By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald staff writer

SANFORD — An historical marker donated to the City of Sauford in 1934 by the Sallie Harrison chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Sanford was rededicated yesterday by current members of the group.

The marker, which commemorates Ft. Reid, a commissary and soldier's camp for Ft. Mellon, is bolted to a rock which remains from the original fort. It sits under a shady oak on Mellonville.

Avenue near 20th Street. The plaque was rededicated to the city after corrections in spelling were made to the plaque.

Another plaque, located near the county services building, which marked the site of Ft. Mellon, was corrected last

"The plaques had been there for years with Reid and Mellon spelled wrong," said Ann Howland, regent of the Sanford DAR

According to Howland, the "e" and the "i" to Reid had been transposed and "Mellon" had been spelled "Mellen" on

After-hours recreation OK'd by city

By MICK PPEIFAUF Herald staff writer

SANFORD - Beginning Oct. 1. Sanford students may want to hang out at school a little longer.

Sanford city commissioners yesterday met with Seniinole County school board members to discuss a proposal to conduct afterschool programs at Seminole High School, and Lakeview and Sanford middle schools. Scheduled to begin Oct. 1, the programs would include both recreation and educational offerings, such as tutoring and drug prevention classes.

The city has budgeted $15,000 to hire teachers and coaches to run the program.

Sanford Recreation Director Mike Kirby reported that the programs would run between 3 and 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, for a total of 180 days, at Seminole High School. Lakeview and Sanford middle schools.

"We would probably use three workers per school," Kirby said, "and hopefully we may not need to use the entire $15,000." Kirby discussed such offerings as Intramural basketball and other sports competition.

Commissioner Bob Thomas expressed concern that the after school program might keep some students so involved in sports activities that their homework might suffer, but subsequent discussions centered on the

State grant may pay for new pool

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald staff writer

SANFORD - The Seminole County School hoard members and Sanford City Commissioners looked into their crystal ball Tuesday afternoon and saw a swimming pool on the horizon for Seminole High School.

Money with which to build the pool could be available through a State grant from PECO, the Public Education Capital Outlay fund. The question however, is who should apply for the grant?

School Board Chairman Ann Neiswender suggested a three board meeting. "Let's get the School Board, City and County together," she said, "and maybe even involve our Legislative delegation, and possibly come up with a joint grant application.*

Federal policy indicates that salary is enough money for a family of three to live on without being classified as poor.

Fut a study released Wednesday challenged conventional poverty standards, saying the criteria met by 32 million Americans is deceptive and arbitrary and skimps at the expense of people.

The survey of 3.511 Americans, conducted by the Gallup Poll for the Families For United Semot Action Foundation, found that most believe the guidelines understate the number of people living in poverty because the income levels used to decide who is poor is too low.

The study, conducted between July and October 1989, also found that the poor are more likely to be white, older and better educated than would appear under lederal poverty guidelines.

"The government poverty line is based on an arbitrary, arcane and outdated formula intended to serve the needs of bureaucrats and politicians." said Ron Pollack, executive director of the non-profit Families USA Foundation.

The real life poverty line is rooted in the experience of America's consumers who know the real costs they have to pay to purchase the essential necessities of life." said Pollack.

The "real life" poverty level established by respondents to the survey averaged $15,017 for a family of four, while the federal government poverty line for the same family is $12,092.

The survey showed that if "real life" figures were applied there would be 44 million Ameri-

Four killed in four-vehicle accident

BRANDON — A truck smashed into another vehicle while sanging lanes on Interstate 4 early Tuesday, setting off a flery changing lanes on Interstate 4 early Tuesday, setting off a flery four-vehicle crash that left four people dead and one injured, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

The crash east of Tampa forced the closing of the highway for 2 ½ hours, the highway patrol said.

Authorities said the crash was triggered about 5:35 a.m. when a truck driver headed eastbound on 1-4 changed lanes

The car, driven by Edward Francis Mandell, went out of control, crossed into oncoming traffic and was hit broadside by another car, said Anna Armas of the FHP in Tampa.

A Mercedes tractor-trailer then hit the rear of the second car, sparking a fire that charred the bodies of both victims in that car, said FHP Sgt. Allen Gracey. The driver of the second car was tentatively identified as Carmen Toole Shirley, 34, of Lakeland.

Stay of execution granted for gunman

STARKE — A holdup man won a temporary stay of execution from the Florida Supreme Court Tuesday, giving his lawyers another chance to argue that the state's electric chair is faulty and would inflict illegal torture.

Jerry White had been scheduled to die at 7:01 a.m. EDT Wednesday for killing a customer during a 1961 Orange County grocery store robbery.

The Florida Supreme Court rejected his lawyers' arguments that the electric chair at the Florida State Prison at Starke is defective and that its use would constitute cruel and unusual defective and that its use would constitute cruel and unusual

However, the justices granted a 24-hour stay so defense lawyers could carry their appeal to the U.S. District Court in Orlando.

The Florida Supreme Court and federal district courts have rejected the faulty chair argument in other recent cases, but White could take his appeal to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta which has granted stays in two other cases on the same argument.

Procecutor blames death on 'bad day'

FORT MYERS - A man charged with murder in the brutal death of his 2-year-old stepson repeatedly dunked the toddler headfirst into a tollet because the abusive parent was "having a bad day," a prosecutor said during opening statements uesday. Thomas Coe, 23, is on trial for first-degree murder in the "potty-training" death of Bradley McGee. The toddler's death July 27, 1989, sparked reform in the state's child welfare system and led to the unprecedented conviction of a welfare worker of child abuse. The trial is expected to last three weeks.

Assistant State Attorney William Jennings told a six-man. six-woman jury that Coe was angry with his stepson for soiling his pants while his stepfather was at a job interview. The child's mother. Sheryl McGee Coe, and the couple's younger daughter. Becky, also had accompanied Coe to the job

A spokesman at the Cuban Interests Section in Washington said the Cuban government would have no response to Bosch's release until at least Wednesday.

His release ended a weeklong stalemate stemming from the convicted terrorist's refusal to accept a government requirement that he keep a log of his visitors, one of 14 conditions for his release. He claimed keeping the log would make him appear to he a stressment informant. be a government informant.

Despite Boach's protest over the visitor's log, the federal government refused to alter any of the conditions established for Bosch's parole, Justice Department spokesman Dan Eramian said in Washington.

NASA optimistic about Hubble mirror fix

By ROD STEIN UPI science editor

WASHINGTON - NASA engineers expect to eliminate at least 95 percent of the Hubble Space Telescope's blurry vision by replacing nickel-sized mirrors in a new camera to be installed in about three years, officials said Tuesday.

Any remaining near-sightedness should be reduced to a "negligible" level by using motorized "actuators" to push or pull on Hubble's apparently flawed 94.5-inch primary mirror to make subtle changes in the mirror's shape.

"We feel ... that we can get the error down to about 5 percent of the existing error." said deputy project manager Jean Olivier. "If we can wind up with a residual uncertainty of 5 percent, we

That leaves us with a sufficient margin. We can take out twice that much with the actuators on the primary."

Hubble's primary mirror is mounted on 24 such actuators that can be commanded to push or pull as warranted to make changes in the shape of the mirror, which affects the focus of the optical system.

The actuators are not powerful enough to correct the mis mirror on their own and, in any case, scientists are hesitant to use the devices for fear of making the problem worse than it already is.
Still, if the corrective mirrors in the replacement camera do not take out enough of the aberration, the actuators could be used as a last resort. Olivier told reporters during a telephone

Columbia on stand by, hope found for leak fix

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL -NASA has a "glimmer of hope" the leaky shuttle Atlantis can be fixed and launched as early as Aug. 10, but if the leak persists the repaired shuttle Columbia will be launched instead, around Sept. 1, officials said Tuesday.

Where are we going from here? We're going back to flight," said William Lenoir. NASA's associate administrator for spaceflight. 'Not only do we see the light at the end of the tunnel, but we are out of the tunnel."

Engineers plan to pump supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel back aboard Atlantis next week in a critical test to find out if adjusting the tightness of 48 bolts around a critical "flange seal" succeeded in eliminating the leak that grounded the ship earlier this month.

William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said if the repair plan works, Atlantis and its five-man, all-military crew could be cleared for takeoff as early as Aug. 10 to kick off a four-day mission to carry a secret Pentagon payload.

TAMPA - Counties betting on continued rapid growth to pay off bonds for new sewers, roads and jails are running into trouble when population growth fails to keep up with projections.
Hillsborough County, for example, was forced to postpone a $29 million bond-financed sewer plant after building permits tumbled 34 percent between 1987 and 1989, an indication of slower growth. The Tampa Tribune reported Sun-

The county is also considering taking $160 million in unspent bond money to pay off the bonds instead of building more water and sewer projects. The alternative might be a 50 percent increase in water and sewer rates by 1995, officials warned.

In another example, the Hardee County city of Zolfo Springs has been taking money set aside for bonds and other debts and using it to pay for daily operation of the town.

Independent auditors warn that if the practice continues, the city could prove unable to pay any of its bills. The city has nearly doubled property taxes. to $7.11 per $1,000 assessed things blow up in your face." All told. 14 west central Florida countles have amassed $2.4 billion in bond debt against $5 billion in combined annual revenues. Last year, their intest payments totalled $240 million.

For the time being, bond experts say most Florida counties remain in good financial shape. Only Dade County, near its tax cap and with growth dropping by about one third, is in bad shape, according to Nancy Feldman of Standard and Poor's, the New York bond rating house.

Revenues would have to fall off by 20 percent before most counties would face default, according to market analysts interviewed by the Tribune.

Meanwhile, economist Thomas Powers of the Goodkin Research Corp. in Fort Lauderdale sale the current growth slowdown should only tast another 12 to 18 months.

Low level nuclear waste needs checks

Kenneth Carr, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, has come up with a nifty idea for getting rid of nearly one-third of the nation's low level nuclear wastes in one casy step. Ignore it.

Carr proposes to treat these slightly radioactive materials just like any other kind of trash, and although he has won the backing of nuclear power plant operators, what he has in'mind isn't going over so well with the other public agencies responsible for public health and safety.

It's easy to understand the nuclear power industry's enthusiasm. The NRC's continuing failure to come up with a safe, reliable means of nuclear waste disposal is one of the major stumbling blocks to the expansion of atomic power. Even if no new nuclear plants ever open in this country, the industry is facing potentially enormous costs over the next 20 years as the facilities that are already in operation reach the end of their useful life span and have to be closed and dismantled.

Under the NRC's plan, all sorts of disposables from the plants that are currently treated as hazardous — gloves, air filters, used machinery, dead animals from laboratory experiments — could be sent directly to sanitary landfills. Some of it, Carr suggests, could even be recycled into something useful. But that's one of several aspects of Carr's proposal that the Environmental Protection Agency considers "totally inappropriate.

There may indeed be safe alternatives for disposing of some of this material more economically than it is being handled today. Certainly it's an issue the government should pursue. But is the NRC the appropriate agency to determine how much radioactivity is safe enough? Some of the criticism of Carr's proposal from other experts suggests that it is

EPA contends that the level of radioactivity that the NRC has decided is low enough not to regulate anymore is roughly five times higher than it ought to be for public safety.

The National Council on Radiation Protecthat most radiologists follow, suggests that the limits should be set even lower still.

Those estimates were all drawn up before the International Commission on Radiological Protection, which recommends standards for nuclear exposure in the workplace, announced recently that the risks of radiation are roughly three times greater than scientists have calculated in the past.

Carr may be on the right track, but he appears to have a very long way to go.

Water managers not helpful

There has been a proposal by the St. Johns Water Management District to permanently ban watering lawns during daytime hours, regardless of drought or flood conditions. I say it is an infringement on our basic freedom, another way to feed the power trip that this agency seems to be on. In the guise of saving the ecology this agency has grown powerful, but has done little to help the St. Johns River. Most of the headwaters of the river, between Hwy. 60 near Vero and Hwy. 192 near Melbourne has been cut into hundreds of miles of canals to dry out the marsh lands for groves and agriculture. Three huge canals, operated by the Army Corps of Engineers, empty any and all excess water into the Indian River Lagoon. There is a dam just north of Lake Washington to insure that this happens.

Fifty miles of the St. Johns River between the dam and Lake Harney is little more than a muddy creek during dry periods, fed only by sewage plant runoff. The big cattle interests want it this way, it gives them a hundred square miles or so more pasture.

The South Fla. Water Management Dist. pays cattlemen $500.00 a head to keep the cows from "soiling" the Kissimmee River with nutients. The S.J.W.M.D. does the opposite. They buy the land with the taxes that they have the power to levy. fence the public off and lease it to the cattlemen. They say it will stop, but they continue to renew long-term leases. The entire St. Johns River Valley needs help but the agency that should provide it needs to be replaced or re-staffed by people who know how to clean up the mess, draw down the lakes and renew them with the right vegetation and flah and have the knowhow to get it done without bowing to big money or cutting little deals with all the narrow-minded ecology groups; people who have experience, not consultants; pay for action, not studies. People who realize the river is public property and will not fence us out.

Throw out the petty rules and keep the water in the river.

Supreme Court defies Constitution

Maybe it's time to retire the Constitution and stop the pretense that our courts pay any

Here, for example, in an excerpt from the Constitution's Sixth Amendment: "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to ... be confronted with the witnesses against him."

Very straightforward, one would think. Not just in some criminal prosecutions, the amendment says. In ALL of them.

So what did the Supreme Court do in its recent session? It ruled that confrontation between the accused and witnesses could be waived if prosecutors prove a witness would be traumatized. Then the testimony can occur via closed- circuit TV and the witness never once appear in the presence of the accused.

There's little doubt why the court ignored the Constitution in this matter: Many states seek to spare abused and molested youngsters from the pain of appearing again before their tormentors. But the highest court in the land to obliged to uphold the Constitution, not ratify popular sentiment.

Nor was this the only instance in which the court flouted explicit constitutional language.

Here to what the 14th Amendment says: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States ... nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the

Not withounding this equal protection clause, the Supreme Court ruled this year that Congress can pass laws that directly grant one racial group a preference over another — for example, when the government doles out broadcast licenses. In short, the court endorsed a racial spoils system, and in the process macked the core value of the Constitution, which is individual rights.

endorsed a racial spoils system.

The court

In another popular but constitutionally suspect decision, the court eroded the meaning of the Fourth Amendment, which promises that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons. houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and scizures, shall not be violated..." A majority on the court new no contradiction between this edict and the practice of randomly stopping autos to catch drunken drivers.

Admittedly, the Fourth Amendment only bars "unreasonable" searches, not all of them, and hence leaves the court plenty of wiggle room. But if a wholly random police inspection of average citizens is not unreasonable, what is? Why would It be less reasonable to search every home in a high-crime neighborhood looking for unregistered guns or contraband?

Clearly, however, the court's worst affront to the spirit of the Constitution and democracy was the spirit of the Constitution and bemoeracy was its opinion permitting judges to raise taxes. While the Constitution doesn't actually prohibit this practice, it is only because the Founders would have considered the idea ludicrous. According to Alexander Hamilton, "the Judiciary ... has no influence over ... the purse" (Federalist 78); according to James Madison. "the legislative department alone has access to the pockets of the people" (Federalist 48).

Healing: Prayer vs. medicine

BOSTON — It is a peculiar setting for a debate about spiritual healing. Lawyers and judges are not experts on the mind/body problem. We usually leave this subject to the doctors of philosophy and medicine, to the followers of science and religion.

But our litigious culture operates by the case method. Sooner or later every conflict ends up in a courtroom.

So it is that four sets of Christian Science parents have been tried and convicted for manalaughter or child endangerment in the deaths of their children over the past 15 months. So it is that David and Ginger Twitchell were found guilty in a Boston courtroom recently of "reckless and wanton" conduct, involuntary manslaughter, because they treated their son Robyn with prayer instead of medicine.

The latest case raises the most searing sets of questions because the Twitchells do not fit the mold of child abuters, or of reckless and wanton alaughterers. David and Ginger are a mother and father who tried to do the right thing according to their own beliefs.

Yet when their two-and-a-half year old was sick and in pain, they called upon the church instead of the doctor. And when their two-and-a-half-year old died, it was because of a simple, curable, bowel obstruction.

On one side of this case we had grieving parents. On the other side a dead child. What do we do when bad things happen to good people? When it may be their fault? Not surprisingly, the jury that convicted this couple also ended up with members in tears. The judge who sentenced them gave them not jail but ten years' probation - with the requirement that they take their three other sons to a pediatrician. These were the mixed message of the feelings such stories arouse.

The legal appeal of this case will be made in part on the grounds that a Massachusetts law exempts parents from neglect charges if they choose spiritual healing. But the public appeal of this case is on a much wider and shakier

Can a state order parents to take their children to a doctor? Can parents exercise total control over their children's care? Can they take a religious exemption from modern medicine? For their children?

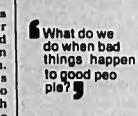

In the time since the Twitchells' arrest, even mothers who rush their children to the doctor with every earache have expressed some ambivalence about these matters. Fathers who bless the invention of antibiotics have lined up

It may be that we are more willing these days to acknowledge the power of mind over matter. We are told routinely about the healing attributes of everything from a good laugh to a positive attitude. We have become more open to the alternative, the holistic, the medical language of the new age.

It may be, on the other hand, that we are less confident in the infallibility of what we now call "conventional medicine." We have seen too many treatments come and go, too many second and third opinions that conflict. We are less willing to passively put our bodies or our children in the hands of doctors who know

Those wh. Im pathized with the Twitchells during this trial wonder if they too could miss the symptoms of a serious illness — as the father said he had. Those who condemn the parents wonder how a parent could treat his toothache with den-tistry and his child with prayer.

But at bottom, this case, like the other three, stirs up the old debate between science and religion. They are stories about adults who followed their faith and the children who may have died for what their parents believed.

And how ever open-minded our post-modern attitudes are toward healing, however skeptical we are toward doctors, when we act as a society in the courts or legislatures, we have to distinguish between prayer and penicillin.

Faith and reason may both have their place in healing, but not the same place. The state must remain neutral between religions, defending everyone's right to believe. But that doesn't mean it must remain neutral between "treatments." as if spiritual healing and science were equal options for curing a bowel obstruction.

Believing in lactrile doesn't make it cure cancer. Rejecting the germ theory doesn't make it less a fact. We cannot equate a church practictioner with a surgeon any more than we can equate the story of creation with the theory of evolution.

So we come down to the hard facts. To sympathize with the Twitchells is a natural human emotion. But to side with them in the 'treatment" of their son is to abandon both Robyn and reason.

Industry balks at new safety device

WASHINGTON - C.J. Abraham of Mineola, N.Y., has an invention that could make him some money. But his fight to get that invention accepted by the federal government has taken him beyond money to principle. He would not be the only one to benefit if the government forced the auto industry to use Abraham's patented shield that protects people from exploding car batteries. Abraham's story could be echoed by scores of inventors and researchers who have something that will case pain and suffering, but not enough pain and suf-fering to justify the cost. Abçaham estimates that there are upward of 7,000 injuries from exploding auto batteries every year. The federal government puts the number at 5,000, but only about 120 of them require hospitalization, and that, apparently, is not the benefit. enough to warrant mandatory battery

thinks the

too much for shields. No one seems interested in Abraham's shield that would be attached to car batteries. He approached major battery manufacturers. but none wanted it. So he went to Washington, hoping that the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration would require the shield or a similar precaution. The agency turned him down last year.

It's not that the government doesn't recognize the problem or the value of Abraham's solution. But NHTSA says the amount and degree of the injuries from exploding car batteries don't justify the shield, even if it works.

Here we found a problem that was not real big in the grand scheme of things," Barry Feirice, NHTSA's chief rule-maker told our associate Dan Njegomir.

A bitter and wiser Abraham counters. "Blindness, to them, is not severe."

Thanks in part to a letter of support from Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohlo, Abraham got another shot at tightening safety regulations. NHTSA reopened the Issue and will rule on it this summer after taking public comment. Most of the responses are coming from battery makers opposed to Abraham's invention and any rule that would require it.

The federal regulators insist that if the problem were widespread enough and the solution effective enough, they might consider requiring battery shields. But instead NHTSA points to what it says is a gradual decline in the number of injuries. Relatively few of the spontaneous explosions are scrious, the government says. And NHTSA believes the addition of Abraham's shield would make batteries harder to service. The bottom line is that NHTSA thinks the shields cost too much for the benefit. The agency estimates consumers would spend $94 million a year on the shields if they were required. Feirice called that "way out of scale for our rule-making" given the limited return. Yet Felrice admitted that the invention would make a difference. "Some of these injuries can be severe," he said. "You might reduce several hundred, a thousand if this thing worked, for $94 million a year.

Abraham thinks the cost would be much lower. He says he and his partner would get the price down to 39 cents per shield.

But he is skeptical that he will have the chance. He doesn't expect a favorable ruling. much less a fair hearing, from NHTSA. Like many inventors stymied by the system, he half suspects there is a conspiracy to keep his product off the market.

At the very least, there is numbing bureaucratie indifference. When NHTSA ruled against him last year, it gave him the same explanation as it did in 1981.

SANFORD — A free seminar entitled "Marketing Yourself for Success" will be offered Friday at noon as part of the monthly Brown Bag Seminars sponsored by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Community

The seminar, to be led by W.A. "Duke" Adamson, will focus on making a good impression — on the telephone or in person — to avoid losing sales or customers. It includes information on how to market one's self and one's business.

The seminar is free to all chamber members and their employees, and will be held from noon until 1 p.m. at the chamber meeting room, 400 E. First Street, Sanford.

Poverty

Comparing "real life" figures to government statistics, there would be 2.4 million more poor blacks, 8.1 million more poor whites, 5.4 million more poor males and 7.5 million more poor females.

There are more than 6.5 million people over 65 who fall below the "real life" poverty standard, which is 23 percent of all Americans in that age group. That compares with the government's elderly poverty calculation of 12 percent.

The method for determining the federal poverty line was set in 1963 and was based on family needs and used consumption data from a 1955 survey showing that the average American family spent about one-third of its budget on food.

The Census Bureau, which counts the poor each year, officially adjusts the line for increased prices. The definitions of family or individual needs have not changed. The latest figures are based on 1988 Cenaus statistics.

Patricia Ruggles, an economist with the Urban Institute, noted that the proportional food budget of most Americans has declined, while spending on housing, health care and child care have incremed.

Although programs adopted by Congress for food stamps, school lunches and health care allow benefits for some living slightly above the federal pov-erty line, policy makers have fatled to adopt a bisnitet policy for everyone living above the accepted poverty line.

One of the problems is that there is continuing debate within the government on what should constitute income. Some argue non-cash benefits like food stamps and Medicaid should be counted as income, an accounting plan some feel would push the most needy further into poverty.

Another problem is public perception. The United States does not want to adjust its poverty line to show a larger problem than it admits to, study organizers said.

"I'd known for quite some time about the misspellings," Carter said. "People had been saying to me that it was odd that the name Mellon was spelled one way on the plaque and another on the street sign above it.

According to Carter, there has always been some controversy over the spelling of Melion, but he did some research and found the proper spelling to be with an

"I'd imagine that someone back then (in 1934 when the plaques were made) who wanted it spelled the other way had more influence," he said.

Carter said making the corrections was not an easy task.

The public works facilities in Sanford and Orlando turned down Carter's request to do the work, citing the possibility that welding new letters on the bronze plaque would do more harm than good, he said.

He tried, again unsuccessfully, to have the job done by the Miami public works department. They were also afraid to tackle the job.

So, frustrated with the failings

The corrected historic marker of others, Carter took matters into his own hands. Upon the suggestion of a former University of Florida colleague, Dr. Walter Scudder. Carter went to Seminole Community College and enlisted the assistance of the vocational department. There, he formed new letters from bronze welding rods and bolted them to the plaque adding an epoxy to be sure the letters would not come loose. "I think they'll be there forever." he said.

Feds, shrimpers discuss turtles

By MARY SCHLANGENSTEIN United Press International

Federal officials who met Tuesday with Gulf Coast shrimpers said they would step up enforcement of laws designed to protect endangered sea turtles from shrimpers' nets.

The meeting was prompted by the recent deaths of at least 31 threatened or endangered sea turtles since the re-opening of shrimping season July 8. The turtles have been found washed up on Texas beaches. Scientists have not determined what killed the turtles, but conservationists claimed the caught in shrimp nets not equiped with federally required turtle excluder devices, or TEDS. Lucy Gibbs, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association. said the two sides had a "very productive meeting."

"We have agreed to continue to meet in the future." Gibbs said. "We have agreed to continue to address the situation of the turtles and work as hard as we can to address the cause of the problem."

Dr. Andrew Kemmerer. southeast regional director of the Marine Fisheries Service, said agents from that group and officers with the U.S. Coast Guard and Texas Fish and Wildlife Department will be used to increase enforcement of the federal TEDS law. He also said the agency may seek criminal citiations against shrimpers who violate the law. Most of the tickets being issued now are for civil violations that can carry fines of up to $12,000. A criminal citation could lead to a punishment of six months in prison and a $25,000 fine.

At least 18 shrimpers have been ticketed for not using TEDS, and one has been arrested.

Kemmerer said the agency still is considering the options of closing part of the Gulf of Mexico to shrimpers or ending the turtles drowned after being shrimp season early, but he caught in shrimp nets not indicated those options will not be used unless efforts to increase compliance fail.

Federal officials estimate that 40 to 60 percent of shrimpers in Texas waters are complying with the TEDS requirement. Coast Guard Commander Jim Force said he would work to increase the compliance figure to 80 percent by the end of the week. Gibbs said a $25,000 fine for not using a TED would likely put a shrimper out of business, but she also said that her group is urging members to use the devices. She said she has doubts about what killed the beached

"We're not willing to take full blame for this," she said. "Dr. Kemmerer has said they don't know what's killing these turties.

Tee John Mialjevich, head of the Concerned Shrimpers of America, said he believed the turtles were killed by a recent oil spill off the Texas coast and suid it would be up to each shrimper to decide individually whether he will comply with the law.

"You're talking about people's livings," he said. "That's what's going to decide anything. We're not out there saying. 'Don't pull TEDS.' It's a person's individual decision. I don't think they look at it as breaking the law as much as that they're going to lose their Mialjevich would not comment on the outcome of Tuesday's meeting.

Conservationists applauded the 60 percent TEDS compliance rate by shrimpers, but said the results of Tuesday's meeting were not sufficent.

"I want to stop the killing of the turtles," said Carole Allen of Help Endangered Animals -Ridley turtles. "Whatever it takes to stop it. I think everybody knows what the problema ia.

Shrimpers last year protested the TEDS laws by briefly blockading Texas ports. Implementation of the law was delayed.

Texas killer executed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas - Condemned killer Mikel James Derrick, a former male prostitute who confessed to a 1980 robbery-murder out of fear his brother would be accused of the crime, was executed early Wednesday by injection.

Derrick, 33, was taken into the death chamber in the state prison at Huntsville shortly after midnight, injected with a lethal dose of drugs and pronounced dead by corrections officials at 12:17 a.m. CDT.

I just ask that everyone I ever hurt or done anything wrong to them to forgive me ...." Derrick said in his final statement. He then looked up to the ceiling of the death chamber, closed his c es and appeared to say a prayer.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Derrick "was resloved to his fate. He made a decision to make amends with his fellow human beings.

Derrick spent most of Tuesday watching television and talking to fellow death row inmates and a prison chaplain. He refused his last two meals and spent several hours on the telephone speaking with relatives.

The Supreme Court refused Tuesday to stay the execution. Attorneys for the condemned man turned to the high court Monday after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans refused to intervene in the case.

The lawyers had argued that the original defense attorney was ineffective by not raising objections to certain testimony. The high court last October refused to review an earlier appeal

Derrick was the 134th person put to death in the United States since the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment in 1976 and the 37th in Texas since the state resumed executions in 1982.

Young, Miller win Democratic primary

ATLANTA — Former Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, trying to become the state's first black governor, and Lt. Gov. Zell Miller topped Democratic primary balloting Tuesday and will meet in

Although Miller ran way ahead of Young in gubernatorial voting, a runoff was necessary because neither scored the 50-percent majority needed for an automatic spot on the November general election ballot.

With 66 percent of the precincts counted, Miller totaled 40.8 percent, while Young registered 30.9 percent and state Sen. Roy Barnes 19.9 percent. The runoff will be Aug. 7.

Trailing far behind in the Democratic primary were state Rep. Lauren McDonald and Lester Maddox, the former segregationist governor.

Senate OKs limits on textile imports

WASHINGTON - The Senate, bucking White House opposition, passed a bill that would limit clothing and footwear imports in hopes of protecting hundreds of thousands of American jobs threatened by foreign competition.

The Senate voted Tuesday 68-32 fo. the bill, which would allow only a 1 percent annual increase in textile imports and would freeze imports of non-rubber footwear, including leather and vinyl shoes, at their 1989 levels.

In 1985 and 1988, President Reagan vetoed similar bills and was sustained. President Bush opposes the current measure, but the size of the vote indicated the Senate could override his veto. It was unclear, however, whether the bill would reach Bush soon because the House bill was stalled in subcommittee.

Education can reduce heart risks

BOSTON - A long-term public health education program apparently succeeded in reducing smoking and other major risks for heart , disease among residents of two California communities, scientists said.

A five-year multimedia campaign that told community members how they could reduce heart-disease risk factors resulted in drops in their cholesterol levels and blood pressure as well as smoking rates, said Dr. John Farquhar of Stanford University.

The results indicate that providing information to people about how to improve their health through good nutrition, exercise and smoking reduction can have a significant impact on mortality risks posed by cardiovascular disease, Farquhar said.

Changes that the community members made in their health habits resulted in a 15 percent drop in their overall mortality risks and a 16 percent reduction in their heart disease risks, Farquhar and colleagues reported Tuesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The 15 percent reduction in total predicted mortality is a really big number." Farquhar said. "It is more than we thought we might get." The most dramatic impact of the information campaign was on smoking, he said.

Civil rights bill passage said assured

By STEVE GENETEL
United Press International

WASHINGTON - Senate passage of the major civil rights bill of 1990 is certain. But the cost of victory could be steep.

Senate Democrats, marching in lock step, cleared the way Wednesday for the passage of the legislation and left Republicans infuriated and threatening to seek revenge.

The Senate voted Tuesday 62-38 to impose cloture, sharply limiting debate, provoking a veto threat from the White House and a display of raw anger by Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

All Democrats, except Sen. James Exon, D.Neb., and eight Republicans voted for cloture. Thirty-seven Republicans voted

After tempers subsided. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and Dole agreed to give negotiations with the White House "one last shot, one last effort" to work out a compromise.

The results of the latest round of discussions, which have been going on for months, were expected Wednesday morning.

If the White House, led by chief of staff John Sununu, and key senators reach agreement. the bill is destined for swift passage. If not, the clock will run out on the bill some 12 hours after the Senate meets.

Going into Tuesday night's negotiations, there was a sharp disagreement on how close to a compromise the two sides were.

Dole said there was "amost an agreement" and Sen. John Danforth. R-Mo., said, "We were on the very brink of an agree-ment." But Sen. Edward Ken-nedy, D-Mass., said "there never was an agreement"

Balanced budget amendment rejected billion to $168.8 billion.

United Proce International

WASHINGTON - A proposal to deal with the government's financial problems by amending the Constitution to require the federal budget to be balanced each year was rejected by the House.

The proposed amendment received a 279-150 majority vote in favor Tuesday, but fell seven votes short of the two-thirds vote needed for approval.

The debate took place as congressional and administration negotiators continued their search for a plan to trim this year's budget deficit and slow the debt spiral in coming years. A meeting was scheduled with President Bush at the White House Wednesday afternoon. The budget picture became even more gloomy with Monday's report by the administration

Defeat of the constitutional amendment had been forecast by House Speaker Thomas Foley, an opponent of the plan.

The Constitution "should be rarely amended." Foley said, calling it a mistake to proceed with the balanced budget amendment "when the problem has not been a legal or a constitutional deficiency" but a political disagreement on But during debate, supporters of the amendment said it was the only way to impose discipline on the spending habits of Congress and the executive branch. The proposed amendment would have required that starting with fiscal year 1995 the president to submit a balanced budget plan to Congress; and would prohibit spending from exceeding the government's income. raising the estimate of next year's deficit by $10

Mandela to face challenges at home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela's return home Wednesday follows a triumphant 45-day world tour, but he faces deep rifts in the black opposition, government charges he is stalling on talks and a right-wing backlash against racial reform.

Mandela, whose supporters have planned a tumultuous welcome at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts airport to coincide with his 72nd birthday, leaves behind a string of largely successful meetings with leaders in Europe, the United States, Canada and Africa.

"After all that adulation ... and latitude he was allowed, Mandela must realize he's coming back to a lot of challenges," an official of the Department of Foreign Affairs said Tuesday.

His first problem will be coping with assassination threats from the extreme right.

Shocks rock Philippines; death toll up

MANILA. Philippines — Strong aftershocks to a massive earthquake that killed at least 311 people rocked the northern Philippines Wednesday, sending rescue workers scrambling from crushed buildings where hundreds of people were trapped, officials said.

An aftershock measuring 6.3 on the Richter scale struck at 6:15 a.m. followed by another at 6:29 a.m., officials said.

More than 200 aftershocks have rocked the area since Monday's 7.7 temblor rumbled across the main Philippine island of Luzon, officials said. The quake, centered in Cabanatuan, 60 miles north of Manila, was the deadlest temblor to strike the Philippines since August 1976 when an earthquake and tidal wave killed more than 3,000 people on the southern island of Mindanao.

The Military Civil Defense said Monday's quake has killed at least 311 people and injured at least 682.

Negotiations to end standoff are stalled

MONTREAL — Negotiations to end a week-old standoff between police and Mohawka stalled when police barred noted U.S. civil rights lawyer William Kunstler from entering the besieged Indian encampment.

Kunstler, who went to the Mohawk community near Montreal Tuesday to join their negotiating team, said the Mohawks refuse to resume negotiations without him. "We're struggling to get in." he told United Press International via telephone from a police barricade.

The lawyer said police barred him and several female Mohawk leaders from entering the besieged area because their names are said to be missing from a list of official representatives.

Police and government spokesmen said they were unaware of Kunstler's situation.

OPEC predicts base price will soar

GENEVA — OPEC predicted Wednesday its base reference price will "soar above and beyond" its current $18-a-barrel level after next week's crucial ministerial conference in Geneva.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said its 13 members lost $5 billion to $7 billion since March because of slumping prices.

The reference price — the average for all the different grades of crude oil pumped by member states — plunged to just $14 a barrel but has "rebounded," it said.

That is primarily because Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates announced they were reducing production, the cartel's news agency OPECNA said.

Gunmon fire on bue; 26 killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Gunmen fired on a mini-bus Wednesday, sending it and a second bus plunging off a winding road, killing 26 blacks and injuring 54 others in apparent internecine black violence in strife-torn Natal province.

Police said no one was hit by the gunfire but the hail of bullets from a number of attackers made the first vehicle swerve and obstruct the second. Both vehicles then crashed down a small ravine.

A police spokesman said the 26 dead and 54 hurt — according to local hospital figures — "are casualties of a deliberate attempt to drive these vehicles off the road and cause carnage. It looks ... like part of Natal's ongoing violence."

Baker meeting with Shevardnadze starts

PARIS — U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze began meeting Wednesday to discuss conventional forces talks and other issues, officials said.

Following by one day a historic session of the Two-plus-Four talks on German unification, the Baker-Shevardnadze meeting at the residence of the U.S. Ambassador in Paris was expected to focus on the Conventional Forces in Europe talks in Vienna.

The Conventional Forces talks, involving the 16 NATO nations and seven countries of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, have been stalled since March over aircraft levels.

Poland lowers official Auschwitz toll

WARSAW, Poland — A government commission has lowered from 4 million to 1.5 million the number of people believed to have died at the Auschwitz death camp during World War II and conceded the overwhelming majority were Jews.

The decision to revise the official number of those killed in the Nazi camp was a formal rejection of original figures generated after the war by the Soviet Union, which still holds the records kept by camp commanders.

It is also in line with figures used by historians in West Germany, the United States and Israel who have documented the number of victims of the Holocaust.

the number of victims of the Holocaust.

Poland's former communist government relied on the figure of 4 million as part of a propaganda effort to make Auschwitz a symbol of Nazi oppression of all peoples, not just Jews.

British contractors face prosecution

LONDON — Five British companies in the Anglo-French group building a tunnel across the English Channel have been charged with violating safety laws in an accident that killed a construction worker, officials said Tuesday.

The Health and Safety Executive, a government-appointed agency that oversees enforcement of occupational safety rules, said the companies failed to ensure the safety of Gary Woodward, 32, who was crushed between the tunnel boring machine and other equipment on Oct. 23, 1989.

Woodward was one of six workers killed since January 1989 on the British side of the 31-mile Channel Tunnel rail link, agency spokesman Mark Wheeler said.

Tuesday night's National Amateur Baseball Federation game between Oviedo and Lake Brantley at Oviedo High School was about as ugly as they come.

There were seven errors, seven wild pitches, a balk, a wild pitch, a hit batter and several bad base running mistakes as Oviedo took a 9-4 win over Lake Brantley to advance to 11-9 on the summer. Lake Brantley fell to 6-12-1.

'When everybody's hitting on all cylinders, we can be tough," said Oviedo Coach Eddie Norton, filling in for Head Coach Mike Ferrell, who is recovering from surgery. "They were all in sync tonight."

Oviedo struck for all its runs in two innings, scoring six in the top of the third and three in the top of the seventh. Both rallies were aided and abetted by a series of Lake Brantley miscues.

Wipeouts highlight play in Tuesday Night league

From staff reports

SANFORD - It was a case of no contest at Chase Park Tuesday night as all the three winners posted lonsided wins in the Sanford Recreation Department Tuesday Night Women's Slowpitch Softball League.

Thermocarbon whitewashed the Honey Beers 15-0, Seko Air Freight clobbered Ensley Incorporated 15-5 and Harear Aluminum Products pounded in Home Medical 13-4 as the league completed week No. 10.

Thermocarbon is the only undefeated team (9-0) and has a full three-game lead on the league. Trailing Thermocarbon are Ensley (6-3), Seko (6-4). In Home Medical-(4-6) and Harcar (3-6).

Theresa Walburger had four doubles and scored two runs as Thermocarbon kept its record unblemished. Thermocarbon scored six runs in each of the first two innings and three in the third before the game was stopped by the merey rule.

The Thermocarbon defense also played a good game, turning two double plays and allowing only one Honey Beers runner to reach second Providing the offense for Thermocarbon, in addition to Walburger, were dackie Suggs ftriple, double, single, three runs scored). Mimi Raub (two doubles. three runs scored), Sharon Paulk (two singles, run scored). Roberta-Johnson (single, run scored). Rhonda Gorman (stugle), Michelle Widener and Sandy Adams (two runs scored each) and Betty Divens frun scored).

Getting hits for the Honey Beers were Peggy Wages (double) and Anette Grzeskonwiak and Jodie Doyle (one single each).

In game two. Seko Air scored 12 runs on six hits and eight Ensley Inc. errors in the bottom of the first inning as third-place Seko went on to hand second-place Ensley its third loss of the season. For the game, Ensley committed 11 errors.

Doing the damage for Seko were Sonya Poole (three singles, run scored). Peggie Pulliam and Faye Kennedy Jone double and two runs scored each), Sally Foust and Sandy Reid (one single and two runs scored each). Janet Morris and Renee Carter (one single and one run scored each) and Denise Levinson and Sue McRae (two runs scored each).

Pacing the Ensley attack were Val-Wilks (double, single). Latrice Turner (double, run scored), Rita Frison (single, two runs scored) and Andrea Ruffin (two runs scored).

Harcar did not have any big innings, but took little nips out of in-Home Medical, scoring in every inning as it won its third game of the season. Harear scored three runs in the first inning, two runs in the second inning, one run in the third, lifth, sixth and seventh innings and four runs in the fourth inning. In Home Medical scored all four of its runs in the sixth.

Contributing to the 19-bit Harcur attack were Sharon Glass (double, two singles, two runs scored), Deania Montgomery (three singles, two runs scored). Arlene Lingard (triple, single, two runs scored) and Marie Byrd (triple, single, one runscored).

Also contributing were Jo Sanders (two singles, run scored). Teresa See Softball, Page 3B

Rose could get six years in prison at sentencing

United Press International

CINCINNATI - Pete Rose, baseball's career hit leader who has been banned from the sport for life because of gambling, will be sentenced Thursday for tax evasion.

Theresa Walburger had four doubles, including two in the first inning, and scored a pair of runs to lead Thermocarbon in 15-0 rout of the Honey Beers.

Rose, the most productive batter in the history of baseball with 4.256 hits, could be sentenced up to six years in prison and fined up to $500,000.

The former Cincinnati Reds star, who was seldom injured in a brilliant quarter-century career, will be on crutches when he is sentenced at 10 a.m. by U.S. District Court dudge Arthur Spiegel.

Rose tore a cartilage in his right knee Sunday playing stickball with children at his wife's family reunion. He is scheduled for surgery

A year ago, Rose was banished from baseball for life for gambling. Three months ago. Rose pleaded guilty to filing false federal income tax returns in 1985 and 1987 that omitted $300,000 in income.

"I am truly sorry for what has happened," said Rose, "I am not a bad person, but I did some bad

When Rose pleaded guilty on April 20, Spiegel did not indicate what type of sentence he might impose. However, the judge repeatedly asked Rose if he understood that by pleading guilty he could be sentenced up to six years. Rose repeatedly answered, "Yes str.

There are a number of possibilities for sentencing, among them, no prison time, probation, a stiff fine, community service, a few months of prison time or a few years in prison, or a combination of punishments.

"The judge has a great deal of latitude," said federal prosecutor Michael Crites. "It's tough to say if the case merits prison time. Some people in similar cases are sentenced, some receive probation."

Rose's tax problems stemmed from concealing income from baseball eard shows, personal appearances, memorabilia sales and gambling between 1984 and 1987. In a plea bargain agreement. Rose pleaded guilty to filing false tax returns in 1985 and 1987. In return for the two guilty pleas, the government agreed not to file charges for 1984 and 1986.

Rose blamed his tax-cheating on gambling.

"I have a sickness," said Rose, "I had a gambling problem. I did not want anybody that I cared about to know how much I was gambling." Assistant federal prosecutor Bill Hunt said Rose lied on his tax returns to keep his financial advisers from learning that he was spending much of his income on gambling.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"I led two lives. I was totally out of con:rol. It started with alcohol and led to drugs. My wife is a saint. She lived with the devil. I've read in the past where people have called me street smart. I don't think there is anything as stupid or as sad as the life I've led."

St. Andrews' Old Course is a beautiful nightmare

United Press International

ST. ANDREWS. Scotland -The Old Course, site of this week's British Open, remains a testament to man's inability to duplicate the beauty of nature.

In these days of courses featuring island greens and enough railroad ties for a transcontinental train route, the Old Course remains a golf romantie's dream - and nightmare.

Perhaps only Augusta Na-tional and the Pebble Beach Golf Links can match the stark beauty and challenging obstacles provided by St. Andrews, which is celebrating its 500th anniversary this year. With championship pin placements and a stiff breeze, St. Andrews is a good test of golf," 1987 British Open champion and two-time Masters titlist Nick Faldo has said.

Right. And pushing a steam locomotive up a hill is a good test of strength.

The Old Course has been claiming victims for half a millenium, ever since 15thcentury hackers first came up with the idea of using small holes as targets. There originally were 22 holes at St. Andrews. later reduced to the 18 that has become standard throughout the world.

The Old Course has no architect. It was shaped by nature and fashioned by man. incorporating the undulating landscape laid out before him.

The fairways are irregular. often indirect in their path to the green and always strewn with bunkers. Lots of bunkers. There are about 140 bunkers dotting the Old Course, former sandy hollows created by sheep sheltering themselves from the wind. The sand pits come with names like Hell Bunker, Grave Bunker, the Coffins and the Lion's Mouth. They're deep. They're treacherous. They're potentially fatal to one's game. "There is always a way at St. Andrews, although it is not always the obvious way." the legendary Bobby Jones once said. Take the 12th hole, for example. After 11 holes of dodging bunkers that make the course look like a victim of a World War Il air raid, "Heathery In" looks like something one would find at the local country club. Standing at the tee, the fairway runs straight ahead and appears lush and green. A straight drive down the middle and a short approach shot mean an easy par.

the middle means a bogey at best. It's all a St. Andrews mirage.

Standing on the green and looking back, the fairway is dotted with bunkers, all invisible from the tee. The caddles call it the "crazy hole," because the safest shot would be to miss the fairway and deal with the rough. The greens are another St. Andrews mirage. Only Nos. 1, 9, 17 and 18 have their own greens. The rest are huge double greens, used on both the front and back side.

The massive greens make for inviting targets, but the golfer must take care to be on the proper side. Failing to do so could mean the equivalent of putting across a football field. perhaps without even seeing the Faldo once sank a 99-foot putt on St. Andrews No. 4 in a 1979 tournament. At last fall's Dunhill Cup. defending British Open champion Mark Calcavecchia found himself on the 12th green. 202 feet from the hole. Instead of putting, he used a wedge.

"I thought, 'Man, there's no way I can hit a putt that long and that straight:" Calcavecchia said. "So I whipped out my wedge and took a big of divot out of the green. "When I heard al! these gasps from the crowd, I sort of figured it out. I realized they didn't like me doing that. But I replaced the divot and (the ball) was at the back of the green." Then there's No. 17, called the 'Road Hole" and known as one of the most heartbreaking in

The golfer must tee off over a group of railway sheds that hug the right side of the course, also taking care not to hit the ball onto the grounds of the Old Course Hotel. The green is guarded on the left by the deep Road bunker and on the right by the road connecting the hotel to the Royal & Ancient clubhouse. There also is a shoulder-high stone wall just beyond the road.

It's highly unlikely that anybody will walk onto the Old Course for the first time and come away with the silver claret jug that goes to the British Open champion.

Of the eight Opens played at St. Andrews since World War II. only Sam Snead in 1946 and Tony Lema in 1964 have won in their first experience with th Old Course.

Instead, the crown probably Ill go to a player who ha learned the patience, courage, skill and respect needed to master the oldest and most Wrong. A straight drive down challenging course in the world.

King, Douglas come to terms

United Press International

NEW YORK - Attorneys for promoter Don King and heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas reached a settlement Tuesday that allows

King to retain his rights to the fighter's first title defense. 'My rights have been restored." King sald outside Judge Robert Sweet's courtroom at U.S. District Court where the settlement was announced. 'Due process is a wonderful thing. I get my rights back." The specific terms of the settlement were not released. but King said he would retain the rights to Douglas's first title defense, against Evander Holysteld on Sept. 21. However, he would sell those rights to The Mirage Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas. Nev., where the fight will

"King has to be paid for assigning his rights," said Robert Hirth. King's lawyer. He refused to disclose how much The Mirage would pay for the promotional rights. "The Douglas-Holyfield fight will come off." King proclaimed. But when he was asked if he would promote it he said, "No." When asked who would. King said tersely, "Mirage."

The agreement put to rest King's suit against Douglas and his manager John Johnson for breach of contract and against The Mirage for tortious interference of that pact. Douglas has a suit pending against King for breach of contract.

Also present at the announcement were John Sharer. the lawyer for The Mirage owner Steve Wynn.

Hemorrhold removal considered very safe

DEAR' DR. GOTT: I have the blood flow undergoes external hemorrhoids that re-turbulence. quire surgical repair, yet I am extremely concerned that the sphincter muscle around the anus might be damaged or affected during the operation.

Am I worrying unnecessarily?

DEAR READER: In all likelihood, yes. When properly performed, hemorrhoid surgery should not affect the anal sphincter because the hemor-rholds extend out from the skin. well away from the deeper structures.

If you are worried, however, I suggest you try non-surgical methods of controlling pain and itching: warm baths, sup-positories (such as Anusol) to facilitate evacuation, and meticulous attention to good hygiene. Also, laser surgery might be an option to consider. With this technique, the hemorrholds are burned off without the need for the traditional operation. Ask you doctor about this.

To give you more information. I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach To Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I like good foods including desserts: however, many people think you are doing something wrong if you cat sweets. What is the sensible approach to sugar in the diet for people who do not have a known health problem?

DEAR READER: Moderation.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 58-year-old woman in fairly good health. I don't drink coffee or consume alcohol, and I eat healthy foods and walk briskly for one hour five days a week. I'm puzzled because I have a very noticeable wheeze in a blood vessel in my head or neck when the body is compressed as I bend over to pet my cat or pick up something from the floor. Could the wheeze be caused by arterioscierosis? I don't have high blood pressure.

DEAR READER: An audible swooshing sound in the blood vessel is called a bruit. This often results when an artery is partially blocked or kinked, and Bruits in the neck may indicate the presence of an arteriosclerotic plaque in the wall of the carotid artery. This is not related to high blood pressure but, some experts believe, it can provide a source of blood clots that may be carried to the brain, causing stroke.

Although most bruits do not cause symptoms and don't need treatment. I think you should bring your observations to your doctor's attention. If you do have plaque in your carotid artery, as determined by special X-rays, the doctor might advise you to take one baby aspirin a day, to retard blood clotting and act as a preventative.

Today's deal was tailor-made for Careful Charlie, a declarer who prides himself on finding the safest play for the contract. When a low heart was led and East played the seven, declarer knew that he needed to develop nine tricks without letting East into the lead. A losing diamond finesse and a heart return would probably set the contract. Of course percentages favored the jack of clubs falling, in which case he would have 10 top winners. But the game bonus did not require 10 tricks; nine would be enough. Charlie saw that the surest way to win nine tricks without allowing East to gain the lead was to cash the king of clubs and then finesse the 10. With that working. declarer can run the club suit and make 10 tricks. Even if the 10 of clubs loses to the jack in the West hand, nine tricks are safe, since West cannot attack the K-J of hearts. Without making this safety play in the club suit, declarer would not make his contract, since East would have to come on lead before he had enough tricks for game.

Cook conjures up magical meals

Herald correspondent

SANFORD - Our Cook of the Week, Matt Condoluci, is not only a professional magician who has performed in such places as The Magic Castle in Hollywood, he is an excellent chef who creates a bit of magic in the kitchen.

Although Condoluci, his wife Joan and their live children are relatively new in Sanford, he has not wasted time in getting involved in their new hometown. Being very warm and friendly. Condoluci reveals that he loves people and meeting them. Condoluci has already been elected vice president of the PTA at Goldaboro Elementary School, where his and Joan's children attend classes.

His enthusiasm also shows for their spacious twelve-room mini-mansion on 20th Street. Matt and Joan explain that the older home needed repairs when they moved in. They proudly display their talents of refinishing and restoring the house. The Condoluci's attend auctions to find the Queen Anne era furnishings they have chosen for their home decor. Authentic 18th century art is displayed throughout the comfortable living room.

As she describes their move from Los Angeles in March, she describes their family as the "Brady Bunch" and explains that she and Condoluci had children from previous marriages.

Condoluci's three children are Mattio. Joey and Amanda. Joan's two children are Ryan and Devin. The ready-made family add a bit of charm and liveliness as they play in the once empty

The recipes that he shares are his own creation. Joan speaks highly of his spaghetti sauce, but Condoluci decides against giving the recipe since spaghetti is such a common "recipe giver." As they speak of his Italian scafood salad, one's tastebuds come alive.

Grandparents' hands empty

DEAR ABBY: Well, it happened again. Our son's birthday has come and gone without any acknowledgment from the grandparents on my husband's side. (My parents always remember.) Hov: do I deal with the pain it causes Junior when these grandparents forget his birthday? It's not as though they didn't know it was coming. Last Christmas. I gave each member of my husband's family a large calendar with all the family members' birthdays and anniversaries circled. And just this last Sunday, my husband's parents stopped by for a visit, and I reminded them that Wednesday would be Junior's birthday. When they said they remembered, we felt relieved that our calendar had worked.

Well Junior didn't even get a card from them. (They always give their daughter's children money or gifts on their birthdays. She makes a point of letting us know about (t.)

What should I tell Junior when he asks how come these grandparents didn't give him anything?

BIRTHDAY BOY'S MOM DEAR MOM: Had you not primed Junior to feel that he had a gift coming, he wouldn't feel the pain of disappointment. And if you want to protect Junior from the pain of disappointment, you would be wise to place less emphasis on gift-giving, which is apparently very important to you.

I suspect that your having given marked calendars to family members to "help them remember" special occasions might have been more resented than appreciated. Now would be an ideal time to teach Junior that nobody "owes" anybody a gift - so he should not expect one.

Hormone called ineffective for premenstrual syndrome

BOSTON - The most-widely used treatment for premenstrual syndrome appears ineffective in relieving symptoms of women suffering from the distressing disorder, researchers reported.

Ellen Freeman of the University of Pennsylvania said a synthetic version of the hormone progesterone was no more able to relieve symptoms of the syndrome, commonly called PMS, than a phony substitute in a study involving 168 women.

Although progesterone has long been used to treat PMS. Freeman said consistent scientifle evidence about its effectiveness has been lacking. She said results of the new study - the largest of its kind - should now

An estimated 7 million American women experience PMS to a degree that upacts their daily lives. Symptoms, which usually are most severe just prior to the onset of menstruation, can include irritability. nervous tension, headaches, mood swings, fatigue, breast tender-ness and abdominal cramps.

Freeman and colleagues compared the ability of vaginal suppositories containing either progesterone or a phony substitute to relieve PMS among the women in the study, who had an average age of 34 and had suffered PMS for an average of eight years.

No significant difference was found between the ability of the

The results indicate that "right now, there is no one wonderful medication for what is currently termed PMS."

Progesterone is a hormone produced by the ovaries to prepare a fertilized egg for implantation in the lining of the uterus. Freeman said doctors have long prescribed synthetic progesterone to relieve PMS in the belief that it had a sedative or tranquilizing effect that could relieve irritability, tension and certain other PMS symptoms.
