Flag thefts

SANFORD — Two large commercial size flags were apparently stolen sometime between Monday night and Tuesday morning, at the American Legion Post 53 building, 2874 S. Sanford Avenue.

Both flags were on the same large pole in front of the building. They were an American flag, and a POW/MIA flag. The actual cost of replacing the flags was not immediately determined, but a spokesman at the American Legion commented, "when you consider it is an American flag, you can't put a price on it."

In addition to the flags, other items were also reportedly stolen including basketball hoop and pole.

Mission help needed

SANFORD — Rev. Joyce Shaw's Mission helps others, but also needs help. The mission, at 900 W. 13th Street in Goldsboro, serves food to the needy and homeless. Having not yet reached its first year anniversary however, the mission is having a difficult time getting food donations for this Thanksgiving as well as the other holidays.

In addition to food items, the mission is also in serious need of kitchen utensils.

To lend a helping hand, for donations or additional information, phone the mission at 322-0048.

Reins of power shift

Morris backs public-friendly county meetings

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The reins of Seminole County power shifted quickly Tuesday as incoming commissioner Randall Morris was named chairman of the Board of County Commissioners.

It was the first time in recent memory a newly-elected commissioner was seated as the chairman of the Board of County Commissioners.

Two new Republicans were sworn into office yesterday, ending the four-year GOP blemish that was Democrat Larry Furlong, joined by Democrat Carlton Henley for little more than a year.

Political ties formed a web in the vote for chairman. Mid-term commissioner Daryl McLain nominated Morris to the position. Morris managed the McLain campaign two years ago. Commission newcomer Winfield Adams, almost under his breath, supported McLain.

Although some thought Adams would align himself with the more conservative Pat Warren and former chairman Dick Van Der Weide, Adams said he wanted to give Morris, former Lake Mary mayor, a test drive. Adams denied endorsements of his primary opponent Andrea Dennison by Van Der Weide and Warren played a

Robinson sets priorities for school board

By VICKI DeBORMIER

SANFORD — Newly-elected school board chairman Sandy Robinson will not wield a wimpy gavel, she says.

"I have some very specific items that I have been working hard on, but as chairman, I can move them along a little faster," she said.

Robinson said that her number one priority is safety. The safety of the students in the schools "has to take priority" over everything else, she said.

First elected to the school board in 1990, she was unopposed in the most recent election. She will serve another four years.

Robinson has been nominated to the top spot on the board twice before and has twice turned it down, citing a lack of time to perform the duties to the best of her abilities.

She says she now has the time to do the job and to do it well.

Robinson said she hopes to continue the strong alliance that has formed between the schools and the juvenile justice system to make schools safer places for learning.

Two men indicted for murder

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

SANFORD — Two Sanford men were indicted by a Seminole grand jury Tuesday for first degree murder in the strangulation death of the 35-year-old wife of one of the suspects.

Michael Scott Stoll, 33, and his business associate, Christopher Matthew Stewart, 19, were indicted in the Nov. 3 murder of Stoll's wife, Julie, in the house the three shared at 1805 W. Third Street.

Mrs. Stoll told her family and friends she had a brain tumor and multiple sclerosis and had been given between four months to a year to live. She had arranged for her mother to have custody of her two sons. An autopsy showed no evidence of a tumor or the disease.

Stoll and Stewart will be held on a no bond status at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and will make their first court appearance on the Drug testing for school bus drivers

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Random drug and alcohol testing for school bus drivers and commercial drivers who operate heavy rigs or haul hazardous material will be required under a new law that takes effect Jan. 1.

School bus drivers in Seminole County aren't worried about the prospect at all.

"I think you're going to see that the number of drivers who are found to have drugs or alcohol in their systems when they're on the job will be negligible if there are any at all," said Nancy Wheeler, executive director of Seminole UniServe, the umbrella organization over the bus driver's union.

There are nearly 500 full and part time school bus drivers in the district.

"We haven't had any complaints," said Wheeler. "We've certainly had ample time to prepare. We've known about this for two or three years."

Area sky fills with skydivers making movie

DeLAND — The Central Florida skies from DeLand to Orlando have become part of another movie featuring Wesley Snipes in a Paramount film entitled "Drop Zone."

This time Snipes is involved in skydiving for Paramount. The action adventure is set in the world of Snipes first took over the local sky in 1991 during the filming of Passenger 57. At that time, a large portion of the movie was filmed at Sanford's Central Florida Regional Airport.

This time Snipes is involved in skydiving for Paramount. The action adventure is set in the world of skydiving, with Skydive DeLand supplying many of the daredevils who help make the movie.

Skydive DeLand owner, Bob Hallett was a stunt double in many of the scenes and dozens of DeLand area skydivers performed as special talent, extras and technicians. Much of the freefall footage was shot by photographers from the Central Florida area, and several aircraft and pilots from the local area are also in the movie.

While many of the shots were done over this area of Central Florida, some included spectacular night jumps over downtown Miami.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Vandals rip through high school

BUSHNELL — South Sumter High School is closed until Monday because vandals destroyed computers and televisions and wrecked the library and other parts of the school 50 miles west of Orlando.

Damage was estimated at $300,000. Parents are volunteering to help clean up the mess.

"Die white trash" and "Black power" slogans were scrawled in red paint, but school officials said that since there has been no racial tension at the school perhaps someone was trying to mislead police.

All seven school buildings were affected, said Principal Bob Edwards. Shelves were overturned in the library, and every computer and television screen was punctured. Windows were smashed, and desks and trophies were destroyed.

More reports of molestation at hospital

INVERNESS — Reports of sexual molestation are still coming out following five charges of rape against a male nurse who was caring for patients who were sedated.

The latest report comes from a woman patient who told investigators she was fondled by a male nurse after she had gotten out of surgery. The woman said it happened just hours before another nurse reported seeing the male nurse raping an unconscious teen-ager in a hospital recovery room.

That information was released Monday by prosecutors in the rape case against Bruce Alan Young, a former nurse at Citrus Memorial Hospital. The woman's complaint was contained in 47 pages of interviews conducted by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement shortly after they arrested Young Oct. 3. Young has since been fired by the hospital.

Young says he is innocent. He is being held in the Citrus County Jail in Inverness, about 90 miles northwest of Tampa.

Decision to be made in beating

TAMPA — Prosecutors are trying to decide whether to charge an 84-year-old Alzheimer's patient in the fatal beating of a 64-year-old man in an apparent argument over a TV chair at a nursing home.

The elder man was "pretty beat up," suggesting the possibility that he might have been defending himself, said Michael Eisele, administrator of the nursing home. The Courtyard at Lowry Place.

Alzheimer's is a disease in which parts of the brain progressively shut down, leaving victims eventually unable to recognize loved ones or even talk.

Police say George Bates had been beaten to death with a leg from a broken chair. Bates died from his injuries a week after the Nov. 11 beating.

Dade school board expanded to 9 seats

MIAMI — The ethnic makeup of the predominantly white Dade County School Board is likely to be altered as a result of settlement of a federal lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Lenore C. Neabitt on Monday issued an order that increases the board seats from seven to nine. All nine of the expanded panel's seats will be up for election in 1996.

There will be nine districts, and voters will cast ballots only for the school board seat representing their area. Under the old at-large system, county residents voted for all seats on the board.

Of the nine new school board districts, two will be predominantly black, four will be predominantly Hispanic, two will be predominantly non-Hispanic white and one will be a "swing district," with almost equal representation of Hispanics and non-Hispanic whites.

Man pleads guilty to murder of Willetts

ST. AUGUSTINE — Saying he didn't want to put the family of his murder victim through more agony, a man pleaded guilty just before he was to be retried.

Michael Gene Abshire, 28, entered the guilty plea Monday in the slaying of Stacey Ann Willetts, 22, whose body was found by hunters near Orangedale in November 1991.

Abshire had already been convicted and sentenced to death, but the Florida Supreme Court overturned the conviction. The court said the prosecutor had tried to keep women from being seated on the jury.

There were seven women out of the 12 jurors, but the court said that didn't matter if other women were excluded because of their gender.

A sentencing hearing will be Jan. 23. The prosecutor says he will seek the death penalty.

A co-defendant in the case, John Christopher Marquard, 28, was convicted in 1992 and was sentenced to die in Florida's electric chair.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Three new members take action

Lake school board repeals America First policy

By The Associated Press

TAVARES — A tentative school policy which taught students that America is culturally superior to other countries has been repealed by the Lake County School Board, thanks to the votes of three new members.

The board voted 3-2 Tuesday night to repeal the rule, which never made it into classrooms because of the furor it caused in this Central Florida area.

The three members voting to repeal the policy had campaigned against it in the Nov. 8 elections. The two voting to keep the policy had voted for it earlier this year and were not up for re-election.

A final vote, which is a formality, could come as early as Jan. 10.

The pair supporting the measure agreed with Pat Hart, the board's outgoing chairwoman, who wrote the policy in response to a Florida law that requires teaching appreciation of other cultures.

Hart, who didn't attend the vote, has said the policy was designed to teach children "what virtues separate America from other countries."

Among other things, the policy states that students will be taught "our republican form of government, capitalism, a free enterprise system, patriotism, strong family values, freedom of religion and other basic values."

Many changes in store for Republican senate

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Sen. Jim Scott, heading the first Republican-dominated Florida Senate in 120 years, said he will abolish at least six committees and retool others.

Scott said Tuesday he would respond to the message sent by voters with sweeping changes in the way the 40-member chamber operates, to focus attention on education, crime, economic development and government streamlining.

"If one single message from the election stands out more than any other, it is that people want less government and more freedom," the Fort Lauderdale Republican told senators.

"In order to achieve better results, we are going to have to do different things, to change in fundamental ways," Scott said.

In the House, with Democrats clinging to a 63-57 advantage, Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, said he, too, would change the committee lineup, adding new panels to focus on areas of special interest such as juvenile crime.

And with the GOP-dominated Senate and gains in the House, Gov. Lawton Chiles' veto power will play a major part in the balance of power, Wallace added.

When Democrats plot strategy, he said, "The governor will be an active participant."

Twenty-two members of the Senate and 120 members of the House were sworn in Tuesday during the one day organizational session. They were surrounded by family members at desks decorated with flowers from lobbyists and friends.

The Senate has six new members while the House has 29.

Scott was elected Senate president because the GOP broke the 20-20 tie of the past two years in the past election. Republicans now hold a 21-19 edge for the first time since Reconstruction after the Civil War. Sen. Ken Jenne, D-Fort Lauderdale, will serve as Senate Democratic leader.

Republicans and Democrats sounded like they wanted to work together on a day filled with ceremonies and homage among lawmakers. But it will be difficult to avoid the partisan bickering that has thwarted Chiles' earlier efforts on tax reform and health care.

DNA collected from young criminals

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — State police will begin collecting DNA samples from juvenile sex offenders and killers now that Attorney General Bob Butterworth has given his go-ahead.

Officials said the collection would apply to fewer than 1,000 juveniles a year. DNA samples already are collected from most young killers but not from young sex offenders, who are kept within the juvenile justice system.

Tim Moore, commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, said his agency wants to begin collecting as soon as possible.

Florida is one of 10 states developing a DNA database that uses samples from convicted sex offenders and murderers as genetic fingerprints to match them against unsolved crimes.

Children's advocates weren't happy with move, saying the state wants to treat juveniles who commit violent crimes more like adults.

"The whole reason for having a juvenile justice system, and we are continuing to forget the reason behind it is because children are different," said David Tarbert, a lawyer at Florida State University's Children's Advocacy Center.

Moore said the goal was to protect the public.

"If you are a victim of sexual assault or rape, or if you are the surviving family member of someone who has been murdered, it doesn't matter to you if it's a juvenile or an adult," Moore said.

Butterworth, in a legal opinion released Monday, said the state's 1990 DNA database law treated juvenile delinquency and an adult criminal conviction the same for purposes of DNA collection.

Sheriff: Most-wanted fugitive confesses to killing six gay men

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A man accused of hustling men he met at gay bars and then strangling and shooting them has confessed to six murders in three states, the sheriff said.

Gary Ray Bowles of Clifton Forge, Va., was arrested Tuesday, days after being added to the list of the FBI's 10 Most Wanted Fugitives.

"He has confessed to six and says that is all he did," Jacksonville Sheriff Jim McMillan said. "All of us are relieved he is off the street. There is no doubt there would have probably been more."

The FBI says Bowles, 32, frequented gay bars, hustling men in exchange for lodging, household chores or sexual favors. He confessed to murders in Jacksonville, Daytona Beach and Hilliard, as well as Atlanta, Savannah, Ga., and Wheaton, Md., McMillan said. All the victims were bludgeoned, strangled or shot.

Warrants have been issued in three of the killings, including the strangling of a disabled World War II veteran.

Bowles was arrested at a day labor office in Jacksonville Beach and questioned about the killing of Walter Jammell Hinton, 43, Hinton, who had been Bowles' roommate, was found dead in his Jacksonville mobile home Sunday.

Police said Bowles, who was using an alias, confessed to his murder.

"He did not feel good about what he had done," said Jacksonville Sheriff's Detective J.P. Collins.

Bowles is charged with fleeing prosecution after being charged with strangling a 72-year-old disabled veteran in Savannah, Ga. He also has been charged with murder in the strangling of a 39-year-old loan processor in Silver Spring, Md., and the death of a 37-year-old Hilliard man.

Bowles has been arrested at least 14 times in Florida since 1981 on charges ranging from sexual battery and aggravated assault to robbery and violating probation.

In 1982, Bowles was convicted of aggravated assault and sentenced to three years in prison. In 1986 he was arrested in Fulton County, Ga., on a prostitution charge.

Bowles' case has been featured five times on the television show "America's Most Wanted."

Thanksgiving

Remember the old story? The English Puritans, (pilgrims) who founded the Plymouth Colony in 1620, were so thankful they had been able to settle in a new land, that they invited a number of Indians to sit and dine with them?

The pilgrims supplied the natives with food they had grown in their gardens, berries they had picked, and meat from animals they had either raised, trapped or killed.

Legend says everyone had a good time and gave thanks for their many blessings.

This story, or one similar, has been passed on from generation to generation for over three centuries. Some of it is relatively accurate, while most of it has been embellished with the intention of making the event sound more and more like we would want our offspring to hear.

We all know, things probably weren't that calm and peaceful then, and they certainly aren't today.

Many people will go through this holiday without anything more than the usual meal, if even that. Our "horn of plenty" does not extend to everyone. The nation, state, and even our own home towns are loaded with the poor and homeless.

Contrary to the Puritans and Indians, we no longer sit down with people with backgrounds, religious beliefs and racial backgrounds different than we have. Only a few believe in sharing now. For most, it's a case of get as much as you can, and forget anyone else.

Certainly this is not a cheering thought for such a day of thanks as this holiday is intended to instill.

Yet we must give it our serious consideration and spend some time in thought. The Puritans, or pilgrims, whatever we wish to call them, wanted to share what they had. They could have sat down at the dinner table and ignored the starving Indians (who's land they had invaded). But no, they exercised what is often referred to as brotherhood.

Give it serious consideration. Do whatever you can to act like the pilgrims. Share those blessings. Help someone who is less fortunate. Try to give hope to those who believe themselves to be beyond help.

If this can be done, Thanksgiving 1995 could be one of the greatest holidays you have ever experienced.

Do it.

LETTER

Waiting to hear

This is in response to Mr. Donald M. Fann's letter regarding "Solution to Problems" of children being raised in "pockets of poverty".

Mr. Fann, you mentioned in your letter that we need to be "giving examples of children and parents who made their way out of poverty, which might be a better solution to the problem". Here's your chance. Mr. Fann, Seminole County Public Schools has two programs to help you and others do these things, a speakers bureau and a mentor program.

In the Dividends School Volunteer Community Resource Program, speakers are scheduled to speak to K-12 about their careers, hobbies and travels. Mentors work one on one with at-risk students sharing their time and talents encouraging academic and attendance excellence. Mr. Fann, we are waiting to hear from you. Please call 322-1252, X443.

Democratic 'Contract With America'

"This is an irresponsible document. It's a dangerous proposal." — Tom Foley, lame-duck speaker of the House

"Voodoo part two, it's the Son of Reaganomics." — David Wilhelm, outgoing chairman of the Democratic National Committee

"A fraud." — Leon Panetta, White House chief of staff

Democratic Party leaders made a fatal error when they decided to campaign against the House GOP's "Contract With America." While the voters may not have agreed with each and every plank included in the contract, they liked the idea that the Republicans had a comprehensive agenda that they were ready to enact within the first 100 days of the next Congress. On the other hand, the Democrats offered little to voters, except a pledge to keep those mean old Republicans from wresting control of Congress and putting their voodoo to floor votes. So the reactive electorate was presented a choice of something from the Republicans and next to nothing from the Democrats.

It was an elephant stampede.

But it didn't have to be that way. If the Democratic Party leadership had put its collective heads together, they could have come up with a platform to rival the GOP's contract. All they had to do was package some of the more moderate legislative proposals that were championed during the past two years by members of their own party.

These items include:

— The Balanced Budget Amendment. Such a measure was sponsored this past year by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and won wide support on both sides of the aisle. It fell a scant four votes shy of the two-thirds majority required for passage, mainly because powerful Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd twisted enough Democratic arms.

Simon's proposed amendment was simple. It would have forbidden the federal government to spend more money than it takes in. For spending to exceed revenues in a given year, lawmakers would have been required to muster a three-fifths majority vote.

— A-to-Z Spending Cuts. Rep. Robert Andrews, D-N.J., co-sponsored this plan along with New Hampshire Republican Bill Zeliff. A special 10-day session of Congress would have been devoted to exclusive debate on spending cuts. Lawmakers would have proposed specific items to be pared from the budget. After a free and unfettered debate, the item would be put to an up or down vote.

The virtue of the plan is that the spendthrifts in Congress would be exposed for all the public to see. They no longer could get away with tucking wasteful pork barrel items into all-encompassing spending bills that, under the present system, lawmakers are forced to accept or reject in toto, good and bad spending items alike.

— Congressional Coverage. Rep. Dick Swett, D-N.H., co-authored legislation along with Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., that would have put an end to Congress' most hypocritical practice — exempting itself from the very laws it expects the rest of America to follow.

It was an elephant stampede.

Charity, orphanages: Refreshing

BOSTON — I bet you were wondering what imaginative, innovative, strikingly new ideas the Republican leadership would come up with to help guide us into the future.

Try these for openers: Charity and Orphanages.

Before the post-election week was out, Newt Gingrich, the chubby-cheeked cherub of conservatism, and his cohorts were unveiling a wish list of assorted plans to end welfare as anybody knows it.

Plan One: Let the states ban cash benefits for teenage mothers. Plan Two: Use the savings for adoptions and orphanages. Plan Three: Two months and you're out. Plan Four: If the women can't or don't find work, well, in Newt's words, "I think I would like to expand private charities."

Ah yes, back to the good old days. First Gingrich calls the Clintons "counterculture McGoverniks," a phrase reeking of nostalgia for Cold War enemies. Then his fellow time-travelers talk about unraveling Lyndon Johnson's Great Society. Now we zip right on back to the Eden before FDR's New Deal.

Orphanages? Been there. Done that. In the early part of this century, more than half the children in orphanages were not in fact orphans. They had mothers who couldn't support them.

These orphanages were not only Dickensian institutions where children were often literally lost, but they were expensive. The reformers wanted to take the money and give it to mothers.

At the height of the Depression, as historian Linda Gordon points out in her book "Pitted but Not Entitled," being for public assistance was like being for motherhood. What we now call welfare was established as one small part of the omnibus Social Security Act of 1935. This was the same act that started old-age insurance and unemployment insurance. Back then, the elderly didn't seem to be more deserving than single mothers.

In casting his vote for the bill in 1935, Arkansas Rep. Claude Fuller expressed the florid vision of the era: "I can see the careworn and dejected widow shout with joy upon returning from the neighbor's washup after having received assurance of financial aid for her children. I see her with the youngest child upon her knee and the others clustered by her kissing the tears of joy from her pale cheek...."

It didn't happen quite like that. From the very beginning, those programs designed for working men were based on the belief that they had rights. They were planned to preserve the status of breadwinners.

But aid to single mothers was based on compassion, the belief that women and children had needs. The reformers themselves worried about undermining the breadwinner's family.

So public assistance was deliberately designed to keep women out of the work force during the Depression. At the same time, as Gordon points out, it was meant "to prevent its recipients from being too comfortable on their own." And it was the only program that held the recipients up to "moral scrutiny."

The end result of this two-tier system is that old-age insurance, now called Social Security, is so popular that it's untouchable even by the new Newtism. For that matter, no one would dare suggest ending unemployment insurance for a down-sized worker and putting his or her kids in orphanages.

But today "welfare" is the target of more knives than the Thanksgiving turkey. There is literally no remaining support for the program as it exists, not even, or especially not among the recipients.

The country that supported AFDC as a safety net now thinks of it as a permanent trap. The image is no longer a widowed or deserted mother. It's an unwed teen-age mother. What's driving the debate now is a certain desperation that we "do something" about unwed teen-age mothers.

But there are 14 million Americans on welfare, including one out of seven children. In this atmosphere, the Clinton plan "to end welfare as we know it" combined a two-year time limit—a deadline—with some help across the divide from welfare to work. It included health coverage, child care, training.

I supported that balancing act—and still do—though with concerns about how hard some might fall. I also support the notion of capping payments for additional children born to mothers on welfare.

But the centrist compromise is now being shoved to the left fringe-nik side of the debate. And the ideas being shoved into the spotlight? Charity. Orphanages. How refreshing.

Try these for openers: Charity and Orphanages.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Moral values, yes; school prayer, no

A recent Associated Press analysis of what the Republicans are expected to do following their roundup of legislative seats conjectured that the GOP will steer clear of the trouble that plagued the Democrats after their success in '92.

They will avoid pummeling the other side over divisive social issues such as abortion and anti-gay measures, the AP opines. So what is incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich doing asking the House to vote by July 4 on a constitutional amendment allowing organized school prayer?

You could hardly find a more divisive issue, as major players on both sides of the aisle oppose such an amendment—even though President Clinton recently said he favors legislation to allow a "moment of reflection" during the school day.

Steven McFarland, director of the Christian Legal Society's Center for Law and Religious Freedom, said his group opposes such an amendment. J. Brent Walker, general counsel for the Baptist Joint Committee, which represents 10 Baptist denominations, also has reservations.

"A constitutional amendment is such a drastic remedy," Walker told the AP. "You do that kind of thing only when there's a crying need."

You may wonder why Christian organizations would oppose such an idea. I don't. First, students can pray silently anytime they want to, even in a group. They don't need an amendment. They can also choose not to, and no one can force them to participate in group prayer.

Second, it is impossible to regulate praying out loud in school, or make guidelines that all teachers and administrators will follow. One experience that illustrates the delicate nature of the issue is that of a reporter I worked with, a Catholic, whose son went to a public elementary school a few years ago.

One night after their family dinner prayer the little boy said he didn't want to make the sign of the cross and asked why they had to do it when none of his classmates did.

His father explained that their family made the sign of the cross because it was part of the way they observed their religion, and that people of other faiths had other symbols and practices that Catholics don't share. Then he asked his son why he didn't want to make the sign of the cross.

"Because every time we say the 'God is great' prayer at lunch, my teacher frowns at me when I do it," the little boy answered.

No child should be subjected to such intolerance, and when religion in any manner is practiced in a public school we open the door to that possibility.

Teachers and administrators can still teach moral principles in a positive way without demanding prayer or even a "moment of reflection." Former Missouri state legislator Curtis Wilkerson, when he was an elementary school principal, set aside one school day of the year and called it "Moral and Spiritual Values Day." In class discussions teachers talked about values such as patience, helpfulness and treating others as we'd like to be treated. Wilkerson also built an all-school assembly around such themes.

The 1984 Equal Access Act requires that public schools allow religious-oriented groups to use meeting rooms and other facilities just like the drama club and Boy Scouts do. Kids can meet religiously in schools and can pray silently to themselves or in groups. That is true religious freedom that doesn't infringe upon anyone else's religious beliefs.

You could hardly find a more divisive issue, as major players on both sides of the aisle oppose such an amendment.

Both campaigned for him in the general election against Furlong. "Randy did a good job in Lake Mary," Adams said. "In my opinion, he's a visionary and I wanted to see what he could do."

Warren was re-elected vice chairman. Now the senior member of the board — a ranking which typically leads to chairmanship — Warren has never held that position.

Political observers said they could not remember any time during the past 30 or more years a freshman was named to the largely ceremonial but prestigious chairman's seat.

Although Morris commented "I'm a little rusty at this, it's been a couple of years" on receiving the chairman's gavel, he said later he's ready to streamline commission meetings and make county operations more public-friendly.

"I want to look at some rules and procedures to speed commission meetings," said Morris. "I want to look at trying to make government a little more accessible to the public."

Adams said his top priorities are to "listen and learn."

protected from identification in the schools by a curtain of privacy. Robinson believes the policy of making teachers aware of the felonious students in their classrooms is a good idea.

As chairman, she hopes to forge even stronger inroads with the juvenile justice system to be sure that felons have an equal right to education, but that the classrooms are not violent hotbeds for criminals.

"The environment needs to be conducive to learning for all our students," Robinson said.

She added that she will continue to support the magnet (or charter) school programs such as the Academy of Health Careers at Seminole High School. It was Robinson who first introduced that idea to the district at the start of her first term on the board.

"We have to continue the magnet program if we are to remain competitive," she said. "We need to have a plan and we need to start preparing the students in middle school or maybe even elementary school."

Robinson will serve as chairman for one year. Nancy Warren will serve as vice chairman.

Murder

indictment today, assistant state attorney Joe D'achille said.

The prosecutor said the final decision has not been made on whether to seek the death penalty in the case. The co-defendants are expected to be tried separately.

Stoll and Stewart are charged with murdering the woman by strangulation. The woman fought to escape her attackers, according to police, after Stewart attempted to snap her neck, suffocate her with a cushion and covered her head with a plastic garbage bag which she bit through in order to breathe.

Stewart told police during their investigation Stoll handed him a padded bed rail from the waterbed and they put her neck on the wooden panel of the frame and snapped her neck.

After the woman was dead, the pair went to work installing flooring in Winter Park. Items taken from the house to give the appearance of a burglary were thrown into dumpsters. Mrs. Stoll's purse was found by Winter Park Police.

Initially, Stoll told police he arrived home from work, found the front door ajar and his wife dead inside. Stoll told police the house had been burglarized and the perpetrators must have killed his wife.

Perry says unsecure nuclear material transferred to US soil

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The United States today completed a "high priority, extremely sensitive" transfer of a large cache of bomb-grade uranium from Kazakhstan to a U.S. energy facility in Tennessee, Defense Secretary William Perry announced.

He said it constituted enough to make about two dozen nuclear weapons.

"We have put this bomb-grade nuclear material forever out of the reach of potential black marketeers" and terrorists, Perry told a Pentagon news conference.

He disputed published reports that the material was being poorly safeguarded by Kazakhstan, but he said the security costs were such a financial drain on the former Soviet republic that it made sense for Washington to step in.

The concern about security was the driving factor in making the mutually agreed arrangement to move the material secretly to American soil, Perry said.

Perry said 600 kilograms, or more than one-half ton, of highly enriched uranium was flown out of Kazakhstan to Dover Air Force Base, Del., and the last amounts reached the Y-12 plant at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., nuclear weapons plant this morning.

He said President Clinton gave the go-ahead for the operation on Oct. 7, and the material was moved by U.S. military airlift from Kazakhstan last weekend.

Kazakhstan inherited the material from the former Soviet Union when it dissolved in 1991. It has pledged to give up all its inherited nuclear weapons.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, appearing at the Pentagon with Perry, said the Kazakhstan material was enough to start a substantial and highly dangerous nuclear weapons arsenal if it had fallen into the hands of a rogue state.

Perry praised Kazakhstan for its cooperation in safely disposing of the nuclear material.

"We recognized both the risk of proliferation and the opportunity to prevent it, and moved quickly," the defense secretary said at the news conference, also attended by Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, whose department owns the Oak Ridge facility.

O'Leary said she wanted to assure Americans that the material from Kazakhstan is "non-traditiated material" and will be safe to workers who are handling it at Oak Ridge.

The U.S. officials said they could not immediately estimate the cost to the U.S. government of taking over the nuclear material. Perry said the military airlift cost alone was about $3 million. That does not include the costs incurred by the Energy Department for sending a team of experts to Kazakhstan.

O'Leary said the intent was eventually to have a commercial U.S. entity process the material into a lower state of enrichment so it can be used for fuel in a commercial reactor.

The material had been held at a nuclear plant at Ust-Kamenogorsk, an eastern Kazakhstan city about 200 miles from the borders of Mongolia to the east and China to the south.

The White House issued a statement today calling the transfer "an historic step toward meeting the proliferation challenges of the post-Cold War era."

In Moscow, a spokesman for Russia's Nuclear Power Ministry told The Associated Press that the uranium was enriched, but was "unsuitable for producing nuclear weapons."

Asked about this today, Perry said there was no question but that the material was enriched to a degree that it could be used to make weapons.

Testing

guidelines of the Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991.

State driver licenses records show about 350,000 drivers statewide have commercial licenses.

The federal law applies to anyone who drives a vehicle originally designed to carry 16 or more passengers. It also applies to anyone who has a commercial driver's license and who, as part of their job, drives a vehicle with a total weight of more than 26,000 pounds or which carries hazardous cargo.

Wheeler said the Seminole County bus drivers have a great reverence for the safety of their cargo.

"These people drive the buses because they love kids," she said. "They are very concerned with their safety and wouldn't do anything to endanger them."

District records show that few district school buses have been involved in traffic accidents in the last decade. In the cases where they were, there is no evidence that drugs or alcohol were involved or that the accidents were even the fault of the bus driver.

The law will change the drug-testing ground rules for school districts in varying degrees. Some counties have no drug testing programs while others will need to expand existing programs.

The Seminole County district has not done testing randomly in the past, though tests have been ordered on rare occasions if evidence suggests it is necessary.

None of the other school districts in the state currently perform random drug or alcohol testing.

Under the guidelines, drivers will be tested for drug and alcohol abuse before they're employed, after an accident, if there is reasonable suspicion and randomly.

Fifty percent of the affected pool of employees will be tested annually for drugs, and 25 percent for alcohol. Because the tests are random, the same employee's name could come up more than once in the course of a year, said David Friedberg, director of security for Hillsborough County schools.

Wheeler said the Seminole drivers will negotiate their contract soon. There are no plans to try to challenge the federal law at a local level.

"While there are pros and cons to every issue," she said, "We believe there are merits to the testing when it comes to the safety of the kids."

Information from The Associated Press was included in this report.

Cope edges Anderson at finish line to win Triple Crown opener

By PAUL MARRONIA
Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — St. Petersburg's Jimmy Cope held off a last-lap charge by Wayne Anderson to win the first leg of the Hooters/USA Florida State Triple Crown Series for Late Models last Friday Nov. 18, at Orlando Speedworld.

Wayne Anderson, who had a good run behind him, said "I was racing for a good night long, so I kept anyone made a run on me late in the race. I would hold them off."

At the drop of the green flag, Eddie Ganevy outduelled fellow pole sitter Cope for the lead. Shortly after that, Pete Orr moved around Cope into second place.

Cope dropped to fourth place behind Tuffy Heater. As Orr was racing for the lead with Ganevy, the two cars made contact, collecting Heater in the process.

While Orr's and Heater's racers were towed to the pits, Ganevy had to resume racing at the tail end of the pack, handling the point to Cope. On the restart, Cope charged to the lead with Anderson, Charlie Ragan Jr., Mario Gosselin, and Mike McCray in tow.

Despite nine caution periods, the majority of the rest of the race was follow-the-leader racing.

Nine laps to the checkers, Gosselin, the defending Triple Crown champion, drilled Ragan, sending him into the infield and allowing McCray to move up to fourth, and Ganevy to take over fifth.

Racing for the checkers, Anderson closed to Cope's rear bumper. With the flag stand in sight, Anderson pulled alongside Cope and the lead duo raced door-to-door to the flag. Cope edged Anderson by less than a carlength.

Crossing the stripe behind Cope and Anderson were, in order of finish, McCray, Fletcher, Ganevy, Mike Franklin, Bobby Coyle, Larry Rogero, Ragan, and Steve Lamb.

Lake Mary led 20-0 after the first quarter and was leading 33-5 at intermission as the Rams won by a lopsided score for the second consecutive night, 64-21, over the home-standing Oak Ridge Pioneers in a girls' basketball game.

Oak Ridge kept the score reasonable in the third quarter, only being outscored 12-10, but Lake Mary took control again in the fourth quarter, outpacing the home team 19-6.

Four Rams finished in double figures, led by Lori Hammett, whose 20 points nearly equaled the Pioneers' offensive output.

only returner to have to go the distance in his match, but his was one of the most impressive wins, scoring a 4-3 decision that tied the match at 3-3 after two weight classes.

Chas Milonovich (119), a new-comer to the varsity, followed that up with a pin in just 45 seconds. Bryan Yang (125), who wrestled some varsity last year, needed 1:19 to pin his opponent. Ben Crawford (130) scored a 15-2 major decision while Ryan Hartshorn (160) won his match with a 3-0 decision.

Lake Mary's next dual match is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 3, at Deland.

Do teen-agers get tumors of breasts

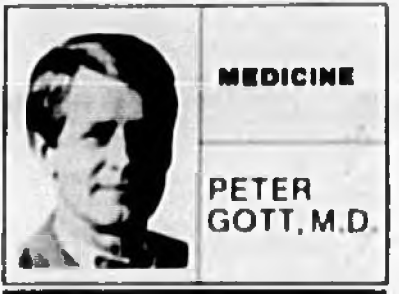

DEAR DR. GOTT: Just recently my period was delayed for more than two weeks. A short while after that I found a slight thickening in my breast. Could these two occurrences be related? I'm only 14 and wonder if it is possible to have a breast tumor at such an early age.

DEAR READER: Fourteen-year-olds frequently experience irregular periods. This is a normal adjustment during the first few years of menstruation.

When a period is delayed, the temporary imbalance of hormones may lead to painful, swollen or enlarged breasts that rapidly return to normal as the menstrual cycle re-synchronizes. Although breast tumors have been reported in young women, their occurrence is extremely rare. Nonetheless, if your breast "thickening" persists through your next period, bring it to your doctor's attention. Incidentally, you are to be congratulated on learning and performing breast examination at such a young age; this type of examination is appropriate for all women during the reproductive years.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 71 and have suffered from osteoarthritis for over 10 years. The pain in my right knee, hip and lower back is intense. I recently read that vitamin C relieves hay fever, which I also suffer from. I've taken 1,000 milligrams a day for the past week and while it hasn't relieved the hay fever, my osteoarthritis has all but disappeared. This seems too simple to be true, but nothing else in my lifestyle has changed so it has to be the vitamin C. Do you agree?

DEAR READER: Nope. No scientific study has shown that vitamin C, a vitamin necessary for normal metabolism, will relieve hay fever or cure arthritis. Osteoarthritis, the age-related wearing-down of joint surfaces, is an inevitable consequence of growing older. But it can behave strangely. Some people experiwith success. A dose of 1,000 mg a day will not harm you. Write me if your pain returns. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Osteoarthritis."

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Opening leads are a major headache. If anyone always found the best opening lead, he would be unstoppable. Many books have been written on the subject, and of course, and the guidelines they provide are worthwhile. But I don't remember seeing the point of today's deal brought out before. It was described in the 1994 NEC World Championships by Roland Rohowsky, who won the World Open Team Championship for the Rosenblum Cup four years ago in Geneva.

Sitting West was Nedju Buchlev, from Germany. He made an aggressive negative double after South's two-club overcall. When his partner, Andrea Rauscheid, showed hearts, Buchlev bravely bid game. And when North bid five clubs as an ruck-way bet (it might make; it might be a good sacrifice), Buchlev, with the adrenalin still flowing, doubled.

Everything hinged on the opening lead. Buchlev selected the spade nine. But now the declarer, Marijke van der Pas from the Netherlands, had no problems. East won with the ace and returned a spade. But South ruffed high, drew trumps ending in the dummy and discarded her heart loser on dummy's spade queen.

As you can see, a heart lead defeats the contract. Here, East and West have a fit in two suits: spades and hearts. The opponents have bid only clubs. Rohowsky points out that when you don't fear discards for declarer on the fourth suit (here, diamonds), you should lead from your longer fit, because you are less likely to establish a discard for declarer.

Smarter at Bridge, is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 169, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0169.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 24, 1994

In the year ahead, friends might play more prominent roles in your life than ever before. This may include two pals who no longer live close to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Continue to be on the alert for unusual arrangements that could bring in extra money. Two extraordinary opportunities might open up for you today. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today your associates will greatly influence your productivity and effectiveness. Seek companions who can get things done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could be lucky today professionally and financially. If you have something on the drawing board, don't put it off until tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your greatest successes today may stem from someone else's ideas instead of your own. Try not to let your ego get in the way of a profitable day.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of doing business with strangers, go back to companies that have given you breaks in the past. You might get an even better deal today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will be strongly impelled to bend over backwards and be fair today. Even when you have the upper hand, you probably won't use your clout.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be content to establish only one goal for yourself today; set several. You'll perform best and utilize your full talents when you're pushed a bit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to establish firmer footing with a new acquaintance today before requesting favors. As the friendship matures, you might not even need to ask.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If there's something you've been unsuccessfully trying to change, try enlisting the aid of your friends today. Their push could do the trick.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One of the best things you can do for yourself today is to help somebody else. Your generosity will be rewarded in ways you cannot even begin to suspect.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial situation looks good today. If you're enterprising, there is a strong possibility of adding to your resources in two ways.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Important personal matters should not be left to a surrogate today. If you want it done right, do it yourself.
