Company hostesses (above) and an unidentified passenger (right) wave goodbye as the last Auto-Train rolled out of Sanford Thursday, headed for suburban Washington. The final run north about 500 people and 250 automobiles. Auto-Train, which has been shuttling people and their cars between Sanford and Lorton, Va. for nearly 10 years, was forced to close due to financial difficulties.

From Syrians, Palestinians

Israeli Planes Draw Anti-Aircraft Fire

United Press International
Israeli reconnaissance planes soared over Beirut and south Lebanon today, drawing heavy anti-aircraft fire but steering clear of the strategic Bekaa Valley where Syria has installed radar and SAM missile batteries.
Beirut's international airport, closed by shelling since April 21, was battered by a fresh volley of light artillery shells despite an uneasy truce between Syrian and Christian Phalangist forces. There was little damage, airline officials said.
Secretary of State Alexander Haig was called today to a Senate appropriations subcommittee meeting to discuss the situation, which the State Department called "tense, dangerous and volatile."
In Moscow, the official Tass news agency accused Haig of complicity in Israeli attacks in Lebanon and said "Israel, backed by the Americans, intends to partition sovereign Lebanon" to create a puppet state.
Security sources said Israeli reconnaissance planes streaked over Lebanon at high altitudes and circled over Beirut and south Lebanon.
While the planes avoided the Bekaa valley, where Syria has installed radio and Surface to Air Missiles, the sources said the Israeli jets drew heavy anti-aircraft fire from Syrian and Palestinian gunners.

In Beirut, Lebanese government officials prepared for a second round of peace talks Sunday between Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam and leaders of the various Lebanese political and militia factions.
Similar negotiations earlier this week produced a near-total halt to clashes between the Syrians and their Lebanese rightist Phalangist militia adversaries.
The State Department said Thursday it was deciding if Israeli use of U.S.-built combat aircraft against Syrian forces Tuesday violated U.S. laws forbidding use of American equipment for anything but defense.
Syrian introduction of the SAM missiles in Lebanon followed the downing of two Syrian helicopters by Israeli warplanes over the vital corridor to Syria Tuesday. Both sides accused the other of violating informal understandings.
Israel says when Syria entered Lebanon in 1976 to protect Christian forces and end the civil war, it agreed not to introduce missiles. Syria says the open Israeli air attacks on Syrian forces violated the understanding.

But, while other countries worried about a confrontation between Israel and Syria, fighting inside Lebanon between the warring factions was reported subsiding Thursday for the second straight day.
Lebanese security sources said, other than sporadic sniper fire in Beirut, "things are getting calmer every hour as the Syrian-Lebanese peace talks are beginning to produce their expected results."
Lebanese government sources said they were optimistic Syria and Lebanon's feuding groups would produce a lasting truce allowing Beirut's international airport to reopen for the first time since April 21.
However, in Washington U.S. officials raised the prospects of further clashes between Syria and Israel, and in Lebanon there were warnings of an Israeli attack.
Palestinian and Lebanese leftist sources said an Israeli military buildup was under way inside the south Lebanon enclave held by Israeli-backed Lebanese Army renegade Maj. Saad Haddad and warned of an Israeli attack in the region.

Dying Sands Argues Politics

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Although near death, Bobby Sands had "quite a political argument" today with an envoy of Britain's Labor Party who visited the IR* convict in an unsuccessful bid to convince him to end his 62-day prison hunger strike.
Don Concannon, once Britain's top official in Northern Ireland and now the opposition Labor Party spokesman on the province, said Sands seems "just as determined as ever" to die to win political prisoner status for Irish Republican Army inmates. The British government has repeatedly refused to grant any concessions, maintaining IRA prisoners are common criminals.

"He (Sands) had quite a political argument with me, I can tell you that," Concannon said after visiting Sands, 27, who was elected to Britain's Parliament April 9.
Sands' mother Rosaleen said her son "is prepared for the end."
"I can see nothing to end the hunger strike," she said after visiting Sands Thursday at the Maze, where he is serving 14 years for arms possession.
"I love my son, but I would not ask him to come off the strike. I would not go against his last wishes."

Roman Catholic ghetto areas in Belfast have stockpiled food and medicines and drawn detailed plans for the mass evacuation of women and children from potential fighting zones.
An independent politician criticized the "savagery" of Sands' supporters and branded them "vultures" waiting to exploit his death.
Northern Ireland Secretary Humphrey Atkins told Mrs. Thatcher and her Cabinet that there is a "calculated and cold-blooded campaign to create a siege mentality" in Northern Ireland.

Watch Out, It's Ticking

CHICAGO (UPI) — The time and date weren't right but the Timex watch that came out ticking after five months in the stomach of a New Yorker will most certainly make John Cameron Swayze proud.
Dr. Elliot B. Duboys, writing in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, reported the case of a 49-year-old New York man who, confronted by a mugger, slipped his newly purchased Timex in his mouth and swallowed it.
Some time later, Duboys reported, the man was admitted to a hospital for treatment of another health problem. X-rays revealed the watch — complete with its synthetic band and buckle.

It was removed surgically.
"Even though the date and time were incorrect, the watch was intact and ticking and continued to tick for at least two hours, at which time it was sent to the pathology laboratory," said Duboys of Southern University of New York at Stony Brook.
As for the date and time being incorrect, the doctor noted:
"I am not sure that at the time of the initial incident the watch had been set correctly."
Swayze, the redoubtable former journalist who plugged Timex watches in an advertising campaign, wouldn't quibble with that.

County Not Ready To Participate

Altamonte Springs Scoops Up Inmate Labor

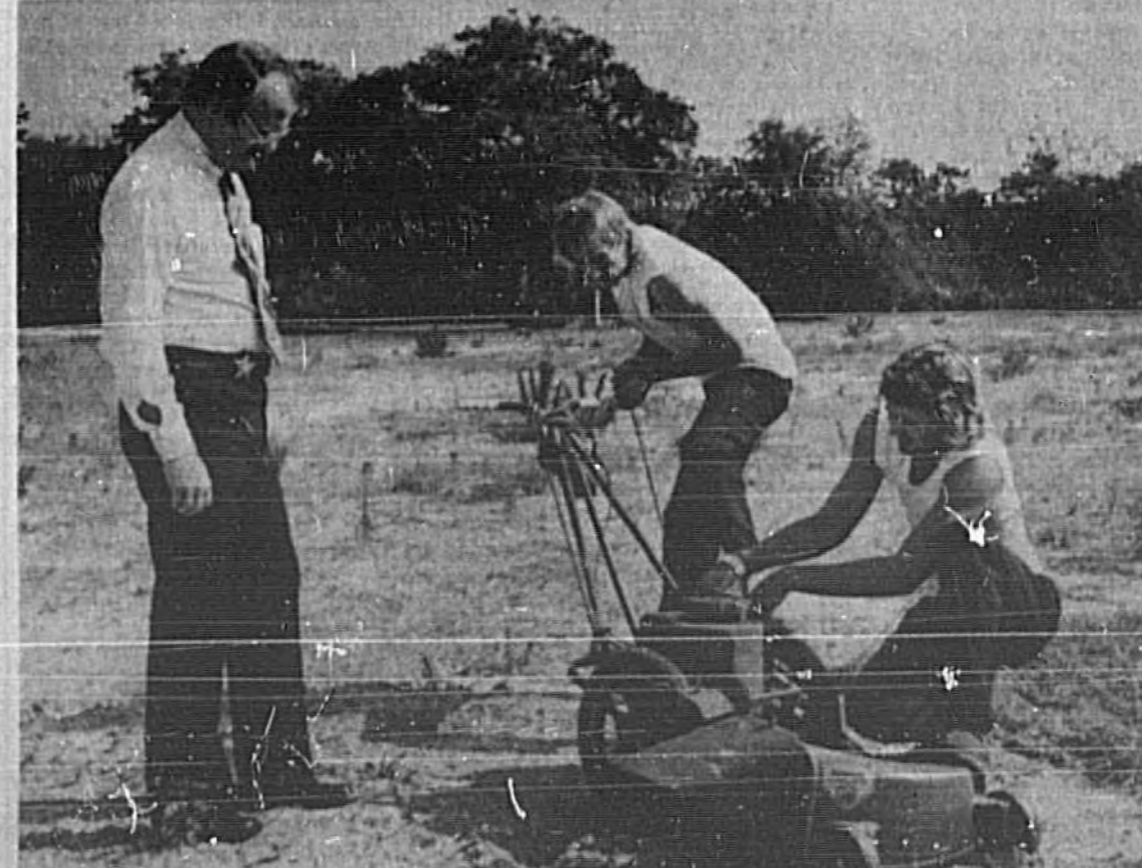

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The county is not ready to work county jail inmates on a job release program this weekend. But Altamonte Springs City Manager Jeff Eitberger is.
Sixteen weekend prisoners from the Seminole County Correctional Facility are to report for work at 8 a.m., Saturday, to begin spring cleanup at the city's west side public works complex.
"After we determine what skills these people have, we will be working them at other city facilities that need some spring cleanup," Eitberger said this morning.
He said he was notified earlier by Steve Saunders, Seminole corrections administrator, the weekenders would be available this weekend.
Altamonte Public Works Director Don Newham immediately arranged for city supervisors to be available.
We just reactivated previous procedures," he said, noting the city in the past has used long-term prisoners for city projects. Eitberger said as the program progresses, the inmates will be cleaning drainage ditches and drainage ways, work done by the city now whenever possible rather than routinely.

"We'll get some work done that we can't get to with regular city forces," he said.
Saunders said he met with County Administrator Roger Neiswender and county department heads this week and "they have quite a few bugs to work out" before the county participates in the program.
In preparation for the job work-release program, Chief Circuit Judge Kenneth Leffler signed an order allowing Saunders to consider any weekend prisoner for the program. At the same time, Leffler and County Judges Harold Johnson, Wallace Hall, and Alan Dickey authorized participation by persons they had sentenced to weekends.
All 16 weekenders have volunteered to participate.
Weekend sentencing has become increasingly popular with judges who see the sentences as a means to provide punishment while allowing family men to continue working to support their families during the week.

Those sentenced to serve weekends in jail are generally persons found guilty of traffic offenses and other "light weight offenses, some almost of a civil type or non-violent felony offenses," Saunders said.
The weekenders who will be working in Altamonte this weekend will report to the county jail this evening for job assignments and report for work Saturday and Sunday morning at the job site in Altamonte Springs. They will be permitted to go home Saturday and Sunday nights after their work assignments are completed.
"They will not be asked to do anything that regular city employees are not asked to do," Saunders said. He said city authorities have ordered work gloves for them.

"Altamonte is ready to roll with the program," Saunders said. "The program will be gearing up more slowly with the county."
Meanwhile, eight long-term trustees worked this week during the day on work-release efforts for law enforcement, doing jobs ranging from removing bars at the old county jail and cleaning up vehicles to providing maintenance around the correctional buildings and grounds, he said.
Saunders said Altamonte Springs is the only city in the county so far that has asked for inmate labor.
"We would be pleased to hear from any of the cities," he aid, but he added he is not soliciting any of the cities to participate.

Ceremony Set To Honor Gen. Hutchison

More than 400 military personnel will participate in special ceremonies on May 16 to honor Sanford's war hero and highest ranking army officer, U.S. Army Lt. Gen. (retired) J.C. Hutchison.
Hutchison, a native of Sanford, accepted the Japanese surrender of the Philippines during World War II. After his retirement from the military, Gen. Hutchison served on the Seminole County Commission and was elected that body's chairman.
"General Hutchison Day" ceremonies will be part of Sanford's observance of Armed Forces Week.

Community leaders and representatives of civic organizations at a meeting Wednesday night at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce designated a steering committee to be in charge of the ceremonies and festivities honoring the general. At 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday others wishing to join the committee may do so at its meeting.
Dr. Bill Runge, a colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve is chairman of the event. Jack Horner, executive manager of the chamber, is in charge of tickets and invitations; Bob Kelly, Sanford public works director and Sanford City Commissioner Ned Yancey, with assistance from Dr. Walter Scudder of the University of Florida Research and Experiment Center and Rick Dougherty, commander of Campbell Lossing American Legion, are in charge of food; former City Commissioner Julian Stenstrom, public relations; Jim Jernigan, Sanford parks and recreation director, the park and coordination of police.
Horner said the parade will begin at 11 a.m. at San Juan Avenue and march past a reviewing stand at Veterans Memorial Park where General and Mrs. Hutchison and other dignitaries will be seated. Units participating will include: the Orlando Naval Training Center flag team and color guard; the Navy's Drill Team; a six unit/awitler group; a U.S. Air Force ROTC unit and the Lyman High School Marching Band, under the direction of Don Schmaus.
At noon a pork loin barbecue with trimmings will be served in Ft. Mellon Park, he said. Tickets to the barbecue will be $3 and may be obtained at the chamber office.

Breezes Can Take You Places

By SYBIL MITCHELL GANDY
Herald Staff Writer

Gliding on scenic crystal lakes in sleek sporty sailboats has been a favorite past-time for thousands of Floridians. Especially during the early summer months when drifting breezes swirl across water, filling the sails of dingies, gliders and 60-footers alike.

It looks easy! But learning to operate a safe boat is an art that takes time to perfect. Various principles and techniques in steering and working the sails must be mastered.

And you say you want to be a sailor, huh? Well, the first thing to learn is how to operate a boat safely, says Nick Tucker. And he should know, after 45 years experience.

Boat safety means learning to control the kind of boat you have . . . or the kind of boat you're planning to get.

Tucker who is part owner of "Strictly Sail" at the Monroe Harbor Marina, insists that personal safety and boat safety are number 1 priorities in sailing.

Sailing isn't like motor boating. Anybody can drive a boat from one bank to another. But sailing is a craft. You manipulate the sails and use the breeze to move across the water," Tucker said.

But safety goes along with that element of challenge. There's a feeling of even greater satisfaction when you know that you're prepared for an emergency," he adds.

Sailing is perhaps one of the most complicated recreational sports we know, he said. For instance, one has to "trim" the sail in order to move the vessel. "Trim" refers to adjustment of the sails — letting them out or pulling them in — according to the direction and velocity of the wind. And that takes lots of practice!

According to Phyllis Walker of the American Red Cross, in Orlando, 3 "points" of sailing, are used on the wind. You can't sail exactly in the wind's direction, you see.

"Beating" on the wind means you're sailing as close to the direction of the wind as possible, Walker said.

And when you're "reaching," you're sailing across the wind, meaning the wind is hitting the side of the boat. "Running off the wind" means that you're sailing ahead of the wind . . .

RAISING THE MAINSAIL

Ed Tucker, employee of "Strictly Sail" at the Monroe Harbor Marina, raises the mainsail on a Victoria Eighteen, a sloop-design sailboat.

the wind is behind you."

Walker explained a number of other sailing terms. The boat's keel is a fixed weight in the bottom of the boat designed to keep the vessel upright when the wind threatens to overturn it.

"Mainsail" (pronounced main-sul) is the boat's biggest sail.

If you're coming about" you're changing the tack (or course) of the boat.

The bow (or front of the boat) is moving directly into the wind, turning the vessel around.

"Jibe" means to bring the boat around to the other tack, "stern" into the wind.

Want to know more? A number of good books at the library or bookstore provide an excellent background for new boaters, Tucker said. Or, you can sign up for one of the Red Cross safe boating courses or private instruction.

There are loads and loads of things to learn about sailsmanship"

Jenner's On To Football; Bugs Changes His Attitude

Chris Sarandon ("A Tale of Two Cities," "The Day Christ Died," and "You Can't Go Home Again") had no ambition to be an actor until, at 18, he took a summer theater job in his home town as a means of gaining popularity.

"I discovered there was something really exciting about going out there disguised beneath a wig, false moustache and costume, thinking, 'I can do whatever I dare to draw applause and laughter and they don't know who I am.'

"Maybe that is the basic appeal to everyone who becomes an actor — you can go out there and be somebody else for a change.

It's a break in your normal routine, like taking a vacation, but in this case, the ultimate vacation, a vacation from yourself."

SPECIAL BUGS

Bugs Bunny is 40-odd years old and, according to an old friend, he hasn't changed that much.

Hal Geer, vice-president of Warner Bros. Cartoons, Inc. first met Bugs when Geer became a color technician at Warner Bros in 1946.

"Bugs was a pretty vicious little guy when I first met him. After getting to know him better, the realization that he was funnier when he wasn't quite so vicious caused some modifications in his personality." Bugs has a new animated special to be aired on CBS Monday. "Bugs Bunny: All-American Hero."

But, Geer claims, "He has

remained true to character. He is a commentator on human foibles and people love him for what he is."

TV DEGREE

More than 1,000 students are taking college courses through their television sets.

The National University

Consortium (P.O. Box 430, Owing Mills, MD 21117) is making a college degree available for students unable to enroll in conventional degree programs. Eleven educational institutions and TV stations are participating in the project's pilot year, from September 1980 through June 1981.

The basic course material is supplemented by regularly scheduled TV broadcasts to motivate and "pace" the student. A tutor is available for television assistance and counseling, as well as at weekly learning sessions. Registration and examinations mark the beginning and end of the semester, as in a regular campus situation.

QUARTERBACK JENNER

in his dramatic debut on NBC. Harry Belafonte also makes his dramatic debut, in "Grambling's White Tiger," a two-hour movie based on the true experiences of Jim Gregory, who became the first white player on the famous Grambling College football team. LeVar Burton also stars in the film, which is currently being filmed on location in Grambling, La. Jenner stars as Gregory, who, in 1938, followed his outstanding high school quarterback career by enrolling in the small Louisiana college. The college's previously all-black football team had gained a national reputation for sending talented young men to the professional football leagues.

Gregory finds the Coach eager to use his talent, but he encounters stiff competition on the field, opposition from teammates and a stifled social life.

Bugs Bunny presents his own version of American history in a new animated special, Monday on CBS.

'BROKEN PROMISE'

A county juvenile officer (Chris Sarandon) intercedes with the law in behalf of a young girl (Melissa Michelsen) abandoned by her parents and battling to reunite her brothers and sisters, in "Broken Promise," a dramatic special to be broadcast Tuesday on CBS.

Casey Stengel:

He Was Baseball's Funny Man

A good baseball player and a great manager, Casey Stengel never let his career interfere with his sense of humor. He was a master strategist, an innovator and a comedian with perfect timing.

His wit and baseball wisdom come to television in "Casey Stengel," a 60-minute, one-man drama starring Charles Durning, airing Wednesday, on PBS. The program is the third in a series of Hallmark Hall of Fame specials this season, presented by WGBH Boston and hosted by George C. Scott.

Casey Stengel was born in Kansas City in 1890. When Casey was old enough to lift a stick, he began to concentrate on baseball — an interest that resulted in a 53-year career, during which he played for, or managed, a total of 17 professional teams.

From the beginning, he earned a reputation as a clown. Once, while playing center field for a minor league team, he discovered a manhole in the outfield and disappeared into it for part of an inning, surfacing only when a fly ball was hit his way. Positioning himself under it, he caught the ball, with the manhole cover still on his head.

Later, as a Brooklyn Dodger in 1916, Stengel cajoled his manager Wilber "Robbie" Robinson into catching a baseball dropped from an airplane 400 feet overhead. At the last minute, Casey replaced the ball with a pink grapefruit, which made such a mess when it landed on Robbie's chest (he missed) that he was convinced he'd been fatally wounded.

In later years, Stengel became more the stand-up comic than the practical joker. Endowed with a memory that could recall an anecdote in rich detail, Casey would regale press conferences and banquet audiences with stories in his own brand of English: Stengelese. One of his most famous remarks — "most people my age are dead" — came in response to criticism that he was too old to manage a baseball team. Frequent comment on his age, in fact, caused him to explain, "I was born old."

Stengel was his own best press agent, and dealt effectively with aggressive sports reporters by weaving snarled replies to simple questions, or by purposely misunderstanding them. As manager in 1963 of "The Amazin' Mets," history's worst baseball team, Casey was asked what place the club would finish that year. His reply: "In Chicago."

Stengel knew where humor could well serve a situation, but he was never perceived as a buffoon. In 1949, despite his reputation as a clown and his image as someone too old to galvanize an inexperienced team, he took the reins of a Yankee club that was not considered a pennant contender — and then adroitly led it to a world championship. Eleven years later, after compiling a record of 10 pennants and seven World Series titles, Casey was "discharged" as manager. "Too old," they said.

CHARLES DURNING

Beach Boy Carl Wilson Records Own Album

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — You could call it a bomb in a record jacket. At least, Carl Wilson thinks of it that way.

It's actually an album, on the Caribou label, called "Carl Wilson." Anybody who knows music knows the name: Carl Wilson is one of the Beach Boys. What, then, is he doing with a solo album?

"Two things," says Wilson. "I wanted to exercise my own muscles. But, more important, I wanted to place a bomb under the Beach Boys. I think we've gotten too complacent in the 20 years — almost 20 years — we've been recording."

"It's gotten so the act really hasn't changed — our in-person act — at all in the last three or four years. It's different, and maybe this album will be the spark that leads to that."

He says the other Beach Boys have been very encouraging to him, very helpful and supportive. Carl is the youngest of the bunch; he's 34, and was barely 14 when he started with the group.

Yet, he says, he is considered to be the steady one. He is the one who holds the others — all flamboyant and exuberant personalities — together. And that is why when he does something wild and unexpected, such as recording a solo album, the others look on it as even more wild and unexpected than it is. They don't think of Carl as someone who would do anything out of the ordinary.

But he is doing something out of the ordinary, precisely because they aren't.

He's Ideal For Alexander Role

The minute Nicholas Clay walks into the room, it is obvious why he's the ideal actor to play the legendary Greek conqueror, Alexander the Great, who, according to his mother, had been sired by the God Zeus.

Better than 6 feet tall, the handsome Clay looks every inch the part — with piercing blue eyes, thick curly brown hair, and the straight Greek nose and carved lips of the young conqueror. He bears a remarkable resemblance to the likenesses of Alexander found on 4th-century-B.C. marble busts, coins and friezes.

But it wasn't just his good looks that put Clay in the starring role of "The Search for Alexander the Great," the four-part, Mobil-funded mini-series starting on PBS May 6. (Local times may vary; check listings.) Nor was it the additional advantage he had of being almost exactly the same age that the 32-year-old Alexander was, when he died after conquering the known world five years previously.

It was probably his ex-

perience. One of Britain's fastest rising young stars, Clay has done considerable conquering of his own. At 22, he had already acted "King Lear" at the prestigious National Theater, played a juvenile lead in London's West End and made his first film, opposite Patricia Neal.

Then he spent two more years at the National Theater, where, among other roles, he played the horse in Peter Shaffer's "Equus," appeared on Broadway with Diana Rigg and Alec McCowen in Moliere's "The Misanthrope," and made films such as "Zulu Dawn" with Peter O'Toole and Burt Lancaster, "Tristan and Isolde" with Richard Burton, and the recently released "Excalibur" with Nicol Williamson.

Portraying the extraordinary Alexander was at once a professional challenge and a rewarding personal experience for Clay. He still speaks with awe of filming the series at Delphi, in Greece, "the ancient center of the universe, the navel of the world, a very, very powerful, inspirational spot."

"I think more people have been to Delphi — to the oracle — in the last 10 years than ever before. They all go for their own reasons, but they come away with pretty much the same thing — an awareness of the beauty and depth of their own self. That's what happened to me."

Something else happened to Clay during the six weeks it took to make the series: He became convinced that he "absolutely" knew Alexander, "an incredibly massive figure, a genius, who had real charisma, and true greatness and power that comes from the center of his being."

Which doesn't mean that Clay has become a blind idol worshiper of the epic historical figure he's portraying. "I think there was some aspect of his character that I suspect he never dealt with," muses Clay, "some sort of excessiveness. You can burn yourself up so easily, burn out the spark that gives you life, and I think that's what he did."

Moreover, Clay faults the Greek hero with a lack of foresight as he went about his mission of conquering the world and achieving an ideal empire in which race, creed and color did not impede unity.

"Alexander was the first internationalist," Clay points out. "But when he died, he hadn't made provisions for the continuation of his plans; so his plans died, which was not his intention."

Was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Really Running The Country?

By CAROL FELSETHAL
American Library Assn.

Remember the criticism of Rosalynn Carter for acting too much like president instead of first lady? Imagine the furor back in the late teens, when women didn't even have the right to vote, and supposedly, Edith Wilson ran the world while her husband Woodrow was incapacitated by a stroke.

In "Edith and Woodrow: A Presidential Romance" (Putnam, 299 pages, $12.95), Tom Shachtman makes a convincing case that Edith Wilson was a key power in Washington during her husband's second term. The president was head over heels in love with his new bride whom he married in 1915. (His first wife Ellen had died the year before.)

The romance between Woodrow and Edith Bolling Galt, the 41-year-old widow of the head of Washington's oldest and most prestigious jewelry store, started shockingly soon after Ellen's death — as the United States was on the brink of entering World War I.

"I think I shall have to send a confidential personal message to the Kaiser," Woodrow wrote to Edith, "telling him why I should like the German reply held back until about the tenth of July. If he is really inhuman and has any heart in him he will understand and give me time to be with my love."

Soon, along with his 20-page love letters, the president began sending Edith the most important papers of state. Edith said she "had to confess" that her day was not as bright when the "big envelope" did not accompany the little ones of his "mush notes."

"Much as I enjoy your delicious love letters . . . I believe I enjoy even more the ones in which you tell me (as you did this morning) of what you are working on . . . for then I feel I am sharing your work and being taken into partnership as it were."

By 1919, one of the most tumultuous years in U. S. history, the nation was freezing through a coal strike. There were shootings and lynchings of Bolsheviks who were presumed to be fomenting the labor unrest. Wilson's cherished League of Nations, which was going to make the war just past "the war to end all wars," was on the verge of defeat in the Senate. Meanwhile the president, who had suffered a stroke, was in bed, emaciated, half-paralyzed, half-blind, his speech slurred, his once sharp mind dulled.

Shachtman contends that Edith was not ambitious for herself. She was immensely in love with her husband. When he was well, she dedicated herself to sharing his life — to being with him always, in the office as well as the bedroom. (The Wilsons broke tradition by sleeping in the same bedroom and even the same bed — Abe Lincoln's huge canopied bed.) Shachtman argues that when Wilson was sick, Edith honestly believed she was saving his life by sharing — even dominating — the office of the presidency.

Soap Actors Set For Daytime Emmys

NEW YORK — As of this writing, the contenders had not yet been announced, but the soap opera would, along with the rest of daytime television, has been gearing up for the 1981 Emmy Awards presentation. The festive occasion will air on ABC Thursday, May 21. Hosting the event from the Empire State Ballroom at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in New York City will be Dick Clark, who took home an Emmy in 1979 as host of "The $20,000 Pyramid." In addition, there will be a score of daytime soap actors on hand to help hand out the coveted statuettes. Produced by Bill Carruthers (he's done four previous telecasts of the Emmys), the awards will cover the broadcast period from March 6, 1980 to March 5, 1981.

 I read in your column a few months back that Genie Francis (Laura Baldwin on "General Hospital") was to have appeared in the movie "Oklahoma City Dolls." I was glued to the set the night the movie was shown, but I didn't see Genie. What happened?
 Genie was set to appear in the TV movie but, due to the actors' strike, the filming was delayed. When shooting commenced, Genie had to bow out of the flick because of heavy commitments on "General Hospital" at that time.

Lilting Story Of Chopin's Life To Air On PBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The ghost that haunts Byron Janis may or may not make a case for reincarnation, but Janis is willing to concede his seemingly cosmic connection with Frederic Chopin "goes beyond coincidence."

It therefore is no coincidence the American-born concert pianist of Polish-Russian extraction has made a lilting documentary of Chopin's life, and his celebrated love affair with French novelist George Sand.

It is titled, "Frederic Chopin: A Voyage with Byron Janis." It airs on PBS May 4, capping an enormously successful run on European television, and while its central theme will appeal most to professional musicologists, the almost metaphysical mystery behind its making will appeal to anyone capable of wonder.

Janis has been obsessed with the great Polish composer from childhood. That's how he knew at a glance the hand-written manuscripts he found in 1967 in a box marked "old clothes" at the centuries-old Chateau Thoiry in France were Chopin's own.

The manuscripts proved to be unpublished versions of famed Chopin waltzes, given in 1833 to an ancestor of Janis' host, the Count de la Panouse. Because Chopin constantly tinkered with his compositions, they were versions never before played — different and, according to Janis, in some ways better than the ones the world came to know.

Discovery of one such treasure trove should be enough to keep any musician happy, but Janis wasn't through. In 1973, while visiting Yale University, he was taken to visit the school's musical archives.

"The room was full of dusty old folios of sheet music, most of it uncatalogued," he said, "but for some reason, my eye kept going back to a box high on a shelf in a corner. Finally, I said, 'What's that?' They didn't know, so they got it down and I opened it."

The memory still brings Janis a touch of gooseflesh. "I must have turned a very strange color," he said. "There were the same two waltzes in a different version still, dated 1832. I went home. I said, 'You're dreaming....'"

He wasn't, but out of the experience, the documentary — tracing Chopin's life of illness, hallucination and hauntingly beautiful music — was born.

Since then, Janis has moved ever more deeply into Chopin's life. He owns the composer's frock coat — "worn at the knees just where the knees would fit under the piano" — and his prized possession is a tiny locket containing strands of hair both from Chopin and his love.

He also owns the Chopin death mask, cast at the composer's coffin shortly after he died of tuberculosis. Hold its profile against the light and another wave of gooseflesh prevails. The profile matches Janis as if it were his own.

Reincarnation?

"I don't believe somebody comes back as someone else," he said, "but perhaps there are certain things born into people — a spirit ongoing perhaps that gets fused into another being. It certainly goes beyond coincidence.

"I'm not a scientist. I don't have to see a thing happen 20 times to believe it."

Perhaps Chopin, himself, had the answer.

Another of Janis' treasures is an unpublished letter from George Sand to a friend in which she describes her lover somewhat disparagingly in the hard-headed aura of agnosticism that was her trademark.

"He believes in some fantastic immortality," she wrote.

His faith may have been greater than she knew.

KAZARIAN BEATS THE PRICE!

By STACI BIENVENU

"IF YOU'RE UNDER 25; if you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate minimum Auto or Truck Insurance coverage—you need to call me."

Yes, according to Ralph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your Auto Insurance..."

RALPH KAZARIAN

Mr. Kazarian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are tired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart—specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more than fair chance on their auto or truck insurance.

"I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in business."

Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?

"I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I broker business with 30-35 Auto, Truck, Motorcycle, Motor Club, Mobile Home & Motor Home Insurance companies that target their effort to my particular customers. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."

And Mr. Kazarian has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto and truck insurance business in Florida.

To prove his ambition and determination he's opened eleven offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area—in addition to his Orlando office which is located in the Bright BLUE Building at the corner of Mills and Colonial (898 2454).

There are two additional Ralph Kazarian offices located in the Orlando Sanford area: Altamonte Springs (834-2454) and Sanford (323-2454).

So...if you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay—stop by one of Ralph Kazarian's offices.

Do Actors Write Back To Fans?

DEAR DICK: I would like to know if actors really write back to fans. Do they or don't they? MRS. CONNIE ALCINI, Las Vegas, Nev.

I keep saying that actors are people — some good, some bad. And, in this, like everything else, you'll find all sorts of different reactions. Some actors religiously answer every letter. Others throw them all away. Many have fan mail services that answer by computer, automatically. There is no hard and fast answer to that question.

DEAR DICK: I was wondering if you could tell me if there's anything wrong with one of John Schneider's legs. Every time they show him walking, he seems to have a limp. P. LOUDERBACK, Trenton, N.J.

Your question astounded the folks at "The Dukes of Hazzard," who considered Schneider a perfect physical specimen. Since he lost 50 pounds, he has been in line shape. As far as anybody knows, his legs are as great as the rest of him.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me who is correct? I say Cameron Mitchell played the life story of Barney Ross, in "The Monkey on My Back," and my friend says it was John Garfield. Who is correct? JENNIE DI ORIO, P.P., Fla.

You win. It was Mitchell. And now I have a question for you. What does P.P. stand for?

DEAR DICK: My husband and I have a bet. He says Alfred Hitchcock produced the horror film, "Frogs." I say he didn't. Who is right? B. HIMSI, Valleyfield, Que., Can. You are. Hitch directed "Birds" but not "Frogs."

DEAR DICK: My 11-year-old son noticed that the musical notes used to communicate with the aliens in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" are in exactly the same sequence as Roger Moore used to get into the spy lab in "Moonraker." Is he correct? If so, is this a coincidence? CHERYL MILLER, Muncy, Pa.

Your boy has a good ear, but not a great one. The two little themes may be close, but they are not exact. Vic Guder, of United Artists Music, is the source for the following precise explanation. Using a 1-through-8 scale, the "Moonraker" phrase goes 5-2-3. Using the same scale, the "Close Encounters" phrase is 2-3-1-5. John Berry wrote the "Moonraker" music, John Williams the "Close Encounters" music.

DEAR DICK: I saw a great little TV movie, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Since then, I have been trying to find the name of the tune played by the toy music box in the boy's room. I have an antique music box that plays the same tune and I would like to know the name. MARY EVELYN ADAMS, Eald, Okla.

Unfortunately, the people who supplied the music for that show don't know the name, either. The music box was an antique that the show's prop department found. Allen Ferguson, who did the music for the film, and was assured by the network legal department that it was a public domain tune. Ferguson believes it may have been something from Schubert, or maybe an old German Folk song. He actually played it for several musicologists, who could not identify it.

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me the name of the old TV series that starred Earl Holliman, Andrew Prine and Warren Oates? It was a show about rodeos. BRUCE CLAYTON, Joplin, Mo.

Holliman and Prine were in a rodeo show called "The Wild Country," but Oates wasn't in it. However, he was in another rodeo show, "Stoney Burk," with Jack Lord and Bruce Dern.

Ask Dick Kleiner

By DICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: I am a student at Centenary College, in Hackettstown, N.J. One of my teachers told me that Angie Dickinson, Candice Bergen and Debbie Harry (of Blondie) graduated here. I don't believe they did. I remember hearing a few months ago that Debbie Harry didn't finish high school. I have a bet with my teacher that she is wrong. T.S.J., Hackettstown, N.J.

She's certainly wrong on two out of three — Angie went to Immaculate Heart and Glendale College and Candice to the University of Pennsylvania. The publicity people at the record company Blondie records for tell me that Debbie did, indeed, go to Centenary. I think, being it's two out of three, that you win the bet.

DEAR DICK: For some time, my husband and I have been seeing the name David Gerber listed as a TV producer. We both attended Calhoun High School in Merrick, N.Y., in 1962. And we went to school there with a Dave Gerber who was active in school dramatics. Is this the same David Gerber? CAROLE AND RAY SIMPSON, Hamilton Square, N.Y.

No. Our David Gerber is a Brooklynite and, from his age, would have graduated from high school probably in the 1950s.

Serendipity

When Events Take A New And Exciting Turn

By RUTH THOMPSON

Because so many of us pay so much insurance against potential financial ravages, clouds of gloom envelop utterances about "accidents."

But are accidents always negative?

If a chance encounter changed the career course (or life course) of a person, then for that person at least, the luck was "good."

"Serendipity," is the popular term for what happens when you're headed pell-mell toward a goal and something else detours you to an even more compelling interest.

Our favorite example this week concerns Mark Huessy, a diligent and idealistic young television producer who, one day last May, was doing a documentary on Chicanos in the northwest United States.

They were working outside Portland, Ore., one morning when the bright light proved too much for their eyes.

Mark stationed himself to mind the gear and dispatched the day's free-lance cameraman into the nearest town to buy sunglasses. When he failed to return, Mark drove off in search of him, finally locating him at a courthouse, charged with shoplifting the glasses.

The judge was disposing of the case. Says Mark, "I had nothing to do with getting him off, in fact I never found out the full facts." Why? Because Mark was galvanized into action by the judge's parting words to the cameraman: "You shouldn't be here. Don't you know that mountain is blowing off over there?"

That mountain was Mt. St. Helens in its first eruption. Yes, says Mark, "We got good footage. Some of it was picked up by the commercial networks."

But the story didn't end for

JENNIFER ASHLEY

him in those few days after May 18.

With a shoestring budget and a new two-man camera crew, Mark prowled the area, interviewed the people over a period of months and developed "Life With St. Helens." It was so highly praised when shown regionally that it was picked up by the nationwide PBS network for the week of May 12.

That's serendipity on a cosmic scale. A rising young actress, Jennifer Ashley, says the word also applies to a couple of good things that have shaped her life.

The first, she says, is that as a college student she crossed the campus at just the right time to be introduced to a young doctor who was visiting — and whom she subsequently married. That was in Philadelphia. Then he set up practice in San Francisco, and she settled into the role of wife ... until a stranger stopped her on the street one day and asked if she was an actress, and if not, would she like to be.

No, he wasn't a con artist. He was an agent. And Jennifer, almost presto, had a career doing commercials and guesting on television shows and movies.

Fun in the sun is the theme of "Aloha Paradise," a new ABC romantic comedy starring (from left) Stephen Shortridge, Debbie Reynolds, Pat Klous and Bill Daily.
