the Church Extension Board shows that, our indebtedness at that time was $1,228.25, $1,028.25 principal and $200 interest. Through the intercession of the Bishop the Board donated to us $900.00 of this indebtedness, the church paying the balance of $328.25....

Thus the Sanford Methodist church became the beneficiary of the Church Extension Board to the amount of $900.00. This statement That this generous Board well deserves the small yearly assessments that are made on the churches throughout the connection. This Boards aids in building thousands of churches. Can more be asked of it here than it has already done for the Sanford Methodist church? Judge ye.

If you have kept up with the figures you have observed that the old church building, with expenses of moving, repairir furniture, improvements, interest on loan, etc., cost, apart from the donation of the Board, approximately $6,000.00.

Gordon Craig is hired by two men, Vall. and Neals, for $10,000 to go south and impersonate Fhilip Henley, ostensibly to save an estate for Henley, who, they say, is in prison. Craig is to take with him a wo-man to impersonate Mrs. Henley, Suspected of burgiary, Craig is cleared by a young woman wandering in the street. She is out of work and hungry. They talk in a restaurant.

She is an actress, descried by her wealthy, drunken husband. She concents to go south with Craig.

Mrs. Bernard is a good woman and will play the part of Mrs. Henley to help Craig. They arrive at the rundown Sienley plantation and are greated by a rough booking overseer.

Coombs, the overseor, and a mysterious negress, Sallis, seem to be the only perand the plantation. Craig is awakd by a shot and finds a man murdered.

Broussard, a groole friend of Coomba, appears. Probing the murder, Craig flad the corpse missing. Mrs. Bernard is really Mrs. Henley. She and Craig determine to fight for her missing husband's estate. She beliaves Henley dead.

Coombs denies Henley is dead and detion Craig, although the latter reveals Mrs. Henley's identity to the overseer. The latter says Henley himself put him ta charge of the plantation.

Mrs. Henley and Craig find Philip Henley's seal ring in the garden. Exploring the house alone, Craig finds a secret basement room.

He is trapped and discovers twg dead bodies. One is the missing corpse, and the other is Coombs. Craig is struck down and is made prisoner by a dark young man, another named Herman and Broussard. Mrs. Henley is also caught.

Craig and the woman are taken aboard a yacht, which sails. The owner and master, the dark young man, calls himself Philip Henley. He tries to win Craig, and the latter feigns friendship for him in order to help the woman.

Mrs. Henley denies the man is her husband. She is locked up is a stateroom, and "Henley" produces papers which seeming-ty support his claim. Craig pretends to join in his filbustering expedition.

I nodded my head, too busily engaged with my own thoughts to give much consideration to his troubles. Still, this situation as revealed by Broussard's complaints would afford us a respite of at least four hours. If this was the creole's watch below, then Herman would keep the deck. Even lying there at anchor those fellows would not leave the crew alone. There was too much at stake, and, besides, there' must still remain a lookout ashore. However, it was a relief to snow that the German had nothing of importance to communicate to Henley, no occasion even to come below. Broussard sank back into a chair, watching the frightened negro hurry back and forth. At last, satisfied that pitiful dejection in her attitude everything available had been produced, the former strode across to the table, jerked out a chair and waved bis hand toward me in invitation to

I drew saide the curtain draping one of the after ports and glanced out, eager for anything to distract attention. Through the clear glass I could see the curve of above line forming the little cove. Just within the foam of the breakers a half dozen men were launching a small boat. I stared at them an instant before realizing what at meant. Then I dropped the curtain.

"The mate is coming aboard." I said swiftly. "You must go to your room! here is the key; lock yourself in and only upon when you hear my voice." "And you"- .

In order to accomplish this it would be necessary to prevent elther the steward or the mate from entering the after cabin. All peril from the negro I distaissed quickly, confident that his knowledge of my standing on board would impet thim to accept any explanation I might make. The facts were clear. Philip Henley was dead, killed while intoxicated, elther accidentally, or for purposes of robbery. And he had been robbed when picked up by the police, nothing to identify him being found. Beyond doubt this half breed brother had dispatched a man north to look him uppossibly to assassinate him if necessary. . The fellow had either done the job, or been anticipated in his purpose. In either case he was present to identify the body and had written at once, inclosing the signet ring as proof. That was the same ring we had (ound in the arbor, and which Vio-la had instantly recognized. An those tuen who had made a tool of me were the robbers. They had found papers and letters which opened before them this scheme of fraud; then, with his residence address, using his keys, they had learned everything necessary for the completion of their plans. A copy the judge's will must have been in Henley's possession, and, no doubt, some inwyer's letter, describing the situation, received since the departure of his wife. Apparently everything two clever crooks needed to know was in their possession. All they needed to do was pull the strings, using a figurehead to represent Philip Henley. That was the part for which I was chosen. They had to construct a lie in order to interest me, yet that was comparatively easy, and there was a strong probability of success but for peculiar, conditions of which they could know nothing. The half breed had never been mentioned. He was the monkey wrench thrown unexpectedly into their well offed machine. Yet even without bim, the reappearance of Philip Henley's wife was sufficient to cause disaster.

JAPAN DECLARES WAR.

Army and Navy Ordered to Strike at Once.

The emperor of Japan has declared war on Germany. This action was taken at the expiration of the time limit of Japan's ultimatum to Germany demanding the surrender of Kino-Chow.

The Japanese government has ordered the beginning of operations on land and sea.

The imperial rescript declaring war upon Germany has been issued. It officially inaugurates hostilities in the far east as a result of Germany's failure to reply to the Japanese ultimatum.

The sunlight sfreaming in through the upper transom told me the sun was dipping into the west. If we were to get away when night came there were many things to consider first. Especistly was I obsessed now with a desire to overbaul the captain's papers and secure those which would be of benefit. We must possess more proof than the garrulous talk of the second mate, and surely that proof would be discovered in the after cabin. The noise of the steward's dish washing had ceased, and cautious investigation disclosed him sound asleep, curled up like a dog, on the deck. Assured as to this, 1 ventured up the companion stairs and indulged in a glance forward. Except for a group of sallors doing some sall patching in the stade of the chart house, no one was visible. The vessel rocked gently, and far forward there was a sound of hammering. The mate would be there overseeing the job, whatever it might be. Surely no better opportunity than this could be given. I stole back, silent and unobserved. listened an instant to Broussard's an'-an' a package o' sea biscuit, sah. steady breathing, then unlocked the captain's door and entered his cabin. His wicked eyes, blazing with hate. glared at me as I approached, and, inspired by some sudden feeling of sympathy, I bent over and removed the gag from his mouth. The result was an outburst of profanity, bristling with threats. But these as instantly ceased as 1 picked up the cloth again.

sway was the rumble of thunder, echoing across the open sea. The storm was evidently coming up slowly from the east, as all the western sky was clear and streaked with golden red. Then a sailor came down the companion stairs, his oliskins rustling, and pounded on the second mate's door. "All hands, Mr. Broussard!"

There was a muffled response, and the creole, buttoning his jacket as he passed, followed the other on deck. A moment later 1 heard the slow wrob of the engines and glanced out to note the shore line slipping past into the gloom. The Sea Gull was under way.

It would be some time yet-fifteen or twenty minutes at the best-before I dared attempt to carry out my pin of escape. In spite of the overspreading cloud and steady rainfall daylight lingered in the west, and a spectral glow hung above the ocean. There were preliminaries to be attended to. and I was eager to be busy.

The steward had aroused from his nap, and 1 watched him lower the table, and spread it with a white cloth. Now the distant clatter of dishes proved him to be in the pantry. He could be dealt with there even to better novantage than in the cabin, and, noncombatant.as he undoubtedly was; I felt it safer to place him beyond power to create any alarm. The task confronting me was far too aerious to leave our rear unguarded. I slipped silently along the short passageway. and, watching his back closely, investigated the lock of the pantry door. It was of the spring variety, easily, det to fasten, and could not be operated from the inside, As I pressed in the catch there was a clicking sound. which caused the negro to turn around. the whites of his eyes gleaming oddly. movement as I threw open the drawers of the desk and began handling their contents. For some time I discovered nothing of special interest. I came upon one securely locked. I tried key after key before from Henley's aquirming that I must be drawing near the goal. The first paper touched was a copy of the will, and a little further rummaging put me into possession of various documents which I believed from a curvery glance at their contents were of utmost value. These I hastily transferred to my coat pocket, making sure I had the original letter descriptive of Philip Henley's death, as well as the copy of a memorandum which the half broed had evidently drawn up for the conventence of his lawyers.

"I think I've got your number." I said finally.

"You've got to get away first," he sneered defantly, "and you'll not find that so easy. My turn will come vet. you spy, and then you'll learn how I bite."

I laughed, feeling no mercy.

"All in good time, friend. I think you have had your inning. Now it's mine. So you are Charles Henley?" He did not answer.

"The illegitimate son of Judge Henley and a negro mother. That's a clevor forgery, that paper of legal adoption, I admit. Must have had legal advice for that. What did you pay the lawyers?"

He stared at me 'with compressed line.

"Not ready to confess yet? Well, you will be. By the way, who was that Plerre who wrote telling you of Philip's death? Not Vonique, was it?"

"You devil!" he burst forth, tortured beyond resistance. His teeth ground together savagely, and he burst into a string of oaths.

"That's enough." And I got to my feet. "I see I'll have to gag you again." . I replaced the gag and took a survey of the cabin to make sure all was secure. Nothing had occurred in the outer cabin during my absence, but the growing shadows evidenced the approach of twilight. In those waters night came quickly. Locking the captain's door, I entered my own-statefoom and sat down on the lower berth to wait, leaving my door slightly ajar. The cabin grew constantly darker, although outside, through the open port. I could still distinguish gleams of light along the water surface and the beights of the island. Herman came down and entered his stateroom, but without closing the door. He remained but a moment or two and then burried back on deck. Suddenly a gust of wind blew in through the port, and if began to rain gently, but in huge drops. Far.

"That will be all, Louis. Now listen E lay quiet, but with glaring to me. I am going to shut this door eyes following my every and lock you in. I'll be on board here for an hour yet, and if you utter so much as a whimper I'll come down

There was a small telltale compass fastened to a beam over the table. I unscrewed this without difficulty and dropped ft into my pocket. I found one,"a fisherman's slicker, and wrapped her in it. It was a world too big, but I tightened the belt and turned up the skirts, so she managed to walk. I led her forward slowly, so that the flapping of the oliskins against the stair rall would not be hard. The steady patter of rain on the deck planks drowned what little noise we made. and as we emerged into the bood a gust of wind drove the moisture into our faces, I could feel my heart thump. yet it was more because of her proximity than any excitement of adventure. So far as I could perceive, peering out into the storm with hand shading my eyes, the way was clear, and, bidding her stoop low, we slipped back along the narrow deck passage into the shadow cast by the boat.

"Now." I said, "step on my knee, and I'll help you over. Dou't. hurry-only be quiet. That's it. Now just let me

Had Good Luck

E. C. Chittenton, P. M. Elder, G. W. Spencer and several other fishermen have returned from Coronado Beach where they have been enjoying the fishing for several days. They brought back some fine sea bass and say they caught seven fine ones last Friday. Mack Moye, Billie Wessner and several other Sanford boys are over there and there will be but few fish left in the ocean. Mr. Chittenton brought home several fine ones and presented the editor with a ten pound bass that helped materially to reduce tomorrow (Wednesday) evening. the high cost of living, as we expect to eat it for the next week. - -

Copy of London Mirror E. K. Foster presented The Her-Friday night, Sept. 11th at eight ald with a copy of the London Mirror today which graphically describes the war situation in England and Europe.' Mr. Foster's mother is in England now and also his sister and his sister's husband is in Belgium as war correspondent of the Daily Mirror. Mr. Foster says it is difficult to hear from his relatives as everythig is censored and they are not allowed to write about the war situation. Although he is naturally worried about his relatives he is glad to know that they are safe and sound this far.

The Hospital and the Medical Missionary as Helpers in the Missionary Work, Miss Cora Lee Hamrick.

We always have these missionary programs every fifth Sunday and they are strways enjoyed by all, as this program is a little different from the others. We had quite a good attendance and after a few remarks by our president the meeting was closed by all repeating our Mizpah.

T. C. Taliaferro, the banker from Tampa, Fla., whose car ran over and killed a young lady and seriously wounded her sister last Monday in the White Mountains, was today arrested and held to bail in $20,000, which he readily gave. Mr. Taliaferros claims that he was turning out of the road to avoid another car and did not see the two ladies until his car had struck them. He is prostrated by the accident and his invalid wife, who was with him, is reported in a serious condition resulting from shock and grief.

There is a question this season ever present with the growers of fancy stuff as to whether the people of the north will feel like buying celery and lettuce, since they are classed among the luxuries but this will be left to the desires of the groat American public which has the reputation of usually getting what it wants, regardless of financial conditions or the price.

With sweet potatoes bringing 60 cents a peck in the market today in the heart of the sweet potato country the grower should not worry about the war in Europe or any other disturbance.

Now With the Movies.

The editor of The Herald received a card from Chas. W. Ritchie yesterday in which he states that be and his wife, Mabel Paige are now with the movies, being engaged by the Lubin Company of Jacksonville and that they are doing fine. It is to be hoped that Manager Herndon of the Star Theatre can obtain some of the Lubin films with Mabel and Charlie Ritchie as the stars, for both of them are very popular in Sanford. That other old favorite, Ed Lawrence is also with the movies and it would seem that the day of the smaller companies has passed and all our old favorites have "Jined out" in the movies. At least we can still enjoy the dainty Mabel, the versatile Ed Lawrence and the enappy Charlie Ritchie on the screen, even if we cannot have the pleasure of their living

Servian Soldiers Are Brave Fighters

Servia maintains only 36,000 men in times of peace, but she has mobilized all of her male population trained to hear arms, and the number is 324,000 men. The Servian army is largely composed of veterans with a splendid morale and a record of first rate achievement in the Balkan wars.
