

INTEREST... Only One City Shares With Its 'Customers'

By DONNA EYTES
Herald Staff Writer

Of the six cities in Seminole County that own and operate water or sewer utilities and require customer security deposits, only one shares the interest earned from those deposits with its customers. That city is Lake Mary. Why does Lake Mary credit its water customer accounts once annually for the interest on their security deposits?

"We thought it was the right thing to do," said Mayor Walker Sorvannan today, adding that a total of $8,144.32 has been collected by the city for security deposits.

"The city council placed the money in a savings account, paying interest. The deposits aren't really city money and it seemed only right to return the interest earned to the customers."

Meanwhile, the five other cities which own and operate water or sewer systems had security deposits totaling $463,373 last year. And, four of those five cities realized interest totaling $13,500 from the security deposits.

The City of Casselberry had $105,000 in the bank from its water and sewer customers. But, the fund drew no interest last year.

The Casselberry City Council Monday night agreed to place the money in an interest-bearing account, but delayed until some future date a decision on whether deposits will be returned to customers who have good paying records and whether the interest realized will be given back to the customers.

S&L Robbed

An armed man robbed the Security First Federal Savings and Loan Association's Seminole branch shortly before noon today of an undetermined amount of cash, according to the Seminole County Sheriff's office.

Although the robbery occurred in Orange County, the Seminole Sheriff's office was alerted and positioned patrol cars in strategic locations in South Seminole.

None of the six cities has a method whereby security deposits are returned to customers, whether they have maintained a good paying record or not. The only time the deposits are returned to customers is when service is discontinued.

In Altamonte Springs, Lesley Bentley, comptroller-treasurer, said cities operating water and sewer utilities are not required by law to distribute to customers the interest realized on security deposits.

He said that while Altamonte last year had $114,000 total in customer deposits at the rate of $20 per household, $108,000 was invested and returned $4,750 to the city in interest. The $14,000 balance was kept in a checking account, Bentley said, to refund deposits to customers discontinuing service.

Security deposits totaling $24,000 were in Longwood's city coffers from its municipal water system customers. Only $14,000 was in a certificate of deposit bearing an interest rate of five percent. Cheryl Gleason, city bookkeeper, said that the remaining $10,000 was placed in a six percent interest bearing account in January.

Water customers of the Longwood water system now pay a security deposit of $20 per household and the deposit is held until service is discontinued.

In Sanford, City Clerk Henry Tamm said the city had $118,001.50 in security deposits from water and sewer customers. A total of $100,000 of the money was invested returning about $7,500 in interest. The interest went into the city's general operating budget of the utility department, said Tamm.

The interest, Tamm said, helps offset some of the bad debts of customers. Bad debts as of January totaled $4,882.87.

Customers of the Sanford system pay $20.00 for residential service while $100 is charged for large apartment complexes in security deposits. Tamm said deposits are returned only when service is discontinued.

Orlando, where a municipal water system has been operated for the past 10 years, requires security deposits for water service of $10 from property owners and $15 from tenants.

The city had a total of $11,373 in security deposits last year and invested $9,800 of the money in interest-bearing accounts.

The interest of about $4,500 was channeled into the general fund, said A. M. Jones, superintendent of the water department.

SHERIFF NABS A WINNER

Things are looking up for 6-year-old Chad Lee as he captures the attention of Seminole County Sheriff John Polk. The occasion: presentation this morning to Chad of a cash prize for his winning poster in a bike safety contest at Woodlands Elementary School. As an added award, Chad and his mother, Jay, of 103B Springwood Circle, Longwood, got a ride this morning in a patrol car. First-grader Chad's father, David, lives in Sanford.

Kirchhoff Negotiating For Roumillat, School Buildings

By MAX ERILLETIAN
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County Commission has authorized Bill Kirchhoff to act as its representative in negotiating for the purchase of the Roumillat and old school board buildings.

On a 3-2 vote the commission designated Kirchhoff to approach owners of the two structures and request price figures.

A study report of the possibility of buying the two buildings lists their prices at $60,000 for the Roumillat building and $70,000 for the old school board building. Total renovations of both buildings is expected to bring the price of both buildings to a total of $48,010, according to Robert Ellis, director of administrative service.

Commissioners Kirchhoff and John Alexander, along with Roger Neiswander, county administrator, were appointed to study the space needs of courthouse agencies. Kirchhoff, sometime ago said he felt the buildings might be purchased for a token amount, such as one dollar. He explained that the owners of the two buildings might make the token offer as a "sort of donation to the county."

The decision to seek prices on the two buildings was opposed by "One of the things we are basing our premise on here is that this is a crisis."

Alexander and Harry Kwiatkowski. Both have supported more study in the past.

"This is merely an immediate solution," claimed Alexander. He offered a counter proposal.

"There is a possibility that we could have the sheriff's administration moved to where the new jail is going to be and that would free 20,000 square feet of space," said Alexander. "That would be a program with an immediate solution."

The judicial wing, which has two floors, is located on the south side of the courthouse. The administrative wing, on the north side, has four floors.

Alexander told fellow commissioners that by adding a floor to the judicial wing, the county could gain 10,000 more square feet of office space. He added that his plan would also allow the state's attorney's office to remain in the courthouse, near the courts.

While the addition would be under construction, Alexander said, office space could be rented in the Roumillat building to house those agencies needing more space.

The county has about $400,000 in its building improvement fund, according to commissioners.

Alexander said he thought the addition could be completed for that amount or less.

Williams said previous study of the third floor addition proved the project would be too expensive.

Kwiatkowski took no position on Alexander's proposal. He said the idea was worthy of further examination.

"One of the things I think we are basing our premise on here is that this is a crisis. I'm not sure this is a crisis," said

"This is merely an immediate solution."

Kwiatkowski. "I think though, we are polarized. As a result of that polarization, we may be putting on blinders and not considering all the options."

Workshop Will Train 'Unemployable' For Work

By MARYLEN SHELDON
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County residents who have been considered "unemployable" will soon get the chance to go to work.

A group made up of local educators, vocational rehabilitation specialists and other interested citizens is drawing up papers to create a sheltered workshop in Seminole County.

"We already know of 85 people who could benefit from a sheltered workshop," Mary Wiegler said today. Mrs. Wiegler is program director for exceptional student education in Seminole County. The exact program to be offered at the workshop will not be determined until the group hears from local residents on their needs, Mrs. Wiegler explained.

"We see the workshop as a place which might do post-accident evaluations and a place of the help of people who may never have worked because there has been no opportunity for them to be trained or evaluated. We are really talking about all people who have formerly been thought of as unemployable," Mrs. Wiegler emphasized.

"These people might be on welfare, or supplemented income, or some other sort of dependency, and our goal is to evaluate their problems, train them, and place them in jobs if possible at the end of their training. We see this workshop as being in three phases: we will work with the person who need evaluation and an opportunity to work, and will provide job placement for them."

"We will work with the person who may be retarded and trainable, whose job opportunities are scarce but who would love to work, and can be placed. Then we will work with the person who really would have no ability to work in an outside situation, and we will provide that person with what we call 'terminal work.' This means that person would be provided work within the sheltered workshop. They would not make much, but they would make some money of their own," she explained.

"We are having an attorney draw up papers for our workshop, which will be called the Kathleen Anderson Comprehensive Work Center. Mrs. Anderson was a social worker and former orthopedic nurse who was very prominent in getting the Central Florida Sheltered Workshop in Orlando started. She died in December, and we felt it would be appropriate to name our workshop after her," Mrs. Wiegler said.

"Right now we are interested in finding out how many people in the community actually need this service. Some may be dependent living at home with their families; some may be Vietnam veterans, who have had difficulty getting work because of lack of training or lack of proof that they really can work."

"Some may have lost out after going through vocational rehabilitation programs because job placements was not provided. We want to hear from all these people," Mrs. Wiegler said.

She said the group is studying grants which may be available for funding the workshop, and will be applying for grants and organizing a public membership drive as soon as incorporation papers are received.

"We are trying to get the workshop established in all possible haste," she said.

Dr. Ronald Bobay, consultant coordinator of Educable Mentally Handicapped and Trainable Mentally Handicapped programs for the school is heading the organizational effort, Mrs. Wiegler said.

Bergland: Don't Hike Farm Supports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland today urged Congress to avoid a sharp hike in crop prices supported by American farmers. He said that if it passed, it would "travel down the line" to higher grocery bills.

He said the plan will present a picture of the farmer's financial picture, but conceded it is not a quick fix. "It will not make over a farmer solvent overnight," Bergland said. Many farmers would not support the plan, he said, because it would not support the farm's strike movement for a low rate of return of 10 percent of the federal party standard.

Iron Bridge Legislation In The Works

By MAX BRIDGEMAN
Orlando Staff Writer
Orlando, Fla. (UPI) — Legislation to build a new iron bridge across the St. Johns River in Volusia County is being drafted by the state legislature.

The legislation will be presented to next year's session of the legislature. County Commission Chairman Dick Williams said the legislation could not be prepared and approved by the commission in time for this year's legislature.

The main thing that has always been difficult between us and the cities is who has the responsibility to decide how the system would develop and grow," said Williams. "We have learned toward a regional system, stated Williams. The authority managing the sewer line would be made up of elected officials appointed by each governmental unit. Each city would have one representative on the authority and the county would have one member of the authority.

The county has opposed the majority rule concept, according to Williams. Under such a proposal, the sewer line would be expanded on a majority vote of the authority's board. The cost for such expansion would be borne by all members of the authority.

The county has sought a measure whereby expansion of the sewer line's capacity could be handled on an individual basis.

"The county favors each city controlling its own destiny," said Williams. "We feel each city should be able to expand the system, provided they pay the cost. We just don't feel it is fair for everybody to pay the cost of an expansion."

A joint Canadian-U.S. recovery team Tuesday found a large chunk of the satellite found in a shallow crater on the frozen Thelon River, hoping it would lead them to the crash site of other radioactive debris.

Tomson said the plane carried sophisticated radiation detection equipment and were flying a 60-mile long corridor a half mile above the river. Aerial probes placed gauges around two sites where pieces of the Cosmos 984 have been found — near Fort Reliance and near the northwest end of Great Slave Lake and on the Thelon River 300 miles southwest of Baker Lake.

After opening arguments, U.S. District Judge Richard C. Freeman recused the hearing overnight with an unusual form of "pug order" imposed on all participants over Lewis' objections.

Take your refrigerator's temperature.

Now that cooler weather's here, you've probably cut down on your air-conditioning. And chances are, your electric bill has dropped accordingly. But we want to help you save even more.

Look around your kitchen. That refrigerator sitting there is usually the third largest user of electricity in the home. And though food preservation is essential to the home 12 months a year, the costs of your refrigerator — and many of the other necessary appliances in your kitchen — can be reduced. Here are a few suggestions:

Keep your refrigerator's temperature at 40 degrees. Place a refrigerator thermometer inside for 15 minutes. Check the reading. Then, if necessary, set the thermostat to maintain 40°; but no warmer. Chances are, you'll be lowering your electric bill. And while you're at it, check the temperature in your freezer. The temperature should be zero. Any lower and you're probably wasting money.

Let foods cool before storing. Before you put leftovers into your refrigerator, let the foods cool to room temperature. And try to cut down on the number of times you open and close your refrigerator door. The savings could be significant.

What about defrosting? A manual defrost refrigerator should be defrosted when the frost layer gets to be about a quarter of an inch thick. This will not only save energy, it'll save wear and tear on your appliance, as well. And if you're shopping for a new refrigerator/freezer, be sure to look for one of the high efficiency models. And remember, frost-free models — though convenient — use more energy than regular models.

Check your refrigerator gaskets for leakage. Close the door on a dollar bill. If you can freely pull it loose, you may have to replace the gaskets. And try to avoid putting your refrigerator next to a stove. If possible, place it in the coolest area of the kitchen.

Only run your dishwasher when it's full. If you don't have a full load, rinse dishes in cool water and store in dishwasher until you do. And measure your detergent carefully. Too much or too little can reduce efficiency. Use your special features like partial wash cycles, rinse only cycles when applicable. Energy consumption can be reduced by one third by turning the washer off before it reaches the dry cycle. Simply open the door and allow the dishes to air dry.

Cook whole meals in the oven. And everything will be ready at one time. Two or three different dishes can be baked with little more energy than one. And since insulation holds the heat, ovens require energy only periodically. What's more, when cooking frozen foods in the oven, let them first thaw. Foods require a lot less cooking time when defrosted.

Ask for more money saving hints, for our folder "How to save electricity in your kitchen." It contains all kinds of good suggestions on how to save energy and money. Pick up a copy today. It's free. At all FPL offices.

Steering A Proper Course

On the Panama Canal treaties, Sen. Howard Baker is straddling the issue — but in a way that carries no derogatory connotation. He is for the principle of the treaties, but feels he cannot vote for their ratification unless they contain guarantees that now stand only in the Oct. 14 statement of understanding between President Carter and Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos.

We do not share the senator's fears about the ambiguity of the present treaty language, but we respect his desire to satisfy his political conscience before committing himself. His approach exhibits a degree of statesmanship that is missing from some of the more strident arguments being heard on either side.

Our position is that the treaties represent the best course for the United States in its relations with the Republic of Panama and the rest of Latin America, and that rejecting them would carry more risk to our national interest, and to a wateryway vital to commerce and important to our national security, than accepting them. On that fundamental point, Sen. Baker does not seem to disagree.

And we can regret, along with Sen. Baker, that the treaties as they now stand are not more specific in spelling out the right of the United States to act on its own decision to protect the canal after it reverts to Panama in the year 2000, and the right to move U.S. ships to the head of the line for passage through the canal in an emergency. But we can also appreciate the problem faced by U.S. negotiators in getting those promises into the treaties at all, given Panama's sensitivity to any vestige of "colonialism" in the agreements.

Those points were clarified in the Carter-Torrijos understanding, but we do not believe it is essential that the clarification be embodied in the treaties. Like any government, the United States will stand on its own interpretation of the treaties if push comes to shove in any dispute with a future government of Panama over what they mean.

Nathan Dole's current statement in the Senate suggests the vote for ratification will fall short of the necessary two-thirds unless Sen. Baker and some others on the fence are satisfied. This is an invitation to the administration's pro-treaty forces to back off from their insistence that the treaties be considered as-is, with the Oct. 14 understanding or any other issues covered in a separate measure if they must be covered.

Gen. Torrijos has indicated to Sen. Baker that Panama's acceptance of the treaties will stand if they are amended to incorporate the principles of the Oct. 14 understanding. Fine, but to open the treaties for amendment runs the risk they will be amended to the point where they would lose the support of the Panamanians. Even Sen. Baker hints that he might want to remove a U.S. promise not to build a new sea-level canal anywhere but in Panama — a change the Panamanians might not accept.

What Sen. Baker is proposing is a parliamentary feat somewhat like steering a big ship through the canal with only a few inches to spare on either side. What must emerge is a coalition of senators — Democrats and Republicans — strong enough to put through amendments that do not change the substance of the treaties and strong enough to defeat any amendments that would. This is a challenge to senatorial statesmanship on both sides of the aisle.

It is an odd political twist that a Democratic President must rely on the help of a Republican senator from Tennessee in a delicate bit of navigation on an issue crucial to his foreign policy. That the same Republican senator has had presidential aspirations — and may still have them adds to the irony. But Mr. Carter would not be the first president to discover that bipartisanship in the U.S. Senate is the key to fruitful management of our foreign affairs.

Florida's voters in 1978 approved the "Sunshine amendment" to the state constitution, which requires state and local officials to publicly discuss their financial holdings. But the amendment is a good deal more complicated than it appears.

It all depends on who's answering the question. At last Saturday's law and media conference in Orlando, the issue was debated in a panel discussion, whose participants are the promoters of the Sunshine amendment, Sen. Tom Pardo's state senate's advisory leader.

The cause now is in federal district court. Gov. Reubin Askew proposed the constitutional amendment, which was strongly supported by Attorney General Robert Service, now a candidate for governor.

Pardo and Service were among the panelists Saturday debating the Sunshine amendment. Other panelists included attorneys on both sides of the issue.

Mediating the session was Miami Herald Executive Editor John McMillan, who disappeared at the start of the panel discussion: "The session is on the record. I'm absolutely confident nothing will be said that I don't want to see in the newspaper."

James Wisniewski, deputy attorney general, claimed the right of privacy "is a very important constitutional right of privacy by public officials simply has not been recognized by the courts."

Miami Civil Rights lawyer Tobias Simon, who also represents Pardo, said the law required lawyers and publicists who contacted him for public advice to disclose their claims and interests, respectively.

Former Thomson, a Miami attorney representing the League of Women Voters (which supports financial disclosure) disagreed with Simon. "The law doesn't go so far," he said, "as to require disclosure to more important than their personal wealth."

Simmons' Constitution voted 58 percent in favor of the Sunshine amendment, about the same percentage locally as the statewide vote supporting the amendment.

ANGLE-WALTERS

Dole, Baker Face-Off

WASHINGTON — The great debate over the Panama Canal treaties continues to simmer in the Senate. A bitter political showdown between two Republicans with presidential ambitions.

This time the principals are not Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford, who have been largely forgotten by circumstance and choice, but rather Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

Dole and Baker have been sparring for a fight ever since Ford, in an effort to please the party's moderate Reagan, chose the Kansas over Baker as his 1976 running mate.

They had a series of minor skirmishes in the Senate last year, but these were a mere warm-up for the main event.

Although Dole ran on the Ford ticket in 1976, he never actually endorsed the former president's pro-treaty position. He never had to; the Panama Canal issue which dominated the GOP primary contest did not arise in the general election.

Therefore, Dole felt no inhibitions about attacking the final treaties negotiated by the new Carter administration. Conservative sentiment remained high in opposition to the pact, and the Kansas Republicans saw an opportunity to advance his claims with the presidential GOP ticket.

WASHINGTON WINDOW

Carter's Hard Choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter made some hard choices among conflicting national goals in the budget he sent Congress.

One can imagine the president at his desk, budget tables spread before him, juggling the long-range goals he already had stated to the American people.

—Balancing the budget by 1981.
—Cutting unemployment in the Humphrey-Hawkins target of 4 percent by 1981.
—Reducing inflation.

—Preparing new programs in fields such as welfare, health and aid to cities.
—Reducing federal government as a percentage of the total economy.
The trouble was, these goals collided with each other.

Carter's economists, and these advising Congress, say that unless there is a real business boom, the unemployment target can be met only by stimulating the economy with further tax cuts or spending increases over the next five years, beyond those already planned by Carter — making it that much harder to balance the budget.

Economists say reducing unemployment below a certain point will require inflation, though they differ as where that point is.
Proposed new programs collide with reducing the federal part of the economy. Welfare reform could cost $10 billion a year by 1981.

RONALD REAGAN

About The Marston Affair

If there was a "smoking gun" in the David Marston affair, the Carter administration seems to be hoping no one will find it.

Attorney General Griffin Bell's firing of Marston as U.S. Attorney for the Philadelphia district simply raised new questions. Congressional Justice Ellory (D-Pa.) is at the center of many of them.

Ellory, it seems, had been urging Bell for months to replace Marston, a Republican. Finally, last Nov. 4, the congressman called President Carter to ask him to "reassign" the matter. Two days earlier, the FBI had begun an investigation of contracts at Philadelphia's Hahnemann Hospital and Ellory was part of the investigation.

At his Jan. 13 news conference, the president first professed to know nothing about Marston. Then, under repeated questioning from reporters, he admitted that he had received the Ellory call.

Marston, who had gained a reputation as a tough prosecutor (he had already sent a leading Republican and two Democrats to jail) had been investigating the Hahnemann and Congressmen Ellory (D-Pa.), using both the FBI and federal grand juries.

Now, the big question is, did Bell, or for that matter, Carter, know about the investigation at the time Ellory called the Oval Office? Since federal grand juries do not convene without the Justice Department knowing about them, the central question has potentially serious implications.

On the heels of the Marston firing, Bell launched a quickie "investigation" to determine if there was a "smoking gun." One Michael E. Shuman, an employee of Bell's who conducted the investigation, announced that neither the president nor Ellory's counsel had obstructed justice. As proof, he cited affidavits to that effect submitted by both men.

WOMEN AT ARMS — President Carter would like to recruit more women into the armed forces. He is studying the possibility of increasing women's enrollment six times the present three percent level by 1982. The president confided to his cabinet cabinet closed doors that he expects "a dramatic increase in women in uniform in the next few years."

SHORT OF TIME — In preparing the massive federal budget, President Carter spent so much time reviewing the spending cut proposals of federal agencies that he was forced to adopt a budget of his own. He told his cabinet members that he had to budget his time, and he appealed to them to resolve their differences with his budget sides of possible.

He Keeps Tabs On Bills For Seminole

By MAX BRIDLEMAN
Staff Writer

The youthful Congress was in charge of legislative maneuvering for the date of Texas last year and he will not receive a pay raise for his added duties.

We have about 30 bills pre-filed that may affect us!

Originally, county commissioners lashed with the idea of establishing the position of a full-time position. However, they later opted to add the position to that of the clerk.

"What it boiled down to is that most of the work will be done during April and May and in a rather slack time of the year for me and my staff. So, they thought me about the sacrifices in my office could take on these chores."

He said there are two vital points in the life of legislation at which he will become active: committee hearings and floor debate.

"When we have a bill in committee that we want to oppose or favor, we want to have input, so we will develop our position on it and give that information to the delegation," said Etchberger.

"The basic point of fiscal policy is that we will write a position paper on each bill and then (the delegation) and I will draft a bill and we will submit it to the legislature," explained Etchberger.

"When a bill comes to the floor of the house or senate, he said such data will be provided in pocket form.

"The way the individual legislator can have all the data needed from our position, in committee hearings and floor debate," said Etchberger.

Between now and the beginning of the legislature's next session in April, Etchberger will be trying to establish contacts with members of the local delegation and their staffs.

"We will write a position paper on each bill"

Next month he and Roger Neidreder, county administrator, will go to Tallahassee for a summer on state government and the working of the legislature.

"The legislative program can be effective for the county, because, after all, the county is a creature of state government and we can only do what the state legislature allows us to do," said Etchberger.

FBI Retraces Kennedy Assassination

WASHINGTON — These probes have quietly returned to the scene of ex-New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's flamboyant investigation into the John F. Kennedy assassination.

On the day of the assassination, Marcella told the committee behind closed doors he and Ferris were together at the federal courthouse in New Orleans. Marcella was questioned by the committee as a witness, not a suspect.

NBA All-Star Game Set Sunday In Town Where Game Isn't Hot

ATLANTA (UPI)— Professional basketball has never really caught on in Atlanta, scene of Sunday's NBA All-Star game. This part of the country never was big on basketball, not even at the college level, and the Atlanta Hawks have done little in the decade they've been here to make the sport more attractive. The Hawks do have one budding superstar, John Drew, a 23-year-old 6-foot-4 forward, who has been sensational at times. But Drew, drafted after two obscure years at Wake Forest College, missed the college basketball that was so helpful to most of the NBA's "name" players. And, as Drew has found out, it's easy to be underrated when your team keeps losing. "Dr. J," Julius Erving, and were out there in a signing war for Drew Thompson. Little wonder the $180,000 contract he usually half empty.

Brantley Sinks Seminole, 67-57

Life is a roller coaster at times, says Charlie (Chilly) Campbell. And it has been no exception. Campbell, in his first year as head coach, has no such problems, however, as Lyman rolled to a 74-57 victory over the Seminole on Tuesday night. Clark Wins; Joey Upset

ORLANDO— Joey Vincent stalled, but won't get himself stalled and coach Clark won his first feature bout Tuesday night at the Orlando Sports Stadium. Vincent was upset by Zellwood fighter Robert Spencer in an eight-round decision which found Vincent knocked down in the fourth round. It was Spencer's second win in four pro bouts, twice beaten by Freddie Sanders. Vincent had a hard fight to the head for his boys against Ron Pettigrew in the sixth round. It ended his record to 1-1 and dropped Pettigrew to 18-2-4.

TAMPA (UPI)— Jury deliberation in Babe Smith's $2.5 million damage suit against the NFL and two game officials went into its second day today. The six-member federal court jury deliberated an hour and a half Tuesday, and then asked for a re-reading of some of the testimony of Smith and Robert Lester, one of the defendants. U.S. District Judge John Miller recessed the trial for the night after the re-reading of the testimony.

2:20:06 Wins SARATOGA, Cal. (UPI)— Brian Maxwell, Toronto, Canada, Sunday won the sixth annual marathon here with a time of 2:20:06 over the 26-mile foothill run. In other major games, Holy Cross defeated Brown, 91-79, North Carolina State topped Clemson, 73-69, Old Dominion bested East Carolina, 113-81 and Portland State topped the Pacific, 97-78, behind Freeman Williams' 26 points.

Allen Fulfills Vow To Return To Rams?

LOS ANGELES (UPI)— All signs indicate George Allen has been named head coach of the Los Angeles Rams. Although an official word has come from the Rams' organization or Allen, the former Washington Redskins head coach met Tuesday night with Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom and club secretary and the decision was finalized at the meeting. The Los Angeles Times said Allen was named coach of the Rams and official word of the decision would come at a press conference today in a hotel near the De-Luxe home of Rosenbloom. Allen has been in the running for the Rams' post since Jan. 15, when Chuck Knox resigned to coach the Buffalo Bills. Sources told Allen had the inside

Porsche Favored In 24 Hour Race

JACKSONVILLE (UPI)— With about 18 Porsche teams competing in this year's 24 Hours of Daytona endurance race, there's a pretty good chance a Porsche will emerge as the winner. "I'm sure a Porsche will win the 24 Hours this year," said Peter Greig, who is in charge of Porsche's Daytona race team. Porsche has been cast in a favorite's role to win the sports car marathon again. He will team with France's Claude Ballot-Lena in a turbo Porsche 924 and Germany's Rolf Sommerlein in an identical factory Porsche. "Chevrolet has been the IMSA (International Motor Sport Association) champion the last two years and our intention is to bring the championship back to Porsche," Greig said.

Vaught Retires As A.D.

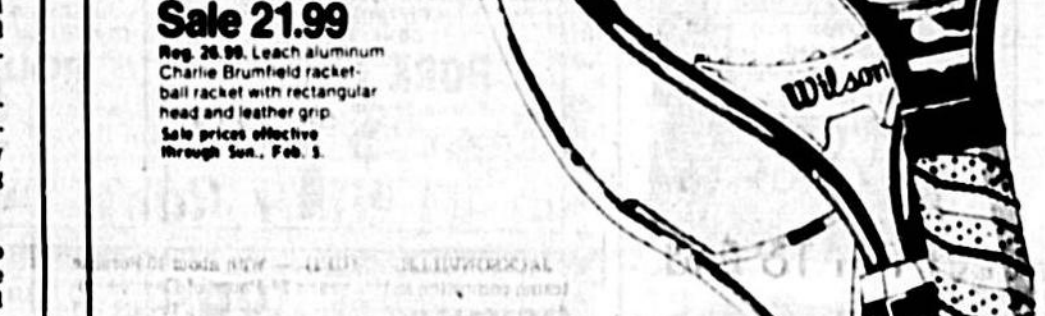

OXFORD, Miss. (UPI)— John H. Vaught ended three decades of service to the University of Mississippi football program Tuesday when he stepped down as the school's athletic director. Vaught, 69, who guided Ole Miss football to national prominence after taking over as head coach in 1967, was replaced by Assistant Athletic Director Warner Alford. It was that 1967 team, led by quarterback Charlie Conroy, that completed an 8-2 record and won the first of six Southeastern Conference titles to come under Vaught's reign. Alford is a former Rebel coach who became assistant athletic director in 1974. About 60 university staff members and close friends gathered Monday for a final salute to Vaught, who was described by University Chancellor Porter Fortune as "not only a great tactician but also a great teacher and a 'moral force at Ole Miss.'" Vaught— whose teams won 200 games, led 61 and led 12 before he stepped down as head football coach in 1971— said he and his wife, Johanna, would be churning out a couple of books.

Key Named FSU MVP

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)— Larry Key, who set school rushing records while leading Florida State University to a 10-2 record last season, is the most valuable player on the 1977 FSU football team. Key received the MVP honor Tuesday night at an awards banquet attended by Florida Governor Jeb Bush and FSU President Bernard Sliger. Key broke every rushing record at FSU while gaining 1,117 yards during the regular season and a career total of 2,953 yards. He became the first Seminole player to go over 1,000 yards for a single season. The 1,117 yard figure does not include the 30 yards he gained in FSU's 30-17 win over Texas Tech in the Tangerine Bowl.

Jury Out Two Days On Bubba. NEW YORK (UPI)— For a change, there's some good news for Bubba Kuhn today and he may use all he can get. To begin with, neither Oakland's Charlie Finley nor Cincinnati's Bob Howsam is likely to sue him over the Vladek deal, regardless of what both have said about leaving him into court. And second, Kuhn will be glad to hear his decision has elicited some unexpected support from one of his prosecutors, A.B. "Happy" Chandler, who was baseball commissioner himself once for more than six years.

Judge Orders Hunter: 'Take A Life...Replace It'

The balance of nature was at least in part restored today. In a remote wooded section of southeast Seminole County a deer was released at the cost of a hunter who illegally shot and killed a deer in the same vicinity last fall. Judge Harold F. Johnson ordered Larry Williams, of Sanford, to pay the cost of replacing the deer after Bill Hogan of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department issued a summons to Williams for using a light to trap the deer at night. Williams paid $200 to the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission for the cost of trapping and transporting the deer to Seminole County. Two deer were trapped in the Cape Canaveral area, transported to Seminole County Thursday morning and released just before noon in the area just west of Lake Harney off State Road 68. "We had an extra deer, so we brought two," said John Jacobs, who with Joe Chamberlain, transported the deer for the GFC. GFC wildlife officer Robert Johnson oversaw the releasing of the deer.

Three Plans, Prices Proposed Panel Says Minimum Library $1.5 Million

By MAX ERKLETTIAN Herald Staff Writer. If Seminole County wants to establish its own library system, it could cost between $1.5 million and $4.1 million just to get one of three possible systems on the ground. And, depending upon which of the three systems is selected, it could cost between $900,000 and nearly $1 million a year to keep the system going. That's what a panel, appointed by the Seminole County Commission, has concluded in the first phase of its study to determine whether the county should continue its present participation through the Orlando Public Library system or establish its own system. Jeff Eichberger, director of the Office of Management Analysis Evaluation, said the committee has concluded "phase one" of its investigation and will seek a conference with the commission to review its findings. Eichberger and his staff have been compiling data for the commission-appointed panel. Wednesday he presented cost estimates for operating a Seminole County library. The study was initiated last October following the commission's decision to remain in the Orlando Public Library System for a third year. Several commissioners expressed the belief that the same services might be provided at less cost through a Seminole County system. "Phase two of the study will probably deal with an examination of current services offered through OPL," according to Eichberger. He added the panel may seek further direction from the commission as to how to continue the study. The group divided potential library services into three categories: a low, medium and high level service. "The low level of operation would provide only basic services, including a main library, a branch facility and a book mobile, according to Eichberger. "The medium level would...

New-Home Development Plans Revealed For Sanford

A Miami development company revealed plans in Sanford this morning for the "first major single-family development in Sanford in the last four years." The plan was announced by Coronado Inc., which purchased 140 lots in Sanera and Sanora South subdivisions for $750,000, according to company president Monroe Marks. The firm has an option to buy 90 additional lots in Sanera South, he added. The announcement was made at the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Mid-Florida, U.S. 17-90, Sanford. The subdivisions are located just south of Airport Boulevard and Sanford Avenue, according to Marks. Groundbreaking on the first model home will begin next week, he said. All 190 lots are expected to be completed within three years, said Marks. Originally, the development was started in the early 1970s, but failed when the demand for housing declined in late 1973, said Wayne Sanborn, representing First Federal. Sanborn said his bank is selling the property to Coronado. Homes will be constructed in a variety of designs, according to Marks. All homes will feature three bedrooms. Four models will contain one and a half baths and four other models will feature two full baths and a family room. Sanora South will feature homes in the $120,000 to $25,000 range, while Sanera will feature $40,000 to $45,000 homes, said Marks. All utility lines to the subdivisions are ready for home hookup, he noted. All homes will contain a range and oven unit. "We're building homes that will be complete with carpeting and air conditioning and everything you need to move in, except furniture and a refrigerator," stated Marks. He added that he was authorizing Stenstrom Realty to offer a $300 refrigerator allowance to anyone signing a contract on a house before the model homes are opened. Stenstrom is the only real estate firm authorized to sell homes in either subdivision. People buying homes in either development will automatically become members of the Sanera Home Owners Association, according to Marks. Membership in the association is maintained by a $100 per year fee. That fee goes to provide for the upkeep of the recreation facilities in the subdivisions. Those facilities feature tennis courts, basketball courts, a club house, junior olympic size swimming pool and a kiddie pool, said Sanborn and the manager. Marks said the homes will be built with a diverse buyer market in mind. — MAX ERKLETTIAN

$8,000 Damage At Storage Site Youth Arrested For Blaze

A fire authorities believe was intentionally set Wednesday afternoon at a 212 N. Myrtle Ave., Sanford, metal storage building caused an estimated $8,000 worth of damage to sheets, towels, mattresses, metal furniture and other items stored at the building by Sanford Holiday Inn, according to the motel's manager. Sanford firemen, called to the scene at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, extinguished the blaze immediately, according to Sanford Fire Chief George Manning Harriet, but it took more than an hour to remove smoldering items from the shed. Chief Harriet said the 30-by-60-foot metal building suffered "some damage" to the walls and wooden floors. An adjoining building, at which three boats were stored, was not damaged, said the chief. Sanford police have arrested a Sanford juvenile for burglary of the storage building and arson in connection with the fire. The juvenile was released to the custody of his sister, police said.

Tax Exempt Status Plan Pushed

By MARYLENE SHEDDAN Herald Staff Writer. More than $10,000 has been received in a special insurance fund created by School Superintendent William F. Lauer, who is working with local authorities to create a corporation which will provide tax exemption for donations received. The fund is intended to provide some relief for 600 families of school employees left with unpaid medical and dental bills when their insurance company failed. "Frank Whigham, attorney with Stenstrom, Davis and McInosh, is setting up our corporation," Lauer said. Despite opinions from Internal Revenue Service officials last December that such a corporation might not be eligible for tax-exempt status, Lauer said he has high hopes of getting the corporation, "but we just don't know how long it will take." David Lanier, certified public accountant in Sanford, is working with Whigham to create the corporation. "I have given him a copy of the proposed charter for a public non-profit corporation," Whigham said, "and he is checking it for tax status." Lanier would not discuss details of how the corporation is being set up, but did say, "I think we will get tax-exempt status. It does take some time to get IRS to act on the question, and it takes time for us to get everything together for them and to file the incorporation papers, so it will be a while before we know anything." Lauer issued an appeal to employees of the school system in December at the annual county employees' luncheon. In an emotional plea to the employees, Lauer told them all "just to think whether you would rather be in need of receiving this money or able to give it. I am certain there is no one in this room who would not rather be able to give." The unpaid bills were left when Old Securities, an insurance company contracted to provide health, dental and life insurance for school employees, went into receivership in October 1977. Unpaid claims amount to about half a million dollars, according to a survey made by the school board. At its most recent meeting, the school board heard a suggestion by vice chairman E.C. Harper Jr. that a non-profit corporation be set up and money solicited from the general public, as well as school employees. "Mr. Harper's suggestion has nothing to do with our special insurance fund," Lauer said. The school board is involved in a lawsuit with the Seminole Education Association, which wants the board to demand that the board itself come up with money to pay the bills and claims of all involved employees. No court date has yet been set for that suit.
