Federal investigators sift through the wreckage of the Cessna 441 twin turbo which crashed at the Sanford airport sometime Thursday night but wasn't discovered until Friday. Officials estimate that it will be months before the cause of the crash can be determined. The pilot was killed in the crash but a passenger survived.

Investigators Probe Sanford Plane Crash

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

The wreckage of the plane that crashed at the Greater Sanford Regional Airport Thursday night wasn't found until the next morning because the area in which the aircraft was finally located wasn't checked by security guards, according to an airport official.

The dead pilot of the crashed

Cessna 441, twin-engine turbo-prop and his injured passenger were found in the cockpit about 8:50 a.m. Friday, about 12 hours after they were reported missing by air-traffic controllers at Orlando International Airport. It was that airport that gave the pilot permission to land at Sanford because the Sanford airport tower had already closed.

When the pilot did not contact the Orlando tower to say he had landed, that airport contacted Sanford police and asked that a search be conducted to determine if the plane had crashed. Two Sanford Airport Authority security guards reportedly conducted separate searches at the airport but turned up nothing. They apparently did not search the area where the

Judge Says 'Guilty' In Wire Tap

The former Longwood man that was found guilty of 13 counts of sexual battery in January was also found guilty of illegally taping recording his family's telephone conversations without their knowledge by a circuit judge Friday afternoon.

In a non-jury trial, Seminole Circuit Judge Robert C. McGregor ruled that Earl Casperson Meggison Sr., 44, was guilty of one count of interception of oral communication. He faced 46 individual counts of the crime, each of which carried a maximum sentence of five years in prison apiece.

Meggison's attorney Alan Robinson filed a motion to dismiss the case because Assistant State Robert Fisher was being overly vindictive in his pursuit of prosecuting the case.

Seminole Circuit Judge Robert C. McGregor ruled the state could charge Meggison with one count of recording the calls, but not break the charge down into one count for each of the 46 times Meggison committed the crime.

It's against Florida law to record a private conversation without the knowledge of the parties involved. Meggison is accused of taping conversations on one of the two telephone lines in the home he formerly shared with his ex-wife, Donna Martin, and her two children.

Meggison claimed he was taping the calls in an effort to stop the promiscuous activities of

Drug Finder Accused Of Stealing It

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

Donald Wayne Clark, 32, of 3001 S. Park Ave., Sanford, a lawn service worker responsible for finding $5.5 million worth of cocaine in the woods near an exclusive Longwood subdivision was arrested Friday, along with a co-worker, on charges of trafficking in cocaine.

City-County Investigative Bureau agents got a tip Thursday that some of the cocaine had been removed before the agents had gotten to the scene on Wednesday. That resulted in Clark being arrested Friday night, as well as Richard Dana Kitzmiller, 58, of 613 S. Myrtle Ave., Sanford. CCIB agents said Friday they believe that Clark and Kitzmiller each took a kilogram package of the drug. In addition, Sheriff's Department Lt. Donald Eslinger said, "there is a possibility that a third package is missing." He said other arrests may be made.

The two are in the Seminole County jail pending an initial court appearance.

Eleven kilograms of high-grade cocaine was recovered in the woods Wednesday in a location west of I-4 near State Road 46. Eslinger, CCIB director, called the discovery the largest drug haul in Seminole County history. The cocaine was found wrapped in plastic, taped into 11 blocks of powder about the size of two masonry bricks. It was packed inside two pieces of nylon luggage, with each piece of the luggage containing some of the 11 blocks.

CCIB agents searched the woods Wednesday, but said they found nothing other than what Clark had said he found. Eslinger, at that time, said the search had just begun, that the investigators have possible leads to the source of the "high quality" cocaine.

Officers said they believe that Clark and Kitzmiller each removed a kilogram package of

The 'Keepers'

Who: Donald Wayne Clark, 32, and Richard Dana Kitzmiller, 58, both of Sanford.

What: Arrested for allegedly keeping some of $5.5 million in cocaine they found in a wooded area.

How Much: Police believe the pair retained two kilograms (4.4 pounds) of the cocaine. A third kilogram may have been taken also.

Charges: Trafficking in cocaine and possession of cocaine.

cocaine from the cache. (A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.)

Clark and Kitzmiller were confronted by officers Friday at about 6:45 p.m. at 301 Mingo Trail, the location of Longwood lawn service where they are employed, Eslinger said. Agents found more than 400 grams of cocaine hidden in a tobacco can under the driver's seat of Clark's vehicle. More than 200 grams of the drug were found in Kitzmiller's home, according to Eslinger.

He added that while officers have no proof the two men have been selling drugs, there are "indications of substance abuse." He said that if the two are using the drug, they may have become persuaded that they also could sell some. "Obviously, they could not. They got in over their heads," Eslinger said.

Eslinger is charged with trafficking in cocaine and with possession of cocaine (more than 400 grams); Kitzmiller is charged with possession of cocaine (200 grams).

Clark reported the drug find to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, and deputies

Aspiring Security Guards Learn In Special Program

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Eighteen Seminole County residents who want to become trained security guards have cracked the books to begin an eight-week course sponsored by the non-profit Private Industry Council of Seminole County, which also guarantees job placement for each of the students who successfully completes the studies.

Rick Rizzardi, coordinator for the Security Officers' Training Course, presented by the Security and Safety Training Institute based in Chicago, said that it is unique for security guards to receive any formal training in the state of Florida. However, training for those posts, which typically pay minimum wage and have a high turnover rate, is expected to be mandated by the

Training Course

A training course for prospective security guards has begun under a special program for low income residents.

- Budget: $30,000
- Length of course: 240 hours of instruction

state in a few years.

By entering the field with training, the 18 students will have a stronger base for a serious career.

"Security is not a high paid field," Rizzardi said. "It is a career position. It is a profession. We're trying to get away from the vision of the nightwatchman carrying a lunch pail."

The trained guards will enter the profession with a guaranteed minimum of $4 per hour and will be qualified to supervise other guards, which increases their earning potential to about $6 an hour, Rizzardi said.

Three area security companies have contracted with the Private Industry Council to hire the graduates of this course. The Private Industry Council, which is backed by area businesses and which dispenses federal funds for job training and placement, also provides similar training in other fields. The training and placement is free to the students.

IN BRIEF

Man Accused Of Giving Girl Pot Before Sexually Assaulting Her

A 32-year-old Casselberry man who is accused by Longwood police of having forced sex with a 15-year-old Longwood girl many times since 1985 is also accused of sometimes giving the girl marijuana to smoke before the assaults.

The girl reportedly first reported her allegations to a counselor in a Seminole County drug abuse treatment facility, police said.

Robert Brian Harrington, of 374 Brittany Circle, was arrested at his home at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. He has been charged with sexual battery on a child and lewd and lascivious indecent assault on a child. Harrington was being held without bond.

Car Stopped, Cocaine Found

Altamonte Springs police who made a traffic stop after seeing a car pass another car on the right side on Jackson Street, Altamonte Springs, reported arresting the driver on a charge of driving with a suspended license.

A search of the car turned up cocaine, and a charge of possession of cocaine was added against Harrison Hampton Jr., 18, of 801 Orange Grove Drive, Altamonte Springs. He has been released on $1,000 bond to appear in court Feb. 22.

Burglars Restrain Man, Take Cash

Two men allegedly forced their way into the Sanford home of Vande Nickerson and grabbed his wallet, which contained $100. The robbers forced Nickerson down into a chair before taking the wallet and fleeing, a Sanford police report said.

Nickerson reportedly identified a suspect in a police photo lineup and that led to the arrest at 1:51 p.m. Wednesday of Manuel Burke, 40, of 1700 W. 12th St., Sanford.

Burke was arrested at his home and charged with robbery. He was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Truck Leaks Marijuana Smoke

Oviedo police, who questioned a man in a truck at about 12:20 a.m. Wednesday, noticed smoke coming from inside the truck.

Inside the truck, parked on the shoulder of Chapel Road, Oviedo, police reported seeing a can that had apparently been transformed into a marijuana smoker. Police searched the truck and reported finding a second similar can and a bag of marijuana.

Dale Alan Derousha, 27, of 1810 Cambridge St., Maitland, has been charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. He has been released on a total of $1,000 bond to appear in court Friday.

Warrant Turns Up Cocaine In Car

Sanford police with a search warrant reported finding partially smoked marijuana cigarettes and pieces of crack cocaine in the car of Darryl Lee Taylor, 21, of 1403 Locust Ave., Sanford.

The search was made, then Taylor was arrested on charges of possession of cocaine and less than 20 grams of marijuana and resisting arrest without violence at about 10 p.m. at the Sanford police station. He has been released on a $2,000 bond to appear in court Feb. 29 and on a $500 bond to appear in court Feb. 24.

Police reported that when they were arresting Taylor, they tried unsuccessfully to stop him from chewing up something inside his mouth that they wanted to examine.

Gun Flashed Outside Of Pub

Cary L. Burch reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies that he got into a fight with a Sanford man outside the Deluxe Bar, rural Sanford, at about 1 a.m. Friday, and that man allegedly brandished a handgun against him.

Burch said the man pointed the gun at him and waved it around.

Sheriff's deputies reported charging Clifford Lamar Redding, of 1509 W. 17th, with aggravated assault with a gun and carrying a concealed firearm. Redding was arrested at 1:12 a.m. Friday, at 2341 W. 18th St., Sanford. Deputies reported recovering a gun from Redding. They said it was loaded with three rounds.

Redding was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

'Doe' Gets Drug, Conduct Charges

Sanford police twice went to 1702 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford, to try to calm a man who was allegedly yelling and creating a disturbance there. They reported arresting the man on their return visit at about 2:50 a.m. Thursday.

The man gave police two different names, so he was arrested as John Doe, age and address unknown. He was charged with disorderly conduct. After a syringe and marijuana were reportedly found in a search of the man, charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia were added.

He was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond, and Thursday jail officials still had him booked as John Doe.

Altamonte Springs police got into a confrontation with a father and son whom they made leave the Barrell Pub, 698 State Road 436, at about 9:40 p.m. Thursday. Police reported that both men had been armed with stunners and that the father also had a .32-caliber pistol.

The son allegedly refused a police order to put down a cue stick as he was ordered out of the pub. As police and the pair were walking out, a policeman reported spotting a stunner in the father's pocket. That weapon was taken from him along with a .32-caliber handgun, police reported.

The son allegedly struggled

Woman Uses Knife In Snatching Purse

A Winter Park woman has reported that her purse was stolen at knife-point, the most dramatic of several recent burglaries and thefts in the area that range from a $2 flashlight to a $5,000 computer system and a $8,000 1987 Dodge Omni.

Patricia L. Cafarella, of Winter Park, reported to sheriff's deputies that a woman approached her outside her car outside Eckerd's, State Road 436, Casselberry, put a knife to her throat and stole her purse.

The robber fled in a waiting car that was driven by a second woman. The purse and its contents are valued at more than $145.

Other area thefts and burglaries include:

—Irene R. Sands, of 5390 Orange Blvd., Sanford, reported to sheriff's deputies her $450 television, a $10 radio and a $2 flashlight were stolen from her home between Jan. 24 and Feb. 6.

—A $250 video recorder was stolen Sunday from the home of Tom Capps, of 700 Michigan St., Sanford, a sheriff's report said.

—Moses W. Hovis, of 701 Markham Woods Road, Longwood, gave sheriff's deputies the name of a suspect who may have stolen a $200 gold bracelet, a $100 silver bracelet, and four gold necklaces with a combined value of more than $400 from his home Wednesday.

Fire Guts Vacant House

Most of a one-story concrete block house was gutted Thursday as the result of a fire shortly after 1 a.m., but Sanford firemen said they had the flames under control within three minutes after their arrival.

Late Friday morning fire officials had not yet identified the owner, who apparently lives out of the city.

The 201 Jessamine Ave. residence was vacant at the time. In fact, renters had moved out of the house only days ago, according to information received from neighbors by Tom Martin, Sanford fire marshal.

Martin said that there were no witnesses to the incident and that the investigation is continuing. He explained that the fire department has been unable to reach the owner, who lives at Merritt Island.

The house was fully inflamed when firemen arrived at the scene, Martin said.

He said the fire caused about a 70 percent loss in the structure, with several of the rooms being gutted. The house contained two bedrooms, a bath, a living room, dining room and kitchen. The two bedrooms are the least damaged, but they have smoke and heat damage, Martin said.

The investigation is continuing, Martin said, adding that the cause of the fire is still undetermined.

Couch-potatoes unite, you have nothing to lose but your eyeballs. Seminolians can now heed the cry "Let the games begin," and commence 15 days of Olympic action. Everynight, and twice on the week-ends, you'll see lots of snow and ice with tourist office officers in a constant prayer vigil for constant cold, and more snow and ice.

It seems the deepest dread up there is a chinook which is a wind off the Pacific that warms the entire area. Temperatures can zoom upwards from 20 degrees to the balmy 60s in the twinkling of an eye. Then the meltdown begins. Suddenly it's mud city.

During the next 15 days there will be some during which we'll need our air-conditioners, but that will be several days from now. For the present we must cope with lows in the 40s and highs in the 60s. Clear, sunny skies during the days plus clear, first quarter moony skies at night.

Take off in a northerly direction and you'll find the thermometer will drive down quickly. Freezing even up in Tallahassee. Further north it gets worse. It's ridiculous up in New England.

A "two-packs-of-Roloids" storm stretching from Dixie to Maine tapered off after piling up to 2 feet of snow in New England, but forecasters said it would keep battering the Northeast today on its sweep along the Atlantic Coast into Canada.

The storm, covering an area from the Ohio Valley and the Appalachians through New England, was still dropping snow late Friday over eastern Tennessee, North Carolina and the mountains of West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Companies that agree to hire the trainees, who are persons with low incomes, also receive monetary benefits from PIC for participating in the programs.

The security guard training program was funded for fiscal 1987-1988 with a budget of almost $30,000, Rizzardi said.

Such training, Rizzardi said, is common in other areas. His institute holds such classes in Milwaukee, New York, Ft. Lauderdale, Los Angeles, Peoria, Chicago, Tampa and Gary, Ind., he said.

A local instructor is chosen for the program. Conducting the Sanford class is James (Matt) Brantly Jr., 29, of Orlando. Brantly has a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Rollins College, and has been an investigator for Walt Disney World and Martin-Marietta, as well as a reserve Seminole County sheriff's deputy.

Brantly said he has trained other security personnel before, but not on this scale. He said a local instructor has an advantage in conducting such a program because he knows the area, the people, the state rules and regulations, and the security companies that benefit from the program. The training, he said, will be advantageous for the security companies and their contractees as well as to the guards. The trained guards will have specific job skills.

Rizzardi said typical security guards are hired "off the street." They have little or no training and usually don't stick with the job.

Half of those in Brantly's class are women, which Rizzardi said is a bit unusual. All are Seminole Countians, most from Sanford, and are at least 18 years old. They are not required to have a high school diploma, but must be low income. The students must not have any physical disabilities that would limit their ability to perform guard duties.

The greatest challenge for security officers, Rizzardi said, is "to know how to react in highly emotional situations, when confronted by someone with a weapon or by an assault in which physical force is used. How to react under that pressure is battle one."

"It's not the norm, but they have to be prepared. A good security officer will not have to resort to force, if they are well trained. Force is the last resort."

The students were picked by PIC from 120 who responded to an ad from PIC which offered security officer training and placement. Before being accepted for the program, Rizzardi, who spent about four weeks in Sanford to organize the program, said the candidates underwent an investigation of their backgrounds, which showed they had no felony convictions. Most who failed to make the program failed because their income was too high, he said.

The 18 potential security officers, who began their 240 hours of training in Sanford on Feb. 8, Rizzardi said, will be instructed in civil and criminal law, and security officers' rights to use limited power of detention. The proper use of force, local security rules and regulations, observation and report writing techniques as well as first aid and CPR, will be covered.

They will be taught firearms safety, but will not have range practice in firearms use, Rizzardi said. Some will eventually work in armed settings, and others will not be armed on the job. Some may work as body guards, he said.

Typically, Rizzardi said, 75 to 80 percent of those who begin security officer training successfully complete the course and are employed in the field.

The Sanford students, who range in age from about 18 up to about 50, have varied backgrounds, some of which include police training or experience.

Alice Gonzales, 31, of Longwood, said she is taking the class as a refresher course, with the hope that it will be "a step in the door" to police work. She said she has a degree in criminal justice and is certified as a police officer in Illinois.

Clemon Countryman, 28, of Sanford, said he has police academy training in Connecticut. He has lived in Sanford 18 months and said he recently made the decision to become a security officer while he continues his college studies.

"I was thinking about getting into Seminole Community College to take criminal justice studies and thought this would make it easier," said James Edwards, 41, of Sanford. "I plan to work as a security guard."

To aid Edwards and the others in meeting their career objectives, Brantly said, "I'm going to pull out all of my resources." That, he said, will include bringing in guest lecturers to assist in the training.

Rizzardi said he hopes that the expected success of this class will bring an extension of the PIC contract and the training of additional security officers in the next fiscal year.

Sgt. Caraballo

Sgt. Tina Larson-Caraballo has been selected for attendance at the Seventh Army Noncommissioned Officer Academy, the Commandant's Office of the Department of the Army has announced. The action "sets her apart from fellow soldiers by putting her in the top category of our soldiers in Europe" according to the announcement.

Sgt. Caraballo was selected as the "Distinguished Graduate of Class 88-03, Company A" which is the No. 1 graduate of her class. She has earned the "Commander in Chief, United States Army, Europe and Seventh Army Award" and the "General George S. Patton, Jr., Award for Excellence," the Army spokesman said.

City Historic Survey Tabled

Historic Preservation Board member Jerry Mills came recently before the Sanford City Commission with a recommendation from that board that steps be taken which would ultimately put Sanford's historic residential district on the National Register of Historic Places.

However, commissioners admitted to one another that in the time they have had the historic survey completed by Florida Preservation Services, they have not adequately studied the document in a workshop.

Mills told the commissioners that the State National Register Review Board meets four times each year. He said that while it was not imperative that the commission immediately approve an application to be submitted to the state, the application would have to be approved by April in order for Sanford to be on the agenda for the next state review board.

The results of the survey conducted by Florida Preservation Services, which were submitted to the city in early January, identify Sanford as having one historic district, 47 individually significant buildings, and two areas which should be surveyed for their historical significance in the near future.

The study identifies the historic district as a 70-block area bounded by S. Laurel Avenue on the west, 13th Street on the south, S. Sanford Avenue on the east, and Third and Second streets on the north.

At first Commissioner John Mercer made a motion to approve the application, and Commissioner Robert Thomas seconded that motion. But then Mercer himself asked, "Is this something you need approved right away? I'd thought we wanted to deal with this in a workshop."

Mills said the review board would be meeting in May, but that the city would need to approve the application by early April for Sanford's historic district to be considered at that meeting.

Then Commissioner A.A. McClanahan moved that the recommendation be discussed in a workshop. Thomas seconded his motion. The commissioners then voted unanimously to take the discussion to a workshop.

Mayor Bettye Smith cautioned Mills, "Please don't take this as negative. We do need to know what we're voting on."

Road Work This Week

Here are the projects in Seminole County that may affect the flow of traffic:

1 Red Bug Lake Road from east of State Road 436 to Autumn Glen Lane. Road widening. This major project will include substantial underground drainage work and removing the existing road surface. Flagmen or detours may be used, but traffic backups are not expected to be worse than they are currently. Expected completion by November 1988. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

2 Sand Lake Road from Ruth Street to Wessax Road. Road widening on weekdays. Minor disruption expected, with flagmen handling traffic flow. Expected completion by May 1988. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

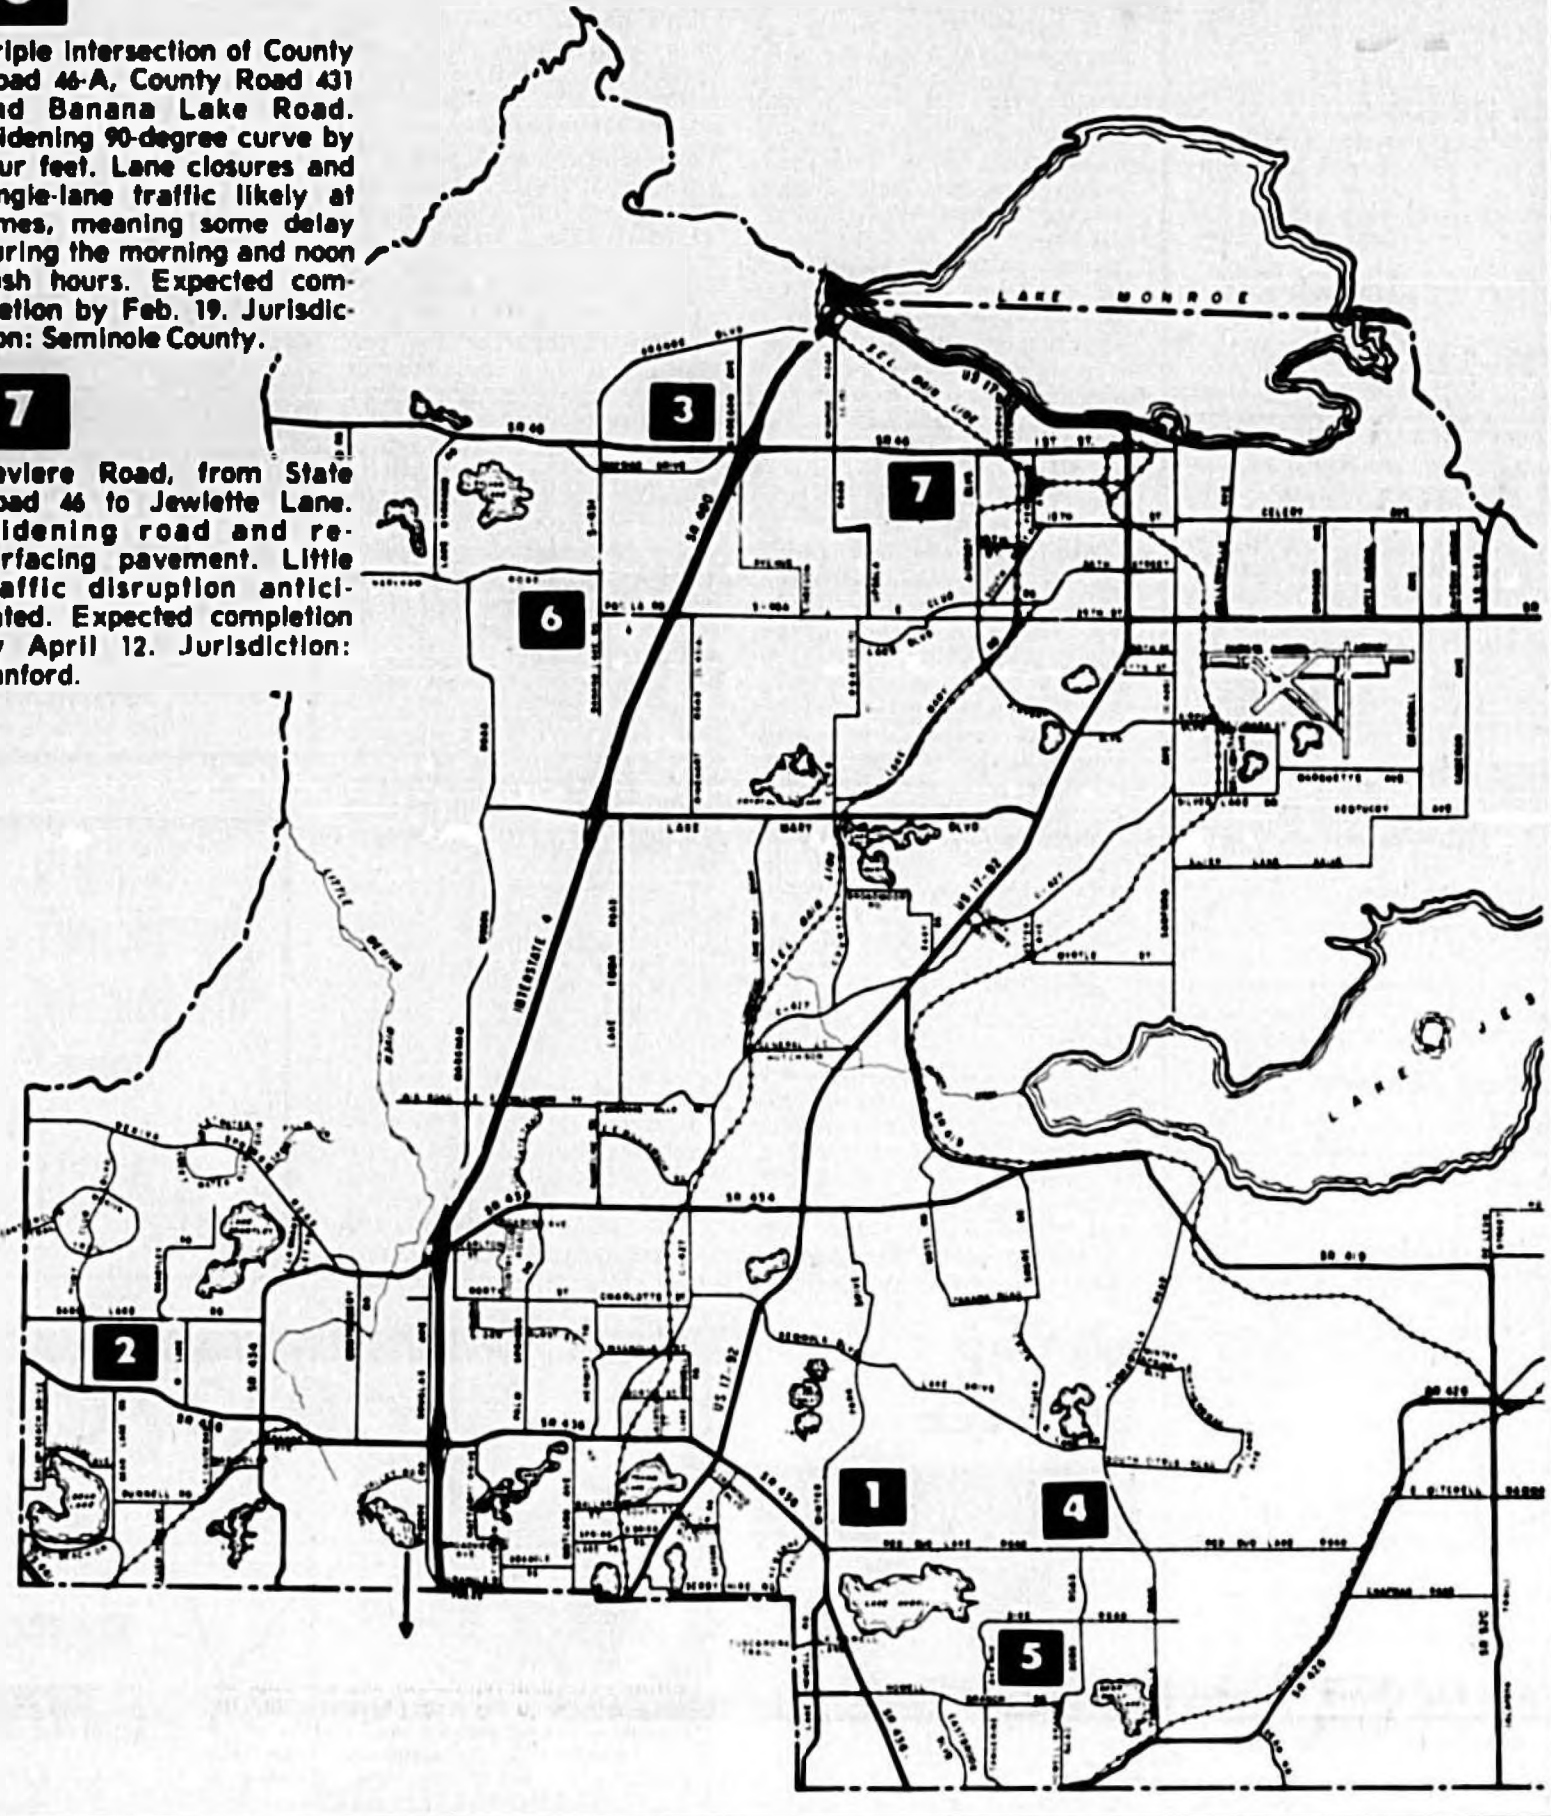

3 State Road 46 and Jitway. Widening intersection and creating turn lanes. Initially, work will be done off of the roadway, then lanes will be closed. Expected completion by Feb. 19. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

4 Dodd Road over Howell Creek. Dam construction. Traffic will not be affected unless trucks are moving in and out of the site. Expected completion by Feb. 19. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

5 Dike Road, north of Howell Branch Road. Superelevating curves in the road, so that curves will be banked, and resurfacing with better non-skid asphalt. Traffic will be single-laned and directed by flagmen between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., so traffic backups are possible. Work expected to begin Feb. 16 and end March 4.

6 Triple Intersection of County Road 46-A, County Road 431 and Banana Lake Road. Widening 90-degree curve by four feet. Lane closures and single-lane traffic likely at times, meaning some delay during the morning and noon rush hours. Expected completion by Feb. 19. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

7 Beviere Road, from State Road 46 to Jewette Lane. Widening road and resurfacing pavement. Little traffic disruption anticipated. Expected completion by April 12. Jurisdiction: Sanford.

34 Fighting Pit Bulls Impounded

NEW YORK (UPI) — Animal protection agents found an 80-pound dog named Hercules along with 33 other fighting pit bulls in a foul-smelling, blood-splattered pet store basement, authorities said.

The raid on the Stop Living In Fear pet store also led to the arrest of its owner, Leo Batista, believed "one of the biggest suppliers of fighting dogs in the Northeast," Jeffrey Hon, a spokesman for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said Friday.

Batista, 24, was charged with the felony crime animal fighting, cruelty to animals, and weapons and drug possession following the Thursday raid, Hon said.

The young man put up no resistance but was discovered with a 4 1/2-inch gravity knife equipped with a brass knuckles handle, as well as a hypodermic syringe used to inject painkilling drugs into the dogs, he added.

"It was the biggest dog fighting-related bust in ASPCA history in New York City," Hon said.

The agency had been contacted by a man who went to buy a dog at the store in the New York City borough of Queens.

The unidentified man told the ASPCA that Batista took him to the store's basement, equipped with a treadmill to exercise the dogs, and a fighting pit to train them, said William Kapps, the agency's director of humane law enforcement.

Batista then brought out a mammoth pit bull named Hercules and sicked him on a smaller dog to show his "fighting prowess," he said. Hercules quickly tore the dog's head off, he added.

When the ASPCA's special agents raided the store at 4 p.m. Thursday they found 34 snarling pit bulls, including badly scarred adult dogs and nine puppies, kept in the basement that wreaked of excrement.

Some were in cages littered with debris, others were chained to the radiator and pipes, Kapps said. The walls of the portable fighting pit were splattered with blood.

Unlike most of the other dogs, Hercules appeared to have survived his bouts unscathed. "He's nearly 80 pounds, all muscle," Kapps said. "He's the biggest one I've ever seen."

Asked how old the dog is, Kapps said, "I didn't want to get close enough to find out."

plane crashed because, according to one airport official, it's not normally used. However, had the security guards driven to that unused portion of the airport, they probably would have spotted debris strewn about, that official acknowledged.

And at least one city commissioner, John Y. Mercer, said Saturday morning that since the city is the airport owner, "the landlord, if you will," some means of monitoring what goes on there and at other agencies the city deals with, such as the Sanford Housing Authority, needs to be established.

The city was given the airport by the federal government and, according to Mercer, a state statute was written creating the airport authority and outlining its duties. But, since a landlord can be held responsible when negligence may occur that causes damage, Mercer said he thinks it's a wise idea for the city commission to examine thoroughly its relationship to what goes on at the airport.

"We need to at least discuss this at city commission level to determine what reports we might request from the airport authority when these things happen to determine if they were handled properly, or whether procedural changes need to be made to improve how we do things," Mercer said.

Mercer is a member of the airport authority which has six other members, and as such, he said he would endorse the idea of asking the city attorney to research the question to determine just what the city can ask of the authority when such incidents occur.

The plane was finally located Friday morning near the extreme northeast portion of the airport adjacent to State Road 46.

The runway and aircraft parking areas of the airport were searched for the missing plane at least twice by airport security guards late Thursday night and again a few hours after midnight, according to Mack LaZenby, assistant director of aviation services at the Sanford airport. He said the wreckage of the plane was not discovered in either search because the security guards never checked the grassy field next to an unused taxiway the plane was finally found in.

However, he defended their actions by saying they checked those areas that normally would be checked in such cases. In addition to the plane crashing in an unused area apparently not checked, there was thick fog which may have hidden the wreckage, LaZenby said.

Federal investigators said Saturday it will be months, perhaps even a year, before determining the exact cause of Thursday night's crash.

Investigators Friday afternoon began piecing together the evidence surrounding the crash. Officials from both the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Authority started sifting through the wreckage.

Seminole County sheriff's officials identified the pilot as Emmitt Martin, 64, of Uniontown, Pa., a commercial pilot with 23 years flying experience.

Passenger John Hardesty, 47, of Morgantown, W. Va., apparently suffered only bumps and bruises but was under observation at Orlando Regional Medical Center for possible head injuries, said hospital spokesman Joe Brown.

Rescuers with the Sanford fire department said Saturday when they helped Hardesty out of the wreckage, he was conscious and they don't know why he did not seek help during the night. He was airlifted to ORMC where his condition was listed as stable Saturday morning, according to Brown.

The plane departed Atlanta's

Fulton County Airport Thursday night and crashed in Sanford about an hour after the airport tower closed at 9 p.m., an FAA spokesman said.

Hardesty, an executive with Preston Energy Corp., Kingwood, W. Va., a coal company, has business interests in Florida both at Gainesville and in Seminole County, according to associates in West Virginia. He reportedly came to Sanford for a meeting at Heathrow.

The wreckage was discovered by Mark Rayborn, a supervisor with Air Florida Maintenance. The plane apparently landed on one side of a taxiway running parallel to the highway without its landing gear down, and then skidded along the ground until it came to a stop in the field, according to an FAA spokesman.

He said no one knew the plane crashed because there wasn't a fire or explosion upon impact. "It was like a tree falling in the forest," he said.

Early morning fog reduced visibility Friday hampering search efforts for the plane.

Glady's Scheffeld, 2580 E. State Road 46, said she didn't hear anything during the time the plane was supposed to have crashed. Her home is directly across the street from the airport and the crash site.

"I was told it happened last night (Thursday) but I didn't find out about it until I woke up this morning with the sirens going off," she said.

Other residents in the neighborhood adjacent to the northern end of the airport also said they had no knowledge of a crash until Friday morning.

"After the tower closes at 9 p.m. every night this is an uncontrolled field," John Katon, director of ground services for Air Florida Maintenance, said. He said that landings after that time are handled by controllers at Orlando International Airport.

"Since he was coming from up north, Jacksonville must have had the plane for a while," Katon said.

Martin was reportedly given a clearance to land shortly after 10 p.m. Thursday and was not heard from again.

Katon said that once a pilot is given a clearance to land at an uncontrolled field, he can land and later notify controllers of his arrival. If he has to abort the landing attempt he can let the controllers know immediately.

When the controllers didn't hear from Martin once they gave him clearance he said there was no reason to start worrying about the flight right then.

However, when the plane crashed, the emergency automatic signaling device aboard the aircraft went off, Katon said, raising the question of why the security guards didn't hear it. A tower operator Friday morning reported he heard the signal during the morning search. The device is designed to help authorities find aircraft lost in remote areas, according to Katon.

"When the tower opened this morning (Friday) they heard the signal, but didn't know where it was coming from," he said.

One of the reasons the plane might have been so difficult to find even though it was resting in an open field was that the antenna to the device may have been broken, weakening the signal, Katon said.

The NTSB normally investigates any aircraft accident that results in a death or serious injury, according to Tim Monville, air safety investigator for the agency. He said there are times when they will investigate a crash without a fatality, but not often.

When the NTSB doesn't investigate a crash, the probe is left to the FAA, according to Katon.

The on-site investigation should be completed in about two or three days, according to Ronald Bird, the head investigator for the NTSB on the case.

He said his team's findings would be sent on to Washington, D.C. for review in order to determine the cause of the crash, but even that could take about three months.

Bird said he couldn't comment on any speculation as to what caused the crash.

Bird said his agency investigates approximately 35,000 accidents a year. He added that if he's put on another case it could take even longer for the results of the probe to finally be reviewed and made public.

turned the investigation over to CCIB. Those agents said they found, in addition to the cocaine, a scale, which was packed in a separate plastic case.

Eslinger said the drug had probably been outside for several months, but that exposure to the elements should not have had any significant effect on the quality of the drug.

Paper—Israel Had Nuclear Tests

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt's semi-official newspaper reported Saturday that Israel detonated a nuclear device in a test near the South Pole in 1979 and has exploded two nuclear devices in Antarctica since then.

The newspaper Al Ahran reported in the same story that Norway, South Africa and France were involved with Israel in the nuclear tests in Antarctica.

Israel has long been suspected of having nuclear weapons but has never admitted possessing them. Israel has said repeatedly it would never be the first to strike with nuclear arms.

An Israeli nuclear expert, Mordechai Vanonu, has been accused by Jerusalem of leaking top secret information to the London Sunday Times, a British weekly newspaper, about the Ants had invaded the luggage, which was also smeared with leaves and mud, but the cocaine did not appear to be damaged, Eslinger said.

When the CCIB was notified that Clark had kept some of the drug after he had found the cache, agents were also told that Clark and Kitzmiller had been passing out some of the cocaine to their friends, Eslinger said.

The investigation is continuing, according to a Seminole County deputy.

Small Incision Cataract Surgery

Not All Cataract Surgery Is The Same.
Not All Cataract Surgeons Are The Same.

Consumers today know much more about cataracts, and cataract implant surgery than they did a few years ago. However, with the ever-increasing advancements in medical technology, cataract surgery has evolved to the point where the quality and experience of the surgeon and the type of cataract surgery to be performed need to be considered by all future patients.

The Neumann Eye Institute and Ambulatory Surgical Center of Central Florida has earned an international reputation for excellence in eye care. Albert C. Neumann, M.D. and Thomas O. Steedle, M.D. are Central Florida's most experienced small incision cataract surgeons, and they offer their patients the highest level of care, the fastest recovery, and the highest potential of improved sight available anywhere in the world today.

WHAT ARE THE ADVANTAGES OF HAVING SMALL INCISION CATARACT IMPLANT SURGERY? Modern ultrasonic cataract removal carried out through a small incision may provide better vision without distance glasses. In 1975, Dr. Neumann was Central Florida's first eye surgeon to perform small incision cataract surgery. This surgery is accomplished through the use of ultrasonic (phacoemulsification) cataract removal and either the new small incision lens implants or foldable implants, both of which fit through the smallest possible incision.

The benefits of small incision cataract surgery may include a stronger eye, faster visual recovery, fewer healing problems and less irregular vision (astigmatism) caused by the surgical incision. The need for glasses for distance vision may thereby be reduced or eliminated.

Moreover, by using techniques and concepts developed for new nearsightedness and astigmatism reduction procedures, Dr. Neumann can now treat pre-existing astigmatism at the same time as the cataract. Many patients have found they can not only read more lines on the eye chart without glasses, but their entire visual experience is enhanced when they are no longer completely dependent upon distance glasses.

The goal of Neumann Eye Institute surgeons is for cataract patients to see better after surgery than they ever have in their adult life without distance glasses.

Dr. Neumann performs small incision cataract surgery while two visiting surgeons observe technique.

Dr. Neumann with Margaret Tollette

One Patient Tells The Story For Many

Margaret Tollette was born with two serious visual problems: extreme farsightedness (could not see up close or at a distance without thick glasses) and astigmatism (visual distortion at near or far). Later her visual difficulties were compounded by the onset of cataracts.

Before cataract surgery, Mrs. Tollette had such poor vision that she could barely see the fingers on her hands. At one week after having cataract surgery she had excellent vision. "I have always worn glasses... thick, coke bottle glasses," said Mrs. Tollette. "The first thing I did after my eye surgery was throw away my glasses."

Once Mrs. Tollette decided to have cataract surgery, she had to decide where to have the surgery done. She knew of the Neumann Eye Institute's excellent reputation, and was impressed by both the quality of the physical facility, the friendly and compassionate staff, and the extensive experience of the surgeons. In checking around she learned there is a difference in cataract surgery procedures and a difference among cataract surgeons... that not all surgeons are the same. She discovered that some doctors are still removing cataracts by old fashioned methods, but at the Neumann Eye Institute, the newer small incision cataract lens implant surgery has been routine for many years.

Mrs. Tollette found out for herself the many advantages of having small incision cataract surgery. She now knows that modern ultrasonic cataract removal carried out through a small incision provided her with better vision without distance glasses. And for no extra charge her life-long problems of extreme farsightedness and astigmatism were corrected by her small incision cataract surgery.

"It's amazing. Colors are so much more intense. And everything is so much more defined. I never did see features well. Now I can see the color of people's eyes. I was in a blurred world for years. I seem to be walking better, too, not just feeling my way around. I was beginning to get into a shell, not doing things I used to do. For years I hadn't enjoyed traveling as much, but I think I'll start taking a few trips, thanks to Dr. Neumann."

"At the Neumann Eye Institute, everyone is so nice," said Mrs. Tollette. "My whole experience is like a dream come true."

What Are Cataracts?

A cataract is a clouding of the normally clear human lens. As cataracts progress, an individual may develop hazy, distorted or blurred vision. Symptoms of possible cataract disability also include glare from oncoming headlights at night while driving an automobile or glare from bright sunshine.

Children as well as adults of any age may develop cataracts, although the normal process of aging causes the most common type. In fact, everyone gets cataracts if they live long enough.

Cataract patients no longer need to become completely disabled before cataracts can be treated and clear vision restored. Small incision cataract procedures permit the safe removal of the cataract at any stage of development. Ask your doctor to give you the new glare test so that your cataracts can be diagnosed early enough to benefit from the new cataract small incision implant procedures.

Visual Enhancement Is Available To Those Who Have Not Had Modern Cataract Implant Surgery

If you have undergone cataract surgery without intraocular lens implant and are dependent upon contact lenses or thick cataract glasses you may be a candidate for SECONDARY INTRAOCULAR LENS IMPLANTATION.

Thick cataract glasses cause a 30% magnification of objects viewed, resulting in limited side vision and may cause false spatial orientation. Cataract glasses are also heavy and uncomfortable. Cataract contact lenses cause an 8% magnification and require extensive and careful patient handling, inserting, and cleaning. Many patients find these optical device alternatives unacceptable.

At the Neumann Eye Institute, a secondary lens implant can usually be inserted in patients who have cataract surgery without an implant. Intraocular lenses provide the most natural vision after cataract surgery and are inside the eye forever requiring little additional care. A routine eye examination is all that is necessary to find out if you are a candidate for secondary intraocular lens implantation.

Vision Enhancement Is Available To Those Who Have Noticed Decreased Visual Clarity Following Cataract Implant Surgery

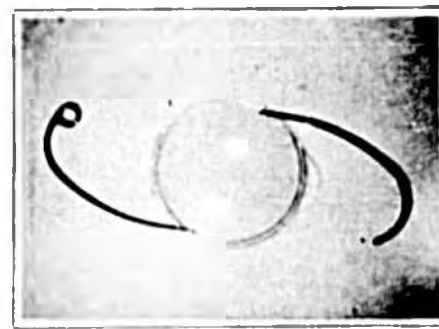

For those experiencing hazy vision after a period of time following cataract implant surgery, the YAG LASER may help to restore vision. This office procedure is routinely performed at the Neumann Eye Institute and requires no anesthesia or operating room.

New Intraocular Lens Design Provides Better Vision

A new intraocular lens designed by Dr. Albert Neumann in cooperation with Alcon Surgical Products may provide better vision to patients having small incision cataract surgery. The new lens is designed with features which will help reduce glare during nighttime driving and permit the smallest possible incision allowing for the least amount of surgery. This new lens implant is now available at the Ambulatory Surgical Center of Central Florida as well as internationally.

The use of this new intraocular lens with small incision cataract surgery will benefit patients because it will mean less invasive surgery, faster visual recovery, and fewer healing problems. The Neumann Eye Institute works hard to provide better living through better vision.

New Neumann design intraocular lens implant.

Iraqi Jet Fires Missile Close To U.S. Destroyer On Escort Route

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An Iraqi jet bomber fired a cruise missile within 8 miles of a U.S. Navy destroyer as it escorted four reflagged tankers to a Kuwaiti oil terminal, a media pool report said Saturday.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi high command said Iraqi planes scored a "direct and effective hit" during an attack at Friday night on a "very large naval target" — Iraq's standard reference for a supertanker or large cargo vessel.

Iraq gave no details of the ownership or registry of the ship it claimed to have hit, and regional shipping sources could not immediately confirm the attack.

The cruise missile incident also occurred Friday night. Two missiles were fired immediately after the USS Chandler fired two flares from its 5-inch guns to warn the Badger bomber that it was approaching too close, the report said.

Waldheim Knew Of Atrocities

VIENNA (UPI) — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, in his first public comments regarding a report critical of his service in the German army during World War II, said he was not "personally guilty" of any atrocities and considers it his duty to continue as the nation's president. More than 400 people marched to his office Friday and demanded his resignation.

Waldheim, in an interview published Friday in the conservative Vienna newspaper Die Presse, said he knew atrocities were committed by his army unit but, like other German soldiers in Hitler's army, he did only what was necessary to survive World War II.

A six-member historical commission issued a report Tuesday stating Waldheim, as a staff officer in the Balkans, knew about war crimes committed by his unit but did nothing to prevent or distance himself from the injustices.

Bomb Assassination Thwarted

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Anti-terrorist experts Saturday investigated an attempt to assassinate Lebanese President Amin Gemayel with a bomb placed in the cockpit of a jet scheduled to take him to North Yemen.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the 1.1 pound explosive found in a Middle East Airlines jet at Syrian-controlled Beirut Airport. The airline is Lebanon's national carrier.

Gemayel has escaped at least two assassination attempts during his six-year term that expires Sept. 22.

The president, a Christian Maronite, faces staunch opposition from Lebanon's pro-Syrian Moslem leaders. He has been at odds with Syria since Jan. 15, 1986, when he rejected a Syrian-sponsored peace plan signed by Lebanon's main warring militias to end 11 years of civil war.

Court Sentences Fugitive Terrorist

ROME (UPI) — A court sentenced fugitive terrorist leader Abu Nidal and two of his followers for a December 1985 grenade and machine gun attack that killed 13 travelers, including five Americans, at Rome's airport.

Nidal, 58, and his top aide, Rashid Al Hammieda, received life imprisonment sentences en absentia Friday for masterminding the attack and Ibrahim Mohamed Khaled, 20, one of four terrorists who staged the massacre, was given 30 years.

In the attack at Rome's Leonardo Da Vinci airport Dec. 27, 1985, 13 passengers, including five U.S. citizens, were killed and 72 wounded as they lined up at check-in desks of the Israeli El Al and American TWA airlines.

NRC Fines FP&L For Continual Security, Security Violations

MIAMI (UPI) — U.S. nuclear regulators proposed Friday a $150,000 fine against Florida Power & Light Corp. for lapses in security at its Turkey Point plant, including an incident in which a guard napped on the job.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff recommended a $50,000 civil penalty for breaches in security in restricted areas, such as allowing a guest under guard escort to enter an area without an adequate security badge.

But NRC officials said "the repetitive nature of the violations" prompted a recommendation to double the fine for the violations, to $100,000.

An additional $50,000 penalty was proposed for the utility's failure to properly handle information about security at the plant, which is about 24 miles south of Miami.

FP&L was fined $475,000 in 1987 for violations relating to security, safety and operation of the plant.

Budget Critics: Little Aid For Poor

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida, the nation's 20th wealthiest state, would remain at the bottom of the list in terms of state spending on poverty programs under Gov. Bob Martinez' new budget proposals, social service lobbyists say.

Martinez' proposed 1988-89 budget continues a legacy of indifference to urgent needs of Florida's elderly, children and infirm, spokesmen for Florida's "poverty lobby" said Friday.

The spending package released Wednesday contains hefty increases for some children's programs, indigent health care, welfare and work programs.

But the lobbyists for an array of social services groups said it offers little to overburdened programs for the mentally retarded, runaways and truants, lacks adjustments for inflation and contains more than $41 million in program cuts.

Students Coping After Shooting

PINELLAS PARK (UPI) — School officials are urging parents fearing for their children's safety after violence erupted in a high school cafeteria, wounding three educators, to attend a special meeting Monday with counselors.

Some 400 students escaped injury Thursday when a suspended student opened fire with a handgun, seriously wounding two assistant principals and injuring a coach they were fighting with after being told to leave the school.

Just over 700 of 2,000 students enrolled at Pinellas Park High School, serving the suburban area north of St. Petersburg, showed up for classes Friday, said Carol Jackson, spokeswoman for the Pinellas County School Board.

Said To Have Broken, Crawled Through Her Window

Man Allegedly Kidnaps Wife

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

A California man who stopped his car and left the engine running on Airport Boulevard, Sanford, allegedly walked back to a second car his wife was in and began an attack on her. The attack ended with the man being charged by Sanford police with kidnapping and many other charges.

The roadway confrontation between the victim and Scott Emerson Crandell, 25, of Redlands, Calif., began at about 11:43 a.m. Thursday when he allegedly cursed his wife, Tammy J. Crandell, and battered the windshield of her car with his fists.

Tammy Crandell, who is a Central Florida resident, tried to drive away as she was being attacked. As she left Crandell reportedly jumped onto her car and began kicking the windshield as she drove east on Airport Boulevard at Sanford Avenue. There he allegedly broke through the window and entered the moving car through that opening.

Crandell reportedly pushed his wife aside and took control of the 1979 Oldsmobile she had been driving.

Crandell drove to a field south of Airport Boulevard and stopped. He allegedly dragged his wife from the car.

Three men who saw the incident approached the suspect, but backed away when he said he had a gun, a Sanford police report said.

Crandell allegedly forced the woman back into the car and he drove around the airport and through a fence on the south side of the airport. From there the car traveled to Cameron Avenue, where it ran into a ditch.

Pursuing Sanford police, who were aided by Seminole County sheriff's deputies, reported that Scott E. Crandell, 25, Redlands, Ca., (center) was arrested Thursday by Sanford city police after forcing his way into his wife's car at Airport Boulevard and Sanford Avenue, forcing her over to the passenger side, then wrecklessly driving the car until he wrecked it in a ditch near Cameron Avenue, police said. He allegedly chased his wife, Tammy, 20, of Deltona, into an orange grove, where police apprehended him. Also in the picture are Sanford Patrolman Frank Hilton (left), Sheriff's Deputy Hugh Thomas (behind Crandell), Sanford Lt. William Bernosky (front), and an unidentified deputy.

there the suspect allegedly again dragged Tammy Crandell from the car and into a nearby grove.

Police found the abandoned car and then found the couple in the grove. There, Sanford police Capt. Charles Fagan arrested Crandell at 12:26 p.m. Crandell has been charged with kidnapping, battery-domestic violence, obstruction of a public street, criminal mischief, reckless driving and driving with a suspended license. He was being held in lieu of $15,000 bond.

Lawyers Fined For Private Talks With Jurors

The two Tampa lawyers have been given fines Wednesday by the judge that heard the case, but say they never meant to do anything to wrong. They were accused of illegally approaching members of a jury that ruled against their client in a negligence suit tried at the Seminole County courthouse last November.

Circuit Judge Kenneth M. Lefler ruled that Chris Limberopoulos and Geoffrey Steiner were both in contempt of court for their behavior on November 18, after a six-member jury ruled not to award any damages to their client, Mark P. Weichselbaum, in a auto accident law suit. The attorneys pled no contest to the contempt charge.

Lefler also ordered both men to write letters of apology to the jurors. The idea for the letters was suggested by Limberopoulos.

Steiner said Limberopoulos and he thought they were going to win the case and after the jury returned its verdict against their client, they were stunned and wanted to find out what happened. Members of the jury complained the attorneys followed them out of the courtroom and asked them questions about their deliberations. One woman said one of them even followed her as far as the courthouse parking lot.

Lefler gave Limberopoulos a $500 fine and placed him on six months of unsupervised probation. Steiner was given a $200 fine.

Both lawyers said they've never been involved in something like this before and plan to appeal the actions of Lefler.

State law prohibits an attorney from initiating any conversation with a juror about a case unless permission is given by the judge in the case beforehand.

Steiner and Limberopoulos' contempt charge is a second degree misdemeanor, according to Steve Plotnick, chief trial attorney for the Seminole County State Attorney's Office.

Soviet Vessels Bump Two U.S. Navy Ships In Disputed Waters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two smaller Soviet warships deliberately bumping two U.S. Navy vessels in the Black Sea waters is the latest test of wills between the two navies over disputed waters, Navy officials say.

The Soviet ships Friday "attempted to shoulder" the U.S. ships out of the way after radioling, "Soviet ships have orders to prevent violations of territorial waters. I am authorized to strike your ship with one of ours," Capt. Jerry Flynn said.

The Navy's deputy director of strategic plans and policy told a Pentagon news conference the U.S. vessels only responded by maintaining course and speed.

But, a Navy spokesman said after the news conference that the first U.S. ship radioed back, "I am engaged in innocent passage consistent with international law."

The Soviet Ministry of Defense in Moscow said the U.S. ships had violated the Soviet border by entering within four miles of the Crimean coast and "dangerously maneuvered" in Soviet territorial waters.

Bush Plays Down Haig Power

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush, locked in a tight battle and needing a win in the New Hampshire primary, is arguing that Alexander Haig's decision to withdraw from the presidential race and support Sen. Robert Dole won't matter.

The vice president was once a solid favorite to win the Granite State's first-in-the-nation primary. But, three days before the voting, he now finds himself in a neck-and-neck struggle with Dole, whose strong win in the Iowa caucuses boosted his campaign.

The vice president's cause wasn't helped Friday when Haig, an Army general and former NATO commander, abandoned his campaign in the midst of a New Hampshire snowstorm and threw his backing to Dole, the Senate GOP leader.

Bush downplayed the maneuver, noting that given the low level of Haig's support, he did not believe the tactic would "make one iota of difference."

Reagan, Mexican Head To Meet

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan traveled west Friday to make his debut on the 1988 campaign circuit in California and for a meeting Saturday in Mexico with President Miguel de la Madrid.

With the start of the weekend of campaigning before the New Hampshire primary, Reagan, who arrived at midday, was set to open his own election-year political schedule by raising money for the California Republican Party.

The discussions Reagan and de la Madrid hold at a hotel overlooking the blue waters of the Pacific are expected to skirt areas of controversy that have strained U.S.-relations in the past, and instead, be marked by expressions of goodwill.

Guest Suing Motor Inn After Robbery, Attack

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford Inn is being sued by a St. Johns County resident who was attacked and robbed while a guest at the business in 1984. The man claims the inn didn't provide the proper, trained security to prevent the attack.

Robert E. Hunter, 61, of Rt. 13, Box 1004, Lake City, checked into the Cavalier Motor Inn on U.S. Highway 17-92 on Nov. 24, 1984. Hunter was in town to conduct business.

Hunter claims that after he checked into his room, #133, two women knocked on his door. The women wanted to know where "Pete" was and where they could find "the party," according to Hunter.

Hunter directed the women to the front desk for the information they said they wanted. He said that after they left two men knocked on the door looking for the same information, so he also told them to inquire at the front desk.

Hunter then claims a woman with a 4 or 5-year-old girl knocked on his room door and told him she wanted to speak to him. He said he told her he wasn't going to leave the room, so she left the area.

After informing the motel employee he was nervous and concerned for his physical safety because of the strangers that kept coming to his room door, Hunter said the desk clerk told him he would send a maintenance employee to his room to "check out the situation."

Hunter said he waited for an hour, but the employee never showed up.

At approximately 9 p.m. that night Hunter said he left the room to place some personal possessions in his car. When he returned to his room he claims he locked the door, but two men came in through the door and attacked him.

The men apparently used a key to enter the room.

Hunter was robbed of $1,060 in cash, according to Sanford Police Department reports of the crime.

The suit seeks in excess of $5,000 in damages from the inn because it didn't offer an employee trained as a security guard for Hunter's protection. Once the desk clerk told Hunter they would send an employee to check out the situation, the motel took it upon itself to protect their guest, according to his Orlando attorney, Richard I. Wallsh.

The suit also charges that a safe deposit box wasn't provided for Hunter to place his valuables in while he was guest.

Youth Given Year-Plus In Auto Death

A 17-year-old Longwood youth was given 325 days of house arrest for his part in the accidental death of a teenage girl last year.

Michael James Foss, 17, pled no contest in answer to charges of culpable negligence in connection with the Sept. 7, death of 13-year-old Jennifer Dyke. Foss was teaching Wanda Lynn Seymour to drive when their car went out of control and ran over Jennifer. He was also charged with permitting a minor to drive.

Seminole Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. also ordered Foss to write a letter of apology to Jennifer's family. He said that writing the letter would probably be the hardest thing Foss would ever have to do.

Foss was also ordered to repay Jennifer's family for expenses relating to her death.

As part of the sentence Eaton told Foss he would have to get counseling from a mental health professional.

The accident occurred after the 1977 Camaro that Seymour was learning to drive jumped a curb and ran into the yard of a house at 661 Pheasant Drive. The car then ran over Jennifer, who was sitting about 20 feet inside the yard with a boy. The other youth managed to safely jump out of the car's path, uninjured.

Seymour is charged with manslaughter as a result of Jennifer's death from internal injuries. She's expected to appear before Eaton next week.

Biker Jumped, Wallet Taken

A Sanford man was attacked while riding his bicycle at 1:15 a.m. Friday, and his attackers took his wallet, according to Sanford city police.

Police also are investigating the theft of an automobile belonging to Andy Lee, 38, of 573 Andrews Road, Sanford.

Wesley W. Harris, 55, of 97 Redding Gardens Apartments, told officers that he was riding his bike in the vicinity of Park Avenue and First Street, when two unidentified males attacked him, hitting him in the face and head. He told police the two men forcibly took his wallet, which contained $160, and fled toward Sanford Avenue.

The missing car apparently was taken from a parking lot at 2972 Orlando Drive.

"Our new insulation supports my puttering and then some. The surprising thing is that FPL paid for part of it."

Not surprising at all. FPL is encouraging everybody to manage their energy efficiently because lowering peak energy demand delays the need for new power plants — an expense everyone must share.

By insulating your ceiling, or adding to your existing insulation, you'll use less air conditioning. And you'll lower your bills as you lower your demand for electricity.

We'll send out an energy specialist to advise you on how much insulation you need. We'll even pay for part of the work.

Four Demonstration Sports Supplement Medal Events

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Curling, disabled skiing, freestyle skiing and short-track speed skating — demonstration and exhibition sports at this year's Winter Games — could one day become Olympic fixtures alongside hockey and skiing.

But Ray King-Smith, chairman of the Calgary Olympic curling competition, believes that day is not near for his sport.

"Technically, there isn't a reason, but politically, it isn't going to happen," King-Smith said. "There's too much strength in the Eastern bloc nations. Until they develop the sport more in the Eastern bloc nations, they won't recommend the sport to the IOC (International Olympic Committee) for medal status."

The slim chance of success for permanent admission hasn't stopped the curling group from trying to impress IOC members.

"It's up to us to maintain a good strong political lobby, put on a good show and hope like heck we can get them out to watch next week," King-Smith said.

There can be other factors in selecting the sports that receive trial status.

"I don't think there's any question that it's the good television ratings. Curling is an excellent TV sport," King-Smith said. "It's decided on the ice by the competitors, without judging. And don't kid yourself, with 16 days, the Winter Olympics needed more sports."

The demonstration events in Calgary all have a strong visual appeal, and there are only 46 gold medals to be awarded in the regular competitions.

Curling has been televised by Canadian networks for decades. Freestyle skiing features spectacular acrobatics and short-track speed skating has been compared to roller derby on ice.

Eight nations are competing for the curling title. Canada won the 1987 men's and women's world championship.

Curling is a popular Canadian sport, often compared to shuffleboard on ice. Two teams of four players compete. Each player throws two 44-pound rocks per end down a sheet of ice.

After all the rocks are thrown, the rock closest to the center of the rings scores a point. The team gets an additional point for every rock that is closer to the center than the closest opponent rock. The game lasts ten ends.

Disabled skiing made its debut as an exhibition event in Sarajevo in 1984. The two disabled events this year are a 5-kilometer cross country race for blind athletes and a giant slalom ski race for below-the-knee amputees.

Thirteen men and five women compete in the giant slalom. There are 15 blind athletes, 10 men and five women, in the cross-country.

Earl Olson, media chairman for the disabled skiing in Calgary, said disabled skiers are hopeful the sport will be eventually included as a regular sport.

"I think that given the opportunity to put on an exhibition and display that the athletes competing are elite, this should go a long way to our ultimate goal, which is inclusion in the Olympics," Olson said.

More Track Athletes Turn To Bobsledding

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Willie Gault is just the latest, far from the first, athlete to turn to bobsledding as his winter sport.

The most notable two-sport man was Eddie Eagen of the United States, who won gold medals as a light heavyweight boxer in 1920 and as a member of the U.S. 4-man bobsled team in 1932.

In recent years, the East Germans have had success in turning track athletes into bobsledders. Among them is Meinhard Nehmer who moved from javelin throwing to the bobsled and won Olympic gold in 1976 and 1980. East German success led Olympic hurdler Willie Davenport to try the sleds and he made the United States team in 1980.

Gault, Chicago Bears wide receiver and member of this year's U.S. team, was a world-class sprinter at the University of Tennessee. Aubrey Jones of the U.S. team played football and ran track at the University of Oklahoma before turning to bobsledding.

And Canadian bobsledder Greg Haydenluck took up sledding three years ago after failing to make the 1984 Summer Olympic team in the decathlon.

Haydenluck and 400-meter hurdler John Graham plan to turn from the icy track to the cinder track and compete in both the Winter and Summer Games in 1988.

"If I can make the Olympic standard, get out of the bobsledding on the 28th (of February), get into track, then maybe," Haydenluck said.

Much of the success in bobsledding is determined by the start, when the competitors push the sled the first 50 meters of the course. To get a better start, coaches are turning to better athletes.

"Not just the versatile athlete, the faster one as well," said Haydenluck, a driver in both the two-man and four-man events. "I keep on Ben (star Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson) all the time, but he just won't do it."

While both track and bobsledding require speed, Haydenluck says there are few other similarities.

"They're so different, it's hard to compare," he said. "Obviously, I'm doing better in the bobsled."

Haydenluck finished 12th in both the two-man and four-man bobsled World Championships last year in St. Moritz, Switzerland and was the national champ in each event.

"The two-man is harder to drive, but that's where our best results are," he said. "I think our two-man sleds are a little more competitive from a design standpoint."

The transition from track to bobsledding can be precarious. An error in track is just a lost race. In bobsledding, rushing down an icy course at 60 mph, an error can be fatal.

"The first few times, you don't know what you're doing, you're just trying to get to the bottom safely," Haydenluck said.

'84 Canada Hero Seeks One Medal

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Entering his fourth and final Winter Olympics, Canadian speedskater Gaetan Boucher has narrowed his goals a bit.

At the age of 29, Boucher is no longer a gold medal favorite. But as he fits a national hero, he would like to bow out of Olympic competition gracefully on his home turf.

He wants very badly to win a medal at the Winter Games. It doesn't even have to be gold. Any color will do.

Boucher became a national hero after winning two gold medals and a bronze at the Sarajevo Olympics in 1984. He won a silver in Lake Placid, and competed as a 17-year old in 1976 in Innsbruck, Austria.

Now he's in his fourth Olympics, battling back from ankle injuries that have curbed his results since 1984.

"Because I knew the problem was related to an injury, I was always looking forward to next year," Boucher said.

Next year has turned to this week, and Boucher said it would be unreasonable for him to duplicate his 1984 glory.

"I would be happy with a medal," Boucher said. "I would have been disappointed in Sarajevo with just a bronze. I was skating very well."

"This year, the difference is there's more people who can win. I don't know if it's tougher, it's always tough to win a gold medal. You could skate very well here and still finish sixth or seventh."

If there will be a dominant skater this time, like Eric Heiden in 1980 or Boucher in 1984, Dan Jansen of the United States is the logical candidate.

"He should get two or three medals," said Boucher.

Boucher has been training with the Canadian team at Calgary's indoor speedskating oval since November. The revolutionary facility is the first completely enclosed oval and most world records are expected to fall during Olympic competition.

The facility removes the sun and wind elements that plague outdoor rinks. Winds slow skaters and the sun melts the ice, also slowing the competitors.

"We skate much better indoors," Boucher said of his Canadian teammates. At the recent world championships in Wisconsin, Canada's results were far below expectations. Boucher committed two false starts in one race and was disqualified from the overall title.

"I would have liked to skate well in my last world championships," Boucher said. "I'm sure most athletes will look at the results of last week and say 'he's out!'"

The ankle injuries have reduced his chances of gaining a medal in the 500-meter event.

"In the 500-meters, the movements are so quick, I don't have time to think about getting my foot on the ice in a correct position," said Boucher.

Some publications have selected Boucher as a likely medalist in the 1000-meter event, traditionally his strongest. But he said that is not his best distance.

"In 1984, I was better in the 1000-meters, for sure," he said. "If I win the bronze in the 1000, I'll win the gold in the 1500. I'm skating much better in the 1500."

This will be Boucher's last Olympics. He'll turn his attention to a marketing career, with one eye on completing his education. He also hopes to spend more time with wife Karin, and their two sons.

Staying with the sport appears to be out of the question. "I'm a skater, not a coach."

Edwards: Lonely Brit On Ski Jumping Circuit

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — The Finns and the Norwegians, kings of the hill in ski jumping, have no such problems. But when you're Eddie Edwards, Britain's only Olympic ski jumper, there are days like this:

His flight to Calgary was delayed and he did not get to bed until 2:30 a.m. Then he discovered his ski bindings were crushed and he had to repair them. By that time he missed his first practice jump and officials refused to change the order.

After practice he was locked out of his room. He looked for help but no one was around. He tracked down a master key but got lost going back to the athletes' village. Finally, the Austrian team gave him a lift.

"Then we came here," Edwards said at his news conference Thursday. "and they wouldn't let me in."

All of which is entirely fitting for Edwards, a 24-year-old bespectacled plasterer who did not even attempt his first mad leap off a ski jump until two years ago.

But 4 1/2 months later he was making jumps at 90 meters, the highest level of competition. Ten months after that initial jump he was on the World Cup circuit. His best World Cup result was 69th last year.

But back home in England, where ski jumping ranks with mud wrestling or baseball in the sports domain, Edwards is now something of a folk hero. "Fast Eddie," he has been dubbed. And "Kamikaze Eddie." He arrived in Calgary to a following that proclaimed him Eddie "the Eagle" Edwards.

"All I ever talked about, dreamed about, thought about was skiing," he said. "I was obsessed with the sport."

He trained with teams from other countries, most recently with the one from the United States. Along the way he would do anything to raise money for ski jumping: shovel snow, baby-sit, chop wood. At times, he survived on practically a loaf of bread a week. And, with the rates unbeatable, he even stayed at a mental hospital in Finland.

"It was so cheap, one pound a night," he said. "It was all I could afford. But I was a bit worried of someone coming to my door with an ax. I had a few sleepless nights."

Still, the prospect of a few whacks from an ax is nothing compared to the exhilaration of a soaring lift into the mountain air.

"When things are going right I feel like I could keep up there for a half hour," Edwards said.

But it all comes at a price. Skiing at treacherous speeds into fickle winds with fogged up glasses, calls for discipline of the highest sort.

"I find out of all the disciplines I've been doing jumping is the most mentally demanding," Edwards said. "I can ski downhill and do things virtually without thinking. But jumping requires so much mental agility."

And when the wind kicks up and skis tangle, terrible things can happen. One time, Edwards bloodied his face, cracked his teeth and broke his jaw. No matter. He wrapped a scarf around his head and kept on jumping.

"When I'm at the top of the 90-meter jump I can think of a million and one reasons not to go through with it," said Edwards, whose girlfriend has given him a small golden boot for good luck. "It looks dangerous and it is dangerous. The next jump could be my last."

Raising a logical question. Does Edwards carry life insurance?

"I don't know," he said. "I better check."

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — The manager of OCO's medical services said Thursday he has received no indication that a continuing strike by Alberta province's nurses would affect health care at the Olympics.

Lane Casement, said that he still expects the aid of all 170 nurses who volunteered.

"There hasn't been any kind of suggestion from the volunteer nurses as to any implication that the strike would affect the Olympic Games," Casement said. "No one has given us any indication that our individual volunteers won't continue to support us."

Casement said that only a large scale emergency, requiring large scale hospitalization could be affected by the strike. The striking United Nurses of Alberta are providing emergency services at most hospitals.

A union spokesman said Thursday that the Alberta Hospital Association and the UNA were closer to a settlement. The nurses began their illegal strike Jan. 25 to back demands for higher wages.

East German Jens Mueller posted the best overall results Thursday in two training runs for men's luge singles. Mueller placed had the fastest time in the second training run, completing the 13 turn course in 47.789 seconds. He had the second best time in the first run. His time of 47.421 trailed Markus Prock of Austria who clocked 47.349 seconds.

Cubs Acquire 'Goose' — Dawson Goes To Arbitration

United Press International
The Chicago Cubs started Friday by going to arbitration with Andre Dawson and ended it by acquiring reliever Rich "Goose" Gossage.

The San Diego Padres sent Gossage and left-hander Ray Hayward to the Cubs in exchange for third baseman-outfielder Keith Morland and shortstop Mike Brumley.

Dawson, who hit 49 homers and drove in 137 runs last season, made a bid for another impressive statistic during a four-hour arbitration hearing.

Dawson is seeking a $2 million contract, which would make him the highest-paid player in Cubs history and set a record for the biggest arbitration award ever. The Cubs have offered $1.85 million for the one-year pact.

The sides presented their arguments before arbitrator Stephen Goldberg, a Northwestern

BASEBALL
University law professor who must reach his decision within 48 hours of the end of the hearing.

Dawson, who batted .287 and won the Gold Glove award emblematic of defensive play, could eclipse Rick Sutcliffe as the highest paid Cub. The pitcher is earning approximately $1.8 million.

Dawson came to the Cubs last March as a free agent from Montreal and agreed to the $500,000, one-year contract with incentives. But after Dawson's MVP season, he and Moss were seeking a $10 million, four-year pact with the Cubs.

The record arbitration award of $1.975 million was given to New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly. Even if Dawson wins the $2 million, that record may not last long as American League MVP George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays is seeking in excess of $2 million.

Gossage, a 36-year-old right-hander, is expected to replace Lee Smith, who was traded to Boston. Gossage returns to Chicago, where he began his career with the White Sox in 1972. He was traded to Pittsburgh in 1977 and developed into one of the premier relievers in the majors.

Bothered by injuries last year, Gossage was 5-4 with 11 saves and a 3.12 ERA in just 40 games.

Morland, 33, belted a career-high 27 homers and had 88 RBI in 153 games for the Cubs last year. He played mostly third base, but can play left and right field and first base as well.

Also, the Philadelphia Phillies announced that All-Star second baseman Juan Samuel agreed to a $1.06 million contract plus bonuses, thereby avoiding arbitration. Samuel, who batted .272 with a career-high 28 homers and 100 RBI in 1987, was due to go to arbitration Monday. He had asked for $1.18 million while the club offered $900,000.

In other baseball news, Los Angeles pitcher Orel Hershiser underwent surgery for appendicitis and will not accompany the rest of the Dodgers' pitchers and catchers to spring training next week; the San Francisco Giants agreed to a contract with first baseman Will Clark; the Cleveland Indians and outfielder Joe Carter avoided arbitration; the Texas Rangers signed outfielders Pete Incaviglia and Oddibe McDowell; and the Houston Astros signed right fielder Kevin Bass to a 2-year contract.

In Los Angeles, Hershiser, 16-16 with a 3.06 ERA last season, is expected to remain hospitalized for three to four days and will not join his fellow batterymen for their trip to Vero Beach, Fla., on Thursday.

We are also having our Budweiser Hall of Fame Tournament this month. For $1 you can qualify while League bowling. If you are high for this area you will represent us in St. Louis and have a chance to bowl with a Hall of Famer for thousands of dollars.

Gary Andrews is our high bowler for the week with a 692. Gary had games of 232, 247 and 213 while bowling on the Willett Oldsmobile Cadillac League Tuesday night. Ed Smith, bowling on the Barbour Brothers League on Monday night, rolled 10 strikes in a row before throwing a six count. He finished with a very nice 286 game. Nice bowling guys.

Some of the bowlers who went to the pro-am tournament in Venice, Fla., bowled very well. Ron Allman rolled a 201-238-254 for a very nice 693. Pat Johnson rolled a 1820226-245, 653, and young Brett Hansen rolled a 212-221-211 for a 644 series. I also hear Garry Rush rolled a 595 and his daughter rolled 120 pins over her average. Congratulations to you all

Bird Three-Pointer Defeats Mavs

United Press International
The Dallas Mavericks had two jobs in the final four seconds against Boston Friday night: deny Larry Bird and Danny Ainge the ball. They couldn't stop Bird.

Bird, who on All-Star weekend won the long-distance shooting competition for the third straight year, sank a 3-point shot to lift the Boston Celtics to a 105-104 victory over Dallas in a game between division leaders.

"We didn't want Bird to be open at the end," MacLeod said. "It was our fault that we left him open. He is the last person you want to leave open at the end of the game."

The Celtics used Danny Ainge, their other long-range shooter, as a decoy, and that fouled up the Dallas defense.

"There was a mixup in communication," MacLeod said. "(Bird) can make it from 50 feet, let alone 25 feet. That's why he is the player he is. We didn't want either Ainge or Bird to get open, because they are their 3-point shooters. Ainge broke open and Sam (Perkins) went over to pick him up, and nobody moved over to cover Bird.

"Bird is the 3-point king, and we knew they would figure out a way for him to get the ball in his hands for the final shot. They called the right play by rushing the ball downcourt and getting the ball to Bird."

Roland Blackman had hit 2 free throws with 19 seconds left, giving Dallas a 103-100 lead. Bird then hit a short jumper before Perkins was fouled with 10 seconds left. He made 1 of 2 free throws, setting up Bird's winning shot from 28 feet at the top of the key.

Pistons 108, Hawks 92
At Pontiac, Mich., Isiah Thomas scored 25 points, including 17 in the first quarter, to move the Pistons within 1-2 games of the first-place Hawks in the Central Division. Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 31 points.

Blazers 120, Nuggets 105
At Portland, Ore., Jerome Kersey scored 34 points and collected a career-high 20 rebounds to lead the Blazers. Alex English scored 37 points for Denver, including 24 in the third quarter. Lafayette Lever registered his seventh triple-double of the season for Denver.

Rockets 112, Clippers 105
At Los Angeles, Akeem Olajuwon collected 24 points and 18 rebounds and Rodney McCray added 13 of his 18 points in a third-quarter outburst that lifted Houston.

Cavaliers 98, Nets 96
At Richfield, Ohio, Ron Harper scored 28 points and Cleveland survived a 13-point third quarter. The Cavaliers converted 35 of 47 free throws compared to 6 of 13 for New Jersey.

Bulls 95, Bucks 93
At Milwaukee, Michael Jordan scored 27 points, including 2 free throws with two seconds left after Jack Sikma of Bucks had made 1 of 2 foul shots with six seconds remaining to tie the score.

Lakers 133, Spurs 132
At San Antonio, Texas, Alvin Robertson missed the second of two foul shots with three seconds remaining, allowing the Lakers to hand the Spurs their fourth straight loss. Los Angeles called back-to-back times-out before Robertson stepped to the foul line with a chance to tie the score.

Pacers 107, Suns 102
At Phoenix, Ariz., Wayne Tisdale scored 18 points to help the Pacers win their fourth straight game. Indiana needed to hold off two late Phoenix challenges before handing the Suns their 12th loss in their last 13 games.

Prep Football Player Dies

FOOTBALL
HUMBOLDT, Tenn. (UPI) — A Humboldt High School football player, paralyzed when he ran into a brick wall with his helmet on after a frustrating loss, died Thursday.

Doug Mansfield, 17, died at the Shepherd Spinal Center in Atlanta. He had been paralyzed since the Nov. 6 accident.

"It was a shock. Reports were that he had been getting worse that he was doing well," Humboldt principal Jim Poter said.

After a last-minute 1-point loss in a district playoff game, Mansfield put his helmet on and ran into a wall. The 5-foot-10, 165-pound noseguard broke his neck, and was paralyzed from the chest down.

Mansfield has been in three hospitals since the accident. He was transferred to the Atlanta hospital about two weeks ago to begin physical rehabilitation.

"Everything was looking good and doing good," said Phillip Hardy, president of the high school booster club. "We thought everything was going great. Actually, we expected him home for graduation."

A community fund-raising effort raised more than $20,000 for Mansfield and his family, Hardy said.

Here's a basketball story that's hard to believe, but it's true...The man who was once voted the greatest basketball player in history was so awkward and clumsy as a youngster that no one wanted him on their team—and he was so little thought of, that many colleges wouldn't give him an athletic scholarship...But he wound up DePaul University—and, amazingly, he turned into the basketball player who was voted the best of all-time in the Associated Press mid-century poll in 1950...That player was George Mikan, one of the first of the great, tall men in basketball...But nobody would have predicted that Mikan would become an all-time great when he started.

One of the strangest bouts in boxing history took place in Newark, N.J., in 1948 between well-known fighters Mike DeCosmo and Laurie Buxton. The 2 fighters were swinging away at each other when the bell sounded, ending the 10th and final round...The referee stepped between them, trying to stop the fight, but the boxers, apparently never hearing the bell, kept swinging. They both simultaneously hit the referee and knocked him out! The fight ended with the 2 boxers on their feet and the referee lying on the canvas! After the referee was revived, he awarded the decision to Buxton.

Lyman improved to 5-12 overall and 3-7 in the SAC while Lake Howell, which had a two-game winning streak snapped, dropped to 6-15 and 2-8.

"The kids were ready and felt they had something to prove tonight," Lyman coach Tom Lawrence said. "They did a good job both offensively and defensively and all nine players contributed to the win."

Radzak poured in a game-high 22 points including 8 of 12 from the field and 6 of 7 from the free throw line. Whittington had his best game to date with a career-high 21 points on 7 of 11 from the floor, including 3 of 4 from three-point range. Whittington also hit 4 of 5 free throws.

Patriots Top Creek, 6-2

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Editor

In the first two games of the 1988 season, Lake Brantley's Patriots have done nothing to tarnish their No. 4 ranking in the Class 4A state poll.

In victories over Daytona Beach Mainland and Port Orange Spruce Creek, Brantley has gotten impressive pitching and solid defense in out-scoring its opponents, 18-2. Brantley has also showed the mark of a good team by seizing the opportunity to score whenever it presents itself.

In Friday night's game at Lake Brantley, four times Brantley received a walk to lead off an inning and the Patriots scored all four times en route to a 6-2 victory over the Creek.

Brantley took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first Friday when Jerrey Thurston led off with a walk, took second on a passed ball, moved to third on Greg Ebbert's groundout and scored on a single by Jimmy Morse.

Spruce Creek tied it with a run in the top of the third but Brantley came back to take the lead for good with two runs in the bottom half. Thurston again led off with a walk, took second on a wild pitch and went to third on Ebbert's groundout. With two outs, starting pitcher Randy Green launched a two-run homer over the centerfield fence for a 3-1 lead.

The Patriots tacked on two more runs in the fourth to make it 5-2. Eddie Zarembo led off the frame with a walk, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on David Czachowski's sacrifice fly. Chris Knutson then walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Thurston's base hit.

Spruce Creek got its second run in the top of the fifth but reliever Jamie Moww closed the door on the Hawks the rest of the way. Brantley then added one more run in the bottom of the sixth. For the third time in the game, Thurston led off an inning with a walk. He then stole second and scored on a single by Morse.

Green pitched the final four innings for the Patriots, struck out seven and walked one. Moww went the last three frames and fanned seven while walking none.

Lady Patriots Trip Lyman, 55-46

Jennifer Tufford and Tracy Brandenburg combined for 27 points to offset the superb performance by Lyman's Shari Siegrist as Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots concluded the regular season with a 55-46 victory Friday night at Lyman High.

Lake Brantley finished the regular season at 8-14 overall and 5-7 in the SAC. Lyman finished at 5-19 overall and 0-12 in the league. Both open play in the 4A-9 District Tournament this Thursday at Daytona Beach Mainland High.

Tufford led the Lady Patriots with 15 points and Brandenburg tossed in 12. Kim Gunderson added eight points, Susan Aspen added six and Gretchen Mull contributed five.

Siegrist pumped in a career-high 23 points to lead Lyman while Dana Garrett added 10 and Tammy Brooks contributed seven.

Lake Brantley jumped out to a 15-5 lead after one quarter but Lyman came back within 28-22 at the half.

Tim Geltz then narrowed the lead to 3-2 with 33:43 to play as he slipped past the Oviedo defense to convert the goal. Geltz had several other opportunities but Hoffman played a superb game and stifled the high-scoring Hornet.

"Jeff Hoffman had a great game, he stopped Geltz three or four times when he had broke through our defense," Jekanoski said. "He knew of Geltz and was up for the task."

The Lions' Scott Walsanen marked Geltz all night and prevented him from scoring on a few opportunities. Walsanen and Rob Seltzer were able to hold the entire Bishop Moore team that was pressuring to score for a 10 minute span after Geltz' goal.

"Scott Walsanen did a great job on Geltz," Jekanoski said. "Geltz did get by a few times, but a player of his caliber will always break the defense sometimes."

Derek Bates put the game away with 8:57 to play. The Lions were attempting to clear the ball from their end and did so after Seltzer sent a pass to Jones. Jones slowly brought the ball up the field and spotted Bates. Bates then took two dribbles and sent a shot right by the Hornet goalie for a 4-2 lead.

Jones contributed on every goal and was a major contributor to Oviedo's defense late in the game as Bishop Moore attempted to get back in the game.

"We were confident coming into the game and felt we could win all along," Jones said. "It was a team effort and we all gave 100 percent, we'll go into our next game confident and give 100 percent then also."

Bates was at sweeper in the first half but was changed with forward Seltzer for the second half. The change paid off as Bates came up with a goal that insured the Lions victory.

"Bates is awesome, and fun to watch," Jekanoski said. "He's a tremendous athlete with unlimited ability. I think he could pick any sport and be great at it. I'm glad he chose soccer."

...Rams

Ramscur. Seven minutes later, Ramscur sent a ball toward the goal that looked like it would go in and Brooks made sure by tapping it in for a 2-0 lead.

Lake Mary added an insurance goal with 10 minutes left to play on a penalty kick by Eric Broennele. Brooks was taken down in the penalty box to set up the PK.

"Lake Howell has been a second half team so we had to come out harder in the second half," McCorkle said. "You get a little scared when you dominate a team and don't put goal the ball in the goal but I figured it would only be a matter of time the way we were attacking tonight."

Lake Howell played some tough defense and goalkeeper Joe Schulman had a good night with 13 saves, but the Rams kept up their relentless attack on offense while playing excellent defense.

The best defensive effort was turned in by Lake Mary's Rod Bitterling who marked high-scoring Lake Howell senior Erik Bird. Bird, who scored 10 goals during the regular season, was held to just one shot in the game.

"Rod (Bitterling) did a great job containing Bird," McCorkle said. "He played physical but didn't foul in the decisive areas of the field. And that was a good thing because Bird is really dangerous on free kicks."

James Noble also gave the Rams a top-notch defensive effort while Bill Governale came off the bench to do a good job marking Lake Howell's Greg Schicker. Senior sweeperback Scott Schmitt anchored the defense with his usual superb performance while Eric Ravndal played a solid defensive game at midfield and Ramscur had an excellent game on offense in serving the ball in close off the left wing.

"They all came to play tonight," McCorkle said. "It was just like last year. They realized that it was time to come together and they all did it at the same time."

Lake Mary will look for more of the same against Winter Park, a team it has had trouble with this season. The Wildcats defeated Lake Mary in penalty kicks early in the season and the Rams won, 2-1, in awful weather conditions the last time the two played.

Caudill Foils Schulz

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Larry Caudill wrested the lead from Karen Schulz with seven laps remaining Friday and held on to win his second straight Florida 200 for cars in the Charlotte-Daytona Dash series, foiling Schulz's bid to become the first woman to win a NASCAR race.

Schulz, who had passed Caudill for the lead on the 71st lap of the 90-lap race, tried to get by him on the 77th lap. She caught him on the backstretch, went high on the track, and the two cars were side-by-side through turns three and four and on into turn one before Caudill pulled ahead.

Schulz was unable to make a move on the final three laps. The second-place finish is the highest ever for a woman in a stock-car event at the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway.

Shawna Robinson, making her first appearance in a stock car, finished one lap down in third place, followed by Fred Turner and Bill Henneey. No woman has ever won a NASCAR-sanctioned race at the national level.

Caudill, driving a Pontiac Sunbird, averaged 124.159 mph, and the 200-mile event took one hour, 36 minutes and 39 seconds. He finished one car length in front of Schulz, who also was in a Pontiac. His share of the $95,110 purse was $16,125, both records for the series.

Schulz, Yorktown Heights, N.Y., was the 1986 rookie of the year in the series for late model production stock cars, the first time a woman had won any type of title in NASCAR history. Last year's event was marred by tragedy when driver Joe Young was killed in a multi-car pileup that involved Schulz, but this year's race was free of accidents, although there were seven caution flags for 20 laps.

Caudill won the 13-race series last year with 2,163 points and seven wins, while Schulz finished eighth with 1,702 points and three top-five finishes.

"We were pretty well evenly matched," Schulz said. "I could run with him, but I couldn't get by him. I tried to get around him on the outside but I couldn't do it."

"The only way left was to try to get him on the outside, Larry knew that too. Then we ran up on lap traffic on the last lap and there was nothing I could do."

Caudill and Schulz were teammates last year with CFC Racing, and Schulz was driving the car Caudill won with last year.

"I almost took her to school too good, it looked like," Caudill said.

Schulz, 22, said she was pleased to become the highest-finishing woman in stock-car history at Daytona, but that second place was not good enough.

"It makes me happy, it helps show the other women out there they should drive," she said. "But I still have one more spot to improve, and that's victory lane."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Michael Waltrip bought Jim Sauter's ride in the Daytona 500 Friday, and will start in the 24th position in Sunday's race. Waltrip had failed to qualify for the race, but his sponsors and the owners of Sauter's car worked out a deal to give Sauter's Pontiac to Waltrip, who also drives a Pontiac.

The car will be painted yellow and sponsored by Country Time Lemonade, but will keep the No. 19 that Sauter uses.
"I got to practice it a little, and it's comparable to the one I have," Waltrip said. "I hope to be competitive. I really hate to do what had to happen. I hate taking Jim's ride away. But we have a contract to have a car in this race, and we had to have one. Fortunately, Jim was nice enough to let me drive this."

Sauter had little comment.

Slower Cars More Dangerous?

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — By slowing the cars at Daytona International Speedway, NASCAR officials have achieved their goal of keeping the fans safe. Some drivers, though, believe the slower cars make for a more dangerous race.

Thursday's twin qualifying races provided their usual amount of high-speed spins and wall-banging, while helping to establish just who has the best cars entering Sunday's Daytona 500. Bobby Allison and Darrell Waltrip won the qualifying races, the fifth qualifier victory for each, and joined polesitter Ken Schrader and Davey Allison as the cars to beat Sunday.

Allison, driving a Miller Buick, finished two car lengths ahead of Rusty Wallace, who was trailed by Schrader, Greg Sacks, Bobby Hill and Morgan Shepherd. Waltrip, in the Tide Chevrolet, held off Dale Earnhardt and Davey Allison. Terry Labonte finished fourth in the second race, followed by Lake Speed and Sterling Marlin.

Cars running at Daytona must use one-inch restrictor plates on the carburetors, which reduce horsepower and therefore slow the machines. The plates were ordered installed at Daytona and Alabama International Motor

Rear Cars In Twin 125s Qualify For Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — The cars that started at the rear of the field in both 125-mile qualifying races Thursday ended up earning a spot in Sunday's Daytona 500. Rick Wilson started 35th in the first qualifying race and finished seventh in an Oldsmobile, while Connie Saylor started 34th in the second race and finished 15th.

Wilson will start in the seventh row Sunday, while Saylor will start in the 15th row. Wilson had to start at the back of the field after he wrecked his original car in practice.

"Everything worked well," said Wilson, of Bartow. "I said before the race Speedway after Bobby Allison nearly drove into the stands at Talladega, Ala. last spring.

After winning Thursday, Bobby Allison repeated what many other drivers had said before the races — by traveling slower, some drivers would feel more in control and take more chances. The slower speeds also bunch cars closer together, making a mistake by one driver a potential multi-car accident.

"The slower speeds have helped to make some guys feel like they are more in control and more mature, and those kinds of things probably contributed to the spins we saw today," Allison said.

In an accident in the first race, Bobby Wawak suffered a fracture of a back vertebra, but was listed in good condition at Halifax Medical Center.

The worst accidents occurred in the second race. J.D. McDuffie received second-degree burns over 15 percent of his body, mostly on his hands, when his car caught fire after colliding with Ralph Jones's vehicle.

Ten laps later, Cale Yarborough spun out trying to pass Waltrip and started an incident that involved eight other cars. Waltrip said the reduced horsepower has cut a driver's ability to recover from a spin.

"You just don't have the power for the car to get a little loose," he said. "There's just no recovery time."

The race marked the 15th career victory for Allison at Daytona, and he led for 12th for Waltrip. Each earned $23,000, and Waltrip led his race all 50 laps. Allison averaged 130.966 mph in the 12-mile race, to 133.889 mph for Waltrip.

For all the talk about slower speeds, Waltrip said he believes people are forgetting just how fast the cars are moving. Schrader's pole-winning speed was 193.823 mph.

"We're used to 210 mph and we're going 190 mph right now, so that's still pretty fast," he said. "It's not like we're going at a turtle's pace or here."

Also scheduled to fend the news conference is Richmond's attorney, Barry Slotnick of New York. Richmond missed most of last year with pneumonia and NASCAR doctors refuse to give him clearance to drive until he provides his complete medical records from that illness.
Richmond has agreed to hand over the full records and because of the dispute, probably will not drive in Sunday's Daytona 500. He already missed the Busch Clash, run last Sunday.

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — J.D. McDuffie, injured in a fiery crash in Thursday's twin qualifying races, was in improved condition Friday at Halifax Medical Center. He was still listed in serious condition because he is in the intensive care unit for observation of his lungs.

The burns on his face are expected to heal without scarring, doctors said, while his hands, which suffered the most severe burns, possibly will have permanent scars. If McDuffie continues to improve, he will be moved to a private room Saturday.

Bobby Wawak, who suffered a fractured vertebra in one of Thursday's races, is listed in satisfactory condition.

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Karen Schulz's second place finish in Friday's Florida 200 for Charlotte Daytona Dash cars overshadowed a fine performance by Shawna Robinson, who finished third in her first stock car race. Robinson is a former bobtail truck racer, and she finished one lap behind winner Larry Caudill Friday in a Pontiac.

"This was the first time I ever raced in a car," Robinson said. "There was a 6,000 pound difference from what I'm used to racing, and cars are easier to drive. Trucks are so big and loose in the steering, I'm happy for my first time out. I only learned to drift today, and it was fun."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — A.J. Foyt was black flagged at the start of one of last year's twin qualifying races for passing before the green flag.

This year, the volatile Houston resident said he went into the race with good intentions, but saw other drivers passing him before the green flag — and not getting penalized.

"Talk about black flagging me last year on a flying start," said Foyt, who finished ninth in the first race. "Guys jumped out of line before the green flag. If that's the way they want to do it, that's the way A.J. will race on Sunday."

AUTO RACING

I would either look like a hero or a clown. Fortunately, everything worked out. I ran well, and we've got some left Sunday. We didn't want to run hard today, it's the last car we have here."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Bill Elliott, the polesitter the past three years in the Daytona 500 and a two-time winner that span, will start 31st Sunday. He did not complete a lap Thursday after experiencing transmission troubles at the start of the race.

"The transmission broke when we hit third gear on the start," the defending Daytona 500 champion said. "We're going to be starting farther back than I'd like, but we probably would have started around there anyway. We've got some work to do before we'll be ready for Sunday. I just don't feel like I have the combination I need."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Dale Earnhardt will never be satisfied with anything less than victory. The two-time defending Winston Cup champion finished second behind Darrell Waltrip in the second of Thursday's twin qualifiers.

one car length back, and was upset.
"We ran second, and that's no good," said Earnhardt, who will be trying for his first Daytona 500 win. "We learned a little bit out there today, and we'll be ready Sunday."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Greg Sacks has only one Winston Cup victory, and it came in the 1985 Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway. He had an impressive showing Thursday, finishing fourth in the first twin qualifying race, going the whole way without a pit stop.

Geoff Bodine (No. 5) drew the pole for last week's Busch Clash but wound up blowing the lead late in the race. Dale Earnhardt

(No. 3) went on to win. Both drivers will look for good performances in Sunday's Daytona 500.

backstretch during Grand National practice at Daytona International Speedway Friday, possibly knocking Standridge's car out of Saturday's Goody's 300.
"We were moving up behind Bobby (Allison) and (Geoff) Bodine on the backstretch apron," Petty said. "We weren't even up to speed yet, just warming up. All of a sudden, here comes the No. 47 car backwards. He hit me in the tail just like a baseball bat."

Petty's car was not severely damaged.
"All of a sudden, my back got loose and came around on me," Standridge said. "Next thing I knew, I was into Kyle. I think we can fix it, if we can find some parts, I'm not hurt."

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) — Tim Richmond finally is ready to tell his side of the story. He has scheduled a news conference for 10 a.m. EST Saturday to discuss the rumors, developments of the last week.
Richmond was suspended last weekend, then reinstated Monday, after first failing, then passing a drug test administered by NASCAR.

Princeton Creates Ivy League Logjam

United Press International
Princeton routed Dartmouth Friday night, handing the Big Green their first Ivy League loss of the season and causing a virtual three-way tie for first place in the conference.

Bob Scrabbs scored 23 points to pace the host Tigers to a 66-43 victory. Princeton improved to 13-5 overall and 5-1 in the league, percentage points behind the Big Green and Cornell for first place in the league. Dartmouth fell to 14-5 and 6-1.

Mike Millane scored 19 points to lead visiting Cornell to an 86-78 triumph over Brown. Cornell improved to 12-7 and 6-1. Brown lost its 10th straight game and fell to 4-15 and 0-7.

Scrabbs scored 10 points and Dave Orlandini added 6 to spark a 20-6 spurt for Princeton in the first half. The Tigers led 32-15 at intermission. Scrabbs converted 10 of 13 shots from the field, including 3 of 4 from 3-point range. Jim Barton scored 10 points for Dartmouth.

At Providence, R.I., the lead changed hands seven times in the first half before Cornell went ahead to stay. 29-17 with 6:18 left on a jumper by James Paul. Cornell scored 14 straight points and took a 38-27 lead with 2:32 to go in the half. The Big Red led 43-35 at halftime.

In other Ivy League games, Pennsylvania downed Harvard 83-79 in overtime and Yale topped Columbia 59-56.

In a pair of Western Athletic Conference games, New Mexico defeated San Diego State 93-85 and Texas-El Paso dumped Hawaii 65-48.

At Albuquerque, N.M., Charlie Thomas scored 28 points and Hunter Greene added 21 for New Mexico. The Lobos improved to 18-6 overall and 6-5 in the WAC. The Arceus, led by Rodney Hawkins and Tony Ross with 23 points each, dropped to 9-12 and 2-7.

At El Paso, Texas, Chris Blocker scored 24 points to help the Miners improve to 7-4 in the WAC and 18-6 overall. Hawaii dropped to 1-8 in the league and 2-18 overall.

Ice Anglers Seek Living 'Fossils'

United Press International
Hundreds of anglers sit patiently in darkened shanties, spears poised as they peer through 3 by 5 foot holes in the ice, working a decoy, trying to entice a behemoth, prehistoric fish.

Nearly every winter, at least one lake sturgeon weighing over 100 pounds is hauled out by a spear fisherman.

"Sometimes they'll yell for help and you'll get fishermen from nearby shanties running over to help pull it out of the hole," said Dan Folz, longtime area fish manager for the Department of Natural Resources' Oshkosh office, which manages the unique fishery on nearby Lake Winnebago.

Since 1930, the lake has held an annual spearing season for sturgeon and each year an average of 8,000 fishermen purchase special licenses to go after a fish that may be one in a lifetime trophy.

The season opened Feb. 13 and runs through March 1. Licenses had to be purchased before the start of the season.

"We have the only major fishery for lake sturgeon in North America," said Folz, who has managed the program for the last 15 years.

"Actually, what the people are starting to call me is the living fossil," he said, laughing. "They call the sturgeon the living fossil and now that I've been around so long, they're starting to call me the same thing."

But the description is appropriate for the sturgeon, which has changed little in appearance since prehistoric times. A male fish does not even spawn until it is 15 years old and then only makes the spawning run every other year. Female fish do not spawn until they are 20 years old and then only lay eggs once every five years.

For those reasons, the annual fishing season on Lake Winnebago is unique because the closely monitored event has been held successfully for more than 50 years without harming the fragile balance of nature.

Folz said spear fishermen are allowed to harvest only one fish and it must be over 45 inches. The fish must immediately be tagged and then registered at a DNR station, where biologists record the information.

"Since we imposed the 45-inch limit in 1974, the average harvest has always been 55 to 56 inches, which indicates there is no overharvest taking place," Folz said.

He said the lake has an estimated adult population of 25,000 sturgeon, which are fish 45 inches or more in length.

"The longest-living fish we have recorded (at Lake Winnebago) was a 180-pound fish speared one year that was just over 80 years of age," Folz said. "But the longest-living sturgeon recorded was in Canada and that was 152 years of age."

Although the average fish speared each year is about 40 pounds, the lake holds some real monsters, he said.

"Almost every year, there are 100-pound-plus fish harvested. In the past, we have had a 156-pounder, and 159-pounder was taken the year before last. There still are some very big fish, well over 100 pounds.

One's Trash Is Another's Treasure

Volunteerism Takes A Bow In Operation Of Charitable Thrift Shop

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford's Florence Gilmartin is awash in treasures and trash at the helm of the new All Souls Thrift Store that opened in January at 2589 Sanford Ave.

Gilmartin said she's not in the project alone. "It's the people that make it possible," she said. And that includes about 30 volunteer storekeepers as well as those who donate and buy the recycled goods.

Although the project was developed by All Souls Catholic Church, Gilmartin said it's an independent effort, which is also financially independent. "We don't give any monies to anybody," she said.

Other area churches also provide goods and assistance to the thrift shop, which Gilmartin said is intended in part to fill the gap left by the suspension of operation of the Christian Sharing Center in Sanford where the needy could get free clothing and food.

The new project, Gilmartin said, is also a source of free food and clothing for the needy who are referred for assistance by local ministers. The new shop has already earned enough profit to cover expenses for January's operation. And Gilmartin said, profits will be recycled back to the needy. Food and other necessities of life will be bought with the earnings and will be available as needed.

Shoppers, who pay nominal charges for household items, clothing, toys, jewelry, nicknacks and even bicycles, can grab bargains, which Gilmartin said prove the axiom "One man's trash is another's treasure." Even "antiques" and collectibles turn up from time to time, and Gilmartin said, keepers of other shops check out her stock for finds.

The All Souls Thrift Store, located next door to the Florida Driver's License Bureau on Sanford Avenue, is open weekdays and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. It's a part-time job for Gilmartin, who said there isn't anything that she does there that the other volunteers can't do just as well. However, she is committed to heading the operation for one year.

This isn't Gilmartin's first venture as operator of a charitable thrift shop. "I had the first sharing center in Sanford. I was coordinator for the Christian Sharing center and coordinated all volunteers when it opened in 1977," said 62-year-old Gilmartin. She has worked in church thrift stores since 1971 when she volunteered to assist in the first such shop operated by the Diocese of Orlando.

Such operations, she said, give people the opportunity to buy things they couldn't afford if they had to pay full price.

Gilmartin, who moved to Sanford in 1954 with her late husband, Eugene, said they moved to Florida because they believed rumors that "it was cheap to live in Florida," and they wanted to make it on her husband's pension. He lost his sight in the war, she said.

In Florida, Gilmartin, the mother of eight sons, with six surviving, kept her job with the telephone company. Her sons, she said, "weren't just children. These were boys!" And in rearing her sons, Gilmartin became very involved with the Boy Scouts of America. At one time she was den mother for two Cub Scout groups, one met in the morning and one in the afternoon. That was too much even for Gilmartin.

Now she is the grandmother of eight and five of those children are girls, which Gilmartin said, brought a major change to the family. Her first granddaughter was the first Gilmartin girl to be born to the family in 85 years, she said.

Gilmartin's husband died in 1977 and in 1979 she began taking courses at Seminole Community College. From there she went on to the University of Central Florida. She majored in education as a media specialist and earned her bachelor's degree in 1983.

At UCF Gilmartin, a native of Queens in New York City, proved she was made of stern stuff. Attending UCF at the same time was her daughter-in-law, Kathy, the wife of her son, Brian. Kathy, Gilmartin said, suggested that Gilmartin sign up for a body development course, one in which all who completed the class were assured of receiving an A. "I graduated as a B student. I wanted an A," she said, so Gilmartin signed up for the class that put her at the age of 58 into a triathlon.

Her competition was half her age, and Gilmartin couldn't stay up on a bicycle, but she managed to complete the bicycling round of the triathlon without crashing until she rolled to the finish and toppled. The fall came after a six-mile jog and six more miles on the bicycle.

She was battered and bruised, but refused to give up and tend her wounds. She told supporters that the chlorine of the half-mile swim would serve as her first aid. Besides, swimming was her strong point. When she finished ahead of just one of her competitors her instructor handed her a beer. "It was the best beer I ever had," she said.

The course also required her to compete in non-college sports event. That took Gilmartin into the Golden Age Games where she won two medals in swimming, she said.

She has slowed her competitive pace a bit since then, and said her main exercise now is aerobics and walking. "I park far away and walk to wherever I'm going," she said.

Gilmartin believes it's important to keep in shape. She also opts for an all-around active lifestyle. "I believe if you don't use it you lose it. That goes for your brain, too."

"There's so much to do, I think when you stop making plans you start dying. Maybe I won't fulfill every dream, but I have the fun of planning them."

Gilmartin enjoys reading and traveling. She is also a genealogy buff and sometimes those interests intertwine.

She has traveled to Ireland to trace her family roots, and has met relatives there. She said they write her and ask when she's coming home again. "I am home," she said.

She has also visited New Zealand and has made a point of traveling on every type of train available to compare the rides. Her favorite was a sleeper ride to Wellington during which she was treated to morning tea and a newspaper.

Trains aren't the only mode of travel Gilmartin has willingly tested. She took a bargain bus trip to Salt Lake City, Utah. She stayed in a youth hostel there and for six weeks

Sanford Airport Engineer Flies Up

LaZenby Named Accredited Executive

J. S. "Red" Cleveland, accredited airport executive and director of aviation, Sanford Airport Authority, announces that Mack LaZenby, assistant director of aviation, has recently completed all qualifications for the title of accredited airport executive and has been so designated by the American Association of Airport Executives.

Having been accepted as a professional member and designated by the association, LaZenby joins a select group, according to Cleveland, AAE, founded in 1928, is made up of over 2,500 members throughout the United States and 12 foreign countries who are responsible for the managing and operation of the nation's public airports. At present, there are only 245 airport managers throughout the country who have earned this coveted designation.

In 1954, AAE adopted a professional standards accreditation program and since that time no one has been awarded the "Accredited Airport Executive" status without meeting the requirements established by the board of directors and certified by the board of examiners.

The professional membership requirements consist of an original paper (subject of which the Board of Examiners must approve) on some phase of airport management. LaZenby did his thesis on "Benefits of Professional Staffing of General Aviation Airports". He also completed a comprehensive written examination on a level comparable to examinations in other professional fields.

This examination requires the member to demonstrate to the association's Board of Examiners a thorough knowledge of airport management, business administration and general transportation economics. In addition, he also appeared before the board of examiners for an oral examination to demonstrate his knowledge in all areas of airport management.

LaZenby came to Sanford from Blacksburg, Va. in August, 1971, and became the engineer for the City of Sanford. While with the city, he held numerous positions: city engineer, personnel director, director of utilities, chief pilot and director of Sanford Occupational Hazards Program. He also developed and instituted the computer program for the city's utility department.

In addition, he has done various engineering projects for the Airport Authority since June 1972. Some of these projects include acting as resident project engineer for all federally and state funded projects, prepara-

Nutritionist Climbs To Top TV Fashion Reporter

By Melissa Sones
UPI Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When J.C. Penney Co., Hanes Hosiery Inc., The Limited Inc., and Timex Corp., among 15 major corporations, want to promote their products on television, they hire Cindy Piccoli. So do individual TV stations when they want "objective" fashion reporting.

At 36, Piccoli is television's top freelance fashion reporter, a woman who has single-handedly carved a niche in a business that has been slow if not loathe to hire staff reporters to cover fashion.

Piccoli, a former Ford model, incorporated her business, Piccoli & Piccoli Media Marketing Enterprises Inc., in 1986 but began carving that niche in 1977 after outgrowing modeling.

"I really wanted to talk," says Piccoli. "But in those days, models weren't the personalities they are today."

Because her college degree was in nutrition, she started talking about weight control, initially for private clinics.

"The one thing people are concerned about besides clothes," says Piccoli earnestly, "is their weight."

Then came work as a food nutritionist.

Longwood Mayor David Gunter, from left, Dom De Sarno, president of the Sanford-Seminole Chapter of the Deborah Hospital Foundation, Edmund Fasciglia and Casselberry Mayor Owen Sheppard were among the 150 Deborah supporters who attended the Third Annual Dinner Dance Feb. 6 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Sanford. Last year the local chapter raised $22,000 from dues, donations, contributions and Bingo for the Deborah Heart and Lung Center. De Sarno presented awards to the following for their support: Anthony and Teresa Triano, Fasciglia, Connie Tyminski, Al Burbank, Laurette Miller, Jean Storey, Judith Craig, Julius Balckwelder and Joe Liebert. stylist, through a friend, and a segment on the "Do-or-Diet Show" on the Cable Health Network, followed by fashion segments on New York's now-defunct "Saturday Morning" in 1982 because a producer did not want food spots but liked Piccoli.

"For three years I bought every outfit at Bloomingdale's and returned it," she laments. Meanwhile, she moonlighted as a weather-person.

"The whole thing about watching the weather is what-to-wear," she says.

By 1985, Piccoli desperately "wanted to be wanted by the TV stations" so she pitched a fashion tape to the producer of "Hour Magazine" in Los Angeles and to "The Morning Show" in New York. After landing them, the well-paying corporate clients followed.

"Hour Magazine said, 'We're cutting down on our budget,' so I went to J.C. Penney and said, 'This is what I've been doing. I need help. I need you to pay for air-time and I'll get you on television.'"

Just two years later, Piccoli's media schedule could rival a presidential candidate's: 90 stations in 35 cities in 1987. She is away from her family five days a week. Feb. 12-18, for example, she's working "The Wil Shriner Show" (Western wear), "The Morning Show" (bathing suits), four Florida stops for Hanes, and a Macy's seminar on accessories in New Jersey.

Piccoli is brilliant on TV. She has all-American non-threatening blonde good-looks. Also, Piccoli takes a strong stand against designer clothes, which these corporations and TV stations find attractive.

"Most people cannot afford designer clothes," Piccoli insists. "One of my favorite segments is, 'This Donna Karan outfit is $1,000, the earrings are $100 ...'" she says, imitating her most popular segment. "Who can relate to that?"

That segment, "Designer Look-a-Likes," "has become an income-maker for me," says Piccoli.

"On it, Piccoli tears pages from top fashion magazines and recreates the identical outfits for a fraction of the cost. It is second only to how to dress 10 pounds thinner in popularity with TV producers.

Piccoli gets about $500 for a single TV show, and $750 to $3,000 a day for media tours, which last up to 10 days and usually include three daily TV appearances with free time filled in with radio, print and personal appearances at stores.

Behind the scenes, though, Piccoli is known less for pleasing audiences than for pleasing TV producers who decide whether or not to book her in the first place. It is these relationships that persuade corporations to hire her.

Piccoli also treads a fine line. Sometimes she is a spokeswoman for corporate clients; others, an "objective" fashion reporter. Such a fine line is prohibited in newspaper reporting.

Piccoli says she deals with it by being "up-front" with producers from the start despite the fact that not all let the audience know that clothes shown on the show are provided by certain companies for which Piccoli is a spokeswoman.

"If I'm representing a client," she says, "I ask the television producer, 'What is your policy for on-air credits? How many times can I say J.C. Penney?' Some say once, some twice, some say three times."

"Or I say, 'J.C. Penney has lent me all the clothes and models for this spot. I'm being paid by you. How many times can I mention them?'"

Piccoli is paid by one or the other, she says, but never both.

"It is the responsibility of the TV station to introduce me as representing the client," she continues.

As a fashion reporter, there are other hazards.

"I was on the phone with AM-Los Angeles," she says, "and I pitched them the beautiful legs story and I'm booked for Monday."

Monday, however, she didn't do the show because fashion is less important than just about anything or anyone, among them Jesse Jackson and a drunken driving segment.

Piccoli works from her Manhattan apartment with her husband, Pier. She has two children, whom she says understand that she is away "80 percent of the time."

"Foreigners travel when they're young. American's travel when they get old," Gilmartin observed.

"I like people and I enjoy life. I think you should make the most of every day. Do as much as you can that you enjoy every day," she said.

and traced her family history at a Mormon library, which is the hub of genealogical research.

"There she met young travelers from throughout the world.

Lou Baker Observes 80th Birthday; Bridal Shower Honors Cissy Croslyn

"It was a beautiful party," Lou Baker said about the celebration to honor her on her 80th birthday. "I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of it."

Lou was the excited guest of honor, from 6 to 8 p.m., on Feb. 5 in fellowship hall of the First United Methodist Church. She welcomed the guests wearing a pink chiffon dress enhanced with a corsage of red rosebuds sent to her from friends in Kentucky.

Now in a wheelchair resulting from a stroke in 1972, Lou is still active. "I love to go," she said, "and go whenever I can." But it's different these days since she no longer drives.

Lou recalls moving to Sanford from DeFuniak Springs in 1928 as a bride and is proud that she has been a member of the church since that time. The family moved to the Pensacola area in 1933 and returned to Sanford in 1943.

Lou has two sons, M.E. Baker Jr., Orlando, and the Rev. Robert Baker, Lexington, Ky. She has three grandchildren, Mari McMullen, Joe Baker and Price Baker, and four great grandchildren.

Sanford Senior Citizens Club was organized by Lou who served as its charter president. She has also served as president of the United Methodist Women, American Legion Auxiliary, Seminole High School PTA and Trainmen's Auxiliary. For years she was a volunteer on the information desk at Seminole County Courthouse through the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. She was on the Advisory Board for the Order of the Rainbow for Girls and is a member of Seminole Chapter No. 2 Order of the Eastern Star.

A pink color scheme was used in the party decorations with camellias decorating the tables. Hostesses were Catherine Wheelchel, Frieda Tyre and Ruth Circle of the church. Registering the guests upon arrival were Ann Howland and Virginia Chapman.

Arriving especially for the party were Lou's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. D.D. Hoover of Fort Meyers.

Catherine Wheelchel accompanied the guests who sang a rousing "Happy Birthday" to Lou — one that she will never forget.

Cissy Croslyn was guest of honor Thursday, from 3 to 5 p.m., at a bridal shower at Holiday Inn, Sanford Marina. The hostess was Marti Sensakovic.

Cissy will become the bride of Steve Sensakovic Jr. Sunday, Feb. 14.

A periwinkle, pale yellow and peach color scheme was carried out in the banquet room overlooking the St. Johns River. A garden atmosphere was created in the table decorations including sprays of flowers arranged on beds of springer fern. The centerpiece at the head table of the U arrangement was a low, oblong European bouquet of mixed flowers.

The food included Swedish meatballs, fresh fruit trays of honeydew melon, cantaloupe, strawberries and pineapple, continental cheese trays, fruit punch, tea and coffee.

The bride's corsage of mixed flowers matched the centerpiece and table flowers.

Samantha McDaniel, maid of honor, assisted the bride at the gift table. Debra Sensakovic, the bridegroom's sister, presided over the guest registry.

Other guests included: Charlotte Croslyn, the bride's mother; and Jackie Tompkins, the bridegroom's mother.

Also: Renee Workman, Kitty Legg, Vesta Mahon, Corrine Mahon, Mary Mize, Joetta West, Lois Avant, Freddie Nelson, Beth Nelson, Barbara Hittell, Debbie McCarty, Fran Gill and Dot Waller.

Also: La Vonne Volkmann, Janet Fisher, Martha Posey, Marrita Carl, Robin Muzeka, June Porzig, Jan Fitzgibbons, Bea Williamson, Lyde Lavender, Myra Stewart, Lisa Sillaway, Jo Woodward, Evelyn Cole and Agnes Thomas.

Also: Michelle Croslyn, Tarrle Mahon, Chrystal Mahon, Shelby Mahon, Tara Self, Carol Pickett, Connie Lariviere, Carol Baker, Pam Midgett, Ruby Midgett, Kathy Legg, Lisa Ludwig, Linda Wells, Dara Wells and Betty Marinello.

Seminole County Extension Homemakers were hostesses to the Annual Thank You Luncheon Friday at the Ag Center. This is the annual event when homemakers remember members of the community who have contributed to their organization.

The Sanford-Seminole Art Association is hosting its annual Membership Show, Sunday, Feb. 14, at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. The event is free and open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. A tea will be held from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

The Sanford Moose Club #1851 is celebrating its 100th birthday Sunday, from 1 to 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend the festivities.

Kathrene E. Gross, daughter of Donna Fauver, 410 Kentwood Drive, was among the 145 students at Johnson and Wales College, Charleston, S.C., who made the Dean's List during the winter trimester.

The American Heart Association's fashion show and luncheon Friday at the Sanford Civic Center was something else under the direction of Lisa Malle. General description: very professional, very uptown. More next week.

Dogs Wearing Orange Collars Are Deaf People's Best Friends

DEAR ABBY: Will you do a favor for those of us who have Hearing Ear guide dogs? The public is well aware of Seeing Eye dogs, but not many have heard about dogs for the deaf.

Hearing Ear dogs can be recognized by their bright orange collars and leashes. They are not any specific size or breed—they are just ordinary looking "mutts." However, they are trained to assist deaf persons with sound awareness.

Thus far, 46 states have granted Hearing Ear dogs the same legal rights as those accorded to seeing eye dogs. They are permitted to go into hotels, restaurants, shopping centers, places of entertainment and wherever the general public is invited. They are also welcome to travel on trains, planes and buses.

Abby, please tell your readers that if they see a dog with a bright orange collar and leash to please refrain from irritating looks and remarks. These dogs are trained guide dogs for the deaf.

Dear Abby

MRS. R.B.HANEY, OROVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. HANEY: Thank you for giving me this opportunity to acquaint my deaf readers with this valuable service. For more information about Hearing Ear dogs, one can write to: The American Humane Association, 9725 E. Hampden Ave., Denver, Colo. 80231. And please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope, as this is strictly a non-profit organization. I understand that these beautifully trained dogs are given to those who have no funds.

DEAR ABBY: No complaints. My husband still sends me flowers on Valentine's Day, and our wedding anniversary. This year will be our 40th and I'm only 80. Ha! He still opens the car door for me, and pulls out my chair to seat me at the table.

I am enclosing a nice little message about the value of hugging. It tickled me so much, I sent it out with our Christmas cards. Someone gave it to me and I don't know who originated it, but I think it's worth sharing, don't you?

MRS. ALLEN ELLIOTT, JOPLIN, MO.

DEAR MRS. ELLIOTT: You be lido.

HUGGING

Hugging is healthy: It helps the body's immunity system. It keeps you healthier, it cures depression, it reduces stress, it induces sleep, it's invigorating, it's rejuvenating, it has no unpleasant side effects, and hugging is nothing less than a miracle drug.

Hugging is all natural: It is organic, naturally sweet, no pesticides, no preservatives, no artificial ingredients and 100 percent wholesome.

Hugging is practically perfect: There are no movable parts, no batteries to wear out, no periodic checkups, low energy consumption, high energy yield, inflation-proof, non-fatiguing, no monthly payments, no insurance requirements, theft-proof, non-taxable, non-polluting and, of course, fully returnable.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH

DR. A.W. WOODALL
CHIROPRACTOR—

THE HEALING ART

Have you ever stopped to think about the healing art and what it means? It's not magic, but it IS method. Doctors of chiropractic use the natural health method, based on many decades of scientific observation. Like other branches of the healing arts, chiropractic is both an art and a science.

A normally functioning nervous system is vital to good health. All of the structures and cells in your body depend on impulses carried by your nervous system. When these impulses travel uninterrupted, your organs and cells are able to function normally. But when there is interference, either too much or not enough nerve supply, our tissues and organs cannot function properly.

This may make your body more prone to disease and other bodily ills. The most delicate and important organs of the nervous system are located in your brain and spinal column. Although the spine supports and helps protect these vital nerves, any misalignment may cause interference with the flow of nerve impulses. That's why doctors of chiropractic concentrate in this area.

For Devoted Prayer Band

20 Years Of Answered Prayer

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Religion Editor

Sunday may be a time to sleep late for some, but not for a group of stalwart prayer warriors in Altamonte Springs, who are up before daylight to get down on their knees. Every Sunday at 6 a.m. the dedicated members of the No. 1 City Wide Prayer Band gather at the home of one of the members for prayer and devotionals.

Organized in March 1968 at Williams Chapel Missionary Baptist Church, the prayer band will be celebrating its 20th anniversary with a special service on March 19 at 7:30 p.m. at St. John Missionary Baptist, 309 Longwood Ave., Altamonte Springs. The service is open to the public.

The founder, 82-year-old Mattie Jones is the group's president and attends regularly. With no children of her own, the prayer band members have been her "family."

The prayer band started with only six members and has grown to 26 regular members with attendance sometimes as high as 33. They come from various denominational backgrounds including Baptist, Methodist and Holiness and drive from Winter Park, Sanford and Orlando as well as Altamonte Springs.

Six regular ministers and pastors are part of the group. They are the Rev. Charlie Banks, the Rev. M.P. Epps (who gave the prayer band its name), James Carter, Eric Florence, Otis Robinson, and John Pool. In addition to the dedicated lay men and women who also attend, there are sometimes those who come "standing in the need of prayer" seeking healing, help with marital problems, alcoholism or drug addiction, according to one of the members, Geneva Carter of Winter Springs.

She said some members have to get up at 4 a.m. to get there in time. Breakfast is served after the prayer meeting.

There are prayers for healing, for strength and for the salvation of souls. Mrs. Carter cites a young alcoholic who was "saved" through the prayer band and is now a church deacon. She said a young woman addicted to drugs came to the prayer meeting and through prayer gained strength to get off drugs.

Mrs. Carter said the prayer band has given its members "strength to press on." She said she and her husband wanted very much to have children, but because of physical problems she was unable to and had to undergo a hysterectomy. She said her friends in the prayer group helped her deal with it and two months after her surgery they were able to adopt two little girls, now 5 and 6 years old.

They since have adopted a baby boy, who is now two months old. "The Lord has really blessed us," she said. "By being in the band it helped me control my children the Biblical way. My children love the band which meets in my home on the fourth Sunday. They get up early that day and aren't fussy. My husband started his ministry through the prayer band and he is now associate pastor at St. John MB Church in Altamonte."

Mrs. Carter said one member of the group suffered a tragic loss of a son in 1986 and being in the band gave her strength to face it.

Vice president of the band is Bernice English; secretary, Lillie Pew; and treasurer, Estella Williams, who is Mrs. Jones' sister.

Heavenly Experience Universal

Diane Keaton told an interviewer for Parade magazine that she believes, "Heaven was created because everybody is afraid to die... It's hard to say goodbye to anybody. It's hard to think, 'I won't see my grandmother.'"

As for hell: "If there's a hell, then there's something desperately wrong." She has hit the nail on the head there. But the idea of hell doesn't appeal to her, so she dismisses it by saying, "I don't believe in that kind of punishment."

As for God ("if there is a God"): "I hope he is a nice God for all of us, one that will let us keep our personality."

It would be hard to imagine more muddled or shallow thinking than that. Presumably, Parade magazine was interested in Keaton's views on these higher matters because she had directed a 1987 movie called "Heaven," a collage of various people's ideas about heaven. (It was not a film that very many people went to see.) But the idea of heaven creates enough problems for really first-rate minds without throwing the subject open to actresses.

Saints And Sinners

blems for really first-rate minds without throwing the subject open to actresses.

Heaven and life-after-death have always been largely matters of faith. Now, however, there may be evidence to support the belief in survival after death. Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, a psychiatrist, gained fame with her studies of people who had been clinically dead, were later revived, and told of having visited a place that was "beautiful beyond description."

Among those not fully convinced by Kubler-Ross's findings was Karlis Osis, research director for the American Society for Psychical Research in New York.

The Latvian-born psychologist had studied the evidence for life-after-death, including Kubler-Ross' work. He was impressed by it, but not completely won over. One question kept bugging him: "Is it all wish fulfillment?"

Gallup polls had showed that three out of four Americans believe in life-after-death. Was the brain merely projecting these beliefs onto the screen of the mind at the moment of death?

There was one way to find out. If the people in Eastern countries who have no wish for immortality, who want to get off "the wheel of life" and whose idea of paradise is oblivion — not living forever — if these people should turn out to have the same death-bed visions as people in the West, that would tend to rule out the "wish fulfillment" theory and add weight to the testimony about life after death.

Osis decided to go to India to check out his thesis. What he concluded after interviewing hundreds of medical personnel in India concerning the experience of their dying patients was that there is no difference in the kind of death-bed imagery a person sees — whether he lives in India or the United States.

"The basic death-bed experience cuts across cultural differences," said Osis. "It is the same whether one is Christian, Jew, Moslem or Hindu."

He said the dying, whatever their religious orientation, "see a world of great beauty and harmony." And that was not a finding he was entirely prepared for.

"What the people of the East expect after death is some form of reincarnation," said Osis. "But this is not something they look forward to. Reincarnation to them is like hell is to us. It is a gloomy prospect, not a joyous one."

If the last impressions of the dying are based on their expectation of what awaits them at death, it might have been supposed that those at death's door in India would see visions of frightening proportions.

But that, said Osis, was not true in the majority of cases.

Retiree Builds Chapel

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A retired Pennsylvania contractor says he finally has time to realize his dream to build a chapel at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md. By the year's end, that dream should become a 150-seat reality with an adjoining Navy bell tower.

The Camp David Chapel will be the first religious center at the wooded Maryland retreat. Previously, presidents have attended religious services at nearby Thurston when at Camp David.

But Kenneth Plummer, who came up with the idea, said important decisions are made at Camp David and immediate spiritual guidance could come in handy.

"I felt if there's any place we needed a chapel, we certainly need it up there where the heads of our government meet," he said in a phone interview. "It's a dream of mine. I just thought we needed a chapel at Camp David, and because it was started as a temporary retreat and just kind of grew, a chapel was not a high priority."

Since President Franklin D. Roosevelt had the mountain retreat, "Shangri La," built by the Civilian Conservation Corps in the 1940s, heads of state have visited the heavily wooded retreat free of public view.

The camp's name was changed by President Dwight Eisenhower, who renamed it after his grandson, David Eisenhower.

The chapel project at the Naval Support Facility has been given the go-ahead by Navy Secretary James Webb Jr. and the first donation of $1,000 came from President and Nancy Reagan, who say they support the plan.

The chapel, expected to cost $750,000, is to be built exclusively with private donations, Plummer said, except for a bell for the structure's tower.

"We will have a large Navy bell, that's the one thing I've asked the government to give me," he said.

The structure will be made of rough oak siding with a cedar shingled roof, in keeping with the other buildings at the camp nestled in the Catoctin Mountains. The eight-sided structure will have a rectangular sanctuary, a small annex and stone patio.

"The chapel will be right in the immediate area of the lodging, you could say within a block from the president's housing," Plummer said.

The services will be interdenominational, with Navy religious personnel administering the services.

A Chambersburg, Pa., architectural firm, Noelker and Hault Associates, have been hired to finalize the plan.

Donations can be made to the Camp David Chapel Fund, 930 Leidig Drive, Chambersburg, Pa., 17201.

2 Cute Yuppies Grow Up In A Hurry In 'Baby'

IN MOVIE THEATERS SHE'S HAVING A BABY (PG-13) Writer-director-producer John Hughes, having plumbed the purported depths of teenage angst in movies like "Sixteen Candles" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off," now attempts to bring a pair of noble young characters into the adult world.

What's new in movies and video Robert DiMatteo

The movie makes a provocative connection - however politically specious - between the last days of Baby Doe Duvalier's dictatorship in Haiti and the darker forces of voodoo. In the film, Tonton Macoute chief Dargent Petraud (Zakes Mokae at his most baleful) is the chief pusher of the pernicious powder.

Is there a person alive who isn't terrified by the thought of being buried alive? Craven's movie preys entertainingly on that fear. Throughout, the Haitian locale (actually, partly the Dominican Republic) provides an iridescent exoticism that has been well-captured by John Lindley's rich-toned, active camerawork. Cathy Tyson (the enigmatic prostitute in "Mona Lisa") co-stars effectively. GRADE: 3 stars.

Like a lot of young men of his time, Jake suffers from a Peter Pan complex. Scared of adulthood, he nevertheless takes the plunge. Jake may long for a career as a writer, but he follows the more practical route, accepting a cushy job in advertising. Meanwhile, he is plagued by all manner of fantasies, including the recurring one of a dream nymphlet who shows up tauntingly at the most inopportune times.

Several strenuous fantasy sequences, a few maturation lessons and one traumatic breech birth later, Jake comes to his senses. This being an ultra-romantic movie, he gets to have his career as a writer too. Kristy - about whom the movie has had only a secondary interest - gets a baby. So much for the film's sense of equality and liberation.

Kevin Bacon and Elizabeth McGovern are delightful together: They give the material more invention and warmth than it merits. And, as Jake's best buddy, a cad of a ladies' man, Alec Baldwin has the kind of charisma that movie stars are made of. GRADE: 2 1/2 stars.

THE SERPENT AND THE RAINBOW (R) Director Wes ("Nightmare on Elm Street") Craven's tale of mystical terror is based on a non-fiction book by Wade Davis, and it makes for a skillful, suggestive and gory thriller. Bill Pullman, who looks like a hip Jeff Daniels, stars as a Harvard anthropologist investigating a Haitian powder thought to be able to transform people into zombies (they only seem dead).

down-home New Orleans style. Wild romance blooms. GRADE: 3 stars. THE LAST INNOCENT MAN (not rated) Lorimar, $79.95. Here's a real "sleeper" that was made for HBO in 1987. A haunting little thriller beautifully directed by Roger Spottiswoode ("Under Fire"). It stars Ed Harris as a top attorney who is tired of winning acquittals for people he knows are guilty. The seductive Roxanne Hart co-stars as a femme fatale who convinces the jaded Harris to take on her estranged husband as a client. There's also a brilliant, chilling supporting performance by David Suchet. GRADE: 3 1/2 stars.

(Film grading: 4 stars - excellent, 3 stars - good, 2 stars - fair, 1 star - poor).

White Knights Can Really Get Your Irish Up

By MARK R. HOROWITZ
For United Press International

Far from subsiding, "takeover fever" continues to flourish as companies fall prey to corporations and individuals seeking to buy, acquire, or sell off conquered one.

The pattern has become familiar: a person or group acquires a percentage of stock in a company, soon seeks a large representation on the corporate board and eventually takes to the streets to convince stockholders to part with their shares at an inflated price to complete the conquest.

The term "white knight" has come to mean a hero of sorts who rushes to the rescue of a besieged company, offering enough money to save off an unfriendly takeover with one of his own — a friendly one.

Yet one wonders how friendly the white knight will remain once the battle is won. Throughout history, cities or peoples being attacked have sought relief from any quarter willing to risk life and limb to effect a rescue. Sometimes the rescuer is anything but a white knight, with the operating principle simply being "the enemy of my enemy is my friend".... at least for now.

In 13th-century Ireland, such a situation occurred that was to have a profound impact well into our present century. And the calamity took place by invitation.

Dermot MacMurrough, King of Leinster, was not a very nice man, oppressing both noble and common man with equal vengeance. Yet he owned one-fifth of Ireland and wielded enormous power. One day, according to the Norman-Welsh writer Giraldus Cambrensis (c.1146 - c.1223), Dermot ravished the wife of O'Rourke, King of Meath, while her husband was on an expedition.

The author, a churchman who blamed women for "almost all great disasters (that) have fallen upon the world," noted that O'Rourke sought revenge for this wicked violation.

He gathered support from neighboring kingdoms and attacked Dermot. The battle did not go well for the wicked king.

Giraldus said that "after many sharp and unequal engagements with the enemy, (Dermot) finally, as though resorting to the last means of safety, took ship and fled for protection."

Dermot needed a white knight rather badly — so badly that he visited his ancient enemy England — to seek support. The

Inspiration Birthed Under Lincoln's 'Shadow'

Caskey Packs History Into Dance-Dramas

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

History, drama, dance and poetry are the consuming interests of her life. And after 15 years of contributing her talents and abilities to the city of Sanford, she is considered invaluable and indispensable to many in the city.

Her name is Mildred Caskey. For 14 years, she served as part-time curator at the Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum. And she has written several historical ballet/dramas—the latest being "We, The People," which will be presented March 19 and 20, in the lower level at Sanford City Hall. That particular ballet/drama tells the story of the framing of the United States Constitution.

While it could take volumes to write about all of Caskey's pursuits, she has been instrumental in bringing historic ballet/dramas to Sanford, such as the one to be presented next month.

What sparked her interest in history? "I grew up in the shadow of Lincoln, in Springfield, Illinois," she says. Also, at one point she was doing the choreography for Cornstalk Theatre in Peoria, Ill. She explains that one of that theater's summer productions was always historic in nature. That gave her the idea for "Sin and Salvation"—the story of Carrie Nation and her attempts to rid America of saloons and breweries. That production was then presented at the Cornstalk Theatre.

While in Illinois, Caskey had her own ballet company, she says. However, not she but Miriam Rye Wright and Valerie Rye Weld, directors at the Sanford School of Dance, created the choreography for "We, The People."

Caskey says it takes a team to work on such a production—and she has that team. In addition to herself, Wright and Weld, Dr.

Genevieve Richardson and Emma Caskey (no relation), both of Deltona, are invaluable to her team, she says.

Richardson is an authority on period costumes and taught for several years at the University of Illinois, Caskey notes, adding that they did not know each other at that time, although they had mutual friends. "She is marvelous with costumes and colors," Caskey reflects.

Emma Caskey is a music teacher and composes the "continually music" for Caskey's ballet/dramas. "In putting together a ballet, you have to have continuity music that will follow the narrator," Caskey explains. She describes Emma Caskey as having a "versatile imagination."

Wright and Weld, sisters, have a sense of historic movement, which is necessary in designing the choreography, Caskey says.

This team worked together in "River Gold," which tells the story of the history of the St. John's River and of Sanford's founder, General Henry Shelton Sanford.

"Americana," another drama Caskey wrote, is the story of her own great-grandfather and his experiences with the California goldrush. "It concerns his dealings with the Chinese bandits, with the strife and the loneliness he experienced," says Caskey.

In writing a historical drama, "you have to be so careful, so accurate," Caskey says. "As with General Sanford and General DelBary (River Gold), there are so many people who know all about them. And sometimes their descendants may still be living."

She enjoys putting the dramas together. "I happen to be a researcher," she says, adding that much of her research for "We, The People" came from many of her own books.

"We, The People" came about

Her Play Will Get City Funds

"We, The People," to be presented March 19 and 20 in the lower level of Sanford City Hall, will get some funding assistance from the city, city commissioners have decided.

The ballet/drama, written and choreographed by Sanford's own Mildred Caskey, long-time curator at the Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum, tells the story of the writing of the U.S. Constitution.

The city of Sanford will contribute $1,800 for the purchase of materials for and the construction of an 8,200-square-foot stage, and for anticipated electrical costs. The electrical costs are estimated to be about $500.

When the request came up at a commissioner's workshop a few weeks ago, Commissioner A.A. McClanahan said he thought the cost of the plywood was high at $25 per sheet. Since then, however, Parks and Recreation Director Jim Jernigan has found that the reason for the high cost is that the plywood must be smooth on one side, since dancing is to be done on the stage.

Caskey, the writer and choreographer, has also written other dramas, for example, River Gold, the story of the St. John's River, which was presented in Sanford several years ago.

Other costs for "We, The People" will be met by the Sanford Ballet guild.

after Tommy Peterson, president of the library/museum board, suggested to her last year that she write something to do with the Constitution. She liked the idea and began researching and writing, she says. Then City Commissioner John Y. Mercer and his wife, Juanny, found Caskey working on the project one day at the museum, she says. Mercer was pleased, and he told the city commission about the ballet/drama. The city commission liked the idea and "commissioned" the work to be presented to the city.

Caskey says she found out about the city's enthusiasm when a reporter "rushed in to the museum after one of the commissioner's workshops, and congratulated me."

Caskey says "We, The People" should be of interest to everyone. "I think men will like it because most of the main characters are men," she explains. "Children should like it because it's a way they can learn history without having to study it in a book." And women should certainly like it, she adds. Two prominent Sanford women have roles in the production. Mayor Betty Smith will play Martha Washington. Scenic Improvement Board President Martha Yancey will play Dolly Madison.

This versatile writer, historian, poet and dancer says she has been in Florida 17 years, and in Sanford 15 years. But, prior to coming to Florida, she wrote other ballet/dramas back in Illinois, and her talents are still in demand in that state, too. In addition to "Sin and Salvation," she also wrote "Shadows of Glory," the story of Lincoln's life in Illinois before he went to Washington, and "Lucinda," a

Doctor's Dilemma: To Kill Or Not To Kill

By LARRY DOYLE
UPI Science Writer

CHICAGO (UPI) — Although she is only 20 years old, she is dying, and dying people always appear older. Her name is Debbie.

She has ovarian cancer and no real chance of recovery. She has not slept or eaten in two days, weighs 80 pounds, and has been vomiting relentlessly. Her body is wracked with pain.

Do you help her die?
You are awakened in the middle of the night and called to her bedside. You have never seen her before, but you are the doctor on duty. She looks at you with hollow, soulless eyes and says, "Let's get this over with."

Do you draw 20 milligrams of morphine sulfate into a syringe and inject it into her veins? Do you watch as she first relaxes, closes her eyes, stops breathing?

American doctors say absolutely not: it's unethical. Lawyers and law say no, it's illegal. Even the founder of the Hemlock Society, a group that supports the legalization of mercy killing, says this is not the way to go about it.

But a gynecology resident claims to have done just that, and has written about his experience. His provocative, unsigned piece, "It's over, Debbie," was printed in the Jan. 8 Journal of the American Medical Association. It is believed to be the first acknowledgment of a mercy killing by a physician published in a medical journal.

Few articles in the Journal's 104-year history have created as much controversy. More than 75 doctors and lawyers have written letters condemning the physician and criticizing the journal for publishing the account. Some have suggested the story is a hoax, that a doctor could not have done what this resident claims to have done without coming under review by his own hospital.

As media attention intensified early in February, Dr. George Lundberg, editor of the journal, said, "I stand by my decision to publish it."

"The AMA obviously does not condone what this doctor did," Lundberg said. "But I think now there may be more discussion about it openly."

There may also be legal action. The article was brought to the attention of New York Mayor Ed Koch in late January, who with typical fury fired off a letter to U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese, urging a criminal investigation.

"I believe what we saw was a confession of murder," Koch said in an interview. "I think I am performing a public service by bringing this to the attention of the authorities."

"This doctor can't just kill someone and think he's the glorious angel of death," he said. "Not in this country."

If Meese does not take action—which is likely, since homicide investigations are a state, and not federal, responsibility—Koch said he will pursue the matter himself.

"Then I'll just call up my good friend Dick Daley," Koch said.

Cook County State's Attorney Richard Daley already has been contacted by at least one right-to-life group seeking an investigation. Daley also has informally asked the AMA to release the doctor's name, and has been informally rejected.

Should the state's attorney embark on an official investigation, however, the AMA has indicated it will obey a court order to reveal the doctor's identity.

"This is not a lovable character, and at some point there is going to be little point fighting on his behalf," said Kirk Johnson, AMA's general counsel.

But somehow lost in this growing legal morass is the tortuous death of a young woman who did not have to die that way. Almost uniformly, physicians and medical ethicists familiar with the article were angry with the doctor. But they were also horrified by the situation he encountered.

"How could they have let her suffer like that, for how many days?" one asked. "Dear God."

The question many ask is not why did the doctor administer that final dose of morphine, but why was the patient not given enough morphine in the first place, enough to help her sleep, enough to relieve her pain?

"I'm not advocating what the doctor did, but I think allowing this woman to get into this condition was far more criminal," said Dr. Ronald Cranford, a neurologist and medical ethicist at the Hennepin County medical center in Minneapolis.

"It was cruel and inhumane she would have to suffer so," Cranford said. "That's what encourages euthanasia."

The World Health Organization estimates that 25 million people die every year in uncontrolled pain. In the United States, some estimates suggest that 50 to 60 percent of cancer patients live out their last days in unrelieved agony.

It is not for lack of resources. Experts say between 90 and 99 percent of chronic pain can be relieved with analgesics and opiates such as morphine. But American doctors remain reluctant to use potentially addictive and dangerous substances to relieve pain—even though studies have shown them to be neither addictive nor dangerous when administered properly.

"And who cares anyway if a dying person is addicted?" asked Alex Capron, a professor of law and medicine at the

Justice Of The Peace Offers Valentine Deal

FRESNO, Texas (UPI) — Fort Bend County Justice of the Peace R. George Molina is offering couples a sweetheart of a deal on Valentine's Day — he will conduct wedding ceremonies for free.

Molina last year offered special $1 weddings for people wanting to get married on Valentine's Day. He normally charges $35 for the service.

"This is a free offer for the fine people of Texas to come to Fort Bend County to get married on Valentine's Day," Molina said. A self-professed romantic, he said he is making the free wedding offer to garner publicity for the county and also to help the county coffers because licenses cost $25.

State law requires that the marriage license must be obtained 72 hours in advance so people will need to have had them by about noon Thursday.

Molina said his court workers will donate their time on Sunday. He asked that any interested couples call his office in advance.

Couples who sign up to have Molina marry them on Valentine's Day will have a chance to win a free dinner and a corsage, he said. A drawing will be conducted to choose 10 couples to receive the extras.

Buckle Up The Young For Safety

Mumps and measles—most parents routinely immunize their children against these health threats. But most parents would probably be shocked to learn that those immunizations will not protect their children from the number one threat to their health—highway crashes. There is no immunization to prevent accidents but there is protection, a properly-used child-safety seat or, for older children, safety belts.

A number of health care organizations and safety advocates including the American Coalition for Traffic Safety (ACTS) joined together to promote National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week this week.

According to statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration 200 young children involved in highway crashes last year were saved because they were properly restrained in a safety seat.

Parents and other drivers with children must be certain the child safety seat is correctly installed and properly used every time the child travels in the car. ACTS recommends a careful review of the safety seat manufacturer's instructions on correct installation and use.

Protecting your child in the automobile is not only sensible, it's the law. Every state, including Florida, has enacted laws requiring young children to ride in safety seats. It's equally important that older children and adults be protected and that is why 31 states, Florida among them, and the District of Columbia now have safety-belt laws for adults.

Children rely on adults for comfort, care and protection. The next time you get in the car, buckle your child into a secure safety seat or safety belt and then fasten your own safety belt. It could be the start of a life-long and life-saving habit for both of you.

Motherly Love

Mom was proud of her daughter's beauty. She wanted her to get ahead in the world. To be a star. Rich and Glamorous.

Daughter was just 17 years old. She wanted to be glamorous. To be desired. To be rich. She wanted to please her mother. Deep down, she wanted to be loved.

Mom got her daughter a job in entertainment. She performed at the Cat's Meow and at the Doll House III in Fort Lauderdale. She danced in the nude.

To dance in the nude, you need to be 18. So mom helped forge daughter's birth certificate to give her that added year of age—on paper.

Daughter danced and danced. She earned a grand a week. She paid her mom $100 to be her chauffeur. She gave her mom gifts.

She wanted so to be older, to be glamorous, to be loved. But the more she danced the emptier she felt. On stage before those men, she was stripped to death of her dignity.

Finally, she took her mother's gun and put it to her lips and pulled the trigger.

Did she kill herself, or did her mother exploit and kill her psychologically?

A Florida court, in a landmark case, convicted the mother of psychological child abuse. Recently, she was sentenced to a year in jail.

The others guilty in this affair were not brought to trial. They were the men who watched this nude girl whirl, desiring to be loved, and gave her their lecherous leers and crumpled dollars.

Simplified Taxation Where It Hurts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About this time of year, back in the dark ages, a Texas publication once ran a series called "deep in the hurt of taxes."

I no longer recall the exact dates but I guarantee it was more than 15 years ago. What brings it to mind now is the 15th anniversary edition of the Texas Monthly, a magazine whose "collector's issue" was published under the caption "Deep In The Hearts Of Texas."

The reason I refer to the earlier period as the "dark ages" is not so much a salute to fading memory as because that was before the time I started paying income taxes.

Even back then, I feel sure, the Internal Revenue Service was putting out annual "simplified" instructions, as it has religiously done since.

We taxpayers are particularly in need of simplified instructions this year owing to congressional passage, at presidential urging, of a "reform" bill.

I'm not sure if the legislation finally enacted was what President Reagan clearly had in mind. But he did sign it into law, didn't he?

Had the bill contained the reforms I, as one irate taxpayer, wanted, there would be no need, now or in the future, to simplify the instructions further.

But I was going to write about the 15th anniversary of a Texas publication, not tax reform. I don't know how I got sidetracked, except that it is easy to do at this time of year.

The cover of the Austin magazine pictures Texans standing shoulder to shoulder.

In my time, there weren't enough of us to stand that way.

It also says the 15th anniversary celebrates "the ties that bind."

I have found over the years that all ties tend to bind a bit.

A blurb quotes a Texas Monthly editor to the effect that in the western part of the state, where I grew up, driving distances are measured "in time, not miles."

Thus, he wrote, "a person is considered centrally located if the nearest mall is a two-hour drive."

We didn't have malls in the old days. I'm told the closest one now is only 17 miles, or about 15 minutes, away.

However, it never occurred to us Merkelites to consider whether our hometown was centrally located.

I want to state categorically that we measured driving distances in miles, not time.

Thus, if we had to drive 90 miles for a can of bottle of beer, so be it.

I lived in the center of what was then a prohibition belt but I never heard anyone tell a real estate agent, who might have a beer-drinking client, that the nearest roadhouse was any closer.

We may not have been rich but we were honest.

If that makes you feel any better while filling out your simplified 1040 tax return, you're welcome.

Creating Life From Scratch

By Deithia Nichols
UPI Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Having harnessed the power of the gene, coaxing it to perform in a dish the way it does in a cell, scientists now are taking the next step up in genetic engineering: constructing artificial chromosomes.

Chromosomes are the backbone of heredity tucked in the nuclei of every cell of all higher organisms, carrying thousands of genes coded with information transmitted over generations.

The work, under way in several laboratories, involves some of the same genetic engineering techniques used to manipulate specific genes. But the new strategies also hint at some awesome implications.

If scientists can mass-produce functioning chromosomes, the very vehicles on which genes are shuffled around in the process of cell division, there exists a possibility of eventually inserting chromosomes carrying engineered genes into human cells.

Such work could produce safer vehicles for engineered genes to treat inherited diseases, provided the precise mechanism of how such chromosomes distribute genetic information is deciphered.

"There exists on paper the possibility that at some stage in the future we can introduce artificial chromosomes into human cells that can replace defective genes," said molecular biologist Andrew Murray of the University of California, San Francisco.

Both natural and engineered chromosomes are comprised of DNA. The 23 pairs of chromosomes in each human body cell carry as many as 50,000 genes. Genes control the functions of the cell, and therefore the function of the entire organism.

But as promising as the idea of chromosome engineering may seem, there also is a possibility that artificial chromosomes never will be used to treat human diseases, Murray said.

Studies such as his still lag several years behind a more controversial technique which proposes using deactivated retroviruses as carriers of engineered genes.

Retroviruses are an unusual group of viruses whose reproductive core is made of RNA instead of DNA, and in which the normal flow of genetic information is reversed by an enzyme. In other viruses, RNA usually serves as a messenger from DNA during protein production.

Dr. W. French Anderson and his colleagues at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., are conducting animal experiments with the viruses.

Drug Tough-Talk

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Committees in both the Senate and House are calling on the Reagan administration to impose tough sanctions against countries that are lax in cooperating with the United States in its attempt to halt drug trafficking.

Among the sanctions available to the president are withholding up to half the U.S. foreign aid slated for the offending nation, the imposition of new or increased tariffs on imports from those countries, curtailing commercial air transportation between the United States and those countries, and instructing U.S. representatives to international development banks to vote against new loans to offending countries.

Although the presidential power to impose such sanctions has been in force for several years, the Reagan administration has never used it.

Recently, Assistant Secretary of State Ann B. Wroblewski and Robert Gelbard of State's Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, were called before the House Foreign Affairs Committee Task Force on International Narcotics Control, an ad hoc group chaired by Rep. Lawrence J. Smith, D-Fla.

The panel demanded to know why the administration has failed to impose sanctions against countries like Colombia, Peru and Bolivia, which are widely regarded as doing little to stem drug trafficking. The lawmakers asked whether imposition of sanctions would encourage those nations to step up their drug enforcement efforts.

Gelbard gave what has become the Reagan administration's stock answer to the question. He said that the imposition of sanctions would be "absolutely the worst, the wrong way to go." He called sanctions "probably the best present we could give the drug traffickers" because it would cripple enforcement efforts of governments with limited resources.

Also appearing as a witness before the Task Force was Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

He said, "The government of Colombia is being held hostage by drug traffickers who are conducting a concerted campaign to intimidate, eliminate and corrupt government officials."

This led to a heated exchange between Smith and Wroblewski about what steps the United States could take in Colombia. After Smith charged that the United States wasn't doing enough, Wroblewski shot back, "If you have a silver bullet, if there is a magic answer out there, please share it with us. We'd like to know."

"That's not fair," Smith replied. "That's not our job. That's your job."

"If you think the solution to the Colombian problem is in Washington, I think you're sadly mistaken. The solution is in Bogota," Wroblewski answered. "Our mutual efforts are being challenged by the best-equipped, best-financed and most violent traffickers in the world."

Rangel also urged President Reagan to call a summit meeting of Western Hemisphere leaders on the drug crisis, and he raised the possibility of committing U.S. troops — as part of a regional military force under the auspices of either the United Nations or the Organization of American States — to conduct all-out war on drug traffickers.

Later in the hearing, Wroblewski dismissed the idea of using U.S. military personnel in Colombia as impractical. "As a short-term solution, I don't see it," she said.

ROBERT WALTERS

And Speak No Evil

BOSTON (NEA) — More than a quarter century after President Eisenhower warned of the danger posed by the "military-industrial complex," a recently filed lawsuit here documents the terrifying power of that combination.

In an extraordinary admission, a leading Defense Department contractor has acknowledged that it summarily stripped the head of its Washington office of his job after he angered senior Pentagon officials by publicly criticizing the outrageous rate of military spending.

The case dates back to September 1985, when Lawrence J. Korb resigned as an assistant secretary of defense, a post he had held for four years, to become vice president of the Raytheon Co. in charge of its Washington operations.

Later that year, he joined the Committee for National Security, a moderate Washington-based organization committed to a strong national defense but also concerned about fiscal responsibility.

At a CNS press conference in February 1986, Korb criticized excessive military spending and urged the scaling back of the proposed 600-ship Navy, a cherished goal of then-Secretary of the Navy John F. Lehman Jr.

Two assistant secretaries of the Navy promptly telephoned senior Raytheon executives at the firm's headquarters in Lexington, Mass., to express their anger. Raytheon also received complaints from Air Force officials and a staff member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The day after the CNS press conference, Korb was summoned to Raytheon's corporate office in Massachusetts. After a series of meetings at which company officials expressed their displeasure with his behavior, Korb was removed as director of Raytheon's Washington office.

He was offered two demeaning alternatives — a temporary appointment as a "special adviser" in the Washington office or a transfer to a Raytheon subsidiary in Philadelphia as a "commercial marketing consultant."

Korb rejected both offers, left the company and now is dean of the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs. Late last year, he filed a civil suit in Boston alleging that he was wrongfully dismissed by Raytheon.

In his reply, Raytheon did not dispute any of the facts in Korb's complaint about his relationship with the firm.

Instead, the company asked the court to dismiss the complaint on technical grounds.

Effects Of The Bush-Rather Scrap

By Jack Anderson
And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush is still crowing over his television tussle with CBS anchorman Dan Rather. Bush and his supporters think it proved he is more tough guy than wimp.

But if they believe the display of bluster will put the curiosity over Bush's role in the Iran/Contra affair to rest, they are wrong. Democratic strategists believe that the long-term winner of the scrap will be Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. If Dole stumbles, ultimately the Democratic candidate for president will be thanking Dan Rather.

However the nation may feel about the spectacle of two grown men sputtering at each other on national TV, Rather boxed Bush into an "I don't remember" response. The nation still doesn't know if the vice president knew about crucial aspects of the Iranian arms-for-hostages deal.

The Democrats are counting on Bush's Republican opponents to show that Bush was exposed so vividly to the Iranian can of worms that for him not to have remembered was impossible.

If Bush beats back the Iran/Contra questions long enough to get the Republican nomination, one Democratic insider told us, "then about Labor Day the memos will start surfacing." In other words, the Democrats may have the goods on Bush and Iran. They will hold their evidence until September and then leak it.

"We should give Rather an award," the Democrat told our associate Les Whitten.

There is already Democratic talk of trying to demolish Bush's credibility in the campaign home stretch with replays of segments of the Rather interview in which Bush seems to be contradicting sworn evidence already in the public domain.

And what about the credibility of the other guy on the card? Some in the media have turned on Rather, and veteran reporters who have worked opposite him on stories wonder why. Rather was equally tough on Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter. In several cases, the White House complained to his bosses about him. It was to CBS's credit that the choice to succeed Walter Cronkite narrowed to Rather and another determined reporter, Roger Mudd.

Our staff has worked opposite both men. In the days of the Bobby Baker scandal, Roger Mudd was one of the few broadcast reporters we encountered digging in the files of the federal agencies for hard new facts.

Rather was equally zealous, yet was always willing to give younger reporters a hand. We remember in a political campaign Rather taking time out to help an insecure local neophyte who had joined the national press corps for a day. Rather was nearing deadline, but we watched him generously make sure the local reporter's broadcast was factual and interesting.

Yes, Rather went too far with Bush, and interjected his own opinions when the vice president got argumentative. When Rather curly pulled the cord on Bush to end the interview, network officials blamed the abrupt gesture on the time demands of broadcast news. But there was no mistaking that Rather enjoyed having the last word.

What viewers don't know is that the verbal push and pull goes on behind the cameras all the time. Politicians dodge questions, reporters ask again, tempers flare.

Economic Index Not Good Basis For Forecasts

By David F. Scott Jr.

It is said that "economists make forecasts because they are asked." The corollary for the print media must be that "newspapers run headlines because space is available." Often, the logic behind the headlines is shaky. Recent poor-mouthing over the U.S. Commerce Department's release of a negative number of the December, 1987 change in its Index of Leading Economic Indicators provides a good example.

True, the reported change of -0.2 percent was the third consecutive unkind figure. On the other hand, the November, 1987 change was initially reported as -1.7 percent; it was later revised upward to -1.2 percent. Herein lies the lesson. Don't get too upset about the current number in the Commerce Department's press release, it may change in your favor next month.

It is important to realize that not all of the 12 components of the leading index are market driven. One, in particular, is directly susceptible to Federal Reserve policy actions. This component is the money supply index, real M2. It is comprised of currency, demand deposits, money market fund balances, time deposits, and a few other items.

After inflation adjustments, the M2 aggregate declined in December, because the Fed was overtly stingy with credit. This tendency changed in January, so since early February interest rates have been moving backwards. As a result, the commercial bank prime lending rate was cut to 8.5 percent from 8.75 percent on Feb. 2. The looser posture by the Fed in monetary markets is to be applauded. Tight money makes no sense now.

Since the Oct. 19 market thud, global economic markets, both financial and real, have been understandably skittish. Still, if you think about it, nothing in the aggregate was actually destroyed by the approximate 30 percent value pullback in U.S. publicly traded equities. The revalued assets merely removed fewer dollars from buyers' pockets. The dollars remain there.

A few egos were destroyed, of course. This also launched an overdue reduction in the sheer number of Wall Street-related jobs. The real economy will benefit when some of that labor force finds its way into other sectors. Investor confidence may be shaken, but this is simultaneously an above-average opportunity to spruce up an equity portfolio. The market valuation process is more in line with historical benchmarks.

Apart from the October stock market debacle, the year of 1987 was a rather good one for the country as a whole and Florida in particular. Real economic growth (1987 relative to 1986) was 2.9 percent for the year. This equaled the two-decade average, so it can be fairly labeled "moderate."

The manufacturing sector perked up; plants hummed along at a capacity level (80.7 percent for the year) not enjoyed since 1984. Corporate after-tax profits will come in at 7 percent above 1986 performance. Further, the civilian unemployment rate averaged 6.2 percent for the year—a rate not bettered since 1979. Thus, a black mentality concerning economic performance in 1988 is not easily justified.

As a country, we are operating in the midst of an economic expansion that began in November, 1982. Hope that those who formulate tax policy and monetary policy don't foul it up! The worst policy combination right now would be an increase in the personal and corporate taxes coupled with tightening in monetary conditions. The Fed erred last spring when it chose to push interest rate up to bolster the dollar and signal a tough stance against inflationary tendencies. This contributed directly to the October market slide. Many analysts publicly warned against that tighter credit policy. Beware, then, of arguments that might run up interest rates. Also keep in mind that Florida is linked to the rest of the U.S. economy by interest rate levels and movements. We are not isolated from national economic trends.

It is suggested here that the chances of a national recession commencing in 1988 are 1 in 3. A year ago the odds were only 1 in 10. Growth in 1988 will be less than that of 1987. The economic storm clouds have gathered, but we need to fly right through them on the basis of sound policies, good ideas and hard work. Cast aside the index of leading indicators and overblown headlines. It is not yet time to climb up to the 20th floor roof and contemplate the philosophy of life. More impressive signals are needed for that.

A Judge's Slashing Comments

It was one of those crimes that sends us searching the papers for updates several days afterward.

Beautiful young fashion model has her face slashed by razor blades, at the hands of thugs hired by her landlord. As the story unfolds day by day, we learn the dispute was over the security deposit that Marla Hanson wanted back, and the landlord didn't want to return. Yes, she'll be disfigured for life, we see as she talks to reporters from her hospital bed. No, she doesn't intend to let the 150 stitches and their resulting scars deter her from her dream, to be a model.

We don't hear of crimes so horrid, or see displays of such bravery, every day. We keep looking, in newspapers and magazines, for more of the story. We especially wait for the trial. Some of us hope the judge sentences the landlord to tango lessons with a pack of pit bulls.

Instead, we are dumbfounded at what happens to Marla Hanson, not landlord Steven Roth, during Roth's trial. Having little to work with (his client admitted to having been recruited by Roth to "cut up" Hanson, holding Hanson down AND having razor blade in his hand during the attack), the attorney for one of the attackers turns on Hanson.

He accuses Hanson of being a man-chaser and a racial bigot. He asks her to define a four-letter word Roth had used to describe her. (Imagine, for a moment, an attorney asking a male victim to define a demeaning four-letter word a female attacker had used to describe him.) He tries his best to paint a portrait of the stereotypical emasculating woman whom juries have been historically fond of deciding "brought it on themselves."

Of course, bringing a razor-slashing on oneself is stretching even this precedent a little, but that's what some defense attorneys do. The American Bar Association's ethical code allows this kind of treatment—if the alleged conduct of the victim is relevant to the defense. It wasn't relevant here, but at least one can understand a lawyer trying to use it.

What one can't understand is a judge allowing it, and this one did. Boy, did this one allow it. And what he did next rates him at least a few points on the scale that Hanson's attackers scored so high on. He stingingly criticized Hanson for talking about her ordeal to reporters. Summon all the grit you've got to survive a hell like this, but don't be so brazen as to talk about it.

When I read about Judge Jeffrey Atlas' attack on Hanson, I was stunned. Has he been sequestered in his chambers so long he's lost the sense of what it must be like to be a talented young person and have your body sliced up by razor blades? I wonder what his response to a victim's talking to reporters would be if the victim were not a female model, but a young pro football player, his throwing arm sliced up by a landlord over a rent deposit?

Would he have remonstrated the fellow as he stood talking to reporters about years of practice and dreams slashed to ribbons in less than a minute? I don't think so.

I guess I was naive enough to think even an ignoramus would have some sensitivity to a young woman to whose face thugs had taken a razor blade. Surely he knew it would make bad TV.

Atlas later apologized to Hanson. I don't imagine he went home, reconsidered and came back with tears in his eyes.

Critical of SOS Attitude About Mentally And Physically Handicapped

I could hardly believe my eyes as I read the comments by Glenn Domen in the February 8 article, "SOS Members Want to Help Sanford." According to Domen, he and his Save our Sanford group are opposed to residential care facilities in residential areas. Domen said "This is not just an elderly issue. You're also talking about the mentally and physically handicapped."

Imagine that, the historical district ... and maybe the entire city of Sanford ... will provide facilities for the elderly and mentally and physically handicapped! How awful to have someone who is old or in a wheelchair living in your neighborhood! What would people think as they drove through town, seeing mentally handicapped people in a residential neighborhood!

Domen's group is concerned about one thing: buildings. However, a city is composed of people, and a city is only as good as the people who live in it. When people take care of a city and try to improve it, they should be taking care of the people who live there, not just buildings. The concern should be about the quality of life for all citizens.

Many elderly and mentally and physically handicapped persons are presently taxpayers and have been taxpayers in the past. Many have made numerous contributions of time and energy over several decades toward making Sanford what it is today. Does Domen's group want to tell these people that, if they cannot live independently within their own homes, they are not to live in certain parts of town?

The elderly and handicapped have just as much right to live in Sanford as the SOS members. Where do the members of that group, many of whom I believe to be newcomers, think they get the right to Save Our Sanford? It's not their Sanford; Sanford belongs to all of the people. That group's messianic view of themselves would be laughable if it were not so dangerous. Will they never get old? Are they immune from becoming mentally or physically handicapped? Will they never have to face losing their independence and familiar surroundings because of age or handicap?

One of the organization's goals is to serve as a public relations instrument for the city. I resent their thinking that they have a license to speak for Sanford, especially when they are not elected officials.

Was Domen speaking for himself, or was he speaking for all of the SOS members or all residents of that section of Sanford? Whichever, they are so wrapped up in buildings they are losing sight of people. Members of Domen's group should be thinking "There but for the grace of God go I."

I cringe to think that my husband and I almost purchased a home in what is referred to as the historical district, to live near people with that kind of attitude toward people. Ironically, instead of that historical district, we purchased a home in a neighborhood that existed long before Sanford was created!

The Right To Freedom Depends On Respecting The Rights Of Others

Newspaper and television comments recently have raised the issue of state and church, and related themes of freedom of speech, press and religion. These center about viewpoints of freedom and personal liberties. There are many on the American scene who insist on being free to do as they please, who make a big ado about infringements upon their personal liberties. They constantly scream "First Amendment rights" yet at the same time they would muzzle the lips and restrict the actions of those with opposing views.

What DOES the constitution guarantee us? What ARE the limits of freedom? How free ARE we to do as we please? Does the privilege of freedom involve any responsibilities or obligations?

As affirmed in the Declaration of Independence there are certain rights which are part of our heritage and to which we, as citizens of America, are entitled. Further, our constitution was framed "...to secure the blessings of liberty," and these are very carefully spelled out in its articles and amendments.

Next to life itself, liberty is our most prized possession. We are entitled to personal freedoms of many kinds—freedom to develop our personalities and our potentials, freedom of personal choice in our religion, our politics, our career, our opinions. However, freedom of choice must exist for all, or it is not safe for any. To suppress, stifle, ignore or intimidate anyone else's personal liberties is to jeopardize our own. If we want freedom for ourselves, we have an obligation to see that everyone else has equal opportunity for the same full measure of freedom. Unless we cherish it, respect it, share it, we are very much apt to lose it.

Freedom is a priceless privilege! It carries with it an obligation to respect and obey the laws of the nation, a responsibility to uphold the pillars of justice which spread its wings over the land. To take the law into one's own hands, to deliberately flout, ignore or disobey the law is to advocate destruction of the legal structure upon which our government—and our freedom—is built. This is not liberty! This is anarchy!

Dissent within the law is democracy in action. However, when dissent boils over into coercion and violence, then it breaks the law. When property is wantonly destroyed, when the innocent are injured, when citizens are intimidated into silence and submission, then it becomes crime of the most serious sort. Those who by such actions would destroy our peace, security and liberty are traitors to the "American Way." They should be branded as criminals and punished in the halls of justice.

If we accept the privileges of our constitutional freedoms and American liberties, then ours is the obligation to maintain them by strengthening the moral fiber of our nation, and by assuring that law and justice be effective enough to prevent their deterioration and decay. Freedom then becomes contagious as it multiplies into every facet of personal and national life.

Critical Of Networks Pre-Empting Reagan

I am breaking my resolution not to write letters to editors again (Sanford Herald, Feb. 7). I simply have to call attention to a serious problem.

The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States says "Congress...shall make no law abridging freedom of speech, or the press..."

If the Founding Fathers were peeking down on the world on Feb. 2, I wonder how they felt. In totalitarian countries they saw the press and news controlled by dictators. But in the United States, the press and television control news and opinions!

Gorbachev and Ortega are welcome on the major networks but the President of the United States was denied the right to defend his opinions because ABC, CBS and NBC decided the president's message was not important.

I don't have cable television so I was not allowed to hear the president. The networks are more than free. They are real dictators!

I think George Washington and James Madison would agree with me.

What's New In Health

Family Dogs, Cats Make The Baby Purr

By PEO BYRON
NEW YORK (UPI) — When young children have pets to cuddle, it helps them develop a sense of security, provides interesting mental and physical exercise and a chance to develop emotional bonds, development experts have long said.

But how early in life can babies tell the difference between the family pet and a snuggly toy? When can they enjoy special attachments to pets, establishing loving and beneficial bonds with live animals?

Older studies have suggested a baby's interest in pets reflects awareness of an ability to affect the outside world. And infants exposed to a variety of interesting stimuli are believed to adjust more easily to new situations later in their lives.

Observations in a small 1972 study gave tentative clues on when these effects may begin, and showed that 6-month-old babies in families with pets suck their thumbs less frequently than infants without pets. In the second six months of life, the study showed, pets serve as bridges between the baby and the outside world.

That report was based on a small sample, however, and most studies on children and pets have focused on children of at least two years of age.

Recently, a study of 253 infants between the ages of 6 months and 30 months gave more concrete evidence that the benefits of pets may come earlier than was suspected.

Armed with a mechanical dog that could bark, walk and wag its tail and a fluffy stuffed kitten that purred when stroked, researchers in California looked for preferences among babies in families with pets. They watched for attachment behaviors, such as gazing, smiling, following or attempting to follow, babbling or talking, and reaching or grabbing.

Not surprisingly, none of the 6-month-old infants in the study showed any preference between live and toy pets, but among babies as young as 12 months, the researchers found substantially more interest in the live pet.

"This surprised us. We expected it would come later. We did not expect to see such significant differences before the age of two," said Dr. Aline Kidd, the principal investigator and a professor of psychology at Mills College in Oakland, Calif.

In addition to finding that 1-year-olds are more attached to family pets than to the toys, Kidd found interest in pets increased steadily with age. She also found the infants could distinguish between cats and dogs and showed a marked preference for live animals.

"It seems dogs will interact more. A cat will have enough and then take off for the closet," Kidd said.

The infants showed no preference between toy cats and dogs.

Boys between 6 months and 12 months interacted more with their pets, laughing, talking to and about them, and having more physical contact. But by about 2 years of age, the girls did more talking to the pets than the boys.

"This is probably because boys are more active than girls at early ages. Girls are socialized for talking rather than slug-ging," said Kidd.

Overall, these findings indicate infants and toddlers benefit from pet interactions far earlier than was predicted by conventional wisdom, which Kidd said erroneously recommended waiting until a child is age 5 before bringing a pet into the home.

Kidd said babies benefit from the unconditional nature of pet affection, and may have self-esteem enhanced by a sense of influence over the environment. She cautions, however, that pet-less parents should choose animals carefully. "You don't want a pit bull. You want a dog who is mellow enough to interact and capable of getting away," Kidd also urged considering the age of the animals: "Puppies, kittens and childhood can be a bad mix because, as one tired mother said, you feel like you have twins."

...Dilemma

 University of Southern California in Los Angeles. "And if they die indirectly as a result of the medication, isn't it better that they die in peace?"

Capron, who headed the 1983 Presidential Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine, said he too believes the issue of euthanasia would be far less important if the medical profession and the public would face up to the fact that the dying have different needs than the living.

"Cases like this mostly illustrate the risk in public policy of having a good deal of confusion about what is acceptable," he said. "Before we go around debating whether it is all right to kill someone, we should do everything we can to keep them from wanting to die."

As profoundly simple as this idea sounds, it has not found fertile ground in the American medical mind-set. Despite changes made throughout Europe, despite entreaties from the National Institutes of Health and American Cancer Society, too many U.S. physicians feel that to ease a patient into death in any manner is wrong.

Dr. Marcia Angell, deputy editor of The New England Journal of Medicine, called for such reasoned compassion in an editorial published on Jan. 14, 1982.

"Pain is soul-destroying," Angell wrote. "No patient should have to endure intense pain unnecessarily. The quality of mercy is essential to the practice of medicine; here, of all places, it should not be strained."

Today, more than five years later, Angell does not see much improvement.

"Doctors are trained to preserve life and most still have no idea about how to deal with death," she said. "They are certainly exposed to dying patients all the time, but whether they learn the appropriate lessons, I'm not too sure."

Morphine is an opiate much like heroin and cocaine. All are strong analgesics that also generally depress the central nervous system, and depending on dose, slow or stop breathing. The gynecological resident who administered 20 milligrams of morphine to Debbie knew this.

"I waited for the inevitable next effect of depressing the respiratory drive," he wrote. "With clocklike certainty, within four minutes the breathing rate slowed even more, then became irregular, then ceased..."

"It's over, Debbie," the doctor concluded.

The young doctor apparently believed he killed Debbie. Several medical experts consulted by United Press International suggested he did not.

"Normally, 20 mg of morphine in this situation is not only not a lethal dose, it is not even a respiratory depressive dose," Cranford said. "In my opinion, that dose of morphine could not have caused that woman's death."

"The way I read it, she was falling into a nice normal sleep, and then she died," he said. "I suspect this fellow was just inexperienced and thought he was killing her and he just didn't."

The morphine dose Debbie received was about twice that recommended for her size, but far short of the 200 mg dose the Hemlock society recommends for a mercy killing.

"In a way, it was luck on his part she died," said Dr. Howard Brody, coordinator of medical humanities at Michigan State University in East Lansing. "She could just as easily have lived and he might have found out the next day she was just having a bad night and didn't want to die at all — then he would have serious problems."

Lundberg, a practicing pathologist before becoming editor of the journal, believes 20 mg may have been sufficient to hasten Debbie's death, given her frail condition, but commented, "I believe the essay is intentionally vague as to the effects of the medication."

"I think it still allows for that question of whether the injection caused the death," he said.

That question may become the crux of a court case, but pain experts found it illustrative of a larger problem.

"There is good evidence, in addition to this, to support the idea that doctors and nurses and the public do not understand the management of pain," said Dr. Catherine Foley, director of the pain service at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Escape To A Gangster's Lair In 'Island'

Island, by Thomas Perry
 (Putnam's, 336 pp., $18.95)

"Island," Thomas Perry's fourth novel, is an escapist's dream come true in which a charming, small-time confidence man comes up with the ultimate scam — one that's out in the open but one for which nobody can touch him.

Harry Erskine, on the run with several hundred thousand dollars stolen from a gangster, locates a Caribbean shoal that is above water only at low tide.

Harry and his wife, along with a deadly but good-hearted mercenary and two or three other confederates, transform the shoal into an island by dumping onto it industrial wastes collected around the world. They build houses and a hotel-casino, put together a world-class winter baseball team, and create an off-shore banking haven. In effect, they invent a money-making enterprise that masquerades as an independent country.

Of course, trouble comes calling even in an artificial paradise, and once it does the story rarely slows down.

Thomas Perry's first thriller, "The Butcher's Boy," won an Edgar award and his second, "Metzger's Dog," was even better. Although his third — "Big Fish" — was a dud, he's back in stride with "Island."

Perry writes funny, fast-paced dialogue that begs for the silver screen, and while the plot depends heavily on the original concept, it's such a clever idea that it works.

The characters — an appealing lot that includes several look-alike Caribbean aborigines said to be reformed cannibals, a wise old tugboat captain and the president of a South American country — may strike some readers as a bit one-dimensional.

But one dimension doesn't come much better than this.

Torey Hayden, author of four previous books, including "One Child," tells about a year in the classroom with emotionally disturbed children in her well-written story, "Just Another Kid."

As Hayden begins her school year, the behavioral problems of her six students take up only half her time.

Hayden finds herself caring as well for the mother of one of her pupils, the rich and beautiful Ludbrooke Considine whose misunderstood alcoholism has made her life a shambles.

Hayden uses her natural tenderness and honesty to break through the fear and manipulation that seem to underlie autism, and to encourage more social behavior in children unable to act like their peers, and to help Ludbrooke overcome her dependence on liquor.

She searches for solutions in a field that seems pre-occupied with casting blame.

In one passage, she tells Ludbrooke, "There's been too much emphasis on whose fault it is when the child has a problem. Blaming's a pretty fruitless exercise. What I care about is the present. That's all I'm interested in: making it better."

The only disappointment of the story is to learn that Hayden now lives on a farm in Wales where, she says, her time is divided between "writing and being a wife, mother and farmhand." After reading "Just Another Kid," one wishes she were back in the classroom.

Blood Line: Stories of Fathers and Sons, by David Quammen
 (Graywolf Press, 169 pp., $8.00)

Anyone acquainted with David Quammen's essays in Outside magazine may be surprised by the three stories that appear in this book. Quammen shows a diversity of style here that isn't evident in his "Natural Act" a National Magazine Award last year.

All three stories explore the sometimes destructive relationships of father and son.

The first story, "Walking Out," is a short tale of a hunting trip into the Montana wilderness by a father and his young boy. The child lives with his mother in the city and secretly fears the trip, while the father wants to teach his son a lesson of manhood. The trip ends with a tragic challenge for the boy.

"Nathan's Rime" also is set in the West and follows a boy into young adulthood and a life with a no-account father who has a circus of snakes. Nathan himself tells his life story years later to another man, ending it with a surprising twist.

While the first two stories are fairly straightforward, the third, "Uriah's Letter," is an intricate and sometimes confusing mystery. Besides a father-son relationship, there also are the interwoven tales of a father and daughter, a young woman spurred by her suitor, and the narrator's attempt to find the truth. The setting for much of the story is the South during the Civil War.

Quammen has pieced together these seemingly disparate stories into a thoroughly engaging psychological drama of love, hate, ambition and revenge.

Barbara Pym is still not well known in the United States but has a fiercely loyal, and growing, following who delight in her essential England of slightly pompous and verbose vicars, garden parties, church fairs and the domestic crises that beset rather ordinary lives.

"Civil to Strangers" is a collection of mostly unpublished work by Pym, who died in 1980, put together by her friend and literary executor Hazel Holt. It includes one complete novel, parts of three others left uncompleted, four short stories and an autobiographical essay originally given as a radio talk.

The title work, Pym's second novel, is a story of domestic crisis that details the threat to the marriage of Cassandra Marsh-Gibbon and her writer-husband, Adam, when a mysterious Hungarian arrives in their Shropshire village. Written in 1936 when Pym was 23, it has the light but somewhat sardonic style that marks the best of Pym's mature work.
