Two tickets split Lotto prize

TALLAHASSEE — Two tickets have matched all six numbers in Saturday's Lotto drawing and will share an estimated grand prize of $6 million. Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann said Sunday.

The winning numbers were 4-6-18-24-28-32. Computer records show the winning tickets were sold in Lake Worth in Palm Beach County and in Spring Hill, in Hernando County.

In addition to the grand-prize winners, more than 275,000 tickets won cash prizes. By matching five-of-six numbers, 458 tickets won $1,730 each; 16,595 tickets matched four-of-six for $70 each, and 257,950 tickets won $4.50 each by matching three-of-six.

Next week's Lotto jackpot is estimated at $6 million, Mann said.

The trick is the shtick

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Be it hogs or husbands, the winning tactics were the same. Champion callers at the State Fair said you gotta have a gimmick.

"Husband! I need a husband!" Shayne Ayers of Springfield yelled in the husband-calling contest. "I'm 29, I have a career, I make a lot of money, I need a husband!"

Ayers claimed second place Sunday in a seven-woman field, behind Paula Tyler, who threw not only her heart and soul into her call, but also a bucket of water.

Tyler won $325 by attempting to awaken her "napping" husband. With a mop in hand and a bandanna on her head, Tyler shrieked at her husband and then asked the audience to climb in.

When all the shouts of "Donald! Doonnald!" got her nowhere, Tyler tried a bucket of water.

Stephen Spangler of Newark won $75 and his second straight hog-calling contest by warbling a Hank Williams song, then hitting the hogs with a series of high-pitched "Sooooey!" calls.

"There's a necessity to have a skit and appeal to your audience," he said. "To go out and make a loud, guttural hog soooey is not enough."

Gas prices at the pump rise

LOS ANGELES — The price of a gallon of gasoline rose more than a cent and a half on average over the past two weeks, according to a national survey.

The Lundberg Survey of 13,000 gas stations found that the average price of all grades of gasoline at full- and self-service stations is up 1.66 cents to $1.2381 a gallon.

Analyst Trilby Lundberg on Sunday attributed the increase to a return of demand to levels that are normal for the peak summer driving season.

Prices may continue to rise because of a recent increase in wholesale prices, she said.

Suber: Assessments fair

Sanford man challenges appraisal of older homes

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber said if any older homes have been assessed unfairly compared to newer homes, they aren't now.

"I don't think systematically they have," said Suber. "A lot of homes, at one time or another, have been assessed incorrectly. But the problem has been cured this year."

Last week, the Fifth District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach returned an appraisal challenge by Sanford homeowner Merv Ozier back to Seminole Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis, saying he erred in ruling against the homeowner without a trial.

But the appeals panel, in reviewing the case, commented older homes in Seminole County appeared to be given special treatment.

"There does appear to be a problem in (Suber's) methodology," the ruling stated. "This the appearance of undervaluation of older homes. Nothing causes taxpayer resentment and resistance as much as the perception of unfair treatment."

Suber said the base rate of all older homes was reassessed this year, along with the depreciation rate allowed for existing homes. He said he made the adjustments following a study of older homes in the county completed last year.

Suber said the study began during the time Ozier brought suit against him in 1988, saying Ozier's 1986 home was unfairly assessed at $92,080. Ozier asserted older homes in the same neighborhood were assessed at $52,000.

"I'm asking for equal treatment under the law. Now, newer properties in the county are carrying the tax load for older ones, which have been depreciated," Ozier said.

The Fifth DCA, in its ruling, noted Ozier evidence that a home in his neighborhood that sold for $126,000 in 1987 was assessed at $54,650 in 1988. Another home sold for $77,000 in 1987, but in 1988, Suber assessed the same home at $46,390.

Ozier's attorney Steve Laurence said if the case is successful, all homes will be assessed equally.

DOT wants road but not the problems

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Seminole County Expressway Authority officials say the Florida Department of Transportation has told them, in effect, "We want your road, but not your problems."

Expressway officials have learned FDOT is telling landowners it was not responsible for any damages caused by right of way reservations SCEA placed on their land in 1987. The position, if upheld, could cost SCEA an unestimated amount of money — money it does not have.

"If it's $1, we don't have it," said SCEA director Gerald Brinton. "It's not our project. They took away our means of satisfying any judgements against us if there are any."

An emergency meeting has been called for 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the county commission chambers at the County Services Building so SCEA members can authorize their attorney Lonnie Groot to defend the agency against the legal assault.

"It's a very significant legal issue," Groot said. "The real world potential remains to be seen."

Groot said the property owners of about 30 tracts of land involved in FDOT condemnation actions for the expressway have in turn sued FDOT. Groot said the property owners said they should receive See DOT, Page 5A

Sanford attorney, lifelong resident W. C. 'Bill' Hutchison dies at home

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Prominent Sanford attorney William C. "Bill" Hutchison Jr. died at his home Sunday. Hutchison, an attorney with the law firm of Hutchison-Mann-Clayton, had served as City Attorney for the City of Sanford for 17 years.

Born in Sanford, March 16, 1928, he was a lifelong resident of the area.

Hutchison's law partners commented about his legal expertise: "He was a strong influence in the legal community," said Attorney Dick Mamele. "He was a lawyer's lawyer, and a mentor for many attorneys and students of law. If someone asked him a legal question and he didn't have a law book handy, he would give his opinion, and almost always he would prove to be correct."

Attorney Steve Couvet said, "Bill led the way for many government agencies around the area. He served as attorney for the Airport Authority and the Sanford Port Authority. Both of them are doing well and I'm sure they owe a great portion of their success to Bill."

Sanford Attorney Mack Cleveland has been a close friend and associate of Hutchison. "He was an excellent attorney," he said. "He did an unbelievable amount of work for the people of Central Florida for many years. He had a big heart."

A.K. Shoemaker, Chairman of the Sanford Airport Authority explained that Hutchison had served as the attorney for the authority since it was first formed. "He will certainly be missed," Shoemaker said, adding "Bill did a lot of outstanding things for the city that people never knew about."

In recalling the many years he had known him, Shoemaker recalled one of Hutchison's favorite sayings.

"Whenever we questioned anything he did or said, his response was, 'Trust old Bill.'"

Local 'Derby' champs lose out early in Akron

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — The two Central Florida representatives in the All-American Soap Box Derby were eliminated early in the national competition on Saturday.

Will Perry, 13, and Jessica Twadell, 10, both of Timsville, won the Masters and the Kit Car divisions of the Central Florida Soap Box Derby in Sanford last month.

The Masters Division, in which competitors build their cars from scratch, is open to youngsters ages 12 through 16 while those from nine to 16 race in the Kit

Car Division, in which cars are constructed from a packaged kit purchased from the national Soap Box Derby Association.

Perry lost in the first round of racing action in Akron, Ohio, Saturday afternoon.

Twadell won her first heat, but lost in the second round of action.

The three-hour race included representatives from each of the 50 states and several foreign countries.

"They were up against some stiff competition from all over the globe," said Laurie Gilbert, a representative of the Derby in Akron on Saturday. "Just making it here is an honor."

Percy the hippo dies mysteriously

NORTH FORT MYERS — A 4,000-pound hippopotamus at the Octagon Wildlife Sanctuary has died, possibly from gunshot wounds, leaving his twin brother visibly distraught.

Percy the hippo was pulled lifeless out of his pen at the Octagon Wildlife Sanctuary on Sunday, and sanctuary workers suspect foul play.

The sanctuary recently has had problems with some animals being shot, according to sanctuary founder Peter Octave Caron. But during the autopsy Sunday, it was difficult to determine if the massive beast had been shot.

"A tragedy is a tragedy," Caron said. "We're just trying to find some answers."

Sanctuary workers will be have to wait until further tests come back next week before anyone will know for sure how Percy died.

The doctor who performed the autopsy found Percy was healthy and had been eating well, Caron said.

Regardless, Caron said he believes Percy's death was unnatural.

"I think something hurt him," Caron told the News-Press in Fort Myers for today's edition.

Percy and his twin Garth, who have lived together their entire lives from seven to nine years moved to the sanctuary in 1988 and have been crowd favorites ever since.

Board disciplines dentist

TAMPA — A dentist who shunned silver fillings and traditional painkillers in his practice of homeopathy dentistry has been disciplined by the Florida Board of Dentistry.

Dr. Phillip Kibbee Parsons was fined $1,000, given a two-year partial suspension and ordered to make additional studies of accepted practices.

His critics said Parsons, of Keystone Heights in northeast Florida, did not fully explain to his patients that his practice of homeopathy deviated significantly from that of his peers.

For instance, instead of silver fillings, cavities are packed with plastic; and instead of painkillers, gums are packed with numbing herbs.

"I think the majority of the dentists don't have any idea what homeopathy is," said Dr. Richard Chichetti, chairman of the Florida Board of Dentistry. "There is only a small, cult-like faction that uses it."

The disciplinary board, meeting Saturday in Tampa, found Parsons guilty of not meeting the standards of dental care, experimentation without the written consent of patients and incomplete record keeping.

The two-year partial suspension, which lets him stay in practice, will be followed by a year of probation.

Parsons' supporters and critics said they generally were satisfied with the ruling.

Activists picket Ocean World

FORT LAUDERDALE — Federal animal abuse charges leveled against Ocean World drew angry animal rights activists to the marine park's gates.

The charges by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Friday could lead to heavy fines or the temporary closing of the 28-year-old aquatic theme park.

Dolphins were kept in an understated petting pool in over-chlorinated water that made their skin peel off, the USDA said in a civil complaint.

Ocean World, which exhibits dolphins, seals and sea lions, had long been targeted for alleged abuses by animal rights activists. On Saturday, about 35 demonstrators hoisted an inflatable dolphin and waved signs.

The civil complaint was the first legal action against a marine park since the USDA assumed responsibility in 1979 for the care of captive marine mammals, agency spokeswoman Robin Brown said.

Helicopter sightseeing, not training

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE — An Air Force helicopter was on a sightseeing trip when it crashed, not a training mission as first reported, an accident report says.

The helicopter, a MH-60G Pave Hawk, from this Florida Panhandle base crashed May 28 off Antigua in the Caribbean. Six of eight people aboard were injured. No one was killed.

An accident report obtained by the Northwest Florida Daily News in Fort Walton Beach says the crash happened when crew members were taking pictures over beachside hotels and harbors.

The aircraft, designed to fly behind enemy lines without being detected, had more than $10 million in damage.

A day after the crash, spokesman Lt. Col. Frank Urben told reporters the helicopter had been on a combat search-and-rescue training mission.

Two unidentified members of the helicopter's crew were disciplined, Urben said. The aircraft was one of three helicopters in Antigua for training missions for several days before the accident.

Atlantis lands, Discovery next

By MARGIA BURN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA's next shuttle flight is a trip by Discovery next month to release a satellite that will study the ozone layer.

The Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite is the centerpiece of a $740 million program. It is designed to conduct the first systematic, detailed study of the upper atmosphere from space.

"Specifically, we hope to better understand causes of ozone depletion," said project manager Charles Trevathan. "More generally, we plan to assess the role of human activities in atmospheric changes."

Discovery's five astronauts will release the 14,500-pound satellite during the five-day flight, scheduled to begin around Sept. 12. It will be the 13th voyage for NASA's most traveled shuttle and the 43rd shuttle trip overall.

NASA planned to roll Discovery to the launch pad today.

On Sunday, Atlantis landed at Cape Canaveral after a nine-day mission. The crew put a $120 million communications satellite in orbit and conducted experiments aimed at easing the ill effects of space travel on the body.

Four of the 10 scientific instruments on the satellite released by Discovery will measure the temperature and concentration of ozone in the stratosphere, which begins about 9 1/2 miles above Earth and extends to about 39 miles.

This layer of ozone, a form of oxygen, shields against harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Scientists contend the ozone layer is being destroyed by chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, released by refrigerators, air conditioners and some aerosol sprays.

The consequences of ozone depletion are thought to include an increase in skin cancer, cataracts and immune deficiencies, and destruction of crops and the plankton that supports marine life.

During the satellite's mission of at least 1 1/2 years, scientists hope to observe the autumnal buildup and breakup of the Antarctic ozone hole. The hole, or depletion, is formed by clouds, extreme cold and certain wind patterns.

It will measure wind, temperature, the atmosphere's chemical composition, solar energy and energetic particles from a 372-mile-high orbit.

Parents visit baby abducted from hospital

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — An 18-day-old baby kidnapped from a hospital in Hollywood will undergo more tests and observation at Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center before returning home, a hospital official said.

The infant, James Arthur Parker III, was in stable condition Sunday but doctors advised further tests for an infection before parents Jacqueline Gedeon, 22, and James Parker II took him home, medical center vice president Ed Haugabrook said.

Gedeon and Parker arrived Sunday on a donated flight provided by American Airlines from Miami International Airport to visit the child. Haugabrook said they agreed after talking with doctors to leave the baby at the medical center for 48 to 72 more hours.

Gedeon and Parker, who live in Hallandale, spent about four hours with James before returning to Miami on Sunday afternoon.

Malpractice complaint filed against doctor over treatment

Associated Press

PALM BEACH — A doctor who claims that common ailments ranging from allergies to constipation to infertility are caused by yeast infections throughout the body has been named in a malpractice complaint.

The complaint lodged against Dr. Suzanne Peoples by the state Department of Professional Regulation says there is no clinical evidence to support the claims made in Peoples' advertisements that appear in regional newspapers and on billboards and television and movie screens.

"Could you be a victim of the yeast syndrome?" the ads ask.

And they list possible symptoms: allergies, anxiety, asthma, constipation, diarrhea, ear aches, fatigue, gastroenteritis, headaches, infertility, muscle weakness, muscle aches, persistent coughs, PMS, skin irritations and sinusitis.

State investigators reported enough evidence to bring charges before the state Board of Medicine accusing the physician of false advertising, misdiagnosing patients, gross malpractice, failing to keep written medical records, performing unnecessary tests, exploiting a patient for financial gain and filing false reports.

Defense: Fortune tellers same as clergy in protected statements

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — A drug dealer's talks with a fortune teller who secretly taped her sessions for the FBI deserve the same protection given a penitent's confessions to a priest, say defense attorneys.

In a Deerfield Beach motel room, Ivory McCutcheon of Dania had Sister Peggy Lunday of Belleview read cards and counsel him on wealth, happiness, extramarital affairs and the best times for drug deals.

Their meetings were recorded on tape, two years of hidden video coverage that started when Lunday agreed to cooperate with FBI agents.

But defense attorney Martin

Jaffe argues that because McCutcheon, 59, considered Lunday his spiritual adviser, everything he said to her is protected by law. He cites federal case law that recognizes the confidentiality between a priest and a penitent.

One South Florida religious expert is backing him up.

Task force discusses end to sanctions

By GUY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — There is enough evidence that apartheid is crumbling in South Africa for states to begin considering an end to economic sanctions, a task force of state lawmakers decided.

"A lot of things have happened in South Africa," said Texas state Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, chairwoman of the South Africa Task Force of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

The panel voted unanimously Sunday for a new policy statement allowing "socially responsible" investment by states if real negotiations open between the government of President F.W. De Klerk and the African National Congress led by Nelson Mandela.

"We suggested that the sanctions be maintained at this time, because we don't think the abolishment of apartheid is irreversible," Delco said. "But we recognize there have been many changes and we want to reach some kind of compromise."

The NCSL has for several years maintained a policy asking that governments divest their holdings in companies operating in South Africa in an effort to end apartheid.

At present, 28 states, 24 counties and 92 cities have taken some economic action against South Africa, ranging from divestment of any funds in companies that do business there to selective purchasing of products from those firms.

The NCSL task force cannot directly bind governments to do anything but its recommendation could influence future local votes about sanctions.

South Africa's ambassador to the United States, Harry Heinz Schwarz, urged the task force to recommend lifting of sanctions because of De Klerk's actions to repeal laws limiting where black South Africans can live and that required race-based registration of all people born in that country.

Last month, President Bush lifted federal trade and investment sanctions after finding that South Africa had met five key conditions, including release of political prisoners and repeal of the state of emergency.

Schwarz insisted that South Africa was on an irreversible path toward abolishment of apartheid and that economic sanctions would only hurt the poorest in his country.

"It is irreversible because of its own momentum and because of the forces of history," Schwarz said. "We have to try and solve a political problem and we have to try to solve an economic problem."

Randall Robinson, executive director of the TransAfrica social rights lobbying group, countered that thousands of political prisoners remain in South African jails and that the nation is far from democracy.

"Stated reforms notwithstanding, as we sit here today, not a single black South African can vote," Robinson said. "Most of the apartheid laws, the draconian laws under which blacks have suffered for so long, are still very much in place."

The task force's recommendation goes to the NCSL executive committee, which will forward it to the full NCSL business session for a vote later this week.

Also Sunday, Govs. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina and Roy Romer of Colorado told an NCSL education session that the nation is far from meeting President Bush's six education goals.

Campbell, incoming chair of the National Education Goals Panel, said the much-ballyhooed study of where America's students rate will show the nation cannot even accurately measure their performance.

The report of the panel, formed after last year's Virginia summit between Bush and the nation's governors, will be released next month.

"We discovered what we didn't know more than what we did know in our first year," Campbell said.

Pair arrested for growing marijuana

Julie Ann Pyle, 26, and Stacy Richard Fiebel, 27, both of 214 Pembroke Place in Longwood, were arrested on Friday. They were charged with cultivation of marijuana, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Longwood Police officers used a search warrant to enter and search the home.

The search produced less than 20 grams of marijuana as well as a smoking pipe in two bedrooms at the residence, police said. There were also eight marijuana plants growing on the back porch.

Pyle and Fiebel were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where they were held on $3,000 bond each.

Man jailed for 'crack' possession

Richard Jerald Mobley, 20, of 1303 Hickory Ave. in Sanford, was arrested Friday. He was charged with possession of crack and with possession of drug paraphernalia.

When police responded to a disturbance on Ruff Street, they asked Mobley if they could search his car, the arrest report said. The search produced about $240 worth of crack cocaine and a straight razor used to cut cocaine, police said.

The police stated that the search was done for safety reasons as the defendant was known to deal in weapons sales.

Mobley was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $6,000 bond.

Disorderly intoxication charged

Gregory Alan Richer, 30, of 2715 Country Club Road, in Sanford, was arrested on Saturday. He was charged with disorderly intoxication.

Police had responded to a fight at The Pub, 119 W. Crystal Lake Drive, in Lake Mary, and asked bystanders to quiet down and stand back.

Richer refused to comply with their request, the report said. He also threatened another bystander, police said.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Indecent exposure leads to arrest

Julio Remos, 19, of 203 Bradshaw, in Sanford, was arrested Saturday. He was charged with indecent exposure.

According to the arrest report, police were running a computer check on four individuals who were acting suspiciously in the area of 9th Street and Oak Avenue.

While the police were conducting the check, Remos left the group, undid his pants and began to urinate, police said. Police reported that he did this in the presence of a 15-year-old girl and other juveniles.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Suspect arrested on battery charges

Kelly Eugene Smith, 31, was arrested Saturday and charged with aggravated assault and battery. According to the police report, Smith was involved in an altercation at The Pub, 119 W. Crystal Lake, in Lake Mary.

Police said that witnesses told them that Smith had been threatening another patron with the knife. They also stated that he hit his victim in the face with his fist.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Officer threatened

Steven Tracey Davis, 30, of 1815 W. 15th St., in Sanford, was arrested Friday. He was charged with possession of a counterfeit controlled substance with intent to distribute and with threatening a public servant.

Davis was standing on the corner of 18th Street and Southwest Road in Sanford when police stopped to chat with him. They stated that he appeared nervous. A search of his person revealed a white plastic bottle containing counterfeit crack cocaine, police said.

Davis, also known as Fish, was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. When he arrived there, he allegedly told the arresting officer that he would "have a surprise for (him) the next time he got out of his car."

Man jailed after fight

David Brockway, 49, of Orange City, was arrested Friday and charged with aggravated battery. Police responded to a fight in front of the Tex-Mex restaurant, 1532 S. French Ave., in Sanford.

Brockway hit his victim in the head with a piece of lumber, police said. Witnesses told police that the victim did not retaliate.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $5,000 bond.

Violation of probation charged

Leonard Eugene Malone, 20, of 2320 Granby Ave. in Sanford, was arrested Thursday and charged with violating his probation.

He was serving out his probation on a burglary charge, the sheriff's department report said.

He was taken into custody in Orange County and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held without bond.

WHITING FIELD, Fla. — Women Navy pilots say they aren't trying to pick a fight, but won't have full equality in the military until they are allowed to fly in combat.

"Women want to have the opportunity to fly the aircraft and the missions that men can fly because they are the most challenging," said Lt. Elizabeth Inde, a flight instructor at this naval air station in the Florida Panhandle.

"They challenge your skills and give you opportunities to advance career-wise that the roles women have been limited to so far have not," she said. "It's not that anybody wants to go out and be in a war."

Both houses of Congress have voted to repeal a law that prohibits Air Force, Navy and Marine women from flying combat missions.

The repeal, supported by Defense Secretary Richard Cheney, would not require those services to let women fly combat missions, but it would give them the same discretion the Army already has. Female Army pilots flew unarmed helicopters and came under fire in the Panama invasion and Persian Gulf War.

Air Force officials have said they will allow women to fly combat missions if the law is changed, but the Navy and Marines haven't yet indicated what they would do.

Lt. J.G. Michelle Guidry and Ensign Tracey Fuchs, both flight students, also said they aren't battle-seekers but would do the job if assigned to a combat unit.

"That's what I joined the service for, to protect our country, and when you protect you fight, if necessary," said Guidry of Lafayette, La.

"We are trained the same as the men are," said Fuchs, a Naval Academy graduate from Wausau, Wis. "I think it's a shame to waste our ability ... to waste our training."

That training includes two weeks in a simulated prisoner of war camp. The Navy in recent years has been giving women pilots the same realistic POW training that men receive.

Arvida may sell land to build a new high school

By VICKI BOBROWNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Though it is needed now, it will probably be a few years before the Seminole County school district builds a new high school.

At tomorrow afternoon's 3:30 board meeting the board will discuss the possibility that Arvida Corporation may sell the needed land to the school district.

The land in question is located south and east of Sanford.

A deal between the school district and Arvida, which donated the land for Heathrow Elementary School in Lake Mary, has been in the works for over a year.

The land appraisals by the school district and by Arvida were completed in March and a site feasibility study was done in May.

There was a $540,000 discrepancy in the two appraisal amounts. As a result the deal with Arvida has been put on hold.

Meanwhile, a meeting held with county officials on July 31 resulted in the county selling aside an additional 35 acres for a school site near Yankee Lake in Sanford, near State Road 46 and the Lower Wekiva River State Reserve. The County site is adjacent to the 15-acre elementary school site already owned by the district.

It is possible that the school district might decide to purchase the county land and combine it with the elementary school site to have the 50 acres that the state requires for a high school campus.

There has been some concern by environmentalists that the construction of a school would have an adverse effect on the Lower Wekiva River State Reserve. Before any deal is finalized, the matter will be researched.

Both the Arvida and the Yankee Lake sites are covered under the Wekiva River Protection Act.

The act could prevent one or both sites from being developed as school sites because of the prohibition of any increased traffic flow from outside the protected area. The county will have to perform traffic impact studies which will take approximately 60 days to complete.

It will be at least October before the school board will be able to take any action on the issue.

The school board will meet in the administrative building board room, 1211 Mellonville Ave., in Sanford.

Woman arrested for embezzling $10,000

By VICKI BOBROWNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Denise Ann Jandik, 35, of 102 Lakeside Circle, in Sanford, was arrested on Friday and charged with embezzling more than $10,000 from the company where she was employed until her arrest.

Police records show that Jandik had been in charge of the checking account at Central Florida Psychological Services, 202 N. Park Ave., Suite B, in Sanford, from early April through the end of July 1991.

During that time, the report asserted, Jandik wrote about $10,015 in checks to pay bills or make business-related purchases. She would then endorse the checks to herself and deposit them in her personal account or cash them.

According to the arrest report, Jandik also told police that she had taken cash from the office when people had paid for the services of the center in cash.

The report revealed that Jandik told investigators that she had taken the money in an effort to relieve her personal debts.

Jandik was arrested at her office on Friday and charged with grand theft.

She was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she immediately posted $1,000 bond and was released.

Placing principle before expediency

By shifting its position on Yugoslavia, the Bush administration has placed principle above geopolitical expediency.

When the crisis in Yugoslavia erupted, Secretary of State James Baker assured Prime Minister Ante Markovic that he was the only person with whom the United States would negotiate. At the same time, Baker sternly warned the breakaway republics of Slovenia and Croatia that the United States would "neither encourage nor reward secession."

Baker's pronouncement was praised in the Kremlin, where communist leaders are worried that a potential breakup of Yugoslavia could be a prelude to the dissolution of the Soviet Union. Moscow's propagandists even tried to equate President Lincoln's campaign to hold his nation together with Moscow's attempt to crush the Baltic states.

Such a bizarre comparison ignores the fact that the United States of 130 years ago was vastly different from the once-independent Baltic nations or the remaining communist countries in Eastern Europe. Unlike the American union, which was freely and openly agreed to, the captive peoples of Eastern Europe were seized by force and held in check by communist-dominated armies.

Yugoslavia is coming apart because the repressive hand of the Communist Party has been eased after more than four decades. This has unleashed ethnic tensions that long have simmered beneath the surface. Consequently, the Bush administration is correct to shift its stance and openly support those people who want to determine their own destiny.

Created in 1918 from the remnants of the Ottoman and Austro-Hungarian empires, Yugoslavia is a volatile mix of ethnic and nationalistic forces. More than 90 percent of the people living in Slovenia and Croatia have voted to break away from the central government in Belgrade.

A peace accord brokered by the European Community (EC) may help keep Yugoslavia from plunging into full-scale civil war. Although the breakaway republics have consented to talk over their differences with the central government, fighting continues between several elements, especially in the Serbian-dominated areas of Croatia. The Serbs, who make up about 11 percent of the republic's 5 million people, are in virtual rebellion. The unrest in Croatia is only likely to grow in the future. Such turmoil gives the Yugoslav army a pretext for its lingering occupation.

Because the United States supports the EC peace plan, it has joined in prohibiting all arms sales to Yugoslavia. If Washington and the European Community can help bring about a peaceful resolution of the crisis without the breakup of Yugoslavia, so much the better. But that must not be achieved at the expense of the self-determination sought by millions of people.

Citizens intimidated

Back in May and June of this year I was asked to gather signatures for an amendment to the Lake Mary Charter. This amendment would require Lake Mary citizens to vote on any monies to be spent, by the mayor and city commissioners, of which payment would extend beyond the end of any fiscal year. This basic amendment was originally in our Lake Mary Charter and was amended in 1987.

As I am in favor of sound financial judgement, and not run-away spending from our elected officials, and do wish to hold them accountable for the decisions they make, I felt that gathering these signatures and speaking with my neighbors and fellow citizens was a worthy cause.

Much to my dismay and shock on July 11, 1991 I was served by an official of the court a summons, naming me and several other citizens of Lake Mary as defendants in a lawsuit against our Mayor Randall Morris and the Lake Mary commissioners.

After trying to comprehend the legal jargon of such a lawsuit, as I am not an attorney, I have come to the conclusion that our mayor and city commissioners have used taxpayer dollars to intimidate Lake Mary citizens and to possibly delay this democratic process.

Simply put the citizens of Lake Mary have submitted via the legal process set up by Florida Statutes, the required number of signatures to have this amendment placed before the voting public on the November ballot. The mayor and city commissioners have seen fit to go out of their way to PROHIBIT OUR CITIZENS FROM VOTING ON THIS ISSUE IN NOVEMBER, or possibly ever.

What has happened to our Godly heritage of a democratic government? What has happened to a government of the people, by the people and for the people? Why are the citizens of Lake Mary being stifled and intimidated?

A frigid summer blasts the heartland

It is the most gorgeous August day one could hope for, unseasonably mild with only the slightest touch of the Missouri humidity that usually saps our bones of anything tenable and leaves us draped, raglike, across our furniture. The cool nights have been the stuff of great literature, with full moons flooding our carpets through opened windows.

Outside my office, birds float lazily over the picnic tables in our company's front yard. I think they may be chirping. Their little beaks are tilted toward the trees and their bodies quiver. Beneath our graceful old shade trees, employees from the company across the street eat their sack lunches. A soft breeze blows a Ziploc bag across the yard.

Inside, I sit at my desk huddled in a dress, blazer, underalls and old softball jacket. The air-conditioning vent above me directs an icy blast at my head and my sinuses are enraged. I've already climbed on my desk to see if I could redirect the gust elsewhere, to no avail. The brain trust that designed the building didn't have the foresight of the folks who designed my house, and didn't put in vents one can manually close when an area is cool enough.

"If I could just open that window, I could be warm again," I think, matching the fervor with which the Little Match Girl foolishly struck away all her matches. I, too, am willing to let my future be damned and fling open the windows in the hope of holding off the chill for a moment, even if it lets more fossil fuels out that burning in Kuwait. It's hard to be reasonable when your brain is stuck to your skull like a tongue to a Popsicle.

But of course I can't. Just like the windows in all the buildings I have worked in for the last 15 years, they don't open. The brain trust, again. They knew some smart aleck like me would think that my body temperature being at 92.1 would be more important than the temperature at the thermostat being a comfortable 70 degrees, and open a window, or that perhaps some heavy guy at the other end of the building where the system doesn't work so well might open one to keep from passing out.

You see, those boys have been to architectural college, and they understand the chaos you can have if you start letting people open windows. Here's how one of them explained it to me recently:

"First, you open windows and the next thing you know a good stiff breeze starts whipping papers off people's desks. Pretty soon you've gotta go to the office-supply store and buy paperweights for everyone in the place, and that could run up a horrible tab, say $14.50 or so. Then there's the fan problem. You let people open windows, then some wise guy brings in a fan. A fan! Can you believe it? Now you gotta put TWO paperweights on everyone's desk, and there's another $14.50 down the drain. Then that darn fan yanks some woman's dress up over her head, you've got yourself a sexual harassment charge."

Well, he didn't have to go any further to convince me, although I did later suffer a small crisis of faith when I heard a radio report about the dangers of the air in modern buildings, and read that buildings with windows you can open only use half the energy that sealed structures use.

Computer viruses get more lethal

WASHINGTON — When the workers of a Washington, D.C., company arrived at their office one morning and switched on their computers, they found an amusing message flashing across their terminals: "Your PC is now stoned. Legalize marijuana."

Then came the sinking realization that it was no joke — but rather it was a way of computer hackers saying: Gotcha. All the computers at this Washington, D.C., firm had their memories wiped clean and internal files ed by a computer virus — the deliberate sabotaging of a computer system.

An infinite number of viruses have been employed, and most even have names and aliases, and are used more than once. This particular virus even has aliases that include "Hawaii," "Marijuana," "New Zealand," "Smithsonian," or "Hamo."

Other viruses are known in the trade by aliases that include "Friday 13th," "Frog's Alley," and "Fu Manchu."

According to the Virus Dictionary, the Fu Manchu virus is activated when certain keys are pressed, then the message "the world will hear from me again" is displayed. Rude messages materialize when the names of several prominent politicians are typed. (The authors of this virus misspelled the names.)

The authors of the virus called "Sunday" apparently crusade for leisure time. Their virus, which is triggered when infected files run on any Sunday, flashes this message: "Today is Sunday! Why do you work so hard? All work and no play make you a dull boy! Come on! Let's go out and have some fun!"

The lighthearted names belie the fact that viruses are lethal to the nation's private and governmental computer systems. Experts estimate that computer crime costs the U.S. economy upward of $50 billion annually. These are typically "perfect crimes" in the sense that detection is difficult and only one out of every 22,000 computer crimes results in a conviction.

Winn Schwartz, executive director of the International Partnership Against Computer Terrorism, believes that an estimated 521 viruses have been identified, and that an average of 12 new computer viruses are being introduced every day.

It happens with startling frequency, though only some of the more celebrated cases hit the headlines. Such as the estimated $116 million spent repairing damage caused by a "worm" virus inserted into the nation's largest computer network by a Cornell University student in 1988. And the $100 million to clean up the effects of the so-called "Columbus Day" virus of 1989.

Sources told our associate Dean Boyd that the computers of America's private sector are at even greater peril than those of the government. Last April, we reported that many U.S. government computers are easy prey for saboteurs. A recent example involves a Dutch hacker group that evaded U.S. authorities for nearly six months as they penetrated the computer systems of the Kennedy Space Center, the Pentagon's Pacific Fleet Command and the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory.

What's the solution? Experts believe that Americans tend to treat their computers like small-town residents treat their cars. They leave the doors unlocked and their keys in the ignition. Many sources argue that the current apathy of the federal government toward computer security has spilled over into the private sector.

Until this new breed of micro chip-terrorists can be foiled by prevention and prosecution, the crime wave will go unabated.

Victims' families due more

Susan and Daniel Cohen, writers of children's books, haven't done much since their only child, Theodora, a Syracuse University theater major who was studying abroad, boarded a jetliner, buckled her seat belt and died at age 20 because terrorists chose to blow up Pan Am 103.

So the Cohens were in their home on Elizabeth Street in Port Jervis, N.Y., on July 27, when a friend called and read them a Washington Post story about how fabulously President Bush and Syria's Hafez al-Assad have gotten along ever since their Geneva meeting last November — where Assad "displayed his fabled sardonic wit" on the subject of terrorism.

The Post's Pulitzer Prize-winning Caryle Murphy wrote:

"Responding to U.S. complaints about the presence in Damascus of Ahmed Jibril, a Palestinian guerrilla leader who has been linked to the 1988 bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, Assad launched into a tongue-in-cheek speech about the complications for Bush if Jibril were ever extradited. He would, no doubt, be let out on bail, would hire a lawyer and, if acquitted, would ask for a green card." The Syrian reportedly joked.

Shock does not begin to convey what the Cohens felt as they listened to the words read to them by Kathleen Flynn, of McLean, Va., whose 21-year-old son, John Patrick, was also a passenger on Pan Am 103.

"The outrage — the fury — I felt when I heard those words cannot be expressed," says Susan. Her husband adds: "The joke is so grotesque. We're dealing with the murder of our child. And to think that someone who we suspect was behind it is joking about it with the president of the United States — and he gets away with it — is..." His voice trails off; there is no word for what it is.

How did Bush react to Assad's unconscionable little joke? Did he respond firmly or just smile along with the Syrian despot on whom he was lavishing his diplomatic woo-woo in the hope that it would bring Syria to the peace table. The White House officially has nothing to report; in fact, said spokesman Douglas Davidson, "Our people don't remember that exchange as having happened."

This much we do know: Our president has not comforted himself well on behalf of the families of those who flew Pan Am 103 on Dec. 21, 1988. Indeed, in that time of presidential transition, the Reagan and Bush White Houses let four months pass before sending their first response — a perfunctory letter of condolence. Bush had found time in the interval to greet the champions of the Super Bowl and the NCAA's Final Four.

A few days ago, the families of 21 of the victims wrote the Lord Advocate of Scotland, Lord Peter Fraser, who is in charge of the official investigation of the bombing, to release a report on his government's findings. Their letter said that "the most plausible theory" aired publicly is that Iran paid the Syrian-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine's General Command (headed by Ahmed Jibril) to blow up the jetliner, and that the job apparently was contracted out to Libyan terrorists based in Malta.

These families expressed concern about "what appears to be a campaign to absolve the West's new friend, Syria, from any responsibility," adding: "We need full disclosure, free from any political interference..." They deserve at least that — and so do the rest of us.

President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker deserve a world of applause for their efforts to bring peace to the Middle East. But they surely know that Assad turned to the United States in an act of desperation, not a rush of affection, after seeing his Soviet benefactors plunge into economic and political bankruptcy.

The shock and outrage felt by the Cohens, the Flynns and all who lost loved ones on Pan Am 103 is a jolting reminder:

There will be no peace for peace-makers who, in the rush to the tables in the Middle East, choose diplomatic silence as their vehicle of expedience.

The shock and outrage felt by all who lost loved ones on Pan Am 103 is a jolting reminder.

Bush organizes time for recreation

By NTA BRANSON
Associated Press Writer

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Never let it be said that President Bush wastes time — especially when it comes to making sure he gets every possible minute to enjoy his passion for recreation.

It seems Bush even has organized the way he dresses to avoid wasting precious minutes of fun, which explains why he wore a pair of gleamingly unusual cream-colored shoes and white socks to church on Sunday.

Bush's lace-up, old-fashioned walking shoes lazily leaped out as the first thing noticeable about him when he appeared Sunday in an otherwise sedate outfit with gray suit and white shirt.

He told reporters, as if trying to convince himself, that "these shoes are coming back."

Everyone has been commenting favorably on them."

But it wasn't style that dictated his choice of shoes, Bush explained.

"I wore them because I've got my white socks on. The reason I put them on is because I don't have to waste time changing when I come out to play tennis," right after church, he said.

On another visit to his vacation home this summer, Bush's rush to play caused him to reject an invitation from the church minister to come in for post-service refreshments.

"Got to go tee off," he said before heading to the golf course.

When he vacationed in Islamorada, Fla., earlier this year, Bush dashed through a quick round of golf, then jumped into his limousine and began pulling off his pants.

He had on running shorts underneath and drove straight to a nearby neighborhood to go for a jog.

The president was concerned, however, that two young grandsons not get so involved in their own fun that they skip out on Sunday morning church.

As his motorcade pulled away from the family compound on Walker's Point to go to St. Ann's Episcopal Church nearby, Bush got on the loudspeaker he has in his limousine.

"Jebby and Sam, Jebby and Sam. Report for church duty," the president's voice boomed out. "C'mon you guys. Where are you? Stop hiding."

It turned out that the boys, who had been racing around the compound in their Sunday best all morning, had made it into one of the other cars in the motorcade and were successfully transported to church.

Jeb, 7, is the son of Bush's son Jeb of Florida. The mother of 6-year-old Sam is Bush's daughter Dorothy LeBlond of Washington.

The president's monthlong Maine vacation got off to a rocky start for NBC White House correspondent John Cochran.

Cochran was covering Bush's attendance at a meeting of church vestrymen on Saturday morning when he was attacked by a swarm of bees outside St. Ann's.

He suffered three stings in the ear.

Bush's physician, Larry Mohr, gave on-the-spot treatment, complete with sympathetic bedside manner.

He gave Cochran Tylenol and said, "Don't worry John, you can take the pain. It'll be over soon."

Mohr later pronounced Cochran in "great shape and excellent health."

Two other reporters found themselves the tiebreaking guinea pigs for Bush's afternoon golf match. After 28 holes, Bush and his partners were tied, so UPI's Tom Ferraro, who had been showing off his driving style earlier while waiting for Bush to tee off, was invited to join the president's team. Club pro Ken Raynor of the Cape Arundel golf course made their threesome.

Larry McQuillan of Reuters was pressed into service for the opposition and employed an unusual technique when he was racking up too many strokes.

At the urging of Bush's personal photographer, McQuillan waited until no one was looking, picked up his ball, and tossed it onto the green, then nonchalantly played out the hole.

The Bush-Ferraro team won.

Suit

its equal value," Laurence said. "The net affect is to bring in more money for the county. If appraised at a greater value, it would bring a lot more money in for schools."

Laurence said he based the suit on a 1988 U.S. Supreme Court decision stating that a home "similarly situated" to others should be assessed equally to those other homes.

Suber said neighborhood sales are considered in evaluating assessments for tax purposes. He said the greatest impact of the adjustments this year was the change in the base rate, the cost to rebuild the same home today, of older homes. Suber said homes older than one year can still be depreciated, but by a less amount than allowed previously.

Suber defended the practice of depreciation, saying it is an appraisal practice accepted worldwide. He said county appraisers have suspected problems with older home assessments for several years, but he said he would not change the methods until the study confirmed the suspicions.

Bill of Rights anniversary is proving bittersweet for ABA

By RICHARD CABELLI
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The Bill of Rights' 200th anniversary, a major theme of the weeklong American Bar Association convention, is proving bittersweet for lawyers concerned about recent rulings by a conservative Supreme Court.

The mood, more reminiscent of a wake than a celebration, spurred Charles E. Moylan, a Maryland judge, to warn civil libertarians against overreacting.

"Do not categorize as a catastrophe or calamity that which is only a disaster," Moylan quipped Sunday as he discussed changes in Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable police searches and seizures.

"We are seeing a counter-revolution," said Moylan, a judge on the Maryland Court of Special Appeals in Baltimore. The high court is "dismantling the Warren court revolution of the 1960s."

ABA President John J. Curtin Jr. later talked about American "freedom and liberty ... as currently applied and as they may be in the future." He warned that the government's war on drugs may be going too far.

BankAmerica and Security Pacific announce merger

Associated Press

NEW YORK — BankAmerica Corp. and Security Pacific Corp. today announced the largest banking merger in U.S. history, creating what would be the nation's second biggest banking company with assets of $190 billion.

The West Coast merger announcement comes only weeks after two pairs of other large banks announced mega-mergers in the rapidly consolidating banking business, where strength in size is becoming more critical to compete.

Last month, Chemical Banking Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp., with assets totaling $135 billion, agreed to combine their operations, and CNB Corp. and C&S-Sovran Corp., with assets totaling $118 billion, agreed to merge.

Under the latest agreement, each share of Los-Angeles-based Security Pacific common stock will be exchanged for 0.88 shares of San Francisco-based Bank America and the Security

Pacific name will become history.

The latest deal was approved by the boards of directors and signed Sunday by the chairmen of BankAmerica and Security Pacific, a statement said.

BankAmerica and Security Pacific already were among the five biggest banks in the country and the biggest on the West Coast. They had been secretly negotiating a merger intermittently since April, said Peter Magnani, a spokesman for Bank America.

Japanese students visit America to learn, shop and teach

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

They traveled from Japan, undaunted by language barriers and cultural differences, to learn about us.

And to buy Reeboks and Benetton clothing. It's half the price here, Kazuhiko Hatai, escort for the students, ages 18 through 20, said.

"They came to America to have good time and to be in different culture. They came to be able to speak English," Hatai, acting as interpreter, explained.

Pacific American Institute matches students with host families for the three week adventure. Program coordinator is Leslie Campagna, who planned learning experiences, trips and classroom work at Old Lake Mary City Hall. Lake Mary Seniors are surrogate grandparents to the students for the length of their stay, until Aug. 21. Alta Ombrca said.

Hatai said there are many similarities and many differences in life on two bustling continents.

"Not so much difference in dress. We are westernized," Hatai said. "When we meet someone here they are so open. When you meet someone from our country, they are more formal."

Hatai explained that the students were eager to shop at Altamonte Mall, one of the planned outings.

"We do not have malls in the same sense as your malls here. Price setting here is one half. One student came to me because she was worried about being lost in the mall. But she was very, very eager to buy," Hatai grinned.

Hatai said the hottest trends in Japan are Reebok sports shoes and Benetton clothing.

Lake Mary senior, Helen Griffith, said working with the students is refreshing. And learning from them is too.

"They're terrific! The language barrier is hard, but we get a lot," she said.

Griffith, Jean Glensinger and Marjorie Seay were busily learning Origami, the ancient Oriental art of folding paper.

from the Japanese students.

"We're making paper Ninja weapons," the ladies chorused.

Teacher for the program, Ann Land, said bringing people of all ages and cultural backgrounds together is a wonderful way to dispel misconceptions about a group and to learn more about people.

"All of the students seem to be very intelligent but hesitant to use the English language they learn. They are very flexible. I think this is a positive experience all around," Land said. Senior center director Paulee Stevens agreed.

"We made our own kind of Pidgin English type communication. I tried to get through the communication barrier by doing a little hugging. They were a bit surprised at first, but now they expect the hugs," Stevens said.

Planting hands on her hips, the outspoken senior activist added, "They're also better behaved and more polite than most American teenagers!"

Teen model experiences invaluable opportunity

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Kristi Gentner, soon to be senior at Lake Mary High School, has been modeling for 14 months.

"Actually, I took the school year off," she said from her apartment in Chicago.

Gentner has spent the summer in the Windy City modeling for Montgomery Ward catalogues and for Extra magazine which is distributed in Chicago, Los Angeles and New York.

Last summer, at the urging of her father Robert Gentner, Kristi sent photos of herself to the Elite Modeling Agency in New York.

"I'd never done any modeling before but my father took some pictures of me and we sent them in," she said.

She was subsequently nominated to enter the international contest to select the young woman who had the "Look of the 90s."

"I never made it to the top 16," Gentner said, "but it was a neat experience."

She said that during the school year she returned to Lake Mary and didn't pursue any work as a model because she just wanted to be "a regular kid."

Her father noted that her boyfriend occupied much of her attention when she wasn't studying.

"But that's important to when you're 17," he said.

Gentner went to Chicago this summer to learn about the rigors of modeling.

"In New York they'd just eat you alive," she said, adding that Chicago is a safer city for a single young woman than New York or Los Angeles.

Kristi said that she has had fun this summer, but she is homesick for Florida despite frequent visits from her father, an airline pilot, and some of her schoolmates.

"When I get homesick I go

to the beach, (on Lake Michigan)," she said. "Or I go shopping."

Kristi said that she looks forward to coming home a few days before school starts on Aug. 26.

"I probably won't do any work during the school year," she said.

Kristi said that the work she has done this summer has earned her enough money in pay for the stay in Chicago, but the experience has been invaluable.

After graduation, Kristi plans to attend the Parsons School of Fashion Design in New York City where she plans to study fashion merchandising.

"Modeling helps me look at that world from a different perspective," she noted.

Robert Gentner said that he is happy that his daughter is enjoying her career and said he will support her in whatever she does.

"I think she's very good at what she does," he said. "At whatever she does."

Natherson glides through debut

LAKE MARY
LACY DOMEN

Lake Mary resident Maryann Natherson, 15, as elegant as a princess, glided through last Saturday evening, the night of her debut.

Affiliated with the Fil-Am Association of Central Florida, members from Tampa, Melbourne, Kissimmee and the Orlando area attended the gala event where only three local young women debuted at the Penta Hotel near the Orlando International Airport.

Maryann, a junior at Lake Mary High School, said the event would always be a memorable highlight to coming of age.

"I was nervous, but it was good, really nice," she said.

Maryann's mom, Amor Charles, said the crowd was a good-sized one and everyone looked beautiful.

"My girls were definitely the prettiest," she proudly commented.

Daughter Amor, 17, a senior at Lake Mary High School, led the way for Maryann. She had her coming out two years ago.

Both girls and their mom wore gowns fashioned by Amor, a professional seamstress and designer who is currently putting her own catalog together.

Entertainment and a sit-down dinner was included.

"The entertainment was all young kids," Maryann said. Talent included Maryann's sister, Amor sang the solo "Think About His Love."

Maryann is studying to be a doctor. She is in the gifted program at Lake Mary High. She also plays clarinet in the band and has been named to Who's Who Among American High School Students two years in a row.

Dance Camp '91 coming to Y

The Magic Girls, the professional dance team for the Orlando Magic, are ready to teach the hottest new dance routines to today's most popular songs. Camp is being held in conjunction with the Y's summer program on Saturday, Aug. 17, from 12 to 5 p.m.

Cost of camp is $25 for each five hours of instruction per girl.

Proceeds from Magic Girl Dance Camp will go to the Orlando Magic Foundation and to YMCA. Call the Y at 321-8944 for more information.

Seniors stay busy.

Lake Mary Seniors will participate in the Volunteer Fair at the Casselberry Senior Center on Wednesday, Aug. 21.

Prior to Aug. 26, all seniors who are artists may sign up to bring two pieces of art, including oils, acrylics, watercolors, pho-

Newcomer hurls no-hitter

BALTIMORE — When he got the first out, Wilson Alvarez had already done better than the only other time he pitched in the major leagues. Then, things kept getting better and better.

When he was through for the day, Alvarez had thrown the season's sixth no-hitter Sunday, leading the Chicago White Sox past the Baltimore Orioles 7-0.

Alvarez' effort was quite a bit different than his big-league debut in July 1989, when he faced five Toronto batters as a member of the Texas Rangers. He didn't retire any of them, giving up two homers in the process.

This time, one day after being called up from Double-A Birmingham, the 21-year-old left-hander struck out seven and walked five.

GOLF

Rookie wins PGA

CARMEL, Ind. — John Daly, the longest hitter in professional golf and a last-minute entry, completed his improbable and incredible victory in the PGA Championship with Sunday's round at 1-under par. Even a double-bogey on the 17th hole didn't stop him. By then, he still had a three-stroke lead, and victory — if not assured — was at least in sight.

He easily outdistanced his challengers with his drives and finished 12 under par 278, beating Bruce Lietzke by three strokes.

Lietzke came in at 70 for a four-round total of 279. Jim Gallagher Jr. was at 5-under 67 for the round and finished at 7-under 281. Kenny Knox finished at 6-under 282. Steven Richardson and Bob Gilder tied for fifth at 283.

Baseball World All-Stars claims AAU Junior Olympic title

From Staff Reports

CONWAY, Arkansas — Perseverance pays off. The Baseball World of Florida All-Stars came back from a loss in pool play and a loss in medal play to win their second straight Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) Junior Olympics National Championship.

The local stars had to play 10 games in six days, including tripleheaders both Friday and Saturday, to win the AAU Junior Olympic 13-year-old Division and follow up the title they won as 12-year-olds last year.

Playing with virtually the same 12-man team as last year, the All-Stars outlasted the field of 24 teams from throughout the United States that came to the tournament.

The team was put together with players, all of whom are students at Baseball World, from five different summer baseball programs from throughout Central Florida and was managed by Baseball World owner and operator Tom Emanaki. Assisting Emanaki was Baseball World instructor Garry Ridge, who served as third base coach and hitting and fielding instructor.

Making up the team were Danny Bogaesje, Ricky Engleberg, Jason Gronert and Jarrod Rouse from Altamonte Little League; Pete Gill, Matt Huston, Dwayne Sanford and Nick Thomas from Goldenrod Little League; C.J. Kinch from Azalea Park Little League; Jonathan McDonald and Bradley Ramirez from Union Park Little League; and Brian Turley from the Winter Haven Dixie Youth program.

The original field was broken into six four-team pools with the winner from each pool and the two teams with the best run differential going to the eight team, double-elimination Medal Round.

The locals opened pool play last Monday with a 16-1 trouncing of Bakersfield, Missouri. Kinch was the big gun, blasting a grand slam and a two-run homer in support of winning pitcher Turley.

But on Tuesday, the host team from Conway reversed things, shutting down Baseball World 7-1. Gill, Turley, Thomas, Huston and Rouse had hits.

With their backs to the wall the locals needed a big game on Wednesday to get themselves into the Medal Round and they responded by crushing the Valpo Stars (from Valparaiso, Indiana) 16-5.

Rouse and Kinch both homered for the winners while Gill and Ramirez had three hits each. Turley and Huston two hits each and Engleberg and Sanford one hit each. Bogaesje was the starting pitcher.

With Conway going undefeated in pool play, Baseball World had to go the run differential route to get to the medal round.

In the first game of Medal Round play Thursday, Baseball World had to go nine innings to defeat the New England Mariners (from Massachusetts) 5-3 behind strong pitching from Turley.

McDonald led the offense with a 4-for-4 game but Turley had two hits and drove in the winning run. Rouse also had a pair of hits while Ramirez added one.

In their first game Friday, Baseball World ran

Hill ignites Dolphins' comeback

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — Statistics didn't tell the story of Randall Hill's contribution in his debut with the Miami Dolphins.

The first-round draft pick didn't catch a pass Saturday night, but the speedy wide receiver did set up a touchdown when he slipped behind Tampa Bay's Glen Rogers and the defender tackled him to prevent a possible TD catch.

Rogers was penalized for pass interference at the 1-yard line and Miami's Aaron Craver scored three plays later to start a comeback that carried the Dolphins to a 29-13 victory over the Buccaneers.

"My timing was kind of off on that play, but we got a penalty out of it. It worked out just as well as if I had made the catch," said Hill, who ended a 26-day holdout last week when he signed a three-year, $2.1 million contract.

"I came very close to making the catch for the touchdown, but the ball was somewhat underthrown," Hill added. "It touched my hands, but I couldn't pull it all the way in." Scott Secules, who's battling Scott Mitchell to keep his job as Dan Marino's backup, believes Hill's speed (4.29 seconds in the 40-yard dash) adds another dimension to one of the NFL's most productive passing attacks.

"He's going to help this team a lot. We can find his strengths and work them into the game plan," Secules said. "He can really stretch out the defense."

The Dolphins (2-1) played without Marino and five other starters on offense. Secules, Mitchell and Doug Pederson shared the quarterback duties with Mitchell throwing a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown passes to Freddie Banks to pull out the victory.

Rotarians gamble on BECAHI's Golden Hawks

Desperate situations call for desperate actions.

OK, so the fact that the annual Rotary Bowl has played to dwindling crowds the last few years may not qualify as a desperate situation in the grand scheme of things, but it terms of Seminole County athletics, it's a point worth pondering.

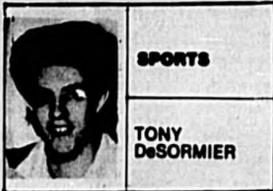

Certainly, the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club, the organizer of the Thanksgiving eve high school football tradition, has given the matter considerable thought.

Last year, for example, less than 3,000 people showed up at Lyman High School Stadium to watch Dr. Phillips defeat Lake Mary. Considering that the Rotary Bowl is the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club's primary fund raiser, those numbers are cause for consternation.

It's no great mystery why the game hasn't drawn in recent years. The explanations are almost too numerous to list here. Of all those, the most obvious are:

● Most of us have things to do the night before Thanksgiving (or in the case of last year's game, Thanksgiving morning) that may not be more interesting than going to a high school football game but may be more pressing.

● Given the premium of free time around the holidays, the casual fan

SPORTS

is more likely to work his or her schedule around the first round of the playoffs (which are played the Friday or Saturday after Thanksgiving) rather than a bowl game involving teams not good enough to make the playoffs.

● And while the Rotary Bowl is a fund raiser for an organization that does a lot of good work in the community, attending a high school football game doesn't rank up there with jury duty in terms of civic responsibility.

From where the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club stands, those factors combine to create a fairly serious situation. When your basic function is charity work and your primary source of funds is drying up, something has to be done.

To their credit, they did it. On Friday, the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club formally extended an invitation to defending Pennsylvania Class 3A state champion Bethlehem Catholic High School (BECAHI) to play in this year's game. And Bethlehem Catholic formally accepted.

Again, considering the circumstances, that has to be considered a crapshoot. The Southeast Seminole Rotarians are gambling that having such a quality opponent in place will make the game more attractive to local teams and, in turn, make the game more attractive to local fans.

There several reasons why the Rotarians believe (or strongly hope, at any rate) why bringing in the BECAHI Golden Hawks isn't so much a gamble but a calculated risk.

For starters, BECAHI principal Dick Culver said that the Golden Hawks hope to fill a 320-seat Lockheed L1011 charter. Culver said the school cheerleaders would definitely be making the trip and that he hoped the band would also be able to come.

Also, Larry Cowart, who has served on the Rotary Bowl selection committee the last seven or eight years, said that there should be some interest among the transplanted Pennsylvanians in the Central Florida area to see a team from their home state play.

Ultimately, however, the Rotarians are banking on the insatiable appetite of Florida football fans for a top-notch game and the pride that Florida football fans take in the high standard of play at the high school level. Here will be the opportunity to measure that standard against one of the best teams from another football-dominant state.

As a whole, the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club deserves credit for making such a decision. It is an aggressive move that, it could be argued, borders on the foolhardy. But rather remain a minor step on the Central Florida athletic calendar, the SSRC has taken the steps necessary to once again make the Rotary Bowl a legitimate event.

By no means is success guaranteed. The Rotarians may find themselves using their Thanksgiving turkey wishbone to erase the memory of a failed effort. But at the risk of sounding cliché, nothing ventured, nothing gained. And if this venture does pay off, then the entire area will gain from the added charity work that the Southeast Seminole Rotary Club will be able to undertake.

Physician should prescribe iron

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently went to my pharmacist with a prescription for iron pills, and my druggist told me to pick up the exact same thing over-the-counter at half the price. Besides paying a doctor $20 for a prescription, I have found many times I can get the same thing at a reduced price over-the-counter. Your columns are usually full of good advice, but this time you went out on a limb for the medical profession and handed everyone a saw. Any comments?

DEAR READER: Iron, a mineral necessary for the normal production of red blood cells, is dangerous. Excess quantities can cause liver and heart disorders. Therefore, people should not take iron supplements unless there is a bona fide medical reason, such as iron deficiency anemia, for doing so. For this reason, I discourage patients from self-medicating with over-the-counter iron remedies. Many people who feel run-down and tired may choose to take iron pills. This can lead to health problems if iron deficiency is not the cause of the symptoms.

I hope the $20 you paid your physician included a blood test for anemia. If not, you were ripped off by the doctor, who should know better than to prescribe a potentially hazardous substance without first testing you.

Having said this, I admit that I will, on occasion, suggest that a patient use iron without formal testing. For example, if a woman with excessive menstruation calls me to complain that she recently had an extremely heavy period and feels dragged out, I'm likely to order an iron supplement to replace the mineral she lost from her bleeding. However, such a situation is the exception, not the rule.

Finally, I'd like to add that medicines purchased without a prescription are every bit as good — although not usually as strong — as prescription drugs.

By Phillip Alder

One of the world's top violinists, Alfredo Campoli, died in March at 84. Music was in his blood: His mother was a top soprano who was particularly admired by Verdi, and his father was a professor of violin at Rome's prestigious St. Cecilia Conservatory.

Alfredo started to play the violin at 5, and by 13 he had won so many competitions that he was asked never to enter again.

His music career blossomed, but after he learned bridge in 1928, he always checked out the location of the local bridge club wherever his busy concert schedule took him. For example, in 1953 he made his New York debut at both Carnegie Hall and the Cavendish Club.

Campoli's bridge expertise can be judged from today's deal. Cover the East-West hands; then plan the play in four spades.

West leading the heart two and East putting up the queen.

North's two-club response was the Drury convention, promising a maximum as a passed hand and at least three spades in support of South.

It was clearly necessary to keep West off the lead, so Campoli ducked the first trick. He won the heart return, played a ruff in hand, went back to dummy with another trump and ruffed the last heart.

Next came the diamond ace, a diamond to dummy's king, and a diamond ruff. Having eliminated the red suits, Campoli led a club and inserted dummy's 10. East won with the jack but had to concede either a trick to the club king or a ruff and discard. Whichever he chose, Campoli would lose only two club tricks, thus making his contract. (C)1991. HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Ouel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 13, 1991

The course you've been steering continues to be the right one for you in the year ahead. There are rewards for you at the end of the road, but if you make sudden changes, you could set yourself back.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your work habits might not be up to par today and, if you try to get by with "a lick and a promise," it could produce undesirable results and may put your job in jeopardy. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are indifferent about money matters today, you might let an opportunity that could have been profitable slip right through your fingers. You'll regret it later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a pretty good promoter today, and you have the ability to arouse interest in others. Unfortunately, you might not be an equally good closer, thereby letting your prospects off the hook.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may be a trifle more talkative than usual today, and this won't serve in your best interest; you could blurt things out that should be kept confidential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may be attracted today to unique merchandise and strange gadgets. If you go shopping, there's a good chance you'll buy something you'll never use.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually, your tenacity enables you to stick to your guns until you achieve your objective. Today, however, you may drop out at the last minute, even though the goal is within your reach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Problems you may run into today are likely to be of your own making, a result of something erratic or impulsive you'll do without thinking. Keep a cool head.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you haven't yet tidied up your old bills, this is not a good time to assume new financial obligations. Don't let whims for instant gratification put you in the red.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually, you pride yourself on your independent nature that is not easily swayed by others. Today, however, you might be unduly influenced and follow the bad advice of a pal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you have to work with people who don't grasp the essence of ideas as quickly as you do today, be patient and tolerant. It won't hurt you to repeat things for their benefit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sometimes, it's advisable to take a calculated risk — if it can advance our personal interests. But today it might be wise not to do anything that's a departure from traditional procedures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Neither you nor your mate should make major, domestic decisions today without first talking things over. If things go wrong, it could produce a lingering seed for argument.
