

Quality's Not In The Grade...

...It's In School's 'Progression' Level

By MARYLIN SHEDDAN
Herald Writer

Your child is beginning school this year. He will begin in the first grade, right? Wrong. He will begin at "the first progression level."

Your child has completed all the required work for his third grade year and will be entering fourth grade this year... right? Wrong again. He will be entering the 13th progression level.

There are no more grade levels in elementary school in Seminole County. There are, instead, 20 progression levels, which a child may take up to seven years to complete.

The progression level in Seminole County's response to new Florida laws requiring that students accomplish certain specified skills.

To most easily adapt to that system, all counties were required to develop and implement methods of measuring a child's progress which would allow teachers and parents to be certain those skills have been developed.

The technique selected by Seminole County, after extensive research by a panel of educators and lay people, was the 20-unit pupil progression plan.

"You will not have a child who is promoted once a year," Dr. Wanda Abel told a group of parents at Eastbrook Elementary School, south Seminole County, today.

"The average child," she explained, "will now be promoted four times a year."

Actually, with the new progression levels, a child may be promoted at any time that he becomes able to work on the next higher level. Report cards, however, come out only four times a year—and those report cards are clearly designed to show what level your child is on, what level he has successfully completed, and a complete breakdown of skill problems in any area.

If your child brings home a "C" grade in mathematics, for instance, it will no longer indicate that he is an across-the-board average student. His report card also permits you to see whether his weaknesses are in basic facts, concepts, word problems, or computation. And the section of his report card marked "Progress Levels" will show an "x" to mark the level your child already has completed.

"Grades mark the progress your child is making on the level where he is now working," said Dr. Abel, "and marks the progress level your child has already finished."

How will placement for children who have been in school under the old "promotion at the end of the year" program be placed in the new pupil progression plan?

"There is a formula," says Dr. Abel, "to compute the equivalent grade a child might be in, and it will also work for a child who transfers out of Seminole County."

Dr. Abel emphasizes that "pupil progression is the law," not a whim of Seminole County educators or parents, and as such she requests that parents with questions about the system put them in writing and send them to the school board.

She is appearing at local elementary schools to show the new report card and explain the pupil progression system to parents of summer school students. When school begins there will again be

Building Blast Hits Ravaged Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — An explosion ripped through a glass company building in the downtown section of this flood-ravaged city today, killing at least one person and injuring four others, state police said.

"We have one reported dead and some trapped. We don't know how many," said state police Maj. Homer L. Redd after the explosion at the Royal Plate Glass Co.

Eyewitnesses said the blast caused a section of the building to collapse into a parking lot. At least four persons were taken to area hospitals.

There were unconfirmed reports that a gas line might have been involved in the explosion. But it was not immediately known if the blast was related to the resumption of utility service in Johnstown, which was devastated in last Wednesday's flash flooding.

The death toll from the flood climbed to 58 today, as weary repair crews labored under the threat of more rain.

The National Weather Service forecast severe thunderstorms and flood warnings for this mountainous western Pennsylvania community through today. Roads to low lying areas were blocked off and some areas were evacuated in anticipation of high winds and more rain.

State officials kept a vigil on dams already filled to capacity by last week's torrential rain. The Red Cross estimates that 7,491 families were displaced by the flooding. Thousands are out of work.

35 Want Chief's Job In Sanford

The deadline is six days away and the City of Sanford has received 35 applications for the job of police chief.

City officials today were cautious about revealing details about the applicants for the job paying $16,116 to $21,860, depending on qualifications.

The position opens with swiftness of Chief Ben Butler to the city's first fulltime Public Safety Administrator. Butler will work under City Manager Warren Knowles in handling police and fire department administrative matters.

Mack LeZebny, city engineer, said as of this morning the city has received 35 applications.

Four of the applicants for the job are now members of the Sanford police force, four of them are from out of state. LeZebny listed the states as W. Virginia, New York, Iowa and Pennsylvania.

LeZebny declined to say how many are police chiefs or what cities the 31 Florida applicants are from.

"I can't say," was his answer to questions on any applications made by blacks or women, noting that to reveal such information might be termed "discriminatory."

Mayor Lee P. Moore said today city commissioners have yet to decide how the applications will be screened. He said he expects the screening process to get underway in mid-August with the commission making the selection of the new police chief by September. — BOB LLOYD

Will County Win More Time To Acquire Landfill Site?

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The chances are good that Seminole County may get a reprieve — though it may be a brief one — from complying with a state order setting a deadline for acquisition of some 300 acres of "prime" property for a new centrally-located sanitary landfill.

Alex Senkevich of the state's Department of Environmental Regulation (DER) said today the deadline of Nov. 1 for acquisition of the Osceola landfill near Geneva. Since the county is "acting in good faith a couple months either way in the deadlines would not make any difference," he said.

The state official said the DER will cooperate with the county ("We're both trying to do a job") and come up with a "reasonable solution."

But, Senkevich added, the new deadlines established after a meeting with county representatives next week, will be enforced.

According to state law, the current proposed consent order points out, the county could be subjected to judicial imposition of damages, civil penalties of up to $10,000 per offense (daily) and criminal penalties.

Schuder has called a meeting of the county's solid waste team for 9 a.m. Wednesday in juvenile courtroom, Room 424, at the courthouse to prepare a recommendation for the county commission.

Members of the solid waste team include: Pat Glisson, director of the county's Office of Management, Analysis and Evaluation (OMAE); Roger Nelsens, county administrator; Bill Pettus, refuse superintendent; Schuder and Basil Tenney, pollution control technician.

The county was originally under an order from the state to cease operation or comply with DER regulations for the Osceola landfill operation by July 1, but was unable to meet the deadline.

Schuder said today that although the main landfill had been operated for some years by "excavating cells" down eight feet and placing and packing garbage below the water level, DER regulations changed in 1975, banning the practice.

The newest regulations would require that garbage not be buried within five feet of the water table, necessitating the placing of two feet of earth on top of the ground to give separation, packing the garbage on top and then covering with another two feet of earth.

"We would have to continually excavate in borrow pits to cover the ground and the garbage, making the operation very expensive," Schuder said.

Schuder said DER said the county could not use the method of packing garbage higher through the earth covering process in many layers, although the regulations are not clear.

"The requirement of the not putting the garbage within five feet

The Red Cross work is the most important thing that I do... No matter what the situation, from relaying a message to handling emergency traffic during disasters, the Red Cross is available 24 hours a day.

Elsie MacDougall has been a one-woman answering service for the Seminole County chapter of the American Red Cross for 12 years. She of herself answers the phone at all hours of the day and night. It is one of the many ways Elsie makes a positive impression on the community.

Elsie is not able to get around with the ease that most of us take for granted. In 1961 Elsie fell and injured her back. The damage that was done to her spinal cord could not be rectified even after a long, painful series of operations. Elsie has not kept her from forming new friendships throughout the area by means of her 40 channel SSB CB radio. Among her many CB friends are the members of the 40 Oscar Club of which she, too, is a member. Elsie primarily operates on channels 37 and 38. It is the most important thing that I do," she said.

"I matter what the situation, from relaying a message to handling emergency traffic during disasters, the Red Cross is available 24 hours a day every day."

Elsie is proud of the fact that she is currently the only central Florida resident to receive the Clara Barton Award for meritorious volunteer work in the Red Cross. She got it in 1973.

Elsie MacDougall's earliest experience with the American Red Cross was in 1918 when she and her mother, two sisters and her brother, landed in New York City across the Atlantic by Canada Railway Elsie and her family were enroute to Ontario, Canada where they began life anew after the devastation in her native England caused by World War I. Red Cross volunteers were waiting on the dock for disembarking passengers. They duplicated the traditional Cocoa and duplicate the traditional Cocoa and that was preceded.

When Elsie is not manning the telephone she paints pictures of seascapes and the desert, working with images that come from her imagination. She lives with her son, Bob, and three lovely cats. She also spends many a quiet hour with her good friend Shirley Nickcachi who often brings by tea and cookies.

Elsie's giving attitude is reflected by her actions, and also in the way she sums up her own situation: "I can use my head and my hands, and that's a blessing."

Pitching Worries
Bosox In A. L. Drive

By The Associated Press
Our pitching just has to get better - it's as simple as that. Boston Manager Don Zimmerman didn't have to guess why his Red Sox dropped out of first place in the American League East Division when they lost to the West Division-leading Chicago White Sox 9-4 Sunday. It could be summed up in one word - pitching.

Lopes Second Chance Pulls LA To 5-3 Win

By The Associated Press
All I was looking for was a hole on the right side," said Dave Lopes. He found it in Bruce Boz's glove. Lopes was given a second chance Sunday when the New York Mets right fielder dropped his foul fly ball in the ninth inning, and promptly took advantage of it with a three-run homer that gave the Los Angeles Dodgers a 5-3 victory. "It was an omen that said 'Lopes,'" Lopes said. "After that just knew I had to get a hit. All I was trying to do was find a way to get the tying run home. But what I did was make good contact and find the seats."

Humble Trevino Nabs Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) - The grin was in place and the quips were chattering out with machine-gun rapidity. But Leo Trevino interrupted the flow of one-liners to turn dead serious, humble and philosophical. "When somebody thinks he's tough, he just needs to get knocked down to find out what it's all about," Trevino said in the wake of his wire-to-wire triumph in the Canadian Open, a victory he'd feared would never come and one that capped his comeback from an opponent that threatened to end his razor-twitch saga. He'd been knocked down. Surgery for a herniated disc in his back last winter put him on the sidelines. There was considerable doubt that he'd ever regain the form and flair that made him one of the most popular figures to play the game and secured for him a place in American folklore. "The doctors told me I couldn't play until July," he re-

Brain Cells Can't Heal by Dr. Lamb. DEAR DR. LAMB—My son, now 57, was injured 18 years ago. He was in a coma for twelve weeks then developed convulsions and spasms for which he had two brain operations within a year. This left him with bad double vision and right side paralysis. He works with handicapped persons, and does well, but his only locomotion is his wheelchair. He thinks hypnosis could help him, but how? By whom? Where? Is it possible? DEAR DR. LAMB—You son needs to understand exactly what his problem is. The nervous system is constructed like an electrical system. Our muscles move because impulses, like electrical current, pass through nerve fibers which are much like the wires for an electrical circuit. The central area where all these circuits come together and are integrated is in the brain. If you destroy certain brain cells the effect is the same as if you broke a wire in an electrical circuit. DEAR DR. LAMB—Lots of people who have had cataract surgery do drive a car without any difficulty at all. It depends entirely on how good the individual's total vision is after surgery. Some people with cataracts have other eye problems as well. This may limit their results from surgery. The use of contact lenses after surgery has helped to limit the amount of distortion of vision that occurs. So if a person's eyes are otherwise normal and with the aid of contact lenses, most patients should be able to drive without any real problems after surgery. I suppose I should add that I am assuming the person could drive before surgery.

It Seems That Way The Welcome Lawn?

By BOB LLOYD Herald Staff Writer. Mrs. Angie Figgatt came home Monday afternoon to find her front yard littered with a couple of headlights, brake shoes, pieces of chrome and other auto parts. It wasn't exactly something new. Mrs. Figgatt lives at 2001 S. Sanford Ave., on the corner of 20th Street—two of the city's busiest traffic arteries. Through the years numerous accidents have occurred at the intersection, despite repeated efforts to alert motorists with traffic control measures. Monday was the first time she moved into the white house in August 1975 that smashed autos have ripped up Mrs. Figgatt's lawn. But atorney Kirby Moncrief, who owned the house for several years prior, notes that there were lots of "fender-bender" accidents at the corner and occasionally cars came into his lawn. On one occasion a collision involved a fire truck. There was a blinking traffic signal at the intersection. There was also a school bus stop at the corner and children waiting for the bus stood in Moncrief's front yard. Concerned because of frequent traffic accidents, Moncrief talked to school board officials and city officials. The bus stop was moved a block and the city installed a new traffic signal, plus rumble strips on the streets and signs to warn approaching motorists. In past years at least two persons have died in accidents at the intersection. Mrs. Figgatt, Moncrief and Police Chief Ben E. Butler all point out that many of the accidents seem to be caused by careless motorists. "Evidently people don't pay attention to the traffic light," says Mrs. Figgatt. Moncrief notes that motorists, in many cases, apparently are speeding and Butler says "it's just pure carelessness by motorists who aren't cautious." "It's a dangerous corner," says Butler, "but no more than the intersections at Sanford Ave. and French Avenue on 5th Street." In the Monday collision three persons were treated and released at Seminole Memorial Hospital after receiving facial and head cuts. Police identified them as Sandra B. Lowery, 20, and her three-year-old son, Jason Lowery, both of 1000 S. Park Ave., and Jan L. Stokes, 20, of the same address. They were in the car driven by Mrs. Lowery. Accident investigator Lewis Coombs identified the other driver involved in the collision as Andelesa Martinez Mendoza, 18, of 1909 Magnolia Ave. She was treated for minor injuries, police said.

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer. Action on a request from the Greater Sanford Development Corp. (SDC) that $130,000 be allocated in the city's budget for the 1977-78 fiscal year for the city's share of improvements to the proposed downtown Sanford renovation and redevelopment project was tabled by the Sanford City Commission Monday night until Aug. 22. Also tabled was consideration of placing the creation of a special taxing district for the downtown area, as permitted by special legislation sponsored by SDC, to provide administrative funding for the corporation composed of downtown business people. Tom McDonald, an officer of the corporation, requested that the commission cooperate in implementing improvements to the public right-of-way in the "model area" of the downtown section; that city crews be committed to the work project; that $130,000 be entered into the fiscal 1978 budget for this purpose and that implementation of the public right-of-way occur simultaneously to the actual improvements to private properties by at least six property owners. The organization also asked that a traffic flow map including a one-way system between French and Sanford Avenues, to proceed eastbound on Second Street and westbound on Commercial and Fulton Streets be approved and that the city approve the concept of creating municipal parking lots between Park and Palmetto, south side of Commercial and between Park and Palmetto, south side of Second Street. McDonald, on behalf of the SDC, asked that two city commissioners be named to serve on a committee working with the SDC to determine proper methods of financing and timely phasing schedules. The commissioners were told that the requests had been unanimously voted by the board of directors of SDC and approved for presentation by members. The subject area said a letter written by Sara Jacobson, consultant to the SDC, extends from Park Avenue to Palmetto on First Street and from Second to First Street on Magnolia. McDonald said, "I believe our town can be the finest of any town in Florida. We are ready to go." McDonald said that the "bankers committee" composed of Sanford area bankers has orally pledged $1 million in a bankers pool to lend to downtown business for renovations. To Mayor Lee P. Moore said the project "should not get hung up on" whether there should be diagonal or parallel parking downtown or whether one-way streets should be created. He noted that on a petition presented by the organization 24 spaces for the names of property owners were blank and that only Miss Jacobson said that 61 percent of the property owners in the "model area" had signed the petition, representing 10 parcels of land committed of the 18 parcels involved. McClanahan said that the question of whether the taxing district should be created should be placed on a ballot in an election this year along with questions of districting for city commissioners. He said that the SDC was asking the city to "speculate" with all the taxpayers money to commit to the downtown. Shirley Moak of the SDC said that after gaining the legislation last year it was found that the organization could gain more money in gifts from "donors" and other supporters than through the taxing district to fund the administration of the SDC. She said that $30,000 is the total amount that could be received from the taxing. McDonald said it would be fine to permit the proposal on the

Sanford Shuns Warning Disputed Tract Annexed

The Sanford City Commission Monday night, despite a contention from Asst. County Atty. Gary Siegel that it was acting "illegally," adopted an ordinance which annexed a tract adjacent to Idylwild subdivision. After a brief recess, however, the city commission voted to change the legal description of the parcel and annex the tract in three separate actions that the county would accept. The original action took place after builder-developer A. K. Shoemaker Jr. said he wanted the tract adjacent to Idylwild annexed because he wanted his property within the city. He outlined problems developers have in gaining inspections from the county and of having to deal with "the bureaucracy across the street" (in the courthouse). Shoemaker claimed it can take days to gain a building inspection from the county, while the city is more cooperative and helpful and gives the same service in hours. "I'm happy to be in the city," Shoemaker said. "I still have to live with those people (the county) over there. If they sue (to contest the annexation) what are they going to prove. They will only accomplish putting 30-odd people, who work for me, out of work." Shoemaker said he needed connection to the city's water and sewer systems to develop the land, located east of Uspsala Road, north of C46A and bordering the northeast corner of Idylwild. Siegel said that while the county has no objection to the property being connected to the city's utility service, that for the city to annex the property would be "absolutely improper and illegal." The attorney said the property because its main portion was separated from other city lands by an undeveloped 160 feet by 750 foot strip does not touch other city lands to a large enough degree to comply with the state law annexed lands to be contiguous. Mayor Lee P. Moore said he had always thought that government was involved in providing services that persons could not provide for themselves. Commissioner John Morris said many governments forget the rights of the individual and that he was ready to go for the annexation as proposed and to let "the county do as it will." Although the annexation ordinance was adopted on final reading, the document as approved did not include the legal description because of the detail of part of the property and City Attorney Vernon Mize warned that he might have difficulty defending the annexation in court. After a recess, during which Mize and Siegel conferred, Mize announced that the annexation would be "less objectionable" to the county if it were accomplished in three separate ordinances, adopted in succession over a period of weeks. Shoemaker added that "Siegel thinks the county will buy that way." —DONNA ESTES

Color Longwood Council Pink...Orange...Take Your Pick

When is a city councilman not sure whom he represents? Why, when several councilmen try redistricting a city... but each, taking a wing's, discusses the matter while they all look at different maps. That's what happened in Longwood Monday night as councilmen discussed redistricting, then voted on the matter. City council voted unanimously to approve a map designating new district boundaries for city council seats, but after the meeting it was discovered that maps given each Annex Bid Dropped, Page 2A. The District 1 seat is now held by Larry Goldberg, who is up for re-election this year, as are Mrs. Lormann and Parker Anderson, District 4. Confused as to just which map they had actually approved, following adjournment, Councilman Chairman J.R. Grant's version was determined to be the one officially approved and he asked Council members to sign it. His map designated the whole area north of Flacoda between East Lake and the railroad in District 2. The only question now is whether all of property there is actually in the city limits. Removed from District 5, represented by Stephen Barton, was the Moorings subdivision, which was given to District 1. The city was redistricted on the basis of population shift determined by the counting of city water meters and houses in subdivisions. District 1 was given 813, District 2, 335; District 3, 821; District 4, 280 and District 5, 515, according to the map. —JANE CASSELLBERRY
