Brantley heads space plan

Governor Martinez has put the state's commercial space industry in the hands of Lt. Gov. Bobby Brantley.

Brantley has been appointed chairman of the state authority charged with the responsibility of seeing the plan through.

More prison space needed

The increase in instances of drug trafficking has led state officials to call for a drastic increase in the amount of prison space available for drug-related offenders.

Florida apparently underestimated the cocaine epidemic and will fall further behind in its effort to clean the streets of drug dealers unless prison space triples by the year 1994, officials say.

Labor leaders go to jail

AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland and UMWA leader Richard Trumka may not have to worry about labor disputes in the near future as much as getting out of jail.

The two men joined a sit-in demonstration on the front lawn of a southwest Virginia courthouse Wednesday to show their support for the UMWA's strike against Pittston Coal Company. For their efforts, the two were escorted to the back of the courthouse by lawmen, placed under arrest and put into jail.

Seattle best place to live

WASHINGTON — Seattle's affordable housing and scenic beauty help make it the nation's best place to live, according to the third annual survey by Money magazine.

Seattle, which failed to make 1988's top 10 list, beat out Danbury, Conn., which topped the list last year and came in second this year, the magazine said in its September issue, which is scheduled for publication next week.

The survey of 300 major metropolitan areas also noted some shifts with last year's No. 7, the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, ranking No. 13 in 1989 and Orange County, Calif., dropping from eighth to 23rd. Money magazine attributed the slip largely to cutbacks in local defense contracts and increases in already exorbitant housing prices.

Money said the other top 10 cities include, in order, 3. San Francisco; 4. Denver; 5. Nashua, N.H., which came in first in 1987; 6. Boston; 7. Boston's North Shore; 8. Central New Jersey-Middlesex-Hunterdon-Somerset counties; 9. Minneapolis-St. Paul; and 10. Pittsburgh.

Historic structure collapses

NEW ORLEANS — Scaffolding used in the restoration of a historic French Quarter apartment building collapsed suddenly Wednesday, giving tourists scant seconds to escape as it reduced a 100-foot section of the structure to a heap of dusty rubble.

The incident happened at the Lower Pontalba apartments, said to be the oldest apartment building in the United States, which faces Jackson Square in the heart of the French Quarter.

High-rise washer stranded

LOS ANGELES — A window washer was stranded between the 8th and 9th floors of a new high rise for more than four hours Wednesday before firefighters were able to remove a window and rescue him, authorities said.

Firefighters arrived at the building about 4:20 p.m. after receiving a call that the man, whose name was not immediately available, was suspended by a chair-like device that somehow got stuck between floors.

Rose banned for life from game he loved

United Press International

NEW YORK — Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose, one of baseball's greatest hitters and hustlers, was suspended from the game for life Thursday because of gambling charges. Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti announced.

The commissioner said the agreement he reached with Rose did not include reinstatement but under baseball rules, after one year he may apply to return to the game.

Giamatti said Rose had signed an agreement Wednesday in which he neither denied nor admitted betting on major league games. The statement also said Rose acknowledged the commissioner "acted in good faith throughout the investigation and proceedings."

"The banishment for life of Pete Rose from baseball is the end of a sorry episode," Giamatti said in a statement he read at a hotel news conference. "One of the game's greatest players has engaged in a variety of acts which have stained the game and he must live with the consequences of those acts."

Kelley: 'See, I told you so' on road plan

By J. MARK BARFIELD

Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioner Jennifer Kelley was vindicated at the county commission meeting Wednesday as a state road consultant said rising land costs may make a smaller, taller interchange of Interstate 4 and the Seminole County Expressway cheaper than a larger, shorter interchange.

"I was right," Kelley said in a report.

Kelley was criticized for her lobbying efforts in support of the smaller interchange because a portion of the land needed for the structure is owned by her mother-in-law, Viola Keatner. Kelley has maintained she was lobbying on behalf of the taxpayers, but skeptics, including some fellow commissioners, have charged she was acting on behalf of her family.

Mark Callahan, an engineer with Greiner Inc., said as land costs needed for the interchange increase, the more expensive a larger, less complicated interchange will cost.

If land costs near the interchange average about $75,000 per acre, the larger, 2½-level interchange would cost

LONGWOOD — A high-speed chase that began as a Longwood police traffic offense pursuit ended this morning in Orange County with the deaths of two local youngsters and a Howie in the Hills woman.

The driver of the car, which led a Longwood policeman from State Road 436, to the scene of the crash on west State Road 50 at Lake Sherwood in Orange County, is dead. He is Italo Callarena, 15, of Lake Mary, Highway Patrol Capt. John Czeris.

A passenger in the boy's car.

Emily Goldsmith, of Longwood, about 15-years-old is also dead. A second passenger tentatively identified as Jessica Roberson, of Longwood, about 15-years-old, is in critical condition in Orlando Regional Medical Center.

SANFORD — Final plans for the renovations and additions to Sanford Middle School were approved by the Seminole County School Board yesterday.

By the time all is said and done at Christmastime

Daughter's tragic death leaves her mother fighting for a cause

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — "We walked in with a healthy, beautiful little girl, and walked out without one," Barbara Crenshaw, of Altamonte Springs was talking about the day last week her 8-year-old daughter Jennifer died after a visit to her dentist's office.

Now, the mother said, she has a cause.

The death of her only daughter has focused her attention on strengthening the minimum education and training required for dentists to administer anesthesia.

Representatives of the medical and dental professions acknowledge dentists are required to receive less training than anesthesiologists although they say the standards for dentists are adequate.

"Laws need to be changed. We have to do something about this. Dentists shouldn't have this control," Crenshaw, 38, said in an interview.

She also said that the general public needs to become more aware of what she said are the risks of taking drugs prescribed by or administered by physicians or dentists. "Drugs on the street aren't our

Small but exuberant crowds gather to cheer and heckle 'pro' wrestlers

By SANDRA BOUGHANINE

SANFORD — Professional wrestling fans in this area no longer have to be confined to their living room television sets on a Friday night.

Those fearless hulks who seem to defy pain can be watched live, as they rant and rave, jab and flail at one another during the Pro Wrestling matches here in Sanford.

It is a spectacle that has attracted a small but exuberant crowd thus far for the kind of entertainment that is unique in Seminole County.

The event which is held at the Sanford Civic Center on Seminole Boulevard and N. Sanford Avenue every other Friday night at 8 p.m., features former National Wrestling Alliance (NWA) and World Wrestling Federation (WWF) super stars.

Young and old spectators seem to do more fighting and yelling from the sidelines than do the wrestlers even if the performers haven't brought all the fireworks of the larger wrestling organizations that play the bigger cities.

Fans root for either the "good guy" or the "bad guy." Most people relate to the good guy but a few rebels give the thumbs up gesture for the rotten-to-the-core guy.

As a wrestler enters the arena, his personal anthem blares in the background. It is immediately obvious whether he is good or bad.

The crowd works up into a frenzy as the wrestler grimaces and shouts into the microphone, making outrageous threats as to what he's going to do to his opponent.

The crowd roars, claps, and sneers. In one match, 210-lb. Joe Stone (good guy) takes on 252-lb. Star Hunter. Stone takes his licks from Star, writhing in what appears to be real pain on the mat.

It looks like it's curtains for him. "Bite his nose off!" someone in the crowd yells.

Stone gathers his strength and retaliates, knocking Star to the ground.

The crowd cheers. Another match pits two nearly 400-pound heavyweights against one another.

The fearsome-looking "One Man Gang" is clad all in black and his opponent, The Hangman (Eddie Fargo) in a two-piece leotard.

The audience shows no mercy for the big, bad "One Man Gang." It hurls insults with great vigor: You're ugly! You're fat! Your underwear smells!

With the wrestlers grabbing at each other's flesh and hair, there seems to be more huffing, puffing, pacing and sweating than wrestling going on in this match.

The Hangman appears to be struck in the face with a metal object. What looks like blood seems to flow from a gash on his forehead.

The One Man Gang runs out the side door of the civic center.

The Hangman heaves a chair. It crashes into the door.

It is indeed a drama — a morality play — fit for a stage, albeit a rowdy one.

Television has popularized the event that has been delighting audiences since the 1940s. Cindy Lauper, the zany, Brooklyn-born rock star known for her oilbeat outfits and looks, helped rekindle interest among the

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Brantley named to head space board

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Lt. Gov. Bobby Brantley was appointed chairman Wednesday of the state authority charged with responsibility for putting Florida at the forefront of the emerging commercial space industry.

Gov. Bob Martinez announced the appointment during a news conference Wednesday. Brantley will serve as chairman of the Spaceport Florida Authority, a seven-member board with members representing business, labor and finance.

The authority will oversee establishment of an orbital launch site near the Kennedy Space Center and a sub-orbital facility at Cape San Blas in the Florida Panhandle.

The first sub-orbital launch is scheduled for 1991. The first orbital flight is scheduled for 1992, Martinez said.

With the spaceport expected to pump more than $30 million dollars into the state's economy, Brantley said the prospects are

"astronomical."

"Commercial space is going to be the future in this state," Brantley said, attracting new jobs and preventing existing ones from moving away.

"Should Florida not get into the commercial launch business, many of the companies that are located in Florida today ... possibly could be lost to other states."

Brantley listed Virginia and Hawaii as two of Florida's competitors in the domestic space race, with more competition coming from foreign nations including France.

Brantley, whose only official duty as lieutenant governor is to be available if something happens to Martinez, currently serves as Florida secretary of commerce. He was expected to leave that post next fall to run for commissioner of agriculture. Martinez said nothing in state law would prevent Brantley retaining his spaceport job if elected to the Cabinet post.

The authority will establish headquarters near the Kennedy Space Center and work out an arrangement with the Air Force for access to launch facilities there.

Also appointed to the spaceport authority were Ronald Morris of Fort Lauderdale, president of Sheffield School of Aeronautics, an aviation training center; Hugh Brown of Titusville, president of BAMS Inc., a space engineering firm; and Cynthia Graham of Jacksonville, senior vice president of merchant services for Barnett Banks Inc.

The other members are Thomas Kelly of Tampa, executive board member of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association-Associated Maritime Officers in the AFL-CIO; E. Thom Rumberger of Winter Park, chairman of the board of the law firm of Rumberger, Kirk, Caldwell, Cabaniss, Burke and Wechsler; and Kenneth Williamson of Fort Walton

Bobby Brantley

Beach, president of Vitro Services Corp., a defense contractor.

Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner and Rep. Charlie Roberts, both Titusville Democrats, will serve as non-voting members.

Police standoff ends peacefully

ORLANDO — An armed man kept law officers at bay by holding a woman inside a south Orange County home for nearly five hours Wednesday before surrendering without incident.

Anthony Wnek, 46, broke into the home of his ex-wife, Marianne Hutchinson, about 3 a.m. to confront her about a court injunction he thought was evicting him from another house he lived in, said Orange County sheriff's spokesman Jim Solomons.

Actually, the injunction ordered Wnek to stay away from Hutchinson's home.

Deputies arrived and a hostage negotiator spoke with Wnek by telephone. Meanwhile, the suspect tore things out of cupboards and otherwise damaged the home, Solomons said, until giving up shortly before 8 a.m.

Couple wanted to claim Lotto fortune

TALLAHASSEE — A Bradenton couple filed their belated claim Wednesday to a half-share in the $6.3 million Lotto jackpot for Aug. 6, saying they waited because they had to get used to the idea of being millionaires.

William and Rita Lambert, both 51, will receive more than $3.1 million in 20 annual installments. He is a mechanic for Tropacene Products and she is a word processing operator. They have a grown son.

The Lamberts said they learned they had won a few days after the drawing, but decided to put the ticket in a safe deposit box while figuring what to do with the money. The 18-day wait is the longest for any Florida lottery winner so far.

"We need to take our time and gather our thoughts," Rita Lambert said.

"It takes the first week to get over the shock," said her husband. "We felt like we were planning the rest of our lives so a few weeks wouldn't make any difference."

Three-county encephalitis alert issued

TALLAHASSEE — State health officials have issued an alert for Eastern Equine Encephalitis, a deadly mosquito-borne brain inflammation, for three north Florida counties.

Officials in Leon, Gadsden and Wakulla counties responded to the alert Tuesday by stepping up mosquito-spraying programs and warning residents to watch out for mosquitoes in early morning and early evening hours.

The alert was issued because of evidence of the virus in Leon County. Health officers found the virus in chickens in three of the seven test areas in the county.

No cases of the disease have been reported in people this year.

Group: State needs to triple prison space, cocaine blamed

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida underestimated the cocaine epidemic and will fall further behind in its effort to keep criminals off the street unless it triples its prison space by 1994 at a cost of more than $1 billion, a recent estimate shows.

The Criminal Justice Estimating Conference, which projected in February that the state would need 60,000 new prison beds, revised that projection Wednesday. They now figure 100,000 new beds will be needed.

The number of prison inmates will more than triple from the current 39,000 to 140,000 over the next five years, the planners said.

The estimate comes two months after a $116 million allocation to build enough space for 9,300 more inmates. Gov. Bob Martinez and the Legislature are considering adding up to 27,000 beds over five years.

The updated estimates show the state is falling further behind in its efforts to keep criminals off the streets. Even if all 27,000 beds are constructed, there will be no place to put 74,000 additional inmates in 1994.

At the same time the lawmakers funded the 9,300 new beds, they passed more than a dozen get-tough-on-crime laws that could increase prison sentences and quickly fill the new beds.

Richard Stevens, an analyst with the conference, said the earlier estimates were so far off the mark because few could believe the brush-fire spread of cocaine would continue at its alarming rate.

Regional Medical Center.

Diane Wilson, 20, of Howie in the Hills, the driver of the other car involved in the head-on collision at about 2:30 p.m. today, is also dead. Her infant son, whose name has not been determined by the FHP, is "in pretty good shape," suffering from a broken leg, Czeris said. The child was in an infant restraint seat and Czeris credits that for protecting the boy from more serious injury.

Wilson and her baby were the only occupants of Wilson's car, which was eastbound on State Road 50 when the boy's car, traveling at a very high speed, crossed double center lines of the road and collided with Wilson's car, authorities said.

Investigators have not determined why the boy fled from Longwood police. Czeris said no contraband has been found in the boy's car.

Longwood Police Capt. Terry Baker said the police officer involved in the incident, whose name is being withheld, was traveling west on State Road 434 at Wilma Avenue at about 2:30 a.m., when he saw a eastbound car with highbeam headlights on. The driver failed to dim the car lights when signaled to do so by the officer, and the officer turned to pursue the car to make a traffic stop, Baker said.

The driver fled at a high speed, running traffic lights and stopping into Orange County, until the crash.

Baker said FHP is investigating the accident and Longwood police are conducting a routine internal investigation to determine if the Longwood officer followed department procedure to participate in the high-speed chase.

The Czeris that the FHP, Orange County sheriff's deputies and Orlando police did not become involved in the chase. He said a Seminole County sheriff's deputy followed Longwood police as support at some distance behind in the chase.

Baker said it is a judgement call for Longwood police officers to determine if they initiate or continue high-speed pursuits and if such a pursuit takes them out of the city or county. Justification depends on the believed seriousness of the offense the pursued is suspected of committing, Baker said.

Goldsmith has been identified as an eighth grade student at Milwee Middle School in Longwood.

only problem," she said.

Dr. Peter Preganz, chief of anesthesiology at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford said that after anesthesiologists receive their doctor of medicine degree, they receive four years of advanced training in anesthesiology. Dentists, he said, receive less training in anesthesiology but he considers it adequate for the type of care typically required in dentists' offices.

Dr. Steve Sutherland, a Sanford oral surgeon, said that if practitioners of general dentistry want to administer something more than Novocain or nitrous oxide, which are not anesthetics, they must receive advanced training and must be licensed by the state.

Crenshaw said she has questions about the procedures followed in the dentist's office the day her daughter died. But, she said, "I'm not out to get his man."

She sees the problem as being with the system, not the individual, and she declined to identify the dentist.

However, Altamonte Springs Fire Department records show the girl was treated at the office of an Altamonte Springs dentist where rescue personnel were called at about 10:38 a.m. on Aug. 16.

State Department of Professional Regulations records show the dentist has been licensed as a dentist in Florida since Aug. 3, 1981, and the state has no record of any complaints filed against him. He received his degree from the University of Alabama in 1981, according to state records. He also has a state parenteral conscious sedation license, authorizing him to administer anesthesia, according to a DPR spokesman.

Through his office, he has declined to comment on the case.

Jennifer went to his office at about 8:30 a.m. that day to have eight teeth extracted, and according to her mother who was with her in the treatment room, went into convulsions after receiving what Crenshaw believes was Phenergan — an antihistamine tranquilizer — nitrous oxide, Demerol — a strong narcotic pain killer — and more than two shots of Novocain. That is what she said she saw administered.

Before that, Crenshaw said she never knew there was a long-standing controversy over dentists being allowed to administer medications.

Preganz said the controversy is more on a national level and he believes the dentists he knows and works with here are "extremely competent." He added, "I can't say what happened in one incident."

Chief hospital anesthesiologist Preganz said he sees no need for more training or more regulations for dentists who administer anesthesia. He said dentists are aware of the potential dangers of the anesthesia they administer and usually administer mild anesthesia, usually nitrous oxide and mild sedatives.

Nevertheless, Crenshaw said she now has questions about the procedure followed in her daughter's case. And, she said, she also has questions about the ability of dentists to deal with life threatening emergencies that can be prompted by the use of anesthesia.

Dentist Sutherland said a dentist should seek professional medical support at the first sign that a patient is in distress and that most general practice dentists are trained to administer CPR, but are not qualified to carry out advanced life saving measures. Crenshaw said her daughter was given CPR before paramedics arrived.

The results of the autopsy are pending. Seminole County Sheriff's Capt. Roy Hughey said his investigators have not been called on the case, and they won't be unless the medical examiner in the autopsy finds something out of the ordinary.

The results of the autopsy, performed in Orange County, where Jennifer died Aug. 17 in Florida Hospital where she was airlifted the day before, will not be available until at least tomorrow.

Jennifer, who was preparing to start second grade at Spring Lake Elementary School, was excited about trip to the dentist, because she it meant her teeth would be straightened and she would get to wear a retainer like some of her friends. Crenshaw said. Crenshaw said she didn't know a simple trip to the dentist could be deadly.

After her daughter's death, Crenshaw said she just wanted to die. But on Tuesday she decided that for Jennifer's death to have some meaning, she must let people know the dangers of not questioning the practices and qualifications of dentists and doctors to administer anesthesia and other drugs. She said she will now actively pursue changes in the system, with the hope that Jennifer's death may save other lives.

Deltona man arrested for theft

SANFORD — A witness who reportedly identified a suspect for Sanford police in a purse snatching outside McDonald's on U.S. Highway 17-92, Aug. 17, led to the arrest of a 19-year-old man.

Police charged Richard Dean Hoening, of Deltona, with strong arm robbery. He was arrested at a Sanford motel at about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Man charged with bike theft

CASSELBERRY — A man accused of stealing a bicycle from 521 Foot Hill Way E., Casselberry, at about 12:19 p.m., fled and was later captured by Casselberry police.

Frank Daniel Verdino, 24, 619 Ivanhoe Way, Casselberry, was charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling and petty theft. He was arrested on Laurel Way at 1:11 p.m. Tuesday. Bond is $8,000.

Two arrested on cocaine charges

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — In separate cases, Seminole County sheriff's deputies report charging two men with possession of cocaine after the men were confronted in rural Altamonte Springs Tuesday.

Wayne Cordell Cahill, 26, 709 S. Wymore Road #2, Altamonte Springs, was arrested at 6:38 a.m. after deputies made him spit what they identified as cocaine out of his mouth.

Cahill was also charged with driving his vehicle with lights out and use of a vehicle in a felony. He was arrested on North Street after a traffic stop.

In the other case, Charles Anthony Johnson Jr., 18, 2430 Right Way, Sanford, was arrested on Florence Street at County Road 427 after he made a U-turn and deputies got permission to search his car. They reported finding two pieces of cocaine under the seat of the car. That arrest was made at 10:45 p.m.

Sanford man accused of raping girl

SANFORD — Robert Everett Tillotson, 57, 2216 Hartwell Ave., Sanford, has been charged with sexual battery, committing a lewd and lascivious act on a child and for have sexual activity with a child in his custodial care.

Sanford police said a 14-year-old girl who was an overnight guest in his house June 21 accused Tillotson of fondling her as he, she and a 13-year-old girl watched a pornographic movie together.

The girl said when the three were later sleeping in the same bed Tillotson allegedly had additional sexual contact with her and she fled to a bathroom to spend the rest of the night on the floor.

Tillotson is held without bond. Police arrested Tillotson at the police station at 7:25 p.m. Wednesday.

Man charged with fatal accident

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Robert Lee Morganis, 22, 517 Green Springs Circle, Winter Springs, is charged with leaving the scene of an accident involving a death. He was arrested on a warrant by Seminole County sheriff's deputies at home at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Morganis is accused of driving the car that struck and killed Verna Haas as Haas was walking across State Road 436 in Altamonte Springs on Feb. 19. Police alleged that he failed to stop at the scene. Bond is $2,000.

Woman charged with hitting police

CASSELBERRY — A woman arrested for violation of driver's license restrictions and driving with her headlights off had charges of battery and assault on a policeman added after she allegedly punched and hit Casselberry police.

Joan Hurley Haight, 56, 578 Cascades Circle, 102, Casselberry, was arrested on State Road 436 at Lake Howell Road, at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Man charged with arson

By SUSAN LOREN

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A former employee of Toys R Us, Altamonte Springs, has been charged with arson in connection with a fire at that Altamonte Springs store on July 6.

Altamonte Springs police report that Scott Anthony Groover, 24, a volunteer firefighter in Volusia County, helped firefighters put out the blaze he is accused of setting at his former work place.

Groover was arrested at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Chevron station on State Road 436 at 434, where he works as a cashier, police said.

At the time of the fire, investigators thought the blaze was started by a gas leak, but that theory was later ruled out. Police said the fire started in a storage room and all toy store employees who were at the scene were questioned.

At that time, police said, Groover was identified as a possible suspect, because of a previous confrontation with management and because he had reportedly been seen near the starting point of the blaze just before the fire.

He was questioned and agreed to take a lie detector test at a later date. Police were unable to locate him again for several weeks. He was found at his new workplace and was to take a lie detector test Wednesday, police said.

At the time of the test Groover reportedly told police he may have accidentally started the fire by discarding in the storage room a cigarette that he thought was out. Investigators said the fire ignited too rapidly to have been caused by a smoldering cigarette and Groover was charged with arson. He is held without bond.

NAACP calls for more action

Letter not enough for Cumming's 'wetback' remark, Turner says

By LAUREL SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has blasted Mayor Bettye Smith for the city commission's handling of a housing authority commissioner who called a contractor a "wetback" during a public meeting.

"This so-called letter of reprimand means nothing," Seminole County NAACP president Turner Clayton wrote in a letter to Smith and the four city commissioners. "This is just another way for the City to abrogate its authority as it has done in the past."

Clayton's statements came in response to a letter Smith wrote this week to Sanford Housing Authority Commissioner J. Wain Cummings, who made the "wetback" comment during an Aug. 3 meeting to select professional management for SHA. Cummings apologized for the remark Aug. 7.

At an Aug. 14 city commission meeting, city attorney Bill Colbert responded to Clayton's demand for Cummings' removal by saying the city could not legally remove Cummings without proof he intended to discriminate against a minority.

"The remark made by Mr. Cummings did not appear to be innocently made for Mr. Cummings knew exactly what he was saying," Clayton said. "It seems he was only exercising the same mentality which the city has condoned from past appointtees." Clayton pointed a finger at City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan for his recommendation to appoint Cummings in April. "It seems that every one of his recent appointees has met with ... controversy on the board. This seems to be setting a pattern as to the type of people Mr. McClanahan wishes to be appointed to this board, but little does Mr. McClanahan realize the type of image that seems to be reflecting on himself."

McClanahan said he supported Cummings as an appointee after Clayton criticized the city commissioner's recommendations for appointments to SHA Aug. 14. Because appointments require a commission vote, McClanahan said, they are not made to stack the housing authority in any one commissioner's favor.

Cummings was appointed by a unanimous commission vote April 24.

In Smith's letter she said Cummings remark "can only serve to erode the progress we have worked so hard to attain." She said, "We believe significant progress has been made in recent years to improve the visual and mental image of the City. Steps toward scenic improvement and historic preservation, as well as human relations and youth services, have been major themes of the current administration."

But Clayton said the city's progress has been only in improving the look of some areas of Sanford. "I grant you that the city has made some progress in improving the visual image of certain parts of the city, but the mental image remains the same."

Smith said this morning she had not seen the letter, which was dated yesterday. Cummings could not be reached for comment.

Former teachers file discrimination suit

By VICKI BOGEMAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — An age discrimination suit has been filed against the Seminole County School Board in federal court in Orlando, according to school board attorney Ned Julian.

The suit stems from a 1987 decision by Mary Jane Armstrong, then principal of Eastbrook Elementary School, not to renew the contracts of two teachers in response to a district request that Eastbrook's staff be reduced due to a recent elementary school rezoning.

The two teachers, both over the age of 40, contend they were not renewed because of their age. Their names were not revealed to the board at their Wednesday meeting.

Armstrong reported that both teachers had received derogatory reports several years in a row. These reports indicated that improvements were needed in several key areas.

"The teachers were non-renewed based on their annual evaluations," Julian said. He said the school district has the proper documentation to back these claims. He feels the district's case is strong.

"We can show that these teachers had a history of negative reports on their performances," he said. "The non-renewal of these contracts was not based on age."

Visitors return to aircraft carrier despite accident

United Press International

PORT EVERGLADES — A hydraulic pressure valve opened and spewed fluid, water and pressurized air on visitors at the USS John F. Kennedy, causing a panic that injured as many as 20 visitors, the captain of the aircraft carrier said Wednesday.

Hundreds of visitors, meanwhile, were at the world's largest steam-powered carrier Wednesday, apparently undisturbed by the accident that occurred the day before on a platform elevator carrying about 200 visitors from the ship's flight deck.

Capt. Herb Browne told a news conference that a pre-sure release valve in the hydraulic system of the elevator, which is used to carry aircraft from a hangar bay to the flight deck, opened and sprayed the crowd with a mixture of fluid, water and pressurized air.

The valve is made to release pressure in the system when it exceeds 475 pounds per square inch, Browne said. Records show a similar occurrence hasn't happened in three years and investigators did not know why the valve opened.

"It either opened prior to reaching (475 psi) or the system ... in fact exceeded 475 psi. We don't know that yet," Browne said.

Mickey Leland was committed

When we think of congressmen on tax-supported trips, we often envision a ritzy holiday, in say, Paris. Or perhaps a week basking in the tropical sun on a lush island nation. We don't think of danger. Sometimes, we wonder if the trips are really necessary.

The death of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, is a sobering reminder of the perils and necessity of some congressional travel.

Leland, 44, wasn't on a lighthearted junket when the plane carrying him and eight other Americans slammed into a mountain in Ethiopia, instantly killing them all. They were visiting this remote region because of a personal commitment to fight world hunger. Their destination was Fugnido, a refugee camp near the Sudanese border. There they would see firsthand the plight of the refugees, many of whom are famine-stricken children.

An 11-year veteran of Congress and chairman of the House Select Committee on World Hunger, Leland had visited the country six previous times, twice this year alone. The personal knowledge he gained from these trips fueled his commitment, particularly a 1984 encounter with a starving Sudanese child.

The girl "looked to be about 70 or 80 years old, a skeleton of a person with a thin layer of brown skin on her, who had a faint breath of life in her." Leland told the Houston Democrat in 1985. He recalled turning to ask a relief worker about the child.

"While I was talking to him, she died," he said. "I can see her face right now. Every day I see her face."

On his last trip to Ethiopia, George Thomas "Mickey" Leland was still looking into those faces, confronting the horror of famine, planning ways to end the suffering. He leaves behind a legacy of personal commitment from which we all can learn.

Hope for S. Africa

The resignation of South Africa's president, Pieter W. Botha, may finally open the door to faster apartheid reform, a door that Botha's 11-year rule opened only a crack.

In an apparent last snub to Frederik W. de Klerk, his recent successor as leader of the pro-white National Party, Botha refused a Cabinet request to retire under what he called a "lie" of ill health.

Instead, he indignantly resigned in what is regarded as a final attempt to upstage de Klerk's expected victory as South Africa's new president in upcoming parliamentary elections.

In such a curial period of racial unrest, Botha's political leadership and personal health have been failing. A recent stroke may have caused Botha at 73 to lose his memory, but the world will not forget the autocratic, ironhanded reign of the politician known as the "Great Crocodile."

Violent racial riots, resulting from his commitment to continued segregation, marred Botha's presidency. The imprisonment of thousands without trial under strict apartheid, including black activist Nelson Mandela, led to global economic sanctions against South Africa.

Increasingly strong world pressure caused Botha to begin slowly to ease apartheid restrictions after becoming president in 1984. He made small concessions to appease minority representation in the whites-only parliament under a new constitution and tricameral system. But this government continued to deny political rights to the black majority.

Botha's resignation is a major watershed for South Africa. As the National Party's new leader and acting president until his expected confirmation in September, de Klerk has promised evolutionary apartheid reform.

We don't know if de Klerk will deliver any more than Botha, or if he will be less repressive in dealing with racial unrest. But he offers a potential for change under a different leadership.

At this critical juncture in its history, South Africa needs to steer a steeper course toward internal reforms if the country expects to improve its political standing in the world.

Population control is not cure-all

"Although the free-market system can be credited with countless wondrous accomplishments, there really is no evidence that capitalism is the best contraceptive."

So says the Population Institute, in what surely will come as a surprise to every thriving capitalist nation, from Singapore to West Germany, whose people no longer bring enough children into the world even to maintain their present numbers.

Modern prosperity not only suppresses family size in advanced countries, it also influences the behavior of people elsewhere who remain mired in poverty.

The fertility rate in Brazil, for example, has plummeted from 5.75 children per woman in 1970 to 3.2 today, an entirely unexpected development. Why? Not because of any official birth-control program — for none exists in Brazil. Instead, in a classic convergence of voluntary action, women on their own elected to obtain contraceptives or be sterilized. According to The New York Times, the spread of TV apparently provided the good.

"Television transmits images, attitudes, values and habits of a modern, urban, industrial and middle-class Brazil," said George Martine, a Canadian demographer living in Brasilia. "They are images of the small, affluent, consumer-oriented family, of a divorce between sexuality and procreation."

Free-market nations are not alone in slowing population growth, of course, as experience in the Soviet Union proves. But there is little doubt that the attitudes and social aspirations unleashed by modern capitalism are the main reasons for the growing popularity of small families.

Parro from acknowledging this, the Population Institute and other zero-growth groups continue to imply — more than 20 years after the publication of Paul Ehrlich's hysterical, discredited "Population Bomb" — that population control must be the foundation of development efforts. Indeed, the institute says, our efforts in that area "will ultimately determine the quality of life for this entire planet — if not its very survival."

Thirty-one U.S. senators seem to agree with this rubbish. They recently signed a letter urging President Bush to restore U.S. funding for the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, which was cut off in 1985 to protest China's policies of forced abortion.

In a breathtaking leap of logic, the senators claim that every problem from "riots in Algeria" to "burgeoning Third World debt" is fueled by overpopulation.

To the contrary, a fast-growing population is more often a symptom of underdevelopment than its cause. While dense populations in a few countries like Haiti and Bangladesh have indeed wreaked environmental havoc, most Third World nations possess fewer people per square mile than Europe or Japan.

Due to gross economic mismanagement, Brazil's standard of living actually declined in recent years as population pressure eased. Even if Brazil achieved a zero growth rate, it would still not shake off its endemic poverty without fundamental policy reform. It must reduce the stifling degree of state intervention and political cronyism in the economy. Brazilians need look no farther than Chile for a model of how to proceed.

A breathtaking leap of logic.

"Should I include the number of people who are going to starve to death now that Congressman Leland is gone?"

Turning the Kerner on racism

Has the Kerner Commission report of 1968 been repudiated?

It's an important question. Ideas have consequences. The Kerner study, which came after black riots, shaped the thinking of a generation. If Kerner was flawed, the thinking that grew from it may be flawed.

Kerner's central statement was that America "is moving toward two societies, one black, one white — separate and unequal." Why? The answer was clear said Kerner: "white racism." The results of racism were also clear to Kerner: Conditions for blacks were dreadful, apparently deteriorating, and would worsen unless the federal government acted massively.

Comes now a new study, by the National Research Council: "A Common Destiny: Blacks and American Society."

The NRC report does not seek to discredit Kerner, or even deal with it directly. Yet, consider the summary of NRC by the director of the study, Professor Gerald Jaynes of Yale: "Although better by a wide margin than it was in 1940, by nearly all objective measures, the status of blacks relative to whites has stagnated or regressed since the early 1970s."

So, NRC says there was great progress in the good old days of the civil rights movement — until the early 1970s. But Kerner, which came out in those good old days, said things were terrible, and likely to get worse.

Which is right? NRC's statement of no relative progress for blacks since the early 1970s is arguable; I think black progress has continued. But NRC's conclusion that progress was made in the '60s is correct. It is supported by mountains of data.

Kerner was not only off-base factually. It sent out harmful messages to blacks and Americans generally. By concentrating on racism and government, Kerner shortchanged the argument now called "the culture of poverty," which stresses internal problems of the black community.

Some NRC scholars (by no means all) understand that Kerner was misguided. Professor Glenn Loury of Harvard, an NRC panelist, states: "By saying that implacable white racism brought about poor conditions, Kerner posed the situation as a white problem, not a black problem. That is a harmful notion for blacks."

Loury, who is black, is right. Efforts to root out racial discrimination must continue. But the doors of opportunity are open. Loury believes blacks are better served by focusing on open doors rather than blaming their situation on racism.

Professor Nathan Glazer of Harvard, another NRC panel member, says: "The Kerner Commission taught us to concentrate on the undoable or the unimportant."

Glazer believes Kerner's stress on racism led to stressing civil rights enforcement as the major tool of black advancement. That led to disruptive fights about school busing, reverse discrimination and quotas. Glazer believes that was a wrong turn because major legislative battles had already been won. Education should have been emphasized: The payoff is surer and less polarizing.

Another sad Kerner legacy is a paradox: that the tool of big government doesn't work — and that only the tool of big government can possibly work. Wrong twice.

In the 1960s America mounted a major governmental effort to help minorities. Social and welfare spending went up by 89 percent in real dollars. Black poverty was cut almost in half. Along came Kerner and said things don't get better even when the government spends. Conservatives whooped. When early-vintage Reaganites said, "we're throwing money down a rathole," the unstated subtext was "and Kerner proves it."

But Kerner also said only vast amounts of government dollars could solve the problem. As with the racism idea, that de-emphasized individual effort.

Dr. Bernard Gifford, NRC member and vice president of Apple Computer, says that dwelling on either of the grand arguments, racism or government, "can cripple those who are trying to make change one day at a time." Gifford, a black, says Kerner was not scholarship, but "a political period piece that delayed serious intellectual thought about the real pathologies in the black community."

Correct: Kerner was politics, not sociology.

Efforts to root out racial discrimination must continue.

Soviets rummage for space money

STAR CITY, USSR — Fifty Soviet cosmonauts are on the waiting list to go into space, but some may never leave the ground because of a critical, but secret shortage of money.

We recently visited the restricted cosmonaut training center and spoke with Soviet space officials there and in Moscow. U.S. intelligence sources confirm what we learned there, that the civilian space program is rummaging for rubles.

The economic restructuring, perestroika, is coming along when Soviets would rather have soap and sugar than space travel. Mikhail Gorbachev has taken a tack that should be familiar to American taxpayers — pitching the economic benefits of space research in an effort to sell it to the public.

One man who senses a soft spot in Soviet support for a space program is populist leader Boris Yeltsin. He wants a five- to seven-year delay in major projects, including the Soviet space shuttle.

Officially, the Soviet space budget for last year was $11 billion. But our sources say that hidden subsidies and borrowing from other programs put the cost closer to $25 billion — the amount the United States spends annually on military and civilian space programs.

If the Soviets have to make cuts, they will trim the civilian, not the military program, according to Marcia Smith, a top American expert on the Soviet space program working at the Congressional Research Service.

The budget squeeze is one of the reasons the Soviets have been pushing their Intercosmos program to take foreigners into space. Fifteen passengers have already flown in Soviet capsules, mostly for free. But there are no more free rides. The fare is $12 million per person and one Soviet official told us the Japanese have made a reservation.

The ambitious Soviets have had a space station orbiting the Earth since 1986. It is called "Mir," or peace. In 1987, the Soviets sent up "Kvant," or quantum, as an addition to Mir. Two years ago, they were supposed to have added a re-equipping module, a complicated piece of equipment that is now scheduled to go up in October.

That will leave Mir in an "L" shape which consumes too much energy and is difficult to operate. So in December, the Soviets plan to rush up the balancing piece, a "T" module (for technology). Soviet officials are anxious to add the "T" to make their station the first factory in space. They will make crystals, drugs and metal alloys in the vacuum of space. And, they will make a profit, which will help fund the No. 1 Soviet space dream — a manned mission to Mars.

Soviet space officials confided to us that they don't think they'll ever have all the money for such a mission without help from the United States in a joint Mars program.

There is much the United States can learn from the Soviets. A Mars flight would take two years and, so far, the Soviets have done the only real research in long-duration flights.

For the moment, our sources say, the primary goal of the civilian space program is simply to survive. The late Soviet premier Leonid Brezhnev was a space buff, unlike Gorbachev, and the blank check for the civilian space program died with Brezhnev.

Gorbachev has taken a tack that should be familiar to American taxpayers.

C'mon, this stuff isn't real, is it?

By SANDRA BOUGHANNE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Anyone involved with professional wrestling says the same thing about it.

Even though the promotional hype can be outlandish and matches follow a rough script, there is nothing phony about the physical prowess.

It's as jarringly real as football, including the moves, the blood-curdling violence — and the pain.

"We're not like these guys that get on television and say it's not real. We got guys getting broken arms and legs," Pro Wrestling Promoter Richard Grant says.

Golden Boy Jerry Grey, Southern Wrestling Federation World Champion and co-coordinator backs up Grant's comments.

"It's all real," he contends. When a wrestler falls, even though he is trained how to do it in such a way as to avoid injury, he nevertheless feels it.

"It still hurts. You can feel the ring. It's just plywood," Grey says.

When the Hangman gashed blood from his forehead after he was struck during a match, Grant took offense when it was suggested that the blood streaming down the Hangman's face wasn't real.

"We don't use any fake blood," he says.

And Grey invited the skeptic to look at the wrestler's forehead.

The man became a believer when he saw the gash for himself.

The skeptics say it's all staged, an elaborate put-on, but don't try telling that to these vociferous fans.

The Hangman: 'This is just something I do' Wrestling

By SANDRA BOUGHANNE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Eddie Haupt (The Hangman) sits in the corner of the civic center sipping a soda, a towel draped over his left shoulder.

His match with the monstrous "One Man Gang" over, he appears relaxed although a gash on his forehead looks painful.

A few moments before, Haupt was a snarling, vicious man, as he tossed his opponent around in the ring. In reality, he is soft-spoken and gentle.

The 28-year-old Georgian is not seeking fame as a big-time wrestler.

So why does he travel around five to six nights a week wrestling for five different promoters?

"This is my way to make money to make business. This is not a living. This is not fun. It's just something I do," says Haupt, already the entrepreneur of three Atlanta businesses: two janitorial and one limousine service. The business-minded Haupt also is a stockholder in an insurance company and owns a 10-acre farm.

Haupt says he hopes to depend on earnings from professional wrestling until his businesses do well enough to support him.

"The pay for the sport is fantastic," Haupt says, noting that a wrestler can make anywhere between $150 to $1,000 a night, depending on how big the crowd is. Haupt has been wrestling part-time since he was 17, then at 18 did it full time while studying business in college.

A Southern Wrestling Federation wrestler, Haupt says he has wrestled in front of a crowd of 10,000 in Hilton Head, S.C.

"If I win more than 50 percent of my matches, I get a bonus," he says.

Haupt says he has wrestled Rick Fier and briefly reached the "big time" once, but broke a rib and fractured an arm, discouraging him from moving up to the National Wrestling Alliance (NWA) or World Wrestling Federation (WWF).

In the ring, Haupt is the good guy.

"The audience wants to see the good guy beat the bad guy up. The crowd's what keeps me going."

Eddie 'The Hangman' Haupt

current younger generation when she appeared on television with Wrestling Star Captain Lou Albano.

Jerry Grey, 25, former Southern Wrestling Federation (SWF) World Tag Team Champion and co-coordinator of the Sanford event, says that professional wrestling has attracted between 150 and 170 enthusiasts for the first two shows since it came to Sanford in July.

Promoter and Coordinator Richard Grant says there has been a "pretty good turnout" in Sanford for wrestling. "We try all the small towns. Small towns have hardly any entertainment," he says.

The SWF has held shows in Orlando, but the larger wrestling alliances offer too much competition, according to Grant. "The WWF and the NWA come in, and they have millions of dollars invested. We wrestle and we don't get up and do big shows with all the fireworks," he says.

Even so, spectators say they enjoy the proximity to the wrestlers during the matches.

The SWF is also a training school where would-be pro wrestlers can learn the basic moves in four months at a cost of about $800. There are about 30 wrestlers in the federation. Some of them are using the experience as a springboard to move on to bigger and better things. Others are just winding down in their wrestling careers.

The spectators all are part of the fun, close enough to the wrestlers to yank at their hair or throw jabs themselves.

Jeff Deen, of Sanford, says his four-year-old son Michael gets "very concerned" about the good guy.

"It's a good night out for me and my son. He just roots for the good guy," Deen says.

He says that watching wrestling at the civic center is more enjoyable for him and his son than in a bigger city where thousands of people attend the event.

"He and I can sit up here close and yell at them and shake a guy's hand. We live in a small town. It's nice," he says.

The grand finale is a spectacular eight-man tag team event which raises the roof as veteran wrestler Buggay (2 ga) McGraw brings down four men at one time. It comes to an end as the good guys bring the bad guys to justice. The villains fall in a heap in the center of the ring.

The drama ends. Everyone leaves the civic center with beaming faces.

Kip 'Stinger' Montana

It's a long way to the big time

By SANDRA BOUGHANNE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The sky is the limit for Kip "Stinger" Montana.

At 25, Kip Montana knows that he wants to be a National Wrestling Alliance (NWA) or World Wrestling Federation (WWF) wrestler.

The muscular Kip is a construction worker at Disney World during the week. On weekends, he trades his jackhammer for a wrestling jacket of shiny blue metallic material and shorts. Weekends is when Kip becomes a pro-wrestling star in shows like the one held every other Friday at the Sanford Civic Center.

That's when the handsome youth draws shrieks from a row of children and some eligible bachelorettes as he struts in the ring during the eight-man tag team event.

Kip, who used to wrestle with his professional wrestler friends, became involved in the sport about two years ago.

From Nashville, Tenn., the blonde-haired Kip says, "I seem to attract the younger kids."

Kip has toured with the NWA and says he hopes to get into either that or the WWF. He says he expects to reach that goal in "about five years."

For now, Kip is the center of attention in the ring during the Southern Wrestling Federation shows. "This is the best thing right here. We do pretty good shows," he says after his performance in the final tag-team event.

Kip says that of all the places he has wrestled, Sanford is his favorite.

"I can get into it more. Little towns are easier to get with the people," he says.

Ground DC-10s, engineer urges

United Press International

TAMPA — A safety engineer contends that the DC-10 airplane is plagued by basic design flaws that have been compounded as the commercial fleet's most popular wide-body jetliner ages.

Dr. Edmund J. Cantilli, professor of transportation and safety engineering at Polytechnic University in New York, urged that the DC-10 fleet be grounded, according to a Wednesday report in the Tampa Tribune.

"It's absolutely not as safe as it should be, and not as safe as other conventional aircraft such as the 747," Cantilli said.

He said the McDonnell Douglas DC-10 is a victim of "hurried design" and "shortcuts" on the assembly line, and the flaws now are being compounded by age.

"I think what we've seen in the last few weeks is a result of the aging process of a basically flawed design. All the other aging airplanes are having their own problems, of course, but in my opinion, they (DC-10s) are the worst," Cantilli said.

He said the plane's hydraulic system should have been designed with enough backup lines placed far enough apart to survive an engine blowout.

"The hydraulic lines are redundant but too closely spaced and not well protected," he said. "This is not a matter of greater levels of maintenance; it goes back to the basic levels of design flaws that aren't correctable."

Cantilli said the DC-10 needs heavier shielding around critical lines, something the Air Force has done on its modified DC-10s.

The DC-10 has come under increasing scrutiny since United Flight 232 crashed last month in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 112 people. An engine blowout severed the plane's hydraulic lines, causing the craft to lose control.

Eight days later, 88 people died when a Korean Air DC-10 crashed in Tripoli, Libya. Two weeks after that, an engine on a Northwest DC-10 began breaking up, although the crew managed to land safely in Denver.

The Federal Aviation Administration has made no move to ground the fleet of more than 450 three-engine DC-10s, operated by about 50 airlines worldwide, and says the DC-10 is safe to fly.

The FAA and the plane's manufacturers defend the DC-10 in the context of its history and flight rate, and the fact that more DC-10s are in service than any other commercial airliner. DC-10s make up one-third of the wide-body airplanes operating in the United States.

Since production began in the early 1970s, DC-10s have flown some 7 billion miles and each day make more than 900 flights to more than 200 cities. The average DC-10 spends about nine hours a day in the air and 97 percent of the fleet takes off within 15 minutes of its scheduled departure time.

DC-10s have been involved in 43 accidents in the United States since 1970 with nine of those incidents claiming 462 lives. The National Transportation Safety Board does not keep statistics on foreign accidents such as the one in Tripoli.

McDonnell Douglas said Cantilli's comments are unfounded.

"We've been under unusual public scrutiny since the Sioux City accident and there have been a lot of statements that have no basis in fact," said Elaine Bendel, manager of commercial programs at McDonnell Douglas.

She said age has nothing to do with the DC-10 accidents.

"When an airplane becomes 20 years old it doesn't self-destruct," she said. "If properly maintained, with routine inspections, the airplane really has no hard time limits."

Despite widespread attention to airline problems since the Sioux City crash, the FAA said there has been no increase in malfunctions among DC-10s or among other planes.

Transportation safety board statistics of all scheduled and non-scheduled air carriers showed 79 accidents, including 19 fatal accidents, from Jan. 1 through June 30 of this year compared to 77 accidents, including 18 fatal accidents for the same period in 1988.

No pattern that would evoke a particular concern has been spotted, FAA spokesman Dick Stafford said.

"Pilots file reports of landing gear problems or hydraulic failures every day and invariably the instruments are at fault," said Stafford.

Man charged with officer's murder jailed without bond

United Press International

WEST PALM BEACH — The man charged with the shooting death of a Palm Beach County sheriff's deputy was denied bond Wednesday at his initial hearing on charges of first-degree murder.

David Boswell, 42, was charged with the first-degree murder of sheriff's deputy James Dickinson, 29, who died of a single gunshot wound to the head outside Boswell's rural Royal Palm Beach home Tuesday evening. The suspect appeared in court barefoot and was appointed a public defender.

Dickinson and deputy Gregory Pleasant had accompanied Boswell's wife to the home to deliver legal documents.

Tutu, others teargassed
CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Police used tear gas to break up a gathering of schoolchildren, community and church leaders including Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu outside a church in a black township, the Anglican Church said.

The Nobel Peace Prize laureate said he sent messages to President Bush, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl "to let them know they cannot say they did not know."

Solidarity prime minister confirmed
WARSAW, Poland — The Polish Parliament today confirmed Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki as prime minister in the Warsaw Pact's first non-communist government.

The confirmation climaxed a triumphant rise of Solidarity from an illegal organization just four months ago to the leadership of the nation, the first non-communist government since 1947 in Poland and since 1948 in the East Bloc.

Human chain marks Baltic protest
TALLINN, U.S.S.R. — Hundreds of thousands of Baltic residents, in a bold gesture of nationalist defiance, linked hands in a human freedom chain across three republics demanding annulment of a Nazi-Soviet pact they say ended their independence and placed them under communist domination.

Colombian judges end strike

United Press International

BOGOTA, Colombia — Colombian judges, who have staged a six-day strike to protest the execution of colleagues by drug dealers, agreed to return to work today following a U.S. promise of $2 million to protect them.

No reason, including the U.S. offer, was cited for ending the walkout. Antonio Suarez, president of the National Association of Judicial Employees, refused to say if the offer affected the decision to end the walkout.

Colombia's 4,800 judges, along with another 80 special criminal judges and 55 Superior Court magistrates, had been on strike since Friday, protesting a lack of protection in the wake of death threats and executions.

The Colombian radio station RCN said police involved in a nationwide sweep of drug traffickers Wednesday arrested Bernardo Londono Quinteiro in the coastal city of Barranquilla.

Police said two other suspects were arrested, but U.S. officials said they were not being sought for extradition by the United States.

Mirrors could slow global warming
WASHINGTON — Gigantic orbiting mirrors may offer a solution — albeit a very costly one — to Earth's anticipated warming by global warming if pollution control efforts fail, a Swiss scientist said.

In a letter published Wednesday in the British journal Nature, Walter Seitz said he believes it is unlikely humans will do much in the near future to reduce pollution that threatens to boost the planet's temperature.

Carbon dioxide and other gases generated by fuel consumption and burning of tropical forests warm Earth's atmosphere by trapping solar heat like a greenhouse.

Chemical may help cocaine addicts
WASHINGTON — Tests show a medication can dramatically reduce cocaine dependence in addicted monkeys, a promising finding that may eventually help more people kick potentially deadly cocaine or "speedball" habit, researchers reported.

Danish leader meets with Bush

United Press International

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush, adding the first friends to his busy vacation schedule, today welcomed Danish Prime Minister Poul Schluter "at the presidential seaside home."

Bush acknowledged Wednesday that the overnight trip by Schluter and his new wife, Anne Marie Vessel, was slated more for pleasure than international consultations.

To date, Bush has spent most of his vacation playing golf, in his speed boat, fishing and swimming occasionally in the cold Atlantic Ocean.

Bush did take time out Wednesday for a mid-vacation news conference on the lawn of his Walker's Point estate, however, to address some pressing world matters.

The president applauded word that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had urged the cooperation in the new government led by the Solidarity labor movement and said U.S. officials were consulting with the Colombian government Thursday in Washington over possible assistance for the South American country.

Exxon is already starting to demobilize its cleanup efforts for the year, but not one mile of oiled shoreline is anywhere near clean," said Lauri Adams, a lawyer for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, one of the groups involved in the lawsuit.

Labor leaders face year in jail

United Press International

LEBANON, Va. — National AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka and 15 other labor leaders face a year in jail and fines after being arrested during a show of support for striking Pittston coal miners.

Kirkland conceded the arrests Wednesday were largely symbolic but said the group wanted to show "solidarity with our brothers and sisters in a great union, the United Mine Workers."

"I do not feel the need to be arrested at any time, but I do feel the need to show my support for my brothers and sisters," Kirkland said while being processed at the city jail.

More than 2,500 arrests have been recorded since the miners walked out April 5, with most stemming from the mine union's unprecedented use of civil disobedience sit-ins.

Pittston, which argues it needs a contract with more flexibility to compete in overseas markets, broke off talks last week to protest what it called an increase in union violence.

Kirkland, Trumka and other labor leaders addressed a rally earlier Wednesday at the State Capitol in Richmond.

about $37.1 million. Callahan said. The smaller, 4-level interchange would cost $43 million at the same land prices, a $5.6 million difference, he said.

When land prices rise to $100,000 an acre, the difference narrows because the cost to build the interchange won't increase as rapidly as the escalation of land costs, Callahan said. At $100,000 an acre, the smaller interchange would cost $45.7 million and the larger would cost $42 million.

At $130,000 an acre average, the larger interchange will cost slightly more, $61.4 million compared to $51.6 million for the larger interchange, the report shows. At $200,000 an acre, the report shows the difference shifts and the smaller interchange will cost $56.5 million and the larger interchange will cost $61 million.

A third option, sought by county, Sanford and Lake Mary officials, cost more under any land-cost scenario, Callahan said. Because the first two options had no connection to either County Road 46A or State Road 46 needed to attract more traffic to the expressway, the officials asked for a third design with those connections.

Under each land cost scenario in the report, the third option with a connection to SR 46 would cost at least $42 million more than the other options, Callahan said. CR 46A was less than a mile from the expressway interchange and could not be directly connected to it.

Callahan said a direct connection between the interchange and SR 46 was possible, although it will cause a potentially dangerous weaving condition as several lanes merge and motorists are forced to cross each others' paths within a short distance.

Kelley began copying records earlier this month that pertain to the interchange and proposed I-4 widening at the Florida Department of Transportation in DeLand and Winter Park. Kelley wrote a stinging letter to acting district secretary Thomas Barry Tuesday, saying she had been delayed for more than two weeks in receiving about 22 files she had requested.

The letter says in part: "I feel that your additional delay in producing these Public Records is unreasonable." Kelley said the delays show DOT sloppiness and possible intentional restriction of public information access by DOT officials. Barry could not be reached Wednesday.

Copies of the letter were sent to Ben Watts, DOT acting secretary, Guy Bob Martinez, Attorney General Bob Butterworth and expressway officials.

Seminole County commissioner Fred Streetman, chairman of the expressway authority, called DOT offices Wednesday, apologizing for any misconceptions caused by the letter. Streetman said he told DOT officials Kelley was not speaking for the authority.

In other action, authority members voted to change their rules limiting the amount of time the chairman and other officers can serve to one year. The changes also allow an officer to be removed by at least four authority members with justifiable cause. Kelley had wanted the authority rules changed to allow an officer to be removed without cause by at least three members.

The rules changes also require a pledge and invocation before each meeting.

Authority members also voted to give authority director Gerald Branton a 10 percent salary increase, increasing him from $61,760 to $67,936. Although authority members, including Streetman, county commissioners Sandra Lamm, Pat Warren and Bob Sturm, and Sanford Mayor Harvey Smith, praised Branton, Kelley questioned the amount, saying it seemed to be too much.

Kelley and Cassberry councilwoman Mary Lou Miller said they wanted an additional month to consider the increase, but authority members voted 3-2 against Kelley and Miller to give Branton the raise.

School

The cost of the complete project will be $6,023,968 with $5,282,232 spent on construction and the remainder going to, among other things, architects and engineers fees, trailer rental and site testing.

There had been some controversy last year when the school was declared obsolete by principal Dan Pelham. Many area residents wanted to have the building listed with the National Register of Historic Places and attempted to get federal grants to restore the facility. The Mediterranean revival style building was built in 1926 and is the former Seminole High School.

Preservationists were unable to have the building listed with the national register and found there was only between $200,000 and $700,000 available in state grant money if the group qualified. The amount was too little to do the needed work.

At the time, Pelham argued that the classrooms did not meet state guidelines regarding appropriate size. The average class space is about 32.5 square feet. Due to the increased number of students and expanded curriculum offerings, they are now required to be 97.8 square feet. Smaller classrooms must be 1,100 square feet.

Weiss said the six columns and four medallions that adorn the front of the main building will be preserved and incorporated into the new design. "The old style is now the new style," said David Spear, the district's director of facilities planning and construction.

Board members said they have been told by people in the community that the planned facility was satisfactory and as aesthetically pleasing as the old one.

Pelham noted that members of the Sanford Junior High School Class of 1969 had recently met at the school and were "thrilled" with the new plans.

Thirteen of the school's 21 existing buildings will be demolished in the course of the project. The brick and stucco structures will be replaced by brick ones.

Two new academic houses will be built in this phase of construction. Two, and possibly a third, will be built at a later date. A new administration building and cafeteria will built behind the current facility, which will be torn down and replaced with 74 parking spaces.

The roofs of the new buildings will be made of a metal galvanized against rust for 25 years. It is the same material that has been on several of the newer roofs at district schools, such as Goldsboro Elementary.

The new Sanford Middle School facilities are being designed to house 1,373 students. Currently, classroom space is available for 639 students.

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Hrbek's homers nip White Sox

MINNEAPOLIS — Kent Hrbek had three hits, including a pair of two-run homers, to power Minnesota to an 8-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox that snapped the Twins' three-game losing streak.

Roy Smith, 10-4, gave up four runs on nine hits and two walks with one strikeout in 5 1-3 and was followed by Juan Berenguer, who pitched 2 1-3 scoreless innings.

Jeff Reardon worked the ninth but was tagged for a three-run homer by Carlton Fisk, his 10th of the year. The home run was the 333rd of Fisk's career, moving him past Bobby Bonds into 48th place on the all-time list.

White Sox starter Greg Hibbard, 3-5, lasted just 1 2-3 innings, giving up three runs on six hits.

On the field Wednesday it was Boston downing New York 4-1; Cleveland tripping Seattle 5-3; Baltimore whipping Milwaukee 3-1; Toronto hammering Detroit 11-4; Kansas City besting California 6-4; and Oakland outlasting Texas 5-4.

TENNIS

King to show at conference

PRINCETON, N.J. — Tennis great Billie Jean King and U.S. Davis Cup coach Tom Gorman are among the many tennis authorities who will participate in the U.S. Tennis Association Tennis Teachers Conference in New York, Aug. 30-Sept. 1.

Also making presentations will be renowned coaches Nick Bollettieri and Dennis Van der Meer and Brad Parks, founder and president of the National Foundation of Wheelchair Tennis.

New programs and ideas for recreational tennis will be presented, as will new techniques for team coaching and fiscal fitness. Each year, the latest tennis findings of the USTA Player Development Program are shared with more than 1,000 tennis coaches, teaching professionals and recreation department leaders from around the world.

A brochure and registration information can be obtained by writing: USTA Tennis Teachers Conference, 707 Alexander Road, Princeton, N.J. 08540, or call 1-800-223-0456.

NBA sets exhibition schedule

NEW YORK — The NBA's 103-game exhibition season runs from Oct. 11-31 and includes games from Honolulu to Rome, the league announced Wednesday.

The Los Angeles Lakers play the Sacramento Kings at Honolulu Oct. 11 in the opening game. Two high profile players will make their NBA debut: Lakers' 7-foot-1 center Vlade Divac of Yugoslavia and No. 1 NBA draft choice Pervis Ellison of Sacramento.

The Denver Nuggets will play in the McDonald's Open at the Palaeur in Rome Oct. 20 and 22, competing against Italian League champion Philips Milan, Spanish League champion Barcelona and European champion Jugoplastika Split of Yugoslavia.

Another international game pits Israeli champion Maccabi Tel Aviv against the Miami Heat Oct. 12 in Miami.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Benes strong in first career win

PHILADELPHIA — Andy Benes allowed three hits over seven innings to earn his first major-league victory Wednesday night, pitching the San Diego Padres to a 7-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Roberto Alomar and Chris James each had three hits to spark a 12-hit San Diego attack. The Padres stole five bases, including three by Alomar, who has 33 for the year.

Benes, the No. 1 pick in the nation in the June 1988 free agent draft, yielded three runs, walked five and struck out four to boost his record to 1-2.

The Padres took a 3-0 lead with single runs in the second, third and fourth innings off starter and loser Bruce Ruffin, 3-8.

In other action Wednesday San Francisco blanked New York 5-0; Cincinnati ripped Chicago 8-5; Pittsburgh pounded Houston 6-1; Atlanta shut out St. Louis 3-0 and Los Angeles nipped Montreal 1-0 in 24 innings.

1968: Collects 1,000th career hit June 26 with single off Dick Selma of New York, wins National League batting title with .335 average.

1969: Wins second straight batting title with career-high .348 average.

1970: Last player to get a hit at Cincinnati's old Crosley Field and first Reds' player to get a hit at the new Riverfront Stadium; bowls over catcher Ray Fosse to score winning run in the All-Star game.

1972: Leads National League in games, at-bats and hits.

1973: Wins third batting title with .338 average and a career-high 230 hits to be named NL Most Valuable Player for first time. Collects 2,000th career hit June 19 with a single off San Francisco's Ron Bryant.

1975: Switched from outfield to third base; named World Series Most Valuable Player after leading Reds to world title in memorable seven-game series against Boston Red Sox.

1978: Leads Reds to second straight World Series victory, a four-game sweep of the New York Yankees.

1977: Becomes most productive switch-hitter of all time with 2,881st hit, breaking Frankie Frisch's record; hits 300 for 12th time in 13 years.

1978: Collects 3,000th career hit May 5 against Montreal's Steve Rogers, hits in 44 straight games for modern National League record.

1979: Leaves Reds as a free agent and signs with the Philadelphia Phillies, playing first base.

1981: Sets National League record for most hits with 3,161.

1984: Begins season with the Montreal Expos, collecting 4,000th career hit April 13 off Philadelphia's Jerry Koonsman; returns to Cincinnati as Reds player-manager Aug. 16.

1988: Breaks Ty Cobb's major-league career hit record of 4,191 on Sept. 11 with a single against San Diego's Eric Show.

1988: Collects final hit of career, No. 4,256, on Aug. 14 against San Francisco's Greg Minton.

1987: Quits playing to manage Reds full-time.

1988: Suspended for 30 days for striking umpire Dave Pallone.

1989: Published reports in February link Rose to heavy gambling on baseball, including bets on the Reds. Rose sues Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti in June, claiming the commissioner is biased and has prejudged the case. Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Norbert Nadel grants a temporary restraining order, but the case later is accepted by a federal court. The case is settled out of court and Rose is suspended for life by Giamatti. Under existing baseball rules, he may apply for readmission after one year of the suspension, although there is no policy in effect that calls for automatic reinstatement of a suspended player or manager.

Local reaction mixed to ban of Reds great

By BRAD CHURCH
 Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Sanford baseball fans disagreed today whether that Pete Rose should be punished if he bet on baseball games, and some say more evidence of his offenses should be made public.

Two Sanford Recreation Department officials have differing opinions on the suspension.

Jeff Monson, recreation supervisor, said, "I'm still concerned that they haven't come up with the facts and this deal seems to be an effort by both Rose and Giamatti to sweep the thing under the rug."

Monson said if Rose committed the offenses he is accused of, he deserves to be punished, but adds "I don't see why the commissioner can't come up with some facts to release to the public." He said he hopes the investigation into gambling allegation against Rose continues. "I hope this deal that was negotiated doesn't mean the end of it. We need to know what the facts are and no one has come up with any specifics."

On the other hand, Mike Kirby, special events supervisor for the recreation department, said he thinks Rose deserved the punishment he received.

"He knows the rules and he broke them," Kirby said. "There is a 'no gambling' sign in the clubhouse of every major league baseball club. Rose knew the rules and broke them, and deserves to be punished."

Lake Mary Associate Planner Mark Reggenatin said, "I feel that it's a justified suspension...the agreement struck works for the benefit of both sides. I think it's a fair one because it's my understanding that there was enough evidence to determine that he did gamble on baseball, so I feel some punishment was necessary. (But) I don't feel he should have been suspended for life because he was perhaps one of the greatest players and he did a lot for baseball... If he was suspended for life, he couldn't go into the Hall of Fame."

Willie "Sir Thomas" White, of Sanford, favors treatment for Rose. "I don't think Pete Rose should be suspended for life because gambling is a treatable addiction. It makes an effort to correct the addiction he should be reinstated after treatment. Many athletes have done the same with drug addictions and have not lost their professional status. I don't see any difference."

Mike Rotundo, a Sanford police lieutenant, said "There's no doubt that Pete Rose has been a credit to the game, but superstar or not, he deserves to be treated like everyone else if he broke the rules."

Rotundo said even though there has been no hard evidence of Rose's offenses, "You know he had to have done something wrong or he never would have negotiated this deal. He deserves to be punished the same as anyone else who breaks the rules."

Jerry Posey, Seminole High School Athletic Director, said the whole

Barn, Invasion still running neck-and-neck

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald correspondent

The Barn and Creative Invasion both won easily on Wednesday night to remain tied for first while Heathrow won its first game of the second half in Sanford Men's Class "C" Slowpitch Softball action at Chase Park.

The wins by The Barn and Creative Invasion set up a showdown at 6:30 p.m. Friday in a make-up game at Chase Park. The game was rained out on June 30. Both teams are 6-1 with two more games left after Friday.

Friday night's other games will have Mobilite and The Wrecking Crew tangling at 7:30 and Heathrow taking on Ken Kern's Transmissions at 8:30.

In Wednesday's first game, singles by Dean Lilly and Dave Andrews drove in the tying and go-ahead runs in the bottom of the third as Heathrow overcame a 2-1 Mobilite lead. Both teams now stand at 1-6.

The Wrecking Crew's Steve Cooper (No. 13) gave it a shot, but wasn't any more successful than his teammates Wednesday night when they were the victim of a one-hitter by Blake Murray of Creative Invasion. Tom Wilkes (on deck) got the only hit for the Crew as the Invasion romped to an 11-0 win.

Contributing to the Heathrow attack were Lilly (three singles and one RBI), Andrews (one single, one run scored and one RBI), Kevin Driscoll and Eric Erickson (each with one single and one run scored) and Larry Pearson, Mark Flomerfelt, Keith Roark and Grill Detrick (one single each).

For Mobilite, Bud Wagers and Kes Lashley each had two singles and one run scored while Kevin Stodola and Angel Figueroa each had one single and one RBI. Jim Hopper and John Conn each singled once.

In the second game, Blake Murray tossed a one-hitter while his Creative Invasion teammates scored three runs in the fourth to break open a scoreless tie and romped to an 11-0 victory over the Wrecking Crew.

John Raynor led the 12-hit Invasion assault with two singles, two runs scored and four RBI. Others contributing were Joe Ferpes (two singles, two runs scored and one

Rollins to offer adult courses, seminars

Rollins College, Winter Park, will offer several non-credit courses and seminars for adults in September and October. Seminars will include "Business Speaking," "Business Writing" and "How to Be a Successful Residential Landlord." Some new courses are "Basic Graphic Design," "Negotiation" and "Editing Your Own Writing." Tuition ranges from $45 to $125. For more information, call 646-2632.

Teen pregnancy topic of seminar

"Teen-age Pregnancy: Emotional Consequences of Being a Child and a Mother" will be the topic of a seminar on Friday, Aug. 25, at the Hyatt Grand Cypress, Orlando. Sponsored by Laurel Oaks Hospital of Orlando, the seminar will feature as keynote speaker Beth Winship, author of the syndicated "Ask Beth" column. Topics will include "Teen-age Pregnancy: A National Crisis," "Complications with Teen-age Pregnancy," "Racing Through Adolescence: Children Having Babies," and "Breaking the Cycle of Teen Pregnancy." The seminar, scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., will cost $35 and include a continental breakfast and lunch. For more information, call Jeanne Rodriguez at 345-5000.

Christian media to compete in softball

Central Florida Helpline and Teens' Talk will sponsor their first Teens' Talk Day softball tournament on Saturday, Aug. 26, at Lake Fairview Park, located across from the Ben White Raceway, Orlando. From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Christian media teams will compete from WTOL-TV 52, WACX-TV 55, WAJL-AM 1190, WXND-AM 1600, and Youth for Christ, representing WTLN-AM and FM. Baked goods and softdrinks will be sold, but the event is free, designed to raise public awareness of Teens' Talk. Central Florida's only teen crisis line staffed by trained teen-agers. The line, at 740-TALK, is open Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 5-9 p.m.

St. Lucia cash

Jim Young, treasurer of Sanford's upcoming St. Lucia Festival, receives a check of $100 on Monday from Elsie Quarry, member of the Central Florida Regional Hospital Auxiliary. The money, raised by auxiliary members through the hospital's gift shop, is the first "official" donation to the festival, said Kay Bartholomew, CFRRH marketing director. The festival is scheduled for downtown Sanford Dec. 7-9, prior to St. Lucia Day on Dec. 13. Bartholomew said in-kind materials, volunteer services and funds are needed for the festival, in addition to the loan of sound equipment. To contribute, contact Jim Young at 330-7290 during business hours.

Elderly man had party of one for birthday

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

DEAR ABBY: I have never written before, but I think the following might interest you and some of your readers: Yesterday was an old man's birthday. He was 91, and "home" was a small rented room with cooking privileges. He awakened earlier than usual, bathed, shaved, and put on his best clothes. Surely they would come today, he thought.

He wouldn't take his daily walk to the gas station to visit with the old-timers of the neighborhood because he wanted to be right here when they came.

He sat on the front porch with a clear view of the road so he could see them coming. Surely they would come today.

He'd skip his noon nap that day, because he wanted to be up when they came.

He has six children. Two of his daughters and their married children live within a few miles. They hadn't been to see him for a long time, and today was his birthday. Surely they would come.

At suppertime, his landlady brought him some ice cream and a small cake, but he didn't eat it. He was saving it to have with "them" when they came.

Nighttime came, and the old gentleman went to his room to retire. But first he knocked on his landlady's door and said,

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

"Promise to wake me when they come."
It was his birthday and he was 91.

HIS LANDLADY

DEAR ABBY: My husband was the "quiet type"—the last person in the world anyone would suspect capable of infidelity. Nevertheless he was.

I caught him with his girlfriend right in our own bed when I came home unexpectedly from a trip.

After I filed for divorce, three of my neighbors told me that for the last year they had seen this young woman entering and leaving my home many times after I had left for work. I wanted to scream. "Why didn't you tell me? You could have spared me all this!"

Then I realized that they probably thought they were doing "the right thing" by keeping quiet. Abby, had I been told, perhaps it could have been ironed out by counseling; or just knowing would have caused me to file for divorce and be spared the humiliation of walking in on such a scene.

THE LAST TO KNOW
DEAR LAST: I would not advise anyone to inform on his neighbors. There is too much margin for error. The word from here is to keep your lip zipped.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is going to be 20 years old next month. I'd like to give him something nice for his birthday. What do you think he'd like?

CAROL
DEAR CAROL: Never mind what he'd like. Give him a tie.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

4-H'ers learn of textiles

Kerrie Walraven, of Sanford, and Francine Huggins, of Altamonte Springs, both members of Seminole County 4-H, recently were selected to represent Florida at the 1st Southern Region Textile Symposium in North Carolina at North Carolina State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Upon completion of the symposium, they received certificates from J. Douglas Galyon, director of public affairs for Guilford Mills, Inc., in Greensboro.

Symposium participants studied fiber identification, yarn testing, design techniques, physical testing and color design. They also toured textile companies to see state-of-the-art techniques and equipment.

The seminars covered the textile industry's history, economic significance, future and career possibilities.

The event was conducted by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and sponsored by Guilford Mills Inc. and textile manufacturing associations.

Walraven is a 4-H volunteer with the Sanford Hawks 4-H Club, and Huggins, 18, is a 10-year-member of Seminole County 4-H.

For more information on Seminole County 4-H, call Shelda Wilkens, 4-H coordinator, at 323-2500, ext. 180.

SCC Chorus now taking new members

SANFORD — The Seminole Community College Community Chorus extends an invitation to prospective new members to join the outstanding choir of mixed voices, beginning on Monday, Sept. 1. Previous choral experience is preferred, but no audition is required.

The chorus is sponsored by the Fine and Performing Arts Department of Seminole Community College, Sanford, in affiliation with the college's Leisure Time Program. College credit is available as is non-credit through the Leisure Time Program.

The chorus was founded in 1973 under the direction of Dr. Burt H. Perinchief, director of choral activities at SCC. Under Perinchief's continued leadership, an extensive repertoire of choral literature has been performed including Handel's "Messiah," Mendelssohn's "Elijah," Haydn's "Creation," and the requiems of Mozart, Brahms, Faure and Duruflé.

The chorus gives two concerts per year, which are free to the public. Brahms' "German Requiem" is scheduled for performance in April of 1990. The 1989 fall concert, which will feature several composers' works, will be presented at the college on Sunday, Nov. 19.

Nineteen singers of the SCC Community Chorus participated in the Warwick Choral Festival in Warwick, England, at the end of July.

As a community chorus, the organization seeks to represent the composition of the Seminole County/Central Florida area according to gender, age, cultural backgrounds, education, musical training and experience. The chorus averages about 75 members.

Chorus members pay a $10 fee to join and purchase their own music for the performances.

Rehearsals are held on Mondays from 7-9:45 p.m. on the stage of the Fine Arts Concert Hall.

Registration for membership may be completed in the administration building of the college prior to the first rehearsal on Sept. 1. Hours of the administration building are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday.

For more information, call Dr. Burt Perinchief at 323-1450, ext. 285.

Ear wax build-up can affect a hearing aid

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there a procedure I can follow to keep wax from forming in my ears? The wax keeps my hearing aid from performing properly, and it's quite annoying.

DEAR READER: The cells of the ear canal produce wax that probably acts to protect the ear from foreign objects, such as insects. Ordinarily, small pieces of wax migrate to the outer portion of the canal and are washed away, thereby avoiding a buildup. A hearing aid, by plugging the ear canal, prevents this. Also, the device tends to push wax deeper into the canal. Eventually, a wax deposit may form; this can interfere with hearing.

Obviously, the wax has to be removed or your loss of hearing will worsen.

Because the wax probably lies deep in the ear canal, it should be professionally removed by either an ear specialist or a family doctor.

To prevent further wax accumulation, I suggest the following:

• Clean your hearing aid regularly and remove the wax that adheres to it.

• Avoid trying to remove ear wax with cotton swabs. The swabs tend to push the wax in deeper inside the ear canal and can accentuate the problem. Also, it's easy to injure the eardrum by introducing objects, even soft swabs, into the ear canal.

• Try using hydrogen peroxide to clean your ears periodically. Empty about a third of a capful of the liquid into the ear canal, wait until it stops fizzing, then wash the residue away. The effervescent peroxide often bubbles wax particles out of the ear.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For years my wife and I have taken oyster-shell calcium 250 milligrams with vitamin D. We recently heard that if your calcium tablet won't dissolve in vinegar in half an hour, it won't enter your system. Our tablets don't dissolve, even if crushed first. Can it be that all the money we've spent has been thrown away?

DEAR READER: Forget what you read. Oyster-shell calcium with vitamin D will dissolve in your system. The vinegar business is nonsense. However, 250 milligrams is not enough for an adult. I suggest you and your wife take 750 milligrams. In this way, you'll be getting enough calcium to do some good. I am

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Today's bidding clearly shows what can happen when there is a lack of partnership confidence. Let us first examine a principle of slam bidding from the viewpoint of the responder. When responder bids two suits as forcing natural bids, and then jump-raises opener beyond game-level as a slam invitation, he is asking a simple question: "Partner, can you stop the opponents from taking two quick tricks in the unbid suit? If so, please bid slam." If that message is clear, what reason or excuse could South put forth for refusing to bid six spades when he held a singleton heart? The answer can be found in South's lame apology. "Sorry, partner, I thought you were playing me for a stronger spade suit when I freely bid two spades over that two-heart overcall." The censors would not let us print North's rejoinder but here is a rule that will serve any partnership well: Do not make arbitrary decisions in violation of what your partner expects of you, even when you think your previous bidding was overdone. In the current instance, South must grit his teeth and bid six spades, relying on his partner to hold A-K of spades. If partner holds only K-x-x of spades, slam will be set, but North will retain partnership confidence for future deals. And perhaps in that event North will in the future be a little more conservative.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 25, 1989

Conditions that contribute to your material security will be more consistent and favorable in the year ahead. Also improvements or an enlargement of your home is likely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep people out of your private affairs who have no place in them or something you want to achieve might be snatched from your grasp. It's better to be safe than sorry. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Two major objectives can be achieved today, but you're not apt to be victorious on your first try. If at first you don't succeed, bow! them over the second time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being obstinate is usually a deficit, but not necessarily to day, if a business arrangement isn't up to your expectations, hold out until you can improve the agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be in for a pleasant surprise today when something you've considered a bum deal begins to look better and better the closer you analyze it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An associate might make an agreement with you today and then, at the last minute, try to renege it for something this person thinks is more advantageous. It won't be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It might be necessary for you to patch up some mistakes a co-worker will make today that will affect you as much. You'll handle it effectively.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you have several choices as to what to do socially today, you'll probably have more fun sticking to what you are familiar with rather than exploring the untested.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This can be meaningful, productive day for you, even though you're not apt to be too methodical or well organized. The secret is to do as much as you can, as well as you can.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be in too big a rush today as you buzz around town. Be cognizant of all the speed limits and don't try to beat the traffic lights before they change.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful today about getting involved with friends in activities where the greater portion of the costs could be borne by you. Make it a democratic day and let everyone share expenses equally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The early part of the day could be a trifle problematic for you, but toward evening, conditions should brighten up considerably. Have a fun night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Plan your day wisely so that you can get your duties and responsibilities out of the way as quickly as possible. Something unexpected but fun might develop later in which you'll want to participate.
