FDLRS Offers Special Ed Teaching Materials

By DEE GATRELL
Herald Correspondent

FDLRS has nothing to do with fiddles as the sound may suggest. The letters form the acronym for Florida Diagnostic and Learning Resources System. FDLRS has 18 centers throughout Florida and is a statewide network of people who support special education.

Parents, teachers or any interested persons may call FDLRS and make an appointment to spend a few hours or an entire day in the library and lab located at 800 S. Deland St., Orlando.

"What could you possibly do to spend a full day there?" "You would first go to the library where you could check out commercially prepared materials for your child. The remainder of the time could be spent in the laboratory making a game or activity to take home for working with your exceptional child," says Mrs. Terry Hoffman, Seminole County contact person and newsletter editor.

Mrs. Hoffman adds that the lab is filled with idea booklets and technical assistance is available as well as the materials for producing the games and activities. Geared toward a learning curriculum, oriented toward math, reading and social studies. The material should be checked out with a recommendation from your child's teacher. Parents and teachers may request materials from FDLRS for three-week intervals.

"I can't believe I come to Seminole County with a box filled when the whole trunk should be loaded with materials of requests from teachers and parents," says Mrs. Hoffman. She notes that the other counties seem to use the system much more than Seminole County residents. Delivery takes place each Friday at Rosenwald

School in Casselberry and twice a month at Pinecrest Elementary School in Sanford.

"We have so much material to offer that's just sitting there waiting to be used to remedy a learning problem," says Mrs. Hoffman.

In Seminole County the gifted children's program did research on the handicapped and now help with the "Kids on the Block" program which was an undertaking of FDLRS.

Kids on the Block is a puppet program consisting of Mark who has cerebral palsy, Mandy who is deaf, Jennifer, a learning disabled, Renaldo who is blind, Ellen Jane who is mentally retarded, and two normal puppets, Melody and Brenda.

The disabled puppets interrelate with the normal puppets explaining their problems and thus helping the children in the audience understand the exceptionalities.

"You can't believe the letters the kids write to the puppets. They say how they never thought of how a handicapped person feels, and now they realize just how lucky they are because they aren't handicapped," Mrs. Hoffman says.

She adds that when they open up a puppet show for a question and answer session the children talk directly to the puppets—not the person who is handling the puppet.

"They lose the awareness that the person is there and they want to be answered in the puppets' voice," Mrs. Hoffman says.

Persons interested in learning more about FDLRS may call 423-9240, and make an appointment to spend a day to discover the offerings. It could be a real learning experience.

Trauma

Fig Newtons, Tacos, Peanut Butter Really Nothing To Cry About

By LINDA HOLT
Special to the Herald

Standing in the cookie aisle of the grocery store, I felt strange crying over the Fig Newtons. Aside from the usual penny or two hike in prices since I last shopped, I really had nothing to cry about. I passed the jars of peanut butter, and by the time I reached the taco fixings, tears had collected in a little lump at the back of my throat.

Fighting back tears, I drove home and parked under the carport. The shopping list was considerably shorter this time and I hadn't forgotten the savings coupons, yet, I didn't have the same satisfaction of earlier triumphs at the cash register.

Sitting there in the car, I remembered the events of the last few days.

Our car resembled the vehicle mentioned in a song of the past, "Thunder Road." The back end dragged the pavement as though we were carrying a load of "white lightning." A 10' X 12' bedroom emptied into a Ford sedan was the cargo. We were college-bound to New England.

Traffic flowed smoothly through the southern states, Washington, D.C., Baltimore and later New York City. But somewhere in New Jersey, we missed the turnpike and toured the downtown slums of Elizabeth, N.J. After 25 or so harrowing minutes, we stumbled onto the northern access of the highway.

A muffled voice came from the piles of books and hanging garments in the back. "I could have taken the plane. I wish I had!" The driver had the same wish as he shakily maneuvered onto the thoroughfare at long last.

Arriving at the college dorm on Saturday evening and trying to unload in a congested area while praying a roommate has arrived earlier and gotten the key was not my favorite way to spend Saturday night. Our No. 1 son hiked across campus to another building to acquire a key while we climbed the four flights, huffing and puffing at the second landing. We were looking for the nonexistent elevator when our key-bearer returned.

The key wouldn't budge the lock. It appeared to be the original 200 year-old lock that obviously was feeling its age. After another cross-campus hike, our freshman returned with a school janitor to the door. Click! We were in.

fireplace and bare window seats had round windows overlooking the town below. Walls and floors were scarred and worn, needing paint and a warm rug. No

There are many firsts in a family's memories—first child, first step, first 'da-da', first day at school, first kiss, first dance, high school graduation and then the day you see that child off to college for the first time.

I wandered through the rooms with a skeptical eye while father and son hauled a carload of miscellaneous items up those four flights. The ivy balls didn't quite measure up to the movie scenes in my memory.

The sitting room with its unused curtain or picture cheered the room. There were straight-backed wooden chairs and a table, two pine desks and two bookcases.

The tiny bedroom was crowded with a set of bunks, two old-fashioned highboy dressers and a closet that would barely accommodate one.

The stark bathroom was punctuated by antiquated fixtures.

Charm, character and history were words that occurred to me and a strong domestic urge took over. Carpets, pillows, plants and a good wastebasket were definite "musts" on my mental list.

Immediately after church services on Sunday, we began to search for bed linens. I had arranged for linens to be shipped directly from a department store but they had not arrived. Nothing was happening as planned.

It was Monday morning before the stores opened and we could finally buy linens and other unthought-of necessities.

When we left our 17 year-old in his dorm on the second day, we had lingered as long as we dared. The rooms did not look any more comfortable than they had on Saturday night and there was already a laundry bag stuffed with dirty clothes. He, with his jaw jutted forward and shoulders back, reminded us of the little 7-year-old boy we had left so many years ago at summer camp. Trying to fly like Jonathan Livingston Seagull, his wings were still a little unsteady.

The summer he went to camp for three weeks, he lost a tooth, all of his underwear the first week, the sheets for his cot and some of his dependency. When we went on visiting day to see him, he had that same set jaw, but we detected slightly watery eyes. He did not complain but did not ask to return again another year.

There are many firsts in a family's memories—first child, first step, first "da-da," first day at school, first kiss, first dance, high school graduation and then the day you see that child off to college for the first time. But the first place a child occupies in the hearts of parents defies description.

I think perhaps it could be explained by looking at a box of Fig Newtons and calculating the rate to ship them along with a 3-pound jar of peanut butter. Let's see...there must be a way to make his favorite taco dish and have it arrive hot....

'If I Knew You Were Coming...'

Delta Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi is sponsoring an Oktoberbakingfest Oct. 9 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Seminole County Agricultural Auditorium, Sanford. Proceeds from the event will go into the Delta Upsilon Charitable Service fund.

There will be entry categories of 12 and under, 13 to 18 and unlimited. First, second and third place awards will be given in baked categories of cookies, cakes and pies.

A grand prize, dinner for two at a local restaurant and a complete stoneware dinnerware place setting for four will be awarded the overall winner.

Prizes have been donated by local merchants. All ages, male and female, are encouraged to attend.

Entry fee for the Oktoberbakingfest is $3 for registration and one baked item and .50 cents for each additional item baked. Refreshments will be served. Registration should be made by Sept. 30. For more information, call 331-5316.

A DAY FOR PRESIDENTS

Sanford Woman's Club president Pat Foster, left, welcomes Beth Welebob, president of the Garden Club of Sanford, as a prospective woman's Club member at the Annual Membership Coffee. Hosted by the club's board of directors, the coffee was held at the Sanford home of board member Martha Yancey. Past club presidents assisted with serving and pouring. Members of the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford were also invited to the event. The first Sanford Woman's Club meeting of the season is Oct. 6. Please see Page 2B for additional photos.

In And Around Geneva

Dividends Help Students Find Success In School

When Dede Schaffner, coordinator of the Seminole County Dividends program, arrived at Geneva Elementary School at 1 p.m. Wednesday to maybe drum up a few extra hands for the 1982-83 school year, she had conducted two similar meetings earlier in the day in other areas of the county.

The Dividends School Volunteer Program was started nine years ago with 17 volunteers in three trial schools. Last year, the program had mushroomed to over 1,700 volunteers who donated over 86,000 hours.

Geneva Elementary School received the coveted Golden School Award last year, issued by the State Department of Education to schools who meet three criteria. The school volunteers accumulated more than two times the number of students in documented volunteer hours, had a Dividend coordinator at the school and the faculty participated in an orientation.

The Geneva orientation coffee started out with a slide presentation telling about the program. The slides pointed out that Dividend volunteers range in age from middle and high school students to senior citizens. You need no college degree. The program asks that you have two or more hours a week of time to consistently volunteer and it assures that you will never be left alone with a class.

The areas where volunteers may be needed range from language arts, math, geography, media center (library), music, physical education, art, to enrichment activities such as crafts, cake decorating, etc.

Mrs. Schaffner emphasized the main goal of Dividends: helping our students find success in school.

On hand for the orientation with Mrs. Schaffner were school principal Nancy McNamara; Jerry Keith, PREP coordinator and Dividends coordinator; and the following Dividends:

Lou Childers

Geneva Correspondent 349-5790

Linda Roberts, Media Specialist, Katherine Ladd, Dianne Durando, Karen Kelley, Barbara Arnold, Doraine Harrington, Carol Wisdon, Corinne Sini, Linda Evans and Jean Mellor.

Two days will be devoted to Dividends Workshops at the Altamonte Civic Center. Thursday, there will be sessions on PREP, Super Stars in Math, Heading Into Teens, Understanding How Your Child Learns, Computers, and Storytelling, preceded by registration at 8:30 a.m. and an opening of the general session by school Superintendent Robert Hughes.

Friday, registration will again begin promptly at 8:30 a.m. with workshops in Creative Writing in the Elementary Schools, Dividend Scientists, Gifted Students, Phonics Is Fun, English For Speakers of Other Languages and Specific Learning Disabilities.

The civic center is easy to find. Take Highway 436 to intersection of Highway 427 (Longwood Road). A funeral home is on the SW corner. Go south on Longwood Avenue about three blocks and on the right is a huge complex of baseball fields, tennis courts, etc. In the center is the Altamonte Civic Center.

This fantastic program that requires only a willingness to help children is so deserving of support. Being a Dividend is a good way to multiply success.

RSVP: Hostess Has 'Had It' Over Guests' Rudeness

DEAR ABBY: Having just put on a wedding for our daughter, I have had it with people who do not respond to a R.S.V.P. even though they've been sent a stamped, addressed envelope. And, Abby, you wouldn't believe the idiotic answers you get when you call. For instance:

Affluent twerp: "My secretary always takes care of that kind of thing—she must have goofed."

Close relative: "But, darling, I thought you knew I'd be there."

Vague friend: "Gee, we aren't sure yet." (They've had only six weeks to make up their minds.)

Social butterfly: "We may be out of town, but I guess you have to know, don't you?" (At $70 a head, you'd better believe I have to know!)

And finally, the jerks who respond in the affirmative and don't show up.

S.E., LOS ANGELES

DEAR S.E.: Judging from the number of people who have written to express their fury and frustration at having their R.S.V.P.'s ignored, perhaps it's time to drop the fancy R.S.V.P. and say in plain English, "Hey, please let us know whether you plan to attend."

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is going into the hospital for surgery next week. He has informed me that he does not want me to come to the hospital to visit him after the surgery, and he does not want me to to his apartment to nurse him back to health when he is released from the hospital.

Do you think he has a Florence Nightingale to nurse him back to health, or does he just want to recuperate alone?

ONE WHO CARES

EAR ONE: It is entirely possible that he prefers to recuperate alone. But if you really suspect there's a "nightingale" in the picture, you'd have to be out of your tree to marry a man you have to watch like a hawk.

DEAR ABBY: My father passed away last year. My sister and I are the sole beneficiaries of his estate. My first check arrived last month, and it is causing a great deal of tension between my husband and me.

Now that I have come into this inheritance, my husband thinks it is half his. I don't feel that way. I view my inheritance as a gift from my father to me alone, to spend, save or invest as I see fit (It was left to "me"—not to "us").

My husband is resentful, bitter and hurt. I feel guilty because he has always supported me and I have never earned a dime (I did provide a lovely home for him and our two children, however.)

How should I handle this, Abby? The inheritance is an impressive amount.

LONE STAR STATE

DEAR LONE: Since the inheritance was left specifically to you and not to you and your husband, your father clearly intended it for you alone. Give your husband an outright gift, and enjoy the rest as you see fit.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "G" IN CONWAY, ARK.: "Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance, self-control, diligence, strength of will, content, and a hundred other virtues which the idle never know." (Charles Kingsley)

"The Best of Dear Abby," featuring Abby's best answers and favorite responses during the past 25 years, is now available. You can obtain a copy of this new best-selling book by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to "The Best of Dear Abby," in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Drive,

...THE HOPE OF OUR COMMUNITY,

OUR NATION!

Need to STRETCH?

God apparently didn't want us to be cramped. He gave us the ability to stretch!

Whenever we begin to feel cramped that ability to stretch becomes an impelling need.

The soul stales with the body its restlessness, its aversion to being cramped. And the soul too has been given the ability to stretch—through worship, to reach out toward God.

Because all week our souls are sorely cramped—that ability to worship becomes an impelling need.

Worship with us next week. Your soul needs to stretch!
