

Perez Pushes For Liability Award Cap In Talk To Attorneys

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

"This is not a fight between doctors and lawyers, but of people versus the system," Sanford physician Luis M. Perez told the Seminole County Bar Association Thursday. Perez's comments came in explaining the position of the new Florida Coalition for Liability Reform, which is seeking relief from the state legislature in the form of a $250,000 cap on non-economic damage awards in liability cases. Perez, President of the Florida Medical Association, is the co-founder of the coalition.

which will meet with legislators in Tallahassee April 21 in hopes of showing the lawmakers that there is a liability crisis.

He told bar association members at a luncheon that the coalition has about 50 member organizations representing many businesses and companies in the state. Unless relief, in the form of the award cap is granted, Perez warned, businesses will close their doors and doctors will leave the state. The businesses which remain in operation will have to pass the increase in their liability insurance on to consumers, meaning higher prices, he said. One attorney asked Perez if he felt a victim who became a quadriplegic through a doctor's negligence would be compensated enough by a $250,000 award for a lifetime of disability. Perez responded that a judge could set an award above or below the cap in such a case.

"Those hurt should be compensated for lost wages and medical care, but not experience instant riches," he said.

Perez advocated subjecting the the insurance industry to anti-trust regulations. He said he considers the agencies a non-regulated monopoly.

Sanford Loses Taste For Fight

Land Battle Appears Over

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford commissioners are indicating the city's Yankee Lake condemnation effort is over and will support a search for alternate wastewater disposal sites rather than accepting Seminole County's invitation to participate in the regional wastewater system it plans to develop at the 2,867 acre site. The city may also consider amending its charter to correct the shortcomings that led Seminole Brevard Circuit Judge Thomas Waddell to dismiss the condemnation suit on Feb. 3 and re-affirm his decision on Thursday. Commissioners said today they don't care to contest the ruling, but they would consider amending the city charter if city counsel recommends such a move.

City Attorney William Colbert said he has not yet determined what he will recommend commissioners do regarding the condemnation or an amendment to the city charter.

He said, however, if the charter is not amended, the city would "find it difficult to conduct a technically legal meeting" if one or more commissioners were unaccessible to receive 24 hour advance notification of the session.

Any decisions made during such sessions "would be subject to being overruled" if challenged in court.

Colbert said.

Defense attorneys used exactly that strategy to derail the condemnation suit. They successfully argued that the city charter statute requiring 24 hours advance notice for special commission meetings had not been followed for the Nov. 8 session at which the condemnation suit was sanctioned.

The meeting was conducted two days after Seminole County contracted to purchase Yankee Lake from an agent of entrepreneur Jeno Paulucci. Both governments had targeted the site for their respective wastewater management programs. The county sought the site to accommodate the sewage needs of its burgeoning northwest quadrant, while Sanford wanted the property to facilitate complying with a state mandate to cease disposing treated wastewater into Lake Monroe. The acreage would allow development of a land disposal system.

Sanford Mayor Betty Smith said an appeal of Thursday's re-affirmation or the launching of a new condemnation effort, "are the lowest priorities on my list."

"I'm tired of litigation and paying for litigation," she said. "I think those dollars could be better spent on other things."

The city has already paid its legal

One way to get a job with pull is joining Florida Power & Light in efforts to reattach power lines to new poles in the St. Johns River as these men found out Thursday west of Sanford. Workmen have been re-installing the lines and poles for several weeks. A spokesman said wooden poles, which rot after a few years in the river, are being replaced with concrete ones. The work is expected to take a few more weeks.

School Zones Paulucci Complains To Feds; Offers To Fund New Study

Developer Jeno F. Paulucci has filed an objection with the United States Justice Department over the proposed Seminole County middle school zone plan, now under their review, as has a school board member.

In addition, Paulucci has offered to pay half the cost of a new zone study.

"Where were they four months ago?" the zone task force chairman has asked.

The school board's next regular meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday at the school board facility, 1211 Mellonville Avenue.

Paulucci wants children of parents living in the northwest Lake Mary area to be zoned to the new and nearby Greenwood Lakes Middle School, while under the proposed plan, students in that area will be bused to the Lakeview Middle School, reportedly twice the distance from the area.

Paulucci told the Evening Herald he has also filed objections to the plan with Superintendent of Schools Robert Hughes, and school administrators Jack Heisler and Marion Giannini.

During a Tuesday meeting with Heisler and Giannini, Paulucci said he asked to be placed on the school board's April 3 meeting agenda to voice his objection to the plan, but was refused. He said he expects to address the issue at the April 23 meeting, also the date the board is expected to give the plan final approval.

Referring to school board member Bill Kroll's letter to the Justice Department objecting to the plan, which was excerpted in the Evening Herald March 26, Paulucci said, "we second that letter."

Kroll's letter listed several reasons why he thought the plan "not viable".

They included varying total enrollment figures from plan-to-plan, the lack of relief of crowding at Jackson Heights and Tuskawilla middle schools, the projected 2-to-1 white to black student ratio at Lakeview, and the transfer of principal Ted Barker from Lakeview to Greenwood Lakes.

During the March 12 school board meeting, at which the plan was tentatively adopted prior to its submission to the Justice Department, Kroll said more input could have been obtained in researching the new zone lines. He said a computer data analysis company, Info-Tech, of Gainesville could have been consulted to better determine racial balance in the schools. That could have helped in drawing the new lines, according to Kroll.

Paulucci supports an Info-Tech study.

Senate Passes Contra Aid Bill By Narrow Margin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans barely savaged President Reagan's $100 million aid program for the Nicaraguan Contras, but pulled it off by coming up with an ironic combination — a search for peace in the region and surface-to-air missiles.

The margin of victory on a crucial amendment was six votes, far from the optimistic goal of Republican leader Robert Dole to secure more than 70 supporters.

But for a Senate that last year reluctantly approved $27 million in humanitarian assistance, the total $70 million military aid portion of the package represented a major reversal.

The bill now faces a major challenge in the House, where the original aid legislation was defeated by 12 votes last week. Proposals denying any aid to the guerrillas are expected to come up for debate around April 15.

House Democratic Whip Thomas Foley said today the president faces another close vote in the House, despite the Senate vote and the Nicaraguan incursion into Honduras.

The Senate vote "was no mandate for the president," Foley said. "The vote is going to be close again in the House and I think in the House we probably will see a focus on a real compromise, not a cosmetic one like the administration offered."

Mallorder Bride Changes Her Mind —Alaskan Backwoods Wedding Set

SEATTLE (UPI) — A mallorder bride who tried living in the Alaskan wilderness but fled back to civilization has changed her mind and will return for a July wedding, her beaming backwoods wooer said.

"I lived too many years in a cabin and didn't realize what a woman needs," said backwoods entrepreneur Tom Williams, 40, in announcing Thursday that Jill Bandock, 23, had been persuaded to return and marry him.

"Half of her didn't want to leave, so it was just a matter of getting the other half to come back," he said.

The couple plans a July 26 wedding in the replica 19th-century Alaska mining town he is building. They first met through his ad seeking mail-order brides.

Bandock returned to Tacoma Feb. 26, complaining she was tired of living in the wilds of the Snowy Mountains. She blamed the split on personal problems, the lack of running water and other primitive conditions at the town 90 miles south of Anchorage.

Earlier in the week, she was adamant about not getting married.

Williams, sporting a bushy beard and his ever-present broad-brimmed leather hat, said it said he assured Bandock that his replica town, called Papirtoke, would soon have running water and other amenities like sewers.

Bandock was among several women to respond to an advertisement Williams placed in several newspapers last September seeking mail-order brides.

The Alaskan said he has received more than 4,000 letters from women willing to be mail-order brides. Williams said he had met the women who work for him, but no one has yet made a marriage proposal, he said.

Nicaragua Says Army Wrecked Contra Camps

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — In a statement issued as the Senate approved $100 million in aid to the Contras, Nicaragua said its troops had "destroyed important enemy camps" and killed 350 of the rebels in the past week.

The Defense Ministry Thursday denied fighting had taken place in Honduras although previously it had said the U.S.-backed rebels' principal training camp is in Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

Western sources in Tegucigalpa, meanwhile, said the Contra rebels repelled a surprise attack by Nicaraguan soldiers on a training base in Honduras last weekend in fighting that left 200 Nicaraguan soldiers and 40 Contras dead.

Honduran officials also said Nicaraguans had crossed the border but had apparently pulled back.

"The majority of the Sandinistas have re-crossed the border we think," said Honduran Lt. Col.

Danilo Carbajal Molina during a briefing for reporters in San Francisco De Capire, 8 miles from the Nicaraguan border.

The Nicaraguan statement said the Sandinista People's Army "dealt major blows" to the Contra forces in "different combat areas," and that most of the important fighting took place in points along the Honduran-Nicaraguan border "where mercenary (Contra) forces are trying to penetrate our territory."

Government troops "destroyed important enemy camps, including the enemy's principal training center," the statement said.

In Honduras, Honduran army officials displayed the fly-covered corpses of five Sandinista soldiers and captured Soviet-made weapons as evidence of a Nicaraguan incursion into Honduras.

More Indictments Returned In City Bribery Scandal

NEW YORK (UPI) — A grand jury has indicted six more people in the biggest corruption scandal to hit city government in a half century bringing the total to 11, including a powerful Democratic Party boss who was also a deputy mayor.

On Thursday, District Attorney Robert Morgenthau announced the latest indictments in the scandal, including that of Bronx Democratic party boss Stanley Friedman — one of the city's most powerful politicians — for allegedly bribing officials to get the city Parking Violations Bureau to buy a lucrative contract with Citisource Inc.

Friedman, as a Citisource director, was charged with giving former Queens Borough President Donald Manes and Parking Violations Bureau Deputy Director Geoffrey Lindenauer stock worth $500,000 to push through the contract.

Volcano Rains Snowy Ash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A 150-mile-long cloud of ash spawned by the eruption of Augustine Volcano drifted across south-central Alaska today, raining a snowy grime that halted air traffic and prompted health warnings.

The 4,000-foot volcano, located on a barren North Pacific island 180 miles southwest of Anchorage and 70 miles from Homer, the nearest populated community, erupted for the first time in 10 years at 2 a.m. (8 a.m. EST) Thursday and continued to belch gas and molten rock sporadically.

Scientists were unable to predict how long the eruptions would continue.

Scientists said it was possible the volcano could touch off tidal waves along the Cook Inlet, as it did in 1883 when searing gas and molten rock plummeted down the mountain into the water to produce monster swells known as tsunamis.

Salvage Crews Buckle Down

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Navy salvage experts say they cannot guarantee recovery of key wreckage from the shuttle Challenger before the space agency submits its accident report to the presidential commission investigating the disaster.

The presidential commission investigating the Challenger disaster has asked NASA to complete its accident review by April 18, but Capt. Charles Bartholomew, the Navy's supervisor of salvage, said he does not know if crucial pieces of Challenger's right-side booster rocket will be recovered by then.

"I have a very simple timetable," he said in an interview Thursday. "We'll be working until we're finished. It's kind of hard to put a schedule on when you're going to find something."

Sirhan Sirhan Denied Parole

SOLEIDAD, Calif. (UPI) — A state board rejected Sirhan Sirhan's eighth request for parole, saying the "model prisoner" is unworthy of freedom because his 1968 assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was "an attack on our political system."

Land Lease Amended To Aid Financing

Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

City Commissioners have amended the lease they awarded John Smith in November to enable him to secure financing for the $1 million retail project he plans to develop on city owned property along Lake Monroe.

Following commissioners' approval of the lease modification Monday night, Smith said he plans to break ground for his "tropical mini-village" early next month and complete the first phase of its construction by summer's end.

City Manager Frank Faison said the lease amendment "is a protection mechanism" for Freedom Bank, which has agreed to partially fund Smith's project. If Smith defaults on his lease, "The city is acknowledging the bank's right as a lender will be protected," Faison said.

He also said the commissioners approved a similar lease modification last year when the Lake Monroe Holiday Inn sought financing to construct Fitzgerald's on city-owned marina property.

The lease amendment does not affect the financial terms of Smith's rental agreement with the city. These call for Smith to pay the city $4,898 annually, in addition to a percentage of the development's gross sales. The city will receive five percent of the first $100,000 in sales each year, two-and-a-half percent of the second $100,000 earned, and five percent of all annual revenue in excess of $200,000.

Smith's project will be located on a 1.2 acre parcel that fronts Lake Monroe and lies east of the Holiday Inn. The proposed development has generated considerable attention since last fall, when, based on site plans submitted, Smith and Sanford architect Gerald Gross beat out Holiday Inn owner Ed Welch for the city commission's lease award.

Last month, in seeking a building permit for the project, Smith presented the Sanford Planning and Zoning board with the same site plans upon which commissioners had based their lease award. The P&Z denied approval, citing concerns that Smith's project would markedly add to traffic problems in the already congested Lake Monroe marina parking lot, which borders Smith's land.

Following the P&Z denial, Gross publicly decried the board by calling it a kangaroo court, among other things.

Smith appealed to the city commission, which unanimously overturned the P&Z decision and directed city engineering staff to develop a traffic plan for the marina parking lot.

Throughout Smith's efforts to launch the project, his mother, Mayor Bettye Smith, has detached herself from all commission considerations.

Smith said earlier this month he is willing to pay for implementation of the striping pattern that city engineers came up with to facilitate traffic flow at the lot and enable its continued access for boat trailers.

Smith said the first phase of his lakefront project will consist of several wooden, glass enclosed shops covered by thatched roofs and surrounded by an abundance of landscaping and wooden decking.

Current first phase plans call for the development to include a boat rental center, a bicycle sales and rental outlet, hautil and cruise wear clothing stores and a sea cruise booking agency, Smith said.

Ultimately, he said, an adjoining section of the leased property may be developed into a yacht club.

Good Friday Office Closings

Seminole County offices are closed today giving employees a long Easter weekend. The county emergency number for public safety is 830-1411.

The Casselberry and Sanford Branch libraries of the Seminole County Public Library System are closed and will re-open Saturday at 10 a.m. The Bookmobile will run today.

The community services, dental service and environmental services at the County Health Services building on Airport Boulevard are open. The county welfare and veterans offices are closed.

Altamonte Springs City Hall is closed today, but at the other cities it is business as usual.

The Seminole County School Board office is closed. The public schools have been closed this week for spring break and will re-open Monday.

Banks and post offices, and state and federal offices are open.

Bankers Get OK

Barnett Bank officials were given approval for their request of conditional use of land for a proposed bank near the intersection of Lake Mary Boulevard and Rinehart Road at Tuesday night's Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board meeting.

Board Chairman Jim Talmadge said however that according to the site plan presented with the request, the conditions for conditional use could be "insurmountable."

Talmadge said the presented plan for the property showed "no storm water retention on the site plan" and most of the area surrounding the building would be paved, leaving storm water to run off the property.

He said conditional use means the bank could present a site plan, which will then be reviewed by city planners.

Commissioner Sounds Warning

A "warning" that the Sanford City Commission may be providing its eight member Scenic Improvement Board with the potential to become an "autonomous" advisory board "with some very drastic authority" has been sounded by City Commissioner Dave Farr.

Farr voiced the concerns Monday night, while the commission was considering revamping the scenic board's membership roster at the request of its chairman and approving a $30,000 allocation to hire four laborers to assist in the implementation of the board's "master plan."

The request for the new staffers was made by Commissioner John Mercer, whose wife, Juanny, is a member of the scenic board.

After both measures were sanctioned by the commission, Farr alluded to "the power" the city commission "seems to be granting the SIB."

Mayor Bettye Smith said, however, "The SIB is only an advisory board, and that is our protection."

"I'm glad we're remaining aware of that," Farr said.

Commissioners, including Farr, agreed to SIB Chairman Sara Jacobson's request to create a landscape architect board position by deleting the scenic board seat that had been delegated to the Planning and Zoning board's vice-chairman.

Farr said Thursday he voted to support the request "because it was apparent it was going to go through and I wanted to raise a unified front."

The membership amendment grants the landscape architect a position with voting rights, while the P&Z delegate, Brent Carli, will now serve the scenic board in a strictly advisory capacity.

Ms. Jacobson requested the membership amendment as commissioners were preparing to address the recent expiration of the P&Z delegate position with the reappointment of Carli.

Carli, who attended the session with Ms. Jacobson, did not oppose her proposal for a landscape architect to fill the heretofore P&Z designated board seat, although Farr termed it "another step" toward the scenic board's becoming empowered with "an autonomy we may regret in the future."

Farr said he was bothered by the fact that the "voting rights" of a city appointed P&Z member would be sacrificed to enable the scenic board's gaining the gratis expertise of a landscape architect.

Ms. Jacobson said among the matters her board votes on are the aesthetic aspects of site plans, which must still be submitted by developers to the P&Z for a determination regarding compliance with city building codes.

Farr had also voiced concerns regarding the scenic board during last month's commission meeting, when Mercer suggested the Parks and Recreation Department's master gardener be appointed an ex officio member of the board.

Farr viewed the proposal as possibly undercutting the authority of Parks and Recreation Director Jim Jernigan, who, in addition to being the master gardener's supervisor, is also a voting member of the scenic board.

The master gardener, Jernigan said, "already sits in on" scenic board meetings "to offer unofficial assistance."

Mercer pulled his suggestion for the ex officio appointment after Farr voiced his opposition, although Mercer also said, "I'll be back."

On Monday night, Mercer came to with a request that $30,000 be used to hire four laborers to supplement the Park's Department scenic improvement branch, which was formed to implement the SIB's "master plan" for city wide revitalization.

Farr said he would support the hiring, "as long as it doesn't come from our contingency fund."

Multi-State Probe Brings Arrest In Prostitution Ring

SARASOTA (UPI) — A multi-state investigation that stretched from New York to California has led to the arrest of a Sarasota County man in connection with a wide-spread prostitution operation.

David Haskel, 60, was arrested at his home late Wednesday and charged with three counts of living off the earnings of prostitution and one count of violation of Florida's anti-racketeering law.

Haskel is the only person arrested so far, but a spokesman for the Sarasota Sheriff's Department said Thursday additional arrests may be forthcoming and Haskel may be hit with charges in several other states.

Senator Proposes Balcony Bill

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — State Sen. Ed Dunn hopes his bill will halt the fatal falls of college students celebrating Spring Break in Florida.

Four vacationing college students have died in falls from hotel balconies at Daytona Beach and Fort Lauderdale since Spring Break began Feb. 21.

Dunn, a Daytona Beach Democrat, said Thursday he will propose legislation to allow hotel owners to detain people they see climbing on balconies until police arrive.

His bill was prompted by the Daytona Beach Hotel-Motel Association. Dunn said. Two students died this year and three died last year in falls from hotel balconies in Daytona Beach. Two more students died this year in falls from balconies in Fort Lauderdale and Sanibel and one died falling off a Miami drawbridge.

Accident Victim Identified

A Sanford woman was injured and a tractor-trailer driver charged in a 7 a.m. accident west of Sanford Thursday, according to a Florida Highway Patrol report. In another accident, the identity of a man killed in a Monday-night accident has been released.

In Thursday's incident, Janet Allen, 50, of Route 1, Box 229-D was injured when a 1980 Mack tractor with a semi-trailer reportedly pulled in front of her on State Road 46 near the eastbound ramp of Interstate 4. Central Florida Regional Hospital was not divulging the extent of Ms. Allen's injuries at her request. Driver of the tractor, Russell Garrett, 29, of Coleman, Fla., west of Leesburg, was not injured. He was, however, charged with violation of the right of way.

According to an FHP report, Garrett pulled his eastbound rig off the interstate onto SR 46 in front of Ms. Allen's eastbound car.

In Monday's accident, the identity of one man killed in a two-car crash on State Road 46 west of Sanford has been determined, according to a FHP report.

Dead is Bounpheng Phannuang, 24, of 3900 W. State Road 46. Also killed in the same accident but identified at the time was Vanon Bowling, 43, of Sorrento. Three persons were injured.

That accident occurred one-half mile east of Upsala road when a westbound 1980 Chevy with four passengers reportedly tried to cross the eastbound lane and was struck by a 1976 Ford, driven by Bowling.

The men's deaths brought the traffic fatality count in Seminole County to 10 so far this year.

Longwood Delays Financing Decision

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Financial Consultant Jeff Etchberger talked himself out of a possible fee Wednesday night and the Longwood City Commission into letting the new city administrator Ronald Waller be their "$6 million man."

Waller is scheduled to report to work on April 21 and the commission voted to defer a decision on financing proposed capital improvements until he arrives.

One of the names being considered as a financial consultant, Etchberger is senior vice president of Trizak Financial Corp., Investment Bankers of Altamonte Springs.

Etchberger, a former city manager of Altamonte Springs, gave the commission what he called "my two cents worth of free advice" at the special meeting called to discuss hiring a financial consultant to help the commission decide on the best way to borrow the $6.3 million needed.

Mayor Larry Goldberg said he still was not ready to make a decision on the consultant because he had more names he wanted to check on. City Commissioner Harvey Smerilson, who was absent from Monday night's meeting because of illness, was not informed of the special meeting Wednesday night and so he wasn't there. Goldberg was also concerned how much financial advice was going to cost the city.

Commissioner June Lormann also wanted to delay a choice because "This is something every commissioner should vote on."

But after hearing Etchberger's advice, she made a motion to

"defer a decision on the financing until Waller comes aboard," and it passed unanimously.

Mrs. Lormann also introduced another no-cost option — free help from Seminole County offered by County Commissioner Sandra Glenn. She said Glenn offered to have the county staff draft a proposal to the banks and rank their proposals to make it easier for the city to make a choice.

In a quandry over whether to go with a bank loan or a bond issue (or a combination of both), and determining which bank proposal was most advantageous to the city, the Commissioners had wanted to proceed with lining up the funding before the new administrator was expected to arrive. But Etchberger pointed out that by the time they advertised, interviewed and negotiated with financial consul-ants Waller would be here from Schuylkill Haven, Pa., where he is city manager.

"You may have the qualified individual," said Etchberger. "He's going to have to live with it and the city's finances are his first and foremost priority. He may be your no-cost option. ... I know the timing is difficult, but don't be pennywise and pound foolish... Give your new guy a chance to impress you."

City Clerk Don Terry said he has already sent Waller a copy of the city budget and the financial proposals received from three banks and a bond company so that he can be studying them before reporting to work.

Waller is expected to be in the area on April 4.

"I like Jeff's idea," Goldberg said. "I think it's the smartest thing we could do."

Auto Show Saturday

More than 300 antique and classic automobiles, some dating back to the early 1900s, will be on display all day Saturday in the Sanford Rotary Breakfast Club's Blue Ribbon Classic and Antique Auto Show and Swap Meet.

Car owners will begin registering tonight for the event, which will be held around city hall and the courthouse. Park Avenue will be closed to traffic from Fulton Street to Seminole Boulevard. Seminole will be closed from Palmetto Avenue north to city hall. The show is open to the public and admission is $1 per person.

The autos will compete in 24 classes for 75 trophies donated by local businesses. The awards will be presented at 2:30 p.m.

The Rotary Club will also sponsor a spaghetti dinner to be served from noon to 6 p.m. at the Sanford Civic Center. The charge for "all you can eat" is $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Suspect Arrested On Sexual Battery Of 74-Year-Old

A 19-year-old Sanford man, accused of raping and robbing a 74-year-old Sanford woman was being held without bond in the Seminole County jail.

The woman reported to Sanford police officer Karen Reynolds that the gunwielding man assaulted and robbed her of $27 in woods off east Ninth Street at about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The man reportedly hit the woman in the face and threatened her with the gun. After the attack was reported to police an examination at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford confirmed the sexual assault, a police report said.

A witness had described a suspect seen near the area of the attack near the time of the assault and the victim also described a suspect for police.

A suspect was questioned by police and arrested at the Sanford police station at about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Tony Harris of 912 E. 11th St., has been charged with sexual battery.

MONEY DISPUTE

A man, who reportedly forced his way into an Altamonte Springs home, made threats, took a television and harassed four occupants of that home, has been charged with aggravated assault, grand theft and possession of a firearm in commission of a felony.

Residents of 724 Hillview Drive, reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies the man forced his way into that home at about 2:45 a.m. Wednesday. Leslie Daniels, Jeffery Daniels, Mark Phillips and Megan Donnelly, the residents, reported that there was a dispute over money with the suspect and he allegedly took a television from the home.

After he went outside the man reportedly returned again and brandished an ice pick and made threats to kill the victims, deputies said.

He reportedly tried to hit Phillips with the pick and then went back outside to tap on windows of the home.

Police were alerted and reported stopping the suspect's truck on Northwestern Avenue at about 3:17 a.m. A shotgun was reportedly found in the truck.

Curtis Faye Daniels, of #148 Monterey North, Altamonte Springs, has been charged in the case and was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

FAST CYCLE

Lake Mary police pursued at speeds up to 95 mph a motorcyclist who reportedly was riding without a headlight on, made an illegal pass of another vehicle, and ran a red light. The suspect was arrested after the cycle skidded and crashed at the intersection of U.S. Highway 17-92 at Airport Boulevard in Sanford.

The chase began at about midnight Wednesday at Second Street and East Crystal Lake Avenue in Lake Mary, a police report said.

Patrick Allen Evans, 21, of 118 W. Coleman Circle, Sanford, was arrested at 12:12 a.m. Thursday. He was being held in lieu of $500 bond on charges of fleeing to elude police, resisting arrest, unlawful speed, reckless driving, driving without a headlight, speeding too fast for conditions, improper passing and running a red light.

FIRE CALLS

The Sanford Fire Department has responded to the following calls:

THURSDAY

—12:22 p.m., Seminole Community College, old campus, auto accident. Firemen responding found the drivers had already left the scene. No information was obtained.

—10:37 a.m., 304 Sanora Drive, Sanora Clubhouse, false alarm. A mechanical malfunction apparently sounded the alarm. No signs of fire were discovered when the clubhouse and its surrounding area was surveyed.

—8:19 a.m., 2930 South Orlando Drive, auto accident. Steven Gray, 36, 1105 Hays Road, Winter Springs, suffered possible chest injuries and was transported to the hospital.

—8:37 a.m., 3853 Orlando Drive, rescue. Fred Wilson, 59, 1807 Maderia Way, south Seminole County, told firemen he was dizzy from medication he had taken when they found him sitting in his car on the side of the road. Wilson's wife was contacted and reportedly took him home.

WEDNESDAY

—8:06 p.m., 801 West 1st Street, report of attempted suicide, apparent false alarm. Firemen and police responding found no signs to substantiate the call.

BURGLARY ARREST

A 21-year-old Eatonville man was arrested at his home Wednesday by Seminole County sheriff's deputies in connection with theft of items from two vehicles parked at 9436 Albermarle St., Altamonte Springs, on Feb. 23.

Items taken from the vehicles included a $125 stereo equalizer and tools and a box with a combined value of $200. Items stolen were reportedly sold to two witnesses who gave investigator information.

Joseph Curry was arrested at 10:30 a.m. on charges of burglary to an auto and two counts of dealing in stolen property. He was being held in lieu of $4,000 bond.

AUTO THEFT ARREST

Seminole County sheriff's deputies have charged a 20-year-old Sanford man in connection with the theft of a 1977 Chevrolet pickup truck from the roadside of Airport Boulevard in Sanford on Dec. 27.

The stolen vehicle, owned by Southern Line Clearing, had been left disabled on the roadside when the suspect and an accomplice allegedly stole it, a sheriff's report said.

Charles Augustus Sheaffer of 1603 W. Third St., was arrested at the Sheriff's Department at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. He has been released on $1,000 bond to appear in court April 14.

HOLDING THE BAGS

A witness, who told Sanford police he saw a man leaving a home at 821 Peralmon Ave. carrying a rifle and bags, brought about the arrest of a 25-year-old Sanford man on armed burglary charges.

That man was being held without bond in connection with the theft of three firearms and $1,284 cash from that home at about 1 p.m. March 19. The suspect was arrested by police at 3:25 a.m. March 21, at the intersection of Seventh Street and Cypress Avenue.

Willie George Church of #7 Castle Brewer Court, has been charged in the case.

DOG ARREST

The following person has been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

—Leslie Green, 53, of Orlando, was arrested at 2:15 p.m. Wednesday after his car failed to maintain a single lane on U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park.

BURGLARIES & THEFTS

A manager for Erwin Motors, 100 Orange Ave., Lake Mary, reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies a 1983 Buick worth $5,400 and parked at the Jai Alai Fronton on U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park, for sale, was stolen between March 15 and March 26.

Tanya Marie Webb, 25, of 223 Stefanik Road, Winter Park, reported to sheriff's deputies that a bag containing $655 worth of camera gear, including a camera, was stolen from her bedroom between March 18 and Wednesday.

A $4,000 computer and two disc drives with a combined value of $200 were stolen from Godfather's Used Computers, 1154 Forest City Road, Forest City, on Tuesday or Wednesday, according to a report owner Alan L. Welsh, 37, of Altamonte Springs, filed with sheriff's deputies.

Scaffolding, planks and other items worth about $3,500 were stolen along with a $3,500 boat and motor from a fenced yard behind 1355 State Road 436, Altamonte Springs, between March 21 and 24, according to a report Frank Norris, 59, of Altamonte Springs, filed with sheriff's deputies.

Tools and a briefcase with a combined value of about $550 were stolen from the pickup truck of Ronald Peter Hansen, 38, of 241 Cambridge Drive, Longwood, while parked at his home Wednesday or Thursday, a sheriff's report said.

A School Honoring An Educator

Seminole County Superintendent of Schools Robert Hughes, left, looks over documents after the county purchased land for the T.W. Lawton Elementary School from the late former Superintendent's family represented by Lawton's grandson William Lawton, and son T.W. Lawton, Jr. The purchase price for the five acres of land was $475,000. Behind the trio is the past superintendent's desk.

Emotions Play 'Strong Role' In Cancer Recovery

Study: Sunburns Increase Cancer Risks

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Sunburns during childhood and high calorie consumption increase risks of developing cancer, and a sunny disposition lowers the risks, according to researchers and studies presented during a seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Arthur J. Sober, a Harvard Medical School dermatologist, said Tuesday a study of 218 people found that those who suffered one or more blistering sunburns when they were children or teenagers were twice as likely to develop malignant melanoma, a form of skin cancer.

Poor tanners and those who took long vacations in sunny areas when they were young were also twice as likely to develop the disease, he said. The study found good tanners faced the same risk if they had blistering sunburns early in life.

About 23,000 cases of malignant moles called melanoma, which are more serious than other forms of skin cancer, occur in the United States each year, causing about 8,000 deaths.

A new study using rats found that slight decreases in calorie intake caused significant decreases in the development of cancerous breast tumors. Previous studies had linked breast cancer in women to high fat consumption.

"Our data indicate that tumor appearance does not depend on the percent fat in the diet or even on the amount of fat consumed per day," said Dr. Michael Pariza of the University of Wisconsin, who conducted the new study.

"What this leads to is the idea of dietary options instead of 'Don't eat this or don't eat that,'" he said.

Pariza gave female rats a cancer-causing substance and then fed them one of three diets. One diet was low in fat while another was high in fat. By restricting the amount of food consumed, the third diet contained the same percentage of fat as the high-fat diet, but fewer calories.

Seventy-three percent of the rats fed the high-fat diet developed breast cancer while 43 percent of the rats fed the low-fat diet had breast cancer. Only one rat in the group fed the high-fat, low-calorie diet developed a cancerous breast, for an incidence of only 7 percent.

Dr. Lydia Temoshok, an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco, compared the attitudes of 20 people with malignant melanoma who died to 20 patients with the same disease who improved.

The patients' emotions were measured through a videotaped interview and a series of questionnaires within a month after they were diagnosed as suffering from malignant melanoma.

Victims of a serious form of skin cancer, who eventually died, scored significantly higher than patients who showed improvement an average of 28 months later on scales measuring their levels of distress, tension, depression, anger and confusion, the study found.

"The pattern of results are striking, I think," Temoshok said. "I think this is strong evidence that they (emotions) may play a strong role (in the progression of cancer)."

The results should not be interpreted for all forms of cancer but are a strong indication that emotions may be important for at least some forms. Temoshok said at an American Cancer Society seminar Tuesday.

The relationship between cancer and emotional outlook has been controversial. Other studies have found emotion had no effect. Temoshok defended her study as the largest of its kind. She also said it was the first to carefully match patients based on their illnesses.

Cleanser Called Risk

CHICAGO (UPI) — A study by the National Board of Occupational Safety and Health in Solna, Sweden, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, concludes that workers exposed to a common chemical cleanser called ethylene oxide run a tenfold risk of developing leukemia and stomach cancer, even at relatively low exposure levels.

The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration estimates 140,000 workers nationwide could be exposed on a daily basis to the chemical, but said U.S. standards protect workers

Soviet Schoolgirl Says Kids Must Endure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet schoolgirl Katya Lycheva, carrying her message of peace to the children of the nation's capital, said youngsters are the greatest hope against nuclear destruction.

"I see many familiar faces in this room," she told students at an inner-city elementary school Wednesday. "You will ask me why I say this. I say this because children all over the world look like each other. That is why children agree sooner than adults."

Today the 11-year-old Katya will tour the White House and other historic sites in Washington.

The young Soviet peacemaker, on the third stop of her five-city mission of peace to the United States, said "kids must stand up" against the threat of nuclear arms.

"The time for peace has come," she said later through an interpreter. "If there is a nuclear war, it won't be grown-ups killed first, kids after. Because of that, we all stand equal. Kids must stand up here, and they must be heard."

The blond, green-eyed girl spoke to mostly black students at Wheatley Elementary School, telling them that people in the United States and the Soviet Union must strive to understand each other.

Her peace mission is dedicated to Samantha Smith, the 10-year-old Maine schoolgirl who toured the Soviet Union in 1983. Samantha was killed in an airplane crash last year.

Wheatley pupils presented Katya with a Russian folk dance. Folk dancing is one of her favorite hobbies, and when the students began dancing, Katya smiled and leaped from her seat to join them.

She told students that children in the Soviet Union plant trees to honor the 2 million Russians who died in World War II and suggested children in the United States begin a similar project.

"This way, people going ahead with the arms race might think about better destroying all that" she said in broken English, giving students a lesson on the Soviet language program. "I'm giving this lesson as a relay of peace. It's springtime now, so why don't you start right away?"

Her five-city U.S. tour, which started in Chicago Thursday, includes stops in Houston Friday and Los Angeles Monday — the last day of her visit.

Katya, daughter of a research scientist and a commercial artist, was chosen for the mission by the Soviet Peace Committee and the International Friendship Club, a children's peace organization she helped create.

Island concerns the native legend that the mammoth, dark stone statues "walked" from the slopes of Rano Raraku volcano where they were carved thousands of years ago.

His research suggests the legend could be true.

Based on a theory by Czech engineer Pavel Pavel, who tested it on statues he made out of cement, Heyerdahl believes the ancient inhabitants of Easter Island transported the 80-ton stones vertically over a distance of 35 miles by using a system of taut ropes and crude levers. By systematically moving the ropes and levers, the stone cutters could have wobbled, or "walked," the statues into place.

On a grander scale, however, his excavation on the island and his studies of early navigation in the Middle East and the Americas is just a continuation of his latest goal: to help piece together the puzzle of early movements of a "lost civilization."

This lost people, he believes, gave birth to ancient cultures in the Middle East and spread to Mexico and South America through primitive boats.

Magnificent Worlds
Standing in a light rainfall on the slopes of Rano Raraku, using a walkie-talkie to direct a Swedish film crew and while giving instructions to his own crew in English, French, Spanish and Tahitian, Heyerdahl speaks eloquently of his magnificent worlds.

"We know a lot about the early movements of man," he says. "We know the civilization in Mesopotamia started with the Sumerians, who went up river and influenced the Hittites, and the Hittites on the Phoenicians and so on. Then civilization spread out through the islands and up to Greece."

"But again, there is a complete lack of knowledge as to the beginning of all these things. We don't know who were the first people to bring civilization to Crete, who were the first to bring them to Malta. We know that they were there. We know there is a connection."

Implicit in the search is the thread of unity for all mankind, which he says transcends time as well as political boundaries.

His experience in World War II and the observation of suddenly changing political allegiances in the post-war period help prompt his view.

"I am old enough to have spent four years in a war in which we were given the idea that Germans and Italians were the enemy," he says. "You were to shoot at any German and Italian you could get at."

"Then, a few days after the war, well, now our former allies the Russians are our enemies. And at least half the Germans behind this line (between East and West Germany), well, they are our friends, and the others are just terrible. And the Italians are not bad at all because now they've joined us."

"And I mean, they cannot fool me! I know that people are absolutely the same, whether you go East or West. We look at a political mask, and we hate these people and love those people. We make a terrific mistake in not trying to get beyond the political mask."

It's one thing to theorize about human unity, and quite another thing to prove it.

For the Norwegian explorer, to prove it was to do it: He used international crews on the Ra, Ra-II and other voyages. The Ra carried a Soviet doctor, an American-Jewish navigator, an Egyptian frogman, a black boat-builder from Chad, a Mexican scientist and an Italian mountaineer.

They either had to work together or drown. They worked together.

End The Mob's Labor Connection

It's hard to say which is the more troubling part of a recent presidential crime commission report — its charge that four major unions have "histories of control by organized crime," or its conclusion that no one in authority seems to care.

The commission singled out as mob-controlled or heavily influenced the "Bad Four" — the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the International Longshoremen's Association, the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union. It said the Mafia essentially controls these unions with their nearly three million members through "killing, maiming and pure terror." Indeed, criminal influence over the Teamsters union was "so pervasive," it added, that the federal government should consider ousting its officers and letting a court supervise its operations.

The commission laid the blame for such conditions on a "failure of many leaders in government, business and labor unions to appreciate the nature ... of the problem and to act effectively."

It said the Department of Justice and the Department of Labor are ineffectual because of "bureaucratic lethargy, rivalry and incoherence. In dozens of cases," it said, "the Department of Labor has failed to use available laws to set aside corrupt union elections."

The commission criticized the AFL-CIO for failing to take action against officers of the affiliates, the longshoremen's, restaurant workers, and laborers unions. But commissioners must have been disappointed if they thought their criticism would bring a positive action from AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland. He responded that the federation is not a "law-enforcement body" and had no desire to be one.

Of course, the commission didn't ask the AFL-CIO to be a law enforcement issue; it only noted that the AFL-CIO's codes of ethical practices "have not been applied to current problems" involving its three affiliates.

Further, Mr. Kirkland's hostile response to the report didn't jibe with past AFL-CIO attitudes typified by the action of its late leader, George Meany, when he expelled the crime-ridden Teamsters union in 1967 for violating the group's ethical standards.

The commission also told how legitimate business people sometimes become involved with organized crime either willingly or out of perceived necessity. For instance, it said the chairman of a large poultry company did business with a poultry distributorship owned by two sons of the late New York City mob boss Paul Castellano, and subsequently asked Castellano to seek help in solving labor problems in his chicken business. But the crime boss declined to help, the businessman told the commission.

Clearly, the U.S. government, labor and business leaders must work together to end the crime syndicates' cancerous connections to organized labor.

BERRY'S WORLD

Tip O'Neill's Passion On The Contra Issue

In the first game of the World Serious, the Tipperas beat the Gippers. Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill is as passionately against aid to the Nicaraguan contras as President Reagan is for it.

O'Neill is a tough foe; he is a man of honor, deeply patriotic, serving his last term, with a record more right than wrong over the years, properly lauded as a great American at testimonial dinners by Reagan and Bob Hope. O'Neill used wit and muscle to rally just enough Democrats to beat Reagan's contra plan.

It is a battle of giants over the nature and future of American foreign policy. Both men are emotional about it. Reagan thinks Central America is the place to start rolling back the red tide. But what are the roots of O'Neill's emotional commitment? They are both ordinary and extraordinary.

On the ABC news the other night, Tip gave clues. The ABC sketch by Peter Jennings showed that O'Neill opposes contra aid for some obvious reasons: he particularly fears a Vietnam-style escalation. But the piece also stressed that O'Neill's passion has another powerful dimension. He is a devout Catholic; within the deeply divided Catholic community O'Neill listens to those who oppose U.S. policy; O'Neill's much-beloved aunt was a sister of the Maryknoll Order; O'Neill particularly heeds the Maryknolls' counsel. "When they come in to see me," O'Neill told ABC, "they are women of the cloth, people of God.... They are not going to mislead me."

If Tip's emotions on the issue are tipping the balance, if the Maryknolls are a key influence on Tip, then the Maryknolls are very important. Who are they?

They are a small Catholic order. Many of their members devote themselves to serving the poor.

But the Maryknolls also practice political action. Their publications have praised the foreign policy of Castro's Cuba. Maryknolls have supported the communist guerrillas in El Salvador and in the Philippines. They have supported the current Sandinista government in Nicaragua. Ironically, that is the same government that most of Tip's Democratic colleagues characterize as "Marxist-Leninist." It is the same government that the primate of Nicaragua, Cardinal Obando y Bravo, has denounced as "totalitarian." The Sandinista foreign minister Miguel d'Escoto is a Maryknoll priest. He has said "Marxism is one of the greatest blessings on the church."

Yet Tip O'Neill — who is as far from Marxism as you can get — has never gotten the word. Last year he said: "We've followed the (Maryknoll) order all our life ... When they come and talk to me, I have complete trust."

It goes beyond Maryknolls. O'Neill has said one reason for his opposition to the contras goes back to an incident when a friend of his, a 17-year-old Marine, was stabbed in Nicaragua — more than 50 years ago. The Marine, says Tip, told him the reason he was in Nicaragua was "to take care of the property and the rights of the United Fruit Co. I got stabbed for United Fruit."

Oh, my. Since the Marines left Nicaragua in 1933, the Soviets have become imperialists who penetrate the Third World. Cuba has become a Soviet stooge. Cuba and the Soviets are pumping Nicaragua full of arms. Latin America has had a revolution in favor of democracy, and Latin countries are begging American companies to come in and provide jobs. Yet, O'Neill harks back to the old world of United Fruit.

SCIENCE WORLD

Bringing The Atom Into Focus

By Deltha Ricks
UPI Science Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists have produced the clearest view yet of atoms packed on a metallic surface in pictures that show how the smallest visible units of matter align themselves and interact.

The atoms were magnified 100 million times and brought into focus on the surface of a metallic substance called tantalum diselenide with the aid of a scanning tunneling microscope, the most powerful microscope in existence.

Physicists at the University of California, Santa Barbara and the University of Virginia are collaborating on the imaging experiments and have produced photographs of actual atoms in motion.

"This is the clearest demonstration that tunneling microscopy can resolve (produce an image of) even closely packed atoms on a surface," said Dr. Paul K. Hansma, the UC Santa Barbara physicist leading research efforts.

Previous imaging of atoms by other methods has not produced the clarity detected with the powerful tunneling scope.

Even pictures obtained in earlier experiments with tunneling microscopy on non-metallic surfaces failed to render images worthy of study because of wide spacing between atoms, Hansma said.

"One would poke up here and another one somewhere else," Hansma explained of the irregular projecting quality observed on non-metallic surfaces.

Atoms detected on the metal, however, appear as a series of wave-like units reminiscent of a pen-and-ink drawing of the sea.

The picture obtained by the microscope reveals the presence of a tiny space from one wave to the next estimated to be a distance of 7 billionths of an inch unmagnified, Hansma said.

He explained that the peak in each wave is caused by the electrons that orbit atoms of selenium, the basic crystalline chemical of the metal's diselenide component.

"The nucleus (of all atoms) is surrounded by a cloud of electrons," Hansma explained. "But tunneling microscopy does not probe the atom's nucleus."

Details of Hansma's experiments will be published in an upcoming issue of the journal Review of Scientific Instruments.

WILLIAM RUSHER

The Illinois Fiasco

One's first reaction to the victory of two Lyndon LaRouche supporters in the Illinois Democratic primary is pure amusement. The Illinois Democratic machine, even in its bitterly divided post-Daley condition, is one of the most formidable political organizations in the country. Moreover, the machine itself largely drew up the statutes that govern its primaries, and you can bet they were designed to favor the machine and inconvenience any possible challengers.

On the other hand, we are as a nation heavily committed to the dubious proposition that everybody — and that means everybody — has a civic duty to take a lively interest in politics. Add to that a general loss of moral bearings and the wide availability of public and private funds enabling resourceful young people to evade serious work, and you have the ingredients for a potent cocktail: It is not terribly hard for a suitably charismatic quack to round up a good many bored or rootless youngsters and involve them in some nutty political project — the farther out, the better.

Thus it was that LaRouche and his colorful crew managed, to the astonishment of everyone (probably including themselves), to win the Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state of Illinois. No doubt all the excuses that have since been put forward were contributing factors: rain on primary day kept the vote totals down; the non-"ethnic" names of the LaRouche candidates (Fairchild and Hart) appealed to many voters, including black voters, more than those of the organization candidates (Sangmeister and Pucinski); the rather grumpy sort of populist issues espoused by the LaRouche candidates — compulsory testing for AIDS, "Nuremberg-style trials" for drug traffickers, bigger nuclear stockpiles, etc. — sounded relatively attractive to many voters fed up with lingering unemployment and numerous farm foreclosures.

But the good Democratic voters of Illinois are going to have to be more careful hereafter, or the fleas may simply walk off with their blanket. LaRouche is one of the most colorful, skillful and durable charlatans on the American political scene, and (if it's any comfort) he has been duping Republicans, Democrats and assorted extremists of both the left and right impartially for many years.

LaRouche first attracted notice back in the 1960s as a member of Students for a Democratic Society — though he was already a bit long in the tooth to pass muster as a student. In those days he called himself "Lyn Marcus," and encouraged others to think of him as "the American Lenin." Something funny must have happened on the way to the Finland station, however, because during the 1970s LaRouche began adding to the conventional demonology of the left (the CIA, the Rockefeller, etc.) certain buzzwords (e.g., "international bankers") with historically evil connotations among populist bottom-feeders on the right. In recent years — inadvertently flattering, with his zany imitation, the country's own conservative swing — he has stressed rightist demagoguery. Here and there, an uninformed Republican official has been briefly taken into camp. LaRouche's followers, however, are usually instructed to involve themselves in Democratic party politics, that apparently being where he thinks the ore is richest.

Flexing Military Muscle

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is beginning to flex U.S. military muscle in the Middle East and Central America where he thinks he can send a message or teach a lesson.

The massing of three aircraft carrier groups including 250 fighter planes in the Mediterranean to challenge Libya's Moammar Khadafy in his backyard, the Gulf of Sidra, is a case in point.

And Reagan's goal of overturning the Sandinista government in Nicaragua is another with permanent U.S. troop maneuvers next door in Honduras.

Khadafy has drawn the line at the mouth of the Gulf but the United States declares anything beyond 12 miles is in international waters.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said that Reagan was asserting his "rights to passage" and the operation was in that context.

He insisted all along that the United States is not trying to provoke or humiliate the man Reagan has described as "flaky" and the new "Murder Inc." Khadafy rose to the bait and fired missiles on the fleet but did not manage to lay a glove on the U.S. forces.

All the casualties, including many fiery deaths, have been on the Libyan side with their patrol boats blown up and sunk by U.S. firepower.

Some aides have privately acknowledged that while the right of "free navigation" is an important point to be made, Reagan also has in mind retaliating against what he claims is Libyan-sponsored terrorism around the world.

Since the Rome and Vienna incidents, the president and administration officials have been itching to teach Khadafy a lesson and bloody his nose and had not found a way up to the present.

The naval exercises fit into the formula to demonstrate U.S. military power to the Libyans and the Soviets, and to serve as a warning for the future.

It is doubtful that Khadafy, although cowed temporarily by American military might, will curb his own radical goals.

The Arabs in the area are ambivalent. They do not want the United States attacking a sister nation in the region. But they have no love for Khadafy and his extremism.

Will The Real Stockman Stand?

By Jack Anderson
And
Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Only a few trusted and bonded editors, sworn to strict secrecy, will be permitted to read ex-budget director David Stockman's memoirs before the first excerpts are published next month in Newsweek magazine.

The New York publisher, meanwhile, is anticipating a gush of money — and the Washington establishment is anticipating a gush of blood — as Stockman tattles on his one-time colleagues. But it also appears that some of the blood that'll be spilled will be Stockman's.

Sources close to Stockman tell us his book will savage such quondam antagonists as White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan and Attorney General Edwin Meese. Stockman reportedly will say that the volcanic ash from Regan's temper tantrums scorched everything he did and will question how Meese ever convinced the president he knew what he was doing.

Stockman will also take the Republican Party to task for failing to reduce the deficit, according to our sources. Stockman will tell of his backstage efforts to cut the military retirement program and eliminate revenue sharing. He was undercut by President Reagan, who listened to other advisers. Stockman reportedly will complain.

The person who will be hurt the worst by the Stockman castigation, at least indirectly, will be the president, our sources say. He will be portrayed as less than bright — an unfair characterization according to those who work directly with Ronald Reagan.

But Stockman himself can expect a backfire. His book is due out about the same time as another one that tells the stories he left out. It's titled "The Real David Stockman." And it quotes not only such predictable critics as Ralph Nader, but many of Stockman's former colleagues in the Reagan administration.

Our associate Les Whitten got hold of a bootleg copy of the manuscript, written by best-selling veteran Washington free-lancer John Greenya and congressional aide Anne Urban, who works for Rep. Barbara Kennedy, D-Conn. It contains some eye-opening quotes from such normally diplomatic types as Drew Lewis, former transportation secretary.

Like others quoted in the book, Lewis praises Stockman's talent. But then he says that Stockman "was very political and very devious," and accuses him of trotting out false figures at Cabinet meetings to make a point. "He manipulated whatever he was doing to serve his own purposes," Lewis said.

Some other Stockman critics quoted include:

— Dr. Shelby Brewer, former assistant secretary of energy; Stockman had "an irresistible itch ... to recast the president's agenda.

... Having him on the team was like backing a Trojan Horse up to the Reagan administration." Brewer also opined at one point that Stockman "was out of his wigwam."

— Former Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas: "He lacks in humaneness. ... He is not a man of good judgment." This about a former divinity student.

— Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.: Stockman is "absolutely not" compassionate, and shares the blame for "incredible budget deficits." At least, Waxman added, Stockman was honest enough to admit that he "has put six generations in this country in debt."

— Wendell Bell, former chief counsel of the House Budget Committee: Stockman "created the budget deficits." He'll get away with it, though, because, in a controversial Atlantic magazine article, "he confessed before the crime was committed."

Ferrell Praises Sheffield, Bemoans Lack Of Hitting

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Slowed slightly by Thursday morning's rain, the first Greater Greyhound Invitational baseball tournament heads into its final five games today and Saturday at Lyman High School. All six teams still are in contention for the round-robin title.

Lyman, 2-2, used a clutch two-run single by Gib Lundquist and a strong, three-inning relief effort by Bill Henley to turn back error-prone Lake Brantley, 9-6, in Thursday's only game. Lake Brantley is also 2-2.

The Oviedo-Lake Highland and Seminole-Lake Howell games were postponed due to wet grounds. No. 3-ranked Oviedo and 1A power Lake Highland have 2-1 records. Seminole and Lake Howell are 1-2.

Today, Oviedo and Highland play at noon. Oviedo comes back at 2:30 p.m. against Lake Brantley and Highland returns at 5 p.m. against Howell. Seminole and Lyman battle at 8 p.m. In Saturday's final game, Seminole takes on Lake Howell at 1 p.m.

Seminole, 8-10 overall, will send knuckleballing righthander Brian Sheffield against Lyman tonight. The Greyhounds will counter with lefty Kenny Oswald. Sheffield shut out Lyman on five hits in a Seminole Athletic Conference matchup March 11. Sheffield (4-4) tossed a one-hit, 11-strikeout effort against Highland Monday.

Sheffield, a senior who also throws a sharp-breaking curve, has 69 strikeouts in 49 innings. Both stats lead the county.

"Brian's been our most effective pitcher," Seminole coach Mike Ferrell said. "Whenever he pitches, we have a chance to beat anybody. But I'm not worried about the pitching. It's our hitting that's killing us."

Sheffield is hitting .442 and

Greg Pond is at the .361 mark. Ron Blake is also over .300 at .318 but he has slumped miserably since he led the county several weeks ago with a .480 average. Alonzo Gainey has perked up to .296. Willie Grayson (.279) and Dave Rape (.278) have come around but Gary Derr (.212) and Joey Corsi (.212) are mired in yearlong slumps.

"We've got to turn it around," Ferrell said. "I hope our bats wake up pretty soon."

Henley, Lundquist Lift Lyman To Win

Lake Brantley, per usual, didn't have any trouble with its bats Thursday night but the Patriots had their usual misfortunes in the infield, committing six errors in the setback to Lyman.

Lyman gave starter Mark Whittington a 4-0, first-inning cushion but the senior righthander couldn't hold it. Darren Boyesen walked to lead off the first against Brad Bellaw. The Greyhounds played hit-and-run as Byron Overstreet beat out an infield single and Boyesen alertly went to third. A wild pickoff attempt on Overstreet scored Boyesen.

Chris Brock followed with a walk and John Burton was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Henley rapped a ground ball to third where Pat Lusk took the force out as the run scored for a 2-0 lead.

After a passed ball moved the runners to second and third, Marty Martin squeezed home Burton and Henley also scored when Bellaw threw the ball past catcher Dan Beaty for a 4-0 lead. Brantley coach Mike Smith pulled Bellaw in favor of Ed Dickmeyer.

Whittington struck out two to get out of a ticklish situation in the first but he was smoked for five runs in the second including Mike Davis' third homer of the week — a grand slam for a 5-4 lead.

Davis, who catches and plays left field, then lined his county-leading eighth homer of the year over the left center field fence onto Lyman's track. In Davis' two years at Brantley, he has hit three grand slams in tournaments at Lyman.

Two innings later, Beams socked his seventh round tripper of the year as the Patriots took a 6-4 lead.

Lyman, though, picked up one run in the fourth despite some baserunning misadventures and four more in the fifth on three consecutive Brantley errors after two were out.

In the fourth, freshman Chris Radcliff beat out an infield roller and stole second. Dale Stevens, back in the lineup after injuring his thumb earlier this week, walked. Lundquist followed with a one-hopper at Koch as second but it went past him into right field. Radcliff scored but Lundquist ran Stevens off third and was tagged out when he went back to second.

Lundquist, a junior outfielder, provided the icing in the fifth.

No Residency Violation, Rules Rozelle

Fred Rozelle, executive director of the Florida High School Activities Association, said Thursday that baseball player Mike Pinckes has not violated any residency rules but he hasn't decided on whether Pinckes was recruited to leave Lake Brantley High School for Lake Mary High School.

"We haven't closed the case but I will rule on it within a week," Rozelle said. "I don't see any residency violation and it appears he (Pinckes) wasn't recruited."

Rozelle said he is still interrogating individuals concerning the matter and "if anyone has any information about recruiting, let's hear it." Rozelle said he hoped to wrap up the investigation in a week and send a written report to Lake Brantley Principal Darvin Boothe and Lake Mary Principal Don T. Reynolds.

Pinckes was charged with not maintaining a residence in the Lake Mary school zone and Terry Hagen, a Lake Mary booster club member, was charged with recruiting. Both charges were brought by Boothe after the investigative work was done by Lake Brantley boosters Richard Coffey and Joe Davis.

On Tuesday, Rozelle discussed the situation with Pinckes and his father (Steve), mother (Carol), Reynolds, Lake Mary baseball coach Allen Tuttle and Dr. Hortense Evans, administrative assistant to Superintendent Bob Hughes.

The Lake Brantley group did not attend the meeting.

Rozelle, though, said it did not matter that the trio did not attend the meeting. "It would have made it a little easier on me if they would have attended," he said. "But I will talk with each one individually and anyone else who has any information before I make a decision."

Brauman: Time To Tune Up Exchanges

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

With just two weeks left until the championship meets begin, Seminole High's Fighting Seminoles will use Saturday's Winter Park Relays to tune up in the relays that are so important in the big meets.

And the Seminoles will go into the 440, mile medley and mile relays with as much determination as ever after learning last week that the events they so thoroughly dominate are not automatic.

The Winter Park Relays, a boys only meet, will begin with field events and preliminaries at 12 noon with the running finals starting at 2 p.m. The meet will be held at what has become the home away from home for Central Florida track teams, Lake Howell High School. Along with hosting two of its own meets, Lake Howell also was the site of the Lyman Invitational.

Last week, an exchange outside the zone cost the Tribe a first in the 440 relay and a false start dashed their hopes in the mile relay as Seminole finished second in the Bob Hayes Invitational at Jacksonville. But the "Noles would have won the meet handily with the points in those two relays.

Saturday, coach Ken Brauman said Seminole is concentrating its efforts most on the three relays which are part of the regular order of events.

The 440 relay team will consist of speedsters Dwayne Willis, Louis Brown, Eric Martin and Pat Davis. Willis is a newcomer to the team but has already earned a place as one of the top sprinters. Davis and Martin have performed particularly well the past few weeks while Brown is coming on strong after suffering a hamstring pull.

The mile medley relay team will consist of Brown and Davis on the 220-yard legs, Martin on the 440 leg and Billy Penick on the 880 anchor. Penick has anchored the medley with sub-two minute halves three times this season.

Brauman said the mile relay team isn't set for sure yet but right now the foursome includes Brown, Martin, Andre Jackson and Penick. Brown and Martin are veterans of the mile relay while Jackson is coming back from an injury that kept him out much of the season. Penick has showed that he not only has the endurance to run the distances but also has the speed to run the relay.

"At this point, are strongest areas have been the relays, quarter, the mile and the long jump and triple jump," Brauman said. "But we still need to work on those areas to get a little better by the time the championship meets come around."

In the triple jump, defending state champion Alvin Jones is coming off his season's best of 49-4 at the Bob Hayes meet. Brauman said Jones will not compete in the long jump probably until the Seminole Athletic Conference meet.

While Seminole figures to score heavily in the above events, it is also looking for a boost from Jackson in the hurdles along with Jerry Parker and Walter Hopson in the high jump.

"If Andre (Jackson) improves in the hurdles he could be a threat later down the line," Brauman said. "And we should be a little stronger in the high jump. Jerry (Parker) and Walter (Hopson) got a late start coming out after basketball."

The Winter Park meet was moved to Lake Howell because newly refurbished Showalter Field is not ready yet.

"Showalter Field hasn't gone through the full curing period," Brauman said. "It has to cure for seven days and that won't be up until next week sometime."

RAMS AT FLORIDA RELAYS

Lake Mary's Rams will compete in the Florida Relays Saturday night at the University of Florida in Gainesville. The boys team will look for a good time in the mile medley relay with Erwin Edwards, Richard Burkett, Jeff Pommier and Eric Peteran. In the open events, Pommier will run the 440, Peteran the two mile and Ken Rohr the mile and two mile.

Since the Florida Relays changed its format this season, most Central Florida coaches chose not to go to Gainesville. "It's not often the kids get to run at a college so we're going to Gainesville," Lake Mary coach Mark McGee said. "There will be a lot of college coaches there and you shouldn't penalize the kids trying out for scholarships by holding them out of the meet because it had some changes."

The Lake Mary girls team will also be on hand Saturday while most other county girls team take the weekend off. Among those going to Gainesville for the Lady Rams are Jodie McCurdy, Tonya Lawson, Oneyke Berry, Anquetette Whack and Tonya McCrac.

Unconventional LSU Gears Up For Cards

DALLAS (UPI) — Why should Louisiana State get conventional at this stage?

Its coach tears the net with his teeth in a postgame celebration. The athletic director bugs his own office over a recruiting investigation. And one of its key players — Don Redden — drives a fertilizer truck during the summer.

So it should come as no surprise that the Tigers enter Saturday's Final Four with a 6-foot-7 center who used to be a forward who used to be a guard.

Ricky Blanton, a sophomore from Miami, will be in the middle for the Tigers, 28-11, against No. 7 Louisville, 30-7, in the opener of the semifinals of the NCAA Tournament (2:42 CST). No. 1 Duke, 36-2, meets No. 2 Kansas, 35-3, in the other game with the championship played Monday night.

In the last three Final Fours, the center has been the outstanding player: Ed Pinckney of Villanova in 1985, Patrick Ewing of Georgetown in 1984 and Akem Olatunwo of Houston in 1983.

Anaerodly, Blanton does not travel in such swank company. Yet, he has started the last 10 games for LSU and been critical in the Tigers' remarkable drive thus far.

Basketball

He has been averaging 9.3 points and 8.5 rebounds in the tournament. But, astonishingly, he held Memphis State's William Bedford to 2 points and 1 rebound, Georgia Tech's John Salley to 3 points and Kentucky's Kenny Walker to 4 points and 3 rebounds over the final 20 minutes. Against Kentucky, Blanton also was 5-of-5 from the floor with 8 rebounds.

Blanton moved into the pivot as the result of an odd sequence: Tito Horford was dismissed from the team, Jose Vargas was benched in December and Zoran Jovanovich tore up his knee in a pickup game.

"He actually deserved to start sooner than this," LSU coach Dale Brown said. "He's outplayed people. He hung in there and he never pouted."

Blanton faces his next challenge in Pervis Ellison, perhaps the best freshman in the country. He arrived at Louisville without the torrent of publicity accompanying other Cardinal recruits. But no one underestimates his value any longer.

Ellison averages 13 points and 8 rebounds a game this season. He is also the team's top shotblocker and is vital in the back of Louisville's zone press.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith says Ellison reminds him of one of his former players — Sam Perkins, now with the Dallas Mavericks.

Interpreter: Frozen Clock Case Improperly Handled

DALLAS (UPI) — The NCAA interpreter of rules Thursday said the controversial "frozen clock" problem in last weekend's Kansas-Michigan State regional semifinal game was improperly handled.

"There is no way some time should not have been taken off the clock," said Dr. Ed Steitz, editor and interpreter of NCAA basketball rules.

No. 2 Kansas, who will play in Saturday's national semifinal against No. 1 Duke, survived the regional semifinal scare with Michigan State and won in overtime. Kansas trailed 76-72 when the clock malfunctioned, and Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote argued the error gave the Jayhawks extra time to catch up in regulation time.

About 15 seconds elapsed before the clock was started with 2:30 remaining.

Whether the extra time actually helped Kansas or hurt the Jayhawks is moot. The bottom line, according to the man who interprets rules for the NCAA, is that the clock should have been corrected.

"I'm sure all of our timers are honest people, but they can make mistakes," Steitz said. Steitz said, however, something should have been done to correct the situation.

Steitz said that whether it was the error of timekeeper Larry Bates or if the Kemper Arena clock malfunctioned, the game officials should have been notified of the problem and the problem corrected.

"He (the timer) should have hit the buzzer. If the buzzer doesn't work he should get up on the table or run out onto the court if he has to to get the officials' attention," Steitz said.

RAVELING TO USC

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — University of Iowa officials expressed sadness over the departure of basketball coach George Raveling and excitement about the future of the men's basketball program.

The 48-year-old Raveling Thursday accepted the head coaching position at Southern Cal. Raveling guided the Hawkeyes to two NCAA tournament berths in three years at the the Big Ten school.

Pitchers Turn Up Positive

United Press International
Three veteran pitchers — each vital to their teams' pennant hopes this season — provided positive news Thursday.

At Yuma, Ariz., LaMarr Hoyt, San Diego's ace, said he is recovering from a drinking problem and will report to the Padres' camp Friday.

The 31-year-old right-hander will spend the first two to three weeks of the regular season getting into shape before rejoining the rotation.

In a statement released by the team, Hoyt said he was unaware how serious his problems were when he checked into a Minnesota rehabilitation center Feb. 28.

"I did so hesitantly and without fully understanding the scope of my dependency problem," Hoyt said. "During the intervening weeks, I underwent an intense program directed at helping an individual to attain and maintain complete abstinence from mood-altering chemicals, including primarily alcohol."

At St. Petersburg, 36-year-old Bob Forsch, who the Cardinals expect to help fill the void created by the trade of Joaquin Andujar, combined with Todd Worrell and Ken Dayley on a five-hitter to help St. Louis beat Toronto 3-0.

Forsch, who probably will start the regular season's third game, allowed three hits and walked none over five innings. A nine-game winner last year, the right-hander has yielded just three earned runs in 15 spring innings.

At West Palm Beach, Nolan Ryan, whose poor finish last season raised questions about a 39-year-old right arm that has fired fastballs for 3,937 major-league innings, hurled five strong innings to lead Houston to a 4-2 victory over Montreal.

Ryan struck out six and allowed two hits, including a two-run homer by Vance Law, who is 17-for-38 (.447) with two homers and a team-leading nine RBI.

Several other veteran pitchers also had strong outings Thursday.

At Miami, Dennis Martinez scattered four hits over five innings and Baltimore scored all their runs in the fourth inning to defeat Atlanta 6-3. Martinez, making his third start of the spring, allowed one run.

At Vero Beach, Fernando Valenzuela pitched seven shut-out innings to pace Los Angeles to a 5-2 decision over Minnesota. The veteran left-hander yielded four hits, walked none and struck out six. Light-hitting Dave Anderson, fighting for a roster spot, smacked a three-run homer for the Dodgers off starter John Butcher.

At Winter Haven, Rick Rhoden became the first Pittsburgh pitcher to go more than five innings this spring and Mike Diaz hit a solo homer to lead the Pirates to a 5-2 victory over Boston. Rhoden scattered five hits and struck out three in 6 2/3 innings. Bruce Hurst took the loss.

There was bad news for two veteran pitchers.

At Tampa, Dave Engle smashed a two-run homer off Bill Gullickson to highlight a three-run fourth inning that paced Detroit to an 8-4 victory over a Cincinnati split-squad. Gullickson, acquired by the Reds from Montreal to bolster the staff with a veteran, yielded eight hits and five runs in five innings as his exhibition record slipped to 0-2. Nick Esasky homered twice and drove in all four Reds runs.

At Pompano Beach, Burt Hooton was given his unconditional release by Texas, which said it will begin the season with three rookie pitchers in the starting rotation.

Hooton, 36, has a 151-136 career record. He was signed by the Rangers as a free agent prior to last season when he went 5-8 with a 5.23 ERA. This spring, he was 1-0 with a 4.91 ERA.

In other training camp news: At Clearwater, Paul O'Neill smashed a three-run, seventh-inning homer to give a Cincinnati split squad a 5-3 decision over Philadelphia. Juan Samuel blasted a two-run homer for Philadelphia. Charles Hudson went the first five innings for the Phillies, scattering four hits and striking out one. He had given up 14 runs in 12 previous innings.

At Pompano Beach, a three-run homer by Curtis Wilkerson and solo blasts by Tom Paciorek and Steve Bucchele carried the Rangers to a 5-4 victory over the Yankees.

Joe Warmack waves the checkered flag and hoists trophy after another win in his Gene Scott Camaro.

Warmack Is On Right Track

Sanford's Joey Warmack is one of the most popular and successful drivers at New Smyrna Speedway despite his relatively short career on the one-half mile, high-banked paved oval.

After only three years of racing he has finished fourth in points in 1984 and last year was the runner-up in the battle for the street car class.

In his first full year, he was voted Sportsman of the Year, and won a number of feature wins. His car is a full steel bodied 1970 Camaro owned and sponsored by Gene Scott. Warmack is one of the few drivers who has not switched to the fiber-glass bodies.

"I feel the steel body is safer and that all the thunder cars should run them," he said.

Many of the street class drivers had to move up to the higher class when New Smyrna Speedway dropped the class and Warmack feels that the slicker fiber-glass cars should also move up to late models.

Warmack works for Jerry's Auto Repair on Sanford Avenue and does all the work on his car there. Jerry Shirley and Tim Blythe help Scott and Warmack in the pits. A big help in keeping the car running is Warmack's wife, Debbie, and 10-year-old son Joey Jr.

Saturday nights in the three years. Warmack claims that he has never lost money racing during the season of events.

In a time when some drivers will lose over a $100 in expenses to run just one night's race, Warmack is a rare breed among the racers.

Warmack, 30, has a long future in the sport and plans to run in the thunder class for quite some time before moving up to the late models. With the exception of June of last year when he "totaled" three cars in a row, he has had a steady career which has given him 20 feature wins in street stock.

He won his first thunder car feature two weeks ago, something he hopes will become habit-forming.

James Powell won the opening event of the 1986 season at Volusia County Speedway. The Astor, Florida driver took over the lead on the start of the late model feature, and held on through all 30 laps. Powell started on the outside of the first row along side Tampa's Keith Noshbich.

Noshbich provided the only serious challenge to Powell during the race. Dennis Bennett, the 1985 Florida State Late Model Champion, started fifth and moved as high as third, before the Jacksonville driver tangled with Rolfe Alvers late in the event.

Sieve Shuman, of DeLeon Springs, turned in a steady driver effort, starting eighth and holding on to finish second. More than 15 NASCAR late models were on hand for the first NASCAR Winston Racing Series event at the half mile dirt track located in Barberville.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Sanford Gymnast Takes Smooth Move From Bicycle To Ferrari

By Chris Pister
Herald Sports Writer

Jumping from Class III to Class II for a young gymnast is about the same as going from a bicycle to a Ferrari. Sanford Gymnastics Association member Glenda Carter though has not only made the transition smoothly but is already beginning to pass the competition.

Carter, 13, is competing for the first time in Class II this season and proved she could handle the step up this past weekend by taking first place in the vault at the Class II Sectional Meet at Tampa.

In the sectional meet, Carter recorded an optional score of 8.55 and a compulsory score of 9.05 and the combined total gave her first place. She also compiled an all-around score of 50.45 which took 10th place and also qualifies her for the Class II State Meet the last week in April.

"There are a lot more competitors and a lot harder routines in Class II," SGA coach Eugene Petty said. "Moving up to Class II is like stepping from Class III all the way to Class I. The difference in the competition is that extreme."

Carter, one of the most successful SGA performers in recent years, competes in the 12-14 age group. She works out with the SGA at Crooms High School. Petty said the step up to Class II is just the beginning for Carter.

"She's exceptional for her classification," Petty said of Carter. "She's a super kid who works hard and does a great job. She's really going to go far if she keeps working at it."

Lady Hawks To Defend Crown

Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks will defend their championship Saturday in the West Orange Invitational at the West Orange Girls Club in Winter Garden.

The Lady Hawks, 7-7 overall this season, defeated Apopka in a 15-inning marathon for the title last season. Apopka and Lake Howell are again considered two of the favorites along with host West Orange although the Lady Warriors have been slumping lately.

Lake Howell has the top two hitters in Seminole County in senior pitcher Christy Tibbitts (.596) and junior outfielder Jaudon Jonas (.542).

Tibbitts is also among the county leaders in runs batted in (20), runs scored (16) and doubles (3). Jonas is coming off a 10 for 15 performance in four games in the Lady Hawk Invitational Tournament in which Lake Howell finished third.

Lendl Works For Better Tennis

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ivan Lendl worked hard to become the No. 1 tennis player in the world. Now he is determined to enjoy the accomplishment and play even better tennis.

The 26-year-old Lendl whipped unseeded Sammy Giammalva, ranked 62nd in the world, 6-2, 6-4 Thursday night to advance to the quarterfinals of the $315,000 Chicago Grand Prix tournament.

Lendl has won nine of the last 10 tournaments he has entered. He has not lost indoors in more than a year. He has dropped only one match since August in surpassing John McEnroe atop the tennis rankings.

Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed, defeated doubles expert Robert Seguso 6-0, 6-4 Thursday night to advance along with five other seeded players. Winning Thursday were No. 5 seed Paul Annacone, No. 6 Kevin Curren, No. 7 Johan Kriek and No. 8 Andres Gomez.

Seminole Chamber At Deer Run

Foursomes are still being accepted for the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce annual golf tournament.

Deer Run Country Club will play host to the tournament on Monday, March 31. The best-ball foursome scramble will tee-off with a shotgun start at 1 p.m. Golf will be followed by a social hour at 5 and a barbecue dinner at 6.

Golf packages for $45 include green fees for the foursome, carts and the dinner. Sponsorships for the event are $300.

To reserve a slot in the tournament, call the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce offices at 834-4404.

Skateboarder Set For Pants USA

Sweden's Per Wilander, the world's champion professional free style skateboarder in 1983 and 1984 will be appearing at Pants USA in Seminole Centre between 3 and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Wilander appeared in Steven Spielberg's "Back to the Future" as the stunt man for Michael J. Fox. He has appeared on the USA network, ESPN and 20 cable news stations throughout the U.S. Currently he is doing skateboard stunts for Blue Oyster Cult-Rock Video "Dancing in the Ruins."

Whack Attack Propels Mary To Third Place

By Chris Pister

Herald Sports Writer

On her birth certificate, she is Anquetette "NMN" Whack. The "NMN" stands for "no middle name." When it comes to track and field though, you could throw out the "NMN" and insert the word versatile.

Thursday night, the Lake Mary High senior turned in another excellent all around performance as the Lady Rams took third place in the West Orange Relays at Winter Garden.

Whack threw personal bests in the shot put and discus, then came back to start off the season's best 440 relay team and she also ran a leg on the fourth-place weightwoman's relay.

"She (Whack) does just about anything I could ask of her," Lake Mary coach Mike Gibson said. "She threw two PR's and started off three relays. Something that's really amazing about her is that she has started 83 different relays in four years and never false started."

Host West Orange took first place in the meet with 68 followed by Orlando Evans at 60 and Lake Mary edged out Merritt Island for third, 42-41. Orlando Oak Ridge, not running a full squad, was tied for fifth at 36.

In the shot put relay (two throwers combine), Whack threw 33-9 junior Tonya Lawson 26-9 to give the Lady Rams first place with a total of 60-8. In the discus, Whack went over the 100 mark for the first time this season with a throw of 103-8. Lisa Shelby added a 74-1 for a total of 177-9 which was good for fourth place.

The Lady Rams also took first place in the long jump with the duo of Tonya Lawson and Onyque Berry combining for a 3

Whiskey May Help Now But Cause Future Woes

DEAR DR. GOTT — A dear friend is 63, 5 feet 9 and weighs 300 pounds. He refuses medical help of any kind, but says that something just shuts off in the hollow of his throat and he can't breathe until he swallows a little whiskey. What causes this?

DEAR READER — He may be suffering from spasm of the muscles that form the upper esophagus. His weight doesn't help, because excessive fat deposits can cause pressure in the throat and lower neck. Whiskey may provide temporary relief; it has a muscle-relaxing effect. However, I think he will develop more serious problems if he self-medicates with alcohol. There are safer and more effective treatments.

People who refuse medical evaluation are usually afraid of what the doctor may find. Perhaps your friend fears that cancer is the cause of his symptoms. Maybe he is afraid the doctor may prohibit whiskey. In any case, his problem is probably treatable; I hope he chooses to seek medical help.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor says that my bone marrow is producing too many red blood cells. Every six weeks I go to the blood bank and they take two pints. I keep telling my doctor that I am very dizzy and lightheaded, to no avail. Why can't he give me something to help these problems?

DEAR READER — Your lightheadedness may result from your overly thick blood. The disease is called polycythemia and can be treated with blood withdrawal. However, I am concerned about the reason for your polycythemia; the condition can be primary (from the bone marrow itself) or secondary (due to another disease, such as emphysema). You and your doctor will need to investigate the cause of your blood disorder; then more direct and specific treatment will be in order. I believe it is reasonable for you to suggest a consultation with a hematologist (blood specialist). Blood removal may temporarily reduce the viscosity of your blood, but it is not, in my opinion, the treatment of choice.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor says one must take vitamin D along with calcium or it won't be absorbed. Are people just wasting their money and getting no good from taking calcium supplements without the D?

DEAR READER — In theory, yes. However, very little vitamin D is required for calcium absorption, so vitamin D in a well-balanced diet is usually enough to ensure proper calcium balance. Older people need more calcium; therefore, they may have to take supplemental D.

too. Check labels. In general, 125 units of vitamin D is considered sufficient for each 250-500mg. of calcium. Remember that D is present in many foods (including fortified milk) and the vitamin is activated in the body during exposure to sunlight. The Recommended Daily Allowances for calcium and vitamin D in adults are: 800-1200 mg and 400 units, respectively.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
South bid merrily up to three spades, a contract he should have made with an overtrick. But he played his side-suit carelessly, and the defenders alertly capitalized on his mistake. East won the opening lead with the diamond king and returned a diamond. Declarer trumped and played the club 10. If West had been kind enough to take that trick, South would no doubt have played West to hold the club queen as well. He could then win the next club with the jack, pick up the spade suit by leading the nine from dummy, and later return to dummy with the club king to take a heart finesse. That would be 10 tricks, a good result for South.
However, West was not in a friendly mood. He played low on the club 10. Declarer played low from dummy, and East played the eight, starting a signal to show his doubleton. South continued clubs. West won the ace and gave his partner a ruff. East now led a high diamond — the third round of that suit. Declarer did his best by pitching the heart 10. If East now leads a low spade, declarer can let it ride around to the nine in dummy. He can then take a heart finesse and still make nine tricks. But East wisely led a heart instead. Declarer could win the heart queen, but he still had to give up the setting trick to East's spade king.

How should declarer play? If his first club lead is low to the jack, he will be in dummy to take the successful trump finesse and will have no trouble with the contract.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY MARCH 29, 1968
You're going to make some important changes in the year ahead that will result in greater material security. Be patient, because what transpires will take a little time.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be more perceptive than usual in your commercial affairs today. If you use your insights astutely, personal gain is highly likely.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A staunch and forceful ally will be saying good things on your behalf today to others. The clout will be effective.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tasks that may have been too rough for you yesterday can be handled with relative ease today.

In fact, their challenges will stimulate you.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Dealings with members of the opposite gender will work out favorably for you today. One in particular will be instrumental in helping you further a big issue.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The needs of those you are responsible for should be given priority over your personal goals today. You'll regret not helping if you can.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Complex mental chores that require your total attention should be a snap for you today. Your powers of concentration will be at full force.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your possibilities for adding something of worth to your holdings today are strong. But you'll have to push a little harder to get it.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're going to be closely observed wherever you go today, so be conscious of your appearance. The good impression you make will be a lasting one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Important objectives can be achieved today by letting others think what you conceive is their idea. Work for the good of all.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Several close friends will be depending on you a bit more than usual today. Be prepared to shoulder some of their responsibilities.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll run a swifter race than your opponents today, so don't get uptight if you find yourself involved in a competitive situation.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your willpower plus your vivid imagination can work wonders for you today. See yourself in positive circumstances and proceed accordingly.

Gardening

'Fine Tuning' Tomato Plants Enhances Fruit

One vegetable that appears in almost all backyard gardens is the tomato. It is a crop we usually spend quite a bit of time cultivating. By now, you should have healthy, vigorous tomato plants, well on their way to producing high-quality fruit. To ensure an excellent crop, you should stake and prune those tomato plants.

Alfred Bosseson

Staking and pruning are what we call "fine tuning" gardening techniques. They're not absolutely necessary, and they won't make up for deficiencies in plant food, water, mulch or an inadequate pest control program. But they can enhance the quality of the tomatoes your plants produce.

Staking tomatoes as they grow will keep the fruit off the ground and conserve space in the garden. Staking also makes it easier to cultivate and harvest tomatoes...plus, it helps prevent some fruit rots.

First, a word of caution about staking. Staked plants are more subject to a condition called blossom-end rot than tomatoes that are allowed to grow naturally. Also, you must be careful to avoid plant root injury when you drive the stakes into the soil.

Some popular tomato varieties that benefit from staking are Floradel and Tropic. Those that do well include: Walter, Florida, Duke, Homestead and Florida M-H-One. Floramerica may or may not be staked.

One method of staking which seems to work well uses 1 x 2 inch wooden stakes about 6 to 8 feet long. Drive these about two feet into the soil, keeping them three to four inches from each plant. As the plants grow, tie them to the stakes with string, soft twine or strips of cloth. You'll probably need to make about four to six ties during the growing season. Always be sure to make the ties below the fruit or flower clusters.

Pruning is the process of removing the small shoots that develop between the leaf stems and main plant stems. By removing these shoots, or suckers, you will reduce the amount of fruit produced by your plants, but ensure that the fruits produced are large.

Prune your tomato plants about once a week. It's best to prune by hand. Holding a shoot firmly between thumb and forefinger, bend it to one side until it snaps. Then pull off the shoot in the opposite direction. Reversing the direction prevents injury to the leaf axil of the main stem.

When pruning, leave two or three main stems for plant development. And be careful not to disturb the fruit buds, which appear just above or below the point where the leaves are attached to the leaf stems.

In summary, staking and pruning are really beneficial to tomato growing. Staking certain varieties keeps the fruit off the ground, helps reduce some disease problems and helps conserve space in the small garden. Pruning will reduce the total number of fruits produced, but stimulate development of larger tomatoes. Happy gardening!

Mr. and Mrs. D. Brent Carli

Debby M. Bridges, D. Brent Carli Exchange Vows

Debby M. Bridges and D. Brent Carli were married at 6:30 p.m., March 1, at First United Methodist Church, Sanford. The Rev. George Bule performed the ceremony.

The bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Morris, and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Carli, greeted family and friends at the door.

The bride chose for her wedding a white satin floor length gown with grape leaf-patterned neckline and hem and a draped cowl back. Her bouquet contained stephanotis and trailing ivy.

The couple chose a selection of classical and modern music for the ceremony, performed by organist Jim Thomas, vocalist Aurora Wyrum and flutist Maria Busch.

The reception was held at Fitzgerald's, on the lake front.

Following a wedding trip to Captiva Island, the couple will reside in Sanford, where they own Carli's Hallmark Shoppe.

Lions Induct New Members

Give Lover 6 Month's Deadline To Set Wedding Date

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a guy who says he can't give me a commitment. We've been together for three years. I'm 24 and he's 27.

When we first met, we lived together. It was fine for a few months, then whenever we'd have an argument, he'd tell me to get out. Well, I finally did, which he didn't like too much because I took all the furniture, which was mine.

Now I'm at his place most of the time anyway. He's a traveling salesman, and I take care of his cats, take his mail in, cook his meals occasionally, etc., on the weekends. He rarely takes me out because he says he has enough of the bar scene all week long.

My mother says, "It's the old story: why should he buy a cow when he gets the milk for free?"

Do you think there is any future with this guy? (He says he loves me.) My decision depends on your reply.

BIDING MY TIME

DEAR BIDDING: What kind of

"future" do you want? If it's marriage, the only way to find out is to set a deadline. Give him six months to make up his mind. That's long enough to plan a wedding — or a cattle sale.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for five years. We slept together before marriage. He wasn't the only one, but I wouldn't call myself a loose woman or anything like that because I only did it with a guy I was in love with and I can love only one guy at a time.

Well, I have never had an orgasm. I'm not complaining because I really do enjoy sex; I've just never had an orgasm, which I understand is not all that unusual. I do a very good job of faking it, which my husband doesn't know about because I don't want him to feel inadequate.

We want children and I've been trying to get pregnant for two years, but no luck. Abby, can not having an orgasm be the reason I am not getting preg-

WANTS KIDS

DEAR WANTS: No. A non-organic woman can conceive. One thing has nothing to do with the other. First see a fertility specialist. Then see a sex therapist. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Lisa and I am 9 years old. I want you to know that my mom quit smoking because of you, with a little tagging from me. Last November she read a letter in your column reminding people that the next day was National Smokeout Day. That is when she quit smoking and she has not smoked since. Thank you, Abby.

LISA IN MADISON, WIS.

DEAR LISA: Thanks for letting me know. Please congratulate your mom for having raised a very caring daughter.

DEAR ABBY: My sister got married a few weeks ago. I was her matron of honor. She wants me to "help" her write thank-you notes for her wedding gifts. To "help" means I should write them all myself. I know this because I "helped" her write thank-you notes for her shower. (She licked the stamps.) When I objected, she told me that Bride's Magazine said it was my duty. Friends tell me not to, and I feel I shouldn't have to — her husband could help. Is this my duty? Please answer before she gets back from the honeymoon.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: A bride should write her own thank-you notes, and if she needs help, her husband should pitch in. Is it your duty? Not in my book.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine wrote an article that I thought might be helpful to your readers. You have her permission to use it if you wish.

WHAT NOT TO SAY TO A WIDOW OR WIDOWER

By Joan D. Freudy, freeport, N.Y.

"Are you keeping house? Don't you find it too big now?"

"Wouldn't you be much better off in an apartment? A condominium?"

"Have you considered moving to Florida?"

"What do you do with yourself these days?"

"You stay home too much."

"You need to be with people."

"You really should get out and join some groups."

"You have to pick yourself up and do things."

"I... always handled the money, didn't he? How do you manage now?"

"We'll be in touch."

"You must come over sometime."

AND WHAT TO SAY INSTEAD

"Come along with us. We'll pick you up."

"We'd love for you to come to dinner. How about next Thursday?"

"How about a walk in the park so we can have a chance to talk?"

"Let's take turns driving."

"We're going with a group to the museum next Sunday. Would you like to join us?"

"I belong to a group for (I). Would you like to be a member, too? We could go to the meetings together."

"I always enjoy your company."

Never refer to a widow or widower as "recent." Loss is forever, and all losses are recent to those who must bear them.

Sunrise Services Held At Local Churches

Eastertime and spring are here — the bunnies are hopping and the eggs are being colored. The public is invited to attend Sunrise Service at 5:30 a.m. at Morning Glory Missionary Baptist Church, Highway 46, Midway. The Rev. George W. Warren, minister of New Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, will deliver the sermon, and breakfast will be served. The Rev. Andrew Evans is host pastor.

Sunrise Service will also be held at 5:30 a.m. at Mt. Olive A.M.E. Church, West 18th Street and Hawkins Avenue. The Rev. J. H. Woodard, Allen Chapel A.M.E. Church, will deliver the message.

The residents of Good Samaritan Home colored Easter eggs and held an egg hunt on the patio for children from Sanford Child Care Center. Vernell Pugh coordinated the activities at Good Samaritan.

The Ninth Annual Scholarship Ball, sponsored by Celery City Lodge No. 542 and Evergreen Temple No. 331 I.B.P.O. Elks of the World, will be held from 10 p.m. until 3 a.m. Friday, April 4, at the

Marva Hawkins

Sanford Civic Center. Proceeds will provide scholarships for seniors participating in the annual oratorical contest for high school seniors sponsored by the Elks. Donations are $8 per person.

The evening will be highlighted by the crowning of a king and queen. Among the contestants for king is Stewart Baker, a member of the Celery City Lodge, St. James A.M.E. Church, Seminole and Florida Vocational Assoc., F.T.P., Florida Agriculture, National Agricultural Teachers Assoc. and FAMU alumni. He works for the Seminole County School Board.

Competing for queen is Delores Martin, a member of Evergreen Temple, New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church, Rose of Sharon 134 Order of Eastern Star and Herione of Jericho, Daughters of the Sphinx.

Celery City Lodge No. 542 and Evergreen Temple No. 331 will sponsor an Aretha Riggins and Allena Gibson Donation Day Friday evening and an open house Saturday evening at the Elks building on Cypress Avenue and Seventh Street. Proceeds will go to Aretha, a 15-year-old Seminole High School student who has been diagnosed as having Landry-Guillain-Barre syndrome, a muscle disease, and Mrs. Gibson, a member of St. John Missionary Baptist Church, who is still under doctor's care following a serious automobile accident last year. Aretha, the daughter of Joseph and Cora Lee Riggins, has been active in athletics at her school.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. White celebrated their first wedding anniversary March 20. Congratulations, and may you have many more just as happy.

Birthday celebrators were Evelyn Clark, Johnnie Smith, Rosabel Williams, Ruth Kilmer and Timothy Pappy Wilson.

NEW ARRIVAL

John and Anne Lucas, Sanford, announce the birth of their second child, Phillip Loren. He was born Feb. 27 and weighed 6 pounds, 11 ounces. His maternal grandparents are Loren and Ruth Dougherty, Sanford. His paternal grandmother is Ann Lucas, Sanford.

Explorer Thor Heyerdahl

Destroying The Myths Of Science

By Daniel Dreedoff
UPI Senior Editor

EASTER ISLAND, Chile (UPI) — Explorer Thor Heyerdahl finds small clues and imagines magnificent worlds.

For half a century, these clues — a drawing on a rock, a plant, an ancient legend — have been enough to hurl the trim Norwegian across three oceans in ancient seacrafts to prove theories about where man has been and how he got there.

And it is apparent, as he stands in a red dirt excavation trench beside a fallen stone statue on Easter Island, that even at the age of 71, he has no intention of stopping.

"Imagine, we found a rainworm here!" he exclaims in a voice suggesting celebration. And his enthusiasm is so contagious that you'd join him — if only you had the slightest idea what he was talking about.

"That means there is humus, and that means there was once a forest cover," he explains. "The disappearance of the forest was due to human activity. They needed to clear land for cultivation."

Evidence of ancient farmers. He writes down details in a small notebook and thrusts it back into his neatly pressed khaki trousers. He returns his attention to the dig, his battered blue Australian bush hat shielding the bright South Pacific sun.

Perennial Rebel

On the surface, Heyerdahl is a logical, scholarly man who speaks evenly and deliberately of his long-gone magnificent worlds, but inside is the perennial rebel against an over-protective mother and skeptical father.

He is a man who built a reed ship and sailed it back and forth across the Indian Ocean to prove a scientific point, and then burned it to make a personal point against arm sales to the Third World.

"I am absolutely convinced, after a long time among people of all nations in all cultural stages (and) from the study of all the early civilizations — right from the beginning of our knowledge, which goes back to 3,000 B.C. — that the human brain, the human character, the mentality, has not changed a bit," says Heyerdahl. "For better or worse."

"I think at that time there were just as many geniuses and just as many idiots, and just as many men in the middle of the road as there are today. We ourselves have not changed."

Although millions know him as the author of the adventure books "Kon-Tiki" and "Ra," Heyerdahl himself refuses labels.

He is an archaeologist who says he is not an archaeologist, a daring navigator who was never a sailor, a scientist who infuriates colleagues by proving them wrong, and a college dropout who spent a fortune trying to win acceptance from academia.

And he is a courageous man, so convinced of his own scientific theories that he dared to take calculated, personal risks while colleagues stuck to their textbooks.

Sitting inside a battered blue bus parked beside the Easter Island excavation, munching on a box lunch of cold chicken, Heyerdahl reflects on the ironies.

"My father was a wonderful human being," he muses, "but he was afraid I would not be a real man."

Then he sailed across the Pacific for 101 days in a fragile balsa raft. "I think that finally convinced him."

The Real Story

Heyerdahl's life has been dominated by three challenges: to live in harmony with nature and improve it; to make his mark on the scientific community; and to build on his conception of the basic unity of mankind.

He is a man who likes to theorize.

"Once you have a working hypothesis, everything else falls into place," he says.

Yet theories must be demonstrated, and more often than not Heyerdahl has been his own test tube.

At age 24, wondering if an isolated Pacific island was really the paradise he imagined, he went there. He and his young bride Liv, his first wife, lived on an isolated archipelago in Polynesia for a year, without medicine or matches and eating tropical fruit and fish.

"We learned that the real story is that man cannot do without civilization today. I wrote a book about that experience that ended with the words, 'You cannot buy a ticket to paradise.'"

"... You can find paradise in the heart of the ugliest city if you realize that paradise is some-

'The people who had done the most for science and for myself were really my opponents...bringing up arguments that made me go ahead and look for new facts.'

thing you have inside you and not something you find by looking around."

Heyerdahl, however, never stopped looking around. "What I was really longing for was to get in touch with people who had their feet on solid ground and lived in unity with the universe and the planet."

Experts Disagreed

Ironically, it was a lack of unity — among scholars — that first triggered Heyerdahl's decision to go see for himself, something that would become the trademark of his career.

As a student at the University of Oslo, he read everything he could about Pacific cultures and primitive island life, only to find that none of the experts agreed on how humans first came to Polynesia.

"I didn't know whom to believe," he said. "The one who was studying the skeletal material came to one conclusion. Then another studying the language said it was impossible. Then a third who had studied ax types came to still another conclusion."

... Until Kon-Tiki, he considered water 'something that sucks you down, like a vacuum cleaner.' After Kon-Tiki, he saw water as 'something that pulls you up. As long as you relax, you float.'

Heyerdahl later developed a theory of his own, widely accepted now but heresy in the 1940s: Polynesia was not first settled by sailors from Indonesia, but by South American Indians crossing the oceans on primitive seacraft, taking the prevailing winds and currents near the Equator. It was not until later that the peoples of Southeast Asia, traveling via the Japan current, took prevailing winds toward North America and then circled back down to the South Pacific.

Finding Proof

The heart of his theory was that primitive navigators always followed the winds and currents. Curiously, however, the first proof came from botany.

When the first Europeans found the islands of Polynesia, the sweet potato and other plants already had been introduced and were available in abundance — just as they were in South America. At the time, those foods were unknown in Southeast Asia.

Later Heyerdahl would add to that proof by finding unmistakable links between the ancient art, stone engravings and even the Indians of Canada, South America and Polynesia.

"As a biologist who had studied geography, I realized it was impossible, absolutely impossible, to sail a primitive vessel against the wind and currents from Indonesia to Polynesia," Heyerdahl says. "I knew the only one who had tried to do it, Eric de Bisehop, had failed."

"He had tried for three years to sail against the wind and current and concluded it can't be done and it wasn't done. Then he (took the Japan current) to Hawaii, built a double canoe, and had no trouble at all sailing from Hawaii to down."

Always the maverick, Heyerdahl began his field research in the Marquesas Islands in the late 1930s as a zoologist. Then he decided to switch to anthropology, dropping out of the University of Oslo in his fourth year so he could study the Bella Coola Indians of Western Canada.

"I graduated in nothing," he says. "I quit zoology. Obviously, this is why I had a terrible fight with the whole world in the beginning, because I had gone my own path."

In Canada, Heyerdahl elaborated one major part of his theory, that Polynesians came to the West Coast of North America from Southeast Asia before they returned to the sea and sailed westward across the Pacific. In this, he says, he followed in the footsteps of his predecessors.

"All the early explorers pointed out the similarities between the people of New Zealand and the people of British Columbia," he says. "The physical types. The similarity in the moai (statues) and the Northwest totem poles. The woodcarving. The stone and whalebone clubs, very specialized. The stone tools. The clothing. The earth oven. Every single element was pointed out by them."

Heyerdahl personally observed the similarities between the Northwest Indians and the natives of Polynesia, but despite his evidence he could not find a publisher to print his conclusions.

It was not until after World War II, in 1947, that he was able to offer his most dramatic proof — boarding the balsa raft Kon-Tiki, named for a pre-Inca sun god, for the 101-day journey across the Pacific from Calao, Peru, to the Marquesas Islands.

He was ridiculed by no less than anthropologist Margaret Mead. Harvard professor S.K. Lotrop, an authority on primitive navigation, wrote that a balsa raft could not possibly float for two weeks.

Heyerdahl said he would never forget the feeling of triumph when he and his five crewmen pulled themselves out of the surf on the Polynesian atoll of Rarola.

"I crawled up on the dry sand and counted the men around me. That feeling can never be matched. We had really made it and we were all alive!"

A fact that some scientists may have secretly regretted.

No Bailor

Today, Heyerdahl traces his nearly constant friction with recognized scholars to the success of Kon-Tiki.

"I had stepped on too many toes of the old professors," he said. "They got hurt, and to make it worse, the general press made me out to be a sort of rough Norwegian Viking coming out of the sailing boat world and proving the professional world wrong."

"It was pointless for me to make them understand that I wasn't a sailor at all. We just hung onto a very good vessel. The press altogether forgot that I too was a scholar with academic background."

Nevertheless, he freely admits that a skepticism of scientific authority is ingrained in his thinking.

"I must be very outspoken. I have no respect for authority," he says. "I don't accept what a man says just because he is an authority. Time and time again we dig and we find the authorities are wrong."

Not only were authorities wrong about the balsa raft, but they were also wrong when they told him South American Indians never reached the Galapagos Islands, 600 miles off Ecuador. Heyerdahl led an expedition there in 1952 and found pre-Inca pottery and other artifacts.

He followed that expedition in 1955 with his first study of Easter Island — a trip that proved to be a benchmark in two critical areas. First, it was a turning point in his campaign for academic acceptance. Second, it left him broke.

The excavation team found in its digging that the mysterious, brooding stone statues of Easter Island were actually twice as large as previously thought, as well as evidence that the island had been inhabited a thousand years earlier than previously believed.

Those and other finds, such as different styles of statue art representing different cultural periods, forced the academic world to take notice.

The University of Oslo changed its bylaws so it could award Heyerdahl an honorary doctorate, an award previously reserved for foreigners. The Royal Geographical Society in London awarded him a gold medal.

Today he is philosophical about his war with the academics.

Opposition Spurred Search

"I believe in opposition," he says, standing on Easter Island's Anakena beach in the shadow of another towering statue. "When I got the gold medal I had to give a speech. I had to admit, looking back, that the people who had done most for science and for myself were really my opponents, who had been bringing up arguments that made me go ahead and look for new facts."

But the cost of acceptance was high.

After the Kon-Tiki book and movie, which won an Oscar, Heyerdahl was temporarily rich. But "every penny I had" went into the Easter Island trip — a one-year voyage that involved the cost of chartering a ship and hiring 23 people, including five archaeologists, a captain and a crew.

"I've never recovered from that expedition," he says. "I'll have to work until I drop."

Despite that, Heyerdahl does raise enough money to stay active. And keep the academic world fuming.

In recent years he has led expeditions to the Maldives Islands off the southern coast of India. He is hoping a book about that journey will return him to financial health.

"They said there was no archaeology in the Maldives. Nobody looked. We went out there and dug and found material for 100 scientists working for 100 years."

Yet another scientific conclusion, by the Papyrus Institute in Cairo, that papyrus reed would dissolve after two weeks in water was almost immediately challenged by Heyerdahl.

He had seen Easter Islanders use reed boats and was impressed with their buoyancy. He guessed that pre-pharaonic civilizations could have crossed the Atlantic in such craft — even if the pharaohs themselves were river people and not seafarers and did not make the crossing.

Bathtub vs. Seawater

Papyrus "I had the authorities 100 percent against me," Heyerdahl says. "That papyrus had been tested in a bathtub. Any kind of reed will rot in stagnant fresh water. But in clean ocean water, it is preserved. The longer it (papyrus) is in seawater, the tougher it gets."

Heyerdahl's papyrus ship "Ra" remained afloat eight weeks in the Atlantic, but disintegrated shortly before reaching Barbados because of faulty construction of the stern. The Ra II completed the crossing in 57 days.

If the original voyage of the Kon-Tiki proved something to the scientific world, it also proved something to Heyerdahl himself: He had conquered his fear of water.

"At the age of 5 or 6," he says, he fell through the ice in Norway and nearly drowned. It was a fear he carried with him years later when he first took up residence on Polynesia.

He recalls falling into a river there and being swept toward the sea.

'You cannot buy a ticket to paradise... You can find paradise in the heart of the ugliest city if you realize that paradise is something you have inside you and not something you find by looking around.'

"I thought, 'By God! I've had it unless I do what my father had told me.' Automatically, I just moved naturally and saw that I got through the water, no problem. As soon as I got out I dived in again and thought, 'By God! What a stupid idiot I was!'"

Nevertheless, until Kon-Tiki, he says he considered water "something that sucks you down, like a vacuum cleaner." After Kon-Tiki, he concluded that water "is something that pulls you up. As long as you relax, you float."

Lifestyles

He attributes the collapse of his two marriages to neither the turmoil of his finances nor his battles with science, but to changing temperaments and disagreements on where and how to live.

His companion of the past 10 years, Liliana Spigarelli, gives him "all the happiness," he says, and helps him manage their 100-acre estate on the Italian Riviera at Colla Micheri in Laigueglia.

They are not formally married and do not plan to have children. Liliana and his second wife, Yvonne, are "the best of friends," he says.

Of his first wife, Liv, who is now dead, he says: "I could have never found another like her. Nobody could have done what she did with me, living for a year on an island."

After World War II, however, he and Liv "grew in different directions. I had been a soldier in the dirt and ice in the Arctic and was a changed man. She lived in the United States and had a different experience."

"We decided finally that it didn't work."

He says Yvonne helped him organize the Ra voyages and stood at his side during the post-Kon-Tiki scientific debates.

"She was marvelous," he says. "She was fantastic in helping me when I was fighting the whole world."

He says they parted ways after disagreeing on where to live.

"She was a typical Norwegian and wanted to live in Norway. I fell in love with Italy."

Heyerdahl's marital separation came despite a personal vow to never divorce. He remembers he was hurt when his own parents divorced while he was in high school and was grateful when they stopped quarreling after they separated.

"When they quarreled it hurt me tremendously," he says. "They knew it hurt me and were very civilized. I never thought I would make the blunder of a divorce."

Early Training

Heyerdahl's parents trained him in different directions, the father intellectually, the mother physically.

"The combination was good for me," he says.

'The more I've seen of my friends my own age who didn't bother about what they were eating and what kind of air they were breathing, I really understand more how important it is.'

His father, a brewer and bank director, encouraged outdoor activities — but sailing was not one of them.

"I come from 12 generations of inland people. I don't think any of my own ancestors, including my father, could hoist a sail on the smallest boat."

He was an only child, born when his mother, a museum director, was 45 years old. She showered him with books long before he could read.

"She had been educated as a girl in England and was fascinated by Darwin and that sort of thing, which was unorthodox at the time in Norway," he says.

"We had a very extensive library in my childhood home. So instead of reading Norwegian fairy tales, or even before I could read Norwegian, I was given three volumes titled 'Living Races of Mankind.'"

Heyerdahl led outdoor expeditions at the age of 7, looking for marine and animal life, "anything from bats and bird eggs to flies, insects and lizards."

"I got a room in my parent's house which was devoted to becoming a museum."

His taste for challenging the outdoors didn't come until much, much later — something he attributes to an over-protective mother.

"As a matter of fact, I was anything but brave as a little boy," he says. "I think this is also a responsibility of my mother. In a sense, because when everybody else was allowed to use an ax and chop wood or something, my mother would say, 'Oh, be careful! Don't use the ax!'"

"When I got into high school I reacted against this over-protection. I shocked everybody, by going out in winter with just a sleeping bag. I just intentionally went out and dug myself into the snow."

"I felt that if you play along with nature, it isn't bad at all. After all, we are created by nature, whether you believe it was through the help of God or if you see nature as God itself. We are children of nature and we survive thanks to nature. So we shouldn't be afraid of it."

What his mother did give him was a strict routine of personal health that kept him in excellent physical condition.

"She made me drink goat's milk," he says. "And the windows were kept open when I slept at night."

That pattern continues today, with Heyerdahl's variations, at his home in Italy. He breakfasts on a Swiss cereal of oatmeal and crushed hazelnuts with raisins and other dried fruit.

"I cut up an apple and put it on top of it, and eat it with milk from my own goats," he says.

"I hate to sleep with a closed window, even if it is 40 degrees below zero outdoors. ... The more I've seen of my friends my own age who didn't bother about what they were eating and what kind of air they were breathing, I really understand more how important it is."

His diet is high in home-grown vegetables and salads, with pasta once a week. His favorite exotic dish is Moroccan couscous, "the way you get it in the home of a pasha, not the common one."

Physical exercise, in the form of outdoor work, is another ingrained habit.

"This was not exactly one of my mother's lessons. It was more from my father. But I consider it extremely important myself."

But Heyerdahl gets his exercise from practical work, such as clearing the forest where he lives with ax, pick and shovel. "I go to work so the perspiration really pours off me. Usually I have to bring a change of clothing, because I get so wet I can't continue."

"I don't have the patience to take gymnastics. I've tried many times to stretch, bend and so on. If I've done it twice, I think, 'Now this is terribly boring,' and it serves no purpose."

"Now when I go down into my forest it not only helps me, but I am also clearing the underbrush against forest fires, breaking away stones that would prevent beautiful juniper from coming up. I see nature improving around me, and I never think of getting tired."

Pollution Fighter

Heyerdahl's present-day concerns about preserving the environment are a natural outgrowth of his lifelong appreciation of the outdoors.

After his Ra voyages were plagued by petroleum refuse, he denounced pollution from oil tankers and off-shore wells. He crusaded for an ocean cleanup in the United Nations and in lectures, radio and television appearances in 23 countries.

Heyerdahl says ship owners and petroleum firms responded with major improvements, but he warns that life at sea continues to be threatened by chemical wastes, insecticides and detergents.

"We are sort of throwing loose screws into a machinery that operated perfectly for millions of years," he says. "The more of those poisons we put in, the more we are in danger of stopping the whole clockwork of this planet."

Heyerdahl is not active in any political party, nor does he vote because of his travel, but he strongly opposes the arms race. He accepts space exploration as natural, but feels spending on space technology is excessive.

In 1978 his reed ship Tigris criss-crossed the Indian Ocean to demonstrate primitive direction navigation, but he burned the vessel off the coast of Djibouti to protest warfare and arms sales to the Third World.

Mysteries Ahead

Far from ending his distant searches on the seas, islands, and in ruins under the earth, Heyerdahl continues to study the mysteries of the planet.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Gulf Confrontation Claims: U.S. 'Success,' Libya 'Victory'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. task force, completing a "successful operation" in the Libyan-claimed Gulf of Sidra, is operating north of the disputed area but will return if necessary, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

Libya, meanwhile, said the U.S. disengagement from the gulf meant Libya "fought and triumphed" over the Sixth Fleet and reasserted the world supported Tripoli's claim to own the disputed offshore waters.

The Pentagon declared an end Thursday to five days of exercises by ships and aircraft of Task Force 60 that were challenged by Libyan anti-aircraft missiles and missile boats until early Tuesday. The Navy retaliated, sinking two boats and knocking out radar at an anti-aircraft missile site at Sidra.

Libya "scored a glittering victory over the imperialist invaders of the Gulf of Death, the Gulf of Sidra" state radio said Thursday a few hours after the U.S. announced it was pulling its task force from the area.

An official commentary on Libyan television said the U.S. pullback had been forced by Libya's "brave defiance" and the weight of world opinion against the United States.

Death Toll At 343 Under Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — The death toll in fighting between communist rebels and the armed forces since President Corazon Aquino took office has climbed to 343, despite her appeals for a cease-fire, military headquarters announced today.

The casualty report, carried by the state-run Philippine News Agency, came on the eve of the 17th anniversary of the founding of the communist-led New Peoples Army, which grew from 300 troops in 1969 to a fighting force of 16,000 last year.

Authorities kept military units on red alert — the highest state of readiness — for a third day today, bracing for NPA attacks to mark the anniversary and disrupt a four-day Easter holiday in Asia's only predominantly Christian country.

13 Killed in Sikh Attack

CHANDIGARH, India (UPI) — Sikh terrorists on a motorcycle and scooter sprayed gunfire at crowds today as they sped across a central Punjab city, killing at least 13 people and wounding 18 others in the bloodiest Sikh attack in 10 months.

Authorities issued a statewide army alert.

Officials said four extremists rode into a park — two on a motorcycle and two on a scooter — in Ludhiana, 150 miles northwest of New Delhi, and began indiscriminately firing with submachineguns at people on morning strolls, exercising or worshipping at a Hindu temple.

Among those exercising were young activists of a right-wing Hindu political party fiercely opposed to the Sikh demand for a separate state in the Punjab.

Melbourne Explosion Probed

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Heavily armed police guarded Melbourne's bombed police headquarters today as investigators tried to determine the cause of an explosion that injured 22 people.

An expert in terrorism said he thought the bombing, which took place Thursday during the busy lunch hour, was not linked with any known terrorist or political organization. Melbourne police said they believed it was the work of a psychopath.

The single car-bomb exploded in a fireball some 50 feet high outside the 10-story building as office workers were enjoying lunchtime in "Indian Summer" weather in the high 80s.

Catholics Celebrate Good Friday

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Bells at Roman Catholic churches across the world were silenced today to mark Christianity's most somber anniversary, the day Jesus was crucified and died.

Pope John Paul II was scheduled to lead a hectic day of Good Friday services, including a solemn commemoration at St. Peter's Basilica of Jesus' sufferings and death.

Later, near the ruins of Rome's ancient Colosseum, John Paul was to lead a torchlight "Way of the Cross" ceremony to commemorate 14 stages of Christ's last sufferings, from his condemnation to death before Pontius Pilate to his burial in a borrowed tomb outside ancient Jerusalem.

South Africa Renews Restrictions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Officials have renewed stringent restrictions on public meetings, and a judge has been appointed to investigate the police slaying of 11 people at a protest rally.

The renewal of the restrictions, some of them several years old, came Thursday as the government launched an investigation of the slaying of 11 people at a gathering to protest the arrest of black schoolchildren.

At least 37 were wounded and 2,500 arrested in the shooting Wednesday on a sports field in Bophuthatawana, one of the so-called national states, where more than 5,000 people had gathered.

Of problems in the medical profession, Perez said, "The public has been brainwashed by the image of (television doctor) Marcus Welby. He would work with one patient for a whole week," and always come up with the perfect cure.

"We are imperfect people like everyone else," Perez said.

He said doctors and patients now have an antagonistic relationship.

"I watch new patients carefully," Perez said, "thinking this might be the guy who will sue me."

He said he has never been sued. "Every neurosurgeon in Florida has been sued at least once. Does that mean every neurosurgeon is a bad doctor? I don't think so."

He added that a $250,000 cap on non-economic damages would reduce doctor's liability insurance premiums 12-25 percent.

He said he not against compensation for victims of doctor's mistakes.

"If I make a mistake, I will tell the patient, and tell him I am willing to pay for it."

He said he takes extra precautions and often consults specialists on opinions of cases to help protect himself from a suit.

He said a liability award cap would bring more insurance companies into the state, implying that more companies would bring competition, and lower liability insurance rates.

He also suggested that if premiums were based on doctors experience, the better the doctor, the lower the premium. The more claims against a doctor, the higher the premium.

Of the doctors and lawyers, Perez said, "We are professionals and should work together..."

"It is difficult to find a majority for any proposition placing military aid for the Contras, unrestricted, in the hands of the president," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters. "That is quite leap from last year."

The Senate, 53-47, adopted the GOP substitute amendment providing the conditional release of $100 million in military and humanitarian assistance to the anti-Sandinista forces in Nicaragua. The bill then passed by voice vote.

The bill provides an immediate infusion of $25 million in military aid to the rebels. Congress cut off military assistance to the Contras in 1984.

The measure also states that U.S. forces may train the Contras in Honduras to use surface-to-air missiles against advanced Soviet helicopter gunships, ending a ban on contact between U.S. armed forces with the rebels. But U.S. forces cannot enter Nicaragua.

Reagan must seek a regional peace settlement within 90 days, but if he decides the talks are fruitless, he can ask for the remaining $75 million.

Congress could vote to disapprove the second installment of aid if lawmakers are not satisfied with Reagan's diplomatic effort, but the president could veto that decision — meaning Congress would have to muster a two-thirds vote to block the money.

"The Senate's action is sure to send a profoundly reassuring signal to those fighters for freedom in Nicaragua and to Nicaragua's threatened neighbors," Reagan said in a statement released at his California ranch, where he is spending Easter vacation.

The administration maintained Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega proved he was a threat to Central American stability by sending 1,500 troops into Honduras to destroy the Contras.

But Dole and Lugar said the incident did not sway the Senate.

"I did not see much change," Dole said. "I thought we would have 51, 52, or 53 (votes)."

all the facts," Paulucci said. "We have offered to pay half of the cost of an Info-Tech study," reportedly $25,000.

"Even if the cost were $250,000, we'd still pay half the cost. We'd pay it all, but I don't want it to be a Paulucci study. I want it done as a cooperative effort. We believe we should have all the facts," he said.

"There's a lot more opposition, we understand," Paulucci said.

Kroll said an Info-Tech study "would be of great assistance to the school board."

"Transportation cost, tracking students attending schools out of zone, rezoning, social-economic mixture, and racial mixture data could all be examined in an Info-Tech study," Kroll said.

He added that Paulucci's offer to pay half the cost of an Info-Tech study was "generous" beyond the standard impact fees a developer is required to pay.

"The bottom line is that everybody gets a fair and honest shot at the best way to zone Seminole County middle schools (with an Info-Tech study)," Kroll said.

"As far as I'm concerned, I think these objections are a little late," zone task force chairman Sandy Robinson of Lake Mary said. "Where were that four months ago? If they were concerned, why didn't they say something then?"

She said Kroll was invited to a meeting of Lake Mary residents in January, but did not attend.

"We followed all the guidelines that were set, all the information was discussed in public, and the public was always included," Robinson said.

"In all 11 plans we looked at, Lake Mary Boulevard was used as the north-south dividing line," she continued.

"If ten to twenty families out of 9,000 are all that's unhappy, then I think we did a good job. We knew we wouldn't make everyone happy, and there are still students who live within the city limits of Lake Mary who will not be going to Greenwood Lakes," Mrs. Robinson said.

The parents saying they are from the northwest Lake Mary community actually live outside the Lake Mary city limits. The area is described as west of Interstate 4, north of Lake Mary Boulevard, south of 46A, and east of the Wekiva River. Residents there have said that there are presently only ten middle school students living in their area and should be allowed to attend the school nearest their home, Greenwood Lakes, which will open for the first time this fall.

In a March 24 letter from area spokesman Jan Railey to an Evening Herald reporter, she repeated her claim that, "We have asked the school board to include our children in the boundaries for Greenwood Lakes, but although we have been heard, they have not given our proposal serious consideration."

Mrs. Railey said during public meetings during the process, which she attended, "we were discouraged from speaking."

In a carefully staged tour Thursday, the Honduran army and U.S. Embassy officials allowed reporters to visit the region along the Nicaraguan-Honduran border for the first time since Washington said some 1,500 Sandinistas crossed the border into Honduras.

Two U.S. Chinook helicopters flew reporters to San Francisco de Capire, eight miles from the Nicaraguan border, where they were shown Soviet-made weaponry and supplies a military spokesman said was captured from fleeing Nicaraguans.

The cache included 36 AK-47 rifles, four machine guns, a SAM-7 hand-held surface-to-air missile, mortars, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, grenades, ammunition, clothing and canned food from Yugoslavia.

Also on display were the bodies of persons the Hondurans said were five Sandinista soldiers killed two days ago by Honduran troops in a series of small hit-and-run engagements in the mountains near the border.

contingent almost $60,000 and the figure is far from complete. The city's law firm has yet to submit vouchers for its Yankee Lake suit efforts beyond January and Sanford, as petitioner in the condemnation effort, is required by Florida law to pay the plaintiff's attorney's fees, within reason.

County Commission Chairman Bob Sturm said today billing received by the county from the two private attorneys it hired for the suit is "in excess of $25,000" and not yet complete. Additionally, the county's three staff attorneys, who are paid on an annual basis, will itemize how many hours they devoted to the suit's defense and submit this to the county commission for review, Deputy County Attorney Bob McMillan said.

As defendant, the county is also entitled to "a reasonable" recoup of staff's fees, in addition to those charged by the private counsel it retained, McMillan said.

Sanford is also legally responsible for attorney's fees compiled by Mack Cleveland and Jim Spoonhour, counsel who defended Paulucci's interests in the suit.

Cleveland said today the billing has yet to be reviewed with his client and he therefore declined to discuss its amount. He said attorneys fee's Sanford will pay to Paulucci and county council would in all likelihood be determined at the same court hearing.

Cleveland also said the $28 million civil action Paulucci filed against Sanford for launching the condemnation suit "is still on" for April 30, when city counsel will argue for its dismissal.

"It's not for me to say whether it will be dropped if Sanford backs away from condemnation. That decision is entirely up to my client," Cleveland said.

Commissioners are leaning toward doing just that, although they also said the Paulucci suit was not a factor for their determination.

Several commissioners agreed it was time to channel energies and finances into finding an alternate site, rather than continuing condemnation litigation or paying the county for disposal capacity at Yankee Lake.

On Wednesday, Sanford and Lake Mary received a formal invitation from the county to join the regional facility it plans to develop at Yankee Lake. Sanford engineers, however, have said the cost of such participation would more than double what the city had anticipated spending to develop its own Yankee Lake disposal system. The city was looking at a $19.4 million land disposal system at Yankee Lake, while the county's figures were $40 million for disposal and $50 million for treatment and disposal at Yankee Lake, according to Sanford Engineering and Planning Director Bill Simmons.

"The county's cost precludes our involvement," Commissioner Dave Farr said. "We have to find our own site."

Mayor Smith concurred by saying, "There's got to be a less expensive solution to our wastewater problem."

Farr and Commissioner Bob Thomas also echoed the mayor's call for an end to Yankee Lake litigation. Commissioners Milton Smith and John Mercer could not be reached for comment.

"If we're going to display any type of intelligence at this point," Thomas said, "we should pursue other sites and forget about Yankee Lake and costly condemnation suits."

"We came up short," Thomas said of the litigation. "I just hope citizens realize the condemnation was something we felt we had to do to meet the state requirement."

Farr said "the last thing" he wanted to do was pursue litigation with the county.

"I wish the county well," he said, "I never wanted to go for condemnation in the first place, but at the time it seemed the only door open to us."

The suit, he said "was unfortunate, but necessary," in light of the city's mandate to cease dumping effluent in Lake Monroe.

"Economically, we just can't be at Yankee Lake with them," Farr said of the county. "But we don't want to be enemies with them either. We want to work with them to meet our citizens' needs. I hope that's the tone that will be displayed from here on in."

The city and the state Department of Environmental Regulation have joined forces to help locate a Yankee Lake alternative for implementation of the city's wastewater disposal system. Several sites targeted by the city as possible disposal locations for the estimated 7 million gallons of wastewater Sanford generates each day will be surveyed by city and DER representatives early next month. The sites' effluent disposal viability will be judged against recently promulgated DER wetlands rules.

Farr said he is optimistic the effort will lead to "a more economically plausible" disposal site than Yankee Lake. Farr also said the county and the city's "separate facilities will enable us to jointly meet the sewage needs of northwest Seminole County."

Close Harmony Of The Barbershoppers

Across the nation about 40,000 men share the harmonious goal of keeping in tune with "barbershop quartet" vocalizing.

It's a musical blend of voices that recalls the days of minstrel shows, thus calling for spiffy dress in spats, stripes, bowties, vests, derbies or sometimes, straw hats.

Central Florida has its fair share of barbershop singers with the Orlando Chapter of S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. (Society for the Promotion and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America) — which has 700 chapters nationwide, gearing up for its 38th Annual Show, "Bring on the Girls."

The show may be called "Bring on the Girls," but The Orange Blossom Chorus, made up of about 90 members, and the quartets scheduled to sing are all male.

The Orange Blossom Chorus is preparing for "Bring On The Girls."

...Barbershoppers

Mike DeGross of Casselberry, whose bass voice has been harmonizing, a cappella, with other men for about seven years, said women have their own barbershop-style singing groups, such as the Sweet Adelines.

The singing may be for men only within the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A., but the functioning of the group makes barbershop music a family affair, with picnics, performances and competitions to attend, where wives and children and others with an interest in four-part, close harmony and an old-time good time are welcome.

"While it's a men's singing organization," DeGross, a telephone company engineer, said, "I've been out with my wife more than before, to shows and competitions. The family enjoys it. It has a social aspect."

And these barbershop singers have a serious side. A portion of the monies these non-profit performers earn goes not only to support their group, but to provide funds for a Kansas hospital which treats children with speech disorders, such as stuttering, according to Ken Bragg, 72, of Orlando.

Bragg, who has only been harmonizing for three years, sings lead in The Orange Blossom Chorus, champs in international competition in 1982, '83, and '84. They hope to regain the honor that slipped from them in '85 in this year's competition in St. Louis.

"I love to sing and my father and my brother were professional singers. But I waited so long," Bragg said. Too long he said to have the truer voice needed for a quartet, but in the meantime, he adds his voice to the larger group.

Even if you're drawn to the barbershop sound you have to be a good singer to make it into a group, according to 37-year-old Don Barnick of Longwood. And Barnick, who has been a barbershop singer for 21 years after being drawn to the sound in high school, is apparently a pretty good baritone.

He's a member of the Sidekicks, which are the featured performers for the "Bring on the Girls" showcase. Although the Sidekicks grouped just a year ago, Barnick said they hope to make it to international competition this year.

"The singing is becoming more and more professional in the sense of expertise, not in earnings. It's a hobby. If you can sing, carry a tune, and work at it you can get an education in a society," he said.

It isn't so much the specific old tunes that the groups sing that appeals to Barnick, it's the close harmonizing, the vocal blend with no instrumental backing.

"It's a special fraternity," he said, open to those singers that have true enough voices to blend in. Being a member of the society also brings instant friendships with other Americans, and chapters are now also humming along in Sweden and England, Barnick said.

The Sidekicks, l to r, Harold Nantz, Dave LaBar, Randy Loos and Don Barnick of Longwood.

DeGross, 42, will be performing in the New Era quartet in "Bring on the Girls." Other participants include: Cheerful Noise, the 1985 Sunshine District Quartet Champions; High Gear, the Troubadours and Vo-De-O-Do.

The performances are scheduled to begin at the Tupperware Convention Center in Kissimmee, at 8 p.m. April 5. All tickets are $10 and all seats reserved. They can be ordered through Ace Zryd, P.O.

Box 20904, Orlando, Fl 32814.

For those with interest in the Orlando Chapter of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A., the group meets Tuesday evenings at its own theater, Melody Manor, on Montana Street in Orlando. Annual dues are $85, Bragg said.

As for the appeal of barbershop music, Bragg said, "It makes cold shivers run up your back when we hit a chord in four-part harmony."

'Mr. Sunshine' Debuts

NEW YORK (UPI) — The idea of laughing at a blind man is, of course, sick. Laughing with a blind man: now that goes down a bit easier.

That is the key difference in ABC's new sitcom, "Mr. Sunshine," which debuts tonight on WFTV-Channel 9 (March 28, 9 p.m. EST). At first glance, one is tempted to brand it a sick show that cracks jokes at the expense of the sightless. But it does more good than harm.

"Bats use me as a role model," Mr. Sunshine says in the first episode. It is funny, but there is this feasting queasiness about laughing at such wisecracking.

The show is about an acerbic, frightened, about-to-be-divorced, brilliant college professor who is also blind. In the first episode, by unofficial count, there is one joke a minute that touches on the subject of blindness.

It is a delicate subject, for networks do not wish to dance on the toes of the sightless.

Comedy For Cash

By Mark Secord
 UPI TV Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — First came Band Aid, then Live Aid and Farm Aid, Gospel Aid and Latin Aid, and even Fashion Aid.

Never before have so many people organized such massive benefits for the have-nots.

The latest in the compassion craze comes courtesy of Home Box Office and it could be called Funny Aid. More than 40 of the funniest folks in America are banding together March 29 (9 p.m. to midnight, EST), for Comic Relief, a benefit to raise money for urban America's homeless.

Billy Crystal, Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams will host the HBO extravaganza, cablecast live from the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles.

Stars slated to appear in person or in pre-recorded segments in the three-hour event include some of the biggest names in comedy: Steve Allen, Harry Anderson, Sid Caesar, John Candy, Tony Danza, Richard Dreyfuss, Firesign Theater, Michael J. Fox, Mary Gross, Robert Guillaume, Buddy Hackett, Pee-wee Herman, Madeline Kahn, Michael Keaton, Jerry Lewis, Howie Mandel, Bette Midler and Martin Mull.

The list goes on: Minnie Pearl, Joe Piscopo, Gilda Radner, Carl Reiner, Doc Severinsen, Garry Shandling, Henry Winkler, "Weird Al" Jankovic and Henny Youngman.

A special 90-minute "highlights" version of Comic Relief will also be presented on HBO on April 6, 9, 15 and 25.

"We're all there to be funny," Crystal says. "My statement, and what I feel most of the comics' statements will be, is to be funny. We're going to do the best show that we possibly can and let the whole evening dictate what it's about."

Besides the stand-up comedy segments, character pieces, ensemble sketches by the three hosts and other skits, Comic Relief will also include documentary footage dramatizing the plight of the nation's urban poor and homeless.

HBO will unscramble Comic Relief, meaning that if your cable company offers HBO, you'll see the benefit even if you don't normally pay for HBO. That marks the first time HBO has made a single show available to a potential 39 million basic cable subscriber homes.

The concept for the show was born last November when screenwriter-producer Bob Zmuda presented HBO with the idea for a one-of-a-kind programming event that would enable the nation's comedy community to raise money and boost awareness for America's homeless.

Are Patients In The Operating Rooms Real?

Dear Dick — I wonder if you could help me. Of the years I've watched television, I've seen a number of operations. I would like to know exactly what they are operating on, or pretending to operate on. — Unsigned, Houston.

I assume you are talking about the dramatic medical shows, not the documentaries, which have often showed real operations. On the medical and doctor shows, they operate on nothing. A dummy, pillow, watermelon or something under the sheet may be used to give the "patient" some body and heft, but it is all pretend.

Dear Dick — When I have the time and am bored, I watch "The Brady Bunch" re-runs. One thing puzzles me though. If Mr. and Mrs. Brady were married when they each already had three children, who were the real parents of the kids? What's the scoop? Were they adopted? Did Carol and Mike have divorce? Or did the real parents die? I don't think anything was mentioned on the show. A bet is riding on this. — M.D., Warsaw, Ind.

I was never confused by those wild and crazy Bradys. Carol (Florence Henderson) was a widow with three daughters and Mike (Robert Reed) was a widower with three sons. It was all very clear, simple and silly.

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick — Who is the blonde with the outsey voice on "Foley Square"? What else has she been on? She reminds me of someone who was on a children's show some ten years ago or more, and her voice also makes me think of a cartoon voice I've heard. Please help! I am frustrated over this one! — G.M., Greenville, Tenn.

I think you must mean Cathy Silvers, who plays Molly Dobbs on the show. She is Phil Silvers' daughter, incidentally. You probably remember her as Jenny Piccolo from "Happy Days." She has done some voice overs on some cartoon shows, she says, so perhaps you've heard her voice before on cartoons, but no one cartoon character is memorable.

Dear Dick — I say a fellow who plays on "One Life to Live," a character called Dr. Polk, (of late he also played Grant Coleman on "As the World Turns"), is related to Dack Rambo, who is on "Dallas," playing Jack Ewing. Sure would like to know for sure. They even sound a lot alike when they talk. A friend says no, but I'm very seldom wrong! — S.L.A.W., Muskegon, Mich.

This is one of those very seldom times. There have been three different actors who played Dr. Polk. None of them is, or ever has been, related to Dack Rambo. The most recent is James Douglas, who was also on "All My Children."

Dear Dick — Gee, if you could answer this one, you would absolutely make my day! In the late 1950s or early 1960s, there was a TV series starring Dorothy Provine, Roger Moore and Roger Davis. It took place in Alaska, and Dorothy Provine worked in a saloon (we think). We've been racking our brains trying to remember the name of this series (was the name Yukon in it somewhere?) — D.L., Amarillo, Texas.

You'll hate yourself in the morning, but the name of that show, which ran 1959 and 1960, was just "The Alaskans." You are wrong about Roger Davis; he wasn't in it, but Ray Danton was.

Hawaiian Lure

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hawaii, a paradise of beaches, palms and grass skirts, is becoming noted for its tough cops and private eyes on TV as yet another cop show invades the islands.

"Hawaii Five-O" began the trend, followed by "Magnum P.I." Now "T.J. Hooker" and company have been lured to Hawaii for a two-hour TV special edition of the weekly drama show.

The special, titled "Blood Sport," finds Hooker (William Shatner) and his sidekicks (James Darren and Heather Locklear) on special assignment in the islands to track down terrorists who are stalking a U.S. senator and his wife.
