Man arrested in kidnapping

SANFORD — An Osteen man is in the Volusia County jail this morning on Seminole County charges of kidnapping and false imprisonment.

George Warren, 35, was wanted for dragging his estranged girlfriend, 22-year-old Frantashia Stafford, from Bailey's Rooming House near Sanford at about 11:15 p.m. yesterday. Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said Warren left with Stafford in his car.

Witnesses called deputies who issued a "be on the lookout" for him. A Volusia County deputy stopped Warren as he drove with Stafford on State Road 419 30 minutes later where he was arrested. Stafford was returned home.

'Fake cop' sighted on SR 46

SANFORD — A Seminole County deputy nearly captured a "fake cop" early Sunday morning on east State Road 46.

The deputy reported seeing a dark-colored Ford Crown Victoria with a flashing blue light on the dashboard behind a late-model tan Pontiac Firebird. A man dressed in a dark-colored T-shirt and jeans stood beside the Firebird driver's door, talking to a woman with light-colored hair behind the wheel. The Ford's auto tag was covered, the deputy reported.

As the deputy approached, he reported the man ran to his vehicle and fled. The Ford sped north on Cameron Street to Celery Avenue, refusing to stop for the pursuing deputy.

At Beardall Road, the vehicle stopped and a passenger fled from the car before it sped away. The deputy attempted to find the passenger, with the aid of a K-9 unit, but the man could not be found.

The passenger was described as white, five feet, 10 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds, with light-colored hair and wearing a light-colored T-shirt and dark pants. The driver of the Ford was described as white, five feet, 10 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds, with dark-colored hair.

Leading indicators up 0.7%

WASHINGTON — The government's chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity hit an all-time high in March as it posted a healthy gain in line with economists' expectations.

The Commerce Department said today the Index of Leading Economic Indicators advanced 0.7 percent to 101.2 — the highest figure since the government began keeping the index in 1948. The index rebounded from a flat performance in February caused largely by severe winter weather.

Analysts said in advance of today's report that a 0.7 percent gain would be fresh evidence the economy is expanding at a moderate pace this year after its growth spurt at the end of 1993.

The index has now risen in seven out of the last eight months.

Award-winning student: Hard work key to success

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Todd Kramer works hard to accomplish much in life.

The Lake Mary High School senior is the latest recipient of the Commissioner's Choice Award at that school. His sister Lauren won the same award in the first year that Commissioner Larry Furlong presented it to the hardest working senior at each of the district's high schools and at the Crooms School of Choice.

Kramer said that nothing discourages him. Like his hero Thomas Alva Edison, he does not see anything as a failure, he said.

"Why, I have not failed," he said, quoting Edison. "I've just found 10,000 ways that won't work."

Perseverance is the key, Kramer said, to all success.

He said that school has not been easy for him. He has had to put in long hours studying each day, especially before major tests.

He hopes to become an engineer, he said, so his course load includes academically rigorous classes such as honors level Analytic Geometry and English as well as Advanced Placement Physics "B."

He said that he works hard so that he can enjoy success in class while still taking part in other activities.

He is a member of the Spanish National Honor Society, Spanish Club, Interact and SAVE (an environmental organization).

He has been accepted to attend the University of Florida, beginning this summer.

Kramer said that he has employed hard work and determination to all aspects of his life, not just to his school work.

He is active in the Boy Scouts where, as a member of Troop 641, he has

Two men killed by freight train

MIAMI — Two men were killed by the same freight train less than two hours apart in the Miami area, police said.

A man using a stick as a cane walked Monday onto the tracks at a crossing in northwest Miami, police said. The warning signals and gates were working at the crossing, and the train's whistle sounded, but the man stood on the tracks and was hit.

After investigators cleared the accident scene, the same train hit a man lying on the tracks between crossings in Hialeah about a mile from the Florida East Coast Railways yard, said Jim Keeley, the railroad's superintendent of accident investigations.

In the Miami collision, the man carried no identification, and Keeley said he was believed to be homeless.

In the Hialeah collision, the victim was identified as a 28-year-old man, but his name was not released because relatives had not been notified, said police Sgt. Carlos Hernandez.

Mother sentenced in daughter's suicide

ST. PETERSBURG — A grieving mother was sentenced to a year's probation for leaving unattended the loaded .22-caliber revolver her teen-age daughter used to commit suicide.

"There's nothing anyone could do to me that could amount to even half of what I've put myself through," Joann Woods said Monday after her circuit court no contest plea to a charge of culpable negligence.

Woods had faced up to five years in prison under the 1989 state law that holds adults responsible if they leave a loaded gun within the reach of a child, and the child uses it to shoot someone.

Prosecutors said the Woods case was the first in which the victim committed suicide.

Christina Woods, 15, shot herself last July because she was distraught over a breakup with her boyfriend, authorities said.

School shooting sends one to hospital

NORTH MIAMI — A high school senior was in critical condition after she was shot in the chest by a classmate during a school lunch-hour break, police said.

Eighteen-year-old Jyhno Rock was showing off his .380 semiautomatic in the parking lot at North Miami Senior High on Monday when it went off and struck Edward Almonor just under her left breast, North Miami police spokeswoman Kathleen Ruggiero said.

Police believe the shooting was accidental.

Almonor, also 18, suffered severe internal injuries and was in critical condition at Jackson Memorial Hospital early today.

Rock was charged with aggravated battery and firing a gun on school grounds, which is a felony. If Almonor dies, the charges will be upgraded to murder, Ruggiero said.

Rock, who had no criminal record, was being held on $15,000 bond at Dade County Jail.

Chemical fire causes evacuation

FORT PIERCE — A building that housed pool chemicals caught on fire, prompting the evacuation of 200 people and sending four firefighters to the hospital.

The fire started in a warehouse owned by Bio Lab Network, a wholesale supply company. The cause was not immediately known.

"If any of the chemicals mixed together, they could be explosive," said Bio Lab manager John Behrmann. "The main concern was the muriatic acid and the chlorine — if they mix together, it would create mustard gas."

The fire spread quickly from one end of the 12,000-square-foot Treasure Coast Food Bank, which lost its home and 22,000 pounds of food.

It took about 75 fire fighters six hours to extinguish the blaze, which was spotted around 5:30 a.m. Monday.

Pesticide-filled vat halts construction

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS — Construction of a college parking lot has been halted because workers unearthed a cattle dipping vat contaminated with pesticides, including DDT, that dates back 50 years.

It was found last month at the Chautauqua Center branch in DeFuniak Springs of Okaloosa-Walton Community College.

"Our construction crew said this odor came out," said Jeff Schembera, vice president for administrative services at the main campus in Niceville. "If you pick up some dirt and put your nose to it, you can smell the odor."

The college immediately notified the Florida Department of Environmental Protection, stopped work and hired a testing company to examine soil in the vat. Schembera said.

It is one of about 3,200 vats, most of them about 8 feet deep, 3 feet wide and 25 feet long, once used across Florida. From 1906 through 1961, the federal government required ranchers to dunk their animals in pesticides to eradicate a tick that was spreading Texas Fever, Thomas said.

Kiwanis Club's annual baby shower helps new mothers cope

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Babies who get a healthy start early in the pregnancy, in the long run not only have happier lives, but save a phenomenal amount of health care costs in the future.

It's not because their mothers care any less for them, rather they often are not educated in the needs of their unborn children and infants or they can not afford the care needed.

The Kiwanis Club of Sanford wants to ease this burden of the unknown during its third annual World's Greatest Baby Shower for soon-to-be and new mothers of infants up to a month old.

The Shower, organized by Meta Brooks will take place at the Sanford Civic Center on Thursday, May 5 from 9 a.m. until noon.

"The biggest thing we want to do is educate these young women about what they need to do to make sure their babies are healthy and get a good start," Brooks said.

There will be balloons and streamers and fun activities on Thursday but, most importantly, Brooks said, there will be education.

"We are trying to educate these young women about the things they need to know to have a successful pregnancy and a healthy child," Brooks said.

John Parker, M.D., an obstetrician/gynecologist at Central Florida Regional Hospital, will be on hand to talk to the young women about their pregnancies and the steps taken to ensure a healthy baby and a healthy mother.

Pediatrician Marissa Pantis, M.D. will be there to talk about immunizations and the care of newborns.

There will also be an obstetrics nurse from the Women's Center at Central Florida Regional Hospital on hand to answer questions about childbirth and what to expect after the baby is born.

Brooks said there has been some community concern as to why the Kiwanis Club would take on the project of helping mothers, often unwed, with a party and free gifts.

"We aren't doing this so much for the mothers as we are for the children," she said. "There is no point in lecturing the mothers about birth control now, because they are already in that situation. But we do want to make sure that they are educated on preventing future births and to make sure their children have a good start. It is the children we are concerned with primarily."

Brooks said the Shower will provide bottles, diapers, free samples of infant formula and food as well as other items donated by area businesses that will be helpful for the children.

Many of the mothers who will be attending the Shower are students in the Crooms School of Choice TAPP (Teen Age Parent Program) and are high school age or younger. But any woman who is pregnant or who has a child a month old is invited to attend.

"These women are nervous about their situation, often they are nervous about what they need to know or do and we want to broaden their knowledge about what is happening to them and what they should expect," Brooks said.

In addition to the increased knowledge and the confidence it will bring, the mothers will receive a nutritious lunch catered by Park Avenue Catering and a chance to swing at the pinatas filled with goodies.

Brooks said that about 100 young mothers are expected to attend.

Welfare: Florida a model for the nation?

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Florida's initiatives to give people a chance to work and escape welfare were the focus of a congressional panel searching for ways to reform the nation's $22 billion welfare system.

"I see people who are ready to move into the workplace, they just need a little assistance," said U.S. Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee's human resources subcommittee.

Florida has launched five-year pilot programs in Escambia and Alachua counties that closely mirror the welfare reform plan proposed by President Clinton.

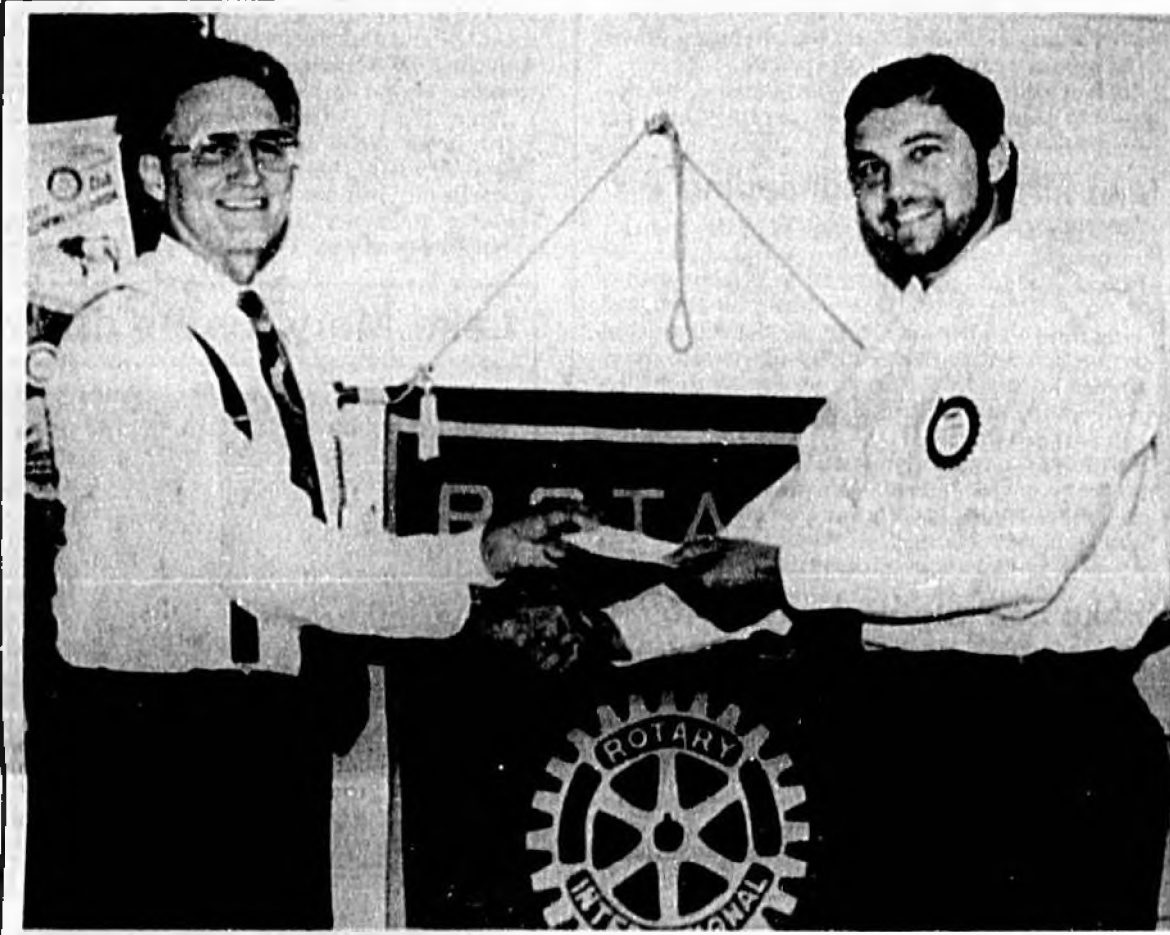

A key feature in the state's Family Transition Program is that welfare payments are cut off after two years.

But participants receive additional financial child care, transportation, education and training benefits during that period, all aimed at getting them jobs in the private sector.

"Nothing about this program is done in a punishment manner," said Cecil Lanier, the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services' program administrator in Escambia. "It's done to do everything we can to get them in a state of self-sufficiency."

Because the program began only a few months ago, Lanier said it's too soon to see hard results.

The panel was also interested in Florida's $30-million-a-year "Project Independence," which focuses on job training as a way to reduce the time it takes to get welfare participants off public assistance.

Sharing the wealth

The Sanford Christian Sharing Center will be the recipient of a $500 check from the Rotary Club of Sanford. The award was announced at yesterday's meeting, and was presented on

Governor must decide if woman will replace Barkett

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The departure of the only woman ever to serve on Florida's Supreme Court already has three women and a man scrambling to replace her.

Since Rosemary Barkett's nomination by Democratic Gov. Bob Graham in 1985, the court has been more active in areas such as family law and minority rights.

The National Organization for Women calls that good reason to appoint another woman.

"I think having a woman there helps bring a different mind set to the bench," Stobhan McLaughlin, president of the Florida chapter, told the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale for a Sunday story.

President Clinton nominated Barkett to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and she was

Kevorkian plans suicide centers

By JULIA PRODIS
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — Minutes after being cleared of assisting in a suicide, Dr. Jack Kevorkian called on other physicians to join him in organizing a string of suicide centers.

He said 15 doctors are ready to come forward and draft strict guidelines for the network, where terminally ill people can end their suffering and donate their organs if they choose.

"I guarantee you, while I'm alive this will not be abused in Michigan," the 65-year-old retired pathologist told reporters after the verdict. "If it is abused, I will be responsible and take full blame."

Kevorkian was acquitted Monday of helping Thomas Hyde, 30, kill himself. Hyde, who suffered from the degenerative nerve disorder known as Lou Gehrig's disease, could barely walk, talk or feed himself. Kevorkian hooked him up to a canister of carbon monoxide in the back of Kevorkian's van and placed a clear plastic mask over his nose and mouth.

"I think this will open the floodgates for Jack Kevorkian. It was up to the jury to stop him. They had their chance, but they didn't do it," said Lynn Mills of Operation Rescue, which opposes assisted suicide.

Kevorkian refused to say if he will assist any more suicides, but he said people continue to plead for his help.

It had looked like an open-and-shut case. Kevorkian confessed on videotape and practically begged to be arrested.

But the jury slid Kevorkian through a legal loophole, concluding that his main intent was to relieve Hyde's suffering, not cause his death — and that the law allowed that.

Prosecutors had argued that that part of the law was meant to apply to doctors prescribing experimental drugs for the terminally ill.

Yale Kamisar, a professor of constitutional law at the University of Michigan who opposes Kevorkian's cause, said the jury was off base.

"This was the most incredible semantic jungle I've ever seen," Kamisar said. "The jury was obviously confused about intent vs. motive. What you want to do doesn't matter as long as you know what's going to happen."

Jurors also said not all of them believed Hyde died in Wayne County, where Detroit is situated. That was a victory for the defense argument that the Wayne County court had no jurisdiction.

Kevorkian initially led authorities to believe Hyde's suicide took place in a Detroit park. But at the trial he testified that Hyde actually died behind his apartment building in a different county.

Jurors' sympathy for Hyde's suffering also played a role.

"I don't think it's our obligation to choose for someone else how much pain and suffering they should endure," said juror Gail Donaldson, a nurse whose sister and father died after long illnesses.

Kevorkian, who has been present at the deaths of 20 people since 1990, had faced up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine if convicted.

The verdict raises questions about the future of Michigan's assisted-suicide ban, which expires Nov. 25.

The state Court of Appeals is considering three judges' rulings that call the law unconstitutional, and a commission set up to make recommendations to the Legislature on the next step failed to reach a consensus last week.

Kevorkian's trial was the first time assisted-suicide charges went all the way to a jury.

His lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, said the verdict "drives a stake" through the law.

"It wasn't Dr. Kevorkian on trial here," Fieger said. "It was everyone's rights on trial here."

Arthur Caplan, director of the Center for Bioethics at the University of Pennsylvania, said the verdict will intensify the debate about assisted suicide, but it's not likely to change the way doctors care for dying patients.

"It's only one case in very unusual circumstances," Caplan said.

The American Medical Association, which opposes doctor-assisted suicide, said it is concerned about the message sent to old, sick people.

"It's very important that patients not come to believe they are a burden ... and therefore have some sort of duty to ask for assistance in dying," said Dr. Nancy W. Dickey, AMA secretary-treasurer.

Kevorkian said his crusade to allow doctors to help the terminally ill commit suicide is partly selfish.

"I want that option as I get older. And I want it unencumbered, unimpeded, free with my medical colleagues," he said.

Feds' study checked stillborns for radioactive fallout

By The Associated Press

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. — A federally funded study used stillborn fetuses to measure fallout from nuclear weapons testing in the 1950s.

As part of the study, 44 stillborn fetuses were cremated and their remains tested for radioactive strontium 90. The Washington Post reported today.

The tests were led by the University of Chicago for the Atomic Energy Commission, the forerunner of the U.S. Energy Department.

The department doesn't know where the researchers got the fetuses, what the parents knew or what happened to the remains. Energy Department radiation specialist Steve Gallson told the Post.

"We are still trying to find out a lot of things," he said.

Los Alamos National Laboratory said in a statement Monday that the tests were part of a study of fallout from atmospheric tests of nuclear weapons.

The study, known as Project Sunshine, "encompassed collecting and analyzing worldwide samples of soil, air, animal and human tissues, including fetal tissues and stillborns," the lab said.

Los Alamos spokesman John Gustafson told The Associated Press he couldn't elaborate on the Post report because he had not read all the documents on the Chicago tests. The documents were declassified last month, the newspaper said.

Los Alamos' role in Project Sunshine was limited, but it located 26 relevant documents and sent them to the Energy Department after Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary called for the release of information regarding radiation testing on humans during the Cold War.

An emergency may knock at your door

Most people know of destruction caused by Hurricane Andrew which resulted in billions of dollars in damage to southeast Florida.

Only a handful of people however, may remember what happened in September, 1960. Hurricane Donna rampaged its 93 miles per hour winds through Sanford, bringing the waters of Lake Monroe clear up to First Street, and causing many millions of dollars in damage.

As hurricane season begins in June of each year, those who know how serious it can be, hope to go through it without a direct hit.

Weather forecasters may predict only a few or many hurricanes for a season. No one however, knows for certain when we may become the next disaster area.

In regard to this, a saddening situation. The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce was to hold a day-long seminar tomorrow, to help area business owners know about hurricane and other disaster preparedness.

People who are well-versed in the problems hurricanes can cause, were scheduled to speak, and respond to questions. Subjects included how to plan in advance, and how to recover as promptly as possible in case of a disaster.

Yesterday morning, Dave Farr, executive director of the chamber announced the seminar will be cancelled. He said there was apparently not enough interest by area merchants to warrant such an extensive seminar.

Some may have thought the time from 9 a.m. until 3:45 p.m. was too long to take off work. Apparently no one however, suggested the sessions might be broken down into several meetings, which would have been easier to attend.

We believe the reason for the lack of interest is the lack of a threat. If there would be a hurricane of some magnitude out in the Atlantic at this time, Farr would probably not have enough room at the chamber building for the session.

This is becoming all too common. People are getting to the point where they don't do advance planning for something as unpredictable as a hurricane.

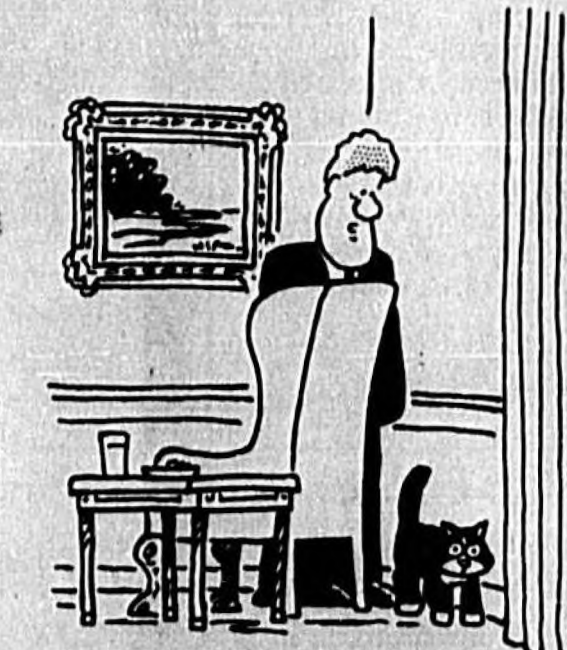

Examples of failure to act early however, can also include not making out a will, not planning for retirement income, ignoring home fire safety, or even wearing a seat belt.

It is a sad situation that such a well-planned seminar had to be cancelled. Perhaps however, if enough people ask, it may be re-scheduled at some time, preferably in the immediate future. Perhaps broken up into more than one day.

The county has an emergency hurricane plan. Most cities do also. How about individuals and businesses?

The day will come when an emergency knocks at your front door. Then is not the time to begin planning what to do.

JOSEPH PERKINS

Kids too often play the victim

President Clinton appeared on MTV this week to find out what was on the minds of America's youth. He had to be troubled. As a New York Times reporter related: "A streak of nihilism ran through many of the questions."

Typical was a query by 17-year-old Dahlia Schweitzer, who wanted to get the president's take on the recent suicide of Kurt Cobain, lead singer of the popular rock group Nirvana.

To the teen-ager's mind, Cobain's self-destruction "exemplified the emptiness that many in our generation feel, the lack of importance we place on life. How do you propose to change this mentality?" she asked.

The president really didn't know what to say, except the perfunctory blather about self-esteem. It seemed clear that he was as lost as most other grown-ups are when it comes to dealing squarely with the problems of young Americans.

What the president should have told young Dahlia is that while Cobain's death is lamentable, he is no victim; he is no icon. For while the 27-year-old rock star truly was gifted, he succumbed to his personal demons. He tried to lose himself in drugs and drink. And when that didn't work, he ended by blowing his brains out.

If young Americans feel empty, it is because their hearts and minds have not been properly filled with values that can sustain them during those dark nights of the soul that everyone faces at some point along life's highway.

Past generations of Americans had a support system they could rely on during the turbulent times of adolescence and young adulthood. They could turn to their parents or their churches or their schools for guidance when confronting the vexing questions of life.

Nowadays, young Americans are pretty much left to themselves to figure out their place in the world. And with no core values to inform their life decisions, they bend toward self-destructive behavior -- prurient sex, substance abuse, criminality, violence, suicide.

Parents and teachers and even clergy feel guilty. They know they have abdicated their moral obligation to set down standards for our youth, to let them know what is expected of them, and to make it clear that they will be held responsible for their actions.

So they are unwilling to pass judgment on youths gone wrong. They make excuses for the bad boys and girls.

Like the prodigal baseball star Darryl Strawberry (last seen playing in MTV's "Rock & Jack" softball game). The 32-year-old slugger, who signed a five-year, $20 million deal with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1991, missed the opening of the 1994 season because of a substance abuse problem.

To the politically correct set, Strawberry is deserving of compassion rather than punishment because he is "suffering" from an "illness" beyond his control. Like Cobain, he is a "victim" of his fondness for alcohol and drugs.

But Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda, a real grown-up, called it right. "If you're putting something in your body that has a chance to hurt you, how in the world can that be a sickness?" he asked.

If young Americans feel empty, it is because their hearts and minds have not been properly filled with values.

SARAH OVERSTREET

How to survive the generation gap

My father's been dead for 15 years, but I almost looked around to see where he was sitting when I heard someone say "Damn right!" The voice couldn't have been mine.

Andy Rooney was holding forth on the kids grieving over grunge rocker Kurt Cobain's suicide. Rooney was generally disparaging the kids' feelings of angst and anomie, with this bottom line: "Hey, these kids ain't got NUTTIN' to complain about!" Kids of previous generations had sweatshops, the Depression and world wars to worry about. These kids sniveling over a whining millionaire, who could find nothing in disgustingly opulent success worth living for, made Rooney sick.

But just whose voice was this emanating from my couch calling out "damn right!" anyway? The woman who was so very aware of the generations preceding her back when she was a teen and young adult -- that one? Too bad my parents aren't here to tell you.

I didn't begin to appreciate the sweatshop kids, those children without childhoods or schooling, fingers and hands backed off by factory machines, until I was past my own youth. The hollow eyes of adults retelling stories of walking to school wearing shoes held together with twine and cardboard in the Depression, of subsisting for weeks on only turnips and potatoes, didn't break my heart until I was well into adulthood.

The Vietnam War taught me grief for young men and women whose lives ended too soon, not the stories of young people a generation older than me. Only when early death touched people my own age did I truly understand its impact.

When I was the ages of these young people holding candle-light vigils for Cobain, I had very little perspective of history, of how good I had it compared to those who came before me. History books had been almost like reading fiction: When I closed the book, it ceased to be real. What I was interested in was what was happening to me now, the feeling and hurts and traumas I thought no one understood, least of all my parents.

In other words, I had the foresight of a gopher. I had to learn the sweep of history, and visualize where I fit into it, by hindsight. And do I do any better with middle age? Do I compare my midlife with my predecessors', look at the furniture I own that my parents never had, the house they'd never have spent so much money on because the Depression might be just around the corner, and appreciate how much better I have it than they did?

Only when I'm pressed, or when something forces me to. Most of the time I'm looking sideways at people of my own generation: at their houses, their furniture, their swell careers.

I can't say I don't often look at the teen-agers and young adults in my life and wish they'd develop more of an appreciation of what came before them and what they have. I sometimes get so exasperated I'd like to shake them and yell, "Don't you see what you possess, the wonder that you are? How DARE you waste it? COULDN'T YOU AT LEAST READ THIS CHAPTER IN WAYNE DYER'S LATEST BESTSELLER, WHICH I'VE ALREADY HIGHLIGHTED FOR YOU?"

But the only thing I can do is exert the one real power my parents had over me, the power of example. I have to ask myself, "What are they seeing from me on those rare occasions when they look at me instead of themselves or their peers? Someone who appreciates my gifts, uses them to the fullest and appreciates the wonder of it all?"

The voice couldn't have been mine.

DONNA BRITT

The price you pay for love

The diaper bag, stuck on a shelf in her closet, is filled with new baby clothes. Sometimes, in the midst of searching for the right dress or a stray shoe, the woman who bought them sees the bag. And wonders, "Who, one day, will wear these?"

Another woman is still accepting armfuls of sleepers, rompers and baby booties from friends. So consumed is she by the love that radiates from her to her infant daughter and back again that she sometimes forgets to include her husband in its flow.

Babies, born and unborn, can do things to you.

Weeks ago, I wrote columns about each woman. Nay-Nay, an unmarried, then-unemployed student whom I've known since she was 12, bought clothes and a toy lamb for a baby she later decided to abort.

Lonnae O'Neal Parker, an editorial assistant at The Washington Post, spent her pregnancy alternating between joy over expecting a baby with a husband she adores and dread over the violent world "Baby X" would face. Her feelings fueled a letter to her baby-to-be, which I quoted.

But when Sydney Noelle Parker arrived Feb. 24 -- with her own Tic-Tac-size toes and kissably ragged hairline -- Lonnae felt a love beyond anything she's envisioned. And a terror.

Neither woman is entirely comfortable. But neither would change a thing.

"I think about it," admits Nay, 24. "About how far along I'd be now-five months. ...I think about Aug. 29 -- that was the due date. ..."

Her hands are in her dark auburn hair. She ruffles, then smooths it.

"I try not to get into that because I can't change it. Even if I could, I wouldn't."

She has a new secretarial job. She has broken up with the boyfriend who had offered to marry her, a decision that she says has nothing to do with what happened in that clinic. "We were just wrong."

And her promise never again to have unmarried sex?

"I was in a committed relationship when I said that," she says. "It seemed like we'd get married in six months. ...Never to have sex again, until I get married? That seems so far away."

"But if I have to, I will use three methods (of birth control). And if it happens again, I'll have the baby."

She sees the question in my eyes. "I take it very seriously. I still tell the baby I'm sorry. He ...knows."

When she says she had the abortion out of love, I ask, "For whom?"

"My selfish side says having a baby right now would have meant sacrificing everything," she says. "The unselfish side is that there's no baby suffering here with me. Because I know I would be suffering. If you love something, you do what's best for it. I know I did what's best."

There's no need to ask Lonnae Parker what she knows. It suffuses her face when she looks at her daughter, floats off her voice like music when she exclaims, "Look, it's de-baby-girl!"

Before the birth, she says, "I was feeling afraid of the carnage, death, cruelty we're bombarded with. ...I had to put a wall up."

"But when I [first] looked at Sydney, all less than 10 pounds of her, I felt again this acute sense of vulnerability. ...I realized that's the price you pay for all that love."

She says she and her husband, Ralph, have sometimes gone for days without reading a newspaper, creating a "cocoon" where "I didn't know anything about Rwanda or that the Serbs had just laughed at that treaty or people doing their normal gun dance in the District."

Then I turned on the TV. ...The contrast (of what's going on in the world with what's going on with me and my baby, it assaults you."

She says she made a promise to her baby to protect her. "I had to. ...Before, she was my amorphous Baby X. Now she's Sydney. ...I want her to go to high school like I [did], not under armed guard. I don't want her innocence stripped from her. And I'm afraid. ..."

She pauses. "But you're more afraid when you do nothing. If you're doing some small thing, touching one person, you're on the front line. ...A sorority sister of mine adopted two crack babies -- and she's single." She said, "I'm not prepared to keep losing our children."

"When you imagine pain," concludes Parker, "it's much worse than what you actually go through. ...Before I went into labor, I imagined all this stuff. And it really was the most painful thing. But I didn't dwell there -- I was working, on screaming, kicking, pushing."

"You go through it," she says, "and it's done."

It will be some time before either of these women -- the one with the baby and the one without -- arrives at "done."

Babies, born and unborn, can do things to you.

Governor

confirmed April 14 by the U.S. Senate. Gov. Lawton Chiles must appoint a replacement from a list of three finalists, expected to be submitted in June by the Supreme Court Judicial Nominating Commission.

"It's very possible that a woman may be appointed, but your guess is as good as mine as to who it will be," said Justice Stephen Grimes, who succeeded Barkett last month as chief justice of the seven-member court.

At least three prominent South Florida judges and a lawyer — three of them women — have said they'll apply for Barkett's seat. And Chiles, seeking re-election in November, may want to maintain diversity on the court.

"I hope it's true," said one woman applicant, 4th District Court of Appeal Judge Bobby Gunther. "But I'm also hoping my 20 years of experience on the bench will be a factor."

Broward Circuit Judge Mittle Burnstein and West Palm Beach attorney Marjorie Gadarian Graham have also said they plan to apply by the May 19 deadline.

"Diversity is wonderful, but not diversity for its own sake," said Burnstein. "You've got to be qualified. But as far as the balance on the court, those are political decisions only the governor can make."

The fourth expected applicant in 4th District Court of Appeal Judge Harry Lee Anstead, nominated three times since 1985. He lost out to Barkett, later to Grimes, and most recently to Justice Major Harding.

Chiles' spokesman, Ron Sachs, declined to comment on the selection other than to say the governor is committed to keeping the court representative of Florida.

Another vacancy will be created by Justice Parker Lee McDonald's scheduled retirement this month.

But the nominating commission has already named three men as finalists for his seat: 5th District Court of Appeal Judge Gilbert Goshorn of Titusville and Emerson Thompson Jr. of Orlando, and Orlando attorney Charles Wells.

If Thompson were selected he and Justice Leander Shaw would be the Supreme Court's only two black members.

men pulled a gun, and robbed him of his wallet which contained cocaine used in the sting operation, the officer's handgun, and number other items.

As the men returned to the car, the officer said one pointed a gun at his head and fired. The officer was not hit.

Alerted by a hidden radio system, other officers arrived at the scene, followed the three men and apprehended them.

They were identified as Buddy

Will, 44, 2340 Jitway, and Jimmie Hampton, 32, 2251 Greenway, both in the Midway area, and Robert Demp, 30, from Orlando.

Each of the three was charged with attempted murder, armed robbery, possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, and in connection with the theft of the officer's gun, grand theft.

Meanwhile, members of the Sanford police department Special Investigative unit were checking several additional areas. Near 6th and Cypress, they arrested Jonnell Lee Scott, 23, of Lake Monroe, on charges of sale/delivery of crack cocaine, and possession with intent to distribute.

At 11th and Maple, police arrested Dennis Grooms Sr., 42, 821 Holly Ave., Sanford. He was charged with sale/delivery of a controlled substance.

On Friday, officers of the City/County Investigative Bureau arrested a Longwood man and a Casselberry man in a drug stake-out on Anchor Road in Altamonte Springs.

the twin bridges over Lake Jesup and back again. There's no set time for the opening, but most expressway officials expect the roadway to be open by late afternoon.

Not all work will be complete, however. The northern exit and entrance ramps at SR 434 won't be done for another month, said expressway construction spokesman Gayle Geddes. A persistent nesting eagle contributed to the latest delay of the section between SR 434 and the lake, so work was focused on opening the main lanes before the ramps, Geddes said.

Crews were still paving portions of the three-quarter mile stretch of road between SR 434 and the lake Monday morning as local media toured the project.

Work began on the 12-mile tollroad in winter 1991 and was expected to be done by last fall, but weather, nesting eagles and contractor's delays in obtaining dirt stalled work for half a year.

The $200 million project won't be fully completed until later this decade when local officials hope the "missing link" between US 17-92 and Interstate 4 will be filled. The project is expected to cost $190 million and will be paid largely by the state.

Local officials are seeking $68 million from the federal government to link the tollroad to I-4 to complete the eastern beltway around the greater Orlando area.

and woods are giving way to homes and stores at points all along the roadway. Still, the highway passes by swampy areas and locations where once-isolated farmhouses now share fences with the roadway right of way.

Brinton said commuters will have only one stop to make on the tollroad, to pay a toll.

Sanford and Lake Mary-area commuters will pay the $1.50 toll once when traveling south over the lake. Commuters won't pay additional fees to exit anywhere in Seminole County, although they will pay Orange County tolls once they travel south of the border. Northbound commuters will pay 25, 50 or 75 cents to get off south of the lake or $1.50 to continue north of the lake.

Expressway exits and entrances begin at Aloma Avenue and continue northward at Red Bug Lake Road, SR 434, County Road 427 and Lake Mary Boulevard. Northernmost traffic will exit directly onto US 17-92 and enter by way of Airport Boulevard east of US 17-92.

earned the rank of Eagle Scout. As a part of his service project a disabled Cambodian woman was relocated from a Thai internment camp to her home in Cambodia. He used his skills as a "ham radio" operator to locate international resources and to contact aid officials as far away as Thailand.

He also operated his ham radio to help victims of Hurricane Andrew through the American Red Cross and he worked with students in Seminole and Orange counties who contacted astronauts aboard the space shuttle with ham radios.

Kramer has been conducting research on high temperature superconductor antennas in the ultra high frequency radio band. That research has brought him numerous awards, including being able to watch the liftoff of the space shuttle Atlantis as a NASA VIP. He has also presented technical papers to professional organizations.

Kramer said he has financed his research and his ham radio operations through his job at Fishy Business.

He said he lives by Edison's motto "Success is one percent inspiration and ninety nine percent perspiration."

He said, "I believe if you are truly willing to focus time, effort and energy into a school and service oriented activities, success will be the final outcome."

The Commissioner's Choice Award is a $1,000 scholarship presented by Commissioner Larry Furlong as part of a campaign promise made in 1990 to donate one-quarter of his salary to educational scholarships for the hardest working seniors in the Seminole County schools.

John Melanson, owner of Best Pawn, surrounded by many of the items available for sale or trade.

Get More Than You'd Expect At Best Pawn

Webster's Dictionary defines "pawn" as "something delivered to or deposited with another as security for a loan." Best Pawn owner John Melanson got into the pawn business because he felt it was "the coming thing" - because he could offer affordable, quality merchandise to people who need it, as well as loaning money to those in a financial bind.

Best pawn will buy, sell or trade most anything of value, except guns or firearms. The shop, located in the Pinecrest Shopping Center (corner of 17-92 and 27th Street in Sanford) is loaded with items ranging from answering machines to xylophones. Melanson takes consignment items as well as collateral items on 30 day contracts. Pawn items are returned to customers at the end of the contract for a set fee. All items are carefully inspected by Melanson before they are sold to make sure they are in good working order. Right now, Melanson has many name brand items in stock, ranging from tools, electronics, water and snow skis, exercise equipment, fishing equipment and boat motors, guitars, golf clubs, chainsaws, used Nintendo games and micro-cams to men's decorative cufflinks, pieces of jewelry, and loose stones.

Melanson specializes in jewelry. He is a bench jeweler, offering repairs and custom jewelry made to order. He has a large selection of loose stones and can melt down your old gold jewelry for new pieces and settings. Melanson had twenty five years experience in the jewelry business. Best Pawn also offers free jewelry cleaning.

Melanson is originally from Montreal, Canada, immigrating to the United States in 1959, and settling in Daytona Beach. Melanson did a three year stint with the U.S. Army in the Military Police CID Division. He then attended Daytona Beach Community College for two years, majoring in business. He has lived in the Orlando area for the past twelve years and opened Best Pawn in Sanford this past March.

Melanson invites everyone to come in and browse. Melanson says a lot of people stop in to look and shop when shopping the other stores in the Pinecrest Shopping Center. Best Pawn is open Monday through Friday 9:30 AM - 6:00 PM. Melanson requires an 18-year-old age limit with proper identification to pawn any item. Call Best Pawn at 330-4814 for more information.

Drivers survive 'full moon rally' on VCS dirt track

By BILL BIERBERT
 Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — There wasn't a full moon at Volusia County Speedway Friday night, but the way the bumping and grinding went on all night long on the dirt track, there should have been.

When the dust, and crumpled sheet metal, had cleared, David Showers won the Late Model feature. Bobby Peterson took Pro Stock. Scott Lawson claimed Mini Stock and Kathy Gaikey found her way back to the winner's circle in Hobby Stock.

Showers had to work his way to the front from the sixth starting position after getting a bad draw for the feature start.

But Showers got a little help, as three caution flags before the completion of the first lap knocked out a few of the cars in front of him. He took the lead away from Shane Williams on lap six and led the rest of the way, finishing ahead of Williams, Bill Kopka, John Rankin and Gary Flynn.

"That's the first time we've had to push it for several weeks," Showers said from the Sportsoutlet Victory

Lane. "The race was a lot of fun. Now that we've got the car to push, maybe it will do what we want."

Peterson, driving Shane Williams' Southern Masonry Special, took the lead on the first lap and was chased for 27 laps by Brian Bales. But Bales fell off the pace to a seventh place finish behind Peterson, Dennis Maples, Stacy Mathen, Daniel Miller, Richard Adams and Chad Kriser.

"This is only the second time I've raced on dirt," Peterson said, "and there is a lot of difference from racing on asphalt. I want to thank them for letting me drive Shane's car. It's got a lot under the hood."

Shuffling and bumping in the early laps of the Mini Stock finale settled down as Lawson jumped into the lead on lap five and led Ronnie Ponce, Tom Mulligan, Monty Stratton and Davy Cline to the checkers.

Shaw Hallman, last week's photo-finish winner in Hobby Stock, started on the pole Friday night and stayed in the lead until lap nine, when Gaikey blasted into the lead and back into the winner's circle.

She was followed by Robert Hicks, Lonnie Register, Hallman and Donnie Bostie.

Stiffey lives to help make other lives better

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

Friends, family and acquaintances cruising Sanford frequently spot a gray minivan scurrying down the roadways to yet another activity. Hanging on the back window a small sign swings with the words, "Every thing on board." The vehicle's driver, a smiling Jeannette Stiffey, hurriedly bustles here and there with more volunteer work than time would allow the average person. People of all ages can be found strapped in seat belts being transported to church, doctor's appointments, school, auctions, gymnastics classes, grocery store shopping or just another errand.

Stiffey, known by some of the little ones as Momma Jeannette or Nana, has a reputation of always being willing to help. She volunteers much of her time to all and in any way she can assist. Her husband of 31 years, George, shares much of that burden along with her. They made their home in Sanford soon after they were married, 31 years in June to be exact. She earned a bachelor's degree in physical education and health and began teaching in 1963 at Sanford Middle School. "I quit to have my children," she said.

Quitting not only allowed Stiffey more time with her children, but more hours to devote to all those who needed her. Tom, Sandy and Stacy are her three children that she often spoke with pride. She spends as much of her spare time with her grandsons, Ryan and Brandon. Not only does she find an excuse to see them by helping her son, Tom, and his wife, Cindy, with their auction business but Nana loves to spoil them with frequent visits to tuck them in or a short stay at her home.

Stiffey has been actively involved with the schools in the area since her own children attended Idyllwild Elementary. "I helped set up the clinic at Idyllwild," she said. "I was president of the PTA there and at Sanford Middle School and on the boards at Seminole High School." She has worked many tireless hours as a Dividend. "I started helping at the school before it was noted as the Dividend program," she said. "I have 200 to 1,000 hours a year in the program. I had 1,000 hours several years. I began 17 years ago." Not only has her time been appreciated but she continues to keep score at the girl's basketball games at Seminole High School. Past involvement with the Seminole

High School band has earned Stiffey much recognition also. "I helped set up the scholarship program at Seminole," she said. "I'm still a substitute teacher with the Seminole County school system."

In the area of recognition, Mayor Smith honored Stiffey and her husband in 1990 and set aside one day as "Stiffey Day." Dave Farr from the chamber and Mayor Smith gave us a plaque," she said modestly. "Several family members, people from Idyllwild and Seminole, Kiwanis and others told of how we worked with the schools. They had a special program at the chamber."

Her work doesn't stop there. Stiffey is very active at the Sanford Church of Christ. She works under the director of education as the coordinator of the preschool and school-age departments. Everyone can count on her to pitch in at preachers' luncheons, showers, preparing meals for shut-ins, or at fellowships. Many of the older women and young mothers with children have been rescued many a time by the loving hand of Stiffey. She has affectionately adopted many of them as her moms, daughters, and grandkids. Her many trips wherever needed have brought groceries, medical help and other services to them. Stiffey, herself, said her main motivation of her constant service to others is "devotion to God and family," whether it be work in the church or in the community.

Almost daily, Stiffey can be found at the Sanford Gymnastics Association building. Stacey, her daughter, can be found working along side Mom. She has organized sales to benefit the association as well as much of the operations. "I run the programs, hire coaches and do bookkeeping," she said. "I've been working with them since my oldest were in third and fifth grade. My kids were interested in gymnastics, so I enrolled them at Idyllwild." That was over 17 years ago and Stiffey still supports the gymnastics program through her tireless service.

It seems to sum up Stiffey and all her work. She is the volunteer of all volunteers. Whenever or wherever the need, she will be there to help or assist. People joke that even her purse has everything on board, to meet a need. Full size scissors, band-aids, Kleenex, Tylenol, paper, paper clips and more fill a need. Always ready to lend a hand, that's Stiffey. God blessed this volunteer with endless energy and a heart of gold.

Attorney makes a case to legalize drugs

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter you published from "Inmate 711895" and had to respond. "Inmate" stated that he smoked marijuana for 20 years, and during that time, he also used cocaine. If his consumption of those substances was so harmful, how was it that he was married, had a good job, a home in the suburbs and a clean record? In other words, if used in moderation, drugs do not prevent a person from leading a normal, productive life.

His letter was much more of an indictment against drug prohibition. This letter could have been written 65 years ago by someone convicted of selling beer or whiskey. It took a commission headed by a fellow named Wickersham to bring an end to the folly of alcohol prohibition.

Surgeon General Elders has called for a similar commission to study whether the benefit of some forms of drug legalization might outweigh the tremendous cost of prohibition.

Abby, if cocaine were a drug sold by licensed dealers, inmate

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

711895 would still be home supporting his family.

ROBERT E. POTTRATZ, MINNESOTA ATTORNEY
DEAR MR. POTTRATZ: Just as bootleggers were forced out of business in 1933 when Prohibition was repealed, making the sale of liquor legal (thus eliminating racketeering), the legalization of drugs would put drug dealers out of business. It would also guarantee government-approved quality, and the tax on drugs would provide an ongoing source of revenue for drug-education programs. An added plus: There would be far less crowding in our prisons due to drug-related crimes. It's something to consider.

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for approximately 10 years. This is a second marriage for both of us. We both have children who are over 30. The marriage is basically sound, except for one thing.

My husband's son snoops into everything that is none of his business. When we got married, I bought a house, and my new stepson immediately had a friend check the records at the recorder's office to find out how much I paid for it. He also flew to the city where we got married and photocopied our marriage certificate.

I am a very private person and am not used to this sort of thing. It has given me ulcers, and I don't know if I can put up with this for the rest of my life. I would like to be able to tell him tactfully to stay out of my business. He lives in the same town and has the same first and middle names as my husband.

NO NAME OR CITY, PLEASE
DEAR NO NAME: You do not need a third person to let your stepson know you want him to stay out of your business, nor should you have to worry about being tactful. Tell him, in the same words you have told me, and if he still doesn't get the message, clip this out of your newspaper and mail it to him.

DEAR ABBY: There is only one response to your recent list of 12 dieting tips credited to Becky Tigges at The Colony, Texas: A waist is a terrible thing to mind.

JOSEPH A. KARELITZ, DALLAS

In the works: Personal phone number for all

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Before long, most Americans could have a single telephone number that will ring them at home, work or anywhere else they go in the country — and eventually around the world.

The all-purpose number is a key feature of a new generation of mobile phone service called personal communications service.

The pocket-sized phones will look much like existing cellular or cordless devices and work on wireless communications networks that allow calls to a person, rather than to a place. That would eliminate the need for separate listings for home, office and car, for example. And callers trying to track someone down wouldn't have to look up the number of, say, a restaurant, theater or health club.

Manufacturers say phones initially could range in price from $150 to $900, depending on capabilities. Consumers who buy them through companies that provide the new mobile service may pay less.

The service is being tested in a few U.S. markets, and the Federal Communications Commission plans to auction licenses this fall, clearing the way for companies to offer the service throughout the United States.

A license entitles a company to operate on a sliver of the public airwaves and to provide service to designated geographic areas. It could then take a couple of years for a company to build wireless networks and begin offering service.

Phones for the new networks should be available next year and the service could be operating in most parts of the country within 10 years, manufacturers said.

Like other new products, the prices of the phones are expected to come down over time. "One day they'll be cheap enough for parents to give to their kids — hang them from their belt loops — to find out where their 10-year-old is," said Douglas Smith, president of Omnipoint Corp., whose company is a leading developer in the new wireless business.

The phones would be smaller and lighter than existing cellular and cordless phones and would use less power, thereby extending battery life, one of the biggest problems with portable and cellular phones today.

For instance, a phone being developed in a joint venture by Sony and Qualcomm could be used for eight hours before needing a recharge.

In addition, the phone could stay on to receive a call for 72 hours straight, said Larry Haudigan, president of personal communications services for Qualcomm in San Diego.

Today's cellular phones offer one to two hours of talk time and between seven and 12 hours of standby time, he said.

Nokia Mobile Phones in Largo, Fla., developed a phone that weighs 8.3 ounces and is less than an inch thick, said Osmo Hautanen, vice president of personal communication services. Most phones on the drawing boards are at least 8 inches high to run from mouth to ear.

Some companies are developing phones that would work on the hard-wired public telephone network, as well as on wireless communications networks.

Stress incontinence is common problem

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you comment on the success (or failure) of surgery for stress incontinence? Several of my friends and I would like to be more active in sports, but this deters us from participating. What does the surgery entail?

DEAR READER: Stress incontinence (the leakage of urine during straining, coughing or sneezing) is a common problem in women, especially those who have experienced childbirth. In my view, surgery usually provides an effective cure. If the use of a pessary (to support the bladder) or Kegel exercises (to improve bladder control) fail to solve the problem, during the operation, the gynecologist repositions the bladder and may remove the uterus, which often sags deep into the pelvis and affects a woman's ability to hold her urine.

Of course, the success of surgery depends largely on the skill of the surgeon. Nonetheless, when properly performed, the operation can make an enormous difference for an active woman. I suggest that you obtain an opinion from a qualified gynecologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 41-year-old healthy female who is exhausted most of the time and can barely stay awake after midday. I've had this problem all my life. Your opinion?

DEAR READER: Chronic fatigue is a challenging diagnostic problem that can be caused by many afflictions, ranging from hypothyroidism and hidden infection to anemia and depression. Because you have been exhausted for many years, you probably do not have cancer or a serious infection, such as Lyme disease, both of which can cause chronic fatigue. I don't know what kinds of examinations and tests you have had, but -- clearly

-- you need the services of an internist, a diagnostic specialist, to discover the source of your symptom, using blood tests and X-rays.

Ask your doctor to refer you to

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Along with the trophy for the most masterpoints won in all events during the calendar year, the American Contract Bridge League also has an award for the player who wins the most masterpoints in national championships. Last year the winner was Bob Hamman, who is also many people's pick as the greatest player of all time.

A big, likable man with a keen sense of humor, Hamman probably makes fewer mistakes than any other player. Today's deal was child's play for him.

When the dummy came down, Hamman saw that with two diamond losers, he had to play the clubs for one loser only. Before continuing, he paused to work out the distribution. Could the heart lead be a singleton? Hardly, when East didn't bid two hearts, West can't have the A-K of diamonds, or he would have led a top diamond. And if East has honors in each red suit, he would have raised with four diamonds, maybe with three. Also, given those red-suit honors, East cannot have the club king too. He would have bid something. Finally, as West has three or four hearts and six or seven diamonds, he must be short in clubs.

Hamman won the first trick with dummy's heart ace and played a club to his ace, dropping West's king. Still not home, Hamman cashed the spade ace, played a spade to dummy's queen and called for a low club. Luckily, after East inserted the nine, West couldn't ruff South's queen. Hamman drew the last trump and conceded three minor-suit tricks, his eight and dummy's 10 of clubs being good enough to score one trick against East's J-7.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 4, 1994

In the year ahead you might take on more responsibilities than you did in the past year. Some of these assignments will be mandatory, while other may be of your own choosing. The benefits could be gratifying in both cases.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be mindful of your social graces today, because if you do something unbecoming, it might be remembered for a long time. Conversely, the same will be true of good impressions. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even though you might be tempted to do so today, it's best not to take credit for things you didn't do. When this ploy is discovered, and it will be, it could prove embarrassing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You should do rather well getting what you go after today, yet you might not be overly pleased with the fruits of your victory. Keep expectations within reasonable limits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have any problems in your love life today, iron things out with your partner instead of bringing in a third party who could just muddy the water.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today if you negotiate any important agreements, be sure everything is put in writing and not merely agreed upon verbally. This is for the protection of all concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Persons whose help you might need where your work or career is concerned may take positions contrary to yours today. Be prepared for the unexpected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) What is merely a harmless flirtation today where you are concerned might be taken seriously by the person to whom you direct your attention. Be extremely careful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be mindful of those in your charge today without being unduly possessive. The tighter you attempt to hold them, the harder they will try to squirm out of your grip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The results are likely to be desirable today, provided you are working on labors of love. If you aren't, you might be too proud to sign your signature to your poorly performed work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you hope to receive today you must first set the example as a giver. Others aren't likely to treat you generously if they feel you are being tight fisted with them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Probabilities for material gains are reasonably good today, but don't do anything at the expense of others. Cut your profit down a little if it will keep your reputation intact.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You should be pretty good at grasping the big picture today, but you might fall short where details are concerned. Be equally attentive in both areas.
