Dead in the accident is Cynthia Ann Marek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Marek, 35, who was stationed at the Sanford Naval Air Station and at the time of the accident was on his way to Mayport where he was transferred to the U. Trooper J. W. Morgan of the Florida Highway Patrol, was the investigating officer. He reported that Marek, driving a 1956 automobile smashed into the rear of a 1949 convertible parked on the road without lights.

Mrs. Marek, on the front seat, was giving the baby her bottle at the time of the accident. The impact threw the baby against the dashboard. She was dead on arrival at the Fish Memorial Hospital from a broken neck.

Mrs. Louise Marek received lacerations about the nose and possible back injuries while Marek was reported, received a lacerated nose and possible chest injuries. Four other children three girls and a boy, riding in the back seat of the car were unharmed.

Judge, Trooper Morgan placed a charge of manslaughter against Musselwhite and set the bond at $5,000; two other charges, parking without lights and leaving the scene of an accident were preferred against him. A bond of $250 was set for the first and $500 for the second.

Commission To Form Committee

John Krider, of Sanford, was appointed as a representative of the Seminole County Board of Commissioners in an organization of county commissioners to look into and make further plans for a proposed International Airport to be located in the Sorrento-Cassia area near Sanford.

Carl Lehman, of Lake County called for the appointing of representatives from each of the nine counties proposed to be served by the International Airport.

Larry Hughes, of the Board of City Commissioners, Eustis, an outspoken advocate of the International Airport stated that "in 10 years this airport can become as large as one in Miami."

"One city, one county, cannot afford such a project because it is too expensive," Hughes said as he pointed out the proposed location of the airport on a huge map.

Hughes also pointed out other aspects that would benefit the location of the proposed airport in the approximate area of Sorrento or Cassia. Fuel could be barged in to the proposed Sanford Docks and terminals was one of the benefits of locating the huge airport centrally. And, as another benefit, he stated that it would serve all nine counties with no city in the area further than 45 miles from the airport.

It was also pointed out that the proposed location would be only about four or five miles from the Interstate Highway which would give easy access from Orlando and other centers. "We will be 20 miles from downtown Orlando and only 20 miles from Daytona Beach," Hughes stated.

"I am very enthusiastic about the project," Hughes told the group, "because it will be a stable situation serving a population of a half-million people."

Wally Schana of Howey, told the group which evidenced extreme enthusiasm over the proposed international airport, "a point to bring out is that an airport of this size should not be located near a large city."

Carl Lehman, who later was appointed coordinator of the project, told the group that "there is no land sale promotion behind this. There are at least three possible sites available anyone of which could be used."

"The whole project is in a formative stage," Lehman said "and must make some definite progress within the next few weeks."

A. D. Mims, of Winter Garden, and a member of the Orange County Commission, told the group that he believed that "Orlando would compromise on the location."

Hughes, speaking to the group said "If we wait until after the next session of the legislature we might as well forget the project. The CAA will be more than happy to approve the proposed location in order to get it away from Pinellas, and the heavy air traffic in the immediate Orlando area."

This, in addition to the fact that outlying communities of Altamonte Springs, Oviedo, and Longwood will pay for their mobile unit, as will the constable, and the civil defense will pay for half of the bid price, will reduce the cost to the Sheriff's Department.

On two instances, bids were rejected on radio equipment when Seminole County attempted to purchase the equipment for the Sheriff's office. There were two bidders when the bids were first rejected, RCA and Motorola. In the second instance, bidders were RCA, Motorola, and General Electric.

Coroner's Jury Rules Youth's Death Accidental

A coroner's jury returned a verdict Friday afternoon in the accidental death of Edward M. "Ed" Smith Jr., when his play vehicle ran into the path of an oncoming car last Tuesday morning shortly after 10 o'clock.

Asst. State's Attorney Tom Waddell conducted the inquest and questioned witnesses to the fatal accident.

Leo Rock, Police Sergeant for the Sanford Police Department described the accident and presented pictures taken at the scene. He stated that "there was no evidence of speed as the car moved from four hoses west of the impact."

Mrs. Peggy Harden, a passenger in the automobile driven by Mrs. Bert Hollingsworth, described the scene as "blinded by two badges as the car was driven down the center of the street."

Speed of the car, said Mrs. Harden was approximately 15 miles per hour. She told the coroner's jury of six men that "he was going under the car when I first saw him."

The jury of six men were: Grady Duncan, R. Z. Johnson Jr., Ralph Goodspeed, Oscar Decker, H. B. Bourquard, and N. W. Davis.

Verdict returned Friday afternoon read, "Edward M. Smith Jr. met his death by unavoidable accident due in part to shrubbery on street parkway obstructing view of the street."

It was reported this morning that shrubbery is being removed along the parkway by residents of the area.

However, as described by Police Sergeant Rock, there is no hedge bordering the driveway from which the three boys whisked out into the street. There are three shrubs, one on each side of the driveway and one at the corner of the property line. It was described that these shrubs hid the view of the youngsters as the car traveled east toward Meltonville Ave. at the time of the fatal accident.

Public Should Be Convinced Of Need For Civil Defense

During the recent mock alert, civilian defense officials and volunteers performed their assigned tasks diligently and with a sense of the urgency of their mission. This is not to say that the alerts were a success in the sense that they found the country prepared for a real emergency. On the contrary, the results were disappointing.

The civilian defense organizations, no matter how well drilled and schooled they may be, cannot hope to succeed as long as their efforts are greeted by public apathy and indifference. There are several factors which contribute to this indifference.

The attitude that "it can't happen here" prevails. This attitude is almost a part of the American character. And, as a paradox, there is the feeling that if it did happen, if an atomic bomb should be dropped, there can be no hope of survival and preparation is futile.

A greater effort to educate and convince the public of the need for civilian defense seems to be in order. We must accept the fact that it can happen here—and that if it does adequate preparation can save lives. It will not be easy to change the public attitude toward civilian defense, yet with all of the modern methods of communications at our disposal, with all of our knowledge of the techniques of education and persuasion, the task should not be impossible.

Billboard Control In Public Interest

Congress has demonstrated a remarkable indifference to the question whether Americans are going to see billboards or scenery when they drive on the new federal super-highway system. Either the billboard lobby has had its way, or our delegates in Washington have decided that they simply can't be bothered with this matter.

And motorists in this area are fast becoming concerned about the matter with the inter-state highway system right on us in the immediate future.

Whatever the cause, however, the idea of billboard control seems to have withered on the Congressional vine. Unless it can be revived, motorists on the soon-to-come highway system will not see the broad sweep of Florida countryside, with its inviting lakes, orange groves, and lush shrubbery and plants, but will have to be satisfied with glimpses caught between billboards.

Controlling the size and placement of billboards along the highways would be neither an invasion of states rights, as the outdoor advertising lobby has asserted, nor an unwarranted curb on free enterprise. On the contrary, it would be a kind of zoning to preserve the natural beauty of which Floridians are justly proud and we are sure that other states are equally proud of the beauty along the proposed highways. That sort of zoning has won general public acceptance. Without it, our residential areas, far from having open space and trees and lawns and gardens, would probably soon become scarious with signboards and junky built structures of all kinds.

Civil Rights Bill In Bad Trouble

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON 20 — The printed record of Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearings on the administration civil rights bill spans nearly 1,000 pages.

These hundreds of thousands of words, however, do not include the answers to some questions which have belatedly arisen in Senate discussion of the proposed legislation. The bill upon which the hearings of last February and March were focused never got out of the committee.

The bill now before the Senate is an identical measure already passed by the House and referred to the Senate for disposition. The bill is in serious trouble. The trouble is so serious that President Eisenhower apparently has decided on a major strategic retreat. If the retreat takes place and the bill is shorn of its guarantee of a great miscellany of civil rights, other than the right to vote, blame may all heavily on Eisenhower.

President May Retreat
It is possible also that the President is retreating because he has obtained, a bit late in the game, the answers to some of the questions which have arisen around his civil rights bill.

Question No. 1 arises from the fact that the President, Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell Jr. and others have repeatedly said their greatest civil rights objective was to protect and guarantee the right to vote—guarantee that Southern Negroes shall vote as freely as Southern whites.

It is fair to assume the author of the bill—whoever he or they may be—did not know that was Eisenhower's prime objective. That is a fair assumption because when the chips were down the strongest and most bitterly resented enforcement procedure was withheld from the right to vote. Very emphatically the bill authorizes the President to use the Army, the Navy and the militia to enforce such civil rights as the right not to be segregated, the right to inform a federal officer of a violation of federal law and so on.

11 Specific Rights
There are 11 specific civil rights protected by the Constitution and laws of the United States, plus the right to vote.

It was this miscellany of rights, including the right of the Negro to be protected against segregation in the schools, to which the bill's authors attached the powerful Army and Navy enforcement machinery. Eisenhower probably knows by now why that was done and by whom. The answer may come in the Senate debate.

Brownell spent three days before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee last February. When, at last, the questioning touched on the authority to use troops to enforce miscellaneous civil rights in the South, the attorney general seemed both hurt and surprised and, finally, annoyed.

The attorney general sharply complained that the questions were not properly respectful of the President of the United States on whose order the troops would march and the Navy would sail in defense of civil rights. Brownell argued that Eisenhower never would order the Army to march or the Navy to sail and, therefore, that the subcommittee should not discuss it. The attorney general indicated he would have to walk out of the hearings if the questions were pressed. That is about where the matter ended.

Foreign News Commentary

By CHARLES M. McCANN — United Press Staff Correspondent
Last week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles expressed the belief this week that the demand of the Russian people for better conditions was the big factor in the recent shake-up in the Soviet leadership.

"The rulers of Russia face a rising, and in the long run irresistible, demand of the people for more personal freedom, more enjoyment of the fruits of their labor," Dulles said at a press conference in Washington.

Dulles said he believed that a dispute on fundamental domestic policy rather than a mere struggle for leadership lay behind the shake-up.

He said the contenders as the "fundamentalists" who favored iron rule, and the "modernists" who thought that the Russian people ought to be given at least some reason to hope for better conditions.

The "modernists," as Dulles put it, were the winners.

President Eisenhower, at his own press conference next day, discussed the Russian situation from a different approach.

Eisenhower told a questioner that he believed it might be a good idea for Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson to exchange visits with Soviet Defense Minister Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov.

Recalling his friendship with Zhukov in Berlin after the end of World War II, Eisenhower said Zhukov was a confirmed Communist but an honest man. As regards the possible usefulness of a Wilson-Zhukov exchange, the President said:

"There is nothing that I wouldn't try experimentally in order to bring about better relationship."

The suggestion for the exchange was made in the belief that Zhukov's support enabled Soviet Communist chieftains S. Khrushchev and Nikita S. Khrushchev were ousted. But they were not "fundamentalists." In fact, they were "modernists" who favored better relations with independent Communist President Tito of Yugoslavia.

The visit implied that Khrushchev had no intention of purging the "fundamentalist" leaders who rule the satellite and other Soviet satellite countries.

A minor purge, stemming from that in the Kremlin, spread to the satellites. Three high Bulgarian Communists were ousted. But they were not "fundamentalists." In fact, they were "modernists" who favored better relations with independent Communist President Tito of Yugoslavia.

Don't Wear Sun Specs Just To Be Fashionable

By HERMAN M. BUDDELM, M.D.
Do you wear sun glasses for your prescription instead of needed protection, or merely because it is fashionable? If it is for the latter reason, you are making a mistake.

Anyone can buy a pair of sun glasses. Stores across the nation have their counters piled high with glasses of varied colors and shapes.

May Be Harmful
But buying promiscuously and wearing sun glasses may cause more harm than good.

For one thing, most of you probably do not need the protection some sun glasses offer. If you have light hued eyes—pale blue and gray—you probably are more susceptible to the glare of the sun than persons with eyes of darker shades. Because the glare is apt to be especially annoying and tiring to you, sun glasses may be in order.

Glasses Differ
However, there are sun glasses and there are sun glasses.

Select your pair very carefully. Cheaply ground glasses, of glasses which are not ground at all may damage the eyes.

Properly ground and fitted, however, they can be very helpful by eliminating much of the sun's irritating ultraviolet and infra-red rays.

Use Prescription
If you have weak eyes, you have got to be doubly careful. Having your sun glasses made according to your prescription instead of buying the clip-on type lenses.

When you use clip-ons over your regular spectacles, the retina of your eye has to adapt itself to two levels of brightness.

Going At The Sun
While sun glasses are helpful in many instances, no commercially marketed sun glass, as a rule, is sufficiently dense to permit you to gaze directly at the sun without causing harm to your eyes. This becomes more and more evident with every eclipse of the sun and the numerous cases of retinal burns which follow.

A couple of other things to keep in mind:

In some cases, colored glass has still proved unsuccessul.

The Journal of the American Medical Association issued this warning about colored glass recently:

"It causes difficulties for drivers since colored lenses impair a driver's ability to discriminate colors."

Of course, sun glasses should never be worn in the dark. Colored lenses can reduce visibility to a dangerous degree at night.

Conning The News

By VIRGINIA CONN

Brailley Odham talked to Roy Eaton the other day, while Brailley was in Washington. Roy is spending most of his time at home with Elizabeth and the children. They have rented a house in Arlington. It is such good news to hear that Roy is so much better, and while he must report to the hospital frequently for treatment, surely the best medicine in the world is his family. Several operations still remain when Roy has regained his strength, but it now appears that Roy will completely recover from the injuries sustained in a plane accident nearly a year ago.

The Boat and Ski Club members are busy practicing for a ski show August 25. Wednesday afternoon about twenty went out to Liberty and Ruth Jean Roberts came to inspect their acts. Only two skied. The rest sat back and criticized. From now on the group will meet every week. The show will be sponsored by the Rotary Club.

Bobbie Morrison is suffering from two holes in her foot, caused by an untimely leap to the floor. This involved a tumbler show so Bobbie is in bad shape. Recently the Morrisons entertained in their back yard; at least they provided the salad. Gene and Romane Schlick, who are staying at the Mayfair Hotel brought steaks for the Morrisons, Bill and Mildred Smith, and John and Doris Angel. Gene and Romane were stationed in Sanford several years ago and have received innumerable times to fish and boat.

The Aviation badge workshop for Intermediate Girl Scouts will be held Thursday evening from 7 to 8, July 23 at the Presbyterian Youth building. Mrs. Norris Jordan is in charge. Whitey held himself out to the golf course naturally to see if his old golfing buddies missed him. And I'm sure they do. The McCullens are in Gainesville, so the journey to Sanford is not far.

Went to see Tom Blackburn at the Air Force Base hospital, and he looks perfectly wonderful. It looks like a hard life, get well cards pinned up on the walls, who-does-it-to-read and an air-conditioned building.

Betty won first, Hu's second, and Kitty booby.

Marge and Bill Hill and two boys, C.C. and Bill are visiting Bill's family in Georgia. John and Betty McCracken and Pankin and Paul O'Dea will host the After-Five Club next Friday night, July 26, at the McCracken home in Little Venice. Summer's Evening Finale - Lemon Ice Cream Sundae And Coffee

In the cool of evening, at the end of a warm day, dessert should be as refreshing as the fluttering of a fan. One of the freshest and most delightful of all summertime desserts is a dish of home-made lemon ice cream topped with the light, fluffy topping called Sunshine Sauce. Fact is that the combination is so very cool and refreshing that you'll want to serve it with dainty cups of hot coffee for happy contrast.

Here are the recipes for Lemon Ice Cream and Sunshine Sauce—two which are certain to become family favorites the first time you try them. Just be sure that the coffee you serve "with" is just as full-flavored and refreshing as the dessert.

Lemon Ice Cream
 1 cup sugar
 1 cup light corn syrup
 1 cup milk
 1 cup whipping cream
 1 cup lemon juice
 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
 Beat eggs until thick and light. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Freeze in 3 trays until firm. Turn into chilled bowl and beat until light. Return to freezing trays and freeze firm. 8 servings.

Sunshine Sauce
 1/2 cup sugar
 1/2 cup orange juice
 1/2 cup orange juice concentrate, undiluted
 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
 1 cup whipping cream
 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
 1 tablespoon grated lime peel
 Combine sugar, salt and orange juice concentrate in small saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring, until sugar dissolves. Add a little of the hot mixture to egg yolks and blend well. Add to remaining hot mixture. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Cool to room temperature. Whip cream and fold into cooked mixture with lemon and lime peel. Serve as topping for lemon ice cream. 8 servings.

Hints On Traveling With Children

MISS MYRTIE WILSON, Home Demonstration Agent. Dad is getting the family car in shape, checking the tires, engine, brakes. It's summer and motor trips are a favorite family pastime. Whether it's to be a ride to the next town for the day or a follow-the-road-map journey, wise planning can double your enjoyment. Be sure to take a few toys to keep the youngsters happy, and sweaters for the drive home after sundown. Is there a poor traveler in your family? Ask your druggist for a motion-sickness preventive to keep in the glove compartment. Bonadettes, a fruit-flavored tablet, gives 24-hour protection for travel-queasy children, adults and even the family pooch! Don't let the holiday spirit tempt you into careless "Anything Goes" eating habits. For young nibblers, have fruit or carrot sticks on hand in the car, instead of sweets. With the excitement and strain of travel, children and adults need three good meals a day. And one rebellious stomach can ruin the trip for the whole family.

Speaking of the Country Club, golf classes for children, 10 years old and up, will start the first of August. For more information call the pro shop, or go out and sign up the kids.

It is only fair to the children of our community that we all join in the fight to remove shrubbery and other obstructions from areas where children play. Last week's tragic accident has set off a campaign to cut down child-concealing hedges, and to remove signs and parking where a child might hide, only to start into the street before a car. But this campaign will not be entirely successful until the parents educate their children, no matter how small, to stay out of the streets. I, myself, am guilty. We live in a quiet neighborhood, where cars must slow down because of curved streets. It would seem to be perfect for children to ride their bicycles and play in their wagons. Every once in a while, though, we have cars dash through the street, completely unaware of the children playing. Of course, at the moment there is no concealing shrubbery, but weeds hide the little heads, and therefore the attack must carry to neglected lots, particularly on corners.

All these protective measures will help, but until the children are taught to be cautious, accidents will still occur. I always remember Dixie Weber's remedy for one year old Robin when the Webers lived on a busy highway. One morning she carried the baby to the curb and put him down on the safe side. There she fussed over him, loving him. Dixie then placed him on the highway side of the curb and then spanked him. She repeated this performance several times that day, and the following day, he never went near the curb after that. Perhaps this operation may be considered a little inhuman but it worked, and it proved that even babies may learn to avoid the danger points. We do the same thing with children around water, and while it may deprive them of their play area in the street, it is far better than depriving them of their chance to live.

CRAB FANCY
 Goes to a Party
 It's party time... Yes a summer luncheon party. What to serve? Why not cool refreshing CRAB FANCY? Sure to please all hot-weather wiled appetites.
 An easy to prepare and something that can be done long before your guests arrive. CRAB FANCY is canned, contained, convenient, well chilled in the can, just broken up with a fork into which you fold chunks of canned crabmeat. A combination so delicious.
 An extra attraction to this simple delicacy. Lemon slices with crisp watercress bouquets give that final touch. Vary the recipe from party to party, all summer long. Substitute lobster or shrimp for the crab, next time.
 For a nice accompaniment, pass a tray of fancy sandwiches. Fresh peach shortcake topped with whipped cream and tall glasses of iced coffee complete this party touch. You'll be delighted with the compliments you receive.
 You will be that charming hostess if you try this recipe:
 Crab Fancy
 2 cans (10 1/2 ounce each) condensed consommé
 1 can flaked cooked crab (1 1/2 ounce can)
 Lemon slices
 Watercress
 Chill consommé until set (about 4 hours in refrigerator). Put through ricer or break up with fork. Fold in crab. Makes 4 to 6 servings. Serve with lemon slices and watercress.

Legion 9 To Meet Winter Park In Sub-District Playoffs

Gloves, Mitts Improved

The announcement this spring by The Sporting News concerning the selection of an All-Star Major League Fielding Team beginning in 1957 has had a very apparent effect on fielding performance so far this season. Many league club and individual fielding records appear destined to fall in 1957 as the continued improvement in baseball gloves and mitts help in the establishment of marks thought impossible to attain just a few years ago.

Each of the nine players selected by The Sporting News for the All-Star Fielding Team will receive suitably mounted gold gloves (or mitts) made of special metallic gold finished leather. The awards are being made by the Rawlings Sporting Goods Company in recognition of the important part that fielding plays in the game of baseball.

As of July 11, Sporting News figures that the American League was holding a collective .900, two points above the all-time league greatest team record of .898 set by Cleveland in 1927 and tied by the same team two years later.

In the senior circuit, both Cincinnati (1953) and Milwaukee (.902) are threatening the .898 record set by Brooklyn in 1927.

Several long-standing individual fielding records also are in danger of dropping by the wayside this year. In the American League, for example, it is possible that new season records may be set at all four infield positions. If first baseman Vic Powers of Kansas City continues his perfect fielding performance he would break the American League record of .999 set by Stuffy McInnis in 1921.

Second base Billy Gardner of Baltimore has a .997 average so far, equalling the mark held by George Stritzel and Bobby Doer since 1948. Third baseman Amly Carey of the Yankees, who is also holding at a .993 clip, is five points ahead of the American League record of .988 set by Hank Majors in 1917. At shortstop Gil McDougald of the Yankees has a .989 figure, well ahead of the .982 mark set by Lou Boudreau in 1947 and matched by Phil Rizzuto in 1950.

With the season more than half over, the American League still has three outfield regulars (Al Pihlarc, Ted Williams, Gene Woodling) with 1,000 fielding per-Sanford's American Legion Junior Baseball team will help kick off the Sub-District Six American Legion Junior Baseball playoffs at Tinker Field in Orlando, according to an announcement made by W. C. Hires, district chairman, Friday afternoon.

The Sanford American Legion Junior Baseball delegation will meet the Winter Park nine at Tinker Field in Orlando at 10 a.m. Tuesday morning.

Parings for the playoff were made in Orlando at a meeting between Hires, of Sanford, who in addition to being the District Chairman coaches the Sanford American Legion team, Sidney Hires, Winter Park, Bob Potter of the Orlando Recreation Dept., and John Neff, the Orlando American Legion Junior Baseball manager.

The winner of the Tuesday morning game will meet the American Legion's Junior Baseball team from Orlando Wednesday. Opening round losers also be pitted against one another to eliminate one club.

The Sub-District championship will be decided next week.

All Hawks, Owls Are Protected Non-Game Birds

TALLAHASSEE — The State Game Commission announced that all hawks and owls are now classified as protected non-game birds.

Director A. D. Aldrich said the reclassification was made at his annual regulations meeting of the commission July 15.

Formerly the sharp-shinned hawk, Cooper's hawk and great horned owl were listed as unprotected birds that could be taken at all times. All hawks are now fully protected in the Lake Okechobee and its marsh areas, and in the impoundment areas No. 2 and 3 in Broward and Dade counties.

Birds and animals which may be taken at all times are the starling, English sparrow, black vulture, turkey vulture, crow, weasel, skunk, flying squirrel, opossum, red and gray fox, bobcat, raccoon and armadillo.

Kirkhafer, who has contributed more than 40 "firsts" in the development of outboard engineering, said that a resident engineer would probably be located at Silver Springs.

Centages, and first string catcher Sherman Lollar of the Chicago White Sox also has a perfect fielding record. Yes, it looks like a great year for the fielders. And the record for the nine players chosen the best at their respective positions will be Rawlings gold gloves and mitts.

Silver Springs Will Be Testing Ground For Manufacturer

Florida's Silver Springs will become the testing ground for one of the world's leading outboard motor manufacturers according to an announcement by the Silver Springs management.

A spokesman for the Silver Springs staff said that Carl Kirkhafer, head of Kirkhafer Corporation of Fort Du Lae Wisconsin, who builds the Mercury outboard motor, had selected Silver Springs for testing his motor's underwater since the extreme clarity of the water there permits better observation of the motor's performance. Kirkhafer said that the photographic facilities at the Springs would be used to great advantage in recording the tests for study.

"We expect to shoot film in slow motion to observe the action of the motor as it moves through the water at great speeds," Kirkhafer said. "It will be the first time such tests have been made and we feel sure they will reveal much information that we can use in future outboard engineering."

Promotion, publicity and advertising picture will also be made of Mercury motors at the Springs. These will be distributed nationally and used in ads in the nation's leading publications.

Tom King, director of public relations of the Kirkhafer Corporation, said "First we are going to undertake an extensive engineering test program and secondly we are going to carry out an extensive photographic program to secure material for our publicity and advertising departments. For both, the facilities here at Silver Springs will be of great assistance and we will be giving full credit to Silver Springs and its facilities which make them possible."

Kirkhafer, who has contributed more than 40 "firsts" in the development of outboard engineering, said that a resident engineer would probably be located at Silver Springs.

Survey Teams Study Rivers

PANAMA CITY — Six survey teams of the Game and Fish Commission are studying the Escambia and Ochlockonee rivers in Northwest Florida.

The commission, along with the Alabama Department of Conservation, will conduct a series of fish population surveys on the Escambia, Conecuh and Little Escambia rivers.

Edward Christensen, project leader of the lake and stream survey, said the (Ochlockonee) lakes and streams open to the public, obtain physical and biological information concerning them and study the quantity and quality of the fish in them.

Bears Schedule Pre-Season Game With Pittsburgh

JACKSONVILLE — Chicago's professional football Bears, unhurt through retirement of veterans, have added several rookies for their western division title defense this fall. Their first outing of the season will be a pre-season encounter with the rugged Pittsburgh Steelers here in the Gator Bowl Saturday night, Aug. 17.

"We expect to have another strong team," Head Coach Paddy Driscoll told sponsoring Jax Charities officials this week. "We haven't been hurt by the loss of veterans which isn't surprising since we had one of the youngest squads in the league last year. We've added some players who definitely figure to strengthen us."

Driscoll was referring to such newcomers already under contract as Earl Leggett, 300-pound Louisiana State tackle; Quarterback Ronnie Knox, celebrated star from UCLA, halfback Jack Johnson of Miami (Fla.) University and halfback Vic Zucco, Michigan State.

The Bears may also have picked up a deeper in signing Dick Washington, ex-Notre Dame half-back who restricted to one year varsity play with the Irish because of injuries. Washington has played two years service ball since leaving South Bend and impressed Bear Scouts.

This will be the third year for the Bears in Jacksonville, the first for the Steelers who also figure themselves contenders in NFL competition.

Tickets for the all-charity program may be obtained from Jax Charities Inc., care Tourist and Convention Bureau, Hemming Park, Jacksonville, Fla.

Side stand reserve seats sell for $3.75. End stand seats are available for $2.00. There are no priority restrictions with seats being sold over the counter and by mail on a first-come, first-served basis.

John Ivey Named To Head New Men's Golf Association

John Ivey, local shoe store owner and golf enthusiast, was named president of the Men's Golf Association at its first organizational meeting held at the Mayfair Inn Country Club Friday night.

The election of officers followed an open meeting and discussion on the benefits of a Men's Golf Association. Ivey and Gene Wittel gave short talks on what they believed to be the most important benefits of an association.

Other officers named at the meeting were: Crest Overstedt, DelBarry, vice president; Gene Wittel of the Sanford Naval Air Station, secretary; George Nicely, DelBarry, treasurer. The three directors elected were: G. Andrew Spear, Capt. Martin Yost, DelBarry, and Ens. William Foulk.

Sonny Powell, temporary chairman of the group called the meeting for 7:15 Friday night and had named Col. S. G. Harriman as temporary secretary.

A nominating committee of five members of the organization were named and proposed the state of officers which was named by a unanimous decision of the group.

Only members of the Mayfair Inn Country Club are eligible for membership in the newly organized Men's Golf Association.

However, it was pointed out that many men paying monthly for membership in the Mayfair Inn Country Club are eligible for membership in the Men's golf group.

Membership, tournament, and publicity committees will be set up at the next meeting of the association, the secretary revealed at the Friday night meeting.

No date was named by the president for the next meeting. However, the meeting will be called to set up further details of the organization and to adopt rules and regulations and to set a regular meeting date.

The organization was reactivated after being idle for several years. "An unusually high interest was shown in the first meeting," one member said "and no doubt the activities of the group will be felt immediately within golfing circles of the Sanford area."

It is expected in the near future a series of tournaments will be announced and plans made for creating competition with local golf clubs and associations throughout the Central Florida area.

The post-Civil War period saw the introduction of interest in fashionable spas such as Newport and Saratoga. This was accredited to Empress Eugenia.

History Repeating Self

History is repeating itself in the Class D Florida State League in that thru midnight Thursday Cocco's hurling sensation Julio Guerra, became the first pitcher in professional baseball to turn in victory No. 20, as did St. Augustine's Stan Karpinski almost to the day in 1949.

Karpinski went on to win 29 to set a league record that still stands, and this is the mark Guerra now is aiming at with 41 games yet to go.

And, Guerra was almost to the day ahead of John Smith, Daytona hurler who fanned 320 men in 1955 to break on old record of 305 that had stood since 1940. The lanky Guerra had fanned 218 thru midnight Thursday whereas Smith had 206 strikeouts to his credit at the same time in 1955.

At least one other long-time league record appears headed for oblivion. Back in 1949, big Al Pirtle of Gainesville racked up 44 doubles while winning the batting crown with a .383 mark. At midnight last Thursday, St. Pete's pilot, Ned Wilson had 37 doubles, and seemed a cinch to pass Pirtle with ease. Wilson's .374 batting average found him too far front for any of the remaining seven .300 or better regulars ever to catch.

Tampa's disastrous road trip in which four games were dropped thru Thursday night, and Paltaka's resurgence as its pitchers began to re-group, were highlights of a week in which Paltaka and Orlando turned in top performances while the remaining six clubs split even, or nearly split.

League headquarters announced the imposition of three fines, with Daytona Beach manager Ray Wilson, Cocco's Jimmie Webb, and Paltaka's Mike Eastman as the victims and losers in debate with the umpires.

Headquarters also announced this revised list of coming double-headers: Orlando at Daytona, July 29; St. Pete at Daytona, July 31; Gainesville at Orlando, Aug. 12; Daytona at St. Pete, Aug. 14.

TV Not Chief Lure As for the potential television revenue in San Francisco, Stoneham insisted that was not the chief lure for the Giants.

"Pay or toll TV, or whatever you call it, is not the prime reason for our wanting to move," he said. "True, we are being offered more money than we get now from our television sponsor, but if we get a good deal in San Francisco, we'll take it even without that closed-circuit TV."

Stoneham said the Giants would be willing to play in the present Seals' stadium until a new one is built.

CHAPTER IV

I WAS SCARED as I walked across the yard where Gene Dillingham waited. I would be a liar if I said anything else. But it wasn't the kind of fear I'd felt that morning when I saw Nela Hatcher get away and know I must face Sarah Pardee with the job I had set out to do not done at all. I'd had a sense of hopelessness then, of absolute frustration, but not now. I could do something about this.

Sarah sat in her wheel chair behind me. Dogbone and Curly King were standing beside the corral gate. Now, apparently realizing what was happening, they started toward us.

Suddenly I felt good. I hated Gene Dillingham. I had every reason to hate him. A flash of memory reminded me of a dozen indignities I had suffered at his hands.

Gene Dillingham had reason to hate me, too. He was probably jealous of me as he had been jealous of everyone who had meant anything to Joe Pardee. But it must have been far worse after Joe's death when, apparently had made me foreman and half-owner of the ranch. He was not a man who could swallow his pride, so he had waited, hoping he would have the satisfaction of seeing me fail. But I hadn't, and now this was all that was left.

We were twenty feet apart when he ran toward me. I stopped, my fists clenched in front of my face. He started a blow from his knees, but missed and swung off balance. I caught him squarely on the point of his jaw and knocked him flat on his back.

After that I was a little crazy. Landing the first blow gave me an advantage, and I could not afford to let up. Dillingham would hit me if he could, or break an arm, or gouge my eyes out. Because I couldn't let any of those things happen, I was an animal, fighting like an animal, without rules, without any sense of sportsmanship or decency. I wanted to live.

Dillingham got to his hands and knees, a little dazed. I kicked him in the face, knocking his head up, and he fell sideways. I jumped on him, my knees thudding into his belly, and I hit him with my fists, anywhere I could and as often as I could, driven by the knowledge that he was bigger than I was, and stronger, and that I had to win now if I won at all.

I hurt him at the start, and showed him down. Even then, he came close to finishing me. He got his arms around me and squeezed, smothering my blows so that they had no authority. I thought that my lungs would explode and that he was going to break every rib in my body.

From a long way off I heard

Curly's yell: "Beat out of it, Will! Beat out of it!" I squirmed and twisted, using my elbows and fists and boots, but I accomplished nothing. We rolled over and over on the ground, dust rising around us in a thick cloud.

I couldn't break out of his grip. He was too strong, too heavy. He was trying to hit me. He was willing to take any punishment I could give him, which wasn't much. We rolled over until I was on top, I slammed my head down as hard as I could, a gasp and a groan and flattened it and brought a gush of blood. His grip went slack, just for a moment, but long enough for me to break loose.

I rose to my feet and backed away, trying to get my breath. He'd have had me if he'd held on another ten seconds, and I think he knew it. He was on his feet at once, spat out a mouthful of blood, and rushed me. I kept backing up, still laboring for breath, but it seemed a long time before I got it. During that time I did nothing except duck and block. Now if I could, and keep going back. He got one through to the side of my face and I went down, but I was again before he could fall on me. I was tired and sick and hurt, and for several tortuous seconds I wasn't sure I could stay on my feet, that he was hurt too. Blood flowed from his battered nose in a steady stream. Still he kept pushing and I kept retreating. I took no chances until I had my wind back. That was where he made his mistake. He thought I was hurt worse than I was. I reversed my tactics, suddenly and without warning, and stood my ground. I hit him solidly on the side of the head, a little too high to flatten him, I knifed him in the stomach with my left. I smashed through his guard to his face again and knocked him back on his heels, but only for a moment; then he was on his feet again, and we stood that way, staring at each other, getting bit in order to hit.

He slammed a right to my jaw that almost finished me. If he had backed it in the first of the fight he'd have knocked me cold, but now much of the steam was gone from his punches. Still, it started the ground to spinning and I went back again, intent only on staying on my feet. Then my head cleared and we were at it again. I was so tired that it was a great effort to swing a fist. Then my numbed brain realized that he was as badly off as I was. We had fought ourselves into a state of exhaustion, our faces masses of cuts and bruises. My left eye was closed. Both of his were puffy.

Suddenly I stopped back. He held his fists in front of his face and showed his nose forward, peering as if trying to find me. I came in, as fast as I could, but I suppose I was actually slow; I cracked him on the jaw and he went down, slowly, sort of rocking forward, and fell on his face. I backed up and stood against a cottonwood, the sound of my breathing an ugly rasping noise to my own ears, so tired I could not have stood up by myself.

"Come here and get his gun, Dogbone," Sarah called. "Bring his horse, Curly. Lift him into the saddle. Don't ever come back, Gov! Do you hear?"

Only then did I realize he had not been knocked out. I just hadn't hit him hard enough. I was too far gone to have the strength he had stored and desire to hammer me into blood pulp were not enough to keep him fighting. He'd quit.

He got to his hands and knees and stared at the house, trying to see Sarah. Dogbone came with the gun belt and wrapped it around the saddle horn. Together Curly and the Uta boy got him into the saddle.

He left, riding like a sack of wool, almost falling out of the saddle at times; and it came to me that it was not over and it would not be over until Gene Dillingham was dead. That was the last thing I remembered clearly. My knees were rubber. Now they gave and I slid to the ground, the bark of the tree nailing my back as I fought to hold myself upright, and failed.

When I came to, I was in bed in the house. My body was one great ache. I could not take a deep breath. One eye was still swollen shut. As I lay on my back and thought about it, I wasn't sure I had actually whipped Dillingham. Or if I had, it had been by a very small margin.

"Will!"

I had not realized until then that Sarah was sitting beside me. Slowly and painfully I turned my head. She had been crying again.

"Is it bad, Will?"

"No."

"I should have fired him the day I made you a foreman," she said sadly. "Jim Savhill was right. I was afraid I'd make an outlaw out of him, but he's an outlaw now, isn't he?"

"Yes."

I wondered what would happen to Gene Dillingham. I wished he were dead. He was not a man to forget he had been humiliated. He would strike back at me or at Sarah, or both of us. If he picked up his friendship with Merle Turner again, he might even throw in with the colonists.

Will feels the power of Kathy Morgan's fury: "Sarah has you wound around her little finger. Everybody in the little knows it but you. She names the song and you sing it." Continue "Gunlock" here tomorrow.

Nematode Damage

To Be Discussed At Workshop Meet

Twenty-four agricultural scientists, including Dr. J. F. Darby of Sanford, will meet in Orlando Aug. 21 and 22 to lead a workshop meeting on the damage caused in Florida by Nematodes—cell-like microscopic pests—that cost the state's farmers, citrus growers and nurserymen upwards of 10 per cent of their annual production.

The purpose of the workshop is to give Florida's farmers and growers the latest scientific information on the damage caused by nematodes and on methods of controlling the pests. Reports from the workshop staff will cover citrus, vegetables, nursery stock and tobacco.

Dr. Darby, associate plant pathologist at the University of Florida's experiment station in Sanford, will discuss the experiments he has been conducting to control nematodes attacking vegetables.

About 1,200 people are expected to attend. E. E. Heurmann, Atlanta district manager of Shell Chemical Corporation's Agricultural Chemical Division, sponsor of the meeting, said the group would include county agents, representatives of agricultural chemical companies, in addition to farmers, growers and nurserymen.

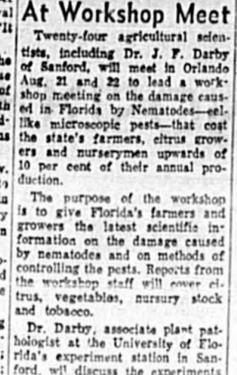

This is the second workshop of its kind ever held. The first was sponsored by Shell Chemical in New York early this year and covered nematode problems in the Northeastern states.

Panel members include agriculturalists from the University of Florida, the Florida State Plant Board and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

At the opening of the meeting, Commissioner Ed L. Ayers, of the plant board, and B. G. Chittwood, the board's chief nematologist, will sketch the background of Florida's nematode problems, Ayers will talk about the economic effects of the pests and Chittwood will report on the various types found in the state (the different species now number 50,) how they live and how they cause damage.

A. L. Taylor, who is in charge of nematology research for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will talk on the benefits of soil fumigation.

A talk on agricultural chemicals that are now under experiment will be given by Roy Hazzberry, manager of Shell's agricultural research laboratory, in Modesto, California.

Pictures Of Wedler Rushed To Missing Witness For Identifying

City To Open Another Area As Playground

The City of Sanford will open up another area as a playground. A Willow Ave. lot 400 feet by 250 feet has been reserved as a hospital site, but city officials, faced with reverting the property to the original owners of the property found that the corporation is defunct.

The city manager was instructed to make the area available for a park and playground.

Questioning the progress of the Sanford Civic Center, commissioners were told last night that local architect John Hubon IV had set up the date for the opening of bids in three capital improvement program projects up to July 30 at 11 a. m.

Prime contractors wanted more time and $5 was granted in the amount of $10,000, City Manager Walter E. Knowles advised the commission.

Commissioners also agreed at last night's session to do away with the regional walkway and regular pedestrian traffic with the First and Park traffic lights. Police Chief Roy G. Williams said the Board of Commissioners last night that the "walk" lights "block motor vehicle traffic."

Commissioner F. D. Scott said "I would like to see the walk lights out and stored—we're about five years too soon."

The city manager was directed to gear the walk lights with the stop and go lights of the traffic signal.

Joycees Will Hear Boys' State Reports

The Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce will hear reports from the five Sanford delegates to the American Legion sponsored Boys State at its noon luncheon meeting Thursday at the Yacht Club.

Stated to lead off the reports "Sunday" is Richard Phagan, the Joycees sponsored representative to Boys State from this community.

Others on the program include: Pat Donahue, sponsored by the Elks Club; Sid Vihlen by the Rotary Club; Al Collins Jr. by the Lions Club; and Dickie Rountree by the Kiwanis Club.

MEATY TALK EXPECTED

MEATY TALK EXPECTED. THOROYGAN, Wis. (AP)—Sau-saucy fanciers will meet here at the corner of Batworth Blvd. and Pickle-Place Aug 8 to initiate the fifth Junior Chamber of Commerce Batworth Day.

DELAND, Fla. — Ohio investigators took down the life story of a man who claims he may have killed Martin Sheppard and pictures of the "confession" were rushed to a mysterious hitch-hiker in Iowa for identification.

The two widely-separated developments occurred in an unfolding drama that alternated between serious efforts to spring Dr. Sam Sheppard from prison and a comedy of errors in which unofficial investigators were running away from the police with the re-opened Sheppard case.

Three Cleveland officials who helped prosecute Dr. Sheppard, now serving life imprisonment for his wife's 1954 slaying, were cited here today with bushy-haired Donald Joseph Wedler, 23, who said he beat a woman who may have been Marilyn Sheppard in Cleveland in 1954.

A long-sought missing witness, Ernest J. Kolofolias, turned up in Waterloo, Iowa, and said Wedler may have been the bloodstained and nervous driver who picked him up in the Cleveland suburbs the night of the crime.

Wants Clear Picture. Kolofolias told a radio station in Waterloo that with a clear photograph he could tell whether Wedler was the man who gave him a lift. Sheppard's defense counsel immediately rushed pictures to Iowa.

Florida authorities said they received a telephone call early today from Kolofolias reporting he had "urgent" information about the Sheppard case.

Corner Samuel Garber of Cleveland broke his interview with Wedler at hourly intervals to report to newsmen at the jail here. His first report brought the young convict through a series of reformatories and discharges from the Army at Ft. Bragg, N. C., after he stole an automobile.

After the second hour of questioning, Garber put Wedler in Cleveland for several days. On the first night, he told officers, he slept with a girl he had met in a bar.

On the second night he met a fellow by the name of Charlie Freeman. He said they had drinks together and met several other men, apparently friends of Freeman. They later drove to Freeman's apartment where a man by the name of "John" pushed a box of heroin. Wedler said it was his first shot of the drug.

He said they had a few more drinks and left the apartment and went to the business section of Cleveland. He said this was some time after June 30, 1954, and that he did not know the exact date.

Entered House. Then he said he decided he wanted to steal a car and get some money. He said he stole a car six or eight blocks from the saloon, drove around town for a while and finally got on a main road in Cleveland. He said he later left this road and parked his car on a side road and went into a house.

Reporters asked Garber whether he was the Sheppard house and the coroner replied, "I assume that is what he means."

At this point Garber returned to the jail cell to resume questioning Wedler.

Resolution Okayed Outlining Sewage Plant Construction

A resolution outlining the City of Sanford's program relative to the construction of a sewage treatment plant was approved last night by the Board of Sanford City Commissioners.

The resolution came on the heels of a 48-hour conference with David H. Lee, Director of the State Board of Health's sanitary engineering division when all extensions to the Sanford sewer system were denied unless requirements of the State Board of Health.

The City of Sanford will defer to Lee outlining the city's intentions to continue its straits toward the early construction of the plant as required by the State Board of Health.

Ten City of Sanford will deposit $40,000 annually, for the next two years, to a sewage treatment plant fund, and in the event revenue certificates cannot be issued by the fall of 1938 a revenue bond issue will be presented to the people of Sanford.

In addition, the resolution outlined, no major extensions to the Sanford sewer system will be allowed without interim treatment.

George H. Garrison, Orlando developer, will be allowed to build 100 homes with the construction of a 5,000 gallon interim treatment tank.

Commissioners pointed out at last night's meeting that the money deposited to the sewage treatment plant fund will remain in such a fund until such time as the plant is constructed or until the fund is dissolved.

Board Refuses To Close Alley

City Commissioners last night refused to close an alley from Mannouth Ave. east to lot 25 and then north to First St.

Request for closing the alley was made by Quintas Ray, a City of Sanford employee who owns property in the vicinity of the 20-foot right-of-way reserved as an access to lots in that area.

Opposing the closing of the alley was Fred George who also owns a number of lots in the area.

THE NAKED TRUTH

NEW YORK (AP)—A 32-year-old man parading on Fifth Ave. near Central Park, wearing nothing but a gnatcatcher had a logical reason, Jesse Newton told an arresting policeman. "I'm going for a walk. I've baptized my self."

Another thing to be considered high on the coming budget is street improvement and street maintenance. The natural topography and water conditions of the Florida peninsula make constant street improvement and maintenance, plus the continuing problem of new streets, a costly part of each budget year.

Expansion of right-of-way for water lines and streets tie up another tidy sum each year.

All of us know that a family unit budget is simple. There is just so much money to spend and no more. If the head of the household needs a new suit and daughter needs a new evening dress, and there's money for just one item, a selection must be made.

The same thing, in a sort of way, applies to the city budget, except there's a much larger selection to be made and there are thousands of people who have a word in the matter.

The Sanford fire department needs more and more personnel and equipment as the city expands.

And no one can deny that our Sanford Police Department needs additional personnel and equipment to protect an expanding city.

The Sanford sewer system must continually be expanded to meet new homes and business houses

Rotary Speaker Tells Of Growing Interest In Boats

Boating enthusiasts heard a talk on "Safe Boating Is More Fun" at the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club yesterday afternoon at the Yacht Club by Commander Bill Stevens of District No. 23, U. S. Power Squadrons. Stevens, who is employed by the Municipal Boat Works at Daytona Beach, told his listeners of their responsibilities; of the increasing interest in boating and of the importance of an educational program to preclude the passing of legislation that might impair boating privileges.

According to club president Myron A. (Mike) Reek, Stevens' talk came at a most opportune time because of the great increase in sales in boats of all types and the fact that this section of the river is being used to a greater extent than ever before. Stevens, who frankly stated that he was no expert, had the attention of his audience by his straight-from-the-shoulder talk, showing to the satisfaction of all present, according to Ken Reimann, program chairman for the day, that "he certainly knew what he was talking about."

In a question and answer period following his talk, Stevens gave "Mike" Reek, Randall Chase, Herbert Pope, Dr. Charles L. Peterson, Henry Simpson and several others the information they sought. He offered to assist any boaters desiring to form a squadron here, stating that there were units at present in Daytona Beach, Vero Beach, Jacksonville and Jacksonville Beach and in Lakeland and Orlando.

Mail Solicitations For Business Directory Made

Sanford merchants and business men are receiving mail solicitations for directory listings in a classified business directory published by the Classified Business Directory, Inc., Miami.

The request or solicitation calls attention to the fact that the publication is published with the telephone directory, yellow pages, or any other directory. The solicitation states "This directory is circulated through the State of Florida and is being distributed by sales agents, a printers, business firms, and paid subscribers. It is claimed to be Florida's only statewide buyers and sellers guide."

The Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, this morning, called attention to the fact that the classified business directory solicitations are in no way connected with the Polk Company of Richmond, Va., which has been in the area getting data for a forthcoming Sanford City Directory.

35 Prisoners Are Confined At Jail

There are 35 prisoners confined at the Seminole County Jail, Sheriff J. L. Hobby reported this morning.

Three prisoners were brought in, five were released, said the Sheriff.

Of the total, he said, 10 were white males, 20 were colored male, two were colored female, two were colored female incompetent, and one a colored male juvenile.

30-Day Period Okayed

The Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce took a firm stand against the promiscuous planting of shrubs in the parkway areas of Sanford at last night's meeting of the Board of Sanford City Commissioners.

M. L. Robson Jr., after reading a resolution adopted by the Jaycees, called on the City of Sanford to "enforce the ordinances controlling the planting of shrubs in parkways, or don't touch it."

The Board of Sanford City Commissioners approved a 30-day educational period in cooperation with the Jaycees and called on the people of Sanford to cooperate in the effort to eliminate hazards existing all over the city.

Jaycees promised their full cooperation in carrying out the program and will lend every effort to making the effort a success. At the end of the 30-day period, the Jaycees will report back to the Board of Commissioners with a resume of their program and listing all locations which have failed to cooperate.

The resolution said "the members of the Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce are cognizant of the inherent perils associated with the many areas of restricted visibility of motorists within the City of Sanford due to high hedges, bushes and other growth."

"The tragic event which cost the life of one of our Sanford children is a grim example of the latent danger in these blind spots," the resolution read.

The members of the Seminole County Junior Chamber of Commerce, do respectfully request that the Commission of the City enact the necessary ordinances to enable the trimming and cutting of shrubbery now growing on all portions of city owned property and right-of-way areas adjacent to all streets, avenues and roadways of every nature which constitute a hazard by obstructing the view of motorists and pedestrians alike; that these ordinances be enforced and that the public be enlisted through the media of press and radio, in a drive to trim, after and plan their yards and gardens in a manner consistent with safety and beauty; that the resolution be adopted."

Mayor David Gatchel immediately stated, "It seems as if we already have the authority in our ordinance as he read Section 22-20 through 22-23, which provides that it shall be unlawful for anyone to plant any trees, shrubs, or plants on any parkways of the city without a permit from the city commission. This application, quoted Mayor Gatchel from the ordinance, "for a permit must be accompanied by a diagram showing the desired planting."

The Mayor stated that "It is the duty of the abutting property owner to trim all trees on the parkways for a distance of six feet from the curb."

Tax Increase Necessary To Meet City Needs

By J. MARION HARMAN SR.

With the first budget hearing scheduled for the not too distant future, it is certainly apparent that Sanford city commissioners will need the interim between now and then to prepare for the grim battle of preparing the city's finances to meet the needs in the next fiscal year.

Rothen campaign promises contained the "no increase in taxes" statements in every city and Sanford's commissioners do not prove an exception to that rule at all.

However, with the budget in the making, every report from the city hall and from the City Manager's office, contains some reference to department needs for additional funds. And we cannot leave out, of course, requests for improvements made by citizens groups. Individual requests for improvements add to the growing list.

Notable among the expenditures that are facing Sanford's city commissioners is a possible increase in costs for garbage collection because of the tremendous growth and home expansion in recent months. Although an increase in the number of property owners adds to the city's coffers, it also adds to the necessity to expand its services, and collection and operative costs will have to come from some source.

Additional traffic lights are high on the list of requests from the general public and from the commissioners themselves. It is a known fact that they are needed. It is also a known fact that they do not come as prizes in packages of cereal bought by the city's officials.

As each new area in the city is populated, recreation leaders request the addition of city owned parks, with the resulting expenses on maintenance, equipment and personnel.

A recent development is the necessity for a sewage treatment plant to assure the continual growth of the city. The plant has already been promised in 1938 or 1939. But, to be considered in the coming budget is the placing of sufficient funds in a sewer treatment plant fund to guarantee the planning and construction. That checks up another budget item.

High on the list of recommendations to come before the Board of Sanford City Commissioners are wage increases to meet the rising cost of living, and they're certainly not begrudged by any citizen in the city. Nevertheless, the citizen knows that wages are not passed out in scrip, but in hard, cold cash.

Another thing to be considered high on the coming budget is street improvement and street maintenance. The natural topography and water conditions of the Florida peninsula make constant street improvement and maintenance, plus the continuing problem of new streets, a costly part of each budget year.

Expansion of right-of-way for water lines and streets tie up another tidy sum each year.

All of us know that a family unit budget is simple. There is just so much money to spend and no more. If the head of the household needs a new suit and daughter needs a new evening dress, and there's money for just one item, a selection must be made.

The same thing, in a sort of way, applies to the city budget, except there's a much larger selection to be made and there are thousands of people who have a word in the matter.

The Sanford fire department needs more and more personnel and equipment as the city expands.

And no one can deny that our Sanford Police Department needs additional personnel and equipment to protect an expanding city.

The Sanford sewer system must continually be expanded to meet new homes and business houses as they are constructed; the water system must also be added to at a cost that is a small item on the utility department's budget.

Planning for the city's future must come under budget scrutiny as the expense for this administrative as well as engineering portion of expense is added to the already growing financial burden.

That, on the whole, is the problem that will keep Sanford City Commissioners burning the midnight oil at the city hall. They must make the decision and still maintain somewhat of a semblance of their promises to the people.

It is a major job, and the outcome will be closely studied and scrutinized by the home-owner, the man who pays the bills.

Anyway you look at it, the problems of the city are big, and it will take a big bite out of the taxpayers' pocketbook to meet the needs demanded by those who pay the bill.

Anyway the commissioner who approves the budget looks at it, he's going to see that the city is operated on an economical basis even though the demands are larger and more numerous. It may take a greater millage to meet the needs—but the funds will be appropriated on the basis of "the taxpayer gets what he pays for."

SANFORD CITY COMMISSIONERS will soon begin burning the midnight oil in an attempt to furnish all of the needed services demanded by citizens throughout the community. The picture above shows graphically some of the services necessary for the health and welfare of the city: sewer system, water department, fire department, garbage disposal, recreation and police protection.
