Man Hanged As Mau Mau Terrorist

NAIROBI, Kenya, (AP)—The young man sat in the prisoner's box, his black skin shining with sweat, his legs shackled. Behind him in the high-paneled courtroom stood two African policemen armed with rifles, rifles cocked on their heads. The voices of witnesses droned in the hall like persistent flies, echoed by the voice of the translator who added each time, "yes, M'Lord," or "No, M'Lord." In the wigged and black-robed English judge, on the bench, barefoot native assessors, who act as advisors to the judge on questions of fact, and the man was Miano, son of Nanywa. He had been caught up in the reign of terror known as Mau Mau which may someday be a mere footnote in the annals of the British empire. But today, in the dense forests and dry uplands of Kenya, it is a life or death struggle between the whites who came to tame the land and the blacks who would drive them out.

A patrol of the King's African Rifles—black troops with white officers—captured Miano on a banana plantation Feb. 6 as they chased a gang of suspected Mau Mau.

From the witness stand a corporal and a sergeant testified that Miano raised a home-made rifle to fire at the pursuing troops but dropped it when he saw the corporal was armed with a Sten gun.

No, protested Miano. The gun was not his. The troops forced it on him. Speaking quickly in Swahili, Miano said he was an unwilling captive of the Mau Mau.

The native assessors looked at Miano thoughtfully. Some Miano tried had been hanged from a tree with his wrists bound so that a confession could be wrung from him.

The court and the assessors studied his wrists. They found no marks of any sort. But there were no marks on his neck.

His court-appointed attorney rose and said that many innocent Africans were used by Mau Mau as carriers and coolies.

But the prosecutor cited the damning evidence: Miano and his gang were in a prohibited area when the King's Rifles found them. So Miano was marched out to a scaffolding and hanged.

He was one of 14—37—hanged after being tried before justices of the Kenya Supreme Court.

SAYS NOT EXPECTING
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Marilyn Monroe says she's not expecting a baby.

The actress said her collapse on a movie set Tuesday was due to overwork and nerves.

"I'm not expecting a little baseball player yet," said the wife of Joe DiMaggio, the former Yankee Clipper. "That doesn't mean, however, that Joe and I don't want one."

PIG HAS DOG'S LIFE
LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Mrs. Gertrude Brummett's pig Sally couldn't make a hog of herself because she was such a runt.

So Mrs. Brummett kept it near the house for special attention and fed her with the dogs. Soon Sally was sleeping with the dogs, hunting rabbits and raccoons with them and swimming a creek with them.

Now Sally's midriff has thickened so she can't keep up with the dogs. But Red, the Bruzmett's coon hound, does find a hole big enough for her in the fence and sometimes waits for her to catch up.

SHE WAS CATCH SWIM
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Rev. Frank H. Heins has a thought-provoking sign in front of his church in suburban Germantown: "Come in and have your faith lifted."

Since Mau Mau erupted in October 1952 a total of 1,500 Africans have been executed in this fashion. They die for illegal possession of firearms or ammunition, for murder, for consorting with unlawfully armed persons, or for taking part in Mau Mau oath ceremonies.

The Mau Mau ritual includes bestiality, cannibalism, such as picking out a dead person's eyes and drinking the fluid from the sockets.

Mau Mau have killed close to 1,500 Africans, more than 20 Europeans and more than 20 Asians. Crown forces are steadily making inroads in the ranks of the fanatics, killing about 200 and capturing about 50 every month. Yet still the Mau Mau hobo Kenya in blood, raiding remote ranches and settlements.

The most difficult problem of the settlers is the fact that the Mau Mau draws its membership from the Kikuyu, the tribe from most of their farms and domestic workers. Thus Kikuyu, who by day appear to be passive workers, at night may be taking part in the ghastly rites and grim activities of Mau Mau.

The basic driving force of the Mau Mau is the claim that the land belongs to the Kikuyu—not to the whites. The strategy of the leaders is to establish rule by terror over all Africans in Kenya so they will obey Mau Mau rather than the government.

These are the things in the minds of the colonists when a suspected Mau Mau comes to trial. But British justice runs its slow and careful course in each case with natives advising and watching proceedings closely.

The English do not expect to exterminate the Mau Mau. In the long run they look to Christianity and gradual economic and social changes to bring peace to this unhappy land.

Medical Group Urges Precaution

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The American Medical Assn. House of Delegates today urged that persons wearing glasses of the sun next Wednesday protect their eyes with pieces of heavily smoked glass.

The eclipse will be visible in the United States from Nebraska northeastward.

The AMA's section on ophthalmology said "colored glasses are neither protectors nor of value." Previously exposed X-ray film was described as an alternative to smoked glass.

SEEK TWINS
NEW YORK (AP)—The National Multiple Sclerosis Society is seeking identical twins, either or both of whom suffer from the disease, to find out if heredity or environment causes the crippling of the central nervous system.

The society yesterday asked any twins suffering from multiple sclerosis, the cause and cure of which are unknown, to communicate with its offices at 229 Park Ave. N.Y.C.

Some historians believe that in the year 410 Rome did not have a single permanent inhabitant.

It makes you feel like the man you are

YOU must know, of course, that a fine car is more than merely a means of fine travel. It is, as the psychologists tell us, an extension of a man's own personality. It reflects what you feel, what you like, what you are. So we ask you to take the wheel of a Buick Roadmaster like the one shown here—for it is, we have found, the automobile chosen more and more by those who are definitely moving ahead in the world. You will find it a car that fairly breathes success.

From its size and its breadth and the magnificent modernity of its styling, you know it is a car of custom stature—and so does the watching world. The wondrous windshield is a pride in itself. You don't just see the view—you command it. You will find it, too, a car of luxurious obedience. From the moment you ease your foot down on the pedal, you take immediate mastery of the road and of distance. And you know it—in the silken whip of Twin-Turbine Dynaflo, the might of Buick's greatest horsepower, the magic cushioning of coil springs on all four wheels, the exhilarating ease of Buick Safety Power Steering at your hand. But with all this, you buy with prudence when you buy a Roadmaster. For—though it is, and looks, custom production—it sells for the lowest price-per-pound in the fine-car field. And so wise an investment makes you feel even more like the man you are. Drop in, or phone us this week, and we'll gladly arrange a demonstration.

BUICK SALES ARE SOARING!
Latest figures for the first four months of 1951 show Buick now out-selling every other car in America except two of the so-called "low-price haves." Better look into Buick if you want the beauty and the buy of the year.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

GATHA CHRISTIE, famous detective story author, returned to London after a long visit to Bagdad with her husband, a renowned archaeologist. Asked how she felt about being married to a servant whose eyes were turned always to antiquities, she replied warmly, "An archeologist is the best husband any woman can get. Just consider: the older she gets, the more he is interested in her!"

An old soldiers' organization held its annual pow-wow in sunny San Diego with ideal headquarters at the commodious U. S. Grant Hotel. But one veteran from Alabama did complain that "Ah can't send mah friends a picture post card even. If they-all saw the name of the hotel ah'm patronizin' they'd run me out of the county when Ah went home!"

The personal manager of a big paperback book publishing outfit kept a list of people on his desk. "No, I don't give a hoot about such stuff," he explained. "I just like to have something around here that opens its mouth without asking for a raise."

Shimmy Dancer, Son Reconciled On TV Program

HOLLYWOOD — Among the wonders effected by television is the reconciliation of shimmy dancer Gilda Gray and her son. When the entertainer embraced her son Martin on "This is Your Life" last week, they bridged a chasm that had existed between them for nearly all of his 40 years. Today Miss Gray and her son, her daughter-in-law and her grandson are a tight family group and she is proudly showing them off to her Hollywood friends. The happy ending to a bitter chapter came in the closing minutes of the Ralph Edwards show. Miss Gray had wept as the high lights of her fabulous life were paraded before her. But when her son appeared, she broke down completely. The reconciliation was arranged by Edwards' aides. One of them phoned Martin in Mercer, Wis., and it was in that call that the son learned for the first time that his mother had been desperately ill. Martin now admits he was embarrassed, but he showed no reluctance to engage in a public reconciliation. About all he can say now is, "It's wonderful. She's great." With the excitement wearing off, Miss Gray is able to recount why she and her boy have been estranged all these years. "My husband and I separated shortly before Martin was born in 1914," said the shimmy artist, still remarkably beautiful for her age (approximately late 50s). "Shortly after he was born I went into show business. This required a lot of traveling. I just didn't want him around the theater. "So I left him with my foster parents. I saw him whenever I played Milwaukee, but we never were very close. "Also, my foster parents tried to poison his mind against me. They were from the old country, Poland, and they believed that anyone connected with the theater was going to hell. "One of the reasons I kept working was because I wanted Martin to have an education. So I saw to it that enough money was provided for him to go to military schools. "During the Roaring '20s," Miss Gray became the toast of Broadway, the continent and a star of movies with her unique wiggling dance style. She earned over three million dollars. "Where did it go? "Well, I had three husbands and you know they're very expensive," she said. "I lost a million and a half dollars in the crash alone. "Miss Gray faded from sight in the late 30s when she was fighting for her life against tuberculosis. "I got it," she confessed, "because I came back from the 'comeback trail. One of her first jobs was in Milwaukee, where she met her son in 1931 for the first time in seven years. "I was a little hurt because he had never written me when I was in 'Colorado," she recalls. "I thought he had become a musician. I think he wanted me to help in his career. But when I asked him to perform for me, he would freeze up. "But all that is over now. Miss Gray has been happily showing the rights to her family. She hadn't even her grandson Tommy since he was 5. He is now 17. "Miss Gray said the Edwards show has given new impetus to her reviving career. She will return to the Turnabout Theater for an extended engagement.

Concert Pianist, 20, Will Give Recital At Stetson Soon

Robert Below, brilliant young concert pianist, will give a recital under sponsorship of the School of Music at Stetson University at 8 p. m. Thursday in Elizabeth Hall auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public. This is the only musical event of the Stetson summer season now on schedule. The 20-year-old Below has been concertizing since 13, first in his hometown of Louisville and later in Birmingham, Chicago, Fulton, Mo. and college towns in Kentucky and adjoining states. From July to November 1933, Below toured South America with his dean and teacher, Dwight Anderson, on a musical goodwill tour sponsored by the United States Department of State. He appeared in 22 cities, playing music by American composers. In November, 1931, he played "Rhapsody in Blue" for the high school audience of Louisville. The excellent review considered Below "the most remarkable pianistic talent yet developed in Louisville. An artist of astonishing maturity, a pianist Louisville can be proud of." The Deland program will include works from Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Haydn and Stetson's dean of the School of Music, Claude Almand. Below, who has written music for piano, violin, clarinet, string orchestra, chorus and songs for voice and piano, was a composition student of Dean Almand at the University of Louisville. Below graduated from the University of Louisville School of Music with a Bachelor of Music in June of 1933. Not only did he complete requirements for his graduation in three years, but he was the first student in the 22-year history of the School in graduate honors cum laude, having straight A's for his entire college career.

Orlando teams won all places in the North-South division. In East-West a score of 175 were Mrs. Hal Raymond and Joseph Wolfe. Stephen Rockwell and Hal Raymond were second with 130 points. Mrs. William Kirby and Mrs. Don Kim old placed third with a total of 105 while Lou Dodson and H. Bonstein scored 104 for fourth position. Though the Fourth of July tournament is being held in Sanford this coming week and it was the decision of the local club to hold its regular game next Friday night for those who are not able to attend the Tampa session.

CHAPTER THIRTY

THERE had been other things Joan had learned, also. About her insurance. About having a variety of stock. About advertising. About changes in public taste and interest. About reproductions which must be distinguished from genuine old articles.

"You could easily be fooled," Mrs. Cochran had warned her. "A lot of glass patterns, for instance, are reproduced nowadays. And it's hard to tell them from the original. But you'll get the feel after a while. And you'll learn by the look, too, when you've had some experience. One way you can tell—there are irregularities in old glass. Leadedness, imperfections, bubbles. Even sand and dirt are sometimes left in it. But the new stuff, which is factory made, is uniform and perfect."

She had gone on to talk about furniture, then, until Joan's head had spun. Goodness, how much Mrs. Cochran knew!

"Dear child, I should hope so. I've been in this business more than 25 years. And I've made a study of it. You'll have to see, too. You'll have to read and go to art museums and exhibits and auction galleries. Take an art class when ever you can. And ask questions. Whenever you get a chance, ask questions."

Joan had made a rueful face at that and had told Mrs. Cochran how she had been asking questions only last week and the dealer had nearly taken her head off. "Look!" she had snapped. "You want to know too much! What do you expect? A free lecture? I get paid for my lectures! I have a price for telling what I know."

"I tell like a whipped puppy," Joan had said, laughing a little.

"But I was mad, too, I meant to buy something there. Only I wanted to find out more about the piece first, because I was buying for Diane's mother and it had to be authentic. Well, believe me, I walked out of there without trying a thing. What's more, I'll never go back into her shop again."

Mrs. Cochran had nodded. "I don't blame you. That dealer, who ever she was, didn't know much about building good will. You have to make your customers want to come back, you know. And the best way to do that, in my opinion, is to be honest and frank with them."

Joan had learned a great deal. Mrs. Cochran had opened up her books for her and had shown Joan how she kept accounts. It had all been fascinating. Of course, Joan had taken notes so that she would not be in danger of forgetting anything. And today she had to start her first chapter. If she did not have too many interruptions, she thought, she might get a rough draft written before Mrs. Cochran returned tonight.

But the hope was not to be fulfilled, for it turned out to be a day of activity, accidents and excitement.

First, three women came in together and each bought a trifle. Then came a middle-aged couple who said they were interested in old silver but who ended by buying a small table. Hardly had they gone when Mr. Caldwell appeared. He was a tall, stoop-shouldered, gray-haired man who seemed not to be in any hurry to make his purchase but prowled about, pe-ing up a piece of china here, a bit of glass there, and who finally settled down in the corner to chat with Joan.

He appeared to be a roofer as much about antiques as Mrs. Cochran, and when Joan remarked that she was just a beginner in the business and was here to learn more, he spent a full half hour leading her around and explaining what the different marks meant on the underside of the china.

"I'll tell you about silver marks next time I come, if you like," he said finally. "But now I must be on my way or my wife will be sending the police to look for me. But the trouble with this is a pretty, narrow face and quickly moving black eyes that were set too close together."

"Mrs. Cochran isn't here? Oh! Where is Mrs. Cochran? Has she gone? I'll tell you about silver marks next time I come, if you like, if you'll wait for me."

"No, she's not here. But she'll be here tomorrow. I'll tell you about silver marks next time I come, if you like, if you'll wait for me."

"Well, I'm a regular buyer. Mrs. Cochran shows me the pieces she has in her shop and she tells me how to tell them from the original. I'll tell you about silver marks next time I come, if you like, if you'll wait for me."

"I'm blind as a bat without these," she said, slipping case spectacles on her nose. "Don't mind me, it takes me a while to make up my mind."

"Oh, that's all right. Take your time."

Miss Slavovska moved on between two tables where silver spoons and small glass salt dips were spread out in rows, each with a price tag. She examined them all, her tips purred.

"Mrs. Cochran ought to put her silver spoons," she said. "Nobody wants them much any more. That's a nice set, spoon but the gold's worn off. Anyway, it's a two-high-priced for me."

She nipped up a shoulder and walked quickly to the cherry corner cupboard, which she opened. "What have we here? Ah!" she looked at a few articles with a bored air. Finally she picked up the Dresden trinket box and turned it over.

"I'll take this little china box," she said finally and dropped it into her bag with a careless smile that made Joan stifle a gasp. "Don't you want me to wrap it for you?"

"Oh, no, you needn't bother. It isn't worth much. But it's the kind of thing that will go quickly in the Christmas trade."

"It's worth twenty-five dollars," Joan said.

"Oh, no, my dear. It's not. It's only worth five."

"It's marked twenty-five."

"You're mistaken, I assure you. The ringed mark, with its red-tipped clawlike fingers, reached back into the bag and took out the box again. "See? That's a five on the bottom there. Not twenty-five."

"Let me look. I was sure..." Joan reached out a hand and obtained possession of it, her heart beating fast. Sure enough, there was only a figure five to be seen on the bottom.

"There's a mistake," she said, lifting her head and looking quickly at Mrs. Slavovska. "This is worth twenty-five dollars. It was marked twenty-five dollars and not five as you say. I know because I was looking at it..."

Miss Slavovska then picked up a mean smile.

"Be careful, my dear. That's smart of you, but I'm just as smart. And if you think you're going to pocket twenty-five dollars for yourself, I'll report you to my friend, Mrs. Cochran. I don't think she'll like it. Not a bit. Here's a five for you. Now hand it over."

The color flew up into Joan's face. Her voice shook, but she held tight to the box.

"You rascal of a figure five!" she said. "I know you're taking it. I saw you doing it with your thumb! You just thought because I was new here..."

"Are you wanting me to be a— Why, you impudent brats!" she certainly will report you to Mrs. Cochran. And I shall tell her I'll buy nothing more from her while you're in the shop!"

She yanked off her glasses, tossed them into her bag, snatched it and marched in high dignity out to the bell. At the door she paused and looked back, her eyes glittering with anger.

"Are you going to make a sale for your loss or aren't you?"

"I'll sell it to you for twenty-five dollars less the discount, because you're in the trade."

"I'm not interested."

"I'm sorry."

Miss Slavovska hesitated. Then she shrugged. "Listen, you're a greenhorn at this game and you've got a lot to learn. One thing is that accidents can happen. I may have done that—I rubbed out a number. I don't know. In the nervous type, I fiddle with things when I'm talking. I can help it. I'm nervous, like I say. And remember now I liked the smooth face of that porcelain." She snatched, then finished slowly. "I'll give you twenty bucks for it," she said.

Joan shook her head. "Twenty-five less tax per cent," she answered at a nod. "That's Mrs. Cochran's price and she never bargains."

"You little fool! I was going to divide the difference with you. For a dollar and a quarter you lose a sale."

"I'm sorry," Joan said again.

With a muffled exclamation, Miss Slavovska turned, snatched open the door and slammed out. (To Be Continued.)

Troubled Tunisia Lacks Government

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP)—Nationalist Tunisian leaders lack a clear-cut plan to take power in Tunisia, and the government today is handling troubled affairs.

Mohammed Salah M'Zali's call for a republic was met with mixed reaction, and his administrative proposals for the French North African protectorate. The French administrative government, according to the protectorate's laws, was a stop-gap body.

When the minister resigned, Tunisian leaders were anxious to return to the independence of the country.

spread through the city during the day, as the Communist-dominated labor unions sent their members circling through the city in jeeps, shouting "Go home, Yanks!" They also fired several shots.

U.S. families kept close to their homes, but the sentiment appeared to subside after Arbenz' broadcast last night. Later Diaz told newsmen he would protect U.S. interests.

Rev. Richard O. Knight, newly appointed associate pastor of First Methodist Church in Sanford, preached his first sermon in Sanford at the morning worship hour last Sunday. His topic was "The Challenge of Christianity." The Rev. Mr. Knight, whose home town is Vero Beach, was graduated from Morris Harvey College in Charleston, W. Va., and Duke University Divinity School. Following graduation from the latter school in 1952, Mr. Knight spent the summer in Vero Beach. From June until September in 1953, he was a member of a Methodist Youth caravan in Europe. He came to Sanford from West Palm Beach where he was pastor of Mangonia Park Community Methodist Church.
