HPB meeting

SANFORD — The Historic Preservation Board will meet this Thursday, Nov. 14, at Sanford City Hall. A number of applications are to be considered for COA (Certificate of Appropriateness), as well as acknowledgement of 22 minor review committee actions.

The meeting, in the city commission conference room, is scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m.

Calling all singers

SANFORD — Contrary to what some may believe, the song, "Twelve Days of Christmas" did not include a certain number of singers singing Sanford Main Street wants to change that and is seeking help from church choirs and individuals.

For WinterFest 96, coming up on Dec. 6th and 7th, attempts are being undertaken to put together a community choir. The group would perform traditional Christmas songs in a performance at 6 p.m. on the 6th.

Dan Sellers is to be the director, with rehearsals scheduled for 7 p.m. on Nov. 21, and 7 p.m. on Dec. 2 at First United Methodist Church.

According to Toby Troutman, who is involved in helping form the group, "Our goal is to demonstrate a community-wide unified spirit. We want to bring people together."

Troutman said she had attempted to contact several dozen churches in the Sanford area, but believed a public announcement may do more good, and hopefully attract more persons, including those representing particular churches.

For additional information or to volunteer to be in this special chorus, phone 322-1914.

Calling all helpers

SANFORD — Sanford Main Street is seeking volunteers to help in WinterFest 96. According to volunteer organizer Jennifer Singelsen, "If you would like to either volunteer your time or even participate in this year's annual downtown holiday parade, then don't just read this feeling like Scrooge, saying "Bah humbug." Call and we'll put your time, talents and enthusiasm into making this year's parade the crowning event of Sanford's WinterFest.

To participate or volunteer, call Singelsen at 322-5600, leaving your name and telephone number. A worker will be in contact with you as soon as possible.

Sanford Main Street office is located at 101 W. First Street.

Career night

SANFORD — Tonight is Career Night at Seminole Community College. From 6:30 until 9 p.m., representatives will be in the SCC Student Center to answer questions relating to career outlooks, required training for specific careers, financial aid, and scholarship opportunities.

County asks for additional audit of Land Acquisition Division

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The investigation into what the county is calling "improprieties" in the land acquisition division of the public works department is expanding.

Already the target of investigations by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and the subject of a pair of audits, the division is going to be the subject of yet another audit.

The Seminole County Board of County Commissioners agreed Tuesday to stall recommendations that the Seminole County Sheriff's Office will conduct a new investigation into the land acquisition division, looking into violations of county personnel policies and state ethics standards.

An internal investigation, conducted last month by county attorney Lonnie Groot and assistant county manager Cindy Coto revealed that Joyce Suber, who was coordinator of the land acquisition division, had violated several SANFORD — The weekend of Dec. 6, 7, 8 in Sanford could prove to be one of the biggest in years, insofar as people attending and participating in events. Several thousand people are predicted to be at various activities.

Some members of the Sanford City Commission however, indicated they have concerns, especially with two of the events planning to serve alcoholic beverages into the nighttime hours.

Sanford Main Street is sponsoring WinterFest 96, which will include a holiday lighting contest, parade, and other activities. This is the one event which does not plan on serving alcoholic beverages.

Most of the WinterFest events will take place on First Street between Park Avenue and Palmetto Avenue, in the heart of downtown Sanford.

Agreement keeps rapid rail plans on track

By NICK PPRIFAUP
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While studies, meetings, discussions and planning continue on the route over which commuter rail service will run from Sanford to Orlando, plans are also under way toward establishing, and of more importance, financing high-speed rail service from the Orlando destination to Tampa and Miami.

Still possibly a decade or more off, both projects could be completed at approximately the same time.

Depending on the route selected, alongside Interstate-4 or adjacent to the present CSX railroad tracks, the costs for the commuter rail project still remain to be determined.

With everything in place, riders will (someday) be able to board the light rail train in downtown

Sanford or near Seminole Towne Center, and ride to Orlando, where they will change to rapid-rail, heading to Miami or Tampa.

The rapid rail system however, may mean Florida taxpayers will spend $174 million and private companies another $58 million, just for detailed engineering and feasibility studies.

In all, with construction, an estimated cost of $5 billion has been attached to the rapid rail project.

The money depends on federal bond guarantees, but they still remain to be obtained. An agreement Tuesday however, between the state and Florida Overland Express keeps the project on track, Department of Transportation Secretary Ben Watts said.

"I think we're right on schedule," Watts said.

The $232 million is to be spend over the next

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Judge to allow sweet defense

WEST PALM BEACH — A judge says he's not impressed, but he will allow the defense for a burglary suspect to claim insanity caused by cotton candy.

Skyrocketing blood sugar drove Wesley Shaffer crazy enough to break into a Boca Raton home last year and abscond with a bag of jewelry, he claims.

"To say that I'm highly skeptical of the evidence put forward would be putting it mildly," Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Edward Garrison said Tuesday.

But he agreed to let Shaffer's defense give it a try.

Assistant State Attorney Krista Rothman, intends to call her own experts to counter defense experts' opinions that Shaffer, who then didn't know he is diabetic, was acting out as a result of a sugar-induced psychosis suffered after eating 1 1/2 bags of cotton candy the night before the burglary.

"It will make for an interesting trial. We'll see how a jury of six feels about it," Rothman said.

When arrested, Shaffer, 57, of Miami, was wearing all black, had a loaded gun in his waistband and burglary tools, police said.

Confession OK for court martial

JACKSONVILLE — A sailor's apparent confession, tossed out of a civilian court, can be used at his court-martial in the death of his 3-year-old son, a Navy judge has ruled.

Civilian prosecutors dropped their case against Timothy J. Ellis, 29, after a state judge said the statement could not be used because it was coerced by police. The case was turned over to the Navy for prosecution.

Ellis, a petty officer second class at Jacksonville Naval Air Station, faces murder and assault charges in the death of his son, Timothy Ellis Jr.

The boy died June 8, 1984, four days after he was admitted to the hospital with head injuries. An autopsy found that he died from brain injuries caused by a skull fracture.

The state judge ruled that Ellis' statement was coerced by detectives who threatened to arrest him and his wife and send their five children to foster homes unless one of them confessed to killing the boy. An appeals court upheld the ruling.

But late Friday, the Navy judge, Capt. Daniel D'Alonzo, ruled that the statement could be used in a military court, said Miriam Lareau, a Navy spokeswoman. No further details were released on the judge's decision, the Florida Times-Union in Jacksonville reported today.

Lareau said no trial date has been set. If convicted, Ellis could be sentenced to life in prison.

Killer: child was easy

BARTOW — A man accused of beating his stepdaughter to death, then faking her abduction, told jurors he didn't call police after she died because he was scared they would destroy his family.

"I went out into the living room and sat on the couch and cried with my wife," testified John Zile, 34, who is charged with first-degree murder in the 1984 death of 7-year-old Christina Holt.

"I didn't call 911 because I thought she was already dead. I was afraid that they would take my kids and my family would be broken up."

Zile is accused of beating Christina to death. Prosecutors say that after burying her, he and his wife tried to hide the crime by concocting a story about her being abducted from a Fort Lauderdale flea market.

The child's body eventually was uncovered in a field near a Kmart in the Palm Beach County town of Tequesta.

His wife, Pauline Zile, was convicted last year and sentenced to life in prison.

Zile said the child became a discipline problem shortly after starting second grade. Christina, his wife's daughter from a previous relationship, had been dropped on the couple's doorstep weeks earlier by a relative who had cared for her in Maryland since she was born.

"She would lie, she would get easy. She wouldn't do what she was asked to do," he said.

Zile said Christina told him and his wife that she had been sexually molested while living with her grandmother. But, he said, the child kept changing details about who molested her.

He said he became frustrated about the inconsistencies and her behavior problems, and spanked her on several occasions. He and his wife also pulled her out of school and planned to teach her at home.

The day the girl died, Zile testified, he had called her from her bedroom to discuss the problems.

He said he "fished her on the face," and became angry at her for defecating in her pants. Then he spanked her several times, he said, and she began having a seizure.

"She started clawing at herself. I panicked at that point," Zile said. He said he tried to perform CPR on the girl, and also tried to take her pulse.

Senator does the right thing for Florida and Democrats

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — When Bob Graham first went to the U.S. Senate, many of his boosters said it was a stop over on the way to bigger things.

Today, a decade later, it appears the Senate could be his final political destination.

Graham announced Monday he would seek a third term in 1990, forgoing an opportunity to win the Democratic Party's nomination for governor.

Why?

"If you're looking for one pivotal thing that may have swung it, I think it's when he got on the finance committee," Jay Hakea, a former Graham adviser, said Tuesday. "It's a committee that deals with Medicare, social security and the whole tax system. It postures him very well to have an effect on the issues that affect Florida."

By staying in Washington, Graham puts his growing seniority to work for the state and at the same time avoids a major Democratic intraparty battle.

"The bottom line, all in all, he really didn't relish the thought of two years worth of campaigning and at the same time trying to be effective in the Senate," said Susan MacManus, a political scientist at the University of South Florida.

Loyalty too, was a factor. He has already been governor, serving in that office the eight years before winning election to the Senate.

"He's been in politics a long time and understands that there is a place for everybody and the more people who have a place, the better off your party is especially in these days when Democrats are losing in the registration battle," she said.

"He wouldn't be remembered well by cutting his own."

Indeed, Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay has long sought to win a statewide office on his own and his chances for the gubernatorial nomination soared when Graham said he'd stay put.

Even partisan Republicans saluted Graham's intention to bypass an early return home to make a run for a third term in 1990.

"I've always credited Graham with having pretty good instincts," says GOP boss Tom Slade said Tuesday. "His decision was the wise decision for Bob Graham. He'll be a difficult follow for us to beat."

Grand jury to decide on cop shooting

LARGO — A grand jury deciding whether a police officer was justified when he fatally shot a black motorist finished hearing from witnesses and began deliberating.

The 16-member panel, which meets in secret, has heard testimony from almost 50 witnesses. It will decide whether St. Petersburg police officer Jim Knight should face charges for fatally shooting 18-year-old TyRon Lewis on Oct. 24.

About 300 people roamed the streets of south St. Petersburg following the shooting, hurling Molotov cocktails, rocks and bottles, and setting 28 fires. Several police officers and firefighters were injured.

Mourners told anger is OK

OAKLAND PARK — Some 700 people — blacks, whites, the frail, able-bodied, school children, parents and police officers — gathered to bid goodbye to two young sisters slain by a sexual predator.

The funeral mass and burial for Alicia Sybilla Jones, 7, and DeAnn Emerald Mu'min, 11, were Tuesday, eight days after police say a sexual predator named Howard Steven Ault, 30, killed them.

Ault has confessed to molesting DeAnn, strangling both girls and stuffing their bodies into his attic, according to police.

Father John McLaughlin told the standing-room-only congregation at Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in this Fort Lauderdale suburb that their anger, pain and disbelief are understandable because of the way the girls died. The pastor, referring to two other South Florida children who were kidnapped and killed, had a message for the sisters: "Alicia and DeAnn, may the angels lead you to paradise, and may all those little children, like Adam Walsh and Jimmy Rycs, welcome you home."

Standing over twin white-and-gold caskets flanked by candles, McLaughlin urged mourners to purge their sorrow.

"It is natural to weep. The Lord bids us to weep," he said. "Grief is healing. Grief is strength."

The girls' classmates at Lloyd Estates Elementary — Alicia was a third-grader and DeAnn a fifth-grader — trooped down the aisle at one point during the 1 1/2-hour ceremony, bearing letters of condolence they wrote to the girls' mother, Donna Jones.

Smiles filled the air. An infant wailed. Someone had placed a giant teddy bear near the lectern.

"Your faith in Jesus is strong," the pastor told parents. "Take that faith and give it to the children" so they can cope with the loss.

The two slain girls lived with their 3-year-old sister and their mother in a subcompact car and a pop-up trailer in a county park west of Fort Lauderdale. The two girls walked to and from school, about a mile away.

Mrs. Jones said Ault had befriended the family and brought the children to the trailer one day after school.

Ault had a history of staying out of jail despite a record of sexual offenses against children.

He apparently dodged and weaved his way through the system, convincing prosecutors, a judge, probation officers and a sex therapist that he didn't need punishment.

A new state law requires authorities to let people know that a convicted sexual predator is moving into their area, but no one in Ault's neighborhood knew he was amongst them.

Gregory Duncan, 10, and DeAnn were classmates. School won't be the same without her, the boy said.

Three hours of brisk walking a week enough for healthy hearts

By SARAH G. HANEY
AP Medical Editor

NEW ORLEANS — A brisk walk is all it takes for women to keep their hearts in shape, a study suggests.

Walking is by far the most popular form of exercise among American women. But until now, there has been little research to show whether it does much good.

Now, a study of 64,391 women nurses finds that those who walk briskly at least three hours a week reduce their risk of heart attacks and strokes by 40 percent.

"You don't have to be a marathon runner to achieve important health benefits from exercise," said Dr. JoAnn Manson of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

This is good news, experts say. Many people are reluctant to work out because they think it's too hard.

"People tend to get discouraged," Manson said. "If they think they are getting no benefit from moderate exercise, they tend to turn into couch potatoes." The new work suggests that staying fit requires nothing more than a purposeful walk in the park.

Her findings, which have not yet been published, were presented Tuesday at a scientific meeting of the American Heart Association in New Orleans.

The study was conducted on women nurses ages 40 to 65 who had no sign of heart trouble when they filled out questionnaires about exercise in 1986. During eight years of follow up, 580 suffered heart attacks and 466 had strokes.

Nearly half of the nurses in the study exercised by walking alone. About 10 percent did not exercise at all.

The study found that brisk walking — roughly 4 mph — for three hours a week made a big difference. Women who did this much exercise lowered their risk by 40 percent.

Women who did more vigorous exercise, such as running, racquet sports and aerobics, lowered their risk even more, but the extra benefit was modest. Their total reduction was 60 percent. Dr. Jasenka Demitrovic of the University of Miami called the results "very solid scientifically" and also important.

"Many people give up exercise because it's so time consuming," she said. "But if you can affect your cardiovascular risk by walking three hours a week, that's less than a half hour a day." Even more leisurely walking is better than nothing. The study found that women who walk 3 mph three hours a week lower their risk by one-third, compared with women who don't exercise at all. Exercise appears to do many good things for the body.

Leave campaign signs in place

Here we go again. Another political season in Sanford, and more problems. Campaign signs are being stolen.

This isn't anything new, but we believe it's interesting to note that this generally happens in city elections rather than county, district or state. Not just Sanford either, in past years it has been reported in Lake Mary elections, those in Longwood, Winter Springs, and other municipalities.

Who is responsible? Most of the time, (but not always), it is supporters of particular individuals, rather than opposing candidates themselves. If candidate "A" is officially charged, and found guilty, of taking candidate "B's" signs, or of instigating the thefts by others, the media will report on it. This certainly won't, and never has, looked good for a candidate so judged.

Allegations or rumors regarding who is taking signs won't work. There must be official charges and the person responsible found guilty before this becomes a viable news story.

Mostly, the signs are taken by a supporter of the opposition. The candidate may not even know his or her opponent's signs are being stolen. At times, the theft is accomplished by a friend, or an individual who believes there will be some personal gain by a particular person winning a race.

If police act on what some witnesses have reported about the persons believed to be responsible for these political sign thefts, and if someone is apprehended, even if the favored candidate doesn't know of it, it will still be a black-mark on the campaign. Do these well-wishers and/or supporters want this to happen? We doubt it.

We urge each candidate seeking office in the Sanford elections to meet with supporters and make it perfectly clear that this will not be allowed. If someone thinks they can win by eliminating another person's signs, that's a pretty poor reason for any election victory.

Don't just urge honesty, but stress it. Let's not allow a hometown election to turn into a circus, a free-for-all, a mudslinging event, or have any other negative repercussions.

An election is supposed to be won by the person selected by the people, based on what he or she can do to help the city. An election should not be won just because someone removed someone else's signs from public view. That's childish, and it's against the law.

Clinton's morals

What else can we expect from the followers of Jesus Christ whose mean-spirited interpretation of the seventh commandment against adultery is staggering: "Whoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart" (Matthew 5:28). His proposed solution to this problem of lust in the verses which follow is even more staggering.

Before bible thumpers impugn the sexual mores of President Bill Clinton, they should read more closely about the profligacies of David and the debaucheries of Solomon also found in the bible.

King David had an affair with Bathsheba and even arranged to have her husband die (2 Samuel 11). David also had a homosexual affair with Saul's son Jonathan (1 Samuel 18:1-4, 20:41-42, and 2 Samuel 1:23-26).

King Solomon had a harem of seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines (1 Kings 11:3). He also wrote frankly erotic poetry in the Song of Solomon.

This may be partially explained by the fact that the "book of laws" was allegedly rediscovered in 621 BC under the reign of Josiah (2 Kings 22:8) more than three hundred years after the Golden Age of Hebrew civilization in 980 BC under King David. The laws were unknown to David and Solomon but were added hundreds of years later as an afterthought.

Sanctimonious prudes should not hold President Bill Clinton to sexual moral standards which even the greatest biblical rulers did not follow. The bible itself exposes their religious hypocrisy as a fraud.

It's curtains for race preferences

This column had the honor, on July 23, 1993, of being the first in America to report the launching of the California Civil Rights Initiative. The CCRI amends the state constitution to bar discrimination by race or gender in public employment, education and contracting. "This is a mainstream proposal," I wrote, "and will have tremendous conservative support."

At the same time, I warned, "We must expect that the CCRI will be fought tooth and claw by the entrenched interests that are busy imposing reverse discrimination on ever-wider areas of American society. But they are vastly outnumbered, and they know it."

On Nov. 5, after surviving more perils than Pauline, the CCRI (renamed Proposition 209 on California ballots) sailed over the top by a hunky margin.

The story of how the promise of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, to bar discrimination based on race, was twisted in the following 30 years into a policy of granting preferences based on precisely that, in long and sickenings, Congress never voted for such a result, nor did any state legislature. It was achieved stealthily, by court decisions and government regulations. Its supporters' highest hope was that Americans simply wouldn't realize that better-qualified white and Asian applicants for college admission, state employment and state contracts were being shoved aside in favor of blacks and Hispanics.

Early on, CCRI's supporters noticed a strange thing: Many businessmen, to whom they looked for what they assumed would be automatic support, were hostile to the idea. It turned out that these businessmen were up to their ears in race preferences in their own businesses, having long since decided that hiring quotas were a small price to pay for peace on the racial front. By late 1993 CCRI, though as popular with the voters as ever, was on its deathbed for lack of the money needed to put it on the ballot.

To his eternal credit, Gov. Pete Wilson endorsed CCRI and named a black Sacramento businessman, Ward Connerly, to lead the drive to put it on the 1996 ballot. Connerly proved immensely competent: The necessary funds were found at last, and a million signatures were collected.

The ensuing campaign by CCRI's opponents, masterminded by a Washington Democratic campaign consultant named Bob Shrum, was one of the filthiest I have ever seen. Knowing that Californians opposed race preferences by a wide margin, they had no alternative but to lie themselves blue in the face about what the measure would actually do. Thus they charged (with the loyal help of most of the media) that it would "eliminate affirmative action" -- that being a nebulous but popular term for all sorts of programs to help disadvantaged minorities, many of which (such as outreach programs and job training) would be untouched by CCRI. They paid Louisiana racist David Duke $4,000 to come to California to debate in favor of CCRI, then ran TV spots saying CCRI was supported by "Dole, Gingrich and Duke." Another TV ad featured hooded Klanemen burning a fiery cross.

The story of how the promise of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was twisted in the following 30 years is long and sickening.

MORTON KONDRACKE

Do the new Democrats 'get it'?

The centrist New Democrat movement scored another triumph in the recent elections. Now, President Clinton and congressional Democrats should embrace a new agenda being formulated by the movement's lead group, the Democratic Leadership Council.

Not only did former DLC Chairman Clinton win -- as he did in 1992 -- by seizing the center of the political spectrum, but DLC officials think they recouped some of the devastating losses suffered by moderate Democrats in the House in 1994.

DLC officials say that of 41 non-incumbent House candidates elected, 25 are either DLC-style moderates or conservatives.

Moderate Democrats did not do so well in Senate races, losing chances to pick up seats in Kansas, Oregon, Wyoming and Colorado.

Yet in another sign of the New Democrat ascendancy, even the liberal House and Senate Democratic leadership adopted a moderate platform, the so-called "Families First Agenda," although their campaign tended to emphasize attacks on House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and alleged Republican Medicare "cuts."

The question now is, will Democrats stick to the ideas they ran on? After Clinton won in 1992, he promptly appointed a largely liberal White House staff and tilted toward congressional liberals on policy, leading to political catastrophe for Democrats in 1994.

Now Clinton has a new team to assemble, and a budget and legislative agenda to formulate. He took one correct step in hiring North Carolina investment banker and Democratic centrist Erskine Bowles as White House chief of staff.

Bowles succeeded in forcing the resignation of a leading White House liberal and close associate of first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Deputy Chief of Staff Harold Ickes.

Clinton's move to jump start negotiations on next year's budget was another good step. Treasury Secretary Bob Rubin and Budget Director Franklin Raines opposed a delay and, indeed, it would have sent a terrible signal about Clinton's second-term direction.

As he looks ahead to 1997, Clinton should seriously consider the new ideas on entitlements, education, environmental policy, taxes and families to be published in a DLC book, "Building the Bridge," due out in January.

The agenda includes encouraging private savings; high standards and increased choice in education; goal-setting (but not minute regulation) for the environment; innovation-oriented economic policy; and new measures to discourage divorce, teen pregnancy, and crime.

President Clinton's chief pollster, Mark Penn, said during a recent DLC post-election briefing that President Clinton won -- and Democrats failed to retake control of Congress -- because conservative and independent voters saw him as more moderate than they did his party's congressional candidates.

That claim does not seem to be borne out by network exit polls, but Penn said he will release a poll soon that proves his claim.

What the exit polls indicate is that Clinton made sharp gains over his 1992 performance among moderates and R o m a n Catholics, but Democratic candidates failed to retake the House -- even though they picked up seats -- primarily because Ross Perot voters tended to support Republicans for Congress.

Of the 47 percent of the electorate that identified itself as moderate, Clinton won 57 percent to 33 percent for Bob Dole, and 9 percent for Perot. In 1992, Clinton won 47 percent of that vote.

Among conservatives, who accounted for 33 percent of the 1996 vote, Clinton won 30 percent. Among liberals, 20 percent of the electorate, he got 78 percent.

Exit polls on House voting indicate that 56 percent of moderates voted Democratic and 49 percent voted Republican, while 21 percent of conservatives and 80 percent of liberals voted Democratic -- practically identical to Clinton's numbers.

Also, among voters who believe that the federal government should "do less" than it now does -- 53 percent of all voters -- 30 percent supported both Clinton and House Democrats.

Among voters identifying themselves as independents -- 28 percent of the total electorate -- 43 percent voted for Clinton and 47 percent for House Democrats.

Among Catholics, Clinton won 53 percent of the vote and so did House Democrats. Among whites who identify themselves as Christian conservatives, 36 percent supported Clinton and 27 percent voted for House Democrats.

DLC President Al From said that Clinton "redefined the Democratic Party away from its old liberal fundamentalism and re-connected it to the middle class."

The question now is, will Democrats stick to the ideas they ran on?

JOSEPH SPEAR

The many moods of Bob Dole

If somebody ever writes a book called "Mystery Men of the 20th Century," surely Bob Dole will be accorded a chapter.

He has been on the national scene for 35 years. He was a congressman for four terms, a senator for five, chairman of the Republican Party, a vice-presidential candidate in 1976, a presidential candidate in 1980, 1988 and 1992. He has been the subject of countless books and magazine and newspaper articles. He has been a fixture on television -- indeed, he holds the all-time record for guest appearances on NBC's "Meet the Press."

I would go so far as to wager that the average consumer of news hasn't experienced a Dole-free day in at least four years.

After all this exposure, who knows the man? Who can say they've got a fix on him? Is he nice or nasty? Is his mind as muddled as his mouth? Is he upright or shifty? Steadfast or protean? Straight-shooter or hypocrite? I mean, in what compartment of his cranium does he deposit his own trespasses -- for example, taking campaign contributions from special interests -- when he accuses others of the same faults?

With Bob Dole, it's not the message of the day. It's the personality of the day. It wouldn't surprise me if his boxer shorts are emblazoned, not with the days of the week, but with various personas. Let's see, yesterday I wore Smiley Bob. Today, I'm going to be Quirky Bob. Or do I want to be Tough Bob? Snarly Bob? Bitter Bob? Acerbic Bob? Abrasive Bob?

When Bob Dole became the Republican front-runner, I threw caution to the wind and let myself think, by damn for once we are going to have a righteous person on the ticket. Here was a main-street conservative, someone the ideologues and single-issue zealots can barely tolerate. Here was a classic deficit hawk, the object of much supply-elder derision. My kind of candidate.

So what does he do? He puts on his Amorphous Bob drawers and tells the party bosses he'll be anything they want him to be. "If you want me to be Reagan," he said, "I'll be Reagan."

And what did he establish as his core plank? A supply-side tax cut that would wreak havoc on the budget. The old pol whose favorite job was "Good news: A bustle of supply-elders has gone off a cliff. Bad news: There were three empty seats." Now, in the interest of political expediency, he had climbed into bed with the dreaded budget busters.

It didn't get any better as the summer wore on. The Dole campaign was a hapless and feeble affair, mainly because he insisted on running it himself. Distrustful Bob has always thought he was his own best counsel, his own best strategist. He has always demanded that he approve every decision, see every piece of paper. It drives his staff nuts. "There never was a strategy," a former adviser, Don Sipple, told Newsweek.

"Essentially Dole is running his own campaign." It made the voters dizzy. Where was he today? What tangent had he gotten off on now? He's talking about vegetables. Al Gore is munching on vegetables with Mahatma Gandhi? Eating vegetables means you're liberal liberal liberal and America ought to wake up? What the heck is going on?

Then he started getting angry and stepped into his Vicious Bob trenches. The problem was the "liberal media." They were "stealing" the election by favoring Clinton. "They want him re-elected. They like things the way it is."

I would go so far as to wager that the average consumer of news hasn't experienced a Dole-free day in at least four years.

Fired up

Representatives of the Longwood Fire Department responded to a fire at Lyman High School in the early hours this morning and found the boys bathroom in the "C" corridor fully engulfed in flames. According to Walter Meriwether, head of the school district's risk management department, the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate the fire which has been classified as "suspicious." Meriwether said the fire started in the toilet paper dispenser of one of the stalls in the bathroom. There was extensive smoke damage to the whole bathroom and the commode in that stall. Apparently, the heat of the fire combined with the cold water in the toilet caused the fixture to explode. No one was injured in the incident, but the damage to the facility is estimated at about $1,000. Meriwether said there are no suspects in the fire at this time, but the investigation is continuing.

the vehicle continued driving through various areas, finally pulling into the parking lot of Oviedo High School.

The arrest report said the vehicle eventually went over the curb and onto the school grounds, where both men jumped out of the vehicle, still moving, and fled from the area on foot.

The vehicle then crashed into a concrete column at the school's media center.

Joseph Edward Boston was subsequently apprehended at the school's football field. Jimmy Lamar Boston was apprehended by other officers after jumping a fence and running through various areas.

The Cadillac was found to have been stolen from a dealership in the 300 block of E. Broadway in Oviedo.

The driver, identified as Jimmy Boston, was charged with grand theft auto, resisting officers without violence, criminal mischief, trespassing on school grounds, fleeing/attempting to elude officers, reckless driving, and leaving the scene of an accident.

The passenger, Joseph Boston, was charged with grand theft auto, possession of burglary tools, resisting without violence, criminal mischief, and trespassing on school property.

No one was reportedly injured in the incident, mostly due to the fact that the school was closed for the Veterans' Day holiday.

15 months and will take a detailed look at what types of corridors and track the trains would need, as well as the potential ridership for such a system.

The 150-mph trains, similar to those already running in France, would travel between Orlando and Miami in about 90 minutes, and between Orlando and Tampa in 50 minutes. Officials hope to have the Miami line running in 2004 and the Tampa spur operating two years later.

Watts said he hopes to get a commitment by next October for $300 million in federal money and the all-important federal guarantees for bonds to let the state pay for the project over 30 years.

"The bond guarantees at the federal level will either make us or break us," he said.

Another event being planned will include a parade and downtown activities plus the use of Fort Mellon Park. It is the Bahamas American Junkanoo and Goombay Festival. The special event application submitted to the city of Sanford says it will be, "a multi-cultural event with a street parade featuring live music, vendor selling and displaying ethnic foods, arts and crafts."

According to expectations, the Goombay Festival, with an estimated 400 participants, could bring as many as 10,000 people into Sanford over the three days.

The third event is the SailFest, billed as one of the largest one-design sailing regattas in the United States. It will be home-based at Marina Point, the Sanford Civic Center and Lake Carolina.

For this one, the city has been asked to close part of Seminole Boulevard, (lakefront area) from Palmetto Avenue to west of San Juan. Organizers say they expect possibly 575 boats to be involved with the possibility of an additional 100 to 200 spectators.

During discussion of the special event requests at the Sanford City Commission work session Monday afternoon, both Mayor Bettye Smith and Commissioner Lon Howell said they saw possible problems, especially when alcohol was being served.

Several of the events required police officers to be on hand. SailFest would have two officers Friday, and five each for Saturday and Sunday.

The multi-cultural Goombay Festival would require 16 officers on Saturday and eight on Sunday.

Police Chief Ralph Russell said he did not foresee any problems connected to the events.

Mayor Smith and commissioners Howell and Kerry Lyons all suggested the sale of alcoholic beverages be cut off by 10 p.m. Then, after additional discussion, the suggestion moved to a 10:30 cutoff time.

"I just don't think an 11 p.m. cutoff time is too late," Commissioner Bob Thomas added. "I don't agree with the perception that people are going to misbehave. Commissioner Whitley Eckstein agreed with Thomas.

Each of the special event requests was approved by the commission, and the original request to close alcoholic beverage sales at 11 p.m. stood.

county policies.

In the end, Suber was fired for allegedly spending about an hour and a half of county time working on her son's Gulf County political campaign. She was found, also, to have contacted county contractors and soliciting their financial assistance for the campaign.

An additional audit was ordered following Suber's firing as is normally the case when a division head leaves a position under adverse circumstances.

Acting County Manager Gary Kaiser said the investigation ordered yesterday is intended to determine those violations "that do not rise to the level of criminal concern."

He did not offer comment on what those violations might be or what the other investigations might hope to uncover.

Suber, who is still appealing the decision to fire her after nine years with no blemishes on her record, has retained the Orlando law firm of Lubet and Blechman to aid her in the battle against the county.

Based on their initial investigation, the county claims Suber used contractors for personal business and that she accepted numerous gifts from those companies with whom she did county business. Suber said she has evidence to refute those claims.

The FDLE is looking to see if anything Suber did as coordinator of the division was a criminal violation.

In addition to the investigation by the sheriff's office, the county commission agreed to hire the Orlando office of Ernst and Young to conduct an audit of the controls, the procedures and the organization of Suber's division.

Kaiser said he believed the investigations would be impartial and would bring the incident to a conclusion.

52 percent in high school survey say too many immigrants

By BOB ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Many top high school students think America has too many immigrants, and they worry they will have to fight foreign and minority applicants for jobs and admission to college, a survey found.

Fifty-nine percent of the students surveyed said affirmative action and immigration policies will make it harder for them to get the job they want, according to the annual "Who's Who Among American High School Students" survey. Forty-nine percent said these policies will make it tougher for them to get into the college of their choice.

"I think the amount of immigrants right now is OK, but I don't think we need any more," said Noemi Pizzini, a 17-year-old senior at Monsignor Scanlan High School in New York City.

Pizzini said she believes immigrants deserve equal opportunity in America; her mother came from the Dominican Republic and her father immigrated from Jamaica. But she doesn't like affirmative action. "I don't want to be a quota," she said.

Tim Gilmartin, a 17-year-old senior from Chamblee High School in Atlanta, said it's too easy for foreigners to get into the United States. He said he and some of his white male friends worry about competition from minorities and immigrants.

"Affirmative action really bothers me," he said. "It makes me feel like because I'm a white male, that I'm one of the most discriminated against."

According to the survey, 52 percent of the students said the United States has too many immigrants, 43 percent said there was the right amount and 3 percent said there were too few.

The mail survey was sent last summer to nearly 8,000 high school students ages 16-18, and 3,370 responded. "Who's Who Among American High School Students" publishes biographical information on more than 751,000 students.

Ninety-eight percent of the students who returned the survey said they planned to go to college, and all had A or B averages. Seventy-two percent were female and 79 percent were white.

"For the last several years, we have been seeing them say that it will be harder for them to achieve the American dream — having a car, going to college and owning their own home."

said Paul Krouse, publisher of the publication that provides biographical information. "They're putting the blame on affirmative action and minorities."

The survey also indicated that 36 percent of the students surveyed have considered committing suicide and 4 percent have tried it.

Army's sex scandal

WASHINGTON — Much of the story of the Army's widening sex scandal has yet to be told, but already it ranks as one of the military's most serious.

Even if the Army scandal had been limited to the Aberdeen Proving Ground training center in Maryland, where it began with five men facing charges ranging from rape to sexual harassment, the scale of alleged abuses would top the well-publicized Tailhook debacle that hit the Navy in 1991.

On Tuesday the scandal widened. The Army said three noncommissioned officers at Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri were charged with sexual misconduct involving basic trainees. Details were thin but officials said the cases involved prohibited consensual intercourse and indecent assault, but not rape.

Ambush television to blame

PONTIAC, Mich. — A "Jenny Jones Show" guest avoided a mandatory life prison term for murdering a gay admirer by convincing jurors that "ambush television" was partly to blame.

An Oakland County jury on Tuesday convicted Jonathan Schmits of second-degree murder for the 1991 slaying of Scott Brundage, a gay man, during a taping of the "Jenny Jones Show." Schmits was a history of emotional problems, ambushed on the show and pushed over the edge, defense lawyers argued. Jurors agreed.

"We all felt he had a definite mental problem ... and the show exacerbated that," juror Dale Carlington said.

Time running out for a baseball labor deal

By RONALD BLANK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — With less than 48 hours left until the deadline for a baseball labor deal, the outlook for an agreement appears bleak.

"As far as I can tell, the die has been cast," union head Donald Fehr said Tuesday night. "They rejected the deal. They handed us an ultimatum, which no one in their right mind would take seriously."

After their meeting Monday, acting commissioner Bud Selig told Fehr he wanted to think about his position overnight, and Fehr told him to call before midday Tuesday, when he planned to leave the office for the day. Selig didn't call until after Fehr left his office.

Eventually, the two spoke by telephone after 10 p.m. EST, but the conversation lasted less than a minute, Selig said he would talk to Fehr again today.

Baseball's ruling executive

Sanford's Anthony Cofield goes up for a dunk attempt during the Electronic Hot Shot Basketball Kids' Slam Dunk Finals at Venice Beach, California that can be seen on Wed 2 this Saturday at 8 p.m.

Cofield appears in Slam Dunk Finals

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Sanford's Anthony Cofield was one of the U.S. finalists to compete in Milton Bradley's Electronic Hot Shot Basketball Kids' Slam Dunk Contest-appearing this Saturday, November 16, on WESH 2 at 8 p.m.

The 10 finalists recently traveled to the Hop-It-Up World Finals in Venice Beach, California for the Electronic Hot Shot Slam Dunk Finals.

Milton Bradley hosted this innovative Slam Dunk Contest for kids ages 10 to 17. The event comprises three basketball goals ranging from a 6-foot for kids 4-feet-6 and under; a 7-foot goal for kids 5-foot-4; and an 8-foot goal for kids 6-foot and smaller.

Each youngster was given two opportunities to show off their best slam dunk. The kid with the most crowd-pleasing dunk in each of the 10 markets qualified for the finals trip to Venice Beach.

In addition to Orlando-where the 14-year-old Cofield won-Hot Shot competitions were held in Los Angeles, Portland, Detroit, Boston, Miami, New York City, Minneapolis, Springfield (Mass.) and Phoenix during the 1996 Hop-It-Up Tour.

Hop-It-Up CEO Terry Murphy, NBC Analysts Bill Walton, "Snapper" Jones and Ann Myers, and Director of MIKE Sports Marketing U.S., Ralph Greene, served as judges at the finals.

Ryan Giboney, 15, of Phoenix, was awarded the Slam Dunk trophy; finalists won desk-top versions of the Milton Bradley Electronic Hot Shot Basketball Game, T-shirts, and a vacation-for-two to the Venice Beach Finals. Hop-It-Up is the official 3-on-3 basketball tournament of the NBA.

deal remains in force under a federal court injunction.

On Monday, Selig asked Fehr to make additional concessions, a request that immediately was turned down by the union. Some owners are asking Selig to call for another vote. However, it's unclear if Selig is willing to do that. When they met last week, owners voted against the agreement 16-12 — leaving the proposal 11 votes short of ratification.

A fool-proof Thanksgiving dinner

By MARILYN CALYA
NEA Food Writer

Thanksgiving. The holiday always conjures images of the Pilgrims and American Indians, gathered around a feast of corn and wild game. In short, The First Thanksgiving. But what is closer to my heart is MY first Thanksgiving, the first time I flew solo (as it were) and wrestled the big bird to the table.

Now, cooking Thanksgiving dinner is not a step I took cold turkey (so to speak). I kind of eased myself into it, contributing to a variety of pot-luck Thanksgivings.

Along the way, I and my friends experienced a variety of disasters: Someone forgot to take the giblets out of the turkey; a "refrigerator" pie failed to thicken (it turned out we were supposed to bake it); a friend bearing a pot of potatoes wrecked his car en route to dinner (the car was totaled, but he saved the potatoes).

By the time I was ready to cook the whole meal myself, I was prepared.

And now it's your turn. Nervous? Don't be. Here's a fool-proof first-timer's menu put together with the aid of three new "beginner-friendly" cookbooks: "The Better Homes and Gardens New Cookbook," "Cooking for Dummies" (published by the same folks who did the computing for dummies series) and a winner of a volume called "Help! My Apartment Has a Kitchen," written by the mother-son team of Kevin and Nancy Mills.

This menu follows the classic lines: Your first Thanksgiving is no time to start experimenting. Make the pie two days ahead of time. Do the stuffing the night before. Prepare all the vegetables for cooking when you put your turkey in the oven. The carrots and string beans can be cooked a bit ahead of time (a half hour or so) and reheated, although it's not optimal (but if it'll save your sanity, do it). Which leaves only the mashed potatoes and gravy needing last-minute attention.

If you're smart, you'll assign one guest to mash potato duty, and get someone who really knows what she's doing to make the gravy. But if you insist on doing it all yourself, this menu is perfectly manageable, even for a first-timer.

You'll need the basic kitchen equipment here: a cutting board, a good sharp knife, several large bowls, assorted saucapans, mixing spoons, a potato masher or ricer, a 9-inch pie plate, a colander and a roasting pan for the turkey. A turkey baster will help, but a small ladle (or bent spoon) will also do the trick.

If your turkey does not come from the market with a built-in plastic pop-up thermometer, you'll need a meat thermometer. Don't forget an apron, and plenty of hot pads and trivets.

Now, you're on your own, with only the following caution: Defrost your turkey in the refrigerator, not on the counter. Never stuff the bird until just before cooking. Refrigerate leftovers as soon as possible. Trust me: These are food safety concerns, and you don't need to know all the reasons behind them. You've got enough on your mind already.

ROAST TURKEY WITH OLD-FASHIONED BREAD STUFFING

- 1/3 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained (optional)
- 1 medium onion, peeled and chopped (you should have about 1/2 cup)
- 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning or ground sage
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper, plus more for turkey
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, plus more for turkey
- 8 cups dry bread cubes (store-bought or homemade)
- 3 to 4 cups canned chicken broth
- 1 10-to-12 pound turkey
- 1 cup cooking oil
- 2 cups dry white wine, dry vermouth or apple cider (inexpensive table wine is fine)

Make the stuffing (you can do this the night before serving): Melt the butter or margarine in a small saucapan over medium-low heat. Cook the celery, fresh mushrooms (if using) and onion in the butter until tender but not brown (5 to 10 minutes). Remove from heat. Stir in poultry seasoning or sage, pepper and salt. Place the dry bread cubes in a large mixing bowl, add onion mixture and, if using, canned mushrooms. Drizzle with enough broth (1/2 to 3/4 cup) to moisten, tossing lightly. Cover and refrigerate until ready to use.

Thanksgiving morning: Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Take the turkey out of the fridge, and remove its wrappings. Remove the neck and packet of giblets (liver and heart) from the body cavity. Rinse the turkey inside and out under cold running water. Pat dry with a clean dish towel. Lightly season body cavity with salt and pepper. Spoon some of the stuffing into the neck cavity; pull the neck skin to cover it.

Lightly spoon more stuffing into the body cavity; do not pack it in. (Place any remaining stuffing in a casserole, cover and chill. Bake this stuffing alongside the turkey for 30 to 45 minutes before serving.) To close up the cavity, tuck the drumsticks under the band of skin across the tail, or into the little plastic bracket that some turkeys come with when you buy them. If your turkey has neither, tie the drumsticks together with a bit of string.

Place turkey, breast side up on a rack in a shallow baking pan. Rub turkey with cooking oil (1 to 2 tablespoons) and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour a cup of wine or cider over the turkey, and a cup of chicken broth. Cover the breast with a piece of aluminum foil to prevent over-browning. If your turkey does not come with a little thermometer built in, insert a meat thermometer into the center of one of the inside thigh muscles, not touching the bone. Put in the oven and turn the heat down to 325 degrees.

Plan on roasting the turkey about 20 minutes a pound (about 4 hours for a 12-pounder); the meat thermometer will register between 180 and 190 degrees when the turkey is done. In the meantime, use a turkey baster or a small ladle to scoop up liquid that accumulates on the bottom of the pan and squirt or pour it over the turkey (you'll have to lift the foil up to get the breast). Repeat every 20 minutes or so or whenever you think of it. If pan looks dry, pour another cup of wine and/or another cup of broth over the turkey. Keep basting. About 2-1/2 hours into the cooking, take the aluminum foil off.

When turkey is done, remove from oven. Drain pan drippings into a 4-cup glass measuring cup or a glass bowl. Cover turkey with aluminum foil and let sit 15 to 20 minutes before carving. While the turkey is resting, you or someone more knowledgeable should make the gravy and finish the mashed potatoes. Remove the thermometer.

Use a spoon to remove stuffing. Ask someone who knows how to do it to carve the turkey, or look at the pictures on page 410 of "The Better Homes and Gardens New Cookbook."

Yield: 12 to 14 servings.
-- Recipe adapted from "The Better Homes and Gardens New Cookbook" (Better Homes and Gardens Books, 1986).

GRAVY

- Pan drippings from turkey
- Chicken broth
- 1/4 cup flour
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 tablespoons dry white wine or sherry (optional)

Pour the drippings into a 4-cup glass measuring cup or a large glass bowl. Allow to stand 5 minutes. Skim or siphon off the fat that rises to the top and set it aside.

Add enough chicken broth, if you need to, to make 4 cups of liquid.

In a 2-quart saucepan, mix 1/4 cup of the turkey fat with the flour over low heat; stirring constantly. Slowly add the liquid, stirring. It will thicken into gravy. Add the sherry and cook a few minutes, if desired. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Yield: 1 quart.
-- This is my own method.

GARLIC MASHED POTATOES

- 1 head garlic, whole and unpeeled
- 8 large Idaho potatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt, plus more to taste
- 1 cup milk
- 6 tablespoons butter, at room temperature
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Wrap the whole head (the entire head, not the individual cloves) of garlic in aluminum foil and put it in the oven along side the turkey for 1 hour. Take it out and set it aside until it is cool enough to handle.

Peel the potatoes and cut them into quarters. Place them in a saucapan with cold water to barely cover them. Add salt. Cover and bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat to medium and cook, covered, for about 15 minutes or until you can easily pierce the potatoes with a fork.

Drain the potatoes in a colander and return them to the saucapan. Shake the potatoes in the pan over low heat for 10 to 15 seconds to evaporate excess moisture. Remove pan from the heat. Mash the potatoes with a potato masher or through a ricer (don't use a mixer; it turns them to glue).

Meanwhile, heat the milk in a microwave or in a small saucapan until quite warm but not boiling. Add to the potatoes and mash some more. Using your hands, squeeze the roasted garlic from its skin into potatoes. Add the butter and pepper, and mash some more until smooth and creamy. Serve immediately.

Note: You can omit the garlic if you prefer.
Yield: 8 servings.

Hard-of-hearing may need new attitude as well as aid

DEAR ABBY: I had to comment on the letter from "R.H.G." whose mother refuses to wear a hearing aid because she thinks it will make her "old." If she tries one matter-of-factly and refuses to let it change her lifestyle, hardly anyone will even notice it.

I am a male who lost my hearing at age 5, and got my first hearing aid, a clunky body-worn thing, at age 13. My parents were positive that I was frail and weak, as school was all academics and no athletics until I left home for college and started making up for lost time. Of course, I couldn't wear the hearing aid while playing basketball or wrestling, but my teammates and partners had no problem with speaking louder when necessary.

I have been coaching high school and youth league wrestling teams for the last 30 years. My current hearing aid is a behind-the-ear model that I take off and put back on several times at every practice, yet even some of the wrestlers with whom I have worked the most closely have failed to notice the aid for years until I happened to mention it. "R.H.G.'s" mother could style her hair to conceal a hearing aid, but the best and most effective "cover-up" she can use will be to lead an active life and treat the hearing aid like any other routine item of clothing.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: In this case, the woman's attitude impedes to more disabling than her hearing impairment. I hope she sees your letter.

DEAR ABBY: I know that you have touched on my problem in your column a number of times, but someone wrote an excellent letter you printed, suggesting to family and friends around Thanksgiving that they wished to eliminate gift-giving for the upcoming holidays.

Would you please run that letter again? It would be helpful if I could reread that letter and your response. Please do not print my name.

LONGTIME READER

DEAR LONGTIME READER: Here it is, with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: I think it was about this time last year that you ran a suggested letter for those who wished to discontinue giving Christmas gifts to friends whom you felt sure would appreciate being removed from their gift-giving list.

I failed to cut it out, and now find that I need to let some friends know that we both probably would appreciate not having to go through the gift-giving procedure simply because we've been doing it for years. Thank you again.

ANONYMOUS, BUT ONE OF MANY

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Be absolutely up-front with your friends. Around Thanksgiving, write them a short note saying that you are counting your blessings — and among them are friends with whom you can be completely honest. Then suggest: "From now on, let us exchange only Christmas cards — no gifts." I assure you they will not be offended.

DEAR ABBY: Bill and I had 46 years together before I lost him to cancer. He was the kind of husband every woman needs.

In 1948, I had nine benign tumors removed from both breasts. Consequently, instead of a pretty bustline, I was left with two "bags." Six months later, Bill and I were engaged. Three weeks before our wedding day, I found more lumps in my breasts. Heartick, I told Bill and asked him if he wanted to call off our wedding. I told Bill if they operated again, even the "bags" might not make it.

He put his arms around me and said, "Don't worry, honey, whatever comes, we'll handle it." Then he smiled and added, "I am very fond of tangerines — I never cared much for grapefruit."

Thank God it turned out to be scar tissue, and I went on to nurse all of our four wonderful children.

Abby, wasn't he a sweetie?

Why does exercise trigger allergy?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son, who is in the Marine Corps, has been diagnosed with activity-induced urticaria and possible anaphylaxis. He gets a red rash all over his body with exertion. He went through boot camp without incident and his doctors are at a loss to explain why this has now happened. They have prescribed Benadryl for the itching a half-hour prior to exercise, but this solution isn't working.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

that travels from my left testicle up and around my left hip. The pain usually starts after I've had a night's sleep and can begin if I lightly touch my left testicle. Can you identify the problem?

DEAR READER: I don't know the cause of your unusual symptom, although the nature of the pain suggests that a nerve may be to blame. It is conceivable that you may be suffering from a chronic infection or inflammation of the testicle that is inappropriately stimulating the pain fibers in that area.

I believe that you would be best served by seeing a urologist. For obvious reasons, you want this condition to be diagnosed and treated; the specialist should be able to help you.

DEAR READER: No one understands how perfectly healthy people suddenly develop an "allergy" to exercise — but it happens. Such patients seem unusually sensitive to histamine, the basis of all allergic reactions.

During strenuous activity, these people may break out in hives, experience asthma and undergo a dangerous drop in blood pressure. In other words, they show all the consequences of a severe allergic reaction.

In my experience, the antihistamine Benadryl is not particularly effective therapy. Also, it tends to cause sedation, making daytime use a potential problem. I believe that your son might respond better to one of the newer, non-sedating prescription antihistamines, such as Seldane, Claritin or Allegra. He should ask his doctor (or an allergist) about this option.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was recently diagnosed with chronic lung congestion, following a common cold. I'm concerned about future bouts and would like to avoid them, since this happens all too often. Have you heard any report of a zinc product that is heralded as a cure for the common cold? If so, is it good therapy?

DEAR READER: In the past few years, several medical studies have confirmed that zinc supplements may relieve the symptoms of a common cold. However, the mineral does not prevent colds — or their complications, such as bronchitis and pneumonia. The old adage remains true: If you treat a cold, it will last about seven days; if you don't, it will last about a week.

Nonetheless, there is a lot of interest nowadays in relieving cold symptoms, which are very familiar to every reader. Thus, there is a hugely profitable pharmaceutical business in cold remedies to relieve congestion, cough and fever. Zinc appears to be in this category; it probably lessens symptoms while the cold runs its course.

On the other hand, if your colds consistently drop into your chest and cause respiratory symptoms, you should seek medical attention. Perhaps you have a predisposition to upper-respiratory infections, especially if you smoke cigarettes. (If you do, stop.) Maybe you'll need a chest X-ray or should see a pulmonologist if there is a question whether you have asthma, bronchitis, chronic lung disease, or other long-standing respiratory ailments.

Your doctor can advise you. Ask him. Zinc probably won't be an alternative as the prudent use of antibiotics, when and if you need them.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a male in my 50s. Sometimes I have a horrible pain

Quick bid, good result

By Phillip Alder

Should you bid immediately to the likely contract, or should you take time to consult with partner, perhaps ending with an even better result?

At both tables in the match between Poland and Portugal in the European Junior Championship, North opened with a weak no-trump, showing some 12 to 14 points.

The Portuguese East jumped straight to four spades. South, for a reason that isn't immediately apparent, doubled. Aided by the winning club finesse, East had no trouble in collecting 10 tricks for plus 500.

In the other room, the Polish East tried to get a penalty by doubling one no-trump. South's redouble was for rescue, showing a one-suiter. Then the continued slow approach of East allowed North-South to find the excellent "sacrifice" in five diamonds.

West should have led his trump, but selected the unblocky heart queen. The declarer, Rodrigo Soares, won with his king, drew two rounds of trumps ending in hand, played a heart to dummy's 10, and discarded his spade on the heart ace.

Over that hurdle, now South needed to avoid three club losers. This seemed to require finding West with the ace, but Soares saw an extra chance. He ruffed a spade in hand, and afterward led the club five: three, two, queen. Declarer ruffed East's spade and followed with a club to dummy's king. Although it lost to the ace, East had to concede a ruff-and-discard, letting the contract home for plus 500.

So, on this evidence, you should shut your eyes and leap forthwith to the logical contract.
