Gorbachev: Worst Passed

U.S. Doctor Says More Radiation Deaths Inevitable

MOSCOW (UPI) — The American surgeon treating victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster said today that some patients had suffered irreversible damage and further deaths were "unavoidable."

Dr. Robert Gale, an expert in bone marrow transplants for radiation victims, told a news conference that the total number of those affected could also rise substantially depending "on further calculations of radiation exposure."

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, ending more than 18 days of silence on the accident, said in a 26-minute televised speech Wednesday night that nine people had died and 292 were hospitalized.

Gorbachev noted the seriousness of the accident 600 miles from Moscow by saying, "We encountered in reality such a sinister force as nuclear energy that has escaped control."

"It is possible to say today that the worst has passed. The most serious consequences have been averted," said Gorbachev, who sat at a desk and spoke in unusually short sentences. "Of course the end is not yet."

Gale said only 19 of 35 people suffering high radiation exposure were given bone marrow transplants because the others had "irreversible damage to other organs," including the liver, lungs, stomach and intestines.

He said 28 of the 35 were still alive, but added, "We know additional deaths are unavoidable." All the victims he knew of were in Moscow hospitals.

He said it would take "many months" to evaluate the success of the treatment and years to evaluate the full consequences of the nuclear accident.

Gale, a Los Angeles physician who was sent through arrangements made by American industrialist Armand Hammer, said the treatment of the 35 seriously exposed victims was already "well advanced" when he arrived six days after the accident.

Until a government announcement

Monday, Soviet officials had maintained that only two men were dead and 18 people were in serious condition from the Ukrainian reactor disaster that began with an explosion and fire on April 28.

Gale said aid for the victims had come from 15 countries and told reporters that Soviet officials had agreed that he could publish his medical findings in Western journals.

He Died With His Boots On

Sanford Cowboy Remembered

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford cowboy Lionel "Buddy" Stokes Appleby died in the saddle with his boots on. The way he would have wanted it.

Appleby, 66, was riding herd as foreman on the Tabor Ranch near Lake Jesup at about 1:20 p.m. Tuesday when he collapsed in the saddle and died, according to fellow cowboys Don Fortner of Lake Mary and Mike Sinocchi of Orlando.

Fortner and Sinocchi told Seminole County sheriff's deputy Vicki Morris that as soon as 66-year-old Appleby slipped from the saddle they rode over to him, but he was unresponsive.

Appleby's friend and fellow Sanford rancher Nancy Engebretsen, who has known Appleby for about six years, said that he would have wanted to die with his boots on.

"He's one of the lucky few who got to go the way he wanted to go," Mrs. Engebretsen said. "I hope that's the way I go."

"He knew a lot about cows. He was always willing to help you," she said. "He'd come on real strong, like he didn't give a damn about cows, but cows were his whole heart."

Sanford's Roy Barrow, 73, who as livestock buyer developed a friendship with Appleby, which spanned two decades, said Appleby got his wish, to die working on the open prairie. But there was a second half of the cowboy's wish that couldn't be, Barrow said.

"Just dig a hole and roll me in it and forget it. Don't give me no roses when I'm gone," Appleby had told his friend when in the past they had talked about death. "Of course, we couldn't do that," Barrow said. And Appleby won't be forgotten either.

"Don't make an angel out of him," Barrow said. "Make him a friend of the community and a man of his word. He was a great man. You could trust Buddy with anything. He had his own ways and he'd tell you what he thought. His head was as hard as a brick. Buddy was a great friend to help and a good cowboy.

"He loved it. He loved working with cattle. This is a big loss to the neighborhood, especially to the people he worked with and for."

Mrs. Engebretsen said Appleby was a mason as well as a cowpoke, but he preferred poking cows to laying brick.

Osteen rancher C.W. Beck Sr., who worked with Appleby often over the years said that within the last few years Appleby had abandoned masonry for cowpoking. Beck called Appleby a mighty nice person and said he was from an old pioneer family.

Barrow said he believes Appleby, who was a Sanford native, got a late start as a cowboy, probably as a sideline during the Depression. He found

Attorney Says

Custodian 'Set-Up' In Marijuana Case

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

The lawyer for a Lake Mary High School custodian charged with selling marijuana said Wednesday his client was set up.

The Seminole County School Board continued the suspension of custodian Junior Blake Wednesday without additional action.

During its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon the board also accepted resignations of two county school teachers. The resignations are the apparent result of allegations of misconduct.

In unrelated personnel actions, the board set a hearing date on the dismissal of a teacher arrested on cocaine sale-related charges. Investigations are continuing in each case, county officials have said.

Blake, 58, 2420 Granby St. Sanford, was suspended without pay May 5, following his May 2 arrest by Lake Mary police for possession of over 20 grams of marijuana. Following a lead provided by a telephone tipster, Lake Mary police searched Blake's pick-up truck, and found a bag of marijuana near the gas tank filler cap. Blake was taken to the county jail, and released on $1,000 bond.

"This was a set-up. That's quite obvious," said Blake's attorney Jim Perry, Orlando. A school official agreed that information he has obtained in regards to the investigation also indicates a possible set-up, in which the pot was possibly planted on Blake's truck without his knowledge.

Lake Mary police investigators could not be reached for comment.

Perry said Blake had "passed a Seminole County Sheriff's Department polygraph test with flying colors," and that Blake's finger prints were not among those found on the bag containing the drugs.

"This man has no criminal involvement," Perry said.

Perry added Blake has been a long-time church deacon, has never had a traffic ticket, is a father of six, and "couldn't even pronounce the word marijuana," indicating the charges are out of character for his client. Other school officials have expressed disbelief over the charges.

Perry said to his knowledge the telephone tipster never identified himself, also pointing to a set-up scenario. He said tips were telephoned to the sheriff's department as well as the police departments of Lake Mary, Longwood, and Sanford.

Perry said as of yesterday, no action has been taken by the state attorney's office, and no formal charges have been filed.

Nearly Frozen Companions Die

Hopes Dim For 8 Climbers

TIMBERLINE LODGE, Ore. (UPI) — Hopes dimmed for eight climbers missing on Mount Hood after doctors failed to revive three of their nearly frozen companions and a heat-seeking helicopter searched the snowy slopes without success.

Officials said search teams assembled early today to resume looking for the six teenagers and two teachers from the Oregon Episcopal School in Portland who were trapped on the 11,339-foot dormant volcano Monday by a blinding snowstorm and sought shelter by digging a snow cave.

Two participants in the school survival outing hiked down the mountain and survived. Clearing weather and directions from the survivors Wednesday enabled searchers to find three climbers, all teenagers, who later died at a Portland hospital while doctors tried to thaw their bodies.

Clackamas County Sheriff's Lt. Don Vicars said the missing climbers were dressed warmly and had basic survival gear. But it was believed they had run out of food and searchers were discouraged that the hikers failed to emerge from the snow cave when the weather cleared.

"They should have punched their way out.

That's everybody's opinion," Vicars said. "The big question is why they didn't."

The search parties found two girls and a boy — nearly lifeless — Wednesday near the 8,000-foot level of the mountain, 50 miles east of Portland.

Before darkness and freezing temperatures halted the ground search, more than 100 people on snow machines and skis poked through the snow with poles. They were joined by dogs trained to sniff for avalanche victims.

Helicopters scanned the mountain and one, equipped with infrared cameras, continued searching after dark. One possible warm spot was located, but a search found no clues.

"Over the years we've had ... have people hike out two, three days later," Sgt. Rich Harder, chief of the Air Force rescue squad, said today on ABC's "Good Morning, America." "We're just hoping they are down in the treeline and we're

County Won't Buy Geneva Land For Water Supply

By Sarah Flecher
Herald Staff Writer

The county has declined to purchase 7.8 acres of land near the "Geneva Bubble," a fresh water source, for a water well field.

County commissioners voted Tuesday not to take Margaret Cammack up on her offer to sell the land north of State Road 46 in the Geneva area for $10,000 per acre.

The water well field would be used for a water plant to serve a proposed residential housing development in the area.

The county would run into some difficulty obtaining consumptive use permits for the well field, and the amount of water that could be taken from the Geneva Bubble has not been determined, said County Environmental Services Director Jim Bible.

The bubble, atop a body of salt water, is the only source of fresh water for the area and is replenished through rainwater.

A report being compiled by the St. Johns River Water Management District and the U.S. Geological Survey, although in final draft form, is not available for county review, Bible said.

However, preliminary estimates indicate the safe yield may only be two million gallons per day, not the nine million gallons originally assumed, he said.

As part of approving the development, the county would take over ownership of the water system, Bible said.

While the county is not necessarily opposed to taking water from the Geneva Bubble, it wants to know how much the water the source could safely supply, he said.

County Administrator Ken Hooper said public ownership of the water system is "in the best interest of the county," however he advised against the purchase of additional land for a well field.

Geneva residents, fearing the freshwater source would be destroyed by overdevelopment, pleaded with the county to control construction there.

Pollution Pays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A convicted polluter was paid nearly $18,000 to advise a Superfund contractor on cleaning up a New Jersey site that he pleaded guilty to contaminating.

Kenneth Mansfield, whose record includes a New York bribery conviction, was recommended to the contractor by an Environmental Protection Agency official who did not mention his criminal past, contrary to the EPA inspector general's office said in a March 31 report.

However, the agency failed to inform the contractor, G.N. Materials Service Co. of Phillips, Ohio, that Mansfield already had given the EPA notice of the contractor's criminal record, according to the report.

The contractor was paid $18,000 for a site cleanup project.

Bryant To Seek Re-Election

Seminole County School Board member Jean Bryant said Wednesday she will seek re-election to her district five seat. Bryant, 60, Sanford, will be running for her fourth four-year term.

Ann Niewender, 42, Paola, county schools Director of Personnel, on leave of absence, announced April 7 she will attempt to unseat Mrs. Bryant, a board member for 11 1/2 years.

Mrs. Bryant said areas of concern to her include the Teenage Parent Program, the Headstart program, and the building program now underway as a result of the $106 million bond issue.

She said during her time on the board, "Seminole County and her schools are no longer the country cousin of Orange County. We have become the county that others are following."

Mrs. Bryant's announcement brings to four the number of announced candidates for the three available school board seats. Other announcements are expected.

Pat Tolson, Winter Park, a 12-year board veteran, announced her candidacy for re-election to her district four seat April 31, and has drawn no opposition so far.

Larry Botsinger, 45, Longwood, said April 1 that he will run for board member Bill Kroll's district one seat. Kroll has not yet announced his intentions.

Citizens Pack Hearing On Land Use Changes

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County residents fought to preserve their rural home sites and low density residential neighborhoods Tuesday night, when they opposed plans to change the county's land use in certain areas.

Citizens packed the meeting room for the 6½-hour public hearing, during which county commissioners considered their first set of comprehensive plan amendments under new state growth management legislation.

County commissioners, seeking input from residents on 17 requests to amend the land plan, heard pleas to preserve existing land uses.

In many cases, residents opposing the requests said public services, including water, sewer, fire, law enforcement and transportation, could not support the changes. Others said the requests are premature.

Due to the length of the meeting, county commissioners decided to divide the second public hearing, at which they are to take final action on the amendments, into two sessions slated for May 27 and June 3.

Some of the more vocal opposition was toward a request to change the land use from general rural to commercial for property at State Road 48 and Orange Boulevard in northwest Seminole County.

Citizens there said approving the change would set a precedent for the area and lead to higher property taxes and uncontrolled growth.

In another case, Midway area residents asked county commissioners to reject a request for a land use change from low density residential to medium density residential for a duplex on Sipes Avenue.

Those citizens wanted to preserve the single family, private character of the residential area and said a duplex would bring transients to the neighborhood.

Some 50 citizens were present to speak against a request to change the land use of 362 acres on the north side of County Road 419 north of the Seminole Flying Ranch from general rural to low density residential. They cited a lack of urban services such as central sewage and water which would be needed to support such development.

Other residents spoke in favor of a requested change from low density residential to medium density residential for a residential/professional usage on Wells Avenue in southwest Seminole County.

They said the change would provide a buffer for their neighborhood, which they called a "high crime" area impacted by encroaching commercial development.

Prairie Lake homeowners said the change would cause more traffic and noise problems there and affect the water quality of the lake.

The 17 requests have already gone through part of the amendment process, which includes consideration by the county planning and zoning commission, sitting as the Local Planning Agency (LPA), and a 90-day review by the Florida Department of Community Affairs. The county has until the end of 1987 to complete an update of the land plan, but is considering interim amendments until then.

The LPA has recommended approval of 10 of the land use requests.

State law says the county may only consider amending the land use plan twice per year and that amendment requests must go through a lengthier review process.

Rather than consider specific amendments, the county has grouped the requests into seven designated study areas.

The county is evaluating the requests based on their effect on land use patterns, natural resources and public services and facilities within the study areas.

The requests are also studied in terms of similarly situated properties, those properties which have development potential similar to the requested amendment site, such as proximity to roadways and existing development, and availability of vacant land.

The similarly situated properties can be considered for a land use amendment as well as the requested site.

Citizens and some county commissioners criticized the policy, contending consideration of similar situated properties would open up more areas for land use changes and allow the county to hear proposed amendments other than those specifically requested.

County planners said the similarly situated properties must be looked at to give a more comprehensive view of land use requests.

Man Jailed In Burglary To Occupied Dwelling

A man who allegedly took the screen off a window of a bedroom occupied by a girl at St. John's Village Apartments, Oxford Road, Fern Park, was nabbed near the scene by a Seminole County sheriff's deputy.

The girl called the apartment manager and told him of the window tampering at about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The manager relayed that information to sheriff's investigator Barry Brady who reported finding a suspect near the scene.

Ian Elliott Davis, 20, of Orlando was arrested at the apartment complex at 2:54 p.m. Tuesday, after he was reportedly identified by the victim and the apartment manager. He has been charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling and was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

that car was also arrested on a charge of possession of six methaqualone tablets and hashish.

The pair was arrested in front of Joe's Pawn Shop, 1855 U.S. Highway 17-92, Longwood at about 7:15 p.m. Tuesday. Dawn Jean Mellor, 23, of San Diego, Calif., and Jonathan David Franklin, 19, of Bldg #2, Apt. 104, 435 Versailles St., Longwood, were being held in lieu of $3,500 bond each.

A Seminole County sheriff's investigation led to the suspect who was questioned at the Lake Mary police station and arrested at about 2 p.m. Wednesday. An arrest report said the suspect had accomplices in the case, but his was the only arrest reported.

John Lee Rodgers of 260 Humphry Road, was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

The night manager of the restaurant handed over $127 to the bandit who drove away taking his order and the cash. A Seminole County sheriff's report said.

$200 diamond necklace was stolen from her home on Tuesday.

A .38-caliber pistol was among $1,025 worth of items stolen from the vehicle of Thomas G. McKae, 25, of 4053 E. Mary Lane Ave., Chuluota, on Saturday or Sunday, a sheriff's report said.

An envelope containing $441 cash and about $200 worth of checks was stolen from ACE Beauty Co., 1305 E. State Road 436, Altamonte Springs, at about 5:30 p.m. when Nancy Love, 46, of Winter Park, was closing the shop and left the day's receipts on a counter, a sheriff's report said.

Court Sentencings

A Lake Monroe man charged with resisting arrest with violence has pleaded guilty to the charge and could receive up to a year in the county jail.

Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor set June 25 for the sentencing of Jeffrey Bernard Campbell, 23, of 1111 Dunbar Ave.

According to an arrest report, Sanford police responded to a report of an attempted breakin in at 23 Cowan Moughton Court in November and spotted a suspect near the scene. The suspect ran and was nabbed. After a struggle, police took the man, who had run towards Higgins Terrace, into custody.

In addition to struggling, police said the man threatened to kill them.

In other court action:

—Charles Wilber Wesley Jr., 31, of Daytona Beach, arrested in January on charges of possession of marijuana and sale of a counterfeit controlled substance. Wesley pleaded guilty to sale of imitation controlled substance and could receive up to a year in the county jail, the same sentence he could have received if he had sold the real substance. A bench warrant was issued for a codefendant in the case, Elbert Bernard Sipp, also of Daytona Beach. He later called the judge and said he had no way to get to the sentencing hearing. According to court records, the judge did not withdraw the bench warrant. According to an arrest report, a Winter Springs man was offered an opportunity to buy a pound of marijuana for $600 from two men who approached him at Pinewood Villas where he lives. He told them he would have the cash in an hour and they should come back with the pot. The man called the Winter Springs police and told them of the offer. Police and an agent of the Seminole County drug task force arrived at his home. The agent posed as the tipster's brother when two men arrived at his home to keep the appointment. The "brother" was interested in the deal and one of the suspects allegedly offered him a pre-rolled pot cigarette to sample and a price of $600 for a reputed pound of marijuana was set. Police and other agents moved in and the pair was arrested. The plastic bag, reputed to contain pot, actually contained peat moss but the hand-rolled cigarette contained pot, according to the report.

According to arrest records, a man who tried to cash a $358 check belonging to a Daniels Mills, which had been stolen in Orlando, was nabbed after a Winn Dixie manager recognized as forged the name on a check cashing card the man presented along with the check at that store at 791 Orienta Ave., in Altamonte Springs. The card had been used to cash forged checks before, an Altamonte Springs police report said. When confronted by police the man reportedly ran through the store, but was caught. He also gave police false identification information, the report said.

—Gregory Lawson Vance, 27, of 1010 Holly Ave., Sanford, arrested in Feb., 1984, on charges he sold marijuana to undercover agents in Sanford, was sentenced by Circuit Judge Dominick J. Salfi to 398 days, the time already served by Vance. According to court records, Vance reportedly drove from the 12th St. and Holly Ave. scene after selling four $5 bags of marijuana to the agents. He was arrested near the scene.

U. S. Openness, A Sharp Contrast

Radioactive fallout from the Chernobyl disaster has now reached our shores. As it drifts with the clouds over the polar cap and passes high over the Gulf of Alaska, over the Rocky Mountains, past the Gulf of Mexico and into Florida, Americans are understandably concerned.

Government officials, however, assure us there is no cause for alarm. The fallout levels detected so far are only "slightly" above normal, and the experts say they do not expect the fallout to be harmful to human health or the environment. It is unlikely there will be any need for safety precautions in the United States, the government says.

Why should we believe the government? An impertinent question perhaps, but it appears some people have reason to be suspicious of government pronouncements. There are reports of a run on gas masks, iodine and bottled water in San Francisco area. A radio station out there told its listeners not to go outside in the rain because they might become radioactive from the rainwater.

These may be nothing more than the silly reactions of silly people. More seriously, many people still remember the atomic weapons tests in Utah and Nevada in the 1950s, when the government said there would be no danger to humans or livestock. Thirty years later, the federal courts ruled that the government had plenty of evidence of the potential harmful effects of the tests — and had failed to warn residents of the danger.

But we think there are good reasons to trust the government's reports about the effects of the Chernobyl fallout in the United States, reasons that include physics, politics and public relations. And we think it is significant that spokesmen for Physicists for Social Responsibility — an anti-nuke group not known for supporting the Reagan administration — believe U.S. officials' reports of fallout levels and agree that they pose no danger to Americans.

It is a law of physics that radioactive fallout diminishes over time and space. The United States is halfway around the globe from Chernobyl. If levels detected so far over the United States are minuscule, it is unlikely they will increase as time goes on, scientists say. They also note that everyone on earth is exposed every year to a certain amount of radiation from the sun. If the Chernobyl fallout levels are at or below that normal amount of radiation, there is no reason to conclude there will be significant increases in disease here as a result of the Chernobyl fallout.

But the doctors also point to other, more cynical, reasons to believe the government pronouncements on the Chernobyl fallout. If there were a risk, no matter how small, the Reagan administration would have "more incentive to exaggerate the danger to drum up anger against the Soviet Union," as one representative of the physicians' group put it. Since the administration task force set up to monitor the Chernobyl fallout has been careful to minimize fallout risks, it's safe to conclude there aren't any risks.

In fact, the government's openness about the Chernobyl fallout is another reason to believe we are being told the truth about what it knows. Spokesmen for the administration task force have been even more accessible to the media than usual in order to avoid any suspicion of coverup, and to reduce the risk of panic-causing rumors.

Officials of the Florida Office of Radiation Control also have taken steps to calm the fears of people. The radiation levels in Orlando are so small that they could not be measured by the normal particle filter this week. A special charcoal filter was used and a trace of iodine-131 was found.

No doubt there are some who will run for the hills no matter what the government says about the Chernobyl fallout. But the vast majority of Americans should be convinced that there is nothing to worry about. (Those who ought to worry are the people who run the risk of overdosing on iodine in a misguided attempt to help block the effects of radiation.)

BERRY'S WORLD

"It's just the new American Embassy!"

GEORGE McGOVERN

Personal Message To William Buckley

In a recent column William Buckley suggests that I visit the Strategic Air Command at Omaha, Neb., so that I will appreciate just how dangerous the Russians are and how urgently we need to keep building more and more nuclear bombs.

Mr. Buckley, my occasional debate opponent, has a sense of humor more impressive than his judgment on public issues. As a part-time novelist he is also better at writing fiction than he is at grasping the realities of contemporary affairs.

Mr. Buckley's reservations about me seem to center on three areas: As a graduate student at Northwestern University in 1948 I supported former Secretary of Agriculture and Vice President Henry Wallace for president instead of Strom Thurmond, Thomas E. Dewey or Harry Truman; after winning the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, I then lost overwhelmingly to Richard Nixon; my belief that we have enough nuclear weapons and should now negotiate a verifiable arms control treaty with the Soviet Union.

Let me take these concerns in order. First, Buckley says that in 1948 "Henry Wallace was being run by the Communist Party." Actually Wallace was a highly respected Iowa farmer and businessman who believed devoutly in American capitalism. After his service as Secretary of Agriculture and Vice President, he was named in a 1940s survey of American historians as the contemporary American statesman whose philosophy most closely followed that of Thomas Jefferson.

Second, as for my landslide defeat by Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew in 1972, there are worse things that can happen to a politician than losing an election.

I would rather have been in my shoes for the past 14 years than to have traded places with Mr. Nixon — the big winner of 1972. I would remind Mr. Buckley that shortly after that election Vice President Agnew was forced to resign in disgrace to avoid a prison sentence, and President Nixon then resigned in even greater disgrace to avoid the full ignominy of impeachment.

Buckley remembers my defeat in 1972, but while painting me as a radical he forgets that for nearly a quarter of a century the people of conservative South Dakota consistently voted for me to represent them in Congress.

Third, Bill Buckley believes that if I would just do what he has done recently — spend three hours being briefed at the Strategic Air Command in Omaha — I would understand that the people who work there are "indispensable to our freedom." He writes, "It is only for so long as the Soviet Union knows that ... an order from the president would result in SAC's destruction of the Soviet Union's leadership and military targets that we have the self-indulgence to listen relatively undisturbed to such as George McGovern...."

If I did not know how misguided Buckley is, I would be wounded by his nonsensical distortion of my views.

Let me put it simply: For 30 years I have believed in and voted for a reliable nuclear deterrent as a vital part of America's defense.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Primitive Standards Of Ethics

While the details of the nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union aren't known at this writing, the Soviet government's handling of the event makes clear that nothing has changed in the USSR. The rulers in Moscow have no concern for their own people or their neighbors and no respect for the truth.

Were it not for the fact that radioactive clouds drifted over Scandinavia and the higher level of radiation was detected in Sweden, Mikhail Gorbachev and his partners in the Politburo would not have said a word about the accident. They would have kept the facts of the killing radiation from the Soviet people.

As it was, the Soviets allowed their communist and noncommunist neighbors to be exposed to grave danger, without sharing the most basic and essential information. While the communist government of Poland warned the Polish people of danger and urged precautions, the Soviets failed to give a similar warning to Soviet citizens in the path of the atomic clouds. This situation espouses both the obsessive secrecy of the Soviet regime and the heartlessness of the country's rulers.

Up to this point, the Soviets have been rather successful in containing information within their borders. The Chernobyl nuclear plant lacked a containment vessel, but it is clear that the Soviet people live in a giant political containment vessel.

Those who have studied the record of Soviet communism are not surprised at the behavior of the Soviet Union in this case.

In the 1920s, Lenin wiped out the old Russian aristocracy, concealing the massacres very well. Stalin, who succeeded him as dictator, was even more successful at concealment. He was responsible for the deaths of millions in the Ukraine in the 1930s, in a campaign to eliminate peasant farmers.

The West seemed not to realize what was taking place. In the same period, Stalin filled the gulags of Siberia — the prison camps — with millions of victims of his tyranny. Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the great Russian novelist and himself a prisoner in the gulag Archipelago, says that as many as 60 million Soviets died during Stalin's terror campaigns.

And in the light of this latest Soviet deception, how can anyone believe the Soviet leadership would tell the truth with respect to verification in any arms control agreement?

World Bank Plows Into Infertile Amazon

By Jack Anderson
And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — Overpaid, underworked officials in Washington, sitting in their plush offices almost totally out of touch with the real world, are often tempted to throw millions of dollars at a problem despite the urgent, knowledgeable warnings of underlings that openhanded spending may create more misery than it cures.

That's pretty much what's happened with the extravagant, ill-conceived development plan called Polonoroeste. It was supposed to bring progress and development to Rondonia, which is not a tiny European kingdom but a West German-sized state in the far northwest of Brazil.

As the home of the vast, ecologically fragile Amazon rain forest, Rondonia is about as far removed from the carpeted, air-conditioned offices of World Bank poobahs as it is possible to get without a rocketship. And the disastrous outcome of the Polonoroeste project shows it.

Most of the World Bank's $500 million contribution to Polonoroeste — one-fifth of which is guaranteed by U.S. taxpayers — has gone into a paved highway through the heart of Rondonia. According to environmental experts and others familiar with the project, this was a badly misplaced priority. It opened up huge areas to a headlong rush by Brazil's landless poor, who were lured on by government propaganda promising fertile farmland for limitless numbers of settlers.

The reality the poverty-stricken pioneers encountered was a cruel disappointment. Most of the rain forest land is hopelessly infertile, unsuited even to subsistence farming. Most of the little arable land was already held by large private owners, who wanted cheap help, not competitive yeomen.

So, unlike the sod-busters who followed their dreams into the Great Plains of the United States a century wasteland in the Techa River Valley in the Chelyabinsk region. The event was not noted in the official Soviet press, and the Soviet populace remains largely unaware that it even occurred.

In 1979, some sort of accident produced a civilian anthrax epidemic near Sverdlovsk. The Soviets reported some "bad meat," but the scale of the epidemic caused Western intelligence to conclude that there had been some kind of explosion at an illegal biological warfare plant.

In 1983, a fertilizer plant emptied more than a billion gallons of wastes into the Dniester River. Despite vast environmental damage, the official press ignored it.

In 1984, a vast munitions dump near Murmansk blew up, killing at least 200 and probably many more. The explosion was reported by foreign ships in the port, and therefore was briefly acknowledged in the official press.

The Soviets do not report Soviet airliner crashes within the Soviet Union unless there are foreigners aboard.

When Korean Airlines Flight 007 was shot down, the Soviet people were told the civilian airliner had been a "spy plane" and the pilot who shot it down received a medal. Almost certainly the kill was a mistake on the part of Soviet air defense.

Which brings us to Chernobyl. This certainly would have been covered up if radioactive clouds had not drifted over Scandinavia, then elsewhere. Even so, information made available to foreigners has been skimpy and tardy, while the Soviet people have been told nothing much.

Prairie Chickens Comeback

By Brad Smith

WRAY, Colo. (UPI) — Prairie grass still dry from winter rustles softly in the chilly breeze blowing across the northeast Colorado plains in the pre-dawn darkness.

A low, hollow whistle is heard as the sky begins to lighten. The source of the sound is but a faint outline of what looks like the spiked leaves of a yucca plant.

As the sun brings an orange glow to the sand hills, it's apparent the sound is coming from a bird. The yucca leaves actually are tall feathers, spread like a fan.

The bird, like others on this mound in the prairie, becomes very animated, prancing back and forth and confronting his neighbors. The dance goes on for several hours as these male birds — greater prairie chickens — go through their mating ritual in hopes of luring a female from the grass and brush cover.

The male prairie chickens are performing their annual "booming" rites. The low whistling is not unlike the sound you get when you blow across the top of an open soda pop bottle.

Few people in Colorado get to see this display — partly because prairie chickens are by nature a shy bird, and partly because their range in the state is so limited. Nearly all of the greater prairie chickens in Colorado are found only in Yuma County, which is the main reason the state Wildlife Division places the bird on the endangered species list.

The greater prairie chicken, a member of the grouse family about 18 inches long, once was an abundant game bird on the Great Plains. When times grew tough for farmers and rural townspeople during the Depression and Dust Bowl days, the prairie chicken provided much of their meat.

Old-timers talk of seeing wagons loaded full of the birds brought back to town by hunters. As recently as 1970, one bird encyclopedia says, about 80,000 of the birds were killed nationwide by hunters.

The heavy hunting and plowing of its tall grass prairie habitat drastically reduced the prairie chicken population — but the bird has made a dramatic comeback in Colorado in recent years.

Clait Braun, the head of avian research for the state, says there were as few as perhaps 500 birds in Colorado in the 1950s and 1960s. Braun thinks there may be more than 10,000 now, although it is impossible to do anything more than take an educated guess.

bank's staff experts strongly disagree.

"The suggestion ... that tree crops are capable of providing a sustainable production system for a fairly large proportion of the area does not accord with reservations expressed by research workers in Brazil," one internal report stated.

"The soils of the Amazon area as a whole are generally poor," another report stated.

"To use unproven technologies as a basis for agricultural settlement under extremely adverse soil conditions would be a highly risky undertaking and would prove disastrous for the settlers themselves," warned an early staff memo.

But the warnings were ignored and the World Bank encouraged the Brazilian land rush. Desperate settlers keep clearcutting and burning, destroying an irreplaceable environment in the vain hope of finding land worth farming. The disaster the experts warned about grows worse by the day.

Flames Move To Final

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — O Canada!
 The anthem so familiar to hockey fans once again is the theme for the Stanley Cup final. The Calgary Flames assured an all-Canadian final for the first time in 19 years Wednesday night with a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Blues in the deciding game of their best-of-seven Campbell Conference final.

The Flames will face the Montreal Canadiens in the final, beginning Friday night in the Olympic Saddledome. Calgary is appearing in the final for the first time in franchise history; Montreal has won a record 22 Stanley Cups.

An United States-based team has appeared in every preceding final since the league expanded in 1967. "There's no feeling like getting this far," said right-winger Lanny McDonald, who will make the first final appearance of his 11-year career. "We're four wins away from the big one."

John Tonelli knows the feeling, having been part of four Stanley Cup Championship teams with the New York Islanders in 1980's.

"It is a great feeling being here," said Tonelli, traded to Calgary from New York March 11. "I was a little hurt at the beginning of the trade, but this makes everything worthwhile."

"It shows that often the grass is greener on the other side," said Tonelli, who has played the work ethic that made him a key part of the Islander's four Stanley Cup Championship teams. "I'm just glad Calgary gave me a chance."

In Game 6, the Flames squandered a three-goal lead midway through the final period. Wednesday, there was no such breakdown.

"We played tight and stuck to our game plan," said Colin Patterson, who scored the eventual game-winning goal at 1:42 of the middle period.

Cummings: Bucks Aren't Dampened

BOSTON (UPI) — While preparing for Game Two of the Eastern Conference finals, the Milwaukee Bucks sounded like a team that lost the opener by three or four points instead of 34.

"We're not down, we just have these types of games from time to time," explained Terry Cummings, who had "one of those games" Tuesday night, scoring a 8 points on 3-of-13 shooting in the 128-98 loss to the Boston Celtics.

"I think we just tried too hard," Cummings said. "If you get up (too much) for a game, you just don't play very well and there's nothing you can really do about it. We should know better."

Milwaukee, losers of all six meetings this season with Boston, could do little right Tuesday. The Celtics took a 29-19 lead at the end of the first half and never faltered. The Bucks shot only 17 percent in the first quarter.

"The reason we got up by so much so early was that Milwaukee was hurting and not hitting their shots," Boston coach K.C. Jones said. "But I didn't expect them to come in that cold."

Milwaukee, playing without injured starter Sidney Moncrief, shot 28 percent from the floor. Moncrief, a key player in Sunday's decisive seventh-game triumph over Philadelphia, wants to play Thursday.

Caller Claims More Hostages Executed; Threatens Others

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A man, claiming to be a spokesman for the Islamic Jihad Organization, said today the group has executed more of its American and French hostages and that the rest will pay the price if there is any pressure on Syria to secure their release.

In a statement read to a Western news agency office in Moslem west Beirut, the man did not say how many of the five American and four French hostages the Islamic Jihad has killed or when the men were executed.

The statement, which could not be authenticated, coincided with reports from Washington that Syria was engaged in intensive efforts to free the American and French hostages in Lebanon.

Syria has made no comment, but political sources in Lebanon said the Washington reports were being treated as "a form of pressure on Syria to act and clear its name which has recently been linked to international terrorism."

Blacks Plan Outlawed Funeral

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Blacks went ahead with plans for a mass funeral in the Alexandra black township today despite a government ban and an opposition lawmaker predicted bloodshed.

"The situation in Alexandra is extremely tense and volatile and could explode at the cost of lives at any moment," David Dalling, a member of Parliament from the opposition Progressive Federal Party, said Wednesday.

Officials earlier this week banned a mass funeral service at Alexandra stadium, on the northeast outskirts of Johannesburg, for eight victims of recent political violence. They said police and soldiers "would not hesitate to act" if the law was broken.

A second application to hold the funeral Saturday, instead of today, was filed with the magistrate's court by the Alexandra Action Committee. A police spokesman said the application was under consideration.

At the House of Assembly in Cape Town, Dalling warned that going ahead with the funeral "can only result in people being seriously hurt and killed."

He said sources in Alexandra told him, "despite the refusal of the magistrate, the service would go ahead anyway and that people were being informed accordingly."

U.S.-Iranian Ships 'Businesslike'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. Navy destroyer warned off an Iranian warship as it approached an American merchant vessel in the Gulf of Oman, the Pentagon says — the first such incident between the two navies.

The 310-foot Iranian frigate and the Spruance class destroyer David R. Ray came within six miles of each other but confined exchanges to radio messages that Pentagon sources described Wednesday as both "tense" and "businesslike."

No shots were fired in the Tuesday incident, they said. The Ray intervened after the warship asked the President McKinley, an American cargo vessel, to identify itself as it headed toward the nearby port of Fujaira in the United Arab Emirates, a Pentagon statement said.

Contra Leader To Retire

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Eden Pastora, the former Sandinista hero who turned against the Nicaraguan revolution only to be stripped of his rebel command, pledged he would give up the fight and request asylum in Costa Rica this week, a rebel spokesman said.

The announcement Wednesday coincided with a unity meeting in Miami of three Contra leaders from the United Nicaraguan Opposition, or UNO, the political branch of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force known as FDN.

In other action Wednesday the school board set a date of June 18 has been set by the board to hear the appeal of suspended Lake Mary High School social studies teacher Wilson Gordon, Jr.

Gordon, 39, 324 E. Highland Dr., Altamonte Springs, was arrested by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies when he turned himself in at the county jail April 21.

He was charged with the December 1, 1984 sale of cocaine to a sheriff's department informant. The sale was video taped by the sheriff's department. Gordon's attorney, Chris Ray, Sanford, has asked for the hearing to contest the dismissal. He has claimed that his client was wrongfully arrested, because he was offered immunity from prosecution in exchange for his cooperation with the department in other drug related investigations.

Seminole County Sheriff John Polk has said no such deal was struck. Ray said he would enter a plea of "not guilty" on Gordon's behalf.

The school board appointed attorney Richard Graham of Daytona Beach to serve as special counsel for the purpose of the hearing, since school attorney Ned Julian will be hearing the case. The board will also issue appropriate orders on procedural matters preliminary to the hearing, and authorized the employment of Curtis Ellerbe as the official reporter for the hearing. Evidence may be presented in the hearing to support claims from both sides in the issue.

In an unrelated case, the school board accepted the resignation of Lyman High School teacher Robert M. Cannon, 39, 291 Gary Blvd. He resigned April 30 for "personal reasons."

He was arrested at the school and taken to jail the same day by the Seminole County Sheriff's Department. He was charged with prohibited acts by a custodial authority. In connection with alleged sexual contact with a 17-year-old female Lyman student, Cannon was released from jail following his arrest on $5,000 bond.

Cannon was a vocational drafting teacher at Lyman for 13 years.

Also, first year Oviedo High School English teacher Monica Hood, 24, 1941 Linden Road, Winter Park, resigned for "personal reasons" effective April 23.

According to a school official, Ms. Hood is being investigated by both Professional Practices Services of the state Department of Investigation, as well as Health Rehabilitative Services, regarding alleged misconduct.

"It is essential that information learned be widely transmitted," Gale said.

The team of one Israeli and three American doctors headed by Gale received some of the few favorable words directed by Gorbachev Wednesday at the West.

Gorbachev said it was too early to "pass final judgment" on the cause of the accident but that specialists reported "the reactor's capacity suddenly increased during a scheduled shutdown."

Contradicting previous official statements, Gorbachev said the "territory in the immediate vicinity (of the Chernobyl plant) still remains dangerous for human health." Authorities a week ago assured Soviets the area was safe.

Gorbachev also said evacuations began "in a matter of hours" after the explosion, disclaiming other official statements that the evacuation did not begin for 36 hours.

He also announced for the first time that the 12-man ruling Politburo was in control of the accident.

"Considering the extraordinary and dangerous nature of what had happened in Chernobyl the Politburo took into its hands the entire organization of work to ensure the speediest liquidation of the breakdown and the limitation of its consequences," he said.

Gorbachev reacted to Western criticism that the Kremlin was slow in reacting to the accident by accusing the West of "an unrestrained anti-Soviet campaign." He said the West received the facts as soon as the Soviets had "reliable initial information."

Deputy Morris reported that she and Seminole County rescue workers had to ride in four-wheel drive vehicles provided by Cameron Tabor to reach the remote site on Tabor's property off Moore's Station Road where Appleby died. Ms. Morris reported that Appleby suffered from a heart problem and cancer. He was dead at the scene and his body was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

"Buddy was not a young man," Barrow said. "He was wearing out, but he kept going."

Appleby lived with his wife Joyce, 60, at Route 4, Box 87 Upsala Road. He was born May 21, 1919 and was a lifelong Sanford resident.

A World War II Army veteran, Appleby is also survived by two sons, Brian and Charles, both of Paola; one stepson, James Eber of Sanford and two stepdaughters, Shirley Swaggerty of Paola and Susan Cover of Lake Mary.

Brisson Guardian Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the graveside in Evergreen Cemetery. Viewing will be 2 to 8 p.m. Thursday.

4-C To Sponsor Seminar Series On Management

This year's series of seminars sponsored by Community Coordinated Child Care (4C) for Central Florida, Inc. will be held on June 3 with "absolutely the finest child care management seminar ever offered in Florida," according to 4C executive vice president Phoebe Carpenter. "4C is proud to be bringing to Orlando two of the country's top 10 experts in the development of child care policies and management systems, she said."

Presented by Resources for Child Care Management, "Perennial Challenges to Building an Effective Staff" will be led by Roger Neugebauer and Joseph Perreault. Roger Neugebauer is editor and publisher of the Child Care Information Exchange, widely viewed as the most useful resource for child care providers, and a national leader in upgrading the management practices of the child care industry.

Considered an expert in the organizational and process issues of child care management, he co-authored Day Care Personnel Management.

The seminar will be held on June 3 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn/Orlando International Airport. "Perennial Challenges" is designed to help administrators meet the challenge of building an effective staff, the most important task for the director of any early childhood program.

Fight Over Wedding Plans Puts In-Laws On The Outs

DEAR ABBY: Our son is getting married in September. When "Evelyn," the bride's mother, called to tell me of the wedding plans, I was floored! They are having the reception at the most expensive hall in Boston. Abby, these are young kids who have nothing.

I was informed that our share would be $4,500. I told Evelyn we didn't have that kind of money, that $1,000 was our limit. She hung upon me.

I called a few days later and asked how many guests we could invite to the reception. "For $1,000," she said, "one couple." I was furious and went right to her house to talk to her. She said I was living in the dark ages if I thought the parents of the bride still paid for the whole wedding with no help from the groom's side. She repeated, our share was $4,500. I said, "People who put on showy wedding they can't afford are four-flushers." Then the father of the bride threw me out of the house!

Now there's bad feeling on both sides. Should we make a fuss?

MAD IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR MAD: No. The parents of the bride should have had a meeting with you before they planned a wedding that was beyond their means. Having committed for it, they have no right to "bill" you. They may have to take a loan, which will be their problem, not yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school dropout, but few people know it because my verbal skills are very good. I have a fairly good job, but I want to go to college. How does a high school dropout get into a college?

Someone suggested I look into the "G.E.D." program. What is it? I was ashamed to ask. Thanks for any help you can give me.

OSHO DROPOUT

DEAR DROPOUT: "G.E.D." stands for General Education Development test. Contact your local high school administration office and ask when and where to take the G.E.D. It is designed for people such as you. If you pass the test, you will be certified as having a high school education, and you will qualify for college as a high school

Dear Abby

"loving concern." My son just shrugged his shoulders, but I am angry. What do you think?

FURIOUS IN DULUTH

DEAR FURIOUS: Your mother rates an "A" for good intentions, but an "F" for tact and diplomacy. Tell her that out of "loving concern" for her grandson's feelings, in the future she should resist the temptation to correct his letters.

DEAR ABBY: You tell old people it's all right for them to touch, hug and kiss, but what about getting between the sheets for a little sex once in a while? We are both 66 years old and in good health, and we are very good friends.

Is that an inappropriate and flippant answer to the question — may we sometimes also want like to know?

E.S. WILSON

DEAR E.S.: I am not authorized to pardon sins, but if I were, I would worry less about what two old lovers did between the sheets and more about man's inhumanity to man.

Any X-Ray Exposure Is Potentially Harmful

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — Just how dangerous are X-rays? I had three taken of my lower back after slipping on the ice last winter. Do I now run a greater risk of getting cancer?

DEAR READER — Any X-ray exposure is potentially dangerous. However, sensible doctors will weigh the dangers of X-ray exams against the potential value of the information to be gained. In your case, back X-rays were probably necessary to assess the degree of injury you may have sustained after falling. A simple set of spinal X-rays does not, in my view, make you more prone to developing cancer. But don't undergo routine X-ray examinations unless your doctor can convince you that such analysis is necessary for your continuing good health.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I wash my hair every other day and have tried every kind of shampoo there is, but I still get pimples or sores all over my scalp. Please help.

DEAR READER — You may have chronic skin infection called pyoderma. Also, you may be adversely reacting to some component in the shampoos. Get examined by a dermatologist; such a specialist should be able to suggest appropriate treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a myelogram, which disclosed two ruptured discs. Now I have "dropped foot" syndrome and numbness. Is surgery the only answer? What causes it?

DEAR READER — Discs act like washers between the spinal vertebrae. They are made up of gelatinous centers surrounded by tough capsules of gristle. On occasion, the soft part of the inner disc may protrude through the gristle portion and press on nerves as they leave the spinal cord. Pain and weakness may develop.

Although treatments other than surgery — papain injections, for example — have been touted to cure ruptured discs, an operation to remove or restructure the injured disc is still the treatment of choice when performed by a qualified and experienced neurosurgeon. Most ruptured discs appear to result from a congenital weakness in the ring that holds the gelatinuous center in place.

The presence of a foot drop (muscle weakness) in your case suggests that surgery is an appropriate method of treatment to relieve pressure on the nerve. I'm afraid that if you don't have the discs repaired, permanent damage may result and you may be left with an avoidable handicap. Get checked by a reputable neurosurgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 84 and drink two cups of tea a day. I have been told that the tannic acid causes kidney stones. Do you agree?

DEAR READER — Two cups of tea a day for a person your age should not be harmful. Kidney stones are usually composed of calcium and are more likely to result from factors other than tea. Continue to enjoy your tea-drinking ritual.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio, 44101.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

What are the rules for playing no-trump contracts? You generally play the suit that will provide you with enough tricks to make your contract. Or you play the suit in which the defenders have a top winner or two that must be forced out. Part of the fun of bridge is the unexpected — there are exceptions to all rules.

On the lead of the spade six against three no-trump you win the 10 after playing low from dummy. The easy play is to now finesse the queen of diamonds. If successful, that finesse will give you enough tricks for your contract, and in any event you will eventually have to play the suit. All true. But if that finesse loses and East returns a spade, what then? You will lose your contract whenever West has the ace of clubs and started with five spades headed by the king.

To guarantee your contract, you must make sure of a club trick before going after diamonds. If the opponents do not take their club trick immediately, you can switch back to diamonds and assure yourself of at least nine tricks. The point is that you will have already scored one club trick and need no longer fear that the defenders will establish their spades and win the race for tricks.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY MAY 16, 1966

In the year ahead, you will have a larger number of opportunities than you've had in the past. Handle what develops wisely so you can achieve a dramatic rise in status.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're going to be let in on some good news shortly. It will be more for the benefit of the family as a whole than for any one individual. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful today not to negatively judge situations in advance. This could cause you to view something as a loser that in reality has possibilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today if you get involved in a special activity with friends, don't feel it's up to you to pay the lion's share of the expenses. Split cost equally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Others will appreciate you more today if you melt into the group instead of trying to run the whole show. Give it a try; see for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against tendencies today to overrule your better judgment and do things your common sense tells you not to.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) People who are not directly involved must be kept out of your financial or commercial affairs today. Kibitzers will gum things up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're an extremely capable and self-sufficient person, so if anything important needs doing today, do it alone. Don't cart along any dead weight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Seize the initiative today at work. Do things without having an authority remind you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is not a good day to risk your hard-earned funds on unfamiliar ventures. Before jumping in, do more investigating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your domestic relationship will run rather smoothly today if neither you nor your mate rehash an old unresolved issue. Keep the hatchet buried.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Everyone has shortcomings, including yourself. Focus on the good qualities in others, and they'll focus on the good qualities in you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) General conditions are favorable for you today, but, in material matters, you might not use your best judgment.

Stars Ride 'Stagecoach'

Evening Herald, Sanford, FL, Thursday, May 12, 1988—39

By Frank Senelle
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Is the Western dead? Not according to the stars of "Stagecoach," the TV-movie remake of the 1939 John Ford film classic, airing Sunday, May 18, on CBS.

"The Western isn't dead, it's just been napping!" says John Schneider, former "Dukes of Hazzard" star, who plays the stagecoach driver.

"I'm a sucker for Westerns," adds co-star Mary Crosby. "I raise and train horses and I love cowboys!"

Like the original film, the new "Stagecoach" is set in the Arizona territory of the 1880s. A diverse group of characters boards a stagecoach and without a cavalry escort travels through territory where Indians are on the warpath.

The New Yorker called the Ford film "Grand Hotel" on wheels.

The TV version features a hooker with a heart of gold (Elizabeth Ashley), a fugitive (Kris Kristofferson) being returned to jail by a sheriff (Johnny Cash), a pregnant army wife (Mary Crosby) and the infamous gunfighter-docentist Doc Holliday (Willie Nelson).

Nelson, Kristofferson, Cash, Schneider and co-star Waylon Jennings wrote and performed the musical theme and score.

Like its journey through dangerous territory, "Stagecoach" faces an uphill battle in its quest for high ratings. The official wisdom in Hollywood is that the Western has faded beyond resurrection.

"Western" is such a dirty word that when last summer's feature-film flop "Silverado" went into production, Columbia sent out a press release calling the film a "post-Civil War adventure."

The final nail in the coffin was Clint Eastwood's "Pale Rider," which also hit box-office dust last summer along with "Silverado." The prevailing philosophy in Hollywood is that if mega-star Eastwood can't produce a hit Western, nobody can.

The genre hasn't fared any better on the small screen, either. There hasn't been a successful Western series since a doddering "Gunsmoke" creaked off the air in 1975. In a video era where lawmen wear Armani suits, drive Ferraris and punch out coke dealers, stampeding horses and prairie brush fires are pretty tame stuff — and hopelessly low-tech.

In an attempt to make the genre more palatable, many elements of the original "Stagecoach" have been updated to appeal to modern tastes and sensitivities.

"I didn't like the original, to tell you the truth," says James Lee Barrett, who adapted the movie script for television. The original featured a doctor who was portrayed comically as a falling down drunk. Although a recovering alcoholic himself, Barrett didn't plan to change the role until Willie Nelson refused to play the doctor as a drunk.

The Ford film ends before the army wife gives birth. In the remake, Mary Crosby goes through a graphic labor scene. Says the actress (whose father Bing starred in a poorly received 1966 feature-film remake of "Stagecoach"): "In old films, you hear soft cries in the background, and then the woman shows up with her hair neatly braided and a baby on her shoulder."

The hooker with a heart of gold was a dramatic staple long before movies began. In the Ford classic, the prostitute was run out of town by morally outraged women. Complains screenwriter Barrett, "I found that unbelievable. There had to be 500 more prostitutes in a frontier town like that. Why did they pick on her?" In the remake, Elizabeth Ashley voluntarily leaves town after a painful breakup with a married man.

Perhaps the most important change is the treatment of native Americans. No explanation was given in Ford's film as to why the Indians were killing settlers. In the remake, the cavalry is evicting Indians from their homelands in order to make way for the railroad. Willie Nelson stands up for them and says, "I see no reason to hate a man for protecting his property."

The 1939 film is notable for two things: It revived the Western film, which, like today, had fallen out of favor. And it transformed John Wayne from a B-movie star into a major film actor. "I thought the Eastwood movie would kick everybody in the tall, and they'd say, 'Hey! Let's make Westerns!'" says Schneider, who is hustling his own Western screenplay around town. "It didn't, but now I hope 'Stagecoach' will do it instead."

Badham - A Progenitor Of Fads

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Director John Badham has a deft touch on the American pulse, an almost prescient feeling for what movie audiences want to see.

In less than a decade he has been the progenitor of three film fads — youth and dance, youth and computer and helicopter as protagonist.

It was Badham's "Saturday Night Fever" in 1978, starting then little-known John Travolta, that gave birth to a dozen copycat movies about kids and discos.

And it was Badham's "WarGames" in 1983 that prompted a score of similar films about high school geniuses who save the world or threaten to destroy it by using home computers to lift secrets from government or high-tech industry computers.

His 1983 "Blue Thunder," in which an attack helicopter gunship was the star, made a fortune and gave birth to a TV series by the same title (it failed) and the more successful series "Airwolf."

Both "Saturday Night Fever" and "WarGames" were breakaway hits and critical successes. "Blue Thunder" was not quite as successful.

Now Badham is poised to stampede this summer's box offices with his latest movie, "Short Circuit," a fantasy dealing with the adventures of a robot that becomes alive after it is struck by a lightning bolt.

Robot No. 5 is a cute, powerful and smart little guy with a sense of humor and an addiction to John Wayne movies and The Three Stooges. He runs co-stars Ally Sheedy and Steve Guttenberg a merry chase while escaping villainous corporate security forces.

"Short Circuit" is clearly aimed at the youth audience but with enough entertainment values to please the whole family.

It goes almost without saying that No. 5 will be compared with the lovable E.T. in Steven Spielberg's all-time box-office champion "E.T. The Extra-terrestrial."

"We won't mind the comparison as long as it's favorable," Badham said during a recent noonday break. "So far audience responses have been better than 'E.T.' received."

"We tried to get away from the

No Vast Wasteland

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty-five years ago this month, Federal Communications Commission Chairman Newton N. Minow described television as a "vast wasteland." Good thing he didn't see the made-for-TV movies they're making these days.

Too short for a miniseries and too long for a series, the TV movie was born as the launching pad for pilots, as a way to present "exclusive world premieres" on the cheap, and a way to fill two-hour prime-time gaps.

The made-for-TV movie caught on and now television viewers are bombarded by them.

This year TV movies have covered such topics as the insane, a one-armed baseball player, a bisexual housewife, a transsexual tennis player — with a slew of crime stories, rare diseases and terrorism thrown in for good measure.

The casual TV viewer will know that many made-for-TV movies aren't worth the time it takes to read the capsule description in the TV listings column. That's why when a really decent one comes along, it's worth a salute.

Such is the case for "Johnny Bull," which airs Monday night on ABC (9-11 p.m. EST).

Before the opening credits finish rolling, it is clear that "Johnny Bull" is something different than the ordinary made-for-TV muck.

It is New York in 1959. Iris (Suzanna Hamilton) the cheery cockney bride arrives to hook up with her ex-G.I. husband Joe (Peter MacNicol). This Brit is expecting the world from the Yanks: a telephone in every bathroom, a shiny white Statue of Liberty, the glitz and glamour of Hollywood. But instead of the gold mine she gets the shaft — the coal shaft, that is.

Joe lives in a dirt-poor Pennsylvania mining town where everyone has coal dust in his blood — if they're lucky enough to be working. He brings her home to a ramshackle wood house to meet the folks.
