Collapsed Lung Is Seldom Fatal

DEAR DR. LAMB - Last year X rays showed I had a collapsed lung. I recovered rom this and about a month later the same thing happened to my other lung.

The doctor explained to me that an operation would correct this but said he did not favor an operation for me now because the accumulation of air in my chest wasn't much and that I could outgrow this whole problem. I am a 24-year-old, 6 foot, 135 pound male.

What's bothering me the most, Dr. Lamb, is that I am scared to death. Anyone who has had a collapsed lung can tell you that their lungs and chest hurt for a long time afterwards. It wasn't until about three months ago that my lungs feit all right again. Now I am right back again where I started from.

What do you suggest I do? What will happen if both my ungs collapse together? Exactly what kind of operation is the doctor talking about? Is it successful? What are the risks, should I seek other medical opinions? What causes this problem?

The air then accumulates between the lungs and the chest wall, giving you air in this space which is normally completely filled with the lung tissue. As the air accumulates between the chest wall and the lung, it forces the lung to collapse. The little broken blister on the surface of the lung - then heals, sealing the leak and then the air between the lung and the chest wall is absorbed as the lung expands. Usually only a part of the lung actually collapses. The rest of the lung may continue to function normally.

These little blister formations are commonly at the tip of the lungs. Fortunately, because of scarring these areas often cause no further problems. The best way of judging whether or not future attacks are likely to occur is by careful review of X ray studies.

There are two different kinds of operations that are commonly done. One just cuts away the area of the lung where the blister formations are located. Another prevents excessive collapsing of the lung by literally scarring the surface of SIDE GLANCES the lungs so it becomes at-DEAR READER - You have tached to the surface of the had recurrent pneumothorax chest obliterating much of the which means air inside the cavity for air to accumulate in. Federal Election Commission Restores Funds To Candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal subsidies are flowing to presidential primary candidates once again. A two-month shutdown resulting from a Supreme Court order ended Friday when a reconstituted Federal Election Commission certified $3.2 million to nine candidates barely an hour after President Ford swore in the six FEC commissioners at a White House ceremony.

For the candidates, the resumption of federal matching funds means a chance to pay off campaign debts, order more media advertising, boost staffs and tackle all the other campaign tasks that cost money. Candidates had been counting on the federal money for onethird or more of their primary election budgets. While the freeze was on, the primary campaigns of Sen. Henry M. Jackson and Fred Harris faded for lack of funds.

Ford On Campaign Swing

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford, his campaign treasury richer by more than a million dollars, is embarking on a swing through Western states where Ronald Reagan is believed to be particularly strong.

Ford was bound Saturday for Medford, Ore., where Republican voters hold their presidential primary next Tuesday, and was moving on from there to California and Nevada.

As now mapped out, the President's trip will last four days and be his most ambitious tour of the primary season. It may turn out to be even longer. Press Secretary Ron Nessen acknowledged Friday that consideration is being given to stopping in another state - presumably Ohio - before returning to Washington next week.

Wiretap Versions Vary

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's version of a 1969 program to wiretap reporters and national security aides varies from accounts by other officials, including resigned President Richard M. Nixon. Kissinger, for example, says it was up to the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to monitor the taps and decide when to turn them off. "It was my perception that Mr. Hoover would make this on the basis of his invest perience," Kissinger said in a sworn deposition released Friday. The deposition was filed in connection with a lawsuit by former Kissinger aide Morton Halperin.

Cancer Victim Loses Battle

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - For 31/2 years, Linda Joy Hardy fought terminal cancer, remarried and was divorced, was arrested on a drug charge and searched for a home for her children. She drew national attention more than a year ago when she appealed for "a good family to take my kids, to love them and keep them together" after her death. Linda Hardy died Friday, less than two months before her 34th birthday, so weakened by cancer that she was unable to fight off a common cold that turned to pneumonia and put her into a coma.

Tax Relief Plan Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans who complain about the complexity of filing an income-tax return may have some relief in sight. But it's going to cost them money. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told his colleagues Friday that the best way to bring simplicity to taxpaying is to make it more difficult for taxpayers to itemize their deductions. The committee agreed and approved the first step proposed by Long: a cut in the deduction allowed for local and state gasoline taxes.

Tombstones Made To Order

CHICAGO (AP) - Elmo Williams makes instant tombstones -- "while you wait" -- for persons who might be in a hurry to see before they die what's going to be on top of their grave.

"Before you go, call Elmo's," says one of the slogans printed on the back of Williams' bowling shirt and painted on the truck he uses to deliver the markers to the cemetery.

"I can turn out a made-to-order tombstone in about 90 minutes," he says.

Exxon Plans Stock Split

By The Associated Press

The country's biggest company was among corporations holding their annual meetings this past week, but not everyone got good news at their yearly gathering. Exxon Corp., however, announced plans for a two-forone stock split which would increase the number of its shares to 500 million and presumably cut the stock price enough to encourage wider ownership.

Exxon stock closed at $101.50 a share the day of the anncuncement and stood at $100.75 by week's end. The stock split measure has yet to be approved by shareholders.

Ford May Seek Busing Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford may seek legislation prohibiting the courts from ordering city-wide school busing but allowing them to impose busing only on those schools directly affected by past segregation. "This would very severely limit busing," said a White House official involved in studying the plan. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi probably would seek similar rules from the Supreme Court if he decides to use the Boston desegregation case as a vehicle for raising the busing issue before the court.

School Advocates Win Tenuous $ Victory

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Public school advocates have won a tenuous victory in the down-to-the-wire legislative battle over increased education spending with House passage of a $37.5-million supplemental appropriations bill.

But the Friday victory was qualified, as the measure was made contingent on passage of a 10-cent-a-Tifth boost in liquor taxes or improved sales tax collections. And critics said the Senate probably will defeat any spending increase tied to a tax hike.

Meanwhile, Gov. Reubin Askew warned that he may veto the school-funding portion of the state budget unless the version hammered out next week by a House-Senate conference committee comes close to the amoun proposed by the House.

Transmission Firm Charged

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - A circuit court jury has ruled that two Jacksonville outlets of Mister Transmission violated Florida's deceptive and unfair trades practices

The six-member jury reached the verdict Friday night against the outlets, which are part of a chain of 45 automatic transmission repair shops based in Nashville, Tenn. The jury was not asked to assess damages, but only to decide if Judge Henry F. Martin Jr. should issue a permanent injunction prohibiting the firm from violating

Inmate Outings Halted

AVON PARK (AP) - Reacting to escapes during Jaycee-sponsored outings, officials at the Avon Park Corrections Institution have halted such outside activities, a Jaycee spokesman says. Jaycee spokesman Louie Ballentine said Friday that the suspension temporarily ends all activities away from the minimum-security compound for the 115-member Jaycee inmate chapter. The halt came as prison officials continued their search for two prisoners, including a convicted murderer, who staged getaways last Saturday in separate Jayceesponsored outings.

Old Law May Be Repealed

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - A bill to repeal old Florida laws prohibiting adultery and cohabitation appears headed for passage in the Senate Judiciary-Criminal Committee, the panel's chairman says. Sen. Dan Scarborough, DJacksonville, predicted Friday following a hearing on the bill that the panel will approve the repeals next week.

The only thing holding up passage, he said, is a demand from some committee members for assurances that the legislation would not effect laws against child molesting and pornography.

Florida Loses $171,539

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Federal officials who had threatened to withhold air pollution control grants due Florida because of $700,000 in past accounting errors have agreed to a negotiated deduction of $171,539.

State Environmental Regulation Secretary Jay Landers said he was pleased with the agreement, announced Friday in a letter from Jack Ravan, regional director of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Ravan said the $171,539 will be deducted from the $194,750 in grants still due Florida from fiscal year 1975. He said $23,211 balance will be sent to the state soon.

Genetic Research Approved

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) - A controversial type of genetic research, capable of creating new life forms and considered potentially dangerous by its critics, has received the go ahead from the University of Michigan Regents.

The Regents approved a faculty committee report Friday which recommended that recombinant DNA research be conducted at the university as long "as it is submitted to appropriate controls." The Regents' action includes authorization for more than $300,000 to equip three laboratories with security systems to prevent newly created disease organisms from escaping.

Henry Kissinger The Wrong Target

In his nearly three years as Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger has faced many domestic travails, particularly after his honeymoon with Congress and the American people began to fade in the fall of 1974.

In spite of the attacks on his tenure, which ranged from his efforts at detente to his style of administration, Mr. Kissinger managed to retain his job and perform with a reasonable degree of effectiveness because he always has enjoyed the unflagging support of his boss — the President of the United States.

Perhaps this is why the conservative wing of the Republican Party suddenly has unleashed a full-scale anti-Kissinger blitzkrieg in the Oval Office.

In the extreme short-range view, the conservatives' tactic is understandable if not applaudable. If they succeed they will have half a loaf, even if they cannot remove President Ford himself from office.

Conservative columnists and other pundits established the tone of the attack some time ago by calling Mr. Kissinger the "sorcerer's apprentice" in foreign policy under the previous ad-ministration. Under President Ford they contend that he has become the sorcerer himself.

The anti-Kissinger campaign even has penetrated into Mr. Ford's ranks of advisers, with key Republican congressional leaders asking the President to fire Kissinger in order to defuse Mr. Reagan's criticism of U.S. foreign policy.

To do so would be folly. Imagine, for example the thoughts of a friendly foreign leader if he saw Mr. Ford act with such short-term political expediency. The United States resolve in all areas of its foreign policy would come into question.

Or imagine the thoughts of our enemies as they received the signal that detente has been abandoned, and that they could expect only a policy of confrontation with the United States for at least the remainder of the presidential election season.

At home the removal of Mr. Kissinger for what would amount to a purely political and short-range tactical reason would be a disaster for Mr. Ford. By doing so he would be admitting that Mr. Kissinger has indeed been setting U.S. foreign policy and he would be showing American people in general that he is a weak and indecisive executive who can be easily panicked.

Mr. Kissinger can be applauded for many of his efforts and faulted for some. But Americans should not lose sight of the fact that he only executes policy approved by the President. That is where the critics of U.S. foreign affairs should focus their attention.

In California there will be a referendum in June on state requirements which could eliminate nuclear generation of power there. In Vermont, the state has assumed some control in the health and environmental aspects of nuclear power

When it comes to funding social programs, Seminole County Commissioners suddenly turn into proverbial penny pinchers.

As such, they already are putting their infamous squeeze on programs that are seeking dollars. The first to feel the pinch this year was Youth Services Inc., a non-profit corporation juvenile assistance organization which last year provided assistance to 249 youngsters. As a result of a commission decision last week, the entire program stands a chance of going down the tube.

Eugene D. Minietta, the company's executive director, asked for $6,000 in local matching funds in order to qualify for a $10,665 federal grant. Minietta received only $4,000 last year, so the penny-pinching commission awarded him the same amount this year, leaving him $2,000 short. Well, he's launched a drive in the private sector to try to come up with the needed funds. The commission's philosophy is that the state or federal government lures the county into social programs, then reduces the state or federal commitment while raising the number of local dollars required to maintain the program.

Soviets are not without similar scandals. That they are not, after nearly six decades of totalitarian rule over the lives of the Russian people, suggests at least that the fault lies not in a country's political or economic system but in just plain old human nature.

According to "Literaturnaya Gazeta" (The Literary Gazette), 13 Soviet officials have been convicted of fleecing the state of some 365,000 rubles - about $500,000 - to build a "disgusting dolce vita" hideaway on the Volga, replete with frescos, marbles, plush carpets, free-running vodka and sexually compliant "hostesses." members of the commission except Sid Vihlen Jr, who vowed to work for the program and try to get it funded by a June 1 deadline. Minietta and his volunteers worked 249 cases last year. Of that number, only 12 youths were "repeaters," or youngsters who went out and got into trouble a second time after counseling. If Minietta's unable to secure funding in the private sector, he is scheduled to reappear before the commission before the June 1 deadline, which is the day the agency has to come up with the match money - or lose the grant.

The county commission's message for the year is cut taxes and increase services. No services are more desperately needed than those which aid the county's youth.

Just one errant troublemaker who sees the erro of his ways and changes would be a profitable return on the entire grant. One youngster turned from a life of crime would justify the entire expenditure. That, truly, would be an increase in services on the part of county government.

Meeting On Islands Set

OSLO, Norway (AP) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger planned a meeting Saturday with Prime Minister Odvar Nordli on Norway's dispute with the Soviets over the Spitzbergen islands in the Arctic Ocean. Kissinger, who remained here after a North Atlantic Treaty Organization ministerial meeting that ended Friday, also planned lunch with Norway's King Olav V. Norway claims its continental shelf under the Barents Sea extends to Spitzbergen, giving it territorial control over the sea floor and the islands

America's concern is the possibility of unexplored oil fields in the Spitzbergens. The Norwegian government has said it will not permit oil drilling in the area until 1978. Meanwhile, Norway has been trying to negotiate jurisdictional boundary lines in the Spitzbergens with the Soviet Union, which once claimed the southernmost of the islands. Most of the Spitzbergen's 3,500 residents are Soviet citizens.

The news conference winding up the NATO meeting was dominated by questions on Kissinger's future. The secretary of state - who has stated his wish to retire at the end of the year - said it would be fruitless to have more discussion of his private plans.

France Offers Peace Troops

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Following declarations of support by Arab states for the Moslem-leftists in Lebanon's civil war, France has offered to send in its own peace-keeping troops. French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, on a tour of the United States, told foreign reporters in New Orleans Friday that France could send several regiments of peace-keeping soldiers to Lebanon within 48 hours. The reporters quoted Giscard as saying he had discussed the plan with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and with the Syrian government, which he said expressed support for the plan.

Deadly Typhoon Weakens

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) - Typhoon Olga weakened to a tropical storm Saturday after causing at least 30 deaths, most of them in Manila. The Red Cross confirmed 23 of the deaths, most of them by drowning and electrocution in flood-stricken areas in the capital. It said reports from the provinces were delayed because power lines were down. Weathermen said Typhoon Pamela, with 112-mile-anhour winds, was expected to reach the Philippines in three or four days.

Beirut Cease-Fire Holding

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Small arms clashes and sniper fire were reported in Beirut's commercial district Saturday but an undeclared cease-fire in the long civil war appeared to be taking hold. Christians shelled a television station controlled by Moslem leftists, causing some damage, but the station remained on the air. Officials said Syrian-commanded forces clashed with Palestinian guerillas in the Moslem sector, leaving two

Well, Since You Asked. . . Q. How is the home field advantage determined for the American League playoffs? If the A's and Red Sox win their respective divisions this year, where do they open the playoff series - Ray St. Germain, Walnut Creek, Calif.

They would open with the first two games in Oakland and the final three, if necessary, in Boston. This is the year to open in the western division. It's done on a rotating basis. Chuck Tanner and Darrell Johnson would like to be as positive about their teams'. College faculty that gave them success as you seem to be.

Q. Has any college ever had as many first round draft choices as Michigan State in 1967? As I recall, four of the first eight were B. Smith, Washington, Lee and Webster. - John Liddle, Riverside, Calif.

The four were Bubba Smith (No. 1), Clint Jones (No. 2), George Webster (5th) and Gene Washington (Minnesota's choice in the No. 8 slot). But in 1968, the University of Southern California topped the Spartans with five picks in the NFL's first round: Ron Yary of Minnesota, Mike Hull of Chicago, Earl McCullouch of when the Innkeepers blew a 5-0 Detroit, Tim Rossovich of Philadelphia and Mike Taylor of Pittsburgh.

Q. Was Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates ever a football player, and where? - T.D., Sharon, Pa.

The 6-5, 220-pound slugging outfielder was an outstanding running back at Courter Tech High School in Cincinnati but suffered a severe knee injury which ended his grid career and even turned off baseball scouts. He was only a 14th round selection in the 1970 free agent draft. He still makes his off-season home in Cincinnati.

Q. Was the three-second lane in basketball widened because of Bill Russell or Wilt Chamberlain? - Walter Champion, A. Anderson 3b 3 0 1 Oakland, Calif.

Neither was initially responsible. The lane was first widened during the George Mikan era with the Minneapolis Lakers in the Maxwell c late 1940s because the big center dominated the game with his bulk around the basket. It went from six to 12 feet. It later was furthered widened from 12 to 16 feet when the "dribble brains" as wheaton sf the owners were called - became concerned about Wilt Cham- Alexander p berlain's prowess inside.

Q. What is going to happen to the ABA draft of college basketball players? - T.P., Austin, Tex.

Commissioner Dave Debusschere has advocated that the ABA, reduced to six teams and desperately awaiting merger, hold off on a collegiate draft. Fis owners have been deivided about going along with him. If three adamant NBA owners - Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles, Paul Snyder of Buffalo and Bill Wirtz of Chicago - relent on their anti-ABA stance, the issue becomes

Q. Is it true that a major league manager came off the bench or dugout and, having used all his pitchers, pitched the final inning? If so, who were the teams? and what day and date did this occur? - Norman Taylor, Oakland, Calif.

This is for the history buffs. On June 5, 1929, in Boston, during HARNESS RACING a game in which the Chicago White Sox were eventually clobbered, 17-2, Chisox Manager Lena Blackburne's patience finally QUALIFIES ran out in the eighth inning. With two out in bottom of the 3th, the Red Sox had rapped Dan Dugan for eight straight hits. The 43year-old skipper than took the mound for the first time in his career; Boston's Jack Rothrock promptly rapped out a ninth consecutive hit but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a double. Inning over. Exit Blackburne as a pitcher.

Q. Name five ways, please, in which a man can reach first base without hitting the ball. - George S., New York, N.Y. This is one of those trick trivia questions. One of the more persistent rumors heard on CB channels is that the FCC is planning to prohibit the use of beams or directional base station antennas for Class D

The rumor is false and couldn't be further from the thinking of the FCC's top CB engineer. How or where it started is irrelevant. But we've received angry protests from CBers in a dozen states. California, Michigan, Florida and Iowa CBers were first to voice their fears and objections. The worry is for "Actually, I'm for absolutely no limitations on antennas at all, except for the accepted and necessary height restrictions," says Charles Higginbotham, head of the FCC's safety and special radio services bureau in Washington "In fact, I think that wider use of beams by CBers would improve the clutter and congestion caused by the growing number of new stations."

The reason why a beam antenna is so much more effective than the standard ground plane or omnidirectional antenna is that a beam concentrates the power in one direction only.

A base station equipped with a beam reaches out and "hears" further. While a ground plane receives signals and radiates power in a 360-degree radius, a beam doesn't waste energy by spreading it out in areas that aren't needed. It doesn't pick up stations (and static) from the side and back.

The disadvantages of a directional antenna are that they cost more than a ground plane and usually require a heity directional rotor, though some new models come with an electronic switch that allows them to be "pointed" without actually turning.

Because of the added efficiency, the FCC requires that no part of a directional antenna exceed the height of 20 feet above the ground or structure on which it is mounted. For ground planes, the height limitation is 60

And here's where the FCC runs into problems. "We find a lot of CBers using beams that are mounted over the height restriction," Higginbotham says. "We issue violations whenever we can." But, since many CBers use a ground plane to stand by on and then switch to a beam for distant or hard-to-reach stations, it's often hard for the FCC to enforce the height limitations

"They tell us that they use the beam only to receive," says Higginbotham. "And, unless we catch them actually transmitting with an over-height beam, we can't do much

Q. Does the FCC have a system in giving out call letters or does it simply issue them at random? Michael Hervey, Galena, Ill.)

A. The FCC issues them by computer, allocating call signs sequentially as the applications roll in. Because of the tremendous flood of license applications - which has just about used up the millions of possible three-letter and four-number cominations - the FCC has now added a fourth letter prefix to new CB licenses.

Q. I'm ready to get into CB radio and I want to buy the best. But I don't know whether I should go SSB or not. Also, I don't know whether I should wait until the FCC allots new channels. What's your advice? - Henry Hayden, Long Beach, Miss.

A. First, I recommend you buy a set that has both AM and SSB, if you can afford the extra $80 to $100 it costs. While only 15 per cent of CB operators now have it, SSB has more power over AM, is more readable and is clearly the wave of the future. Don't worry about the extra frequencies. When they come, your set will still be very usable and with both modes, you'll have lots of flexibility.

Q. How can I protect my mobile CB from getting ripped off? I can't afford a burglar alarm and I don't like the wiring that's required for a sliding mount. - K.M., Sacramento, Cal.

A. Then try the special pick-proof lock mount manufactured by the Shur-Lok Co., of Hutchins, Texas. It costs about $15 and allows a permanent dash or hump mount that can't be pried loose. The firm also makes the "Flip Flop" antenna mount that folds into the trunk of your car, handy for those automatic car washes as well as for security.

Q. I'm a truck driver who works the east coast. I hear that if you can prove you're a trucker, you can get Channel 23A put in your radio and use the extra frequency to talk to truckers on CB. Is that right? - James Talbert. Trenton, N.J.

A. Another false rumor. Channel 23A, or the next frequency above the regular CB band, is not yet allocated to CB operators and if the FCC catches you using it, they'll 🕏 down -- literally stuck in slow- CB lingo for message received come to the coffee break, acissue a violation. Stick with Channel 19, the legal channel used by most truckers. (We welcome your questions on CB or related mat-

Senate May Not Revive Issue 'Sunshine' Bill Is Stymied

By ED PRICKETT Herald Staff Writer

Florida Senate President-Designate Lew Brantley predicts the Bob Hattaway-sponsored amendment to the Sunshine Law will not be considered during the two weeks remaining in this year's legislative session.

Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, pushed through the House a measure which would allow elected officials to meet in secret as long as there wasn't a quorum. By an 84-25 vote the Hattaway amendment cleared the House two weeks ago.

Before it can become law, howe er, the amendment must get approval from the Senate and the signature of Governor Reubin Askew. Opponents of the bill say it nullifies Florida's open meetings law. "I've talked it over with the governor, and I agree it's a very dangerous bill. You could kill the real benefits of the Sunshine Law," Brantley said. Brantley anticipates only "corrective" legislation will emerge from the Senate during its closing days. Brantley said he does not anticipate a vote on the Hattaway measure this year. Hattaway said his major opposition to the bill has been the news media. However, two fellow members of the Seminole County Legislative Delegation oppose the Hattaway bill. State Rep. Vince Fechtel, R-Leesburg, voted in opposition during debate on the House floor. And State Sen. Lori Wilson, I-Merritt Island, says if and when the bill reaches the Senate she will oppose it. "The crux of the matter is there is no real violation of the Sunshine Law when less than a quorum gets together," Ms. Wilson says. She wen on to say that the public "knows what the law is all about" and that the Hattaway amendment is 'unnecessary. Her contention is that the issue centers on intent She says public officials may meet without notifying the press as long as there's no intent to discuss public business out of purview of the citizens. Fechtel contended the bill would make it virtually impossible to prove that public officials intended to avoid public notice, or access, when than a quorum meets to discuss public business. Under present guidelines, the Sunshine Law says all meetings attended by elected officials must be open to the general public or its representative, the news media.

To meet in secret opens the door to a charge of violation of the law, which Hattaway says is loosely worded and results in charges filed by state attorneys. Hattaway's contention is that no convictions stem from these charges.

Thus, public officials must pay huge sums of money to defend themselves against a law which is difficult to enforce.

Though Hattaway contends his measure would strengthen the law, opponents say his amendment not only weakens the law as it's presently written - it would destroy it. The governor has been quoted as saying he will not sign the Hattaway measure if it reaches the Senate floor and is passed.
