Prince Charles Causes Stir With Blast At Church

LONDON (UPI) - Prince Charles' remarks last week condemning rigid Catholic church dogma that causes "needless distress" to the faithful have raised a royal stir in Britain. Charles spoke Thursday, the same day as his cousin, Prince Michael of Kent, married Austrian divorcee Baroness Marie-Christine von Reibnitz in a civil ceremony in Vienna after Pope Paul VI forbade their marriage in a church because they said they would bring up their children as Protestants.

Cease Fire In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Bursts of machine-gun fire rattled through Beirut's streets today, keeping Syrian and Christian militia forces close to their sandbagged positions. President Elias Sarkis held urgent talks to consolidate a precarious cease-fire. Residents of Christian East Beirut emerged warily from their basements and stairwells to inspect the damage to their homes and shops by three days of Syrian tank, rocket, artillery, mortar and machine-gun barrages.

WALTER MONDALE

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) - Vice President Walter Mondale flew back to Washington today, ending a long weekend of Middle East diplomacy that persuaded Israel and Egypt to resume direct negotiations London next month.

After two hours of talks with President Anwar Sadat on the lawn of Sadat's summer home in Alexandria, Mondale announced Egypt had agreed to send Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kamel to London to meet with his Israeli counterpart, Moshe Dayan, and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

"I am confident this confe ence can provide an important first step for a broad review and analysis of where we go from here," said Mondale.

The London meeting will be the first between Kamel and Dayan since the Egyptian foreign minister - on Sadat's orders - stalked out of the Jerusalem peace talks in January. Unofficial reports indicate July 15 or 17 as a likely date for the first session. Sadat told a news conference he gave Mondale an Egyptian peace plan, outlining Cairo's views on the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, home of some 1.1 million Palestinian

But Sadat refused to give details. "Let us wait until it is relayed by President Carter to Israel." he said.

said the plan contained concessions and asked for Israel's military withdrawa from the West Bank and Gaza The Egyptian president also made it clear the London conference was Presiden Carter's initiative and agree when a reporter suggested tha "encouragment" to participate had come from Washington rather than Jerusalem. In an Independence Da cable to Carter, Sadat said, " would like to emphasize that th important and delicate nature of the present stage require from you, my dear friend, positive participation in pushing forward the peace Diplomatic sources have said the success of the London conference could hinge on America's ability to narrow the gap between the Egyptian and Israeli positions.

Carter last week anticipated the latest Egyptian proposals would be considered inadequate by Jerusalem and said the United States might step in with "compromise proposals," though Karnel described talk about a compromise as "discouraging."

Freedom: It Is Still In Style

Each year one hears it remarked that Independence Day isn't what it used to be. The slogan Hurray for the great and glorious Fourth" now brings a nostalgic smile.

The all-day booming of firecrackers and rockets, oratory and parades seems to have passed into limbo to be replaced by quiet family gatherings and private pursuits.

Yet this new mood is not due to patriotism event we celebrate.

security, both individually and nationally? Or are we putting the meaning of freedom into the broader context of a decent life for all, achieved through though it may limit a certain kind of rugged in-dividualism?

There's room for argument on both sides. And it's certainly worth thinking about, not only on this July 4th but every day of the year.

Snake Oil Remedy

Economist John Kenneth Galbraith's call for a return to wage and price controls - last invoked by the Nixon administration between 1971 and 1974 — is a prescription for the economic equivalent of snake oil.

Treating as they do the mere symptoms - and not causes of inflation, wage and price controls have proven no lasting panacea for the nation's economic ills. They have, in fact, brought on ill side effects of their own.

The real cause of inflation, most economists agree, is the staggering national debt and continued deficit spending — a $60 billion-a-year practice made possible by the government's license to print money Mr. Galbraith, a Keynesian economist who helped pioneer deficit spending, argues against tightening the money supply on grounds that it would result in higher interest rates and But interest rates and unemployment also could rise from wage and price controls - as the experience of the Nixon administration would indicate. In any event, the fight against inflation need not be an either-

There can be restraints on the private sector without government compulsion. Economist Leonard Silk, writing in The New York Times magazine, suggests tax incentives for "noninflationary behavior" by business and labor.

There can be restraints on government spending without shutting off the money machine. This, of course, may be a more difficult proposition than controlling wages and prices. Unfortunately, Mr. Galbraith offers no wisdom on this score. And unless others do, before long the final solution may rest with those who march behind the banner of Howard Jarvis.

Once again the anniversary of our nation's birth is upon us. This time of year gives us pause to reflect on the great achievements of the past and our intrepid forefathers who paved the way for the lifestyle we all enjoy today.

From the very roots of our educational process we are told various stories about the great people who helped shape this land. I would like to take time to clear up some misnomers about American history and shed light on the lives of some of those great Americans who have gone virtually unsung in the First of all it should be noted that a great many of the stories related to us as fact about the father of our country are false. These stories that are told today as examples of George Washington's greatness, began as political tactic in an effort to keep him from becoming the nation's first president.

The story of Washington throwing a coin across the Potomac River was not intended to illustrate Washington's ability to throw. It was an effort to get people to believe he was fiscally irresponsible and tended to throw money away.

The story about his chopping down a cherry tree was intended as part of a trumped up story leaked to a then famous Philadelphia newspaper columnist. The story was an attempt to make people believe Washington had been arrested at one time on charges of malicious destruction of property. A thorough examination of the Mt. Vernon, New York police records revealed Washington had never been arrested on such charges. The columnist had to

Fashion's Flounces Get Labeled 'Bull'

NEW YORK - The word for flounces is "bull." The people who potsy around digging up old pottery shrards and dental floss can cry out, "No, it isn't!" but we're telling this story, and bull is the word. First of all, you know what a flounce is because it's flaring out all over the place this

It comes on skirts in tiers, one after the other, or sometimes just hangs there by itself on the

Well, we contend this terracing touch came from a bull. The pottery people are going to say there are cave drawings around showing women wearing long, bellshaped fur or skin skirts and that flounces started then.

Or that the people running around the Near East when Sumer was the going civilization started it because they - "they" often being men - liked to climb into sheepskins sewn up in one fleecy flounce after another.

Then they're going to say the idea was copied when people started making clothes out of cloth because you could weave that and didn't necessarily have to hit an animal over the head to They can knit-pick all they

FOURTH FUN IN SEMINOLE

A ROLE REVERSAL?

Paula Hawkins, public service commission chairman and candidate for lieutenant governor turned the tables on traditional campaign techniques . . . instead of kissing. she accepted this buss from Sir Gus, a Bahia Shrine camel during Fourth of July festivities in Maitland Tuesday.

Thousands of residents from throughout Seminole County gathered at their favorite locations to enjoy the traditional July 4th celebration.

In Sanford, Oviedo, Geneva and Maitland young and old alike dodged scattered showers to enjoy the variety of food, contests and booths. And as the sun set heads were turned to the skies as the evening was topped off by spectacular fireworks displays.
