Florida Sheriff's Association President James Scott as a springboard to stiffen the anticrime emphasis of his campaign against Republican Jack Eckerd.

With Scott at his side, Graham committed himself to higher pay for law enforcement officials, more funds to upgrade their training, increased appropriations for state attorneys and public defenders and retterated his support for the death penalty and a statewide Commission on Investigation to focus public attention on organized crime figures.

He backed off his previous hard-line support for a single prosecutor for the statewide grand jury, saying he will allow the present multi-headed approach to work. He conceded his approach has the support of state attorneys, but denied he adopted it as a political trade for their active help in his race. Scott and most Florida sheriffs supported Attorney General Robert Shevin in the Democratic primary, but Scott said Shevin exaggerated when he called Graham "soft on "His voting record on law enforcement legislation is good," said Scott, promising to try to get all sheriffs to suppor Graham over Eckerd.

Graham said he aims to reduce the reliance of state attorneys on plea bargaining by giving them more money to investigate and prosecute suspects so they won't be forced to trade reduced penalties for guilty pleas or testimony against fellow conspirators. On another subject, Graham told reporters he will vote against five of the nine proposed constitutional amendments on the Nov. 7 ballot. He will vote "no" on the basic document making 80 changes in present law; and single propositions abolishing the elected cabinet, giving the appointed Public Service Commission constitutional status, giving tax breaks to special interests, and legalizing casino gambling. He will vote "yes" on the state "little Equal Rights Amendment; merit retention of county and circuit judges; creating an appointed citizens Board of Education and giving constitutional status to the Board of Regents; and single member legislative districts.

Mideast: Hostage To Violence

The feverish Middle East continues to preempt he news and history of our time.

The outlook seems good for success in constructing a peace treaty out of the broad Camp David understandings recently reached by President Carter, President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin.

Reports from Cairo indicate President Sadat would like to sign the treaty at Mt. Sinai on or before Nov. 19, the first anniversary of his precedent-shattering peace pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and President Carter has already accepted an invitation to be on hand.

Even with all the uncertainties attending Middle Eastern affairs, Egyptian optimism is believable and, therefore, a reasonable source of encouragement.

This is so because it reflects a basic decision by President Sadat and his government that led originally to the Jerusalem visit and has been reaffirmed subsequently by the Camp David agreements; that was Egypt's determination not to submit the peace it so desperately needs to the veto of either Arab extremists or the Soviet Union.

The Egyptians and Israelis were spurred into bilateral negotiations last year by the prospect of a Geneva conference, with full participation by the Russians and members of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, that was being supported by the Carter administration.

Whatever President Sadat failed to accomplish originally on his trip to Jerusalem, he succeeded thereby in freezing out the Soviets and the PLO from his peace negotiations.

Recently in Cairo, President Sadat spelled out his Egypt-first policy in the strongest language he has yet used: "I shall never put the destiny of Egypt... in the hands of those children, those murderers" (the Syrians and Palestinians), he

But the Middle East, fragmented by the Arab-Israeli struggle and opposing Arab factions is, nevertheless; strangely interlinked in such a way that any one element affects all of the others. The danger now, and perhaps the one thing that could derail an Egyptian-Israeli settlement, is the crisis in Lebanon. Syria, for the moment at least, has pulled back from an all-out drive by its 35,000-man peacekeeping force to crush Christian irregulars the last effective resistance to complete Syrian domination of Lebanon. The Syrian bombardment of East Beirut has ceased under pressure from a strong United Nations resolution and the threat of Israeli intervention. tic word and military deed.

Israelis have served notice that they will not abide Syria's conquest of Lebanon and the military threat this would pose along the once peaceful northern border.

A war between Syria and Israel over Lebanon could very well abort Egypt's peace treaty with

Thus, despite unusual optimism in Washington over the construction of a treaty that could end 30 years of bloodshed in the Sinai, peace in the Middle East is still hostage to violence.

This uncertainty should make the world all the more grateful if President Carter, President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin are able to consumate a treaty as planned in November.

The Dems Accept 'Indexing'

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Imitation may be the sincerest form of flattery, but there are times when the compliment is a little hard to take. Consider, for example, what has been hap-pening to the Grand Old Party this year on the twin issues of inflation and taxes. For most of the last decade, Republicans on Capitol Hill and elsewhere have been vigorously denouncing both inflation and high taxes, only to see their warnings ignored by the public and their programs ignominously defeated by the majority Democrats. Now that the voters have finally aroused, who do you suppose is reaping the benefit? The Democrats, that's who, plagarizing great chunks of heretofore Republican economic destrices

Congress could easily have been written by an' all-Republican cast, but even it pales in comparison to recommendations contained in a forthcoming report of the Joint Economic The JEC is comprised of 12 Democrats and 8

Republicans, drawn equally from the House and Senate. Although it has no legislative jurisdiction, its economic analyses carry considerable eight with Congress as a whole. And the JEC, with the approval of its

Democratic majority, is about to come out in favor of inflation-proofing the tax system by, of all things, indexing. There is nothing intellectually disgraceful about indexing. On the whole, it is an eminently sensible notion that should have been incorporated into the tax structure years ago. But until now, it has been the private preserve of the Republican Party, accorned and feared by Damocrata, especially liberals.

The details of indexing sound complicated to a layman, but the results are simple enough. With an indexed tax system, wage-earners, susinessmen, investors and small savers would pay income or capital gains taxes only on real increases — not nominal gains due solely to

Under the current system, a worker who wins and 8 percent pay increase this year will see his entire wage gain wiped out by inflation. But he may nonetheless wind up paying more in income percent interest on a passbook savings acc adding insult to injury.

Indexing, as outlined in the soon-to-bepublished JEC report, would eliminate such distortions and inequities by widening bracket limits, exemptions, standard deductions and tax credits at a rate equal to the rise in the Consumer Price Index the preceding year. A wage-earner would then pay higher taxes only on the portion of his pay increase exceeded the inflation rate. One reason liberals have opposed indexing in the past is that the federal government receives an inflation dividend under the existing system. with revenues rising faster than real growth in number who equate the World Series in approximately the same terms today and that's worthy of note, if for no other reason than many of those who feel that strongly about it get so carried away, they frequently become more emotionally involved than the players themselves.

But Congress never lets the dividend grow too big. When it gets out of hand, as it is now, Congress steps in to vote a major tax reduction so that the government's share of the total economic pie remains roughly the same.

Winning the pennant represents a far more satisfying sense of accomplishment than winning the World Series to most players.

And it should, because it involves all their physical and mental capacities over six months and 162 games, compared with a week and a half and seven games at most that it takes for the World Talk to Bobby Thomson about that sometime. Thomson, you

"We were so emotionally drained after that, the World Series against the Yankees that year was something of an anticlimax," says Thomson. It showed, too, as the Yankees beat the Giants in the series in six games.

The interse fan interest in this ongoing World Series between the Yankees and Dodgers is reflected by the unprecedented coverage it is getting from the various forms of the media. Normally, if you were a ball player you'd figure this was good, but ball players don't always figure normally. Most of them feel it is the media more than the opposition which produces most of the "pressure" on th n that respect, although if they are they must share some of the responsibility for trying to live up to what they feel is their public Tremember one well-known catcher fretting and nervously biting his nails on the eve of a World Series game and saying to a businessman acquaintance of his, "Sure, you go to work tomorrow, and if you make a mistake, it's nothing anyone's gonna hold against you. But if I strike out, 20 million people watching me on TV are gonna remember it the rest of their lives and never let me forget it, either."

Don Sutton, who goes against the Yankees' Catfish Hunter tonight, hoping to keep the Dodgers alive in game No. 6, is as susceptible to pressure as anyone else, but he knows how not to let it get the best of him. Every professional should have that capability. Not all do, though. "Pressure is an overused word," Sutton says.

"Look," he goes on, "nobody's going to shoot me at sunrise on Wednesday morning if I lose Tuesday night. My wife and children are still going to love me. And I'm still going to have to drive in the car pool on Wednesday." By looking at tonight's game that way, Sutton takes some of the pressure off himself. He also has that little speech of his down put and the reason I know that is because I heard him make exactly the same one during last year's World Series. The Yankees were up then, three games to one, and if they won the fifth game they would have closed out the Dodgers. Setton was tapped to pitch that game and he went out and beat the Yankees,

That kept the Dodgers alive, at least for one more game. Sutton is being asked to do the same thing again now. He hopes he can. Either way, he's not fixing to get up at sunrise tomorrow.

They'll Toast Goblins, Ghosts And Witches Brew

Ghosts, and Witches' Brew" is the theme of a joint meeting of the Greater Seminole Toastmistress Club and the Dew Sweepers Toastmasters

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m., Thursday, at the Altamonte Springs Civic Center on Longwood Avenue at Highland. Members of both clubs, who at one point were more "scared and shaky" at the thought of public speaking than of the thought of goblins, ghosts and witches, will be sharing the spotlight as they utilize their newly acquired speaking skills in humorous, serious and nformative speeches. The Toastmistress Club. which is an international organization, celebrates 40 years of education and leadership training during the month of October. The joint meeting was planned to commemorate Foun-

Head Lice Report Highest Yet

Herald Staff Writer istrict confirmed today she has received more reported cases of head lice among the district's elementary school pupils then in any previous year.

And the increase in reported head lice cases has prompted Supt. William Layer to issue a memo to all acheol principals outlining the procedures for detecting such cases and dealing with them.

Although the exact number of head lice cases reported thus far was not available; "I have had more cases brought to my attention this year then any other year," and Marien field, consultant coordinator of health education and health services for Seminole County's school district.
