

Johnny Risko Gets Closer To Heavy-Weight Throne By Decision Over Campolo

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor
NEW YORK, Mar. 25—(AP)—Whether or not he ever climbs very high on the heavyweight champion's ladder, Johnny Risko is the giant-killer of the prize ring. Nevertheless, in the main event of a benefit card at Madison Square Garden last night, the speedy Cleveland boxer needed more assistance from the charitable spirit of the occasion to take a close decision from his big Argentine rival, Victorio Campolo.

Risko, in a somewhat rotund flash to the job by legging him a month ago under the mellow moon of Miami, was given a close decision over the Argentine, Campolo, in a vast majority of expert as well as spectators' opinion. It was a substantial margin of points. But the chunky Cleveland fighter gained the official verdict on a 2 to 1 bid.

Referee Arthur Donovan decided the issue by ruling for Risko. The judges were split, Charles F. Magallon voting for Campolo and George Patrick for Risko.

A crowd of 11,000 heard the verdict, even though it appeared a matter of poetic justice to beholders of the issue. Johnny Risko, who is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighed 165 pounds and was a close contender for the title. Campolo, who is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighed 165 pounds and was a close contender for the title.

FAMED SHOW DOG MAKES CALL AT HERALD'S OFFICE

Johnny Jones Performs Before Staff Group

Accompanied by the trainer and director, "Red" Cowan, and Joe Redding, manager of the Johnny J. Jones Circus, "Frost King," a famous Alaskan husky dog that is now in the city with the circus, paid a visit to The Herald office this morning and displayed his talents as a performer to the office boys.

"Frost King" is half dog and half wolf, weighs 100 pounds and is a seven-year-old. He was the lead dog of a team of seven which won the Canadian Dog Derby "hauling" 250 miles through snow and blizzards to win a purse of $10,000 and a silver trophy. He is also said to have played in 16 feature motion pictures, among them being "North of 40."

Manager Redding, who is very enthusiastic about the show which he has brought to Sanford and took time out to describe some of the features, he said:

"Many strange people are on display in the circus side show, the tallest being Clifford M. Thompson, the Swedish giant whose stage name is 'Count Olaf' and who towers 5 feet 6 inches in height. There is also the arctic bear who performs a unbelievable feat, namely his hands, a 150 lb. man, Shadow Harry, the human skeleton, and many other acts."

"The Madley Circus, with its modern acts, is light the oldest as well as the children and keeps the audience laughing as well as amused at the well trained performers who are put through their paces by Earl Chamberlain, manager."

"The Whoopee is an exciting new act. It is a situation that comes about every time the Crystal Maze will make you laugh until your sides ache. The House of Sin is an example of the manner in which, gambling, gambling and gambling are their own vicious trade, the 'Satansthorium' is popular and there are many shows and sides of interest."

Though the new carrier of the Herald will be invited guests of Johnny J. Jones and will be the midway attractions.

The Jones show will continue their first engagement until Saturday midnight.

Many a man would drown his troubles in the bathtub if he could afford to pay the water bill.

Isn't it funny that folks who beg for the fact set are often the slowest in paying their bills?

I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety—Shakespeare. Add anti-prohibition testaments.

We suppose we would have gotten by mail service in Sanford whether the fly had been eradicated or not.

William Howard Taft died with an estate of $76,000 but he left behind him a legacy in service far greater than that.

No live that you'll never have to get angry at an editor for what he puts in the paper about you. Clement Price, Good advice.

In this Capone racket, it looks as if Florida loses no matter what happens. If he stays here, Chicago wins; if he is kicked out, it's a victory for Ohio.

It strikes us it would be a good idea for our government not to reduce its navies until after Capone has been successfully barred from his Island home in Sicily Bay.

It won't be long before the resounding crack of baseball bats will be heard throughout the land and then our sporting editors will have to stop writing about foul throw boys enough to keep track of the foul balls.

We note with interest that the First National Bank building, together with furniture and fixtures, will be offered at public sale on the morning of April 7 at 10 o'clock, the receiver reserving the right, of course, to reject all bids.

We wonder if everyone in Sanford has registered who should. There are only a few days left if one wishes to vote in the June primaries. And by the way, are Republicans who wish to vote in the Republican primary, registered as Republicans?

This is the time of year when Florida newspapers are reminding their readers, who read Florida newspapers, that this is the worst time of the year to go back North. In other words, the same old cliché is being used to frighten the streets, and pneumonia lurks around the corner.

A real estate transaction of considerable proportions was recently consummated when Charles C. Giles, the landman of Umatilla, closed a deal whereby H. W. Bennett, of New York city, became the possessor of 1,100 acres of land near Altamonte, this county. This property is being cleared and planted with pine and has been planned in an extensive scale, a large number of the original planting of six thousand trees have been placed in the newly-prepared ground, where a force of thirty workmen are employed in this operation.—Tavara Citizen.

It's an interesting situation we have here in Florida where a Governor has ordered various county sheriffs to show Capone up on his neck and a federal judge has so ruled that they will be in contempt of court if they do. Although the Governor has the power to remove the sheriffs from office, these law enforcement officers will undoubtedly listen to the ruling of the court as none of them will care to be thrown into jail on a contempt charge. What we can't understand is why the Governor should be so interested over the prospect of Capone's arrest just at this time when it didn't seem to annoy him at all a year ago. Hundreds of New York and Chicago gangsters have come and gone in Florida as they pleased. All of them should have been hanged, and the cartrucks and gambling joints which attract them should have been closed, but why pick on Capone?

Sad Mistakes

Why is a typographical error and what causes it? If that question could be answered, the other puzzling problems of this earth would be simple. The New York Times would give a million dollars to find some means of eliminating them altogether. Its publishers have bought the most expensive machinery, hired the most skilled employees, used the most intricate systems, hoping to eradicate those simple but disgusting transpositions, wrong fonts, and other kinds of seaweed.

The Ocala Banner has brought to our attention an extract from the California Publisher which gives some idea of how easy it is to make these errors. "In an ordinary newspaper column," it says, "there are 10,000 pieces of type; there are seven wrong positions that a letter may be put in; there are 70,000 chances to make an error, and millions of chances for transpositions. In the short sentence 'to be or not to be,' by transpositions alone, it is possible to make 2,759,022 errors."

All typographical errors can well be divided into two great classes. There are those which are obviously errors, mistakes which render the word or sentence meaningless; and there are those which do make sense, and which therefore are not readily discernible by the reader. Such mistakes naturally are the most dangerous kind, the most discouraging to the writer or editor. Editor & Publisher recently called attention to such an error in an article regarding Floyd Gibbons, the great newspaper correspondent who is at present broadcasting for the Literary Digest.

Editor & Publisher had written of Gibbons as being "class conscious." A proof of the type for this article was brought to the editor who found it correct except for one small typographical error in the word "conscious." The final "s" had been omitted. Marking this correction, the editor did not ask for a revise, having already read his work until he was sick of it. But to his horror, as well as to the horror of Floyd Gibbons, when the publication appeared on the streets, it was found that Floyd Gibbons was "self conscious" instead of "class conscious."

If Gibbons had not himself been a newspaperman thoroughly familiar with this kind of error, it would have been very difficult to explain to him that no offense was intended, and a very embarrassing situation might naturally have arisen.

So don't be too quick to take offense over what may prove to be merely a typographical error.

Better Times Ahead

In spite of the fact that President Hoover periodically finds it necessary to call to the attention of the American public the high degree of prosperity prevailing, there actually does seem to be a sentiment spreading that conditions are getting better. The government itself is doing a great deal to relieve the seriousness of the unemployment situation, and the big advertising schedules of the country's largest industrial concerns are vastly stimulating buying. The Sarasota Herald recently took the following view of the situation:

"Despite the fact that there is a great deal of unemployment in the country, there is every indication that there are better times ahead. The United States Department of Commerce continues to issue encouraging bulletins on the industrial condition of the country and President Hoover does not hesitate to lend the influence of his great office to the 'better times' propaganda. The upward trend of the stock market indicates a wholesome business condition.

"Perhaps, nowhere in the world is the condition of business better reflected than on Wall Street. The fact that industrial stocks are on the upgrade and that the 'bulls' have possession of the market is not without significance. Undoubtedly the general business of the country has been somewhat held up by the fact that tariff schedules were under process of revision in congress. Until the new rates are established big industrial concerns will be slow to execute contracts.

"Now that the tariff is about to be disposed of as a disturbing element in the business of the country, big industrial leaders will get busy and the wheels of factories will begin to turn. The past winter has been a trying one on account of the collapse of the stock market last fall. The country, however, is gradually overcoming the effects of that debacle, and we can rest assured that before another six months have passed virtually normal business conditions will prevail."

PUBLISHED FACTS OR GOSSIP?

By MARLEN PEW Editor & Publisher

A distinguished American newspaper editor and publisher, whose name I am not privileged to use in this connection, offers the following problem for discussion among writers and editors: "Miss X died at the Public Hospital of mystery poison. Mr. Y was dying at his home, surrounded by his wife and children, of mercury poison. The family didn't know what killed him. The town pretty well knew what ailed the girl. Her baby would have been born in four or five months. The reporters brought in the story that the night before she committed suicide by taking mercury poison, she was on a big party with Mr. Y and one of two other men, and that she slipped the mercury tablet in his beer.

"Miss X had led an exemplary life, was a respected, hard-working girl. Her parents were not prominent but thoroughly fine folks. Her father was a paragon. The only legal evidence in the case was locked up in the hearts of two doctors, Miss X's doctor and Mr. Y's doctor, yet the facts were disputable but probably not provable in a trial suit. We let the town alone. We should have let it alone unless a customer's investigation had been called. We let it alone because the publication would do no good. It would break the hearts of two families.

"Whether we would handle this story, regardless of sensibilities or libel, depends in large measure on the newspaper we are working for. I'd say, in a small town, where everyone knows everybody, the news would in all likelihood be suppressed by the local newspaper, but the story would travel from lip to lip until it finally reached the ears of the unhappy families. Those who know town and small-city life will agree. I am sure, that such gossip is never

Telling The World

BY NRAL O'HARA

How the planet was discovered. The Harvard Observatory located signs twenty years ago that an undiscovered planet might be doing business, somewhere. A thousand forces whirled into action at once.

Five prairie schooners were chartered to make the voyage to Flagstaff, Ariz. Commander Fowl (later raised to the rank of Admiral) was put in command of the front prairie schooner and supplies taken aboard. These supplies included three barrels of fountain pens, five cases of photographic trends, penmanic chewing gum and canned ravioli. The voyage to Flagstaff to discover the new planet was found to be an arduous one. Because of the terrific heat the explorers carried huge waterbombs of pith helmets and silk pajamas and had electric fans concealed in their underwear. The expedition started for Arizona on Oct. 3, 1911. The first stop of the prairie schooners was Erie, Pa., where they listened to a specially arranged radio program of good cheer.

Special radio broadcasts were sent to other points on the voyage till Flagstaff was finally reached. Even then Commander Fowl did not dare to turn off his dial for fear other special programs might be coming in.

Once arrived in Flagstaff early in 1912 the party set about to discover the new planet. It was long, tedious work. Mars, Venus, Saturn, Uranus and Jupiter kept popping in the way. The reporter of the Astronomical Review, Elmer Blount, who had been assigned to stick with the expedition till the discovery was made, grew whiskers longer than Rip Van Winkle's, but kept putting barber's bills on his expense account.

Late in 1914 it looked as if the expedition had been beaten to it. Dr. Cook showed up in New York with notes and stereopticon lectures to prove he had discovered the new planet. They were just about to book the doctor for a lecture tour when it was proved he had only seen Halley's comet. So the expedition at Flagstaff buckled up its belt and went to work with renewed vigor.

The expense of keeping the Harvard Observatory equipment adjusted were very heavy and it seemed as if the expedition might have to halt from lack of funds. But Harvard saved the problem by firing thirty big penmenic men at Cambridge and putting on a male crew at Flagstaff to keep the telescope lenses polished off.

Henry Ford heard about the expedition around this time and offered to buy a patch of paddock for it. Edison were put in charge of the telescope. This offer was turned down.

In the mean time the explorers were suffering from intense heat at Flagstaff, but bravely plucked their teeth at listening to special radio programs and looking through the telescope from time to time. Their endurance was rewarded two weeks ago when they actually discovered the lost planet.

Harvard promptly announced the new planet was the largest in the solar system. The Alabamian Square Garden Corporation took exception to this, claiming priority for Pluto Gardens. The New York Boarding Commission upheld the claim and consequently the new planet will not be recognized in New York State, New Jersey, Massachusetts or Rhode Island.

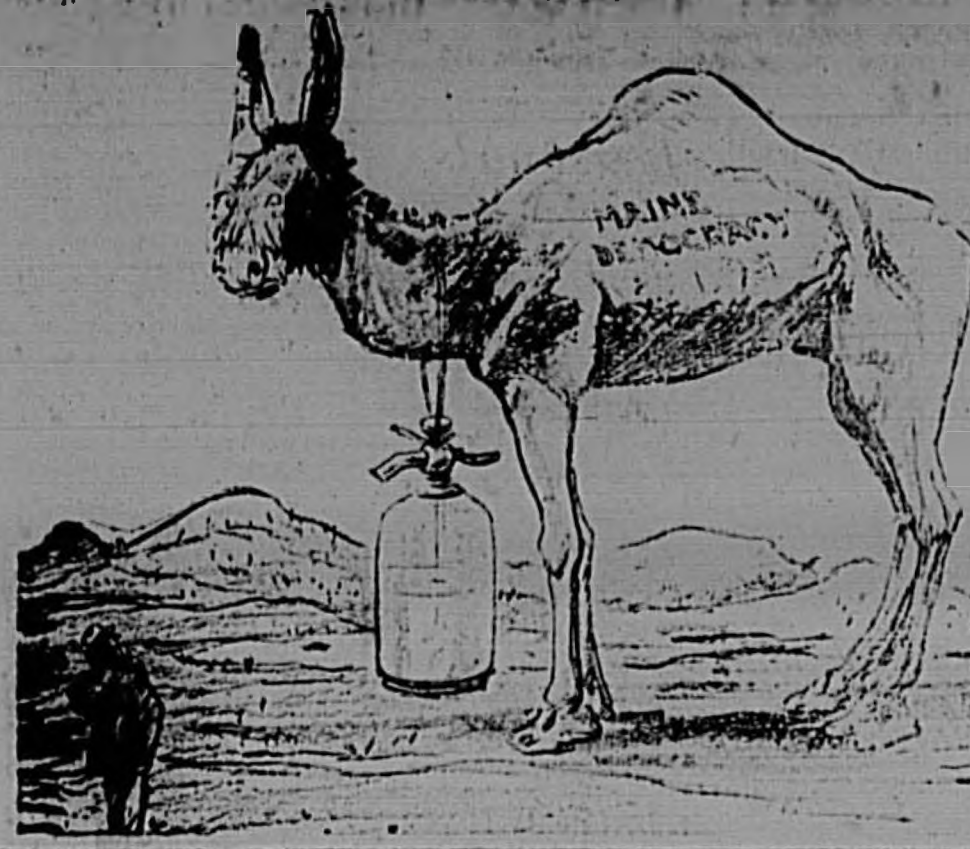

England now claims the right to the new planet on the grounds that a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society saw it first with a pair of field glasses. This matter is being thrashed out now.

Harvard is generally given credit for discovering the planet, but experts point out that Harvard will still have to stop Alar Book next fall.

So far the chief significance of the planet is that it is proved possible to discover something these days outside the auspices of the New York Times.

Mr. B. Hill announces the sale of the timber rights on 5,000 acres of land adjacent to McClenny to Mrs. W. G. Gibbons and Valdesa, and states that they will begin operations at once. A planter and dry kiln will be built here as soon as a location is secured. The operation will be in charge of J. M. Hill, of Morrison, Ga. McClenny Press.

A STRANGE HYBRID APPEARS IN THE NORTH

UNCOMMON SENSE

By John Blake

THE HOME TOWN

In the last two or three months I have spent some time in four or five towns in the southern part of the United States. None of them were very much alive, some of them were still waiting for the people who would be sure to come if they knew what the towns had to offer.

The thing that I noticed particularly about all of them was the conviction of a few men in each town to the interests of their community.

These men, with not much expectation of personal gain even by a doubling or tripling of population, devoted their spare time of the day to their own business affairs, while they spent the rest of it and several evenings a week, "hooking up" the town.

They held all sorts of positions on committees, without pay, and worked hard at them.

They helped to arrange the planting of that would bring about development of parks and schools.

They labored to secure new churches by whatever means they could.

In fact they believed in their towns and wanted them to grow and to become important.

I cannot think there is any man in that part of the country who is not popularly known to do it, or for their readers to read it.

I know that the same spirit is at work in great cities such as London and New York, that some men of world wide reputation give their time and energy to "hooking up" the town.

And why not? Why not be proud of your town and want it to grow? That is surely patriotism, and most people agree that patriotism is a fine thing.

If the same spirit were in everybody, our world would be a better country, and we would progress far more rapidly with our big jobs which is the bringing of peace, and justice and all the implications of that, to our world.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

It is said that a lot of people are out of work. Whose fault is it? It seems to me that if the people who are hunting jobs would spend some time finding out WHY they lost their jobs it would be better than wasting a week time chattering around looking for work.

There are many, many people looking for jobs today. WHY? Because they know how to hold their jobs, and if you want to hold them, as a job you get, try to find out WHY you lost the job.

So many are going to "cut down" when you are making money, why not reverse your position? Let the job seek you. YOUR BODY NEEDS YOU BADLY!

Evangelist Speaks To Pupils Of School

By The Rev. W. P. Baberman
Evangelist Harry S. Allen who is preaching each day at the Methodist Church addressed the students of the Junior High School at the chapel hour this morning on the subject "How to attain the highest success in life."

He will speak Friday morning to the students at the Senior High School Friday evening for seven forty five will be young peoples night in the festival.

A special program for the high school age will be prepared and a large crowd of the students is expected to attend this service.

Last night the evangelist spoke on the Leviticus thirteenth chapter and seventh verse.

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." He said in part, this statement is true, not a mere truism. It is in the Bible; it would be true if it had never been written in the Bible.

You need not refer to the sacred record to prove that it is true. You don't have to go out of your city, your home or even your own individual experience to prove the text.

We know from our own life that the law of sowing and reaping applies to us all.

It is true in the world of nature, we reap what we sow. Sow wheat and you expect to reap wheat, sow corn and you reap corn. Why then should one expect to live a life of sin, sow in the flesh, indulging in everything that tends to evil and when the reaping time comes; avoid reaping the consequences. We reap what we sow. It is unavoidable, this is one rule that has no exception. The reaping may be delayed, but it is sure nevertheless.

Be sure your sins will find you out. In the end a lony finger will be pointed in your face and you will be made to realize that the wages of sin is death.

The evangelist gave several impressive illustrations of the truth he was presenting as to sowing and reaping.

The services being held each day at ten a. m. and seven forty five p. m. are increasing in interest and attendance and the public generally is invited to attend.

Bridge Party Given At Club Yesterday

Mrs. Roland S. Read held high score among the club members at the bridge party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. George P. Paxton and Mrs. James L. Murphy at the club house on Oak Avenue for the members of the Social Department of the Woman's Club. Mrs. Read was given a green crystal bowl while Mrs. Robert Jessop of Hammond, Ind., was the recipient of a bouquet of Spring flowers as guest prize.

Centering the rooms where the card games were enjoyed, was a large bowl of asters in shades of lavender and pink while grating other parts of the room were bowls of wild violets. The color scheme of lavender, pink and white was also accentuated by a large basket of snip dragon, and fern placed in the reception room.

At the tea hour a sweet course was served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Chamberlain. Those present were: Mrs. Robert Jessop of Hammond, Ind., Mrs. Howard C. Long, Mrs. James L. Miami Bondsmen Are Fined For Perjury

MIAMI, Fla., Mar. 26—(AP)—Four professional bondsmen were under suspended sentence of a year and a day in federal prison, and under fines of $500 each today as a result of entering pleas of guilty to federal court charges of perjury on justification of bail.

The four are J. H. Berry, Thomas P. Beeson, Daniel Materis and John Scott, all of Miami. F. A. Sawyer, also of Miami, was found guilty of the charge Monday, but sentence was deferred pending motion for a new trial. Two others, Daniel Donnellan and R. E. Reid, went on trial on similar charges today. J. J. Calnan, also accused, was dismissed yesterday by Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter.

'The Vagabond King' Opens At Milane For Stay Of Three Days

When a stage production is rendered upon the audible screen it is natural to draw a comparison. But in the case of "The Vagabond King" which opened at the Milane Theater this afternoon, a comparison is a paltry means of expressing the glorious wonderment of this marvelous screen version.

In 1510, the film adaptation is superior in thrills and sheer beauty than there is in comparing it with the original, beautiful as the original was.

Dennis King, as the master of the sword, the valency of Paris and the captor of a princess' heart, leaps into the very front rank of romantic actor-stagers of the cinema in his gorgeous portrayal of Francis Villon, the poet hero of "The Vagabond King."

The period of the plot is 1493, the late middle ages. Louis XI (played by O. P. Hegger) is the weakling king of France, besieged at Paris by the Burgundian army. By a quirk of fate, Dennis King becomes sovereign for a week. It is during this brief reign that he meets Louis' niece, the Princess Katherine, (played by Jeanette MacDonald) and falls in love with her. By clever generalship, King outwits and defeats the Burgundians with the help of his faithful vassal adherents. Paris is thus saved, but the treacherous Louis decides that King is too powerful and that he must be hanged.

It is when the hero is about to have his life snuffed out by the gibbet that Katherine takes a part in the proceedings and saves the day in a tremendously dramatic climax.

Here is a picture so bewilderingly wonderful, what with its gorgeous Technicolor treatment throughout, its powerful plot, its tendentious sets, breathtaking action, romantic glamour and musical richness both in the singing and orchestral departments, that a movie critic, abetted merely by the newness of the printed word, cannot even begin to tell you how "swell" it is all. All he can tell you is to see it—three or four times.

A BOTTLE SHOWER

A bottle shower makes an interesting addition to the bride's gift. When extending the invitation the bride informs on her guest what bottle she is to provide for the shower and request that it be delivered at the home the day preceding the shower.

The idea is to cross the bottles in crepe paper to represent the wedding party, so that each guest, for instance, is wearing a bottle of vanilla extract, dressed as the bride, and so on until the party is complete.

As a result shower of this kind the bottles were used as follows: a bottle of hair cream, figured as the bride; a bottle of perfume, figured as the bridesmaid; a bottle of soap, figured as the maid of honor; and a bottle of tooth powder, figured as the flower girl.

These may be any of the bottles mentioned and a list may be made up to furnish a contribution for each guest. For the bride and maid of honor, a bottle of perfume and a bottle of soap are appropriate. For the bridesmaid, a bottle of tooth powder and a bottle of hair cream are appropriate. For the flower girl, a bottle of soap and a bottle of hair cream are appropriate.

POSTERELLE BOBLED

POSTNEY, Fla., Mar. 26—(AP)—The state of the local post office was blown open today by numerous bottles of bottles (the well known name of bottles will do on basis of varying bottles) to form a general landing. In each bottle, placed in one of these thousands of bottles and covered the paper with crepe paper or a sheet of tulle. Two of three of the bottles in the cluster may serve as holders for the white candles. With this attractive floral piece as a background, arrange the bridal party either in an altar group or the processional.

When refreshments have been served, ring in a tray bearing the real shower gifts and place them on the table before the bride-to-be. This may be a complete set of bath-soaps and toilet bottles, or a matched set of each, or it may bear the name of the individual doing it for her.
