"However, his parents Kim and Gary Price, realtors, simply do not have the means to cover the tremendous expense of the transplant and living temporarily in St. Louis.

Louisians-Pacific, in the proposed settlement of a class-action lawsuit, has offered to pay for the repair and replacement of deteriorated oriented strand board (OSB) siding. Critics say the settlement, reached last week in Circuit Court in Lake County, is a bad deal that shortens the siding's warranty and could cost homeowners money.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Chiles: Lawmakers must act on health care before August

TALLAHASSEE - State lawmakers will have to pass health care reform this summer if Florida is to have any chance of dodging a federal cap on Medicaid that adds up to billions of dollars, Gov. Lawton Chiles

People will suffer if lawmakers miss the opportunity to get Florida an exemption.

Chiles warned Wednesday.
"We will see people turned out of nursing homes, cut off home health care, a lot of other things happen because we did not take advantage of a plum that we had out there," he said.

there," he said.

The governor said the state had to act "probably before August" although he said he didn't know exactly when he would call a special legislative session.

Chiles' urgency stems from a measure moving through Congress to cap the federal funding for Medicaid, which pays for most of the long-term nursing home care in Florida as well as general health care for the elderly, disabled and people on welfare.

Final action in Washington could come as carly as September, which means the state must take steps "way before then" to win an exemption, Chiles said.

If Florida could dodge the congressional proposal to cap Medicaid to an annual increase of 5 percent, the state would reap an additional 80 billion in federal and state delices are the ways. Chiles said.

an additional 80 billion in federal and state dollars over five years, Chiles said.

He has argued for months Florids may be able a wangle an exemption to the cap if it moves ahead on a state reform proposal that has wen the necessary federal approval but been anubbed by the Legislature.

The core idea of the reform pushed by the Democratic governor is to subsidize private insurance for thousands of working poor people with money saved by making welfare recipients on Medicaid go to health maintenance organisations.

The state Senate, now with a 22-18 Republican lead, has balked at the idea for the last two years.

Chiles called a news conference to release a letter sent to legislative leaders by 14 members of the state's $5-member congressional delegation.

The eight Democrats and six Republicans who signed the letter urged state Senate President Jim Scott, R-Port Lauderdale, and state House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, to move ahead on health care reform.

"Lack of action could onet our state billions in Medicaid funding that is desperately needed to provide health care to our poorest residents and skilled nursing home care to our seniors," reads the letter, dated June 7. "A lack of action will be foreing Florida taxpayers to make up the difference."

ference."
Scott spokeswoman Karen Chandler said her bose has serious concerns about the fairness of federal funding formulas and plans to continue to get more information on the issue from Washington.

But, she said, Scott sees a lot of unanswered questions about the reform backed by Chiles and whether it would result in an exemption from a Medicaid cap.

TALLAHASSEE — The same lawmakers who authorised hiring 42 new Florida Highway Patrol troopers ordered budget cuts that mean firing 41 dispatchers, protested employees and others trying to block the cuts.

During the legislative session, Franklin County Commissioner Bevin Putnal said Wednesday, "All we could hear about is

"They're willing to jeopardise the safety of all these officers out there to save a little money," Putnal told a meeting of about 20 northern Florida dispatchers and area giving up 3 percent pay raises state employees are due if that would help avoid the layoffs, said Capt. Ken Howes, a Florida Highway Patrol spokeeman.

"We wish it wasn't happening, it's not our idea," said Howes. "If anything can be done, we're all for it."

Ordered by lawmakers to slash $8 million from its budget, the highway patrol is closing 14 dispatch offices and consolidating radio dispatching duties in 14 remaining offices statewide.

Lawmakers didn't relish making the cuts, but didn't consider them a safety threat, said Sen. Rick Dantzler, D-Winter Haven, who chaired the Senate Ways and Means subcommittee that worked on the highway patrol budget.

"I don't think (Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles Director) Fred Dickinson is going to recommend anything that endangers highway patrolmen." Dantsier said. "I'm sorry it's happening, but if we can provide the same service for less money, what choice do we have?" Dispatchers predicted problems. For example, Penescola duty officer Al Kauses said his office, which has eight officer taking calls from Escambia and Santa Ross counties, will combine with the Crestview counties, will combine with the Creetview office, which has six officers taking calls from Okaloosa and Walton counties.

Only four Creetview officers will transfer to Pensacola; two will be laid off, incoming calls will be relayed from Creetview to Pensacola via telephone lines, said Kauses.

"The first electrical storm you have, or if a hurricane comes through, all these phone lines are susceptible to being knocked out, and all those troopers in Okaloosa and and all those troopers in Okaloses and Walton counties are going to be left without communications," he said. "What they are doing to a disaster."

doing is a diseaser."

"And they are going to do this on the Fourth of July weekend," added Panama City dispatcher Jimmy Hanno.

Burl and Darrell Burnham of the State Police Officers Coalition met with the group at a Tallahasses hotel, and said they were consulting attorneys about possible court challenges as well as circulating petitions for Chiles and the Cabinet.

Cincinnati police protest suspensions

CINCINNATI - About 250 police officers marched on City Hall to protest the suspensions of two officers videotaped pun-ching and kicking a teenage suspect and spraying him with Mace.

The uniformed, off-duty members of the Fraternal Order of Police marched past the downtown bus stop where the April 25 arrest took place. Hundreds of supporters joined them at City Hall for Wednes-day's city council meeting.

Along the route, children car-ried signs reading, "Please let my dad do his job," and "Walk a mile in their shoes."

On June 6, City Manager John Shirey suspended the officers for five days without pay, saying they used excessive force when arresting 18-year-old Pharon Crosby. Another officer was reassigned.

Crosby was charged with re-sisting arrest for allegedly re-fusing to move as police tried to disperse an unruly crowd of teens. The arrest was filmed by WLWT-TV.

Fireworks, 1996

We really got a bang out of the decision by Seminole County commissioners to kick in up to 85,000 for a fireworks display in Sanford. Commissioners also in a patriotic gesture donated $20,000 to the Florida Sesquicentennial celebration coinciding with Independence Day fireworks in Altamonte Springs, and that city's 75th birthday.

The problem we see with this magnanimous gesture is that Sanford cancelled the event last week. But wait. All should not be lost.

It is often human nature to procrastinate in matters that don't have to be addressed immediately. After all, July 4 is still a couple weeks away. Sanford volunteers had been struggling to coordinate the effort through SHDWA. Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association, and after SHDWA dropped support, through Rod Layer, who tried single-handedly to revive it. It was, however, too late for this year. Late support precluded Layer from hiring a pyrotechnician, because they book very early in the year for July Fourth firworks displays.

The still-exciting news is, the Paralysed Veterans of America came forward as the non-profit umbrella group so reasonable non-profit umbrella group so reasonable insurance could be purchased. The group generously kicked in $2,500 to Layer's fund that was then close to $5,000. And now the county could conceivably add $5,000 to that.

Still too late for this year.
But we have a suggestion. To the PVA who would have saved the day had it not been for some last minute glitches, and to the county, generously considering a possible $5,000 boost to the kitty: Do it anyway. Layer intends to spearhead the effort for next year, and if pledges are left in place as a headstare C. for 1996 fireworks in Sanford, what a display we would have! Better late than never this year. And a great beginning for next year.

Please care

Today, while taking my morning walk in the vicinity of The Marina Hotel. I was appalled to witness the brutal and probably deliberate carnage of a maliard in the roadway by a thoughtless, cold-hearted, conscious (knowing of one's own mind, aware) person driving a small pick-up truck, it broke my heart because I am a person who, at an early age, was instilled with "compassion." This beautiful duck was thrashing in the roadway mortally wounded with its mate standing nearby, both of us helpless to relieve him of his pain and suffering. I was filled with sadness because someone did not have the patience to wait for this duck to cross or at least go around him as there someone did not have the patience to wait for this duck to cross or at least go around him as there was plenty of room. I immediately tried to find someone to tell and came across a wildlife officer. I explained the situation to him and he immediately went to the area where the duck was dying. Whatever he did, I know he was "merciful." As I continued my walk home the tears flowed.

If we are not "compassionate" people (aware of fellow-suffering), we are doomed to cold-heartedness. Parents, teach your children well. If their hearts are filled with compassion for their fellow-man and helpless animals, they will grow into responsible, caring individuals with feelings and values that will last a lifetime. Please care enough to teach them well. enough to teach them well.

Time to phase out farm subsidies

During the depths of the Great Depression, Franklin Roosevelt prevailed upon Congress to pase the Agriculture Adjustment Act, which provided income and price supports for America's beleaguered farmers.

The law was supposed to be temporary. The government subsidies were supposed to tide the nation's farmers over until "the president determines that the national emergency in relation to agriculture has ended."

Well, six decades and 10 presidents later, the law remains on the federal books. And farm welfare has become one of the most sacred cows in the Washington pasture, rivaled only by Social Security. Medicare and preferred parking at National Airport for members of Congress.

The federal farm programs are up for reauthorisation this year has they are every half-decade). And for the first time since the New Deal ers, lawmakers are talking seriously about nudging farmers away from the federal trough.

No one is talking about cashiering the $10.5 billion farm program in a fell ewoop. Rather, the idea is to wean farmers from their taxpayer subsidies.

And toward that end, Senate agriculture

And toward that end, Senate agriculture committee chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., has proposed a reduction of federal farm spending by Provided States of the part of the same span and $17 billion over the same span and $17 billion over seven years.

Of course, even these modest, gradual cuts have met realstance from politicians pandering to the farm lobby. Indeed, on a recent trip to Montana, President Clinton warned that if Republican farm cuts are enacted, there will be "a lose of markets, and individual farmers will go under."

The president is playing to the mythology that most recipients of government farm aid are small family farmers, like the kindly, old couple depicted in Orant Wood's farmous painting "American Gothic." But that famous painting "American Gothic." But that portrait does not jibe with the present reality

The fact is that 70 percent of American farms manage to make do without federal sid. On the other hand, a scent 5 percent of farms - mainly big, corporate farms boasting revenues of $250,000 or more - receive 40 percent of government handouts.

If it were not bad enough that the most well-off farmers receive a disproportionate share of federal subsidies, government farm aid also has the perverse effect of driving up the cost of food at the supermarket.

That's because federal farm programs aim to raise farm incomes by limiting the volume of crops that come to market year by year, which, in turn, artificially raises crop prices.

For instance, under the voluntary acreage program, farmers actually receive a check from the government for not growing certain crops -- like corn or wheat or feed grains -- so that the market price will go up.

At the same time, the government also sets a "target price" for these crops. If the market price falls below the target, the government makes up the difference with the farmer.

Paths of movers reconverge

In the years 1961-64 the trajectories of two very different lives intersected, with historic consequences for American politics.

Barry Goldwater was the scion of an Arizona merchant dynasty who had been elected to the U.S. Senate and become the chief political spokesmen for the growing conservative movement. F. Clifton White was a gangly upstate New Yorker who had carved out a career in the engine room of Republican politics, so a manager rather than a candidate. In the early 1960s White put together a national organization that, to general estonishment, assessed in giving Goldwater. actonichment, succeeded in giving Goldwater the Republican presidential nomination on the first ballot at the convention of 1964.

After that, the two men went their separate ways again. But the Goldwater nomination, despite his subsequent defeat by Lyndon Johnson, permanently shifted control of the Republican Party into conservative hands, and led by clearly traceable steps to the election of Ronald Reagan and the current conservative dominance of American politics.

Now, by coincidence, the memoirs of Clif White, who died in 1993, and the best biography of Goldwater yet written (and indeed the only one in 50 years) have appeared almost simultaneously in bookstores.

Les Edwards' "Goldwater" (published by legnery) is a comprehensive, meticulously sesurched life of the Arisona senator from his birth on New Year's Day in 1909 to his current crotchety retirement on a hill outside Phoenix. It is a strange yet inspiring story. Goldwater didn't want the 1964 nomination, correctly guessing that he would lose the election. But had become the chief symbol of the factoring conservative cause, and was too fast-growing conservative cause, and was too loyal to the young enthusiasts who had railied to his banner to let them down.

Edwards, as a political novice, worked for the Goldwater campaign, and his account is naturally liveliest when he is describing the various triumphs and disasters that he witnessed personally. But he misses nothing important, and has turned up some brand-new nuggets of staggering size.

We all know, for example, what happened to Richard Nixon when several low-level agents of his campaign broke into the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee in 1972. But Research reports that in 1971 J. Edgar Hoover told assistant attorney general Robert Mardian that the FBI bugged Goldwater's campaign plane in 1964 on the direct orders of Lyndon Johnson!

On the later Goldwater, who has at one time or another taken squarely contradictory posi-tions on everything from abortion to Nelson Rockefeller, Edwards properly maintains a critical distance, sharply condemning (for example) Goldwater's lame excuses for back-ing Ford over Reagan in 1978, when the truth is that he was simply jealous.

But Edwards' final evaluation of the craggy Arisonan is on balance favorable, as of course it ought to be. As he writes, Goldwater's "candidacy meried the true beginning of a tectonic shift in American politics."

It was, however, Clif White whose political expertise brought the pressures generating that shift to bear on the nuts-and-bolts machinery of the Republican Party. and converted an idealistic dream into a powerful political have very humble origina.

Foreign aid cuts shortsighted

Republicans in Congress are trying to cut nearly $3 billion in foreign aid — one of the least popular items in the budget, and one of the most misunderstood. President Clinton has promised to veto the measure, claiming it represents a return to "isolationism" which would tie his hands in foreign policy. Yet some public health advocates see a lar greater danger in cutting off purchasers of American weapons. The bulk of the cuts will affect poor nations with far less political clout and where the meager foreign aid dollars that flow from America can spell the difference between life and death.

All told, Republicans want to cut $800 million, or approximately 35 percent, in direct development assistance. Preventive measures — the most cost-effective way to curb disease — will suffer the most. First on the list of casualties will be vaccines.

Why does this matter? On humanitarian grounds alone, the lack of American aid means 4 million children each year will go without vaccines for preventable diseases like measles, whooping cough and diphtheris. At least 100,000 children will die of diarrhea and dehydration, and another 100,000 children a year will suffer nutritional blindness. The AIDS epidemic, which is already rampant in some African countries, would get worse with Albe epidemic, which is already rampant in some African countries, would get worse with the loss of prevention programs.

Some public health officials argue that scaling back Third World prevention programs would have implications for our own safety and security. The rise in international travel means a viral outbreak in Africa could reach Kennedy Airport in New York within a matter of hours. The recent Ebola outbreak in Zaire, for example, could have reached epidemic proportions if one carrier had stepped on a plane bound for overseas.

"Microbes have no boundaries," says Stephen Morse, a virologist at Rockefelier University in New York and author of "Emerging Viruses," "They are citizens of the world. They have discovered global travel and are doing it."

Funding for disease prevention has already been cut back severely from its high in the 1970s. This, says Frank Lostumbo of the National Council for International Health, has helped weaken the health infrastructure and hindered our ability to prevent diseases that arrive from abroad.

"Policy makers have foresteen the section."

hindered our ability to prevent diseases that arrive from abroad.

"Policy makers have forgotten the sdage about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure." Lostumbo told our associate Melinda Mass. He points to the $64 million provided by the United States in the 1970s to help stadicate amalipox. As a result of that investment, Ambricans are now saving $500 million each year in vaccination costs.

Other efforts could yield similar results. Polio, for example, has been largely eliminated from the Western Hemisphere by the availability of vaccines, though it is still prevalent elsewhere. If funding dried up, it would cripple the effort to eradicate polio altogether by 2000.

Plyler said, "we are still working on the con-stitutional amendment."

The STOP bill started as a constitutional amendment that failed to make the ballot last year. It had the support of many politicians, but not Chiles. The governor supported a minimum of 85 percent of sentence for violent and repeat offenders, not all criminals, and declined to sign the petition.

Tomorrow's leaders must deal with today's budget vows

Oy WALTER R. INCARO An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — So far, the balanced-budget debate is about promises, not proof. That's to be delivered later, over seven years or 10, and while today's government leaders can set the course, tomorrow's will be in charge when the final bills come due. And they will be costly.

So when Republican leaders say, as they do, that Congress already has produced a balanced budget by 2002, there's some political poetic license involved. They have drafted two plans to be melded by the House and Senate. They're two months behind schedule.

With President Clinton's rival proposal to balance the budget in 2005, the top echelons in both political parties are committed to shrinking the federal government, although they still collide on how, where and when.

Whether the break-even date is 2002 or three years later or something between, the call from the Democratic White House for cuts, in spending and necessarily in the federal role, is change in the pattern. Indeed, while Clinton pressed his own deficit-reduction program in his first two years — and got no Republican help then — his new-look budget is a sharp turn from the one he sent Congress only four months ago.

That break with Democratic orthodoxy is drawing protests from within the president's own party, and not only from ardent liberals.

"I don't believe it's right for the Democrats to kind of overreact to the last election." Clinton said Wednesday. But to Democratic critics, he's the one overreacting to the Republican takeover of Congress, with a budget plan they deem tilted the GOP way.

The president said he isn't yielding on priorities like education, won't let Medicare beneficiaries suffer, won't accept Republican tax cut plans. "In a sense, he's created bookends with the Republicans," said

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who wanted him to wait longer.

The budget resolution Congress is trying to complete sets guidelines for action there, and isn't subject to a Clinton veto.
"... He's got a veto on everything else that follows," said Leon Panetta, the White House chief of staff.

Republicans scoffed at the Clinton proposal as a belated non-starter, a flip-flop that will have little or no impact. That's politics: some of the same Republicans had been demanding for weeks that Clinton weigh in with a new budget, since his original was scrapped by Congress. He'd said that one would continue his course of deficit reduction, but it showed imbalances widening by the year

For weeks, Clinton refused to move, asying he would wait until the Republicans settled on a plan. He said he'd work with them for balanced budgets, and would say how at the propertime.

He decided that was Tuesday night, although Democratic congressional leaders wanted to wait, and said so, before and after his five-minute TV budget message. He'd been assailing GOP cuts as Draconian and menacing to popular programs, particularly Medicare. Now he's for Medicare cuts, too, although more modest ones. And that cedes back an issue.

It also put both parties on his

It also put both parties on his case, even though House Speaker Newt Gingrich said it may include some good ideas Republicans can accept. Sen. Pete Domenici, R.N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said the new Clinton plan showed "that he agrees with Republicans on many things"

"It is probably the only time in history that Congress has produced a balanced budget while the president sat in the side-lines," Domenici said in a morning-after TV interview. "We've proven we can do it in seven years," House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said in another.

But designing a balanced budget and delivering it are different matters. Budgets are based on projections, on scoring, in the congressional parlance. They include assumptions on economic performance that are hard to project for one year at a time, let alone seven or 10. The biggest one-year cuts in all the proposals come in the latter years. In Clinton's version, it would be 2003, well past the end of a alone seven or 10. The biggest one-year cuts in all the proposals come in the latter years. In Clinton's version, it would be 2003, well past the end of a second term if he gets one.

The federal budget hasn't been balanced since 1969, and that was a break in a deficit pattern. Before that, it was 1960. Clinton boasts that he is the first president since Harry Truman to reduce deficits for three years in a row.

Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan both came to the White House promising to balance budgets within a term. Neither came close. But until George Bush's last budget, the annual message to Congress always had projected balance by the end of the five-year projections presidents are required to issue.

That points to the gap between plan and performance. It's still there to be bridged.

Cult leader cracks

TOKYO — After a month of relentless police interrogation, doomsday cult leader Shoko Asahara has reportedly cracked — confessing not to the deadly Tokyo subway attack, but to standing by as a cult disciple was strangled.

The confession, reported by Japanese media today, would mark a major break for investigators, who had previously gotten little more than small talk and silent meditation out of the guru.

Police believe Asahara, charged with murder for the March

Bosnian Serbs face biggest challenge

TOMISLAVGRAD. Bosnia-Hersegovina — Bosnian Serbe, already faltering on some key battlefields, may soon face their biggest military challenge yet; the first major offensive by combined Croat and government forces.

Bosnian Croat officials say their troops have opened a southern front against the Serbs and that Muslim-led government forces will to them from the west and the cast.

government forces will join them from the west and the east. Independent military analysts, noting that thousands of Bosnian Croat and regular Croatian army troops have gathered in Livno, 60 miles west of Sarajevo, predicted a joint Muslim-Crost summer offensive.

Such a development would be a milestone in Croat-Muslim cooperation, which has existed mainly on paper despite agreement more than a year ago to form a Bosnian federation.

Terrorist attack

MOSCOW — Security forces ringed a city in southern Russia today where gunmen demanding an end to the war in Chechnya threatened to kill up to 500 hostages, seized in street battles that left dozens of people dead.

The terrorist attack — one of the worst in recent Russian history — appeared to mark a major turn in the Chechen struggle to break away from Russia. Defeated in Chechnya by the Russian army, the rebels had warned they would attack civilian targets in Russia.

The estimated 100 sunmen were demanding Russia.

The estimated 100 gunmen were demanding Russia withdraw the troops sent in December to snuff out the republic's 3-year-old drive for independence.

Top government officials in Moscow ordered security increased in the capital to guard against possible attacks. Up to 16,000 troops were being deployed, the Interior Ministry said.

Court demands couple divorce

CAIRO, Egypt — in a case attacked as an assault on freedom of thought and privacy, a court has ruled that an Egyptian couple must divorce against their will because of the husband's scholarly writings on Islam.

Wednesday's unprecedented ruling said that articles by Naar Abu Zeid, a professor of Arabic literature, amounted to apostasy — renunciation of his Muslim faith — meaning he could no longer be married to a Muslim woman.

The court's judgment was immediately attacked by liberal lawyers and human rights activists.

"This judgment is a threat to all thinkers and liberals in Egypt," said Saced Ashmawi, a writer and former judge who

The couple vowed to defy the verdict. "We will be together no matter what," his wife, Ibtihal Younis, told The Associated

The ruling comes amid a 3-year-old campaign of violence by militants trying to impose lalamic law on Egypt.

Friends said Abu Zeid feared now for his life because a Muslim cieric said the ruling meant he should be executed under lalamic law. In 1992, a well-known writer was murdered after a cleric called him an apostate.

The lawsuit against Abu Zeid, a literature professor at Cairo University, was brought by fundamentalist Muslim lawyers who maintained his writings about the Koran, lalam's holy book, made him an apostate and therefore he could not be married to a Muslim woman.

In January 1994 a lower court threw the lawsuit out, saying the lawyers were not interested parties.

Dilemma for older women

BOSTON — A study published today presents a dilemma for older women on long-term hormone therapy: Estrogen lowers the risk of heart disease and fractures, but may also raise the chance of breast cancer.

Hormone replacement therapy — either estrogen alone or estrogen plus progestin — was once given only to help ease the hot flashes and other symptoms of menopause. Now, many women frequently stay on it for years, even for life.

The study in the New England Journal of Medicine complicates the issue. Researchers reported that women on hormone therapy for more than five years had a 46 percent higher risk of breast cancer than those who never used it.

'It clearly raises the need to reconsider the risk and benefit if a woman is going to use hormones for more than five years," said Dr. Graham A. Colditz of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, the study's principal author.

FBI continues search for man

WASHINGTON - FBI agents are searching anew for a man who may have helped rent a truck believed used in the Oklahoma City bombing. But they no longer have a sketch to guide them, because the man called John Doe No. 2 was found and cleared.

The Justice Department said Wednesday that the FBI's eight-week nationwide manhunt had located a man who resembles the three sketches issued of John Doe No. 2.

The terse written statement said the FBI determined that the man visited a Ryder truck rental office in Junction City, Kan., on a day other than April 17, when Timothy McVeigh, the chief defendant in the April 19 bombing, rented a truck there.

"The bureau has determined that the individual who has been interviewed was not connected with the bombing." the department said.

Nearly a week after the Senate began work on the massive bill — which would overhaul half a century of telecommunica-tions law — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., scheduled a final vote on the bill for today.

The bill would let local telephone, long-distance and cable companies get into each other's businesses and free the largest electric utilities to provide an array of telecommunications services.

And it would lift longstanding limits on how many TV and radio stations one company may own nationally and remove an 83-year-old restriction on foreign ownership of telecommunications companies as long other countries remove theirs.

Call it perverse curiosity

LOS ANGELES - Granted, it was an indelicate question. Sill, everyone wanted to know. Call it perverse curiosity.

"Do we have sex?" Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson blurted out as a liesitant Diane Sawyer edged up to the question. "Yes! YES!

In a live interview Wednesday on ABC's "PrimeTime Live," Michael Jackson and his wife said they share the same house and bedroom, denied the child molestation allegations against Jackson and discussed their courtship and marriage.

"Why wouldn't we have a lot in common?" the 27-year-old daughter of Elvis Prealey said, perfectly coiffed in a powder-blue suit and high heets.

Striker replacements bill clears panel

WASHINGTON - A bill reaffirming the legality of employers. even those with federal contracts, to permanently replace striking workers has received House committee approval over the objections of united Democrats.

The legislation clearing the Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee on Wednesday by a 22-16 party-line vote would nullify President Clinton's executive order barring federal contracts to companies that permanently replace striking workers.

The bill now goes to the House floor for action.

Clinton signed the order last March after failing to get through Congress in 1994 legislation to blackball companies that lifted strike replacements.

Committee Chairman William E. Goodling, R-Pa., said the order "runs counter to the clearly expressed legislative intent" and undermined existing policies.

FCC tightens rules on phone 'siamming'

WASHINGTON - The Federal Communications Commission has adopted rules to protect consumers from being led into unwittingly switching long-distance telephone carriers.

The changes announced Wednesday were designed to strengthen 1992 rules against unauthorized switching, known as "slamming." The FCC said it still receives about 750 complaints a month about the practice.

Thousands of people complain that they returned mailings to cuter contests or make charitable donations only to learn that at the same time they had unknowingly authorized a switch in their long-distance company.

Under the new rules, customers who receive higher bills after their long-distance carriers were switched without their approval will have to pay only the amount the original carrier would have charged for the same calls, FCC officials said.

And to avoid confusion, long-distance companies will be required to provide consumers a clearly marked piece of paper. separate from other promotional material, to sign to authorize a change in service.

No new wheels for Chelses

WASHINGTON - Chelsea Clinton, who usually is driven around by the Secret Service anyway, probably won't be getting her own ear when she turns 16 next February.

U.S. lauds Vietnam's cooperation

WASHINGTON - The State Department says authorities in flanot have been "extremely positive" about increasing counter-narcotics cooperation with the United States.

The statement Wednesday followed confirmation by a congressional official on Tuesday that Secretary of State Warren Christopher is recommending to President Clinton the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two former wartime rivals.

Clinton said at a Wednesday afternoon news conference that he had not made a decision yet on the matter. But he praised the Victnamese for having "been quite forthcoming" in supplying information about the fate of Americans missing since the Victnam War.

Those child-proof caps

Consumer agency seeks to make child-resistant lids easier to open

By DARLENE SUPERVILLE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Tess Canja can't open child-resistant caps. So, the 68-year-old board member of the American Association of Retired Persona leaves them off after she struggles to get them open.

"I'm a perfectly normal, healthy adult, but I do not have the strength in my hand, the dexterity that an 18-year-old would have," said Canja, of Port Charlotte, Fla. "Sometimes the caps are very difficult to open."

But the Consumer Product Safety Commission says Canja's habit is a too-common practice that unnecessarily puts children

The commission set a vote today on a proposal to require that child-resistant packages be designed so they're easier for sentors to open, in the hope that more people will use them.

But opponents, an ad-hoc group of manufacturers. packagers and drug companies. say the change would be counterproductive and make it easier found that older adults have the for precoclous youngsters to get into the packages too.

People who rely upon them it used to be and their child may Pfund, attorney for the Coalition for Responsible Packaging.

The coalition fears the proposed change will lead to more cases like that of 16-month-old Briana Riggins, who opened a supposedly child-resistant bottle of aspirin last December.

"When I came around the corner of the room, all I saw was the white around her mouth and the bottle in her hand," said her grandmother. Alaya Robinson of Temple Hills, Md. "I didn't know how many she had taken."

Officials eite increases in the number of grandparents caring for grandchildren and statistics showing that one-fifth of all child polsonings happen at grandma's house as strong evidence for making the change.

Eric Rubel, the CPSC's general

Some people can't muster won't know that their package enough strength to open existing may be less child-resistant than caps. Most have tops that must be pushed down and turned, or be more at danger," said Sally arrows on the cap and bottle that must be aligned and pushed to pop the top off.

The commission expects the rule to lead to caps that rely less on strength and more on cognitive skills, possibly requiring light squeezing as the cap is turned. Some already are available.

Older people also take more medicines than younger adults, some of which are very dangerous to young children when ingested, noted Rose Ann Soloway, administrator of the American Association of Poison Control Centers.

Deaths of young children have declined from about 450 a year to about 50 under the Polson Prevention Packaging Act of 1970, CPSC Chalrman Ann Brown said. But hospital estimated 140,000 young children for poison-related aceldents every year, she noted.

The commission uses two panels to test packages; one with children under age 5 and another with adults aged 18 to 45. But it's the proposal to remake the adult panel with people aged 60-75 that Industry finds offensive.

CPSC officials say packages that pass both panels will be easter for seniors to open and still protect children from unintended poisonings.

But industry doesn't believe Congress had sentors in mind when it required that the panel be composed of "normal" adults. And with some simpler packaging already available, the coalition believes it's just a matter of time before it is widely used, Pfund said.

Pfund also noted that the law allows manufacturers to sell one size of their products in standard packaging for the elderly, dis-abled and others who find child-resistant caps difficult. But Rubel said the commission hopes people who buy medicine in regular bottles will switch to the easier-to-open child-resistant containers once the proposal is adopted and the bottles begin entering the

Heat, Huggins meet

MIAMI - University of Cincinnati basketball coach Bob Huggins is a top candidate for the Miami Heat head coaching job, according to published reports.

Huggins reportedly met with the team's owner Wednesday. The Miami Herald and The Cincinnati Enquirer reported in today's editions. The Heat is offering a four-year contract worth $1.2 million a year, with a $1 million bonus if Hungins is still coach after four years, the impulser said, citing sources it did not identify. Magic learn hard lessons as Rockets defend crown HOUSTON — Shaquille O'Neal left the Summit speaking softly and Horsee Grant had a sour taste in his mouth.

They didn't get the NBA title. They had to settle for learning a few hard leasens from the two-time NBA champion Houston Rockets.

"We learned a lot of leasens, but I wish we didn't have to learn them this way," Magic coach Brian Hill said in a somber poetgame interview. "Sometimes adversity brings out the best in people. Hopefully the adversity that we all feel will bring out the best in our team."

O'Neal, speaking almost in a whisper, was still proud of his teammates, despite Wednesday night's 115-101 loss that gave the Rockets a 4-0

"We were down S-0, we could have easily given up," O'Neal said. "We didn't. That's the sign of a good, strong team. We are a young team, and I am a young player. We came out like warriors."

It was an uncomfortable experience for the Magic, who played so well against Indiana in wrapping up the Eastern Conference title, but could never get into the Finals series.

"It's a bad taste; we don't want that next year." Grant said. "We don't want this feeling again. We'll be back to the finals next year.

"It was a good learning experience for us and we're still learning. We needed more experience and we got it playing the Rockets in the Finals."

The Rockets made believers of the Magic,
"People say they don't have a power forward and they don't have this and that," Anfernee Hardsway said. "All they have is a bunch of guys who play well together and get the job done."

High-driving Fitch wrestles car to Modified victory

By PAUL MARGOOLIA Special to the Herald

SAMSULA — Despite being plagued by a handling problem, Sameula's kilke Fitch used the high groove to his advantage to win the Modified feature last Saturday night, June 10, at New Smyrna Speedway.

"We just got lucky tonight," said Fitch, who drives the New Smyrna Beach NAPA Cavalier.

"The handling was off some. I could get into the corners all right, but I had trouble getting out.

"I tried the outside and it held."

Fitch, who started the race from the seventh position, moved into third by lap two. After several laps of wheel-to-wheel racing with Danny Bancroft, Fitch claimed the No. 2 spot.

For the next few laps, Fitch tried in vain to go to the inside of front runner Dave Savicki. Fitch While Fitch hung on to the lead, Joe Middleton got around Bancroft and finished second. Savicki placed fourth in front of Rose Eldridge.

Gene VanAletine held off a late race charge by his brother, Brian, to win the Mini-Stock feature. Jared Allison, who worked his way through the field from the rear of the pack, finished third ahead of Wayne Clark and Jim Trevarthan.

David Rogers, abourd the TM Ranch Pontiac Pirebird, notched his second consecutive FASCAR Late Model feature win.

"We're getting a little bit better each week," said Rogers, the winningest Late Model pilot at the high-banked New Smyrna half-mile oval.

"When I won last week, I felt we got the monkey off of our back because of the bad luck we've had. Tonight, I feel a little bit better about our racing. But I can't get too confident, though, because that little monkey could still be hiding somewhere."

Longwood's Jason Burkett held off John Passett for second place, his best ever Late Model finish. Fourth place went to Mark Hinkoffer, who took the checkers in front of Mike Kubanek.

Will going away to college cause couple to drift apart?

DEAR MR. STEWART: I am a senior in high school and have been, for the past three years, going with a girl just one year behind me. When I graduate and go on to college, will we still be going together although I am moving and going to a college in Pennsylvania? I am worsted that we stight are someone size while I night see someone else while I un gone. I don't know what to

LAKE MARY DEAR JEFF: I was always taught that "absence makes the heart grow fonder;" perhaps your emphasis should be on your education at this point and let nature take its course. There are no guarantees in this life and your situation is among the countless thousands of others just like it. I don't want to sound like some "doting parent," tell-ing you what to do, but don't you think that this is common you think that this is common sense on the part of both of you in going about each of your normal responsibilities of education and socializing. You cannot limit your opportunities to meet new people as you cannot allow the heart to constrain and contain her. An understanding of affection and mutual trust is needed here! Each of you should be able to participate in all of yur normal activities whether you are going to college or, as the case obviously is, she still has another year of high school to finish.

To make each other promise not to date or be faithful is unreal, not to say that your relationship is not strong, but you obviously you have concerns. I am a firm believer in whatever is meant to be "is" and what is not is "not." Men have gone off to war and come home gone off to war and come home to their wives, and in most cases, with relationships intact. What's to say that your's won't be too as well? Try to remember that you are both very young, have not experienced much yet in life, and perhaps each of you needs this time apart to fulfill your personal needs first.

I respect the intensity of what' you are entrusting me to try to you are entrusting me to try to advice you about, however, this is one lesson in life that "a paychic" cannot help you with. What I can tell you is that each of you shall survive this trial period and learn much from each other; just try to remember to be honset with each other and at all times the same.

DEAR JERRY: I have misplaced a ring my mother trandmother: it's a family grandmother: it's a family heiriosm and worth a lot of mency. My mom will "hunt me down and kill me" if I tell her that I lest it. I can't describe it to you because my mother reads your column too and she'd know it was me. Do you think you could just help me find it without me telling you what it looks like? The last place that I saw it was in a little white hox saw it was in a little white box that I keep it in and on my dresser. Please help me! KAREN

DEAR KAREN: Don't worry!
The ring will show up ... "as I see that it fell into a crevice somewhere behind your dresser door at the bottom of that piece of furniture. You can't see it easily as it is wedged in and not in obvious light. What's more interesting is that you will find, too, another item, possibly a neckiace, something that you thought gone quite awhile ago, SANFORD but not as expensive as the ring. I would like to know and my readers would like to know if I have helped you, so please "write to me again" when and if you find what you have lost.

When he got older, he decided Billy was too habyish, so he saked us to call him Bill, which wasn't too bad — we called one Big Bill and the other Little Bill. That worked out fine until Little Bill got bigger than Big Bill.

Now it's worse, it's Young Bill and Old Bill, and you can imagine how thrilled Father is to be Cld Bill at 44.

Not only that, but their voices are identical, and they are constantly being mistalsen for each other on the telephone. Their mail also gets mixed up.

Your husband did the right thing in sending the flowers to his former mother-in-law for the reasons he stated. However, he should have put both your names on the flowers.
When a woman marries a man with children from a prior marriage, she must accept the fact that there will always be some connection between the families.

DEAR ABST: Regarding people who are always late: My "late" husband was late for everything.

Many times we would board a plane just as the doors were about to alam shut. One time he literally threw me and our luggage on a moving train, then ran alongside and hopped on! I imagine he arrived at St. Peter's Gate at the last minute waving his ticket!

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that children receive their combined DPT (diptheria-pertussis-tetan us) immunisation at 6 months. 15 to 18 months, 2 years and 5 years of age. Thereafter, booster shots should be given at 10-year intervals so that the immunity is always current.

Cold cuts

Colds aren't really inevitable

DENVER — Colds aren't really inevitable if you cut the odds by prevention, observes B. Burton, infection control specialist at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine.

Your hands are big spreaders of cold viruses. At work, for example, you touch contaminated keyboards, doorknobs, and telephones — where the viruses can live for hours — then spread them to vulnerable spots on your face. "The average person touches his face within the areas of the eyes, nose and mouth about once every 20 minutes, which causes the virus to spread unknowingly," says Burton.

The best prevention is to wash your hands regularly with scap and water, especially after using the restroom.

Then keep knobs, photos and keyboards germ-free with alcohol wipes or a cotton ball dipped in alcohol.

Alcohol by the glass helps, too. Burton cites recent research that suggests two servings of alcohol a day can improve your ability to ward off colds.

Another factor that can make you more likely to pick up a cold is stress, because it weakens the immune system.

Smoking and healing

Here's seems more bad news about emphing: it can slow down heating.
Smokers who give up the weed even temperarily heat faster from wounds or surgery, a study by the Reylor College of Medicine in Houses suggests.

And another study, by the University of Tems Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, finds that a non-emoker will recover 80 percent faster from a broken leg than a smoker.

A third study, conducted at the Carolinas Medical Center in Charlotte, N.C., found that seavy emohers were more likely to have back pain as a result of work-related injury.

"Rach time mostine entered the nervous system, blood flow was restricted at the site of the surgery." says Dr. David Netscher, associate professor of plastic surgery at Baylor, whose researchers used nicotine patches to measure difference in blood flow in people undergoing hand surgery.

The insufficient blood flow can cause the akin to alough, meaning improper healing and eventual death of the tiesue, Netscher says. A skin graft might be necessary, and where large amounts of skin are involved, as in plastic surgery, the procedure must be done again. In general surgery, the incision may have to sutured again.

Reduction of blood flow to the wound site can be as high as 30 percent in the first few minutes after nicotine has traveled through the nervous system; it takes an average of 25 minutes for nerves that constrict blood vessels to return to normal.

Netscher says that surgery failure rate

The UTSME study, tracking patients for closed and grade I open tibis (lower leg) fractures for a year, found that amolters' broken bones took an average 276 days to heal, while non-amolters' broken bones averaged 146 days.

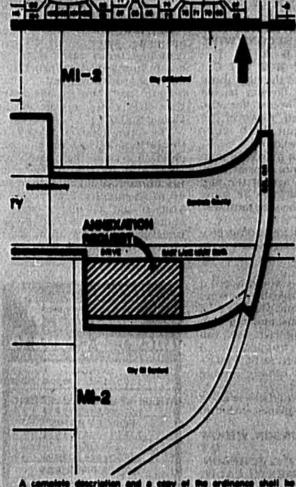

"At one-year follow-up, two fractures had not healed. Both of these patients were emokers," says Dr. Miguel A. Schmitz, senior resident of the school's department of orthopedic surgery, who presented his findings to the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

Dr. Edward Henley Jr., chairman of the orthogedic surgery department at Carolinas, found that 50 percent of the 550 people he surveyed about work injuries and who complained of low back pain were amokers; 20 percent of the group with similar complaints were non-amokers. He also presented his findings to the AAOS.

"Of the emokers with back pain, those who smoked more than one pack a day reported feeling more handicapped by their back pain," Hanley says, "Leg cramps also were described as more disabling in those who smoked over one pack a day."

Those surveyed were interviewed about present and past back and leg pains, lifestyles, work and leisure habits, and no significant relationships were found between these and the injuries. Neither age nor sex were factors, Hanley adds.

NOTICE OF CHANGE OF LAND USE PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD July 5, 1996

Notice is hereby given that the Seminole County Local Planning Agency/Planning and Zoning Commission (LPA/P&Z) will conduct a public hearing on July 5, 1995, beginning at 6:00 p.m., or as soon thereafter as possible, in the County Services Building, 1101 East First Street, Senford, Florida, Room 1028 (Board Chambers). The purpose of this hearing is to receive public input, input from any local government or other agency, and make recommendations to the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners on a Large Scale Administrative Plan Amendment to the Seminole County Comprehensive Plan to change the use of land on properties as described below. as described below.

On February 14, 1995, the Board of County Commissioners (the Board) directed that a small area study, known as the Bear Gully Creak Small Area. Land Line Study, be undertaken for the purpose of evaluating the Country's Comprehensive Plan and for providing recommendations to the Board that would: (1) protect the existing character of the study area; and (2) ensure that future growth and development within the study area is compatible with existing large lot residential uses. In conjunction with this study the Board directed that the Comprehensive Plan Future Land Use designation within the study area be amended from the existing Low Density Residential designation to the Suburban Estates designation (Amendment: 95F.FLU16). The area subject to the plan amendment is penerally described as located on the sest side of the pian amendment is generally described as located on the east side of Tuskawilla Road, south of Red Bug Lake Road, west of the Central Florida GreeneWay (S.R. 417) and north of S.R. 426, containing approximately 798 acres (see map below) (BCC District 1). An additional property, having an existing future land use designation of Medium Density Residential and containing approximately 61.8 acres (see map below), may also be included in the amendment request to the Suburban Estates designation during the public hearing process.

Note: Land use amendments on property containing flood prone and wetland areas remain subject to the applicable Conservation land use designation and various overlay zoning classifications and the provisions relating thereto. The general public is encouraged to appear at this hearing and present input in accordance with the procedures used by the LPA/P&Z c/o "Comprehensive Planning Office", 1101 East First Street, Senford, FL 32771, telephone (407) 321-1130, extension 7371. This hearing may be continued from time to time as found necessary by the LAP/P&Z.
