truth about your role in drug infected communities.

You are the vehicle that is being used by local officials right here at home, that share no empathy concerning your feeling, state of mind, nor your actual experiences.

This local government is no different from any other governments in our black communities around our state or nation. They give you liberty to operate that vehicle.

I am a law abiding citizen with obedience for the law, but I find it very difficult to have respect for a city mayor, acting police chief, a county sheriff, and even a few commissioners who seem to be baffled concerning our drug infected communities, when their are several Florida Statutes that are accessible to assist them as curables, but rather finding them to be critically unfavorable.

Some of the statutes can eliminate 90 percent of our community problems. One main problem is that our government has allowed our foreign neighbors to infiltrate our communities with businesses which has caused the promotion of loitering to escalate. This type of loitering has demoralized the health and welfare of the community, it has become more injurious to morals and has caused our black males especially to be less productive, less motivated, loss of self esteem, and portrays them as guinea pigs used by scientists.

We're not Ezekiel's wheel in the middle of a wheel being productive, nor are we Moses, with a rod or staff in our hands with morals of power, but we're a vehicle being used by Pharaoh's hands pleading to a non-compassionate government to let our people go by enforcing our existing laws.

It amazes me to see the immorality of our communities with the liberty of allowing violations of the laws with the open containers, the burning of fires in open barrels day and night, the excessive loitering after business hours, the stalking of automobiles in the streets and other immoral acts, just to see our non-compassionate government as well as law officials displaying their ignorances to help relinquish such liberties. Drugs must be sold to enhance this bazaar industry for special people and you are the couriers.

Drugs are the most productive money making products in America, and you are the cash register. It is a disgrace and belittles any official to dare citizens to offer solutions to these type of problems when the laws are created by their hands. Manmade laws are made to bend, amend or repeal, but God's laws are steadfast and immovable, choose ye this day.

We spend millions of dollars annually on facilities for treatment, prevention, rehabilitation, even duplication of programs and replacement programs trying to accommodate a youthful society that has become ungovernable.

We as a county of people should put forth all efforts in trying to join hands to bring about a change to help save our next generation. This is no longer a black or white issue, we all have suffered and grieved, and have come to the realization that there's a need for a change in our society from this crisis.

I believe that the county governmental authorities are partial and would enforce these Florida Statutes in other parts of the county if these conditions existed.

Sanford mulls locations for new 'Welcome' signs

By NICK PFENAUER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Locations for welcome signs leading into the city are being considered. Members of the city commission have been informed of four suggested locations for the signs, where orange flagged stakes have been temporarily placed.

"If you'll drive around and look at the locations," said Public Works Director Jerry Herman, "I think you'll have a good idea of where we are proposing to place the signs."

The signs are the result of a contest for designs held by the commission last September. On Oct. 26, William Swanner of Geneva was given a $100 savings bond for the design that was selected.

The commission has since approved construction of four signs, to be placed at entrance areas into the city.

The signs would be large and lit for nighttime use. In addition to welcoming people to Sanford, a message area would be included to be used in promoting special events or recognitions directly related to the city.

In the northern area, Herman has suggested the sign at the west end of the Waste Water Treatment Plant, which would be visible to incoming motorists as well as people going to the Central Florida Regional Hospital.

"We were thinking about the triangle area at the northern end of French Avenue," Herman said, "but when people are going around that curve, they are more concerned with traffic and the road curve rather than a sign."

At the southern end of the city, he has proposed an area in the landscaped median of Highway 17-92, between the northbound land and southbound Park Drive.

As an alternate, he has suggested a possible location just south of the Lake Mary Blvd. intersection.

In the eastern side of the city, a location on S.R. 46, just east of Summerlin Avenue has been proposed. The property is owned by William E. Kirchoff.

Westerly, the location would be on S.R. 46, on the Central Baptist Church property.

"The city owns two of the sites, and we have tentative agreements to use the others if the commission selects them," Herman explained. He explained that the church's congregation would still have to give final approval to use that location.

During Monday night's commission discussion of the locations, Commissioner Whitely Eckstein suggested a sign should be located near Seminole High School. He added that school officials had asked him to make the suggestion. "I think a sign near the school would have more traffic passing it than by people coming in from the east," he said.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan disagreed, observing that there was a great deal of incoming traffic from the east on S.R. 46, and that the best location would be along that area as opposed to the school area.

In addition to serving as a city commissioner, Eckstein is regularly employed in the Social Studies department at Seminole High School.

Youth arrested on charges of vandalizing four graves

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Seminole High School student has been arrested on charges of vandalizing four graves at Page Jackson Cemetery.

More charges may be made against the youth and others may be arrested in the ongoing investigation, said Seminole County sheriff's spokesman George Proechel.

"Hopefully, this particular episode will be put to rest," said Proechel. "But as we all know, this is an ongoing problem out there. But we want people who do these things to know we're not going to tolerate this activity."

The youth, who was booked into the Seminole County Juvenile Detention Facility, was held on four felony charges of disturbing or removing the contents of a grave.

Proechel said the vandalism occurred Feb. 4. Investigators found seven gravesites had been disturbed. Portions of human remains had been removed from three of the graves and two skulls were found tossed aside. One entire body had been removed and the remains scattered about the ground. Investigators also found a macabre statue made from a skull and human hand.

Although investigators found a cleared circle with a pentangle etched in the ground, Proechel said they do not believe the suspects were performing some Satanic ritual.

"I think it was a situation where they were trying to prove to each other how far they could go," said Proechel.

Sandra Gaines of Sanford is organizing a cleanup and maintenance effort at Page Jackson, a black cemetery dating back to the turn of the century before Seminole County was created. Overgrown and neglected, the area behind Lakeview Cemetery has been the target of grave vandals for several years.

So far, a landscape maintenance company and one other individual have pledged their assistance in the effort.

Refunds up, even with lower withholding

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal tax refunds are larger than ever this year even though withholding was reduced for most workers last year.

In its first report on the 1993 filing season, the Internal Revenue Service says refunds authorized through Feb. 5 averaged $1,140, compared with $1,124 during the same period a year ago.

"But we may see that average decline in the next few weeks," IRS spokesman Don Roberts said Wednesday. "We are not seeing the kind of growth (in the average) that we saw in recent years."

Roberts suggested the slight increase in the average refund may be due to the increasing number of taxpayers who file electronic returns. Electronic filing results in a considerably faster refund — and those people anticipating a big refund often turn to electronic filing to get it as quickly as possible.

Once these early electronic returns are out of the way, Roberts said, the average refund is likely to drop a bit.

Even so, the higher refund average was something of a surprise.

President Bush last year permanently reduced tax withholding from the checks of most low- and middle-income workers in an effort to spur the economy by giving consumers an additional $2 billion a month to spend.

That meant refunds anticipated this year would be reduced by a maximum of about $200 for most married workers and $140 for singles.

some supervision by the Division of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

"HRS has been involved with the family in a variety of intervention programs," Kirby said.

She noted that Scott had enrolled himself in the TCEP program in Midway last summer in an attempt to get his life in order. She did not know what the results of that were.

Kirby said that people have commented to her about the smirk that Scott always seems to have on his face.

"They say he has no remorse," Kirby said, "but really it is a facade that he's hiding behind."

Kirby said that she believes Scott and Terrance Brooks, the other young man arrested in this case, should have to "face the consequences" for their actions.

"But I think there is hope for him to be rehabilitated," she said.

Scott's mother could not be reached for comment.

"No other school has more," Schaffner said.

The commissioner will also present the district with a $25,000 check to be used in school improvement programs.

"We have a very special school district here," Schaffner said. "I think that the state recognizes that and we are being rewarded well."

recommendation was not followed. "I don't know why," Kirby commented.

The father, who Kirby declined to name, regularly attended school conferences, driving up from Miami, even attending two meetings in one week. She said Brooks' mother, who lives in Sanford, came to only one meeting. Kirby said she had requested conferences about Brooks' 15 or 20 times during his stay at the alternative school.

"He is another example of someone caught in the system," Kirby said. "He was just a confused child."

"He was never really rude to me, as I recall," Kirby said, "although he was with some other adults."

Attempts to reach Brooks' mother were unsuccessful.

Land

Natural Lands Program and state funds.

Closing on the two parcels is scheduled to occur by the middle of March.

The county paid a total of $301,300 for the two parcels, including $11,111 an acre for an 18-acre parcel east of County Road 419 rezoned by the county from industrial to agricultural uses last year. The owners sued the county, claiming inverse condemnation, but County Attorney Bob McMillan said they have agreed to drop the suit on closing.

The owners are Drs. Don E. Tillery and Edward N. Parnell Jr., both of Winter Park.

Another 8.4-acre parcel was purchased from Elizabeth K. Harbin of Maitland for about $12,500 per acre.

Preservation of Spring Hammock began in 1927 when Ben. G.M. Overstreet donated the site of a 3,500-year-old cypress tree, named "The Sentinel" in honor of him. President Calvin Coolidge attended the dedication ceremonies two years later. In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt approved a grant to develop Big Tree Park at the site.

Between 1971 and 1974, 312 acres later developed into Soldiers Creek Park was purchased using a bond approved by voters in 1970. In 1976, the Environmental Studies Center was built as a cooperative effort between commissioners and school board members.

The state acquired or secured several portions of the area during the 1980s, but by 1990, all state support for the effort ended. County commissioners lobbied the state in an effort to get the Conservation and Recreation Lands program to resume purchases there, but to no avail. Since then, the county has looked to the voter-approved Natural Lands Program to complete the preserve.

Terrance Brooks, Benjamin Scott will be arraigned Feb. 23 at 8:30 a.m. at the courtroom at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Brooks' case is to be heard by Circuit Judge Alan Dickey while Scott's case is slated for Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr.

Since the public defender's office was appointed to represent both defendants, a notice of conflict will be filed so the court can appoint a special public defender for one of the youths. Attorney Gary Anderson was appointed to represent both men but public defender spokesman Arthur Huff said the rules of ethics state defendants in the same case should be represented by different counsel. In cases of such conflict, the county contracts with attorneys to serve as special public defenders. The defendants will be tried separately.

Scott and Brooks were indicted by a Seminole County grand jury in the attempted robbery and death of Mark Edward Marsh on Nov. 7. Marsh, 20, was killed in Sanford as he walked along Park Ave just north of 25th St.

The state will seek life prison sentences for the pair.

Arrest

Ferrer and her cousin Hector Rivera were on their way to shop at Albertson's for dinner with Goungou when the shooting occurred.

Ferrer had only recently moved into a Lake Mary apartment with her cousin.

According to Tom Law, a spokesman for the New York State Police, officers located Goungou in the home of a friend near his own home in Rochester.

"He was, as we had suspected, trying to move underground through the Hispanic community," Law said. "He was going to try to disappear up here."

Law said the Rochester Police and the New York State Police had been cooperating on the effort to locate and arrest Goungou.

Last evening, Goungou barricaded himself inside the home and had announced that he had no intention of giving himself up. A negotiating team was brought onto the scene and he gave himself up without incident a short time later.

He was taken into custody about 7:30 p.m.

"All we can do now is wait," said Proechel. "We'd like him back here as soon as we can get him."

Proechel said that the sheriff's department is "thankful" for the cooperation that local authorities, the New York State Police and the Rochester Police have used in capturing Goungou.

"We are glad that through that cooperation we were able to get him off the streets," Proechel said.

Study: Orlando key link in Florida system

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — Orlando would be the No. 1 destination and the Orlando-to-Tampa route the most heavily traveled by riders of a high-speed train, a new study predicts.

The ridership study released this week on a proposed high-speed system linking Florida cities questioned 6,600 travelers in airports and along roads.

A statewide high-speed train system has been on the drawing boards for years, but critics cite high costs and doubts about whether enough travelers would give up their cars for a multibillion rail system.

State transportation officials have spent more than $1 million on a series of studies to find out how many people drive or fly between Florida cities, why they do it, and how many would be willing to use a fast train instead.

Travelers were asked whether they would ride trains at speeds of 125 mph, 185 mph and 250 mph. The study was based on fares of $38 one-way from Tampa to Orlando for business class, and $25 for unreserved tourist class.

It predicts that 2.8 million travelers a year would ride a 250 mph train from the Clearwater area to downtown Orlando, with stops in Tampa, Lakeland and an Orlando tourist corridor.

A 125 mph train on the same route with additional stops at Brandon and Tampa International Airport would attract 2.4 million passengers.

The study concluded that Orlando would be a key connection.

"Orlando is shaping up as the equivalent of the rail hub of the state," said Raymond Ellis, a consultant on the study for the state Department of Transportation.

On some routes, such as Orlando to Miami, about a third of the travelers would rather ride the faster train. But a surprise of the study was that the trains wouldn't have to go as fast to attract large numbers of riders.

Travelers noted that stations would have to be user-friendly, with cheap and easy parking and good connections with other transportation such as buses, taxis and people movers.

Even moderate delays at train stations would encourage travelers to drive, said Bruce Williams, a consultant for KPMG Peat Marwick, which conducted the study.

NASA reports equipment mix-up; shuttles not properly inspected

By MARGIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA says it flew eight shuttle missions since March 1992 without proper inspections because of an equipment mix-up.

The mix-up — and a related paperwork problem — have forced the space agency to delay the next shuttle flight, and possibly the one after that.

The mix-up involved retainers, or metal clips that hold seals in place in the shuttles' engine pumps. If a retainer breaks, a piece could cause the engine to shut down, NASA's Larry Salter, a main-engine expert, said Wednesday.

Salter said two types of retainers — an old variety, and a new, tighter one — got mixed up, and technicians at Rockwell International's Rocketdyne division installed some old ones. And the paperwork does not make it clear which retainers — the old or the new — were installed in each pump.

To find out for sure, NASA will have to take apart and inspect all 22 pumps, Salter said.

The old retainers are supposed to be inspected after each flight. There is no such requirement for the new retainers.

Because NASA didn't know that old retainers had been installed, the space agency flew eight missions since March, inspecting the retainers only when the pumps were routinely overhauled after about every three flights, officials said.

Columbia was supposed to lift off on a scientific research mission around Feb. 25, but the mission was put off until around the second week of March, officials said. It's uncertain whether the work will also delay Discovery's atmospheric research mission in late March, launch director Bob Sieck said.

Three pumps with the wrong retainers were found at Rocketdyne's plant in Los Angeles: the first in December and the third last week. Top shuttle officials were not informed of the mix-up until last week, Salter said.

If shuttle managers had known of the problem before last month's flight by Endeavour, the mission would have been delayed, Salter said. Endeavour's pumps have not been examined yet, so no one knows which retainers were used.

Salter said the Rocketdyne technicians "just didn't follow that paperwork" calling for only new retainers to be installed. "They reached over and picked out an old retainer, which was available."

Rocketdyne's Fred Nitz, chief engineer for the shuttle program, said the part numbers for the two types of retainers are very similar, "so there's a potential for some confusion."

"We're going to clean up the paperwork system so there are more checks and balances and so it doesn't happen in the future," Nitz said.

AAA opposes heavier trucks

By NICK PRIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

HEATHROW — AAA is fighting a state move to allow heavier trucks to use the highways. The move, already passed committee action.

Terry Farias, chairman of AAA Clubs of Florida headquartered at Heathrow, said the legislation will endanger Florida motorists and compromise highway safety.

The bill, which cleared the House Transportation Committee last week, would allow the Department of Transportation to issue permits for overweight vehicles up to 95,000 pounds, circumventing a federal statute limiting divisible loads to 80,000 pounds. "What is troubling about this legislation," Farias said, "is that the safety of Florida motorists is being compromised, while motorists are not even aware of what's taking place."

AAA voiced its concern during last week's committee meeting and strongly opposed any further increases in existing maximum truck weight standards. AAA believes the present weight standards already tax the limits of highway safety.

Farias said that overloaded, heavier trucks compromise highway safety by increasing stopping distances, decreasing vehicle control and placing additional stress on mechanical parts of the truck.

According to the National Safety Council data, a passenger car can stop in 140 to 150 feet from 60 mph, on a dry road. However, a loaded semi-trailer that may weigh upwards to 100,000 pounds takes 250 to 300 feet to stop under similar conditions.

The weight of a large truck is almost 35 times greater than the average passenger car. "When there is a fatality from a truck or car crash, the automobile occupant is usually the one killed," Farias commented.

"Increases in truck weights tend to be irrevocable," he continued. "Once allowed, heavier combinations are almost never banned, regardless of the bridge damage or safety problems they've caused."

Retail sales rise modestly

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Strong department store and automobile sales helped push overall retail sales up by a modest 0.3 percent in January, the government said today.

Sales rose to a seasonally adjusted $167.4 billion, the Commerce Department said. The gain was a bit disappointing to most economists who were anticipating a slightly better 0.4 percent or 0.5 percent advance.

Revisions to previously released figures for both November and December roughly offset each other. December sales were reported up 0.8 percent, instead of 1.2 percent. November receipts were down only 0.1 percent, instead of 0.5 percent.

Christmas sales were the strongest in years and economists had been wondering if shoppers would carry the buying spirit into the new year. Many of the holiday purchases were bought with credit cards and analysts doubt consumers can keep up the end-of-the-year buying pace.

Still, as long as the job market continues to improve gradually, analysts expect consumer spending will continue to increase, although more modestly than in December.

On that front, the Labor Department said today the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits fell by 12,000 to 340,000 during the week ended Jan. 30.

One of the biggest firms shedding workers has been General Motors Corp., which today reported a huge $23.5 billion loss for 1992. The red ink was in line with analysts' estimates and much of it was due to one-time accounting changes.

January marked the sixth increase in overall auto sales in seven months. Sales at auto dealers jumped 1.1 percent, the best since October. That followed a 0.5 percent gain in December.

General merchandise stores, including department stores, reported a 1.9 percent advance. It was the strongest in six months and followed a 0.3 percent decline in December.

Sales also rose 0.8 percent at building supply and hardware stores and 0.6 percent at furniture and appliance dealers.

The increase for all durable goods — expensive items expected to last three or more years — was 1.1 percent. Sales of non-durable goods edged down 0.1 percent in January.

Sales at gasoline stations rose 1.4 percent, but receipts dropped 0.8 percent at restaurants and bars, 0.7 percent at drug stores and 0.4 percent at clothing shops.

Economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa., said the pace of consumer spending probably will flag unless consumers see healthier growth in jobs and incomes.

Tennis champion laid to rest

By JOE MACENKA

RICHMOND, Va. — They mentioned his tennis accomplishments, but mourners said Arthur Ashe's compassion, decency and social activism — including his final, public battle against AIDS — were truer measures of the man.

A crowd of 5,600, including politicians, athletes and people in laborers' uniforms, attended Ashe's funeral on Wednesday.

"Arthur left us with a better world to live in today," Charlie Pasarell, Ashe's roommate at UCLA and a former Davis Cup teammate, said as he fought off tears. "But most of all, we are here today because Arthur touched our lives with the most powerful emotion of all: love."

Jackson says skin problem makes his skin look white

By JAMES ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Michael Jackson says the man in the mirror has had a little work done on his nose but not the rest of his face. And he denies bleaching his skin, explaining he has a disorder that's destroying his pigment.

"It's a problem for me, OK? I can't control it," the pop megastar said in a live TV interview Wednesday when asked by Oprah Winfrey about his fading skin color. The disorder, which he didn't identify, runs in the family, he said.

In his first solo interview in nearly a decade, the eccentric 34-year-old star said he surrounds himself with children to make up for a friendless, workaholic childhood.

He said he was beaten by his father and still doesn't like to look at himself in mirrors (His recent hit "Man in the Mirror" notwithstanding.)

And he fessed a question about whether he is virgin, answering, "You can call me old-fashioned if you want."

Jackson spoke animatedly and occasionally giggled during the 90-minute interview at his Neverland ranch near Santa Barbara. He wore a red shirt with epaulets, dark pants and an armband.

By confronting rumors about his personal life, Jackson said, he hoped his fans could focus on his art.

He quickly dispensed with one of those rumors: that he bleached his skin.

"There is no such thing as skin bleaching," he said. "I've never seen it. I don't know what it is." He said his disorder began after the 1982 release of his "Thriller" album, and he uses makeup to cover its effects.

"Why is that so important? That's not important to me," he said. "What about the millions of people who sit out in the sun and become darker than they are?"

He dismissed suggestions that he might be changing his appearance because he doesn't like who he is.

"I'm a black American," he said. "I'm proud of my race."

Jackson said he had minor cosmetic surgery to his nose but didn't alter his chin, his eyes, his lips or any of the rest of his face. "Very little. You can count it on two fingers," he said, referring to cosmetic procedures.

He also defended his crotch-grabbing during performances, saying "it happens subliminally." He added: "It's the music that compels me to do it. You don't think about it, it just happens. I'm slave to the rhythm."

Other revelations:
• He doesn't like going out to date, but a woman friend does visit his ranch.

• He had a crush on singer Diana Ross and is now dating Brooke Shields.

• His father, Joseph, was a stern man who teased and sometimes beat him as an adolescent for being "sad" and withdrawn, but Jackson forgave him.

• During adolescence, he had so many pimples he refused to look in mirrors, and is still reluctant to. "I washed my face in the dark," he said.

• He denied trying to buy the bones of the Victorian sideshow figure known as the Elephant Man. "What would I need with some bones?"

• He hasn't read a book by his sister LaToya that portrays the Jackson family as dysfunctional. "I love my sister dearly," he said.

• He hopes to have a family some day. "But I couldn't right now because I'm married to my work," he said.

Jackson said he lost his childhood to constant rehearsals, recordings and touring. He often would cry when he saw other children playing.

"Slumber parties, hanging out. There was none of that for me. I didn't have any friends when I was little," he said. "People always wonder why I have children around... I find a thing I never had through them."

Vet's execution attempt renews post-combat trauma debate

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — A killer's bid to stave off execution by claiming he was a victim of lingering battlefield trauma has stirred fellow Vietnam veterans and focused attention on what's known as post-traumatic stress disorder.

On Jan. 30, Gov. Lawton Chiles blocked the execution of Larry Joe Johnson for the 1979 slaying of a 67-year-old gas station attendant.

The governor wanted to review the case, including experts' arguments that Johnson's actions were brought on by Vietnam-caused mental problems. It was the first time in the two years since Chiles took office that he granted a stay of execution; four executions have taken place in that time.

The governor's office has reported a barrage of calls and mail about the case from veterans groups and others. Calls were running 3-to-1 against clemency, while letters were running 3-to-2 in favor, said John Currie, director of the agency that handles the calls and letters.

Among those rallying to Johnson's defense are many Vietnam veterans, some of whom support the death penalty in general.

"It's sort of like his body survived Vietnam, but his mind didn't, and now they are trying to put his body where his mind is," said Scott Camil, a Gainesville veteran and antiwar activist. "Society has a right to be protected from him, but his honorable service and condition that resulted from that service should count for something."

Prosecutor Jerry Blair, himself a Vietnam veteran, is among those who say Johnson is using his Vietnam service as an excuse. He said of Johnson's defense, "It is demeaning to suggest that because you served in Vietnam, you are a walking time bomb just waiting to explode and take someone's life."

The prosecutor said post-traumatic stress disorder may be a valid defense in some cases, but Johnson spent his Vietnam tour as a Navy construction worker and hasn't produced evidence of any traumatic combat experiences.

"It's almost 14 years after the murder," Blair said. "Larry Johnson has danced to the music, and now it's time to pay the fiddler."

However, psychologists testifying for Johnson said exposure to the herbicide Agent Orange and a National Guard accident with a smoke grenade in 1974 could have aggravated the disorder in Johnson.

The debate comes too late for David Funchess, another Vietnam veteran who blamed his combat experiences for his crimes. Funchess was executed in 1986 for a 1974 double murder.

"David had a classic case of post-traumatic stress disorder, very extreme," said Jeff Thompson, a lawyer and Vietnam veteran who represented Funchess. "At the time, post-traumatic stress disorder was much newer and less understood, and the political climate was less favorable to exploring the situation."

PTSD wasn't included in the American Psychiatric Association's diagnostic manual until 1980, so it couldn't be used as a defense in the trials of Johnson and Funchess, who was believed to be the first veteran diagnosed with PTSD to be executed.

Clinton revisits campaign tactic

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Things were going just fine for Bill Clinton until that election interrupted his campaign. Now President Clinton is trying to regain the old touch by using the techniques that made him a winner.

He started with a televised question-and-answer hour from suburban Detroit, styling it after the town meetings he held while campaigning his way to the White House.

"I hope there'll be a lot of these," Clinton said as time ran out Wednesday night. There will. The president and his advisors already have decided on that.

It is a medium the president mastered as a way out of campaign trouble last year.

In the first of the 1993 revivals, with satellite-linked questioners in Seattle, Miami and Atlanta as well as Detroit, he said it enabled him to keep in touch with real people and avoid being "walled in" by the White House.

Clinton said afterwards that the hour-long session "kind of put some reality back into the bigger concerns ... Even when people disagree with me, I think they feel better if they know I'm reaching out to them," he told ABC News' "Nightline."

Indeed some of the questions Wednesday night weren't all that comfortable.

Clinton was challenged on his move to lift the military's ban on gays, asked, politely, about broken campaign pledges, and reminded of the flap of employing illegal aliens that sunk two attorney general candidates.

Still the format enabled Clinton to concentrate mostly on the economy — the issue he's spent most of his time working on — instead of the problems that nagged him since the inauguration.

Even so, it was easier for candidate Clinton to broadcast plans and promises before the election than for President Clinton to keep to them.

Consider, for example, the women in Atlanta who said she was worried that Clinton might be hedging in his pledge not to increase taxes on the middle class.

Clinton reminded her that he'd repeatedly stumped a "read my lips" promise against new taxes during the campaign, noted that the federal deficit projection had increased since the election and promised he'd still be fair.

But then he suggested that he will indeed be seeking the kind of taxes that concerned her.

"I wish I could tell you that I won't ask you to pay any more," he said.

Clinton is to present his economic proposals to Congress in a nationally-televised address next Wednesday night. Then, with specific proposals on the table, the revived campaign will resume — with his Cabinet members also hitting the road.

The first round also included Vice President Al Gore, at his own town hall session Wednesday in Ontario, Calif., while first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton was to appear today at a health care forum in Harrisburg, Pa.

Clinton is also using radio addresses from the White House, and plans satellite TV appearances as other avenues to average Americans.

It's a way around the filter of the White House press corps coverage. He has yet to hold a full-scale presidential news conference. Even so, Clinton said, "I answer their (reporters) questions just about every day."

Presidents have used, or at least tried, the technique before, with varying results. Jimmy Carter held town meetings early in his term, beginning with one in the town of Clinton, Mass., in March, 1977.

His topics, like President Clinton's, included job creation and a pledge of health care reform.

George Bush tried a similar format, although infrequently between campaigns. That prompted Clinton to say after the election that the isolation of the presidency was a reason Bush "missed the level of misery and anxiety people had on the economy."

Brace yourself for higher taxes

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — President Clinton looked straight into the camera and braided Americans to get ready to dig into their wallets. "I wish I could tell you that I won't ask you to pay any more," he apologetically told a nationally broadcast town meeting.

But it was a promise he wouldn't make.

The overriding message from Wednesday night's hour-long program was that the middle class — along with the wealthy and corporations — probably will be hit with higher taxes in the economic plan he'll unveil next Wednesday.

"I cannot tell you that I won't ask you to make any contribution to the changes we have to make," said Clinton, who as a campaigner had promised tax cuts — not increases — for the middle class. He said the deficit was far worse than he'd thought.

Three weeks into his presidency, Clinton was back in a campaign mode, relaxed and confident in a television studio as he answered questions from a live audience in this Detroit suburb and from questioners looked up by satellite in Seattle, Miami and Atlanta.

An early question about the economy brought him off his stool and he stayed on his feet for most of the program. He seemed to relish his return to the television format he used as a candidate to reach directly into Americans' living rooms.

"We're back out here," said Clinton media adviser Paul Begala, who accompanied the president on his first trip on Air Force One. "This is where we should be."

Though far from Washington, Clinton did not escape controversies that have shaken the early days of his administration.

Two questioners challenged him on lifting the ban on homosexuals in the military. Clinton said he understood why some people opposed his policy but he did not retreat from it. He said he wished the issue had not come up so soon in his administration.

On another touchy subject, a woman in Atlanta inquiring about his programs for child-care mentioned the subject of "nanny-gate" — the furor over illegal aliens in domestic positions that sank the nomination of Zoe Baird and the consideration of Kimba Wood for attorney general.

Clinton said "you'd be amazed" how many potential nominees did not know they had to withhold Social Security taxes on any employee they had paid $50 over three months.

A woman in Miami challenged his retreat from a promise to lift restrictions on Haitian refugees. He said he feared the loss of lives if thousands of Haitians took to the seas.

Clinton said he already could see "how easy it is for a president to get out of touch, to be caught up in the trappings of Washington, and basically to be told by people that nothing needs to be changed or you can't change things."

He promised "to try to stay in touch with you this whole four years so that you can honestly tell me what you think."

In a sharply worded warning to European trading partners, Clinton said, "I am not going to roll over and play dead" as America's aviation industry falters. "Either the Europeans are going to have to quit subsidizing Airbus and trying to deny us access to those contracts ... or we're going to have to meet the competition."

The audience told the president of hardships and pain.

One man whose son was killed in an argument over a leather jacket pleaded for Clinton to help get rid of illegal handguns.

The president endorsed Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder's plan to limit handgun purchases to one a month, and he called anew for a waiting period for handgun purchases.

A young woman said she couldn't get health insurance because she suffered from lupus. Clinton said he wanted to make it illegal to exclude people from coverage.

Vicki Detwiler told Clinton her 16-month-old son was one of the children hospitalized in Seattle from E. coli poisoning from tainted meat. She said her husband lost his job — and his health insurance — two days before their son became ill.

ORLANDO — The NBA season is barely half over and the Orlando Magic has already surpassed its victory total for all of last year.

Scott Skiles scored 20 points and Shaquille O'Neal and Nick Anderson added 19 apiece Wednesday night to pace a 96-87 triumph that stopped the Cleveland Cavaliers' five-game winning streak.

Orlando snapped a two-game losing streak in winning for the 22nd time in 43 games. The Magic finished with a 21-61 record a year ago — second worst in the league.

FSU grabs share of ACC lead

TALLAHASSEE — Sam Cassell scored 25 points Wednesday as Florida State raced to a 111-94 victory over Wake Forest to grab a share of the lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

MIAMI — Constantin Popa scored a game-high 20 points and hit three critical hook shots in the final three minutes to lift the Miami Hurricanes to a 75-71 win over 21st-ranked Boston College.

Miami's (8-11, 5-6) victory gives it a three-game winning streak for the first time this season for the Hurricanes.

The loss kept the Eagles (13-6, 7-4) from a first-place tie with St. John's in the Big East.

Tampa gets by Florida Tech

MELBOURNE — Sophomore Reggie Larry hit a long-range 3-pointer bank shot at the buzzer Wednesday to lift Tampa to a 79-76 Sunshine State Conference win over Florida Tech.

DeCarlo Deveaux led the Spartans (19-2, 8-0) with 24 points.

Peter Walcott finished with a game-high 26 points for Florida Tech (9-12, 3-5). Sherman Hamilton added 16.

It was the second road win in as many nights for the Heat, who won Tuesday at Detroit, 106-105.

'Hounds, Rams in 4A-9 soccer finals

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Here we go again.

As the seedings and rankings predicted, the Lyman Greyhounds and Lake Mary Rams have advanced to the 4A-District 9 boys' soccer championship game, which will kick off at 7 p.m. Friday night at Lyman Stadium.

Lyman, seeded No. 1 in the district and ranked second in last week's Florida Athletic Coaches Association's Class 4A state poll, eliminated DeLand 6-1 Wednesday night while Lake Mary, seeded second and ranked fifth in the FACA state poll, bounced Lake Brantley, 4-1.

This will be the fourth time the two teams have met this season, Lyman having won the last two meetings after the first one ended in a tie. Last year, Lake Mary defeated Lyman three times during the regular season, only to lose to the Greyhounds in the district championship contest.

"We're just glad to have the opportunity to play them again," said Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle.

While the score of their win over DeLand suggested a walkover, Lyman coach Ray Sandidge said they Greyhounds didn't play exceptionally well against the fourth-seeded Bulldogs.

"We scored four goals in the last 12 minutes," said Sandidge. "We just didn't play very well. We had no work rate, no communication. We gave them the first goal. It's a good thing this wasn't the final. If it was, there's no way we'd beat Lake Mary playing the way we did tonight."

DeLand (7-10) took a 1-0 lead when a ball played by a Greyhound defender found its way to Del Smith, who walked in on Lyman goalkeeper Chris Lewis alone and scored just 1:02 into the game.

Frank Cipolla tied the score for Lyman when he beat several DeLand defenders and scored an unassisted goal at 28:22. Chad Courtney netted the eventual game-winner at 55:13 of the second half on an assist from Mike Blerly.

Lyman (20-1-3) finally iced the victory with a four-goal outburst in the final 12 minutes. Cipolla started the explosion when he buried a free kick at 68:46. About four minutes later, Mike Sells nodded home a cross by Courtney.

Jason Eastwood made it 5-1 when he scored on a diving header, redirecting a crossing pass from Peter Weishaar at 77:28. Brian Diebler capped the scoring when he headed in a pass from Eastwood at 78:24.

Lyman outshot DeLand 25-5 and had an 8-1 advantage in corner kicks, forcing the Bulldog goalkeeper to make five saves. Chris Lewis, the Greyhound goalie, made two saves.

LAKE MARY 4, LAKE BRANTLEY 1

LAKE MARY — Unlike Lyman, which got off to a slow start in its win over DeLand, the Lake Mary Rams went to work on the Lake Brantley Patriots right away, taking control early and maintaining their advantage.

"We came to play right from the beginning," said McCorkle. "I thought this team was dead on Tuesday. In the classroom, they just looked dead. I didn't know what to expect. They just came ready to play tonight. They were very business-like and put a lot of pressure on them (Lake Brantley)."

Brandon Mahana gave Lake Mary a 1-0 lead when he

Frank Cipolla scored two goals in Lyman's 6-1 win over the DeLand Bulldogs Wednesday night.

'Underdogs' lead Rams by Sarasota

From Staff Reports

SARASOTA — Perhaps Ronell Jumpp and Paul Clayton were considered underdogs Wednesday night, but they certainly didn't wrestle like it.

Jumpp, a ninth grader, and Clayton, who is wrestling up a weight class, both won their matches to boost the Lake Mary Rams to a 37-26 dual meet win over perennial state power Sarasota.

"This was a huge win for us," said Lake Mary coach Doug Peters. "Sarasota has a tremendous program."

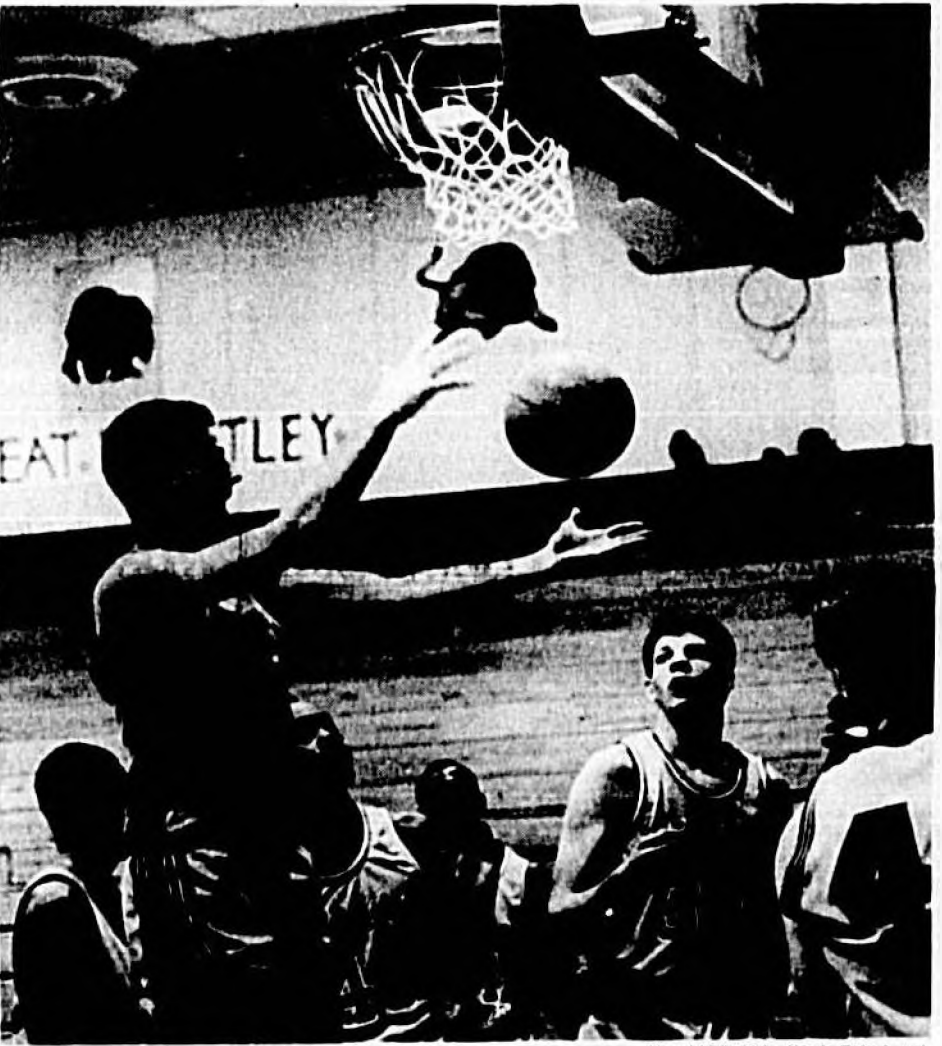

Led by Kevin Dunn, Cory Cullins, Pat Paroline, Kyle Bergman, Greg Menello, and Jean Pierre, the Rams had built a 28-26 lead through 12 matches. Dunn (112 pounds) and Pierre (171) both won by pins; Bergman (140) scored a technical fall; and Cullins (130) and Paroline (135) each notched major decisions.

"We didn't know what to expect from Ronell and Paul," admitted Peters. "We were just hoping they wouldn't get pinned."

They didn't. Jumpp (220) scored the first take down against Sarasota's Coy Carter and went on to win by an 8-5 decision. And Clayton, despite being outweighed by over 20 pounds, pinned Sarasota heavyweight Charles Mitchell in 3:22.

Lake Mary improves to 10-4-1 in dual meets while the Sarasota Sailors, who were celebrating their Senior Night, drop to 9-6.

Drew Thomas (No. 32) and the Lake Mary Rams lost the battle of the boards to Tim Ruckdeschel (No. 30), Nathan Watson (No. 40) and the rest of the Lyman Greyhounds Wednesday night, leading to a four-point Lyman victory.

Is husband welching on his belching?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a disagreement over his belching — at least, that's the surface issue.

I have asked him to please say "excuse me" when he belches. He argues with me, saying that if he's in the next room or another room of the house, he doesn't see any reason to, I say that no matter where he is, if I can hear him, he should say "excuse me."

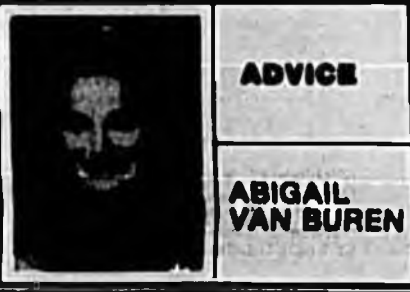

He finally agreed to a polite "excuse me" if we are in the same room.

He says I am trying to control him. I say it's a matter of basic courtesy and has absolutely nothing to do with controlling him. Our home has open doorways and when he's in the next room, I can hear every sound, so out of respect for me, if he belches loudly, he should say "excuse me."

I am tired of talking to him about this. The etiquette books don't cover this. Thanks for any help you can give me. I'm sorry this is even an issue. There are so many more important things to worry about. Please don't use our last name.

IRKED IN

BLUE SPRINGS, MO.
DEAR IRKED: This is a first. I'll go along with you on the matter of expecting a polite "excuse me" when your husband belches within hearing distance. However I wouldn't call it a "surface issue" — it's more like a gut feeling.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: Please keep reminding people never to leave a small baby alone in a house where the family "pets" can get to it. Recently, right in our neighborhood, a 2-month-old baby was left on a couch, where it was mauled to death by three large German shepherd "pets." The parents of the baby were devastated. Abby, please run that warning in your column often. It could avert a terrible tragedy.

MARTHA BROWN, HOUSTON

DEAR MARTHA: I have been advised that one dog is usually no threat to a child, but two dogs — and most certainly three — compose a "pack," and they can be vicious if left in the presence of a helpless child. Most people assume that their pets are incapable of attacking a child. Not true. The most docile pets have been known to turn on a child, unprovoked. After a tragedy of that kind occurs, the pet owners always say, "We never dreamed that our dog could ever be a danger to a child."

DEAR ABBY: About the controversy over the meaning of "next Friday" vs. "this Friday": When someone says "this Friday," it means this week. If he says "next Friday," he means next week.

I drive a taxi, and when a passenger tells me to turn at the next corner, suddenly he yells, "I mean at this corner...here...the one you just missed. Stupid!"

A.K. IN PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, about this time of year, I read a suggestion in your column that I thought was quite sweet: On one's own birthday, the person whose birthday it is should send flowers to his or her mother.

That idea appealed to me. Therefore on Feb. 16, 1972, to celebrate my own birthday, I sent a bouquet of flowers to my mother and told her how much I appreciated her. She was very pleased with this thoughtful act, and it made me feel good, too.

I've often thought how glad I am that I followed your suggestion. It was not only the first time I did it, but the last; four months later, my mother died quite unexpectedly.

So, a belated thank-you, Dear Abby. Over the passing years, that suggestion has come to mean a lot of me. Most sincerely...

MELVIN R. BROWN

HAMILTON, OHIO
DEAR MELVIN BROWN: I appreciate your letting me know. Your letter gives me the opportunity to repeat that suggestion. Dad also deserves some recognition. Although it is the mother who gives us life, she never could have done it without the cooperation of dear old dad.

Beta-blocker causes lower pulse rate

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered from hypertension for 13 years and have been treated with about 20 different drugs with unacceptable side effects, except for Blocadren, which works well but drops my pulse to 42. I do not have a sugar problem and am not overweight. What is your opinion of the best drug without bad side effects?

DEAR READER: Being a beta-blocker, Blocadren lowers the pulse rate. In most cases, this is not a problem. I believe you are being treated appropriately.

Obviously, if you suffer from repeated episodes of dizziness or lightheadedness, the doctor will adjust the dose to allow your pulse to increase. However, if you're having no particular symptoms and your hypertension is controlled, leave well enough alone.

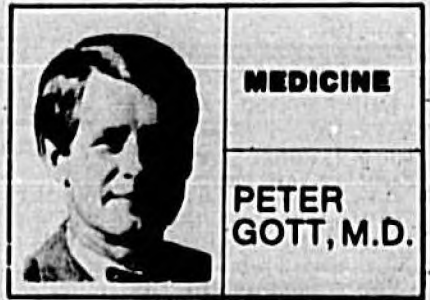

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Hypertension." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 70-year-old in good health but a blood test has revealed I have an abnormally high serum ferritin. Should I be concerned about iron overload since I had a first cousin die of the disease?

DEAR READER: Serum ferritin levels are closely correlated with the amount of iron stored in tissue. Thus, your abnormally high level means that you have an excess of iron in your system. You are iron-overloaded. Because you enjoy good health, this finding needn't worry you. Iron overload is an inherited disease with varying degrees of severity.

You must carefully follow your doctor's advice about avoiding extra iron in your diet (such as iron-enriched vitamin pills, for example). Also, you may need to have some blood removed from your circulation if you develop signs of iron overload (such as diabetes, a heart disorder or liver inflammation). Or you may have to consider chelation therapy for

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

On top of the Old Bailey, the famous criminal court in London, stands Justice. She holds a sword in her right hand and scales in her left. Across her eyes is a blindfold.

We bridge players often feel like her. We weigh the evidence, but because some cards are hidden, contracts make that can be defeated, and vice versa. A Superior Court judge from New Jersey, Burrell Ives Humphreys, brought off a brilliant coup in today's deal from a duplicate game — because West couldn't see Humphreys' cards.

West led the diamond three: seven, queen, king. Humphreys knew that if he conceded a club trick, the defenders could run four or five diamond tricks. To try to deflect the course of justice, Humphreys made an incredible play: At trick two, he led the diamond jack.

Thinking South was strong in diamonds, West — an expert player — ducked his ace. Immediately, Humphreys cashed four spades, two hearts and one club for his contract.

At the end of the evening, though, Humphreys found that he had scored zero matchpoints! Every other South had won 10 or 11 tricks. Maybe some Wests didn't lead a diamond. But it seems more likely that the declarers played the ace and another club, either immediately or after crossing to dummy with a spade. When West won with the club king, he couldn't envisage the diamond distribution. Instead, he switched to a spade, refusing to give South a trick with the diamond jack.

As Humphreys might have said, justice definitely wasn't done — or seen to be done.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 12, 1993

In the year ahead, there is a possibility you may become involved with a new product or system which will be rather revolutionary. If the pieces are put together properly, it could be successful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In the presence of friends, you might have an opportunity today to put down someone you haven't been getting along well with recently. Don't make this error in judgment. Aquarius, get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If the world has treated you abrasively this week, don't use it as an excuse to placate your feelings and go on a spending spree. All that will do is add additional and expensive complications.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Patience might not be your long suit today, especially with your cherished relationships. When you insist that others do things your way, you could be aggressive rather than assertive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There's a chance you might wake up on the wrong side of the bed today, irritated by everything and everyone. You'll be labeled a crab if you don't get a grip on yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against inclinations today to make unfounded presumptions, such as being taken advantage of by a friend when no ill will was intended.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An important objective you establish for yourself today might not be attained, owing to a lack of tenacity on your part. Once you commit yourself, go for broke.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Upon occasion people tend to perceive you as being arrogant and bossy, and in your dealings with others today, you might set some classic examples. They won't help your image.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of setting a steady course for yourself in your commercial dealings today, you might have difficulty knowing when to be cooperative and when to be independent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There are two reasons why this might be an unproductive day for you. You might not be able to make up your mind concerning what to do, and if you do make up your mind, you might not follow through.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Before you invest a great deal of money in a new hobby at this time, make sure it's something you're going to stick with. There's a chance it might be just a passing fancy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Avoid arguments with your special someone today, because you'll run the risk of saying things you'll later regret. Harsh words could leave unwelcome scars.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't blame yourself today if someone you're trying to appease is unreasonable. This person might have difficulty in getting along with everyone.
