Does it bite?

Working on the Eagle Scout program on disaster preparedness, Brian Johnson, from a group of scouts at Fava Wood Camp, including his first aid instructor, tarantula spider. Johnson was capable of killing it, but it was poisonous to him. He is on a Page 1 story at right.

U.S. missiles strike Baghdad

WASHINGTON — U.S. jets always have a target in Baghdad, says a senior defense official. President Bush's order to Clinton's attack on Iraq, an attempt to force Iraq to pursue a negotiated settlement. We think it was a mistake. A major and comprehensive essential to protect our security. He called the plot a "lethal and cowardly" move by the leader of the Gulf War, Saddam Hussein, a U.S. ally. "It is a compelling fact a plot to assassinate and that this plot, which is a powerful bomb made in Iraq, was pursued by the Iraq intelligence." Clinton said he gave the order to the Iraq intelligence to demand control to Iraq in Baghdad. He said the missiles were hit.

Sanford police officer under investigation has resigned

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford Police officer, who is the subject of an internal investigation by the department, has resigned. The officer is Victor Burns, 43, who served as the school resource officer at Crofton School of Choice.

Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell said Burns submitted the letter June 15, then opted to use accrued vacation time before the resignation became effective.

Russell said the resignation will not have any effect on an internal investigation of Burns. The investigation may be completed in two or three weeks, according to Lt. Dennis Whitman. Details about what prompted the investigation are not being released.

Although he said he did not remember specifically what Burns said in the letter, Russell recalled he said he had a career move to make or something to that effect. According to city procedures, Russell forwarded the letter to the city personnel.

With July 4 coming up next Sunday I thought I'd let you in on a letter from one Eric Esterson, a site and utilities contractor who does business in Sanford under Esterson Construction Company. Eric wrote, "I would like to share a fond memory of General Hutchison with you. About 1960, when I was running all over Seminole County, the general asked me about deer hunting and what type of gun I was using."

"We met through my father who, like the general, worked for Chase and Co. I showed the general my rather beat up single barrel shotgun. He told me to stop by his house later that day. He lent me an M-1 carbine for the season. When I returned it about four months later he said he had an "old" 30-30 rifle I could keep. Well, when I opened the case the "old" rifle was a saddle ring carbine, probably fired maybe once or twice.

"I still have that rifle. I later learned the M-1 carbine General Hutchison lent me was the one he had when he accepted the surrender of the Japanese. I was 16 at the time. I will never forget the general."

Eric, neither will I. When the 124th Infantry and the 31st Dixie Division National Guard units were activated exactly one full year and two weeks before Pearl Harbor, Hutchison was a brigadier general and I was a $30 a month private. Except when he was riding in his command car we never passed each other that he didn't stop for a personal word or two with me.

And, I agree with Eric: You would think that after all General Hutchison did for his country, for his county as an elected commissioner, and for all his civic endeavors through the Kiwanis organization, the least the present county commissioners could do would be to get "ALL" his name on a road sign near Longwood. The word "HUTCH" is a disgrace.

When Hutchison first came to Sanford he joined the 124th Infantry of the Florida National Guard as a private. He retired a lieutenant general. Seminole County never had but one General Hutchison. It'll probably never have another.

As for me, I would like to see the county commission designate one day each year as "General J.C. Hutchison Day" in memory of the man who gave me much to so many both at home and around the world.

You've got to be a real old timer to remember back in the 1930s when the University of Michigan had a great running back Tom Harmon and a great blocking back, Forest Eveshevesky. I had an experience with these two gridiron greats back in 1960 when I was associated with the Fresno (California) State University Bulldog booster organization. Fresno State went undefeated that season in 11 scheduled games. That was the year Cal Poly of San Luis Obispo lost to Fresno one Saturday night. The following Saturday night Cal Poly went to Toledo, Ohio, for a game.

When the plane was taking off from the Toledo airport after the game it crashed and some 20 people aboard were killed. To help financially the California Collegiate Athletic Association decided to sponsor a "Mercy Bowl" game at the Los Angeles Coliseum with Fresno State hosting Bowling Green of the Mid-Atlantic Conference. Fresno State won that game, too. We then began planning the annual football banquet. I was assigned to get Harmon, then a West Coast CBS sportscaster, to be our guest speaker. He agreed if we would get Eveshevesky, head coach at Iowa State to join him in Fresno. You must remember Harmon was a very popular man — not only as an ex-football player but during World War II as a flier. He was shot down over the Pacific and survived about 30 days on a rubber raft before he was rescued.

I met both Harmon (father of the present movie actor Mark Harmon) and Eveshevesky at a then brand new Fresno airport. We went to the dining room, were seated and shortly a nicely attired waiter came to our table. After taking our orders, he returned. He said to Harmon and Eveshevesky, "I hope I don't get into trouble doing this but I'd like to say hello to you both and shake your hands. You see, I played against you both in Big Ten Conference."

"Who'd you play for?" asked Harmon. The waiter smiled and said, "Michigan State."

Suddenly Harmon turned to Eveshevesky and Eveshevesky to Harmon and almost simultaneously they asked, "You're not the fellow who stopped me from scoring four touchdowns our junior year that day in Ann Arbor, are you?" The waiter grinned. "I'm the guy."

Harmon turned to me and said, "See that this fellow gets a ticket to the Fresno State football banquet." Harmon introduced him.

"You can bet your bottom dollar I did. But, as much as I tried, however, I could never again find that water. But it's a yarn I'll never forget. Oh, yes, both Harmon and Eveshevesky were All-Americans again during their senior years at Michigan."

Orlando Navy base to close

By ROM WORD
Associated Press Writer

Florida took three hits from the federal base closure commission Saturday; the panel voted unanimously to close Cecil Field in Jacksonville, the Pensacola Naval Aviation Depot and the Orlando Naval Training Center.

However, the Base Closure and Realignment Commission voted to spare the Jacksonville Naval Aviation Depot.

"I understand that the Commission's task is a difficult one, however, these closures could mean the loss of thousands of jobs in several Florida communities," Gov. Lawton Chiles said in a statement. "That will be a difficult blow to overcome."

Cecil Field is the East Coast home of the Navy's carrier-based FA-18 Hornets and S-3 Viking aircraft. It has about 7,000 military workers and 1,500 civilians with an annual payroll of $229 million.

Its closing could result in a $586 million local economic loss, local business leaders said.

"I'm very disappointed," said U.S. Rep. Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., whose district includes Cecil Field. "The decision that was made doesn't reflect what the law said that the commission should consider military value and the cost-effectiveness to the taxpayer."

Capt. Sam Houston, commanding officer of Cecil Field, said the base will probably not be closed until 1997 to allow time to build facilities at other bases.

"It will be several years yet before we put a padlock on this air station out here," he said.

U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla.,

said the future uses of the base present "both a challenge and an opportunity" for Jacksonville area leaders.

In their vote, commissioners followed the Department of Defense recommendation to move Cecil's aircraft to Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station in Havelock, N.C.; Beaufort Marine Corps Air Station in South Carolina and Oceana Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach, Va.

In Orlando, officials watched the closure vote live on a television in the office of Mayor Glenda Hood.

"I think we're all in a state of shock," she said afterward.

The Economic Development Commission of Mid-Florida figures the base's total economic impact at $575 million, said executive director Rick Tesch. The center has 6,500 full-time military and civilian employees.

"We think we have the resources at that site to create an engine that could eventually surpass what the Navy has here," Tesch said.

Hood added that the city already had a small group looking into possible futures for the base. Prison or jail use has been ruled out, she said, because the installation is in a primarily residential area.

U.S. Rep. Jim Bacchus, D-Orlando, recalled the closing of an Air Force facility, McCoy Field, when he was small. The site has now become, he said, "the fastest growing international airport in the world."

Preservation 2000 Red tape has jeopardized it

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — An alligator meanders across a spring-fed lake while black moorhens forage in the lily pads. A songbird's chorus is broken only by the leaping splash of fish in the crystal-clear water.

Frogs croak on the shores of Lake Overstreet, where the sole sign of human presence is a weatherbeaten gray dock and a distant radio tower.

But the lush 890-acre tract is seen by some as prime development property just outside Tallahassee and has become a silent battleground between the state's three-year-old Preservation 2000 land-buying program and developers seeking a profit.

It could become a park. Or it could become a 96-lot upscale neighborhood like those in a development less than a mile away.

Yet the state's sluggish pace to close the deal, its alienation of landowners with low-ball initial offers and the astronomical amounts sought by some owners combine to threaten the effectiveness of Preservation 2000 programs. Some land may be forever lost.

"The process itself starts slow, just by the very nature of it," said Pete Joiner, who heads Preservation 2000 efforts at the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. "There's a lot of red tape to go through."

Preservation 2000 is seen by environmentalists as a last chance to rescue some of the best land and bury Florida's image as a developer of swamps and other wild places.

"This is a window of opportunity to purchase much of the ecologically important land in the state," said Charles Lee of the Florida Audubon Society. "If we wait, what we had will either already be bought or paved over."

Preservation 2000 uses money borrowed from bond sales to raise $300 million a year. If continued through the decade as intended, $3 billion will be raised and spent — second only to California among state land preservation programs.

So far, more than 170,000 acres have been purchased from the Florida Keys to the Panhandle.

The bonds are financed by taxes on deeds. Through three bond issues, the state has raised $807 million and earned nearly $33 million in interest, for a grand total of $840 million, according to the Division of Bond Finance.

The money is divided among five agencies and some is put in a reserve fund.

Principal selected to attend national academy

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Dr. Margaret Curran, principal of All Souls Catholic School in Sanford, has been selected to attend the 1993 National Principals' Academy in Washington, D.C. next month.

The academy was designed to recognize exceptional Catholic school principals and to build a national support network for the principals who are "committed to leadership in Catholic education."

Curran said she is honored by her selection to attend the academy. "Being accepted as a participant in the academy is quite an honor," she said. "I look forward to working with such an outstanding group of educators and learning further ways to improve the quality Catholic education we are already offering at All Souls."

Curran has served as principal at All Souls since 1988.

The school enrolls 282 students in kindergarten through eighth grade. During Curran's tenure, the school has often been cited for its parental involvement and its participation in the community.

Dr. Margaret Curran

She is a graduate of Columbia University and was previously a faculty member at Metropolitan University in Puerto Rico.

The academy is sponsored annually by the National Catholic Education Association (NCEA), a group which represents 200,000 teachers and administrators in the United States.

Sister Regina Haney, director of the academy, said that the NCEA wants to recognize the leaders in Catholic education and bring them opportunities to increase their knowledge.

"In sponsoring the National Catholic Principals' Academy," she said, "the NCEA recognizes the key role that the principal plays in fostering excellence in education. The academy provides opportunities for participants to increase their skills and share their knowledge with other outstanding principals."

Curran will take part in the four-day intensive training that will include subjects ranging from staff development, from technology training to ethnicity sensitivity.

Arrests

Williams was arrested as he was purchasing gas at the Shell service station on the corner of 25th Street and Park Avenue in Sanford.

Whitmire said officers on the lookout for Williams spotted him as he pulled into the station.

Polk, of 113 Geneva Gardens in Sanford, and Williams, of 2431 Center St., Sanford, were brought into custody by Sanford Police, but were then turned over to federal agents.

Like the first two teens arrested, Polk and Williams were charged with armed robbery, false imprisonment, attempted murder of a law enforcement officer, aggravated battery of a law enforcement officer, aggravated assault of a law enforcement officer and the use of a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Federal agents are considering other charges, including drug charges, against the four men.

Two agents were ambushed by the four when they met at the Budget Inn in Sanford for a proposed cocaine sale. One agent was pistol whipped and the other's arm was injured in the attempted robbery.

this young man is doing for all of us," Mariasa James of Sanford said. "I think he should be commended for bringing all this information together and providing us with the information we need."

Members of Boy Scout troop 529 directed visitors to Fun World toward the exhibit and offered some guidance as to which information might be most useful to their needs.

Other members of the troop and adult leaders were on hand to answer questions and offer directions.

Larry Sendick of Lake Mary said he had come to Fun World to see the Tiger's Eye animals but took the time to look over Johnson's displays.

"There were some interesting things here," he said. "I'm sure this is stuff you could get somewhere else, but he brought it all to one place. And the fingerprinting is a great idea."

Johnson will bring together the displays and fingerprinting services again today from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. under the patio near the Wild West golf course.

Nearby, at the stage area, Tiger's Eye Productions will be putting on exotic animal shows from noon until 4 p.m.

The letter dated June 15 reads: "After being a part of the Sanford Police Department for almost five years, it is my belief that although this agency fulfills the current needs of the area, it provides only a limited possibility for my personal growth as a minority law enforcement officer within this agency."

"It is therefore with some regret that I tender my resignation as a police officer with the Sanford Police Department to be effective at close of work June 30, 1993."

Burns, 43, worked as a city police officer for about five months beginning in September 1987. He was rehired August 1, 1988.

Burns refused further comment Friday.

POLICE BRIEFS

Domestic violence alleged

Donovan Tucker, 20, 2000 Lake Mary lvd., Apt. 114-D, Sanford, was charged with domestic violence/simple battery by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said he and his wife became involved in an argument during which time he threatened to lock her in the closet and take their 6-month-old away.

They said he grabbed her by the neck and threw her on the bed and fled from the apartment on foot with the baby. When she chased them, police said, he dragged her back to the apartment and left in a car with the baby.

Police said he returned a short time later with the baby. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500 bond.

License problem brings arrest

Reginald Nathaniel Clark, 24, 1305 W. 14th St., Sanford, was charged with driving with a suspended driver license on Thursday by Sanford Police.

Police said he was stopped for a traffic violation. A computer check of his license revealed that it was suspended five times in the last five years.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

DUI charged

Joan Lindner Zinn, 62, 216 Citrus Dr., Sanford, was charged with DUI and careless driving by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said she was involved in an accident involving a sign and a privacy fence at County Road 46A and Villen Road, Sanford.

Because they smelled alcohol on her breath, officers conducted a field sobriety test, which she failed. An intoxilizer test showed a .252% and a .234% result.

She was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held on $500 bond.

DUI alleged

David Elliot Orseck, 53, 120 Lavin's Landing, Lake Mary, was charged with driving under the influence on Thursday by Lake Mary Police.

Police said Orseck was involved in an accident in a parking lot at Lavin's Landing.

Witnesses told police that the driver of the vehicle that struck another car had entered the residence at 120 Lavin's Landing.

When he came to the door, Orseck's speech was slurred and he staggered, police said. They said there was a strong odor of alcohol on his breath.

He refused to take the field sobriety test, they said.

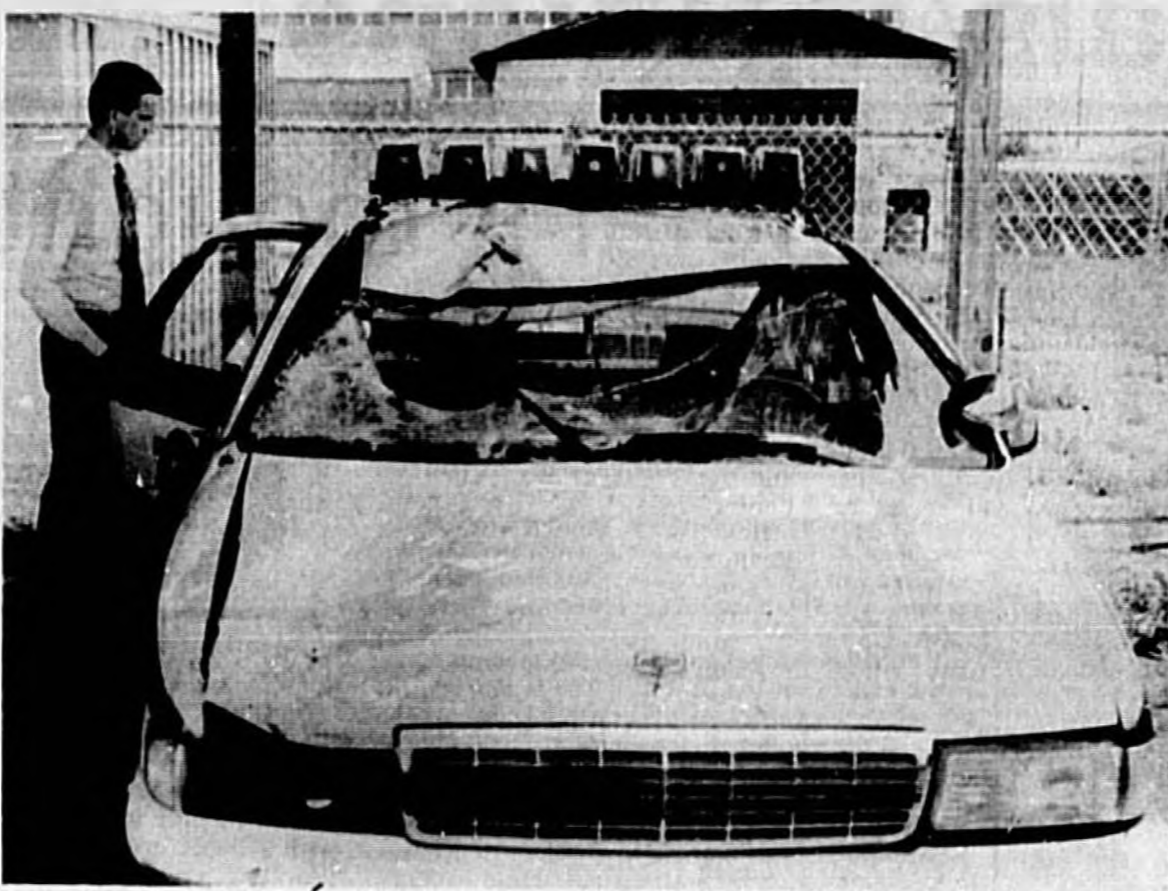

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Obstruction alleged

Michael Keith Angle, 24, 320 W. 12th St., Sanford, was charged with obstruction by disguise (using false name) by Lake Mary Police on Thursday.

Police said that an investigation revealed that Angle had been using his nephew's name and date of birth as identification to avoid arrest because he did not have a valid Florida driver license.

He was arrested at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was already serving time on other charges. Bond on the most recent charges was set at $500.

Not horsing around

Seminole County Undersheriff Steve Harriett surveys the damage on one of the department's patrol cars. The car was damaged on Friday morning as the officer responded to a call of several horses running wild near Upsala Road and State Road 46 in Sanford. Deputy Timothy Smith, 24, was traveling down State Road 46 at about 45 miles per hour when the 800-pound animal collided with the patrol car. According to Harriett, the impact caused the vehicle to seize up and come to an abrupt halt. He noted that had Smith not been wearing his safety belt, he would have been thrown from the car by the impact. The horse died on impact.

Endeavour astronauts return to lab work

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Endeavour's astronauts completed two hectic days of satellite-snaring and spacewalking, but the work was far from over as they awoke today to a full day of science experiments.

Mission Control, which let crew members sleep an extra hour after Friday's nearly six-hour spacewalk, woke them for their sixth day in space to the pop tune "Holiday" by Madonna.

"Sounds like a holiday. We'll take a trip around the world perhaps," said Endeavour pilot Brian Duffy.

"We'd like you guys to celebrate the great work you've done on the mission so far," Mission Control replied.

Most of the time remaining in the mission, scheduled to end Tuesday, will be devoted to experiments in Spacehab, a new, privately funded laboratory that takes up about a third of the cargo bay.

Astronauts also were scheduled to conduct experiments in the dynamics of low-gravity fluid transfer and see how a fuel cell reacts after being turned off in space for 46 hours.

Astronauts G. David Low and Peter "Jeff" Wisoff ventured outside the safety of Endeavour Friday morning to secure a European satellite snatched from space on Thursday and help NASA prepare for the Hubble Space Telescope repair mission.

Low, strapped to the end of Endeavour's 50-foot robot arm, used old-fashioned muscle power to nudge two high-tech satellite antennas into place so they could be properly latched.

He then lifted Wisoff by the waist and swung him from side to side in a space dance designed to show NASA would it would be like to handle and install a new Hubble camera. The men were tethered to the shuttle and one another.

Later, Wisoff hurried through tests of torquing bolts with a large wrench.

Role models for young girls

Young women today have too few role models in the spectrum of their careers.

While statistics show that more than 60 percent of the women in this country hold jobs, those who hold positions in non-traditional areas, especially technological fields, are hard to find.

Schools have been preparing the young women of tomorrow with technical know-how about how to perform in the job market, but they have failed to teach personal skills that would help in finding a job and keeping it.

Recent changes in education, with the addition of the Blueprint 2000 and the Tech-Prep program which were piloted here in Seminole County, has given high school students about to enter the workplace, a part of their skills training in technical fields.

Students study at their zoned high school, take higher level courses at Seminole Community College and learn job skills in the work environment at one of several businesses in the county.

This well-rounded educational process teaches them well, but recently, as part of the Tech-Prep program, they had the opportunity to learn through practical experience from women already working in technological fields.

We salute the organizers of the "Twenty-first Century Woman" seminar held at Seminole Community College for ninth and tenth grade girls from Seminole and Lyman high schools.

Not only were they given instruction on job search techniques and interviewing skills, but they were also provided the opportunity to meet with women in the workforce. They were allowed to ask questions and provided with business contacts.

This experience will be invaluable to these aspiring workers of tomorrow.

Humane Society

I heard with dismay that the Humane Society of Seminole County is almost broke and needs more money. This on the evening news broadcast of June 10. How can this be? An article April 17 reported not only was $25,000 received, but 2,000 lbs. of food was donated by two animal food companies, not to mention other donations. Again on April 24, it was announced over $100,000 had been donated, and on May 6, it told of two bequests totaling $530,000 plus $30,000 to be paid by their insurance company.

My question is, what has happened to all this money in less than two months? It was mentioned it would take a million dollars to repair the shelter. As a member of 17 years, I remember the original price for the complete shelter 10 years ago was $125,000. I would demand a financial report before giving any more money.

On homelessness

It is patently ludicrous that a reactionary polemicist should propound his sectarian views without someone being allowed to question his observations. (Joseph Perkins, June 15)

The plight of the homeless was defined and iterated as being nothing more than "pitiable men and women who were suffering from some dysfunction." This conclusion was reached after spending one night in Grand Central Station.

Because of his one night survey, this man can promulgate with certainty that no middle-class family from Los Angeles, Detroit, Chicago or wherever was ever homeless due to economic conditions. He's positive that no yuppie from Seattle, St. Louis or Boston was ever dispossessed because of economic deprivation. As a result of his "extensive empirical study," he now can refute findings of organizations who have spent years studying this problem.

Such arrogance would be risible if it didn't impact unsuspecting readers.

The root of the problem is that this issue is polarized along political and ideological lines. The practitioners of Reagan and Bush dynamics deny that economic conditions were ever that bad. They espouse that homelessness is not an economic problem, but rather one of mental health and substance abuse.

Perhaps we should allow that, maybe, economic considerations should be contemplated along with other factors. Maybe then the United States Conference of Mayors wouldn't be viewed by some with irony.

Official's thoughts on education

One of the central issues in education is whether private or public schools will better prepare children for the future. School board member Larry Strickler advised that public schools are responsible for a plethora of services to all children. Private schools have always been selective in their admittance policies and have no track record of serving everyone. Public schools in Seminole County are among the best in Florida. Planning constructively for change will insure that Seminole County schools remain in the forefront of meeting students' futuristic needs.

Education is a lifelong process. More money for education is not the problem. The economy calls for students participating in a relevant curriculum designed for them. Each student should have an individual educational plan that will carry them through to their employment objectives. Students need to be committed to the work ethic and preparing themselves to become self-sustaining, contributing members of society.

Strickler concurs with the premise of Blueprint 2000 that, all children can learn. Consequently, persons charged with educating children should firmly transmit to students their expectation for children successfully acquiring knowledge.

Parents, teachers and all adults impacting the lives of children should refrain from equating college attendance with success. Thinking around this issue needs to be revamped and success defined in terms of acquiring skills to become self supporting. The jobs requiring technical and other skills are just as important to our economy as those requiring college training.

American businesses are investing in some third world countries that have trained their youth to be technicians. Their technical skills will surpass those of our youth.

Businesses have formed many partnerships with schools, from adopting a specific school, providing employee tutors, role models and funds. Business leaders, educators and parents at the national, state and local levels should brainstorm and devise the type of curriculum geared to employment to accommodate students going directly into the labor force.

Strickler is concerned about the number of students who leave school without completing their secondary education. It is imperative for America to develop a well-trained work force if we are to remain internationally competitive. Counselors working with students leaving public schools are given a variety of reasons for the exodus. Among them are: to attend high school at Seminole Community College, to attend private school, to move out of state or obtain a general education degree. Currently, statistics are unavailable concerning specifically what happens to each student leaving school. Project Hope at Lyman High School provides an opportunity for students having difficulty to secure the needed help. Carlton Henley, principal, is experimenting with affirming students' belief in themselves and making mastery of subject matter the criterion for completing a subject. No grades below C will be awarded students.

Often SAT (Scholastic Achievement Test) scores are correlated with positive performance of an educational system. This does not tell the entire story, particularly since all students do not take the SAT's.

Another item on Strickler's mind is getting a viable affirmative action program started. All managers should be cognizant of the gender, ethnic composition of their staff and their actions should reflect sensitively in this area.

Strickler believes that there should be an ombudsman available to all employees to call and discuss their concerns. Whistle blowers help organizations to examine situations that might not be readily discernible but can be of great importance to maintaining a healthy organization. This staff member would report directly to the superintendent.

In a twist, some Republicans go for Perot

WASHINGTON — As Ross Perot would say, it's real simple: his coatails, not his charts, are his main currency on Capitol Hill. Perhaps no group of lawmakers has as cynically capitalized on the possibilities as House Republicans.

For a party that popularized the ideological litmus test, the House Republicans are giving Perot a pass. Maybe it's because his potluck platform seems to suit the political needs of all parties, which care more about the votes than the message.

With polls showing Perot tying or beating Clinton, and with the Texan threatening to field third-party congressional candidates next year, politicians are embracing Perot faster than they can fathom what he's about. Republicans smell danger as well as opportunity.

Politicians are embracing Perot faster than they can fathom what he's about.

"There are some who are trying to cozy up to him," one House Republican leader says. "Others have been urging to get totally away from Perot and quit sucking up to him. I think it depends on the district and people who are really wary. Right now, it suits Republican purposes for having Perot be a foil for Clinton."

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, apparently agree. On paper, there are seemingly unbridgeable differences separating Gingrich and Kasich from Perot. If Perot called himself a Democrat, Gingrich and Kasich would have the attack ads aired within days.

Last year, Gingrich was calling Perot an "extraordinarily dangerous gamble," and intoned darkly that he could prove to be an authoritarian figure who might abuse the powers of the presidency. Yet, Gingrich sent in $15 to join Perot's United We Stand America organization, a step also taken by a handful of his colleagues. A spokesperson said that despite their differences on trade and taxes, Gingrich applauds Perot's efforts to rein in the bureaucracy and eliminate government waste.

Kasich, who has not joined Perot's organization, has said that "Perot's message is a Republican message." Kasich also says that he's talked to Perot about running as a Republican. Such flattery could pump up Perot, who some believe cost George Bush the last election and could cost the Republicans again in 1996.

Kasich's "hero" remains Ronald Reagan, who had virtues that seem to elude Perot. "He didn't have to wake up every morning and decide where to go," Kasich told us. "He was very, very sure of what he wanted to do. ... There was never any confusion."

Perot does seem confused lately, and is wavering on his economic manifestoes hailed for their blunt talk. He has proposed, though he has recently soft-pedaled, an increase on the top income-tax rate, a tax on Social Security benefits, a hike in the Medicare payroll tax, a doubling of the cigarette tax, and a tax on employer-paid health insurance. Perot is also pro-choice, protectionist and anti-foreign intervention. Stances that don't fit with the conservative credo.

Kasich describes Perot — perhaps in a bout of wishful thinking — as something of a work in progress. "He doesn't sign up to these tax increases anymore," Kasich claims. "Those tax increases were something put together by a former (President Jimmy) Carter guy in the middle of a campaign." Kasich believes Perot is entitled to evolve his thinking. "I think that Perot had a businessman's culture and when you try to make a transition ... it's a cultural change."

Prague in metamorphosis

PRAGUE — On the second floor of this very new and very western hotel, there is a room named inauspiciously for this city's most famous citizen: Franz Kafka.

Coming upon this room by surprise one morning, I try to imagine Gregor Samsa, the author's man-turned-beetle, lurking behind the sleek doorway. But this Kafka Room holds only the requisite tables and chairs for the people who come here now to take meetings and do business.

It's been three years since "The Velvet Revolution" separated Czechoslovakia from the Soviet Empire, six months since "The Velvet Divorce" that split Czechs from Slovaks. Today, Prague is in the midst of a very different kind of "Metamorphosis." It is lurching, racing, tripping, zigzagging, lumbering through the transition from Eastern Bloc to Western Europe, from state control to private enterprise. And in the process, from dull certainty to exciting insecurity.

This is an old city confident in its history. Centuries of extraordinary buildings stand in close proximity along the winding streets, flattering each other in the early summer light. Each corner turned, every bridge and square crossed, offers another magical setting, more proof of Czech luck at having been spared both German bombs and Soviet architects.

But is is a city that seems less secure about the future. Talking and walking our way from the Kafka room to the Prague castle, I have the sense that we are witnessing the greening of Prague. Not green as in the environment movement. Not green as in greenback. Green as in greenhorn.

In some ways, Czechs seem like fresh immigrants in their own country. Greenhorns in the new world economy struggling to figure out the ways of the natives in order to survive in the unfamiliar land of free enterprise.

Everywhere there is evidence of how eager this city has been to westernize and privatize. Whoopi Goldberg's "Sister Act" is playing at the cinema. American music is playing on the radio. There's a Benetton selling sweaters, four McDonald's selling Big Macs, and a thousand Swatches in the shops.

This summer, a Cajun restaurant called Red, Hot and Blues opened. On a balmy night, anorexic models come out of the symphony hall wearing Revlon T-shirts. And this week for the first time, a wide range of investors are trading shares on the Prague Stock Exchange.

The Americans who come here in increasing numbers are students bearing backpacks and entrepreneurs carrying Powerbooks. At the Mozart cafe, a young Michigan student is waiting on tables and living on the low-rent economy. At the Prague Post, the founder and publisher of the successful English-language weekly is a 25-year-old from Illinois, Lisa Frankenberg, who came here three years ago.

While Generation X in America is complaining about a bias or barrier against youth, it's quite the opposite in this "immigrant" economy. It's the young people of the Czech Republic who are sought out in the belief that they can learn the language of the free economy faster, that they are less fixed in the old ways. More than a few employers have hiring policies that instruct "no one over 35 need apply."

Much of the change that we see here is uneven. It is easier to get a good cup of coffee than it was two years ago, but it's no easier to make a long distance phone call. There is a passion for entrepreneurship, but also stories of a bureaucracy that go back to their Kafka-esque roots.

Much of the change also has its dark side. At the onset of this voyage to free enterprise, many of the new settlers believed that the streets were paved with gold. Now they are watching businesses fail as well as succeed. In the new world, there are losers as well as winners.

As if on cue, one night we go to see an early play by Václav Havel, the Czech playwright and president. But the promised translation in our headsets is a single voice racing to capture every actor's words in a frenzied and incomprehensible English. At times, the country is a bit like that, trying to change so much, so fast, with such limited resources. And sometimes breathless.

Havel himself has said that the troubles in Eastern Europe come from the fact that "one system has collapsed and a new one does not yet exist." That is true of the remains of Yugoslavia, but is also true in this land where change has been made with velvet gloves. Gradually, "greenhorns" cannot just enter a new world, they have to make it their own.

But this remarkable and vibrant city built over many centuries and out of many cultures is as practiced in the art of survival as in civility. And green after all, is also the promising color of every growing season.

Not green as in greenback. Green as in greenhorn.

Bar called 'Hooters': Sex appeal or an invitation to harassment?

By AMY KUEBELBECK
Associated Press Writer

Former waitress Whitney Miller remembers the customer who refused to pay for his food unless she took off her shirt.

"I thought that was what Hooters was for," he told her. Hooters is, among other things, a chain of bar-restaurants. Like many other bars, it features waitresses — in this case dubbed "Hooters Girls" — in scanty costumes, taking orders for beer and chicken wings.

Hooters also is a corporate success story, with 104 franchises in 25 states and annual sales in excess of $150 million.

A growing number of critics say that success is built on a corporate image that uses women employees as sexual ornaments and, according to lawsuits in Minnesota and Florida, encourages unwelcome sexual advances by men, including Hooters managers.

One lawyer who has filed sexual harassment lawsuits on behalf of former Hooters waitresses calls it a "corporate culture of misogyny."

Protests have been launched in Illinois, Maryland, Michigan, Ohio and Virginia, the National Organization for Women has raised objections, and Working Woman magazine inducted Hooters into its 1992 Hall of Shame.

But Hooters attorneys and company officials call the lawsuits "outrageous" and deny that they're marketing anything more than innocent "sex appeal."

And the name? It's not a double entendre reference to women's breasts, Hooters management says. It's about owls.

"For us, Hooters is just the name of the restaurant," said Mike McNeil, vice president of marketing for Hooters of America, Inc., in Atlanta. "If that was our desire, to blatantly name it after a portion of the female anatomy, there are much more blatant slang terms that we could utilize."

A half-dozen harassment lawsuits have been filed by former waitresses at the Hooters bar in the Mall of America, the giant shopping and entertainment complex in the Minneapolis suburb of Bloomington. Another sexual harassment lawsuit was filed earlier this month in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., by a former Hooters waitress.

At the heart of the lawsuits is the argument that Hooters' "concept" — waitresses in scanty costumes, nod-and-a-wink references to women's anatomy, cheesecake calendars and swimsuit photo magazines featuring "Hooters Girls" — invites sexual harassment of women employees.

That harassment, the Minnesota lawsuits say, included Hooters' managers and other employees grabbing and propositioning women employees and commented about their breasts. Customers also felt free to make sexual comments, the lawsuits say. Some waitresses said they were asked if they wore underwear. Others were asked their bra size. Others were simply asked for sex.

Managers told them to tolerate it, the women say.

Miller, one of the plaintiffs, said managers told her she shouldn't work as a "Hooters Girl" anymore because her breasts became smaller after she stopped breast-feeding her son.

As a 25-year-old single mother, Miller worked six months at Hooters to support her son. Her attorney, Lori Peterson of Minneapolis, says Hooters offered her the job before the restaurant opened and wasn't candid about the requirements.

"I now realize that no amount of money is worth being a sexual target because I'm female," Miller said when the lawsuits were filed.

Lisa Gray, Hooters' attorney in Minneapolis, says the lawsuits contain "outrageous and inflammatory allegations which are clearly written for press consumption." McNeil denies that the Hooters concept degrades women.

"Hooters Girls in our concept are put on pedestals," he said. "We treat them like a celebrity.

We even put them on Hooters Girl trading cards."

Like many things about Hooters, its name can be taken more than one way. When the original Hooters opened in Clearwater, Fla., in 1983, it inspired several competitors: Knockers, Melons and Mugs 'n Jugs.

Today, the first thing that greets patrons is the Hooters logo, an owl whose enormous, round orange eyes form the O's in "hooters" and look like line-drawing representations of breasts.

The Hooters menu explains the name with what can easily be read as a sly suggestion: "The dilemma ... what to name the place. Simple — what else brings a gleam to men's eyes everywhere besides beer and chicken wings and an occasional winning football season. Hence, the name Hooters."

Hooters delights in its political incorrectness. In an ad last year for franchises in Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee, conservative commentator Rush Limbaugh sarcastically urged both animal-rights activists and "feminazis" to protest the waitresses' attire and the chicken wings.

Some Hooters restaurants have also used the slogan "More than a mouthful" on T-shirts worn by waitresses. McNeil says it's not the company's official slogan, and some restaurants have stopped using it.

He also says it wasn't intended to have a sexual meaning. But "there is a sex appeal element to the concept. There's no question about it."

Plan

Cranias described the Sanford Main Street project as a "well-rounded program" that is making preparations to assist in the economic success of both the business and the residential communities.

He said that the program has set up plans to hire a program manager who will act as a liaison between local interests and the national program. That person will also oversee special projects in Sanford and bring together all of those projects that are presently done in a "fragmented" way by volunteers working in a variety of groups.

According to Cranias, one of the strongest goals of the Main Street group will be to lower the downtown "unoccupancy rate" from the current 52 percent to closer to 10 or 20 percent. He said there is office space as well as retail space that is going unused in the downtown area.

There are plans to help downtown buildings to do facade renovations and to take on some signage projects.

He said there are plans to continue work with the Sanford Historic Trust on promotions and informational projects designed to attract people who are interested in renovating old homes to the historic district.

And, if enough money is raised, they might consider setting up a loan pool for residents to use to help with renovations at their homes.

"This will be a win-win situation for everybody," Cranias said. "It would generate tax dollars and bring people and interest to Sanford."

He noted that the Main Street program is essential to Sanford's continued success.

"If we don't do this, we could

Positive and negative experiences: a recipe for youth achievement

By DON MILLER
Special to the Herald

Parents confront a child about hanging out with "the wrong crowd." The child responds inappropriately and is punished in some way by the parent. The child, upset with the rules, becomes physically abusive with the parents.

Who is in authority? This is a scenario that is played out daily in households throughout both the community and the nation. There have even been incidents where both parents have lost their lives due to an unstable relationship with their child.

Youths are committing acts of violence toward their parents to the extent that parents become the child and the child becomes the parent.

Children develop a value system at a very young age. Within the first seven years their values are being formed by their parents, extended family and other influences in the community. This is a beginning stage to establish a relationship between both parties.

It is very important that children become aware of certain forms of behaviors and become responsible for them.

One of the common scenarios is when young children are at a store, they will touch and handle items they have been asked not to. The item falls or is dropped and breaks. Some parents will tap the child on the hand while others will pick the item up and never confront the child. Positive confrontation at an early age helps children to be responsible for their actions and be willing to deal with the consequences.

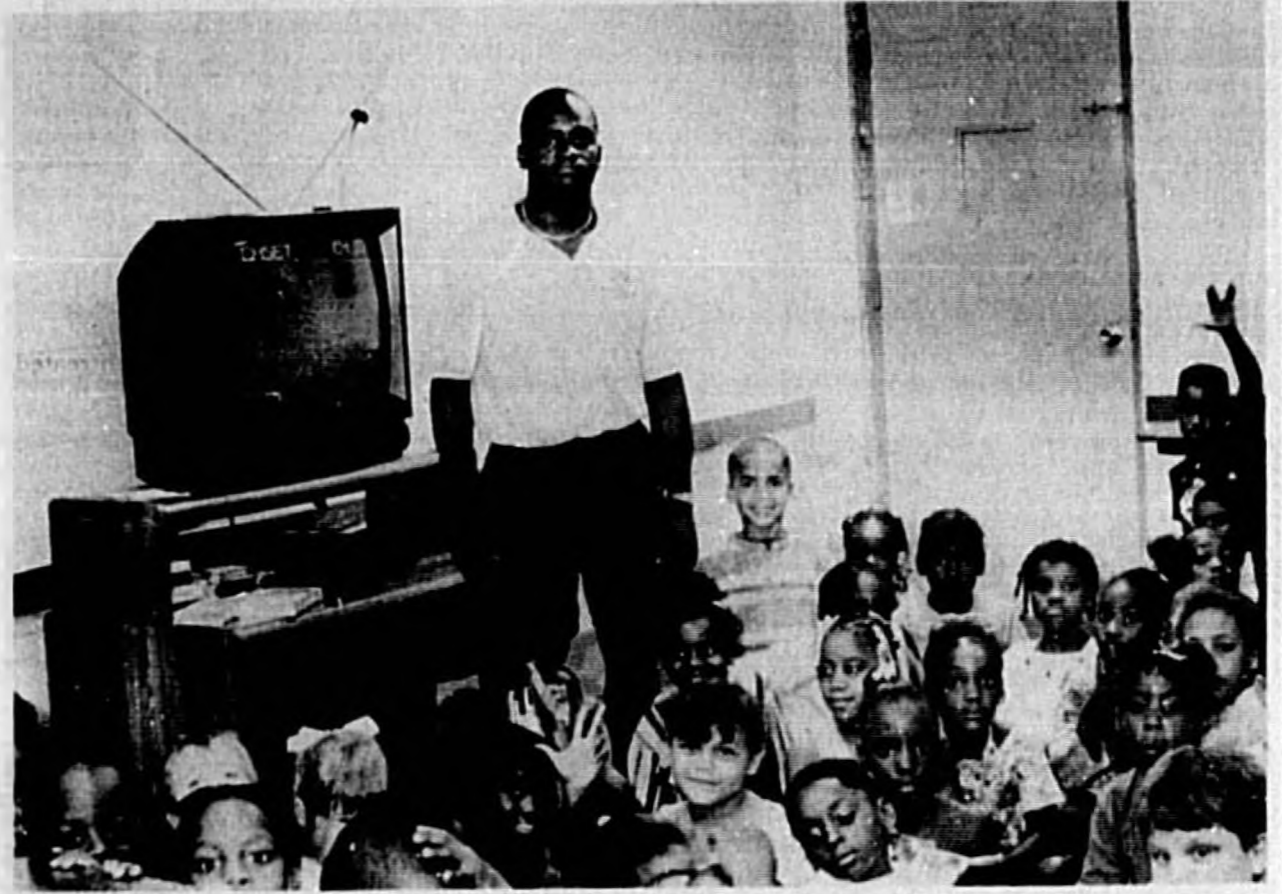

As young people make the transition to the age group between 8 through 13, their value system is challenged. Some young people experiment with drugs, sex and crime due to peer pressure and social influences.

Teens are dealing with issues today that can lead to problems within the family structure if not discussed early.

If one child's parents allow him to use certain language that appears to be acceptable with his peers, other young people may try the same type of behavior. This doesn't mean that children will use profanity but they will be challenged to do so to fit in.

The issue of communication becomes more apparent. Communication needs to be established early so that when outside issues and influences come up, the parents and children can have a discussion about it.

Disciplinary procedures are necessary in order to keep the child's respect for the parent. Lack of discipline results in lack of respect.

I remember many times my mother would discipline me and in the process she would say I love you. In the midst of communicating about whatever problem has arisen, the parent should reinforce their love for the child. Through love and guidance, a child will have a respect for rules and guidelines in the home and within the community.

Parents must also be an example for their children. A lot of abused children become abusive parents. Alcoholism, drug involvement and other anti-social behavior have a lot to do with the parent's lifestyle being set before the children.

Additional tips for developing a stable relationship with a child are as follows:

- Introduce them to spiritual values and morals at an early age.
- Communicate with the child that positive behavior (respect) is a must and not a maybe.
- Give positive reinforcement constantly. Never put them down despite any type of failure they may experience.
- Never deny a child the ability to be a positive dreamer and help him or her with a plan to make it come true.

- Let them know that you love them during the good and also the bad.
- Expose your child to positive experiences. Lack of positive exposure results in lack of positive development.

My motto for this week is: Negative and positive experiences together make a connection for achievement.

DEAR TEENA:

I want to get my ears pierced, but my mom and dad won't let me.

They said that boys aren't supposed to wear earrings but all my friends and all the cool dudes wear earrings. It's not a gay thing anymore.

How can I convince my parents that it's just as OK for me to get my ears pierced as it is for my sister? She has her ears pierced.

JUST WANT TO BE COOL, SANFORD

her, though.

Talk to her about her problem and tell her that you are willing to stand by her in order to help her through any treatment she might need.

Don't abandon her, but don't put yourself at risk: if she's been drinking do not let her drive. Like they say on the commercials, friends don't let friends drive drunk.

Talk to your mother about what you plan to do and ask for her support, because helping your friend will be tough on you too.

DEAR TEENA:

What is wrong with me?

I've been dating this guy for six months and I don't want to go to bed with him. He's not pressuring me, but all my friends say I'm weird.

Should I go to bed with him to shut them up?

FLUSTERED, SANFORD

DEAR FLUSTERED:

No! Do not go to bed with someone to please your so-called friends. If they are trying to pressure you into doing something that you are not very ready to do, they are not very good friends.

In every situation like this you have to do what is right for you, based on your personal beliefs. If you are not ready to go to bed with your boyfriend, do not do it.

It sounds like the two of you have decided to take the relationship slowly and not rush into anything. That's the best way to do it.

You have plenty of time. Don't blow it just to make your friends happy.

DEAR TEENA:

My dad is dating a real jerky lady and I can't stand her.

Mom and dad got a divorce three years ago and last year he started dating this lady. She keeps trying to change him and me into "respectable" people.

He and I like to wear our old jeans, listen to country music and spend Sunday afternoon fishing. She keeps buying us fancy clothes, synohony tapes and trying to get us to go to art shows.

Dad goes along with it and I feel left but because I don't want to do those jerky things.

What can I do about this?

ANGRY, SANFORD

DEAR ANGRY:

The only thing you can "do" about it is to accept this woman that your father appears to care about.

Your father is a grown man and he has chosen to "go along with" her suggestions because he wants to please her.

Maybe you can get her a pair of old jeans and take her fishing. She might see why you enjoy doing that so much.

In the meantime, try and accept her for who she is and ask her if she will accept who you are as well.

Questions for Dear Teena were collected from young people like you in on-the-street interviews this week. She'd like you to write to her with your questions. She promises confidentiality... you don't even have to sign your name. She just wants to help if she can. If you have any problems or questions, write to Teena at the Sanford Herald, P.O. Box 1537, Sanford, Florida 32771-1537.

Year round school

It looks like a regular school day even during the heat of the summer at Seminole High School. Students have enrolled in summer classes in record numbers this summer. More than 700 students, a number that represents nearly a third of the student body, has enrolled in the summer school program to take a variety of courses ranging from foreign languages to literature to physical education. School officials are pleased with the students' response to the program this year. The first session of summer school will run through July 8 and the second session will go through the end of July.

IN BRIEF

Men's Health Forum set

SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital and The Urology Center are presenting Men's Health Forum, a free series devoted to answering questions about men's health issues. The next program is on Tuesday from 7-8:30 p.m. in the hospital's classroom.

Gregory Lomas, M.D., a urologist, will discuss "Kidney Stones," including prevention and treatment measures.

Cardiologist William David, M.D., will address "Coronary Artery Disease," risk factors and treatment methods.

Refreshments will be provided. The classes are free, however, reservations are appreciated.

For information, call 321-4500 ext. 5607.

First aid, safety course offered

The Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross will conduct a new comprehensive course called Community First Aid and Safety. The 10 hour course will be held on the evenings of July 1, 7, and 9 beginning at 6 p.m. and again on July 6, 8, 13. The courses will be held at the Orlando office, 5 N. Bumby Ave., Orlando. Registration is limited on a first come first served prepaid basis. The cost is $38.

Casual drug use declining

WASHINGTON — A government survey recorded an 11 percent drop in the number of American teenagers and adults using illegal drugs last year.

Health officials said Wednesday that prevention efforts were paying off, while the head of the Drug Enforcement Administration suggested that stricter police work that drove up the price of cocaine and marijuana deserved the credit.

A congressman cautioned against jubilation because the decline appeared to be among casual drug users, not hard-core addicts.

The 1992 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse indicated that 11.4 million Americans 12 and older used illicit drugs in the 30 days preceding the survey. That was down from 12.8 million a year earlier.

The drop was evident in all age groups except 35 and older.

The number has been declining steadily since 1979, when the same survey indicated that 24 million Americans had used illicit drugs.

But among the 35-and-older group — including the baby boomers who grew up in the permissive 1960s — the use of drugs is as prevalent now as it was in 1979.

The number of current cocaine users plummeted 31 percent from 1.9 million in 1991 to 1.3 million in 1992. The number peaked at 5.8 million in 1985. Occasional cocaine use — less than once a month — was down by 900,000, to 3.4 million.

But the number of frequent users — at least weekly — stood unchanged at 640,000.

Prenatal test offers hope

LONDON — A new prenatal test that examines fetal cells surrounding the amniotic sac offers a safer alternative to the two current means of testing, according to a British study of 100 women.

The new technique — called celocentesis — requires further testing before doctors can recommend it as a substitute for other tests: amniocentesis and chorionic villus sampling.

Investigators performing a celocentesis inserted a needle between the placenta and the amniotic sac to retrieve cells. They then analyzed chromosomes from those cells.

"I'm quite optimistic but I wouldn't recommend people to get overly excited until we have done another 100 ongoing pregnancies," said Dr. Eric Jauniaux, one of the investigators and an obstetrician at Kings College Hospital in London.

The findings, published in the June 26 issue of The Lancet, a medical journal, showed that researchers were able to successfully retrieve cells from 96 percent of the 67 women who were between six and 10 weeks pregnant. The success rate dropped to 42 percent at 11 weeks of gestation and 10 percent at 12 weeks because the celom shrinks.

Chromosomes from cells of 30 women were analyzed using three common methods. Two methods correctly predicted the sex of the fetus. The third method did not work.

Mosquito-borne encephalitis declines

ATLANTA — The number of cases of mosquito-borne encephalitis in the United States last year was the lowest of any year since the 1960s, federal health officials said.

"Hopefully we'll have another quiet year, but it's really pretty early to predict," said Dr. Duane Gubler of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Encephalitis is an inflammation of the brain caused by anything from influenza to a virus carried by mosquitoes. The mosquito-borne type is called arboviral encephalitis, and it caused outbreaks in people and horses in 1990 and 1991.

Last year only 45 people and 97 horses in 23 states got arboviral encephalitis, the CDC said.

Arboviral encephalitis generally appears in the summer, when mosquitoes are at their worst. Gubler couldn't provide specifics, but said reports of encephalitis-carrying mosquitoes have remained very low so far this year.

New treatments for chronic pain

The management of pain is one of the most common and yet most difficult aspects of medical practice. Acute pain conditions, that is, those resulting from an acute injury or process, are generally of limited duration and are rather easily treated. It is the more chronic pain syndromes, those persisting over a longer period of time, the underlying cause of which may be difficult to diagnose or even be untreatable, that challenge the therapeutic skills of the physician.

The National Institute of Health has estimated that chronic untreated pain is the most costly health problem in the United States, costing industries and individuals more than 50 billion dollars yearly, not to mention the vast toll in human suffering.

Conditions resulting in chronic pain syndromes are numerous, but include: cancer pain; head, neck and back pain; facial pain; reflex sympathetic dystrophy; pain from herpes zoster or shingles; pain from arthritis or vascular disease; chronic pelvic or abdominal pain; and myofascial pain.

Traditionally the physician has had to rely on oral analgesics, or medications taken by mouth to treat these conditions. These medications have generally included anti-inflammatory agents and/or narcotic pain relievers. If relief from these proved unsatisfactory, referral was often made to a pain management specialist, who might then perform a type of nerve "block" or injections near a nerve, typically consisting of a cortisone-type preparation and local anesthetic. In hopes of alleviating the inflammatory component of the patient's pain. These were often performed in conjunction with ongoing physical exercise therapy to promote the use and strengthening of the affected area.

As beneficial as these techniques could be, there were some patients who were unable to achieve any sustainable pain relief in this manner. A newer technique, that of "spinal cord stimulation," has been used now for several years and has gained wide acceptance among pain management specialists and their patients. Here, a tiny electrode is placed into the epidural space in a patient's back. This then allows for either constant or cyclic stimulation of the spinal cord with an imperceptible electrical current. This current then acts to "screen out" the other pain signals that are being sent into the spinal area. This type of system can then be permanently placed, much like a pacemaker, er, for long-term use. This method can produce dramatic relief of otherwise debilitating and difficult painful symptoms.

Further, for certain types of otherwise intractable painful conditions, the pain management specialist may place a small catheter or tube into a similar space in a patient's back, and administer pain medications, usually opioids. This method is very efficient in the therapy of certain types of pain, but I believe its most significant benefits are to those who suffer from cancer-related pain. In many instances it will allow for an excellent quality of life and often a nearly-normal lifestyle, free from severe pain, as well as the debilitating side effects of narcotics taken by mouth or vein.

These catheters may be connected to a small device under the skin that functions as both a reservoir and a pump. Thus, the entire apparatus is under the skin, again, much like a pacemaker.

The patient with chronic pain, from whatever cause, is one deserving of every attempt to relieve their discomfort and to enhance their quality of life. The ultimate treatment goal is to restore the patient's normal functioning within society and the family, and to allow them to pursue their daily living activities in a normal manner.

Peter R. Priganz, M.D. is board certified in anesthesiology and is a diplomate of the American Academy of Pain Management. He is on staff at Central Florida Regional Hospital and practices in Sanford, Lake Mary and DeBary. His office in Sanford is located at 619 E. First St. The health column is provided as a community service by the Seminole County Medical Society. Inquiries may be directed to the medical society.

Fitness Factor

Weight training may help with osteoporosis

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Weight training may help men grow more bone and reduce their risk of osteoporosis — which, one researcher emphasizes, is not only a woman's problem.

"If they increase bone mineral density, it reduces the risk factor for fractures," said Ben F. Hurley, an associate professor at the University of Maryland. "And bone density does decrease for men. Osteoporosis is more prevalent for women, but men do lose bone."

Osteoporosis is a condition in which bone loses two key elements, the protein collagen and the mineral calcium, becoming less dense and thus more easily broken. Although osteoporosis is more severe among women after menopause, it develops in men and women after the age of 30. By age 70, studies indicate, men have lost 10 percent of their bone density.

Hurley and his colleagues in the university's Exercise Science Laboratory wanted to determine whether strength work could be used to fight this condition.

The researchers, whose report appeared in the American Physiological Association's Journal of Applied Physiology, studied 18 previously inactive untrained men ages 50-70, with an average age of 59.

The men worked out three times a week for 16 weeks, doing 15 repetitions each of about a dozen strength exercises involving the upper and lower body.

They worked hard. Researchers first determined how much resistance the men could push no more than five times, and started their workouts at that level. Whenever the exercisers neared a point at which they could do no more, the researchers lowered the resistance just enough to let them keep going.

"We wanted to make sure they could do almost maximal effort," Hurley said. Nonetheless, the effort is probably not much different from what a weight trainer does in a health club when he performs 12 repetitions and can't complete the 13th, said Hurley, who is director of the exercise lab.

The researchers measured strength gains and looked at bone density with a sophisticated X-ray device. Training increased the men's strength by 43 percent in the upper body and 47 percent in the lower body, the journal article said.

There were some gains in bone density as well. An increase of almost four percent was found at the top of the femur, a leg bone between the hip and the knee, the report said.

"It looks like a small amount of change, but in such a short period of time, it's a substantial increase," Hurley said.

In addition, the exercisers had the same average body bone density at the end of the 16 weeks as at the start, while a non-exercising control group lost density, it said.

"To our knowledge, this is the first report that demonstrates a significant increase in regional BMD (bone mineral density) from strength training in older men," the researchers stated.

Exercisers also gained 2 percent in density in bones in the lower back, but the control group gained about as much, so this could not be strictly linked to the exercise program.

Besides examining bones, the researchers measured blood chemicals produced when bones add or lose material. Their results indicated that the gains in density resulted from a gain of new bone matter rather than a slowing of loss, the paper said.

The researchers had no clear reason why some bones gained more than others. They suspect the resistance exercise bent the bones a bit, and that this stimulated growth at the compression points.

They also noted the limitations of their study. Among them: they had relatively few people doing the exercises, making it harder to generalize to larger populations.

This means that a few people in the Maryland study gained bone while others did not, said another expert, Wendy M. Kohrt, research assistant professor of medicine at Washington University, St. Louis.

And that leaves unsettled the question of exactly what may have caused the change, she said.

"We seem to be missing some key factors to identify why some do respond favorably and others don't," Kohrt said.

A New Breakthrough In Hernia Repair

Hernia repair is no longer major surgery. Recent advances like the mesh technique have made it as simple as a one-day "walk-in, walk-out" procedure.

A new laparoscopic technique now available at The Hernia Center of Central Florida has simplified things even further. Because this procedure requires only small incisions, it lessens pain and further shortens recovery time.

The Hernia Center is operated by Surgical Associates, an established team of skilled surgeons who have practiced in Central Florida since 1973 and have performed literally thousands of hernia operations.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Promoting Clinton agenda

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The White House is promising jittery state Democratic leaders it will be much more aggressive in promoting President Clinton's agenda and responding to criticism many of the party activists worry is ringing true to voters.

"We have things to learn — there is no doubt about that," White House political director Rahm Emanuel told the Association of State Democratic Chairs meeting Friday in New Mexico.

He took comfort, however, in recent Clinton congressional victories and a White House staff shakeup he said had given the administration some much-needed momentum.

"But by no means would anyone take the last two weeks as us being out of the woods," Emanuel said.

The shakeup includes Emanuel moving, effective July 6, from political director to the communications office, where he will lead a "rapid response" team designed to quickly counter any attacks on Clinton programs.

Grain, coal shipping halted

Vital grain and coal shipping was halted along 215 miles of the upper Mississippi River after rising flood waters from torrential rains in the Midwest forced locks to close.

The closing of the river from Bellevue, Iowa, south to Alton, Ill., stranded 56 towboats and their barges on Friday. Officials expected to close another 230 miles of river north of Bellevue today.

"We're shut down at a busy time for us," said Doug Lannert, manager of the Gulfport, Ill.-based Peavey Co., which buys and sells grain.

"A lot of farmers are still holding on to large supplies from last year, and time is running out to ship it before the harvest this year," he said.

While grain shippers were stuck, utilities that rely on barges for coal said they had stockpiles and should not be hurt. But companies that ship the coal will be affected.

The shutdown, expected to last as long as two weeks, could cause grain prices paid to Midwestern farmers to fall and prices paid by overseas customers at the Gulf of Mexico to rise, analysts said.

Farmers to cut back on pesticides

WASHINGTON — Farmers for the first time will be forced to cut back on pesticide use on fruits and vegetables under a Clinton administration plan to take the fear out of eating right.

Anticipating a pair of reports on the amount of pesticides found in the foods eaten by children, the administration Friday announced a "commitment to reducing the use of pesticides and to promote sustainable agriculture."

Although the government has long established tolerance levels for pesticide residues on food, Friday's announcement was the first time it has said farmers should cut the use of chemicals.

But the announcement also said children and adults alike should keep eating fruits and vegetables "that form a vital part of a balanced, healthy diet, especially for children."

David Letterman has exited NBC

NEW YORK — Phone the neighbors! Wake the kids! David Letterman has exited NBC after 11½ years hosting "Late Night!" Bringing down the curtain and the house Friday was his surprise guest Bruce Springsteen!

"Oh, you heard already." "Here I am on probably the show business event of the season," said Tom Hanks, Letterman's next-to-last guest, at a moment so heady such glorious excess might have seemed to be true.

In a program both riotous and bittersweet, filled with laughs and memories, a fired-up Letterman went seven minutes over his usual hour. Famously glib or cranky, he even signed off with an out-of-character message to his viewers: "You have my thanks and my friendship."

Then offering fond wishes to his "Late Night" successor, Conan O'Brien, Letterman offered his services as a guest. "I would get a kick out of that," he said (O'Brien takes over in late August or September. Until then, NBC will air Letterman reruns).

IN BRIEF

WELL DONE

Longwood man notches ace

LONGWOOD — Ray Amundsen of Longwood scored a hole-in-one at Rolling Hills Country Club and has entered the 33rd annual Drumbule Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes. Amundsen recorded his ace on the 136-yard No. 5 on May 15. Amundsen and Pete Osborn, the professional who validated the sweepstakes entry, are both eligible to win the grand prize, a one-week trip for two to Scotland, VIP tour of the Drumbule Liqueur Co. Ltd., and $1,000 cash.

LOCALLY

Fastpitch softball camp

ORLANDO — Valencia Community College head softball coach Terri Holmes will conduct her third and final 1993 Girls Fastpitch Softball Camp this week, June 28 to July 2, at the Valencia Community College West Campus softball field.

Daily workouts are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Camp features include the demonstration and application of skills in pitching, catching, hitting, bunting, fielding, throwing, baserunning, offensive strategy, and team defense; team play; and T-shirts, awards, and prizes. Cost for the camp is $50 per player.

For more information, contact Coach Holmes at (407) 299-5000, ext. 1408, or (407) 847-0735.

AROUND THE STATE

Jacksonville's NFL dream dies

JACKSONVILLE — Investors trying to secure a National Football League franchise for Jacksonville said "our NFL dream died" after the collapse of negotiations with the mayor over a Gator Bowl lease.

"It will take a miracle at this point for this thing to come back to life," J. Wayne Weaver, the principal investor in Touchdown Jacksonville! Ltd., said Friday night.

"Touchdown Jacksonville is saddened to inform you that today is the day that our NFL football dream died in Jacksonville," a statement by the finance group said.

Mayor Ed Austin said the city could not afford to accept the lease pushed by Touchdown Jacksonville.

AROUND THE NATION

Elliott dominates Fay's 150

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Bill Elliott scored his first-ever Busch Grand National victory on Saturday, dominating the Fay's 150 Saturday at Watkins Glen.

Elliott, a former Winston Cup champion from Dawsonville, Ga., led 47 of 62 laps of the 2.45-mile road course in the 150-mile event. It is the only road-course race of the season for NASCAR's Grand National division.

Elliott, driving a Ford, averaged 89.970 mph and finished 2.81 seconds ahead of Terry Labonte in a Chevrolet.

AROUND THE WORLD

Ivanisevic upset; Courier wins

WIMBLEDON, England — Unseeded American Todd Martin, in the biggest victory of his career and the biggest surprise so far at Wimbledon, ousted last year's runner-up, Goran Ivanisevic, in a third-round upset today.

Ivanisevic, the No. 5 seed, fell apart at the end of his third consecutive five-set match, double-faulting on the second match point to give Martin a startling 2-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (7-4), 7-5, 6-0 victory.

Third-seeded Jim Courier saved seven set points in the second set and overcame inspired play by Jason Stoltenberg of Australia to win, 6-4, 7-6 (11-9), 3-6, 6-4.

Both No. 2 seeds advanced to the fourth round, Martina Navratilova with a 6-1, 6-0 rout over Canadian Pat Hy and Stefan Edberg with a sloppy victory in which he lost his serve six times before beating British longshot Chris Wilkinson 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

Sanford Little Majors earn berth in districts

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Even adversity couldn't stop Sanford this time.

A night after playing so well in belting the Port Orange All-Stars, the Sanford Little Major All-Stars ran into all kinds of trouble in falling to the Leesburg All-Stars 15-7 Friday.

In the past, Sanford might have crumbled from a loss like that. But not this team, as Sanford came back with a great effort and eliminated the Ormond Beach All-Stars, 5-1. In the final game at Ft. Mellon Park's Roy Holler Field Saturday morning to earn a spot in next week's District 5 Tournament in Ormond Beach.

Leesburg's win Friday night had also earned them a trip to the district's.

Ormond Beach had advanced to the game with Sanford by outscoring Port Orange, 14-8.

Sanford again got an excellent route-going performance from Terrance Daniels, as the little lefthander scattered eight hits, struck out four and did not walk a batter in winning his second game of the tournament.

Ormond Beach took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning on a single by Nick Nestle and an RBI double by Craig Smith. Sanford tied the game in the bottom of the inning on a walk to Daniels, a single by Randy Casey and a passed ball.

The score was still 1-1 in the fourth. A walk to Alex Anderson and a single by Justin Erickson started the inning. The next two batters made outs, but Daniels then cleared the fence to make the score 4-1. The final run came from the Porter brothers, as Barry singled and scored on a double by Brian.

Ormond Beach loaded the bases with none out in the sixth inning, but Daniels ended the game in style, with a strike out, a pop up and another strike out.

Babe Ruth All-Stars tripped by Daytona Beach

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

TAVARES — Sometimes your best just isn't quite good enough.

The Sanford Babe Ruth 14-15 year old All-Stars gave it their all against Daytona Beach All-Stars Friday in the opening round of Florida District 2 Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament at the Fred Stover Baseball Complex.

But in the end, it was not enough, as Daytona prevailed 10-9, sending Sanford into an elimination contest against Flagler on Saturday afternoon (results were not available in time for publication) in the double-elimination tournament.

Sanford fell behind 3-0 in the top of the first inning, but came back with a run in the second inning and four in the third to take a 5-3 advantage and appeared to have the game under control.

Daytona rallied to tie the score with single runs in the fourth and fifth innings, then retook the lead by exploding for four runs in the sixth to take a 9-5 lead.

Sanford got a run back in the bottom of the sixth on a single by Brett Counts, a balk, a throwing error and a ground out. But Daytona got the run back in the seventh on a walk, a stolen base and a single.

But with their backs to the wall, Sanford refused to go quietly. With one out, Donnie Hinson walked and pinch-runner Walter Bryant stole second. Kevin Butler reached on an infield single, and when the throw to first got away, Bryant scored and Butler went to second.

Pinch-runner Robert Randall then stole third and scored on a passed ball, making the score 10-8. After a fly out, Counts was hit by a pitch and stole second and third. Ryan Colgate then lifted a long fly to left that was dropped for an error, with Counts scoring. But a pop-up ended the rally and the game.

Sanford was led by Tommy Raines (double, single, two RBI), Robert Dickerson (two singles, two RBI), Richard Badger (triple, run, RBI), Counts and Bryant (single and two runs each), Butler (single), Cornell Daniels (two runs) and Randall and Alex Acosta (run each).

Rich Alexander surrendered one run and gave up just one hit through five innings to win his second game of the summer for the Lake Mary Mudcats, a 5-1 decision over the host Bishop Moore Angels Friday night.

Alexander, Vessey limit Angels to a hit

By TONY DeBORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — What looks like a closer, throws like a closer, and has a work schedule like a closer?

A starter working his way back into shape.

On Friday night, Robert Vessey pitched in relief for the second time in three days for the Lake Mary Mudcats, tossing two scoreless innings to cap a 5-1 win over the host Bishop Moore Angels in a National Amateur Baseball Federation high school summer league game.

Rich Alexander was the winning pitcher for Mudcats, allowing one run on one hit through five innings to increase his record to 2-0.

Vessey, who picked up a save Wednesday night, threw four scoreless innings in three days, allowing one hit while striking out five and walking two.

"He (Vessey) has been hurt and we're trying to work him in slowly," said Lake Mary coach Allen Tuttle. "He's looked good in relief, but he's one of our starters. If he stays healthy, he'll be a good one."

Tuttle did say that Vessey could see some relief work along with his regular starting assignment.

"When you're starting and pitching once a week, you can always come in in other games and get a couple outs," Tuttle said. "And Vessey has shown that he has the ability to do that."

Offensively, the Mudcats were the beneficiaries of seven Angel errors Friday night as each of the five runners who scored reached directly or indirectly because of a Bishop Moore error.

Jay Reynolds doubled in Rene Perez in the second inning for the Mudcats' first run. Perez later singled and scored another run. Mike Buky singled and scored a run while David Medici had a single and an RBI. Jim Razuri and Brian Marotta each hit a single. Scott Bryant and Jarod Rouse each scored a run.

For Bishop Moore, Dan Morelli's one-out single in the bottom of the first inning was the only hit of the game.

Lake Mary (3-4) was to play Dr. Phillips in a doubleheader Saturday and is scheduled to host Lake Brantley in a doubleheader Monday night beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Can Magic work magic with draft three days away?

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — As the Orlando Magic's vice president for basketball operations, Bob Vander Weide is also the team's expert on the NBA salary cap.

He found a way to sign Shaquille O'Neal a year ago and, provided the Magic retains the No. 1 pick in this week's draft, he's confident the club will be able to satisfy this year's selection, too.

"We have a very rare opportunity to sign another No. 1 pick or get something very valuable for it," Vander Weide says. "I believe it's a challenge we're going to meet."

As the top pick in last year's draft, O'Neal signed a seven-year, $40 million contract and then helped Orlando to the most improved record (41-41, 20 victories better than the previous season) in the league.

The team, which had only a 1-in-66 chance of winding up with the first pick again, reportedly is leaning toward selecting Michigan's Chris Webber on Wednesday.

Brigham Young's Shawn Bradley, Kentucky's Jamal Mashburn and Memphis State's Anfernee

Hardaway also interviewed with Magic officials who insist they can't go wrong by picking any of the prospects.

"This isn't a smokescreen," player personnel director John Gabriel says. "I can honestly say that we'd be a better team if we took any one of them."

The questions Gabriel can't answer are how much better and, perhaps more importantly, how the Magic will free enough money to sign the top-pick when the team is already $3.5 million over the projected NBA salary cap of $15 million for next season.

THIS WEEK'S FISHING FORECAST

Fishing forecast table with columns for Fish, Best Bait, and Location. Lists various fish species and their preferred baits and fishing locations.

Following safety tips enhances boating fun

Boating can be and is a lot of fun. It provides an enormous amount of outdoor pleasure. Using common sense, good boating skills, and these safety rules will help prevent injuries and avoid senseless accidents involving watercraft.

FISHING

When overtaking another vessel, the boat overtaking should give way to the vessel it is passing. In meeting head-to-head or nearly so, neither boat has the right of way — both boats should turn to the starboard (right) and pass port (left).

Pilgrim's perfection leads Bushwackers to Mixed B League lead

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Bobby Pilgrim had a perfect start to the new Playtime Darts League season, registering seven wins and two hat tricks for Sir Walter's Bushwackers in the Mixed B League.

Also making this week's Hot Shots listing were Joe Burns of M.T. Mugg's Moma Muggers in the Mixed B League and Kevin McCabe from Lake Mary Pub's In't That Nice in the Mixed A League, who each had six wins.

Mike Marcello, who throws for the Bamboo Cafe-sponsored Team No. 2 in the Men's A League, had five wins.

Among the women, Jolynn Moreland of Good Answer out of the Lake Mary Pub notched 4½ wins. Katie Clements collected four wins and a bull for Lake Mary Pub's Maimed Barbies. Kristin Meeks had four wins for Ron's Kids. Uncle Nick's entries in the Mixed A League.

LADIES LEAGUE
Led by Clements and Meeks, Lake Mary Pub's Maimed Barbies jumped out to the lead after the first week of play with 12 wins. Clements has a 46 average after one week to lead the league in that category.

Rounding out the seven-team standings are the Lee's B's No. 1 from Lee's Halftime and Lake Mary Pub's Good Answer (both with seven wins); M.T. Mugg's Mugg Shots and Nick's Nieces out of Uncle Nick's (six wins each); and Bamboo Cafe's Watch Your Back (one win).

Lee's B's No. 2 from Lee's Halftime had the bye last week and did not play.

MEN'S A LEAGUE
Donnie Tomlinson had three wins and four assists to go with Marcello's five wins to pace Bamboo Cafe's Bad Company to the early lead (nine wins). Tomlinson's average of 51 leads the league after one week.

There's a three-way tie for second place at nine wins between Bamboo Cafe's Team No. 2, the Eliminators from Bamboo Cafe, and The Family, also from the Bamboo Cafe.

Likewise, there's a three-way tie for fifth at four wins apiece between Team No. 5 out of Sir Walters, M.T. Mugg's Salt and Pepper, and Team No. 8 from the Lake Mary Pub.

The Untouchables from the Bamboo Cafe trail with two wins.

MEN'S B LEAGUE
Rich Moreland put together two wins, four assists, and a bull to lead the Bamboo Cafe's Bamboozlers to 10 first-week wins and into first place. Moreland leads the league with a 39 average.

Whiskey River's River Rats hold down second (eight wins) ahead of Team No. 4 from the Lake Mary Pub (seven wins); Sir Walters' The Alternatives (six wins); the Bone Yard's Bonecrushers (five wins); and the Bass Holes from Lee's Halftime (three wins).

MIXED A LEAGUE
Meeks, who has the top average among the league's women with a 44, anchored the efforts of Ron's Kids out of Uncle Nick's, leading them to 11 first-week wins and a seat atop the league standings.

McCabe, whose 48 mark is the top men's average in the league, helped Lake Mary Pub's In't That Nice to seven wins. They're followed by M.T. Mugg's Bud Team (six wins) and Team No. 2 from the Bamboo Cafe (two wins).

Bamboo Cafe's Team No. 1, Team No. 4 out of the Lake Mary Pub, the Bamboo Bullets from the Bamboo Cafe, and Lee's Sluggers from Lee's Halftime all have make-ups.

MIXED B LEAGUE
Pilgrim's red-hot start to the season, which translates to a league-beat average of 55, shot Sir Walters' Bushwackers to the top of the pack with 12 wins. Michele Kenney, also of the Bushwackers, has the top women's average with a 35.

Lake Mary Pub's Family Feud and Mom's Muggers from M.T. Muggs are tied for second with eight wins each. Team No. 7 out of Lake Mary Pub and Crazy Wings' Wingers share fourth with five wins each. Bamboo Cafe's Ace of Aces trails with one win.

The Knuckleheads from Lake Mary Pub had the bye this week and will open their season next week.

Sundvall, Conglia blast to top of BA honor roll

Special to the Herald

IN BRIEF

EXPANSIONS

Centel / Spring merge

Earlier this year, Centel Corporation and Spring Corporation merged. Now United Telephone Company of Florida and Central Telephone Company of Florida are adopting new corporate business identifications to reflect their association with Spring.

The company is adopting the identity of "Sprint/United Telephone-Florida and Sprint/Centel-Florida."

"The identities reflect the merger of Centel and Sprint to form a $10 billion diversified telecommunications company," said president Fred Lawrence.

"Our 1.5 million customers in Florida expect high quality and we will continue to provide the best services available," he said. "The recent Centel/Sprint merger strengthens our ability to provide total communications services."

Together, the companies cover about 40 percent of the State of Florida, serving 1.5 million customer access lines.

The companies are headquartered in Altamonte Springs. Sprint/United serves all or part of 24 counties including Seminole.

Ramada expands

Powell Design Group, P.A., has been retained by H.O. Enterprises of Thomasville, Georgia, to renovate the previously existing Ramada Inn, on Douglas Avenue, at the intersection of Interstate-4 and S.R. 436, Altamonte Springs.

The new hotel will carry the Hampton Inn flag. Included in the renovation is the complete reworking of 216 hotel rooms, and the demolition of the old office and restaurant to make way for a new lobby and office facility with meeting rooms, and a separate 160 seat restaurant. The new facility is projected to open in November of this year.

SALES MOVING UP

Cambridge works hard

Cambridge Homes sold 192 homes during the first five months of 1993, with a total dollar volume of $18 million, according to Bill Orosz, Jr., president. Last year, Cambridge had only three communities, selling 52 homes.

From January through May, the company had eight active communities in Orange, Seminole and Osceola Counties. They are now breaking ground at their first Brevard County Community.

Cambridge community homes range from $66,900 to $129,900.

Today offers new spec

Today Homes has a new spec home at the Neal W. Harris community of Lake Mary Woods according to Neal W. Harris, Jr., vice president of the company.

Harris said there are only four homesites left at this community with home prices ranging from $180,000 to $210,000. 90 homesites have already been sold.

Lake Mary Woods is located at Weldon, in Lake Mary.

NEW PEOPLE

Franz named to association

Chuck Franz, Chuluota, is the latest member to be added to the American Angus Association according to Dick Spader, executive vice president of the national organization. The American Angus Association has over 24,000 active and junior members, and is the largest beef cattle registry association in the world, with records detailing nearly 11 million registered Angus.

Cambridge adds two

Bill Orosz, Jr., president of Cambridge Homes, has announced two new members of the Altamonte Springs staff. Peggy Smith will serve as marketing coordinator, and Donna Hakim will be accounting executive. Cambridge, with a staff of 12, is now located at 598 S. North Lake Blvd., Altamonte Springs, and has communities in nine different areas of Central Florida including Seminole County.

SANFORD — United Purchasing Association, Inc. (UPA), has selected Sanford as its home.

UPA is the nation's largest member-owned buying group in the plumbing and HVAC (heating, ventilation and air conditioning) industries, and one of the fastest-growing in the electrical supply industry.

The facility is located at 1101 Cornwall Road, in Sanford.

Founded in 1979, UPA is a member-owned buying/marketing group representing 600 companies nationally.

It is organized into separate electrical and plumbing divisions, and offers its members volume rebates negotiated with 140 manufacturers and suppliers of plumbing, HVAC and electrical products.

The company presently has members in 49 states, and has reported over $3 billion in member purchases in 1992.

William T. Corp. Sr., has been chairman of UPA since he founded the company in 1979. Under his leadership, the number of UPA member-wholesalers increased from 12 in 1979 to over 600 in 1992, accounting for over $3 billion in purchases last year, a substantial portion of those through UPA.

Doug Corp has served as president of UPA since 1981. He is responsible for overseeing the day-to-day operations of the company including nationwide rebate and marketing programs.

William T. Corp., Jr., is executive vice president.

Major services include: National accounts program; electronic order placement; electronic data interchange communications; cooperative marketing programs; and central warehousing.

For information on UPA in Sanford, phone 323-6250.

Chamber business show set

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

Although several months off, plans are now being formulated for the 1993 Greater Seminole Business Show. The event will be held Aug. 11 and 12 at Seminole Community College.

The Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce expects over 2,000 Central Florida business professionals to attend the showing during the two days.

Co-sponsors for the event are SCC, Florida Hospital, Altamonte, and the Central Florida Phone Book.

The early announcement of the event is aimed at giving advance notice to businesses which may wish to obtain tables and/or booths. A six foot draped table with two folding chairs, signage, listing on the program and 25 complimentary tickets is available until July 10 only, for $160.

The 8 by 10 foot booth, with backwall and side rails, two folding chairs, signage and unlimited complimentary tickets is $375.

For non-chamber members, an additional $50 administrative fee will be charged.

In addition to the businesses which will be represented at the show, there will be on-going golf clinics, hot air balloons, and demonstrations by the Seminole County Sheriff's department.

The SCC connection is through the Small Business Development Center, a regional center of the University of Central Florida Small Business Development Center, and is partially funded under cooperative agreement by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Specific hours are from noon until 8 p.m. on August 11 and from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on August 12. Set up will be on the morning of August 11.

Tables and booths must be reserved by July 10. For reservations and additional information, phone the chamber at 834-4404.

Baxter says goodbye

The first employee to retire from the Seminole County Probation Department since it was separated from the state probation department in the late 1970's will leave her job at the end of the month.

Joyce Baxter, 67, will end her 11-year clerical career with the department June 30. Probation manager G. Yvonne Taylor and probation department staffers honored Baxter at a luncheon where Seminole Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey presented the retiree with a plaque. Dickey was instrumental in getting funding for the newly created county probation department when he was a county court judge.

Baxter joined the department in May 1982 as a transcriber operator and was later promoted to clerk-typist. Taylor said Baxter plans to relax and reflect after leaving her job but plans to keep an eye on the employees to make sure they spell everything correctly and use proper grammar.

LONGWOOD — Silver screen actor turns pie maker.

Jim and Anebi McCorvey of Longwood, moved to the central Florida area just last year with one thing in mind. They had discovered some long lost recipes of pies that were considered to be the best made in southern Georgia at the turn of the century and they wanted to let the world know about the pies.

The couple have been traveling for the past 10 years and in those years, Mrs. McCorvey has been baking pies for her neighbors and friends from the treasure of recipes that were found in an old black trunk stowed away in an attic.

Mr. McCorvey related their discovery. "We were visiting one of my cousins, he's in his 80s, maybe closer to 90 now. He is older than me. Anebi is kind of a curious type of person. Anyway, my cousin says, he fell heir to some old trunks belonging to his grandmother. 'How would you like to wander in one of her old trunks?' He didn't realize that was right up Anebi's alley. So, she started looking through the trunk and found a shoe box with a blue ribbon tied around it. She opened up that box and found all kinds of southern recipes including may pie recipes in it. In fact, that was how she learned to cook southern."

The shoe box contained the recipes for all the fine pies that Mrs. McCorvey is now becoming famous for. Even the original recipes dating back to 1895 through 1910 can be accounted for as they attest to the originality of the lemon meringue, apple, chocolate, custard, cherry, key lime, sweet potato, coconut, pecan and coconut custard pie that is cooked fresh everyday at their store in Longwood.

Mrs. McCorvey was geared to cooking because as she was growing up in a family where her mom was working full-time everyday, McCorvey was the full-time cook for the other three children in the family.

After a few years of experimenting with the recipes, McCorvey said, "She made her first big mistake. We SANFORD — Sounding very much like the minister his relatives once thought he would become, Amefika Geuka candidly talked about his life and the many "shoes" he has worn.

Named Lawrence Edward Taylor after his grandfathers, Amefika legally changed his name to one that he feels more accurately represents his cultural heritage. The origin of his name is Swahili, a Bantu language of east and central Africa, and it means, specifically, "one who is hoped for has arrived in time to be a turning point for his people," explained Geuka. He continued, "At the time of my name change during the civil rights movement, it was my perception that I was going to provide a turning point for Afro-American people in Utica, N.Y. which is where I was living at the time." He also made the change he said, "to prove my sincerity for the civil rights cause, especially since many younger blacks were not aware of their cultural heritage."

In the office of the Golden Rule Housing & Community Development Corporation of which is its director, Geuka openly discussed his life and experiences. Born in Belleglade, Fla., to migrant parents, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Geuka knows how uncomfortable it is for a family of more than two people to live in a one bedroom shack especially one that has a leaky roof. The frequent complaints of his mother about their living conditions and the traveling required to find work during the bean and potato seasons, encouraged his father to move his family, which by this time included three more children, to Rochester, N.Y. where Geuka was able to complete high school. Instead of entering college after graduating from high school, Geuka entered the army. He said, "Black colleges at this time were not as plentiful in the north as they were in the south, and blacks were not encouraged to attend college after high school in the northeast as much as they were in the south."

At the age of 30, after a 12-year stint in the army, Geuka became a

His secret of a long marriage is 'yes, ma'am'!

William J. (Bob) and Laura Clark mark 60 years of marriage.

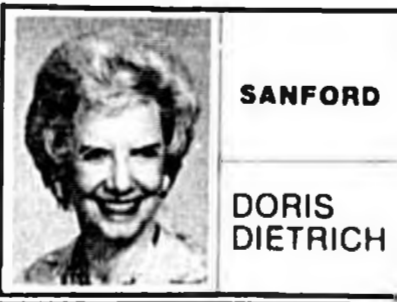

Ten years ago, William J. (Bob) Clark and his beloved Laura celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. It seems like just yesterday that the couple were dancing the night away at the golden gala given in their honor by daughter and son, Judy and John Clarke, at Mayfair Country Club.

At the time, Bob said getting along for 50 years was easy. "Be forceful," he said. "Talk things over with your wife and then do exactly as she wants."

Now that the couple's 60th anniversary has rolled around, Bob has a few more words of wisdom rewarding 60 years of marriage. "The secret of my long marriage is two words 'yes, ma'am,'" he chuckled. "It works every time."

A lot of changes have occurred in Bob's and Laura's life during the past 10 years. He will be 85 on his birthday next month and Laura is 80. They lost their only son, John, in 1987, leaving two daughters, Judy Clarke and Pat Locey who live in Sanford, and three grandchildren, all grown and on their own.

Ten years ago, the couple belonged to two bowling teams, but they don't bowl today due to Clara's health. In recent years she has had heart surgery twice which resulted in five bypass operations.

On Friday, June 18, their daughter, Judy, took them to dinner at the Elks Club to celebrate. "It was completely a surprise," Bob said. "We didn't know anything about it."

But on their 60th anniversary, June 21, Laura was not up to celebrating, Bob said.

The couple were married on June 21, 1933, in Saskatchewan, Canada. Bob had retired from the S.S. Kresge Co. when the family moved to Lake Worth in 1944. They moved to Sanford in 1951 and became active in the Sanford community. They still live in the same house they moved into in 1951 and are still active in the First Presbyterian Church. They are also active in the Over 50 Club.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Michael (Cheryl) Thompson

Sharber, Thompson joined in marriage

HAZLEHURST, Ga. — Cheryl Leigh Sharber and Michael Wayne Thompson were united in marriage at 4 p.m. on March 6, at the First Baptist Church in Hazlehurst, Dr. Pete Sharber, pastor of the church and father of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony. The Rev. David Smith, an associate pastor of Sherwood Baptist Church of Albany, officiated at the beginning of the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Pete Sharber of Hazlehurst. The bride's mother is Emily Faye Garner Sharber, formerly of Sanford. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louie F. Garner of Sanford.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson of Albany, Ga.

The sanctuary of the church was beautifully decorated with numerous brass candelabra and generous background foliage of areca palms, large Boston fern, magnolias and trailing vines of southern smilax. Featured in the center was a massive starburst arrangement of lily mums, pink lily roses and snapdragons, stargazer lilies, fuchsia and deep rose rubra camellias, white gladioli and pink flowering peach blossoms. The large urn arrangement was flanked by candelabra holding the unity candle and the bridal kneeling bench which were decorated with fern and floral arrangements repeating the same theme. Six pew markers featured glass candle globes with lighted white tapers and small bouquets with lily mums, lily roses, stargazer lilies and baby's breath with ribbon streamers of ecru French moire taffeta.

The bride wore a candlelight wedding gown of georgette shantung and re-embroidered bridal lace. The gown was beautifully designed in the traditional fashion with a contoured "V" neckline etched in pearl roping with long, tapered sleeves that came to wedding points over the bride's hands. The basque fitting bodice was accented with multiple miniature porcelain roses and beading of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The softly flared skirt and chapel train were appliqued with beaded lace. A wide band of re-embroidered lace banded the hemline. Her waltz length veil of silk illusion was attached to a bandeau of alencon lace, ornately encrusted with pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade of phalaenopsis orchids and white bridal roses with montecasino and baby's breath.

Melanie Siskey, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a long cocktail suit of fuchsia shantung. The jacket was simply styled with a "V" neckline with hand-rolled shantung rosettes down the front. The back of the suit was peplum-styled with a cluster of hand-rolled rosettes as a focal point.

The bridesmaids, who wore identical gowns, were Rachel Brock of Albany, Rhonda Walker of Bainbridge, Adela Ford of Macon, Paula Frost of Milledgeville, and Sharon Thompson, sister of the groom, of Albany. They carried cascade arrangements of stargazer lilies, pink lily roses, pink mini-carnations, montecasino, and baby's breath.

The flower girl, Erin Whatley of Albany, wore a tea length fuchsia shantung dress with ecru antique lace collar and a full skirt with hand rolled rosettes at the waistline in the back. She carried a datny basket decorated with roses, baby's breath and ecru French moire taffeta ribbon filled with blush pink rose petals.

Serving as best man was Harold Thompson, the groom's father. Groomsmen were Frank Flowers of Bainbridge, David Wilson, Greg Drake, Anthony Williams, and Calvin Rhodes of Albany. Ushers were Mark Siskey and Harry Rowe of Albany. The groomsmen, ushers and ringbearer wore black tuxedos, ecru pleated shirts and black bowties. Jonathan Siskey, nephew of the bride, served as ringbearer. The ring bearer's pillow was the one which was used in the wedding of the bride's parents. The heart shaped pillow was designed with a new cover, hand sewn by the sister of the bride, using the lace and ivory satin from their mother's bridal gown.

The reception was held in the social hall of the church. The reception table featured a large silver urn filled with stargazer lilies, gerbera daisies, pink roses, mini-carnations and baby's breath. Similar arrangements were centered on skirted round tables on the church lawn where guests were seated to enjoy refreshments. Boston ferns atop large white columns, areca palms and floral arrangements decorated the hallway and reception area. Piano reception music was provided by Bickie Macalalad.

The three-tiered wedding cake, topped with wedding roses, mini-carnations, lilies and baby's breath, was cut by the bride and groom with a long sterling wedding knife which was used at the wedding reception of the bride's parents.

For the reception, the bride's long chapel train was bustled using a length of old fashioned ecru tating, handmade for the occasion by the bride's grandmother.

Assisting at the reception were Jennifer Oliver, Mary Sherwood, Karen Gleason of Albany, and Rhonda Knight of Vidalia, Kathryn Roper of Greensboro, Ga., and Brenda Vinson of Tampa kept the bride's book. Ashley McPherson passed out small, decorated bags of birdseed for guests in lieu of the traditional rice bags.

For their honeymoon trip, the couple enjoyed an eight day Caribbean cruise on board the SS Ocean Breeze stopping in ports of Aruba, Grenada, Martinique, Barbados, Curacao. They now reside in Albany, where the bride is employed by Technical Associates as a technical recruiter and the groom is a certified public accountant employed by Crawford and Company.

Freedom Awards

National NAACP director delivers message at state conference

The Florida state conference branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) held its 20th Annual Freedom Awards Dinner at the Contemporary Resort Hotel ballroom, Walt Disney World, Friday, June 19.

The speaker for the event was National Executive Director Dr. Benjamin F. Chavis Jr., of Baltimore, Md., who on Apr. 9, was elected by the national board of directors as executive director and chief executive officer to one of the most influential and prestigious positions in America.

Dr. Chavis, 45, at the time of his election became the youngest person ever to hold the position, and the seventh to head the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization since its founding in 1909.

Dr. Chavis' life with the NAACP began at the age of 12 when he was first given a membership card by his parents, in his hometown of Oxford, N.C.

He has been committed to the pursuit of racial and economic justice. He has established a national reputation as a civil and human rights leader, a gifted speaker, outstanding administrator, and a prolific writer with two books to his credit. He is also the author of a weekly syndicated column, "Civil Rights Journal" which appears in 300 newspapers.

Dr. Chavis is an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ. He received his bachelor of arts degree in chemistry from the University of North Carolina; master of divinity degree (magna cum laude) from Duke University, and the doctor of ministry degree from Howard University.

At the time of his election as the NAACP's executive director, Dr. Chavis was executive director and chief executive officer of the Commission for Racial Justice of the 1.7 million member United Church with national offices in Cleveland. His commitment to civil rights and human rights was tested under the most severe circumstances when he was unjustly convicted on false charges in the 1970s in a case growing out of a civil rights demonstration on the issue of school desegregation and was jailed for four-and-a-half years in North Carolina. Most of us remember the "Wilmington Ten Case" which aroused national and international outrage. In 1978, Amnesty International cited the "Wilmington Ten" as the first official case of political prisoners in the United States. On Dec. 4, 1980, the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the trumped-up convictions of the "Wilmington Ten" clearing the record and their names. Dr. Chavis says this gave him an even deeper commitment to the causes in which he believes. He has also served on the Clinton-Gore transition team for the Resources Cluster, inclusive of the Departments of Energy, Interior, Agriculture and the Environmental Protection Agency.

The message of the evening from Dr. Chavis centered around the theme "Passing the Torch, Preparing for a Better Tomorrow." He encouraged his listeners to celebrate the long distance running for the 84 years the NAACP has bridged the racial divide. He reminded everyone that the "NAACP is committed, that there is a common commitment we have made to society to make our communities, our world a better place." He urged everyone to Laura was employed as a bookkeeper for Sanford Boat Works before her retirement.

Bob Clarke has always managed to stay busy and happy. Today, at nearly 85, he is a Seminole County school crossing guard in Longwood. He serves an hour in the morning and another in the afternoon and drives 40 miles to his job.

The couple have had a happy marriage and are certainly complacent in their lifestyle today. "We have a poodle dog that's absolutely the boss," Bob said. "Do you believe that?"

Pragers wed 30 years

Joanne and Jack Prager left no stone unturned in celebration of their 30th wedding anniversary. They were married May 25, 1963 at the Nazarene Church, St. Petersburg.

The couple, whose activities include boating, camping, hunting, horses, ATVs and motorcycles, entertained at the social of the year, a barn party at their ranch on 5150 Thomas Stable Road.

About 120 relatives and friends showed up for the barbecue and festivities wearing their best blue jeans at the June 5 event. And the evening was made for having a good time.

The first stop at 6 p.m. was the "happy hour" area of the barn which was tastefully decorated with mint twinkling lights, assorted potted plants, pink and mint green balloons secured by silver horseshoes and poster-size photos of the couple's original wedding pictures.

The picturesque serving table, centered with an ornate arrangement of pink silk roses, held a variety of appetizing finger foods prepared by Margie Bledsoe and daughters.

The pink and green motif continued on through the guest book table and wine and cake table. A mini white gateway with ivy leaves, pink silk flowers and a string of pearls decorated the lovely cake which was made by Retha Blankenship.

Red and white checkered tablecloths covered the tables in the barbecue area of the barn which featured red and white balloons tied to silver horseshoes with colorful banners covering the walls. Coolers filled with refreshing drinks were placed throughout this area.

A delicious barbecue chicken and pork dinner with all the trimmings was prepared and served by Chef David Austin and Dee Cobb.

Jeff Roach was in charge of volleyball, badminton and horseshoe games while music was provided by Alan Ribak, deejay.

Joanne and Jack were toasted by their oldest son, Ron, supported by Kent, the youngest son, both of Casselberry. They have another son, Greg, of West Palm Beach, and a daughter, Linda Lehmann of DeLand. There are two grandchildren.

Special guests, who also assisted with the celebration, were Willard and Audrey Gibson of St. Petersburg, the couple's best man and maid of honor at their wedding, and Bob and Lori Lambing of Orange Park.

Others assisting were: Margie, Carol and Sherry Bledsoe, Mary McElroy, Jeff Roach, Linda Hostetter, Barry and Sharon Thomas, Steve and Gail Thomas, Sam Dunn, Jerry Smith, Ron and Lynn Prager and Kent and Cathy Prager.

Jack and Joanne have lived on the 32-acre spread for 22 years. He is the former owner of Prager's Gun Shop, Orlando, which he sold 14 years ago and retired.

Joanne, who has always been a homemaker since their marriage, is a past president of the Humane Society of Seminole County.

About the celebration, Jack said, "Oh, it was a wingding!"

were in Hawaii at the time. She baked a couple of pies and gave them to some of the neighbors. By golly, they are knocking on the door, calling on the phone, can you make a friend of mine one of those pies? Can you make me another one? And she is making freebies! I explained to her that she couldn't be doing that all the time or we would go broke."

He continued, "I said we are going to put a stop to it. You just tell everyone the pies cost $15. That just led more fuel to the fire because people didn't feel bad about asking for the pies when they paid for them." The McCorveys cooked pies every place they lived until coming to central Florida.

By the way, if you are wondering, McCorvey is their real name, Jim and Anebi. Many people who have become familiar with the pies have asked what the real name of the couple who baked the pies was.

There was once a time when McCorvey was known as Jay Norris. That was many years ago when he appeared in such films as "See Here, Private Hargrove," "Fighting Seabees," "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," "A Walk in the Sun," "If You Knew Susie" and many other films of the 1940s and 1950s. During those days McCorvey used to run with the likes of John Wayne, Spencer Tracy, Dana Andrews, Ray Milland, Eddie Cantor, Joan Bennett and Joan Davis.

In 1945, he was discharged from the Navy after service in World War II in the Pacific. He was released in San Diego and went to Los Angeles to seek his fortune. Through many small incidents he met the right people and ended up in the film industry, in many cases as a supporting actor or an extra in a major film. This gave birth to many encounters with some very interesting people.

Ten years ago while staying in Costa Rica, McCorvey 65 years old, met Mrs. McCorvey who was a student at the university. They fell in love and after a blessing from her mom, they were married. Their marriage has been very endearing and the difference in age, 45 years, has proven to be no problem.

Over the past years they have lived in Shanghai, Hawaii and many countries in Europe. In all these countries she has carried the priceless recipes and cooked her pies for anyone who asked for them.

The latest additions to her menu have been pot pies. Now in two flavors: Chicken Pot Pie and Hot Tamale Pot pie. The pot pies have become just as popular as the regular pies.

Mrs. McCorvey's Pies is located in Longwood at the Springs Plaza.

Not all sickos out there are necessarily psycho

DEAR ABBY: You are probably tired of letters about unusual last names, but ours gets a lot of attention because it's rather funny. It's "Sicko."

I know it's hard to believe, but it's true. When we tell people our name is "Sicko" and spell it — "S-I-C-K-O" — they laugh and say, "You've got to be kidding." Meanwhile, they look at us, wondering if we're serious.

Some people try to be kind, and instead of pronouncing it "Sicko" just like it's spelled, they'll pronounce it "Psycho," which is even worse, so we'll just stick with "Sicko," thank you.

My husband of 27 years is the kindest and dearest man in the world, and I wouldn't ask him to change our name for anything, although he's been asked many times why he hasn't.

This letter is no put-on, Abby, but if you use it in your column, please leave off the city, we get enough crank calls as it is.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN S. SICKO ON JONES ROAD

DEAR MR. AND MRS. SICKO: Congratulations on being able to see the humor in your name. Are there any little Sickos at home?

If John investigates the origin of his name, the chances are it is an abbreviation or the anglicized version of Syckowitz, or Syckovskij. If you find out, please let me know.

DEAR ABBY: To add to your "What's in a Name?" game:

In 1960, few foreigners — mostly English — living on the Balearic Island of Ibiza (off the coast of Spain) received our mail at the general delivery window.

One day the clerk asked me, "Do you know this Senator Esq? He has many letters here from England."

AL HIX, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Here's another one for your odd name collection. My name is Michael Shadawitzki (pronounced "shot a whiskey"), and with a name like that, I usually need at least two shots to handle the comments from people who meet me for the first time.

MIKE IN HUNTINGTON, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I read with considerable interest your article about Diane Fuerst, whose last name is pronounced "first."

My name, of German ancestry, is Last. (We've often wondered if perhaps we had a shoemaker somewhere in our family tree.)

Like Mrs. Fuerst, when making an application or opening an account, I am asked, "May I have your last name?"

I reply, "Last."

"They will counter with: 'Yes, your last name.' (It is usually good for a fun volley or two.) Invariably, they ask for your last name first."

Of course, Last is a name of great privilege. The Bible says, "But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first" (New Testament: Matthew 19:30; Mark 10:31). (Sorry, Mrs. Fuerst.)

My wife and I have decided that when we retire, it would be great fun to own a small resort and name it "The Last Resort."

THE REV. MICHAEL LAST, AUGUSTANA LUTHERAN CHURCH, SIOUX CITY, IOWA

DEAR REV. LAST: I suspect my readers are hoping that this will be the last of the First-Last issue.

As a former Sioux Citian, I am giving you the last word.

stand up for freedom and injustice. Let us remember how precious the right to vote is, let's be our brother's keeper, because every child of God should have a chance." Dr. Chavis' words of wisdom will forever remain in the minds of the audience as he told them that "we are a social change organization and we must instill a core set of morals in our lives, we must stay together, unite and pull together, move forward, deal with injustices, find a sense of community — this movement will not be silenced."

Also highlighting the evening program was Willie Eva Smith Gospel Choir of Panama City under the direction of Paul Hunt. The selections rendered were "We Pray for Unity," "There'll Be Joy, Joy," and "How Excellent is His Name." The audience rose to give Dr. Chavis a standing ovation with resounding applause for his dynamic message to the over 500 persons attending the freedom dinner.

After the speech, the state president of the Florida State NAACP branch, Thomas H. Poole Sr., spoke via telephone hook-up from his sick bed in Eustis where he is recovering from major heart surgery. He thanked the national president for his dedication to the cause and to the work of the NAACP. State President Poole has served and led the Florida branches toward many solutions that have confronted the citizens of Florida, especially blacks, hispanics and lower-income whites. The citizens of Florida salute and honor Mr. Poole for working to improve civil rights.

Greetings came from corporations who support the Florida branches of the NAACP such as Southland Corporation, Walt Disney World, Anheuser-Busch Company, First Union National Bank, and Consumer Bank Administration. Winn-Dixie Stores was the recipient of the NAACP Corporate Award for 1993. The Gwendolyn Sawyer Cherry Award was presented to Charles G. Burr of Tampa. Greetings were brought from the office of U.S. Senator Bob Graham by his assistant, Marvin Davis. John E. Evan, president of Florida Tourism Association, was master of ceremonies.

Alumni voices needed

Calling all former choir members and students of Crooms Academy: Crooms Academy and Seminole High School students who were members of the choir under the direction of Earl E. college student at Syracuse University. Attending college on a year-round schedule, he was able to graduate in two-and-a-half years with honors.

Returning to Rochester, Gueka, after receiving a job with city government, began work on a master's degree in public administration while directing the Model City's program. During this time while rising in the ranks to assistant city manager, he realized that his interest was in community service. Gueka came to Florida when he was offered a position by Cardinal Industries as director of their low-income housing project.

When Cardinal Industries ceased operations in Florida, Gueka accepted an appointment offered by Gov. Martinez to serve as a director in the Florida State Department of Professional Licensing. Personal concerns caused him to leave this position.

According to Altamere Bentley, a local Georgetown historian, civic leader, devoted church worker, and retired edu-director. "Amelika never lets anything get the best of him. He has had the misfortune to spring back from the many adversities he has encountered and whatever he puts out can be examined." One adversity which received an abundance of negative publicity was the accusation that Gueka refused to pay child support for the children of his first marriage. A verbal agreement made between Gueka and his first wife was voided when she discovered his appointment to the State Licensing Department. She felt that he was then in a position to provide more support. Although she later withdrew the charges, Amelika said, "to my knowledge, this important fact was never publicized." Mrs. Bentley, continuing to extol Amelika's talents, said, "It was he who wrote grants for the Community Improvement Association which is attempting to restore the old Hopper Elementary school, and he is an excellent extemporaneous speaker."

Irene Brown, newly elected president of Golden Rule Housing & Community Development Corporation and volunteer of the Sanford Christian Sharing Center, said, "I am impressed with Amelika's perseverance, involvement, determination and belief in his own dream, which is to help his own people. I am convinced this is going to be the year for Amelika. He is a good man."

Amelika admits, "I am an unabashed partisan for Afro-American people, but this does not mean that I am a racist. Feeling empathy and commitment to change their living conditions does not mean I am anti-anybody else. No one is turned away from Golden Rule. At a recent seminar, many whites as well as blacks who had been through Golden Rule and received an empathetic response were present." Concluding his comments, Gueka said, "Two things that cannot exist compatibly at the same time in the same place are pity and respect. The minute you pity someone or something, is the minute you lose respect for that person or thing. I have no pity or sympathy for the people who come to Golden Rule, but I do empathize with their situation."

One of her favorite dances was "Favorite Sun," which Valerie said she and Miriam duplicated from the popular Broadway show, Will Rogers Follies.

Valerie credits Dennis Butler, father of dancer Gwen Butler, with fashioning the production's unique skimmer hats created around a tambourine crown.

Relatives came to the recital from several states and as far away as Washington, D.C. It was a big, busy weekend.

According to Peggy Hardin, "Shall We Dance?" was "the best ever." Peggy said, "Opening night was great. The audience was really with it. It was packed every performance." Peggy said she saw two shows while other family members were represented at each of the five performances — some, several times.

Peggy's four grandchildren performing were: Heather, Christina, Julie and Nathan Hardin. Betty Jack wouldn't have missed the recital for the world. Her special interest was her granddaughter, Jacquelyn Foster, who did a specialty tap number, among other dances.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sunday, June 27, 1993

Your chances for advancement are likely to be better in the coming year in your present field rather than striking out elsewhere. The key to success is to make yourself indispensable where you are.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today there's a possibility you might be a bit more forgetful than usual, especially when it comes to remembering commitments you made to your spouse or family members. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) When dealing with subordinates today, make certain your directives to them are clear and explicit. Fuzzy commands could create serious problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In your pastimes with friends today, try not to get involved in activities where betting is a key element. This may produce all types of unpleasant side effects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you hope to play a leadership role today where your peers are concerned, you must first have a concise plan of action. Nobody will follow you if you don't know where you're going yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your nobler compassionate instincts will be easily aroused today when others need your help. You'll do so without making them feel obligated or inferior.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be conscious of conditions today when in the company of friends who haven't been doing as well materially as you have lately. Thoughtlessness could embarrass them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Flattery will not accomplish your purposes today. In fact, it could prove to be very counterproductive. If you want to create good will with friends, be sincere.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be very careful that you don't let something slip out to you in confidence slip out to the wrong party. Keeping secrets may not be your long suit today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If there is something important

Answer to Previous Puzzles

that must be done today, try to do it yourself instead of delegating it to someone else. There's a possibility you might pick the wrong surrogate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Rather than being ineffectively indecisive, it is often better to take some type of action, even if it isn't under optimum conditions. Don't look for excuses to support delays.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If materials today with which you're unfamiliar, take time to thoroughly read the directions and instructions before starting. It could save you a peek of trouble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might be exceptionally curious today and try to pry into the confidential matters of friends. It's best you don't because what you learn may displease you.

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 28, 1993

In the year ahead you could be luckier than usual in being able to finalize matters to your satisfaction on your first or second try. However, you will have to totally dedicate yourself to your endeavor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An endeavor in which you're presently involved is in dire need of effective leadership. You're the person who can fulfill this lack, so make your move today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're probabilities for success are quite high today. Victories in various areas of your life are likely, not so much from what you do but from what others do for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Bored friends will welcome your companionship today, because there is an air of excitement and adventure in your persona. What you project is genuine, not a put on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be alert for profitable developments today, because something unexpected might pop up that would permit you to be the two loose ends together and gain substantially in the process.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A situation similar to one you handled successfully recently could repeat itself again today. Do exactly what you did previously that produced productive results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Persons who like you are apt to bend over backwards today to assist you in any manner they can. If you're in need of a special favor, go to your pals first.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There are indications you might form two new partnership arrangements at this time. Although they will be unrelated, both could be successful in their own way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of evading challenges today, step boldly forward and meet them head-on. Opposition serves to awaken your stronger qualities and your resolve to win.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're up to handling a full schedule today, so block your time accordingly. Activities energize you, whereas a lack of things to do will be tiring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take matters into your own hands today if those to whom you delegated them aren't performing to your satisfaction. These are situations you should be taking care of yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're very perceptive today and your judgment could be quite keen. Don't be afraid to make difficult decisions because your ability to analyze is profound.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give priority today to situations that are meaningful to you in material ways and can be finalized now. Focus on immediate returns. (C) 1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

For over 40 years, the American Contract Bridge League has raised money for charity. In Britain, it is not uncommon for charity bridge tournaments to feature either business executives or politicians. Today's deal occurred during an event for teams representing London's financial institutions. It raised over 10,000 pounds for The Prince's Trust.

The deal caused lots of activity among the expert analysts who were kibitzing. South arrives in six spades and West leads a trump. How many rounds of trumps should declarer draw?

In the given auction, North's response of two no-trump was the Jacoby Forcing Raise. South's three-heart rebid showed a singleton or void in the suit. North aggressively cue-bid his heart ace, which persuaded South to use Blackwood.

Declarer has to assume that East is holding the diamond ace. But even so, he probably has to ruff two low diamonds in the dummy. So it is wrong to draw all the trumps. There will be only one spade left in the dummy for the two diamond losers.

The correct play is to win trick one in the dummy and immediately play a diamond. Even if East has a second trump to play, the contract is safe.

Finally, though, suppose declarer draws a second round of trumps before leading a diamond. That appears to be safe because East doesn't have a trump left. But on the second spade East can make a brilliant play: he discards the diamond ace!

Do you know anyone who would find that play? I don't think I do, either.

Parent and adult-childhood pain: Negotiating the road to recovery

By LEBLIE DREYFOUS
 AP National Writer

They gave their baby boom children shelter, clean clothes, food to eat, bikes to ride, family vacations. They went to Little League games and summer potlucks, bandaged skinned knees and attended school plays. They weren't perfect, but they tried.

So why, these parents now wonder, are we being broadsided? Why are so many grown children coming home these days primed for confrontation?

When physical, psychological or sexual abuse are involved, the reasons are obvious. But in recent years, a whole range of subtler, less easily defined family issues have worked their way into the mainstream psyche.

More and more, "adult children" have re-examined their pasts and found shadows: parents who were emotionally distant or overly critical; who disciplined a little too harshly, or spent more time at the office than at home; who, wittingly or not, discouraged big dreams or eroded self-esteem.

Aging parents have a common response to these reproaches: "I did the best I could." Most adult children agree.

But still, many want to push beyond, to discuss and understand their disappointments. Confronting the past is integral to a lot of today's therapeutic, self-help and recovery programs.

"These parents have to understand: Their kids are the most therapized generation in history," said Victoria Secunda, 52, author of "When You and Your Mother Can't Be Friends" and "Women and Their Fathers."

"Young adults are doing what their parents couldn't — expressing emotions and dealing with losses. Raising these issues is incredibly important," she said. "But, like in any negotiation, it's important to approach it right."

If only it were simple. Though often eager to help, many older parents find the landscape foreign or outright rocky. Their child-rearing decisions were made long ago, influenced by the times and particular circumstances.

For generations raised during the Depression and World War II, making do was doing pretty well. Most reached adulthood without ever hearing the cry of their "wounded child within" or the siren song of self-help.

Bernice Bratter, director of Senior Health and Peer Counseling in Santa Monica, Calif., has watched parents in their 50s, 60s and even 70s struggle to understand the issues broached, sometimes angrily, by their grown children. Many feel guilty, at pains to right whatever is wrong.

But many others ask: What's the point here?

Bratter readily admits she is among those who subscribe to a "get over it" philosophy. "We're talking about different generations," she said, "different kinds of mindsets."

"It's natural for young people to explore and healthy to look at what's gone on in the family," said Bratter, 55.

"Where it crosses into difficulty is when people use that to keep themselves from moving on with their lives, where they say 'I'm not successful because Mommy didn't tell me I was wonderful.'"

All the parenting manuals weren't out there 30 years ago, and self-esteem was barely in the lexicon. Even a decade ago, talk shows and 12-step programs, therapy and support groups weren't nearly so widespread.

But it's all available now. And given the new awareness, many young adults are committed to breaking what they regard as destructive family patterns, behavior they believe ultimately hurts both parent and child.

That's fine, said psychologist Renana Brooks. "But it's not enough just to air your grievances," she said. "Once you do that, you've got to figure out what you're going to do with those feelings."

While she recognizes the liberation many have found in re-examining their childhood hurts, Brooks has problems with some of the recovery rhetoric.

"The movement makes certain assumptions, some of which have to do with believing that damage is irreversible, that all character flaws relate to early childhood wounds, and that it all reflects parental misconduct," she said from Washington, D.C.

"It's polarizing," said Brooks, who conducts blame-busting workshops. "The more the children demand that their parents take blame, the more the parents say, 'Grow up and forget about the past.'"

These cross-purposes are painful, and often hurtful. But with good groundwork, therapists say, half the battle is won. It's helpful for adult children to do gently, with empathy, into tender areas.

When Marvin Allen's son spoke up, the circumstances weren't exactly ideal: The exchange took place on stage during "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

The 48-year-old therapist and author of "In the Company of Men" was discussing models of fatherly supportiveness and sensitivity when suddenly his grown son "absolutely confronted me."

"He didn't say I cussed him out or beat him, like my dad did me. But I neglected him terribly. My wife and I got divorced. I was chasing women and money," said Allen, who lives in New Braunfels, Texas. "My sins hurt my son. I had to accept that."

It was a painful dose of honesty. But, perhaps because of his background in therapy, Allen was able to digest his son's comments fairly quickly. This is something many bewildered parents find difficult to do.

"To say my mom has been torn apart would be an understatement. She's totally caught in the middle," said Jennifer Bestor of Menlo Park, Calif., whose sister has withdrawn from the family.

"At some point, she said she was going into therapy and before we knew it, we were getting phone calls with incredibly harsh and nasty allegations. She claims she's a victim, that either directly or indirectly we're responsible for everything that's wrong in her life," said Bestor, 37. "To try to have a rational conversation around this is impossible."

Susan Forward, author of "Toxic Parents" and other popular self-help books, said she has helped thousands of adult children through the recovery process — a process she believes is both essential and, ultimately, healing.

"Every adult child I've ever worked with has laid awake at night just fantasizing how it would sound to hear a parent say 'I'm sorry. I didn't realize I hurt you that much,'" she said from Bel Air, Calif.

"I see confrontation as a chance for several things: One, to break through the denial and half-truths and secrecy and two, to determine what kind of real relationship you can have with your toxic parents."

Agreeing with "wounded child" guru John Bradshaw's estimate that the vast majority of American families are dysfunctional, Forward sees an enormous pool of people in need of reconciliation.

Many, however, believe such presumptions are tenuous. If not outright dangerous, stories of therapists coaxing their clients into false memories of childhood incest and other forms of abuse further undermine credibility.

Such doubts are especially hurtful to the legions of men and women coping with often long-repressed, very genuine histories of abuse. They also undermine those who want neither to overblow nor to diminish childhood pain.

The point is to promote understanding, and frank discussion about whatever is on a family member's mind. The trick is to do it constructively.

Unfortunately, Elizabeth Van Wormer, a clinical social worker in Portland, Ore., finds herself doing a lot of painful cleanup work.

"I have had experience with people who have gone to a one- or two-day workshop that provokes feelings, which can be very, very good," she said. "The downside is that getting in touch with your feelings is only the first step. You're left with simply an event, and who's out there to blame it on?"

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
 Sealed bids will be received by Seminole Community College, 100 Weldon Boulevard, Sanford, Florida 32771, (Owner) until 2:00 P.M., Local Time, July 20, 1993 at the office of A. J. Vavreck, Vice President for Administration and Finance, Room #307A in Building "J" for construction of SEMINOLE COMMUNITY COLLEGE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING. Bids will be opened publicly immediately thereafter in the Board of Trustees Meeting Room A 100 in the Administrative Building.
 All materials and equipment furnished and all work performed shall be in accordance with drawings, specifications and other contract documents pertaining thereto. SCHENKELSHULTZ, 200 E. Robinson Street, Suite 300, Orlando, Florida 32801.
 General Contractors may secure drawings and specification from SCHENKELSHULTZ, upon deposit of $200.00 per set, with a limit of two sets per Contractor. Deposit will be returned to Bidders who submit a bona fide bid, upon return to Architect of drawings and specifications in good condition within seven days after bid date. Additional sets are available to bidders at cost of reproduction and handling.
 Subcontractors, material men and other interested parties may obtain full or partial sets of drawings and specifications by payment of $1.00 per sheet of drawings and $25.00 per book of specifications, costs of which are not refundable. Selection of sheet, sheets or pages wanted is responsibility of purchaser.
 A Bid Bond properly executed by Bidder and a qualified Surety, or a Cashier's or Certified Check on any commercial bank licensed in Florida, for not less than five percent (5%) of amount of bid payable to Owner must accompany each bid as a guarantee that Bidder will not withdraw from competition for thirty (30) days after opening bids, and in event contract is awarded to Bidder, he will, within ten (10) days thereafter enter into contract and furnish required Performance Bond and Payment Bond, failing which he shall forfeit deposit as liquidated damages. Bid Bond, Performance Bond and Payment Bond must be secured from an agency of the Surety Company having an established place of business in Florida and licensed to conduct business therein.
 Bid Bond or check of unsuccessful bidders will be returned within thirty (30) days after opening bids, according to the address each bid to Seminole Community College, 100 Weldon Boulevard, Sanford, Florida 32773. ATTN: A.J. Vavreck, Vice President of Administration and Finance.
 Mark each bid "Sealed Bid for Construction of SEMINOLE COMMUNITY COLLEGE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING." Owner reserves right to waive informants in any bid to reject any or all bids in whole or in part, with or without cause, and/or to accept bid which Owner considers to be in his best interest.
 Drawings and specifications will be issued only by the Architect and all questions relative to bidding shall be directed to his office.

Soccer player one of best in the state

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

COCOA — Frank Cipolla doesn't quite understand what all the fuss is about.

He considers himself just another high school soccer player, an American teenager who inherited the love of the sport from his parents and who enjoys playing on teams with friends he's had since childhood.

But, by near unanimous acclaim, Frank Cipolla, a 1993 graduate of Lyman High School, is not just another soccer player.

In fact, if all the honors he's received in the last few months are an accurate indication, he's among the best players in the state and may be the state's best player in his age group.

Cipolla scoffs at the idea.

"There are tons of great players in the state of Florida," said Cipolla during a telephone interview from the Cocoa Expo Center. "It's not necessarily true that I'm the best player. I just work hard and try to be the best player I can be."

Evidence would suggest that he's done that.

Earlier this year, Cipolla was selected by Gatorade as Florida's high school player of the year. He was named to the 1992 N.C.S.A.A.'s All-American team and was a 1992 All-South selection. Cipolla also was named to the Florida Athletic Coaches Association's Class 4A All-State team.

This past week, Cipolla was in Cocoa with the Florida Under-18 team, playing in the United States Youth Soccer Association's Olympic Development Program Southeast Regional tournament.

Dancer kicks up her heels

By BANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The taps pop, fringe sways and sequins sparkle as a smiling group of dancers take the floor at a retirement village. The dancers' shapely legs, swathed in black fishnet stockings, are the topic of conversation and perhaps envy from audience members.

None of the members of the Happy Hoofers dance troupe is under 55 years old. Two members of the group are over 80.

Admitting to being "60 something," Elda Nichols is one of the original 12 dancers in the troupe that began in August 1990 and has grown to 40 members. She, like several members of the group, once taught dance.

A Longwood resident since 1954, she is active in the community and is president of the Longwood Civic League Womens Club. With the exception of what she dubs a short intermission, Nichols has been the club president for seven years. She said she has accepted the office because other members won't take the helm.

"I've begged and pleaded," she says, "but I can't get anyone to run for office." She keeps working as an officer on events to make sure the club continues.

Each spring the club sponsors an Old Timers Reception which draws from 75 to 100 former Longwood residents back to the city. A variety show featuring local officials was a fund-raiser for the club but was abandoned due to costs in insuring the event, Nichols recalled.

The club is housed in a historic building near the downtown. "It is really one of the original buildings in Longwood," she added, noting two more well known restored structures, the Bradlee-McIntyre House and Inside-Outside House are really transplants which were moved to the city from Altamonte Springs.

"We don't really claim them," Nichols joked, "but our building really is a historic building in Longwood." The building dates from 1870 and at various times was used as a church and school before becoming home to the club.

Nichols recalls when the main street was a two-lane road and people at the post office (across from the present location) knew everyone in town. Longwood was surrounded by orange groves years ago and at one time even had a turpentine factory, Nichols said.

Several years ago, Nichols said she worked

Super salesman just enjoys what he does

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Pepper Iller has always been a super salesman, he said, but he has also always had a creative streak that longed to be nurtured.

Iller, who owns and operates Pepperdent, a dental supply company, from his home in Longwood, had majored in journalism at Norwalk (Calif.) Junior College, but rejected a career in newspapers when he found there was little financial opportunity in the profession.

Instead, he opted for additional business courses and decided to pursue a sales career.

He began at R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in Southern California. He moved quickly through the ranks there, setting national sales records.

After several years with the company, he heard of a business opportunity with a dental supply company that was recruiting the top sales people in the country and decided to give them an opportunity to make their presentation.

"Things were going well (at R.J. Reynolds). I was setting sales records and making $18,000 a year (in the early 1970s)," he said. "I had three children, a house and a mortgage. It was difficult to think about leaving."

day, Cipolla had a goal and an assist.

For Cipolla, who will attend the University of South Florida in Tampa this fall, this is his fourth year in the Olympic Development Program. Last year, he was named to the Southeast Region team and ended up missing eight Lyman games due to regional team commitments.

"The first time I tried out (for the ODP squad) was when I was going into my freshman year," recalled Cipolla. "The first year they had tryouts, I didn't hear about it. But some of my friends went and they told me all about it."

"It sounded like so much fun, I tried out the next year and every year since then."

For Cipolla, that's what it's all about, having fun. He learned the game from his father, a former semi-professional player in Italy, and has been kicking around an inflated bladder since he was 3 years old.

"My dad worked with me in the backyard, kicking the ball around," Cipolla said. "Both he and my mom are from Sicily. Everybody in the house wants to go to the World Cup games in Orlando next year."

It's that love of the sport that has kept the work Cipolla has put in improving his game from seeming like work. It also serves as an emotional anchor, keeping Cipolla from putting himself above the game.

"We were training at the University of Central Florida one day when a coach told me that I had been nominated for the Gatorade player of the year award," Cipolla said. "I was flattered, but I didn't think anything more of it until Coach (Ray) Sandridge (the Lyman coach) told me I had won it."

That was awesome, but I don't think of myself that way. I just go out and play and try to have fun while I'm doing it."

At the risk of sounding cynical, it's easy to have fun when you had the kind of season Cipolla had for Lyman this year. In 20 games for the Greyhounds, Cipolla scored 24 goals and had 15 assists while leading Lyman to the Class 4A state championship game, where the Greyhounds lost to Valrico-Bloomington 2-1 on penalty kicks.

Cipolla also said that he never would have been considered for any of the individual awards, much less won any of them, if it hadn't been for the contributions of his Lyman teammates.

"Without our defense and without our midfield, none of this (winning individual awards) would have happened," said Cipolla. "We had a real solid team at Lyman this year."

What helps Cipolla deal with the disappointment of the past is the bright promise of his future.

LONGWOOD — As the hot summer sun beats down sending temperatures soaring, the moss draped limbs of a giant live oak provide a shady respite from the heat.

John Bistline opens the door to the historic Bradlee-MacIntyre House in Longwood's historic district. Active in two historical societies, Bistline has a long family history in Longwood. Some of the historic homes were built by his great grandfather.

Josiah Clouser, Bistline's great grandfather, came to Florida from Pennsylvania in answer to an advertisement in northern newspapers by Edward W. Henck, who was seeking a master carpenter to build a hotel in Longwood. Bistline and his brother, Fred, bought and renovated their great grandparents' first home, Clouser Cottage on Church Avenue into a gift shop in the mid-1980s.

Although his brother remained in Longwood.

John left in 1944 and worked for years in Schenectady, N.Y. He and his wife returned to

Iller

But, Iller said, his wife encouraged him to not sell himself short.

"She said she thought I had some special gifts that would transcend the tobacco industry," he said.

In addition, he said, she had often suggested that he should not be in the industry. He said he often heard a poem that began "Tobacco is a filthy weed."

Iller traveled to Connecticut to meet the president of the other company, and despite their offer of only $1,000 a month, guaranteed for only eight months, he left Reynolds.

The company took off and in his first year, Iller made nearly $100,000.

He said things were going well. He was making good money, he was able to bring his wife and children on sales trips during the summer and he was once again setting sales records.

He wrote a certificate of gold ownership that is still used by dentists and supply companies dealing in the sale of gold, silver and platinum grindings.

"It was written up in the Wall Street Journal," Iller said.

He was promoted quickly through the ranks of the company to the position of executive vice president.

He was sent to Orlando to open a distribution center here.

The company was doing so well that after a few years the company was the target of a buyout. He said that he knew that when another company took over they would bring their own people and he might lose out.

"Or I might get stuck in New England," he said. "I'm a southern California boy. That isn't where I belong."

Iller took the opportunity to start his own company, Peppercorn. For several years, he said the company operated on a shoestring. The family home was mortgaged three times.

"And our credit was ruined," he said. "We still have to pay cash for nearly everything."

Business is better now, with 4,300 accounts. And Iller has taken some time to satisfy his creative side.

"I'm still a frustrated journalist, I guess," he said.

Several years ago, Iller organized an antidrug video that included a mock basketball game between Lake Mary and Lake Brantley high schools. He was able to bring all the players together and to have much of the $25,000 production cost defrayed.

The public service announcement aired on all three networks and was featured on the Today show.

These days, in the evenings, after a full day at Peppercorn, he serves as a consultant to television producers. While most of the writing and other creative aspects of projects is left to others, Iller offers business advice. He said, however, that he has occasionally boldly requested writing changes on a project.

"But I know business, and business is business, and that is where I can give advice," he said.

Iller credits his wife Sylvia with his successes.

"She really deserves the credit for all the good things that have happened to us," he said. "She's always been a real helpmate. She's a patient, understanding and has been a real stability in our household."

The Illers have been married for 28 years. They have six children ranging in age from 2 to 27.

"We had some jaw in life children, but it was by design," he said.

Iller has been a success at all that he has done, he said, because he enjoys his life and makes the best of what he has.

"I just enjoy whatever I do," he said.

Mike Kott displays blister packs of Star Wars figures.

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Mike Kott has turned his childhood hobby of reading comic books into a multi-million-dollar business. Intergalactic Trading Co.

The Longwood company ships chirping Star Trek emblems and trading cards of favorite sci-fi characters to 30,000 customers throughout the world, including several in the former Eastern Bloc countries. Kott says his company sells more than $1 million annually in retail sales and "many times more" in wholesale trade.

Sales have increased at an average of 30 percent annually for the past four years, he says, and probably would have reached 50 percent annual growth except for the recent recession.

He employs 20 people in an out-of-the-way warehouse near Longwood and is part owner of two comic book and science fiction memorabilia retail stores. Intergalactic Comics and Collectables in Fern Park and Intergalactic Sci-Fi World on Orlando's tourist mecca, International Drive.

All of that started from the tailgate of his car.

"I visualized it being successful, but not employing 20 or 30 people."

Bistline

Longwood in 1983.

"I just enjoy history," Bistline said of his involvement with historic preservation. He has compiled a family history for his grandchildren. In doing so, Bistline said he learned more about his family, too. His research revealed the Clousers and Bistlines arrived from Germany in the 1700s and settled in Philadelphia, PA.

Bistline, a member of the Central Florida Society for Historic Preservation and the Seminole County Historical Society and is also chairman of the 17th annual Longwood Arts and Craft Festival which is the major fundraiser for the Central Florida Society. The group was formed in 1973 to save the Bradlee-Macintyre House and the Inside-Outside House from destruction. Both houses were moved from Altamonte Springs to Longwood. The society meets in the Bradlee house and conducts guided tours of the home.

Although it is the first day of summer, Bistline is thinking ahead to the November arts festival. Hundreds of letters to potential exhibitors sit on a table in a parlor of the Bradlee-McIntyre House waiting to be mailed.

The festival, which is the weekend before Thanksgiving, draws thousands of visitors to Longwood's historic district. "We probably have 350 people on our waiting list," Bistline said, of potential exhibitors. "There is a three year wait for a booth."

Although about $1,000 in prizes are awarded and a best of show award given, Bistline said most exhibitors come because it is a lucrative show. He said about 50 booths are available for new exhibitors each year.

Care with dignity offered to down-on-their-luck residents

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — For more than seven years, the South Seminole Christian Sharing Center has offered care with dignity to the down-on-their-luck of the southern sections of the county.

"We try not to encourage people to become regulars at the Sharing Center," says director Angie Romagosa. "We try to encourage the dignity of the individual."

Supported by a network of 50 churches along with public and corporate grants, the Sharing Center offers temporary relief to people who suddenly find themselves financially out of sorts due to a job loss or a medical emergency.

The center, located at 1680 N. County Road 427, offers free food, clothing, a tank of gas, even a rent or mortgage payment, to help families become stable again.

"If somebody needs a new battery in their car so they can go to a job, I'd buy 'em a battery so they won't stay at home for two weeks then come to me needing a mortgage payment."

"I will consider anything that helps stabilize the family," says Romagosa. "If somebody needs a new battery in their car so they can go to a job, I'd buy 'em a battery so they won't stay at home for two weeks then come to me needing a mortgage payment."

The center now serves an average of 350 families monthly, says Romagosa, but she says that figure is increasing steadily. The center serves about 500 families during the holiday season, she says.

Romagosa is the only paid employee of the center, but she's helped by volunteers who assist in food and clothing distribution and clerical duties. The entire center is operated on about $100,000 annually, says Romagosa. Half of that amount goes to the direct financial assistance of the needy.

"I'm real proud of that," says Romagosa.

Although some programs offered by the Sharing Center do require participants to meet minimum federal income levels, most assistance is offered regardless of income level.

The center can be reached by calling 260-9155. Donations of food, clothing, money, and personal care items are sought.

Principal believes in only the best for his students

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Carlton Henley has been principal at Longwood's Lyman High School for over three decades.

"He has become a fixture here," assistant principal Kay Bush said. "He is an integral part of the Longwood community."

Henley was the principal of the school when the parents of recent graduates were students at the school.

Known as a stern disciplinarian and a fierce fighter for the best for his students, Henley has been a strong advocate for the youngsters who attend his school.

The school is one of the pilot schools for the state's Tech Prep program and Henley has placed a priority on technology education.

Longwood's historical significance

The Longwood Village Inn, once a hotel and now an office building, was saved from the wrecking ball over the years. It has gone on to become a significant landmark in Longwood, and was recently considered as a site for City Hall. Commissioners turned down the idea.

Kott

Kott says his interest in comics and collectables began in boyhood as a casual reader of Justice League and Flash Gordon comics. His main hobby was collecting baseball cards. He still has the original cards he collected then.

"I've always been something of an accumulator," says Kott.

His interest in comics waned as he grew older, but renewed as an engineering student in New York. After graduating, Kott moved to St. Petersburg where he worked as a soils engineer, someone who tests the ground to assure it can support buildings. To earn extra money, he began selling comic books at local flea markets on weekends. The business continued to grow and Kott decided to go into the science fiction collectables trade full-time.

"I found I was making as much on Saturdays and Sundays sitting on the tailgate of my car as I was working 50 hours as a soils engineer," he says.

Kott established his new business in Longwood in 1976 with a small advertisement in a national science fiction magazine. His first item was a set of trading cards featuring Star Wars characters. A second set was added and the list grew.

Kott says his company now stocks 25,000 different items at prices ranging from $2 to $2,000, including limited edition plates and toys. His most popular items are collecting cards, followed by books and magazines. One popular item at trade shows are the Star Trek communicator pins which chirp when tapped, just like the ones on the television shows and movies.

"I can go to a show and at the end of the day, I'll realize I've sold 50 of them," Kott says. "And there'll be five other vendors there and each one of them will have sold 50. I don't know what it is."

Kott says a survey several years ago showed many of his customers were between the ages of 18 and 30, professional and unusually, about half women.

"When you go into a comic book store, about 95 percent of the customers are male," Kott says. "About 50 percent of ours are women."

"People are going back to the things they had when they were nine or 10 years old and threw out and wish they had again," said Kott.

And what of Kott? He's back to doing what he likes best. Reading comics and collecting baseball cards.

"The good thing about being in this business is you get the first crack at stuff when it comes in and at a good price," Kott says.

Henley

When additions and renovations were made to the school several years ago.

Lyman High works in conjunction with Seminole Community College on many of their technology classes.

Henley has said that he believes the first priority of a school should be to "prepare students to meet and deal with the uncertainties that life brings."

He has seen to it that he has surrounded himself with strong teachers and administrators and the school has won many awards for excellence in education.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask, "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3". Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!
