Dallabrida Crash Survey Done

17-92 Perils Keyed

Several dangerous intersections along U.S. 17-92 in Sanford, including one at which four members of the Albert Dallabrida Sr. family were killed, may be corrected later this year or in 1979.

That was the word today from the state Department of Transportation's Delland office which conducted a survey of dangerous intersections along 17-92 from 25th Street to Airport Boulevard. The survey was prompted by Evening Herald inquiries shortly after the Oct. 28, 1977 van-truck collision in front of the Burger King restaurant in which four Sanford persons were killed.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Special Zaire Airlift Security Threat Prompts

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) - Because of the precarious security situation and worsening living conditions a special airlift has been arranged by Belgium and France to, as they put it, reassure Europeans they had freedom of movement.

The Belgian Embassy said the airlift of hundreds of white women and children, who left Zaire's Shaba province today, was not an evacuation but was designed to help families who normally would be leaving for summer vacations. But, few are expected to return.

Offices Bombed In Rome

ROME (UPI) - Terrorist bombs today seriously damaged a Communist Party office in Rome and a Fiat auto showroom in Venice in the rising political violence that has earned Italy the world record for terrorist attacks.

U.S. Arms For Japan

Despite Jimmy Carter's inveighing against this country's role as arms merchant abroad during his presidential campaign, the sales of weaponry to U.S. allies is increasing and has become a major factor in our exports and trade

The administration is beating a hot path to the Senate these days with proposals for fighter plane

On May 16, the very next day after the Senate upheld the President's proposal to sell warplanes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia as well as to Israel, the Fentagon formally notified Congress of plans to sell Japan 100 F-15 fighters and 45 P-3C submarinehunting planes for $2.2 billion - the biggest arms sale to Japan in history.

Congress has 30 days in which to disapprove the sales by majority vote in both chambers. Disapproval is hardly likely.

Indeed, in contrast to the boiling controversy that attended the Mideast plane package sale, no hint of opposition has been reported on the question of delivering far larger numbers of planes to

This is not surprising. The Pentagon's justification statement argues the case effectively: the new planes would give Japan "improved defensive capability... and would contribute toward continued stability in the Western Pacific." Moreover, the sale would represent a hefty reduction in the chronic U.S. trade imbalance with Japan that is running about $8 billion annually. California Congressman Bob Wilson has pointed out the Japanese would rather buy their defense needs from us than build them at home or cut sales of their products to this country. Both of these considerations would appear to coincide with American interests

U.S. withdrawal from Southeast Asia, and most especially, the phased withdrawal of 30,000 ground troops from South Kores, have alarmed the apanese about their almost total reliance on U.S. litary protection.

This, in turn, has led to some renewed soulsearching about security, a prolonged national debate, and the decision to modernize defense forces that are restricted to about 100,000 air, naval and ground troops under the 1951 security treaty with the United States.

Accordingly, Japan decided earlier this year to increase its defense budget by 12.4 percent to $87.6

A considerable body of opinion in Japan, the United States and among the NATO nations believes the time has come for Japan to share more of the burden of its own self-defense. Aside from the economic considerations and Japan's concern to modernize its weaponry, very respectable reservations can be held against going too far, too fast.

Memories of Japanese aggression in the Western Pacific areas are still too fresh to permit the United States or Japan to remove restraints on acquiring military power - especially the nuclear

The reassuring fact is that the Japanese also remember the catastrophic consequences of their wars and have shown real reluctance to rearm. We could all wish that we inhabited a planet where the sale of arms to strengthen allies would not be necessary. But we know that such is not the case. A nation with a gross national product second only to the United States among the industrial democracies is too tempting a prize to be without modern defenses in a lawless world.

Has HEW Met Its Master?

WASHINGTON - If HEW Secretary Joseph . Califano Jr. ever wants a motto to hang on his office wall, he might frame the classic quote from Walt Kelly's Pogo character: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

For that, in a nutshell, summarizes the real problem of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as it celebrates its 25th anniversary as a Cabinet agency Managing HEW, the federal government's biggest bureaucracy, is like wrestling with an 800-pound gorilla. You can't quit when you need a rest; you've got to keep moving as long as the In the long run, nothing that Califano does as secretary - whether it is a small undertaking like his anti-smoking crusade or a multi-billion dollar initiative like national health insurance will be as important as his effort to gain management control of HEW. Since 1963, when it became the first new Cabinet department in 50 years, HEW has ballooned from a modest establishment with 5,400 employes and a $7 billion budget to a King Kong bureaucracy of 145,000 workers spending nearly $180,000 billion a year, some 36 percent of the entire federal budget. And over those 25 years, while Congress was busily creating hundreds of social programs for HEW to administer, 12 different secretaries have headed the agency. Most didn't stay long enough to find the executive washroom, let alone figure out from to run the place. Califono just may prove the exception. Like other Cabinet officers, he has promised President Carter he will serve a full four years. And he hit the ground running, shoving through an internal reorganization of HEW in his first six weeks on the job. "There was no way to do it except fast, before opposition could mobilize. he said in a recent interview

Ty Cobb Then, Rod Carew Now

NEW YORK (UPI) - Ty Cobb symbolizes pretty much the same thing to Rod Carew as he does to most of today's other ballplayers. He represents a magical golden name from the past

Carew was born 17 years after Cobb retired, so he never had the opportunity of seeing him play and was still in high school when the Georgia Peach died, so he never had a chance to meet him. But the Twins' sweet-swinging first baseman has heard a great deal about Cobb and can tell you more about him than the majority of other players, mainly because the more batting titles he wins, the more his name keeps coming up in relation to Cobb's. Nobody who has seen both Cobb and Carew play is inclined to make-any kind of comparison between them. In fact, the only actual common yardstick by which they possibly could be measured would be by the number of batting titles each won and their lifetime averages.

Cobb is clearly out front in both respects. He won 12 betting pionships while Carew is working on his severth, and Cobb wound up with a .367 lifetime mark, still the major league record, while Carew shows a .335 lifetime average. Yet from the standpoint of pure consistency, there is no player around today to compare with Rod Carew when it comes right down to the fine art of hitting a baseball. He got off to his best start ever in 1970 and was hitting .375 when Mike Hogan ran into him at second base in June amas knee so bedly that he couldn't make it back until Septer

Carew finished with .365 that year, much higher than the .355 pasted by Alex Johnson who won the title that season, but since he was in only 51 games, Carew wasn't eligible for official cer-Again two years ago, Carew had an excellent shot at the AL ampionship with his average of .331, only to lose it by two points to Kanans City's George Brett. The question now doesn't seem to be so much whether Carew will win his seventh batting title this year but whether he will manage to become the first player in 37 years to hit .600. Along with that, there's also the question whether Twins' owner Calvin on to some other club.

While in New York the other day to add an outdoor wing of his restaurant, Rusty's, Detroit's Rusty Staub spoke of Caren's chances of hitting .400.
"With the relief pitchers around today, it's almost incredible to even think of anyone hitting .400, but if it is humanly possible, then Carew is the man who will do it," said Staub. "If the Twins played on Astroturf, he'd have a better chance. Even so, I wouldn't count

"Rod Carew takes advantage of more things than any player I've ever seen. He utilizes every ounce of his talent. He's the best bunter I've ever seen, and I don't care what you do or how you pitch him, he's going to get his base hits. When he comes up to hit, Aven Ports re just send out prayers."

Seminole County has two options for funding construction of a new jail at its Five-Points complex. It can come up with $1,068,130 or try to trim that amount from the proposed project. Lowest bid for the work was $4,398,669 or $1,068,130 more than federalstate money available.

The county commission voted unanimously to see what can be cut from the proposal. Next week commissioners will vote on whether to go with the scaled-down proposal or come up with the rest of the money. Architect John M. Dragash, Sanford, will meet with county officials Thursday to see what items might be cut from the original jail

Commissioner John Alexander proposed Tuesday that the commission negotiate with Standard Construction Co. of Maitland, the low bidder, to determine how costs might be cut by eliminating some of the project's Standard's bid of $4,396,669 was $1.4 million more than had been projected. The two other aids received were from: Stratton Construction, Tampa, $4,787,781 and Norfolk Construction, Orlando, $4,876,000.

Stratton's bid left out a provision for hiring a minority contractor, making it ineligible for the project according to federal regulations. Norfolk declined to negotiate their price, according to County Planner John Percy. He serves as project coordinator for the $3 million Economic Development Administration (EDA) grant given the county to help build the jail.

The commission received the EDA funds from a direct federal grant and from EDA funds distributed by the office of Gov. Reubin Lakew in June 1977. Askew later added $500,000 to that total.

Alexander had suggested one pod, or wing of the jail, which would house 64 inmates. might be cut from the original proposal. He estimated that might drop the expense of the negotiations should be reviewed next week by the commission. "I want to make it clear that we don't have to accept what is negotiated," said Alexan-Sheriff John Polk claimed the full complex should be constructed as a savings to taxpayers and to meet federal and state

"Due to the state and federal regulations concerning classification of inmates before they are put into the population of the jail. I feel that it is necessary that the entire project as proposed be completed," wrote Polk. Without the completion, I am going on record as stating that we will be unable to

If the county does not meet the state and federal guidelines, noted Polk, it may be forced to do so by a court order. Polk also argued that completion of the jail now would save money in the long run. "It will be a tremendous savings to the Seminole County taxpayers if completed at this time rather than delaying the project or portions of the project for an additional two or ree years," Polk wrote.

Polk noted that a plan to enlarge the present jail was axed by the commission in 1976, because a three-year delay had escalated the construction costs. That delay was caused by a court battle to move the ounty seat to the southern portion of the

The present jail was designed to house 97 prisoners, according to Polk. However, the y prisoner population ranges from 118 to 130, according to Polk. He estimated average daily population for the new jail when it is scheduled for completion will be "in excess of

$6.6 Billion Budget On Way To Floor

A conference committee today approved a $6.16 billion budget mains state springing of $750 million and forwarded it to the House and Senate floors for
