One of the most encouraging signs this year has been the fact been getting off their apathy and getting involved. At the ear the Good Samaritan Home which has serve munity for 22 years faced closing because its old frame building did not code. Things looked mighty dim for Mother Ruby Wilson and her friends but the community came to their rescue contributing to a building fund ROUND and gaining an extension. A modern concrete structure is now being built as a result.

County Growing, Prosperous

That Was The Year

By JANE CASSELBERRY

Seminole County kicked off the new decade of the '70s with a continued growth and prosperity not evident in many parts of the nation, where the current inflationary recession is being reflected in cutbacks and unemployment. Many of the projects and goals long sought for have been fulfilled in the past year or are now within our grasp. But we have to take the bitter with the sweet and predictably accidents and crime also have been on the increase

The 1970 census revealed a 50.3 per cent growth in the county over the past 10 years or a current total of 82,656 residents. Altamonte Springs showed a 249 per cent gain and now has 4,225 persons, while Casselberry, the county's second largest municipality, county 7,550 or a gain of 207 per cent. Population in North Orlando went up 88 per cent to 1,142, and in Longwood 84 per cent to 3,108. Sanford with a population of 17,210 showed a loss over 1960 and protested in vain. Oviedo with 1,875 also showed a decrease.

Again this New Year's Eve you will participate in merriment and gaiety of viewing the tired tents and silently steal away." To make way for the exuberant appearance of baby New Year. And, again, as in previous years your laughter will momentarily cease as you hastily and painfully recall the story of your life for 1970. The first few scenes will be enough to convince you that you have not reached the hopes, dreams and wishes which you had resolved. that a This reality shocks you because you have been so earnest in your intentions. You resolved to be a better church member, a beller friend, a beller parent. Just where did you fail?

This question echoes down the corridors of time. A student resolves to make better grades and receives failures instead - contest between the two if it When you hate someone it other fellow." a couple desires a Christian home and end up in the divorce courts - The prodigal son leaves home to find happiness and freedom and lands in the swine pasture - why? Didn't they a have worthy goals? Yes, but they traveled day by day, the wrong road. The destination cannot be reached unless the road which leads to it is followed step by step.

Granted the student had a worthy goal, but he tried to achieve it by traveling the road of a party tonight, another tomorrow and another the next night. The couple had the commendable goal of a Christian home but they didn't attend church, teach the children the way of God, or consult the will of God in everyday decisions. The prodigal son had a justifiable ambition but he tried to achieve it through riotous living. All of these persons had worthy goals. However, their destinations were not reached because they refused to travel the roads that led to them.

Obviously, then, it is one thing to desire a happy family life, respect of your friends, and the nearness of God, but tical habits and choices. Are you on this road? "Happy New Year" is made on purpose. For unlamented 1970 must be regarded as more valuable for its exposures of weaknesses than its production of strong developments at any level - local, state the county as a whole is considered. A sweeping reor national Today is a time for "resolutions" and for the friendly visit among friends and neighbors. Yet among the former the critical conditions which confront every conscientious citizen should temper the resolves with needed hard-eyed appraisals.

Looked at from this point of view, the Greater Sanford picture can be seen through very dim glasses ance and vision in planning, that is UP! or those which are clear, yet not too rosy. Opportunities abound for improvement. But what makes this different from recent years is that already there are indications that oft-postponed actions, which have thwarted realization, are taking where Gov.-elect Reubin Askew (D) will take over widespread after the historic announcement.

Clear Air Bill

Tough is the word for the compromise air pollution abatement bill which has received the final approval of Congress. It is doubtful if any piece of environmental legislation to emerge so far stands to have a greater impact on American industry and on our population at

The mandate to Congress to write stern legislation on this subject was clear. The time for talk about our dirty air is past. Yet meeting its own challenge Congress has created new ones for government, industry and the public.

In demanding that auto manufacturers come up by 1975 with cars that produce virtually no pollution, the government is assuming the unprecedented power to shut down production lines in one of our basic industries if the reouirement is not met.

Only the ingenuity of Detroit engneers now stands in the way of what could be an agonizing confrontation between the governmen acting in the public's behalf, and the interests of millions of employes and shareholders who make up a broad segment of that same public

Presuming that auto makers can meet their deadline, and there is reason to believe they can, we are faced with a further problem that is now only vaguely discernible - providing for the servicing and enforcement necessary to assure that smog-free cars designed by Detroit continue to perform as they are supposed to after they reach the highway.

The legislation also gives the government broad new powers to demand a reduction in air pollution from factories and other stationary sources. The effect this will have on the price of many goods and services is obvious, underscoring the fact that clean air in our industrialized society cannot be achieved without paying a price.

Another new power is given to the public itself. The way is cleared for individuals or groups of citizens to bring legal action seeking to force compliance with anti-pollution standards. Certainly this power will have to be used with responsibility if it is not to lead to litigation that is more of a nuisance than a legitimate expression of public concern.

In all, this new legislation is strong medicine. It must therefore be administered judiciously. Both the public and the government agencies charged with enforcement of the new New laws must match persistence with patience in birthda striving toward the goal of assuring a cleaner, become a legend in his own impair the efficiency of the to his subordinates that they more healthy atmosphere for this and future time. renerations

* * ! Lt. Gov. Ray Osborne - possibly building the basis for a 1974 campaign effort - has decided not to return to St. Petersburg but to open a law practice in Boca Raton instead. The 37-year-old attorney, leaving office Tuesday, is one of the brighter hopes the Florida Republican Party was left with after its shattering defeat in the Nov. 3 general election. Osborne's move could establish him in the political as well as business community of the thriving Palm Beach-Broward Counties area, which contains the state's largest concentration of Republicans. He already has solid credentials in the two other GOP bastions, Pinellas and Orange Counties. The outgoing lieutenant governor announced plans to go to Boca Ration at a Christmas party held last week by Gov. $247,500, a loan from HUD in county which is being conduct Claude Kirk's staff.

County and city governmental faces will be changed somewhat Tuesday, along with the state when Reubin Askew will promises.

It will be interesting to see who takes over the chairmanship of the County Commission. Only Edward Yarborough is the veteran of that five-man board. Starting full terms of four years will be Greg Drummond and John Kimbrough. ## Orlando's Newest With A Big Future

Located just off Interstate-4 near the Florida Turnpike is Cypress Creek Golf Club. This is the first golf course to be built in Orlando in more than 40 years.

Built by Major Realty, Cypress Creek held a press tournament a couple of weeks ago that was attended by more than 100 of the local news media. The tournament just happened to be on a day Orlando was visited for a brief time by rain and 20 to 30 MPH winds for the whole day. Quite a few of Orlando's newsmen are pretty fair golfers, but I don't think there were over three or four rounds under 80. With water lining 16 out of the 18 holes, coupled with the wind, I would estimate that no less than 400 golf balls were lost at sea. I even met one fellow who had to finish his last two holes with a borrowed ball. The smiling bear was no exception to the rule as seven of his better hit balls found the creek.

And now to the fruitful part of this article. In all seriousness, Cypress Creek Golf Club, designed by Lloyd Clifton, who is one of Florida's most talented designers, was built for people who love to play golf in beautiful surroundings. Stretching over 170 acres of lash growth, golfers will find the excitement of challenge on each of the 18 holes.

The water of Cypress Creek and Shingle Creek have been channeled to form a network of parallel and lateral water, winding its way throughout the course and threatening penalty strokes on all but two holes. The new course is in absolutely beautiful condition.

Cypress Creek is to be a private club available to Orlando residents. Special provisions for non-residents are also avail-able. Membership will be in a non-equity basis only. Guests will be permitted only when playing with a member.

In addition to a super championship 18-hole golf course, Cypress Creek provides other recreational opportunities for its members. Complementing a beautiful modern elubhouse is a unique Y-shaped swimming pool. Four tennis courts have also been built. Breakfast and lunch can be enjoyed in the clubhouse, or you may relax in the bar and grill.

I believe that we can look toward Cypress Creek's becoming one of Florida's finest golf courses. This could be the spot for some top golf events.

Some people may worry about keeping up with The Joneses, but I worry about keeping up with The Brownings.

How do you suppose Elizabeth ever managed to write such moving love poems as those found in "Sonnets from the Portuguese" while she was sick in bed and Robert was in the kitchen rattling pans?

Last week when I was in bed with the flu, all I felt like writing to my husband was a crank note. I wonder if Robert ever brought Elizabeth a flaming lamb chop on a paper plate for dinner. If he did, I'll bet he didn't give her a spoon to eat it with.

"What's that brown stuff all over your shirt?" I asked my husband, as I spooned up the lamb chop.

"It's coffee," he said, "I left the lid off while it was perk-

Okay, so he isn't Betty Crocker. But it's more than just hat. There were ominous sounds from the kitchen which any woman, no matter how sick, would rise on one elbow about. Like a bottle cap being gnawed up by the garbage disposer. Or shattering glass followed by low mutterings. And the unidentified thud, which could have been anything from the collapse of a tired husband to the capsizing of the refrigerator.

"Are you all right, dear?" I called out weakly in my best Victorian voice and he hollered back, "Hell, no, I'm not all right. The ironing board just jumped out at me from the broom loset. I think my nose is fractured."

Somehow, verbal exchanges like that cancel out the romantic poem inspiration.

But they certainly make you want to get well. I picked up a pencil and paper, thought for a minute, and jotted, "When will you be out of my kitchen? Let me count the days." 6 The Brownings may not have put it quite that way, but that's about as fired up as a girl can get on one burned lamp

JUST IN CASE you gals ever feel inadequate in your role as homemaker . ... try getting sick and leave the works in command of friend husband. You'll recover in a hurry ... your home will, no doubt, be a wreck and so will your mate. Odds are that whatever you do or don't do won't be mentioned for a long time . . . and you'll really be appreciated !

A small metal safe was removed from its closet hiding place and a box containing cash was from under the back bar, according to reports. Police were notified of the loss this morning when the club opened. A clanging burglar alarm late Saturday night prevented burglars from getting into the safe for holding bank night deposits but the intruders were able to remove a combination from one safe. Entry to the bank was made by removing a door from a roof fire escape.

Police believe the yeggs were after the betting receipts from the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club, which normally use the night depository for usually large deposits. The alarm sounded shortly after 9:30 p.m. but the burglars eluded police who are headquartered within sight of the bank. Police Chief Ben Butler this morning advised official boards and committees in the county such as the county insurance committee, board of plumbing examiners, board of electrical examiners, water control and conservation advisory committee, board of adjustment, zoning and planning commission, board of adjustment and appeals to the building code, commissioners of various fire districts, long range planning committee for recreation, Seminole County Historical Commission, board of building contractor examiners, agricultural advisory committee, and Orange-Seminole Joint Planning Commission.

NORTH ORLANDO - Village Council, at 7:30 meeting tonight, faces the task of filling the vacancy in the office of the mayor caused by the resignation of Mayor Clifford Jordan to run for the County Commission. Jordan's resignation is effective today, so council must make the decision. The appointment will be effective until the municipal elections on March 16

Also to be discussed tonight is the hiring of a new police patrolman. Fred Scott Kenneth has been recommended by the police department, and presumably will receive the stamp of approval from council. A report will be given upon meetings of the charter committee by Councilman Richard Commission also will consider hiring an additional communication clerk for the police department before adjourning the old commission.

According to the agenda there is no mention of naming a replacement for Commissioner McDonald on the Sanford Industrial Commission (SIC). Since McDonald represents the commission on the city's industrial recruitment board, it had been thought that either J. H. Crapps or Gordon Meyer would be named to succeed McDonald.

If the commission fails to name a replacement for Mc-Donald, there will be no city commissioner at the Thursday morning SIC meeting, when that body convenes at 8:30 a.m.

Rates will remain the same, barring an increase in the commercial rate at the new central landfill. The new contract will be for two years. Council will take under consideration th
